Legislators Lapse Into Uneasy Calm

Nixon's Pace Hard To Match By Staff, Press

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon may turn out to be one of the more recreationally oriented chief executives since Teddy Roosevelt.

When Nixon first arrived at the western White House nine days ago, he began working at a furious pace that his staff and the White House press found hard to match.

In the last four days, however, the President has played golf starting in the late afternoon and usually playing with, as his principal partner, his son-in-law David Eisenhower.

David's wife, Julie, recently began golf lessons and plays a slow, deliberate game. When she is along, the foursome moves at a glacial pace. The President, however, does not seem to be disturbed by his daughter's slow movement around the course and will stand patiently, leaning on his putter, while Julie approaches a green.

Business at the western White House was expected to be relatively slow today. The President had morning meetings with various federal officials, including one session with six U.S. ambassadors about to leave for their posts overseas.

Nixon declared Mississippi a major disaster area Monday because of devastation from Hurricane Camille and allocated the state 12 million in relief funds.

The White House indicated that additional money would be authorized when the extent of damage to public property is determined. Complete information was not available immediately because of communications difficulties.

The White House also announced Nixon's nomination of Federal Appellate Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Nixon also conferred with his key speechwriters to prepare for his meetings Thursday and Friday in San Francisco with South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

Camille's Death Toll Reaches 106 In Mississippi

GULFPORT, Miss. (UPI) — Hurricane Camille's death toll reached at least 106 today and was expected to go "considerably higher" as disaster workers bulldozed through the rubble of devastated towns and villages along Mississippi's Gulf Coast.

The 600-square-mile area, crippled by lack of food, water, electric power and communications, was a bedlam of confusion, grief and shambles. City and county officials from the entire Mississippi Gulf Coast huddled in an emergency meeting at Gulfport to bring about some semblance of order in the massive cleanup job.

Receding waters uncovered dozens of bodies sprawled in the mud and tangled wreckage.

"They're still digging them out," said Bill Harvey, public information officer of the Mississippi Civil Defense Council. He said there were 106 confirmed deaths, but added that "today was the first chance to get bulldozers in and we expect the toll to go considerably higher. Hundreds and perhaps thousands were injured."

At least 200,000 were left homeless. Most spent the night in emergency shelters and ventured out at dawn to help clean up the ruin of what once was the playground of Mississippi's plantation aristocracy.

Six cargo planes landed in Gulfport loaded with food, medical supplies and heavy bulldozing equipment. A 200-bed emergency hospital unit was moved from the space agency's Mississippi test facility north of Bay St. Louis into Pass Christian. Eight trucks carrying 15,000 gallons of water labored across hazardous highways to the stricken area and 20 more trucks were en route from Baton Rouge, La., with food, clothing, medical supplies and water.

Pampans Will Vote Sept. 24 On Sales Tax

In a 7-minute meeting today, Pampa city councilmen officially set Wednesday, Sept. 24, for a city election to approve or reject a proposed one-cent city sales tax.

The proposed ordinance was passed on its second and final reading today.

Pampa's city election on the proposed sales tax will follow Amarillo's election by two days. In the event, voters down the tax proposal, the other alternative will be a 50-cent increase in city taxes from $1.72 to $2.22 per $100 evaluation to raise funds needed for the operation of the city government during the upcoming fiscal year.

In other business, councilmen appointed Malvin Wilson as assistant city secretary. She will be on hand to accept the filing of the 1969-70 budget on Friday of this week. City Secretary Chick Chittenden will be out of town on that day, according to City Manager Charles Hill.

Israeli Troops Hit Refugee Camp In Gaza Strip

By United Press International

Israeli troops struck an Arab refugee camp today in the occupied Gaza Strip and wiped out a guerrilla assassination squad, killing three and wounding two others. Terrorists struck in Jerusalem with two bomb attacks.

The Gaza Strip, a sliver of land along the Mediterranean, was seized from Egypt in the 1967 War. It is jammed with Palestinian refugees and has been a thorn in the side of Israeli occupation authorities who have fought a wave of terrorist attacks there.

Just before dawn Israeli army units roared into the El Muazi refugee camp east of Gaza City, killed three Arabs and wounded two in a running gunfight and captured 10 others plus supplies of arms. No Israeli casualties were reported.

UF Lifts Off Naming New Drive Chairmen

Pampa civic leaders are back at work on another annual project today with deadlines looming for the 1969 United Fund campaign.

The theme of this year's campaign will be "Shoot The Moon" with emphasis on "Fair Share Giving" according to General Drive Chairman Frank Culberson.

Jerry Sims, UF president, will serve with Culberson as drive co-chairman.

Culberson said the following businessmen have accepted chairmanships:

Gordon Lyons, Southwestern Public Service Co. manager, will be Special Gifts chairman.

The Commercial and Industrial Division will be co-chaired by Norman Fritzier, J.C. Penney Co. manager and James McCoy, manager of Pioneer Natural Gas Co.

The Professional Division will be headed by Dr. Joe Donaldson, while the solicitation of public employees will be led by City Manager Charles Hill.

Two active solicitation divisions, National Firms will be guided by Pampa insurance man Warren Fatheree and the general solicitation will be co-chaired by real estate and insurance men, Kirk and Ray Duncan.

"In keeping with the campaign theme, these chairmen will be referred to as "Command Pilots" during the (See CHAIRMAN, Page 2)

Blood Drive Sees 41 Pints Given For Pampans

Local officials report an excellent turnout in the special bloodmobile visit at First Methodist Church Monday night.

The blood was taken as donations to replace units being used by Pampans Perry Moose, who is hospitalized in St. Anthony's Hospital, Amarillo.

Moose was removed from the intensive care unit at the hospital Monday afternoon. He has been in the hospital for two weeks.

The blood drive organized by Cabot, the Pampa Jaycees and members of Wagner Well Service, netted 41 pints of blood. Moose will receive 34 pints donated in his name.

Second Suspect Questioned In LA Murders

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Thomas Steven Harrigan, the second "suspect" in the Sharon Tate murders to be arrested, questioned and released, says he knows of no "occult" activities among her friends.

The almost ritualistic nature of the grisly slayings of Miss Tate and four other persons at her secluded estate has led to speculation that the murders were part of some strange religious rite.

Harrigan, 27, told newsmen he attended a party at the Benedict Canyon home the night of Thursday, Aug. 7—the day before the murders—but spent the next night in suburban Manhattan Beach drinking beer with friends.

Harrigan, a native of Canada, was sought in a bulletin issued by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that said he was "wanted for murder" and was traveling with three "narcotics hippie-types."

Summer Event Slated For Aspen Park

Five musical groups will perform in a "Summer Happening" Thursday at 8 p.m. Thursday in Aspen Park sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

The groups will be competing for a $50 cash award, according to Mrs. Elbert Walker, Theater Arts chairman for PFA.

Mrs. Walker said "You can call it a Rock In, a Sound In, or whatever you like. But it will be an evening of free entertainment for the entire family."

Mrs. Walker said, "So far, we have five groups who have indicated interest in competing for the prize and providing an evening of music. The Chaparrals, Karisma Folk Singers, Three Swingers, Payne and Rein Mayce."

She said any musical group through high school age is invited to compete. They may contact Mrs. Walker at her home before 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Pampa High School band director Harris Brinson will judge the summer event. Well (See EVENT, Page 2)

Senator Yarborough Lambasts New Post Office Reform Bill

By DORIS E. WILSON
News Staff Writer

The new post office reform bill that would increase postal rates, while reducing services, came in for a lambasting by United States Senator, Democrat Ralph Yarborough of Austin, at a breakfast meeting today in the Coronado Inn.

Yarborough said if the founder of the postal system and its first postmaster general, Benjamin Franklin, came back today he would not recognize any resemblance between what he had intended and what is being proposed under the Republican regime.

"Our post office system will no longer will be a service for the people. It will be a business patterned after the AT&T, which, in reality, serves only a favored few," he said.

Yarborough said, "Under the new bill, rates for First Class would be increased to between 10 and 12 cents. Special Delivery letter rates have already gone up to 45 cents, and while these rates have been increased, the Slick Magazines rates have remained the same.

"While rates are being increased, the services offered are being decreased. Under the new bill, special deliveries would be cut to four per day, no matter how many special deliveries were in the post office. And business mail deliveries would be cut to two a day, eliminating entirely afternoon deliveries.

Another facet of the postal proposal, which the U.S. Senator took a dim view of, was the claim that postal system would be taken out of politics.

"What it really amounts to," Senator Yarborough said, "The President will appoint a three-man commission to appoint the postmasters. But in effect he will still be appointing the postmasters."

"It will mean closing every fourth class post office and half of the third class post offices in the United States," the senator claimed.

"I am going to fight this bill to the last ditch. I am not in favor of destroying our postal system, and this reform bill mostly certainly would," Yarborough stressed.

Interest in the postal reform bill was evidenced locally by 20 postal carriers and the acting Postmaster R. W. McPhillip's attendance at this morning's meeting.

The senator said during his five-day tour of the Panhandle, which is being undertaken during congress' three-week recess, he had been asked questions on five points: 1) get higher farm prices; 2) lower interest rates; 3) stop the war in Vietnam; 4) lower taxes; 5) and make it rain.

He said he couldn't accomplish these things by himself. (See YARBOROUGH, Page 2)

Crossroad In U.S. Farm Policy Reached

By DON TURNER
News Staff Writer

PANHANDLE — District 1 members of the Farmers Union heard both Jay Naman, state president, and Tony Dechant, national president, say the farmers had reached a crossroad in national farm policy.

Following a few statements by special guest Sen. Ralph Yarborough, Naman said in introduction to Dechant, "Whether it will be the road to prosperity and building or whether it will be the road to massive land retirement, the decision will have to be made."

"We are at a crossroads," Dechant said. "This is indeed a showdown time for agriculture."

Dechant has been president of the Farmers Union since 1966. He came to the new job following 20 years as secretary-treasurer of the organization.

Speaking of history of the Farmers Union's place in the recent farm program battle, Dechant said through the long history of Farmers Union beginning in Texas in the early part of this century, it had worked out every type of program conceivable to put together.

"It has experimented with many, many things," he said. "We decided if farmers were to have any impact on a nation 4,000 miles wide and 2,000 long with three million farms, if we are going to have an effective program, we must go the legislative route."

In order to have a more effective voice for farmers, the Farmers Union began working on a coalition of farm organizations and commodity groups, Dechant said.

"There were many things we all agreed on," he said. "We also learned there were some things we just couldn't agree on."

In recent legislative action, when the House Agriculture Committee was considering a proposed massive land retirement program, no one appeared to give favorable testimony for it, Dechant said.

The committee's chairman, Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Waco, supported extension of the 1965 Farm Act and continuation of the massive food stamp program, Dechant said.

Bulldozers Help Widen Breaks In Range Fire

HUNT, Tex. (UPI) — Bulldozers from the Texas Highway Department were enlisted Monday to widen fire breaks in an effort to control blazes which burned "at least 20,000 acres."

The Kerrville DPS reported the fire was confined to one of five large ranches it ravaged over a four-day period.

An estimated 600 firefighters, including 175 National Guardsmen, battled the blaze as it spread slowly through the grass and cedar trees of western Kerr County toward the south fork of the Guadalupe River.

DPS spokesmen said several fire breaks plowed along the edge of the fire by tractors failed at times to stop the blaze when sparks from burning cedar trees were carried over the breaks. Bulldozers took over the task to widen the breaks.

Besides firefighting teams from the DPS and National Guard, the Texas Forest Service and city fire units from as far away as San Angelo were called.

Committee Shaping Up Big Tax Package

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas legislators lapsed into an uneasy calm today, waiting for a 10-man conference committee to hammer out the shape of one of the biggest tax packages in the state's history.

The conference committee, which met Monday just long enough to draw battle lines, scheduled another session today to begin trying to work out differences in the House and Senate versions of the tax bill.

The first session, marked by interruptions and pointed remarks aimed at both versions of the bill, indicated the compromise will not be reached easily.

Durbin Will Be Sentenced By Judge Next Week

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A nine-man three woman jury Monday took 75 minutes to sentence Clyde Durbin Jr. to 99 years in the state penitentiary for the murder of John Albert White, a 21-year-old University of Texas student from Corpus Christi.

Dist. Judge Tom Blackwell next week will officially pronounce sentence on the 22-year-old UT dropout.

Durbin of Dallas will go on trial again Sept. 29 in Burnet County in the murder of Keilha Jane Morris, 19, White's date at the fatal picnic Jan. 8. Her body was found in Inks Lake in Burnet County.

Defense attorneys for Durbin called four psychiatrists in their attempt to convince the jury that Durbin was insane before, during and after the murders. The jury, however, put more weight on the testimony of two state psychiatrists and found Durbin sane and guilty at the end of the trial last Saturday.

The panel took six hours and 25 minutes to reach the guilty verdict.

Monday the jury foreman, Hubert D. Reese, a Church of Christ member who is married but has no children, said the jury never seriously considered the death penalty.

"There were only very small shades of difference" in the minds of the jurors in sending Durbin to prison, Reese said after the trial.

"I can assure you, it was a very traumatic experience," said Mrs. Mary Ann Chapman, wife of an electric engineer and one of three women on the jury. "I'd rather not talk about it."

Rain Maybe—But Don't Count On It

With very few clouds in sight, it looked this morning as if Pampa would be in for another hot day.

And that was the same idea the weather forecasters had predicting a high in the upper 90s again today with a 20 per cent chance for some moisture.

Scattered showers fell over East Texas today and spread out along the Gulf Coast. A boy struck by lightning while standing in a field near Nacogdoches during a thunderstorm was in critical condition.

The rainfall activity was, in most cases, light. Beaumont received a half inch of rain Monday and Tyler received little more than a trace. The south eastern corner of the state was struck by additional showers today.

Neils Mannes 10, was hit by lightning Monday during one of the thunderstorms which roared East Texas. The boy's mother said the force of the lightning bolt knocked the boy's trousers from his body.

Ambulance attendants were credited with saving the youngster's life by applying artificial respiration en route to Nacogdoches Memorial Hospital.

On Oct. 30, the Chamber will meet for its annual membership banquet in the Robert E. Lee Junior High School cafeteria.

The speaker will be Dr. Walter Kerr, director of the National Youth Foundation of Tyler.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—During the past 10 years, several European countries have banned cigarette advertising on radio and television, a step now being contemplated in the United States.

In each of these countries, according to a recent survey, cigarette consumption has increased since the advertising stopped.

It may be argued, of course, that the increase would have been even greater had the advertising continued.

Statistically, however, a case can be made to support the thesis that withdrawing the commercials stimulated cigarette sales.

And if that happened to tobacco products, one cannot help but wonder whether it might not happen to other types of products as well.

Even now, I imagine, advertising executives are huddled together in their sanctum sanctorum along Madison Avenue discussing the phenomenon.

You might think a situation where business improves without commercials would strike fear into the hearts of the admen. But these intrepid messengers of the medium are not easily daunted.

Let us now look in on one of the conferences to see how things are going.

"All right, men," says an agency VP. "We have completed our campaign for the Blackhead Electric Tweezers Co. Sixteen weeks of hard-hitting radio and TV spots with saturation coverage in prime time. What do the figures show?"

"Sales of electric tweezers are up 6.9 per cent," says the account executive.

"That's great," says the VP "at what point during the campaign did the sales chart begin to take off?"

"Well, actually, electric tweezers sales dropped off during the first week of the campaign and continued to decline for the next 15 weeks. The first upswing didn't come until the week after the campaign ended."

"Hmmmnn. How are we going to explain that to the client?"

"You mean the jingle had a delayed impact?"

"Sort-of. After hearing it for 16 weeks, people had reached the point where the jingle was driving them out of their skulls. Then, when we took it off the air, they felt such a strong sense of relief they went out and bought electric tweezers to show their gratitude."

"Beautiful," beams the VP. "When our client hears about this, he is certain to give us a fat new contract."

Center Names New Officers

WHITE DEER (Staff) — Directors have been named for the White Deer Community Center.

Virgil James was elected center chairman with Bob Martin to serve as secretary and Wanda Lockridge as secretary.

Members of the planning board include Felix Ryals, Orville Craig Jr., C. D. Freeman, Mildred Shuman, James Eritten and Anna Dickens.

Until financial arrangements can be worked out, it was decided the city would take care of utilities and would be reimbursed.

The Center is located in the former Presbyterian Church, which was given to the community recently as a meeting place for civic and social functions.

URGE TUITION LOANS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., have urged the nation's banks to make tuition loans to as many as 900,000 college students who may not be able to attend class this fall without such help.

Javits and Pell said the banks should take such action even though Congress has not yet passed a 3 per cent government interest supplement designed to make the student loans more profitable for the banks. The Senate passed the measure but the House did not get to it before it began the summer recess.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—Low trading volume during last week's early downturn in reaction to the franc devaluation, plus a lack of emotional selling, suggests that stocks are in the hands of strong holders, said Bache & Co.

This could be more of a significant factor than the pound sterling's apparent ability to weather the storm and indicates that the end-week rally should continue, the firm said.

One glimmer of hope last week was the apparent reluctance of the more volatile glamor issues to give much ground, E.F. Hutton & Co. observed. Leaders on any rally probably will include most of the issues that led the market during the early August rebound, the firm said.

Research Institute of America sees the economy in a state of "moon landing euphoria" that has distracted attention from mundane problems of inflation, tight money, taxes and the possibility of a business recession. A slowing of economic growth already is underway and business profits soon will be squeezed between rising costs and softening markets, the firm said.

The stock market is in a bottoming out process and is in for many short and sharp movements in both directions before any sustained uptrend can begin, said Weis, Voisin Cannon, Inc. Most short-term traders have become long-term investors and many are currently avoiding the financial sections of the newspapers, the firm said.

Quirks In The News

MANCHESTER, England (UPI)—British soccer star George Best was so idolized by Danish football fan Kurt Melgaard that Melgaard insisted his girlfriend watch Best play in Copenhagen recently.

The girl, blonde Eva Heldsted, liked George even better than Kert did. She has come to England to be a model in a boutique Best owns.

HURSLEY, England (UPI)—At least a dozen wild birds smashed into a glass wall at the IBM plant here every day, breaking their necks and frustrating the best efforts of the plant's best thinkers to stop it.

They tried an electronic device that broadcast high-frequency warnings. It didn't work. They thought of mesh nets and gave up the idea.

Sunday night a plant spokesman announced a method had been tested successfully for a week. The plant pasted six black paper eagles on the windows and hardly a birdie has come near.

In 1953 the Soviet Union began building the Berlin wall, dividing the city after more than two million persons had fled to West Germany in 12 years.

DUNGENESS, England (UPI)—A speedboat nicknamed "Lily the Pink" dumped its owner overboard while he was making a highspeed turn Sunday night. Lily then sped straight out to sea on her own at 30 m.p.h.

The Coast Guard said it is searching for the runaway craft but faces another problem if Lily is found. The owner forgot to give them his name or address.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is for "loving" responsive wife every man wants.

Sign me, "COLD IN TEXAS"

DEAR ABBY: One would have to have a very sick mind to sexually molest a child, but unfortunately there have always been — and always shall be sick people.

I silently bless you every time I see a letter in your column from a mother warning other mothers to beware of "loving" relatives who may molest a child. If you can save just one child from my fate you will have accomplished more than most people do in a lifetime, for I was the victim of a "loving" grandfather.

VICTIM in TACOMA

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old boy, and a better authority on how teen-agers think than that lady signed "Careful".

If someone thinks an 11-year-old girl, walking around in her pajamas is going to turn me on, they are crazy.

NOT TURNED ON

DEAR ABBY: I have to agree with "Careful". You can't be too careful.

I was shocked when my husband told me what went on in the hayloft while his parents were milking the cows. I say a lot depends upon the upbringing the kids have had. (My husband wasn't anything to brag about.)

I don't believe in leaving anything to chance. And believe me, I am still going to keep a close watch on my children, Abby.

"THE POLICEWOMAN"

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

LUCKY

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing that letter from "Careful in W. Va.".

Would to the good Lord that my mother had been more careful when I was a young girl growing up.

I come from a middle-class, well-educated "Christian" family. Who would suspect that an "affectionate" uncle would fondle me intimately when I was six? Or a brother-in-law would handle me when I was nine? Or the nice old neighborhood grocer would try to get familiar with me in the back room of his store when nobody else was there?

No, I wasn't raped, thank God. But I was handled and helpless and bewildered.

Now, as a result of those childhood memories, I have a real problem trying to be the GIVE BEAUTIFUL EYES the care they deserve for the fall fashion look, the all fashion look. Here is lens care for your contact lenses, each year, help American women to look better, and see better. Insure perfect cleanliness of your lenses and comfort for you, in only seconds. Always clean, store and protect against loss or damage.

Fashionable Figures Need Low-Calorie Sweetners

If you look lumpy in a pantsuit, frumpy in bright colors, and a "sight" in see-throughs, there is probably too much of you to be fashionable this fall.

Just five or ten pounds can cruelly point up the difference between sleek and freak — a difference that always looks better on someone else. But if you're the over-accessorized "it" girl, you can still slim that silhouette before resigning yourself to a quiet season at home.

Since you're not fat — just overweight — why not try simple weight control, either to lose those few extra pounds or to maintain a tight hold on the one's you've already got.

For a start, you could take advantage of artificial sweeteners like non-caloric sweetener, liquid and tablets. After all, you've got nothing to lose but calories, and they get lost painlessly, even sweetly, with each serving.

Of course, anything sweet should be part of a nutritious, well-balanced diet, supplemented with plenty of exercise. These are just good health rules, but they're particularly important when you want to shed a few pounds in favor of fashion.

While artificial sweetener tablets are handy because you can carry them with you, the liquid offers many advantages for home use. It lets you indulge in every sweet fancy without the calories of sugar. Since one tablespoon of sugar contains 54 calories, that adds up to quite a few when you start counting how many times a day you'd normally use sugar: in beverages, on desserts, cereals, fruits, even for cooking.

In fact, you can eat your fill of everything from mousse au chocolat to Mocha crown torte if you follow special low-calorie recipes that eliminate from one-third to two-thirds the total calorie count. Eat, drink and forget about calories to dozens of deliciously sweet ways by sending for the free low-calorie recipe leaflet, available from Abbott Laboratories, 323 South Franklin, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Project the Real you, slim and svelte in any one of the latest styles. Do the things you've been doing all your life — maintain a sensible diet, exercise, eat sweets, but remember to substitute sweeteners for sugar. They'll help that 10-pound difference disappear, and fall, you'll find it a very fashionable time of year.

SENIOR CENTER CORNER

By Mrs. O. A. WAGNER

A new member was welcomed to the fold this week, Mrs. Zelma Cody of Terry Road, Miss Annette Aultmiller, Ada, Okla., visited her grandfather last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Moseley spent last weekend in Oklahoma City where it is really hot. They visited their son D. E. Moseley and family; also their great grandson and family, Howard Don Moseley.

Mrs. Ada Olson is leaving Saturday for Killeen to visit a daughter, Mrs. J. J. Heaton and family.

Door prizes went to Mrs. Mollie Helthcock and Jay Evans.

Was good to see Mrs. Jay Evans back with us.

Hostess was the OES Past Matrons Gavel Club. Serving refreshments were Mmes. Lena Moore, Casa Lena Fuqua, Maude Voyles, Nell Rankin, Katie Vincent, Maude Andis, Ruth Sewell, Viola Pennington, Emma Lee Gray and Stella Wagner.

TOPS Club Has August Banquet

GROOM (Sp) — The TOPS Club met for a salad supper at the home of Betty Brooks. Mary Rose received the fruit bowl for losing the most weight the preceding week. TOPS Club queen for the month of July is Carol Garnton.

Special guest at the second August meeting, held today, was Mrs. B. H. Cooper, representing a Dallas lingerie company.

Area Class Meets

The Dorcas, Sunday School Class of the Baptist Church met in the home of Mrs. Leroy Frederiksen for a regular session and a Mexican supper. Attending were Mmes. Odell Cain, Bill Burgin, Dan Ashford, D. A. Watson, Fred Brown, Bud Brown and Donald Ritter.

Terbush Family Sponsors Reunion

GROOM (Sp) — Members of the Terbush Family met at the Community Club House in Groom recently for a family reunion. After a pot-luck dinner, the afternoon was spent visiting and getting acquainted with the newest member of the family, Brandon-McKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie McKenzie of Lubbock.

Relatives attended the Reunion from Oxnard, Calif., Denver, Colo., Fort Worth, San Antonio, Lubbock, Stinnett, Pampa, Afton, Miami, Berger, Amarillo and Groom.

THE COLOR QUESTION

Why Not Be A Blonde And See?

(By GAY PAULEY)

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ninety per cent of the women of this nation aspire to be blondes, says a leading authority on hair coloring.

The statement comes from Leslie Blanchard, one of the few men hairdressers in the nation who does nothing but color, and who the day before we talked had with the aid of three assistants "done" 35 feminine heads, most of them in the blonde category.

Why this desire for the golden touch? Blanchard, who's been doing color for 15 years, says part of it is the inner woman by propaganda, of course. "Blondes have more fun." And part of it is the inner woman who really desires a change. "Look different, feel different" — especially if she grew up flaxen and now finds silver threads among the gold or steady darkening of her hair causing her skin to look "washed out."

Or maybe, he added, she's always been a Plain Jane and just doesn't want to be plain anymore.

Some women who aspire to be blonde shouldn't, Blanchard cautioned. These are the "strong" brunettes whose dark roots begin to show within just a few days after lightening. "If you're the kind who gets five o'clock shadow in five days, don't go blonde," he said. Total bleaching and toning, plus the constant stress of washing, setting, drying "are just not kind to the hair."

For the deep brunette who wants a lighter look, Blanchard suggested "brunette or wheat overtones."

Blanchard doesn't have much patience with the woman who accepts drab gray with the passing years. The one exception is when dark hair turns to "salt and pepper" early. Even then, he said, the woman who can carry this silvery look "has to be totally groomed, like Babs Paley."

To the woman debating whether to alter hair color, Blanchard likes to tell of a recent client who was "still blonde, but fading. All we did was rinse in a little color, to bring it alive. It turned her on. I know that, when she walked out, she wasn't sure which mirror to look into first."

Blanchard suggests that if you change color, just do it without talking over the matter ahead of time with husband or boyfriend. "If you ask a man," he says, "he has a preconceived idea of what he likes you to look like and he won't stop to think how color change might enhance."

Blanchard, who's in his 30's and looks like the late Leslie Howard, is a native of Baton Rouge, La., and attended hairdressing school in Boston. He first worked for Arden Salons in Florida and became interested in hair coloring through Maxine Eddy, a makeup expert whom he calls "one of the most influential brunettes in my life."

Currently Blanchard is color director for salons of the Saks Fifth Avenue stores and consultant for Clairol, testing new hair treatment products, doing research and education, and writing a monthly column for the company's trade letter.

If you decide to join that 90 per cent Blanchard mentions, he suggests you think out your type carefully. He divides blondes into five major groups: "the Jayne Mansfield, bigger than life type; the kittens; sexy Marilyn Monroe; the quiet, sandy tones of Grace Kelly; the lady-like cool of Joan Fontaine and the coolest blonde type of all, a la Clare Boothe Luce.

"Mrs. Luce is a blonde of whom no one would ask, 'Is it natural?'"

Skellytown TOPS Meets In Library

SKELLYTOWN (Sp) — TOPS Skellytown Slimmer Club met recently at the Library, with the leader, Mrs. Gladys Simmons, presiding. Meeting opened with the club pledge in unison. After TOPS song books arrived and were distributed to each member, songs were led by Mrs. Margaret Simmons.

Mrs. Mary McKissick was crowned queen for the week with a loss of 5 1/2 lbs. The club reported a loss of 13 1/2 lbs. and a gain of 10 1/2. The club reported a loss of 50 pounds during the month of July.

Members attended a low calorie salad supper in August with each member bringing a salad.

Attending the library meeting were Mmes. Ernestine Campbell, Gladys Simmons, Fannie Coleman, Sadie Lane, Mary McKissick, Adell Hassler, Ruby Wiggsett, Margaret Simmons, Margaret Fox, Frances Stamps and June Bunn.

Four Horoscope JEANE DIXON

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 20 — YOUR BIRTHDAY WEDNESDAY: Pursuit of material welfare dominates your coming year, and the results are according to what you bring forward from previous efforts. The temptation is to get so involved in improving your position that you may neglect personal relationships, particularly with the opposite sex. Wednesday's natives often realize profit from their ideas or thoughtful, philosophic writings.

ARIES (March 21-Apr. 19) — Partnerships take on new importance Wednesday. Your intuition should be humming about some move you should make. Where you can discuss money, do so, and get future co-operation settled.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) — The decisions being forced upon you are still tricky. Home affairs cause distraction, but should not be neglected at this point. A good show in p.m. for diversion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — A day's fasting will do you good and help you find the necessary patience to deal with people of authority. Stay with whatever approach you adopt; at least in a.m. The evening brings a bright idea.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Relax, and a friendly atmosphere will prevail all around you. Be more willing to talk than usual; there is a special reason beyond whatever information you offer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Take for granted that your wishes outrun your present capabilities; get busy planning to get what you now want.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Spread the chores around Wednesday, wherever you can. News from far places about women cheers you. A compliment gets back to you in candid form.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Take a good look at your resources; think about a balanced program of improving them. This is quite an extraordinarily lucky day for you, with your intuition leading to just the right action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Incomplete information or emotional preferences can create unreal decisions and rash words. Tactfully hold your ground and keep asking the proper questions which will eventually bring the truth to the surface.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — File papers and applications, in particular those which involve scholarships. Make every effort to settle any official matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Be more outgoing and generous with your time — mindful of your friends and your money — naturally for yourself and loved ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — It seems to you that everybody is putting out — to create confusion. It may be simply that this is not a time to do serious business at all; the appropriate time would be recreation, so minimize your part in commercial activity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Revision of agreements will fall into place if you have been working on it. Group activity is favored, especially with young people. Enjoy a show or party in p.m.

Did Sharon Tate Have A Premonition?

Sharon Tate

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — It was just a creepy story, when Sharon Tate told it to me early in 1966. But now, three years and five murders later, it has acquired something more than creepiness.

She was a starlet then. Sensational to look at. They thought she was going to be a big star. Maybe she would have been. Maybe not. Anyway, in '66, she was a girl of promise.

But there was something a little strange about her. Everybody noticed it. They thought, at the time, that it was because her first feature was an oddball terror thing called "13" — later they changed the title to "Eye of the Devil" — and maybe she was taking her work home with her.

You could look at her for hours. And listen to the nutty stories coming out of that beautiful head. I like stories of the supernatural. She knew that, and she had one.

It involved Jay Sebring. And

In that house. She kept a light on by the side of her bed.

"I saw a creepy little man," Sharon said. "He looked like the pictures I'd seen of Birn."

She ran downstairs.

When she got downstairs, she wished she was still upstairs.

"I saw a vision of someone tied to the staircase," she said. "It might have been me. It might have been Jay. Whoever it was, it was cut open at the throat."

She needed a drink, for nerve-steadying purposes. She didn't know where the bar was. Something told her to open a bookcase. Inside, there was a hidden bar. She poured a shot.

There was some wallpaper below the hidden bar. For some reason, she picked at it, tore it away. It covered a lovely copper base to the bar. She wondered why it had been papered over.

Strange how the mind works. Worrying about things like that when ghosts are wandering around upstairs and mutilated bodies are tied to the staircase downstairs. She thought it must be a dream. She decided to find out and went back upstairs. The body — (Could it be her, could it be Jay?) — was still tied to the stairs. The creepy little man was still prowling around upstairs.

She went to bed and somehow slept.

When Jay came back, the next morning, he woke her. She remembered the events of the night before. It must have been a dream — but.

"Hey," he called, "who tore the wallpaper off by the bar down here?"

No dream.

But three years later, a mile up the road, a nightmare. She and Jay both killed. Both stabbed. Three others killed, too.

More Dutch students.

Foreign News Commentary

In the undeclared war between El Salvador and Honduras, the Organization of American States (OAS) faced one of the sharpest challenges of its 21-year history.

These are small Central American republics, defenseless against the combined weight of the other American republics. Therefore any tribute to the peace-keeping abilities of the OAS also must be small.

Nonetheless, the success so far has preserved the 1947 Treaty of Rio providing joint action against aggression anywhere in the hemisphere. Failure would have reduced it to a scrap of paper and the influence of the OAS to nil.

Further, peace has been achieved by Latin Americans themselves — with the United States largely in the role of bystander.

El Salvador briefly gave its young "hawks" their day and then bowed to OAS demands that it withdraw troops from Honduras and submit to OAS arbitration in the face of a unanimous threat to embargo Salvadoran exports of petroleum, machinery, coffee, cotton and sugar.

At the root of what has been called a "football war" was a long-smoldering border dispute and Honduras' resentment against some 300,000 Salvadoran labor migrants who had gone to Honduras to work in the banana plantations and then had settled permanently, many of them illegally.

Over the last two years relations have deteriorated. The dispute threatened the future not only of some 3.5 million Salvadorans and 2.4 million Hondurans in two sharply contrasting nations but also the future of the remaining 11 million in Costa Rica, Nicaragua and Guatemala.

The five had banded altogether in a Central American common market, seeking first economic and cultural union and then, in the distant future,

NEW YORK (UPI) — The perfect children's program, if such a thing exists, should also attract adults to the tube and all networks spend a lot of time seeking the elusive point at which the interests of the generations coincide.

On a school playing field in Ridgefield, Conn., one sunny day recently Jacqueline Babbitt helped rehearse a group of subteenagers for a scene in one of the plays of "CBS Children's Hour," the program her network hopes will enthrall offspring and parent alike.

A Ride On The 70 Bus: The Washington Tourists Rarely See

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first thing you notice when you board the 70 bus is that one of its windows has been shattered. The driver sees you staring at it and offers a staccato explanation:

"Kid threw a rock at us. Happens all the time."

The D.C. Transit Co. does not advertise its number 70 bus as a sightseeing vehicle. Few if any tourists ever ride it. This is unfortunate. Visitors could learn more about the Nation's Capital from a 45-minute ride on the 70 bus than from a week of traipsing around the usual tourist circuit.

The Washington you see from the windows of the 70 bus is not as pretty as the one you see from the tourmobiles on the mall. But it's a sight that shouldn't be missed, for it typifies what is happening in American cities from coast to coast. To ride on the 70 bus the Maryland suburbs is to see the sharp contrasts which are both a cause and a result of urban racial tensions.

The 70 bus leaves every 10 minutes from Pennsylvania Avenue and 8th Street, Northwest. You board it just across the street from the National Archives Building, which houses the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence.

The first few blocks of the route take you through the downtown shopping district, past three of the largest department stores. Not many years ago, these stores drew most of their patronage from well-to-do white people. Today, at least 80 per cent of the shoppers are black. Whites do their shopping at Montgomery Mall, or Tyson's Corner, or one of the other new shopping centers in the suburbs.

Suddenly, when you cross New York Avenue, the scenery changes. You have entered the 2nd Precinct, one of Washington's ugliest and most crime-ridden skums. Here you see what is meant by that overworked term, "black ghetto."

You also see grim reminders of what happens when a black ghetto explodes in violence, as this one did 15 months ago on the night Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was murdered.

Ever wish you know what to expect, it's a shock to ride block after block and see nothing but burned-out, boarded-over buildings. The city has announced ambitious plans for rebuilding the riot-ravaged area.

New Folks In Town Worry San Clemente

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (NEA) — A family named Nixon bought the old Cotton place, the other side of the racetrack, for their summer vacations. Nobody is quite sure what this will mean to San Clemente.

Having the summer White House in town could be both good and bad for this beach resort. There is little real precedent to go by — previous summer White Houses have been located in places (Hyde Park, Johnson City, Tex., and Cape Cod) that were more used to important residents or so remote and unpopulated that it did not much matter, one way or the other.

But San Clemente is different. It always has been a little different. It was started, in the early '20s, as a retirement colony. Land sold for as little as $500 a lot. Old folks came in, bought the lots, built little cottages.

San Clemente quietly survived the depression and World War II, and then the San Diego Freeway was built and suddenly it was only about an hour and a half from Los Angeles. The cottages were bought by the city folks for their summer and weekend fun. Lots that once cost $500 and had been improved with a $2,000 cottage, were now selling for $30,000. It's, still, basically a middle-class resort area. The average home is in the $30,000 area — which is low by inflated real estate standards. There are still many retired folks, who make up the bulk of the population. (The city council says it is 16,000, but San Diego Gas and Electric says 17,000, and they presumably know better.)

But, in and among the middle-class homes, were about a half-dozen mansions. One of these was built by old Hamilton Cotton, back in '26.

Old Bob Hanson, H., whose grandfather founded San Clemente, describes the Cotton house like this:

"House still looks all right. Nice tile roof. Roof doesn't leak. Turn on the lights and they all work."

That is the house the Nixons bought. Tourists can't get closer than the iron gates. You drive down the road, past the San Clemente Inn ("San Clemente, Home of the Summer White House") and skirt the race track with the fat horses grazing in the infield, and then come on the old Cotton place.

There is a state trooper sitting in his car. As you drive up, he points casually to the sign: "No Sightseers Beyond This Point." You can take pictures from there — the vague outline of a large house through the trees — and then turn around and drive back

Since the news came out, a few things have changed in San Clemente. The gas station says they get about a half-dozen people every day, peeling off the freeway at the El Camino Real exit and asking which way to the Nixon house.

Hanson, who is in the real estate business in town, says 10 or 15 Secret Service men have rented homes in the vicinity. And, he says, the prices on houses and lots have gone up.

"But," he adds, "they were going up before — there's that new North American plant about to open, with 7,500 employs. That started the demand for houses some months before the Nixons bought the old Cotton place."

Countering the demand for homes, however, is the tight money market and the increasingly high rates charged by lenders for mortgages. Hanson says the one has canceled out the other and, basically, the Nixons coming to town "has done very little to real estate."

But the facts are that a 72-foot waterfront lot, which had been priced at $30,000, is now carrying a $3,500 price tag. And an inland lot, overlooking the ranches, has gone up from $18,000 to $22,500.

TWO TYPHOONS
TOKYO (UPI)—The season's eighth typhoon, Betty, is churning the Pacific west of Guam, with center winds of 45 miles an hour, the Japanese Meteorological Agency reported Tuesday. Another typhoon, Alice, was warning after hitting the island of Honshu where eight persons were killed, 18 injured and six missing.

Learning How To Swim Advised

NEW YORK (NEA) — You say you're thinking about going down to the sea in ships? You say you've been reading about all the guys — and gals — who are sailing oceans in rafts and rowboats and you've the urge to do the same?

Well, take it from an expert, be sure you know how to swim. The expert is Thor Heyerdahl, the Norwegian anthropologist who is credited — or blamed — for giving birth to the modern passion for sea adventure.

A quarter century ago, Heyerdahl ignited the wanderlust in every man's soul by navigating the Pacific on a balsa raft named Kon Tiki. Recently he tried the Atlantic, in a papyrus craft called Ra, and sailed 2,700 miles before bitter-weather and unfriendly elements forced him to stop. Unquestionably, Heyerdahl's expeditions have spawned imitators. This year alone two men have crossed one ocean in rowboats, a solitary woman has crossed another in a schooner and two dozen people have tried to sail around the world for a piece of a prize sponsored by a London newspaper.

Naturally, Heyerdahl knows people have emulated him. He knows they will continue to do so. And to some extent this has bothered, even worried, him.

Reggie Practices Courtesy In Dugout

By MILTON RICHMAN
New York (UPI)—The one big thing Reggie Jackson had drummed into him as a kid was the importance of courtesy.

Nichols Straddled Fence In Feud

By LEE MUELLER
AKRON, Ohio (NEA)—The bitter feud between the Professional Golfers Association and its four players last year caught Bobby Nichols straddling the fence.

On the other side was his new job — club pro at Firestone Country Club, an ideal setup for the 33-year-old Kentuckian which offered a lucrative salary and allowed him to play the fall tour and several other major tournaments.

Error Prone Cincy Stays In 1st Anyway

By United Press International
Here's a quick definition of expansion baseball: It's a time when an unbalanced team like the Cincinnati Reds can be in first place.

The Reds' grip on first place in the Western Division of the National League is slipping—it's down to half a game—but it's surprising that a team like Cincinnati can be in first by any margin at all.

A Boy And The Sales Tax

If you were one of the vast majority who shed a tear when you made out the annual income tax forms, you might enjoy the story of a little boy's first encounter with the orange know as taxation.

The boy hastened to the store to purchase a magazine. He was nine years old and beginning to have visions of some day owning a hot rod. With only seven more years to go, he wanted to be ready when the time came to hop behind the wheel. This was to be his first car magazine, and he was going to wear the pages, thin and crumpled, as a talisman against the knowledge of carburetors and racing tires and all of the lore of the dragstrips.

The boy got to the cash register and plunked down his 35 cents but the lady said: "That'll be 37 cents. You forgot the sales tax." Luckily the lady's mother was nearby and her two cents saved the day. But the boy learned a lesson: Caesar must be rendered unto. This year, if you haven't been

Double Standard Still Used

The State Department, despite the change of administration, continues to operate under a double standard. Some who are friendly to our government are refused entry on traveling visas. Others who contest everything this nation stands for get red carpet treatment.

When Indonesia's Sukarno toured the U.S. as the head of that nation, he was supplied with a bevy of women to accompany him. This was exposed by one of the large metropolitan newspapers, to the embarrassment of the State Department. Not long afterward, the Indonesians ousted Sukarno for attempting to sell out his country to Red China.

But when pro-American Moise Tshombe was invited to our shores to receive an award from the Young Americans for Freedom in 1962 for his resistance to communism, the State Department refused the application. This was after the "state" visits by Khrushchev and Castro. The awards were not a rightwing reactionary plot.

On Legal Holidays

The Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, city council recently passed a resolution calling for a legal holiday to commemorate the birthday of John F. Kennedy.

We recognize the proposal for the fine gesture it is but it raises some questions which should be considered.

It is our opinion that national holidays are too special an honor to be bestowed on purely emotional grounds. Down through our history only Abraham Lincoln and George Washington have been so honored.

The tragic murder of President Kennedy does not, of itself, justify the proposed honor. Presidents Garfield and McKinley also died at the hands of assassins. In fact, Garfield lived 80 days before dying, and McKinley lingered for eight days following the fatal attack by an anarchist in 1901.

Stiffer Study Grind Ahead

"No more pencils, no more books..."

That happy children's chant seems doomed to go the way of the little red schoolhouse in predictions voiced at the first annual educational planning conference at Auburn University in Alabama come true.

Tomorrow's students will be spending more and more of their lives in formal study. By the end of the century, said one speaker, educational systems will have been extended downward to include three-year-olds in all 50 states.

"Compulsory university education is coming also," said Dr. L. O. Haaby of the University of Tennessee. "This will be necessary because life will be

Rebels On Campus May Stifle Youth

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The behavior of college radicals and their close sympathizers in the months just ahead may determine whether their more moderate classmates gain a new and bigger role in U.S. politics. Of recent past performance, the prospect is not good.

Most careful studies indicate that campus extremists were almost always the engine of initiative in the turmoil of 1968-69 which engulfed a record number of schools in unrest leading to violence, vandalism, disruption and ugly confrontation.

No one expects the radicals to join the normal political process. Polls indicate they have no use for either major party. But if this time they succeed often in winning moderate support for their campus disturbances, as they did in 1968-69, then the growing contraction in the general electorate may be proposed fuller youth participation in politics. Impact would fall on the great "center mass."

The reason that hope is thin on this score is that the radicals, in the Students for a Democratic Society and other militant groups, seem to be impelled along a path of no return.

The Vietnam war could end tomorrow, racial strife could ease greatly, poverty could be licked, and still the radicals would move against the constituted authorities in and beyond the universities.

For, as Lewis S. Feuer, University of Toronto sociologist, observes in his huge study of student movements, the radicals are engaged in a "generational revolt" whose iron law is rejection of everything—no matter how tempting—the "establishment" offers up.

They must reject, reject, reject. Thus radical student interest in the civil rights movement diminished sharply once the federal government had enacted the landmark legislation of 1964-66. They could not join in the work of their adult elders.

The Peace Corps, widely hailed as an imaginative effort to enlist the idealism and energies of the young, is spurned by student militants as a "playpen" where evil-minded adults try to plant their children while they go about their dirty work in Vietnam and elsewhere.

We hear much these days about the "alienation" of the young, nearly always with indications that adult failures are the cause. But, as Feuer points out in his book, "The Conflict of Generations," the idea of alienation comes from the radicals themselves—who got it from the early writings of the celebrated Karl Marx.

The author insists that the student rebels need the concept of alienation. It gives shape, he says, to their vague but very deep and real feelings of resentment against their fathers and others in the adult realm.

That resentment Feuer finds at work throughout history, and he considers the generational conflict continuous, normal and inevitable.

Much of the time, he suggests, this conflict is in equilibrium in society. Then there are no disquieting "student movements."

But when balance is destroyed by the genuine failures of the adult world, then students in concert pour out their aggressions against that shaky society. He sees stunning examples in 19th century Germany and Russia and in postwar Japan (the adults lost the war).

Somewhere in our misuse of affluence, our delayed action in the racial field, our repeated stumbling into war, we in adult America "are perceived" by today's students as failures.

Feuer hails the idealism that spurs on youthful reaction against the shortcomings of this society, as it has in every student movement. Yet his long-panoramic view of these movements leads him to conclude that this idealism dies as the students, drawing deep on their generational animosity, unleash their aggressions and turn finally to violence and a view of themselves as an all-knowing elite.

America's colleges today obviously are well-seeded with radicals who fit this portrait of the rebel who will always find a cause.

California Senate Deals Jolt To Gasoline Engine

By DON OAKLEY
NEA Correspondent

The California Senate pulled a fast one the other day when no one was looking. By an overwhelming vote of 26 to 5, it passed a bill that would outlaw automobiles with gasoline-powered internal combustion engines in the state as of Jan. 1, 1975.

Most prominent among those who weren't looking were automobile industry lobbyists and spokesmen for oil and gasoline interests, who did not even bother to testify against the ridiculous bill in committee. Jolted by the surprising vote, they can be expected to correct their dereliction when the bill comes up for consideration in the Assembly.

The chances are practically nil that the lower chamber will pass, and the governor will sign, such a drastic measure into law. But California, the most pollution-conscious state in the nation, has served striking notice on Detroit that it had better begin knocking down in earnest to engineer a pollution-free internal combustion engine or an entirely different successor to it.

Even if Detroit does achieve the former goal, or even if California slides into the ocean as fortune tellers are confident it will momentarily—the days of the gasoline engine may be numbered anyway. Not only are alternative types of power free-

Mr. Richnix is trying hard to cut the federal budget by $3.5 billion. But your congressman won't let him. He said he was determined to "hold the line" on the $192.9 billion budget submitted last April. He might as well hoister up a raincoat.

Congress continues to increase federal spending faster than they can wrinkle their suits in the chambers.

Mr. Richnix asked for the termination of the agriculture conservation program in which farmers are subsidized for putting lime on their land. But money was approved in committee on both sides.

The House committee increased its "aid-to-education" requests by $123.4 million and are making 200-200 million with the lobbyists for more.

Mr. Richnix tried to terminate the "school milk" program, but funds have been approved to milk the taxpayers for all they can get in the final version of the appropriation.

A congress already that has raised its own pay and increased its staff took another poke at the little feller by adding an extra section to the civil service retirement fund bill. This new section will add another 1 billion gets to their stipends. It passed the house 350-10-48.

Mebbe you ain't reached to the bottom of your pockets yet—but congress is determined to make you do it.

of pollution, but they are more efficient.

These alternatives include steam, electricity and gas turbines, with more and more attention being given to the first.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare has just awarded a contract to Thermo Electron Corp. of Waltham, Mass., to design a practical steam engine for use in automobiles.

Engineer and industrialist William P. Lear is reportedly pouring millions into development of a steam car, and the auto companies have their own research projects, about which they say very little.

The automobile industry's lack of enthusiasm is understandable. A switchover from gasoline to steam, or whatever proves to be most feasible, would entail the most massive retooling program in its history. The industry is not going to embark upon it until it has to, probably as the result of a California-type ultimatum from the federal government.

In the end, however, the automakers would still be making automobiles, just as they always have. But what about the giant oil industry, which would stand to lose billions in gasoline sales?

The answer may be surprising. In the opinion of at least one California oil company official, "the development of a steam-powered automobile would be a wonderful thing. Petroleum is a fantastic source of valuable chemical by-products other than gasoline is growing every year, just as is the market for chemical derivatives from coal."

Nevertheless, an abrupt demise of the gasoline automobile would be a shattering and costly experience, not only for the oil industry but for service station operators and the manufacturers of an array of related products. All of them will fight it.

A more reasonable prospect is for a gradual changeover, a period of competition in the coming decade between pollution-free gasoline cars and steam cars or electric cars, or perhaps among all three.

In the much more distant future, however, the day may come when we cease burning gasoline in our automobiles altogether, just as today we have largely ceased burning coal in our home furnaces—if only in the interest of conserving a natural resource and not in protecting human health.

WIT AND WHIMSY
"No, no!" exclaimed the mother hastily as her daughter, a new bride, started to cover her pantry shelves with newspaper. "Use leftover wallpaper, brown paper, paper bags, if you like—anything but newspaper!"
"Do you want everybody to know when you cleaned your shelves last?" inquired the experienced housewife.

The Doctor Says

By DR. W. G. BRANSTADT

Keeness of Vision Unaffected by 'Floaters'

Q—I have chains of bubbles or lintlike particles floating across my field of vision. What can I do for this?

A—These so-called floaters are harmless. They do not affect the keeness of your vision. They are silhouettes of loose cells in the thin gelatinous substance that occupies most of your eyeballs. Often after several weeks they may settle in a part of your eye where they will not cross your visual field. No treatment is necessary.

Q—Sometimes I have spots before my eyes. My doctor calls them muscae volitantes. What causes them?

A—This is a fancy name for the floaters referred to in the preceding question.

Q—Does a ruptured blood vessel in the eye, mean a slight stroke?

A—Hemorrhage into the conjunctiva or any part of the eye, when not caused by a blow, is usually associated with some hardening of the arteries. In this sense it is similar to a stroke, but in a different location as a stroke would occur in the brain.

Q—An ophthalmologist told me I had ametropia but he didn't describe any treatment. He just said to come back in three months. What do you advise?

A—Ametropia is a general term for an error of refraction near- or far-sightedness. Since no treatment was suggested, your case is probably mild. I would advise going back for a checkup at the suggested time.

Q—My mother has bilateral aphakia. What does that mean? Can anything be done for it?

A—This is a congenital lack of a crystalline lens in both eyes. A person with this defect would have to wear the kind of glasses prescribed for one who has had both lenses removed because of cataracts.

Q—What would cause a cyst under the eyelid? Is surgery necessary? If neglected would the sight be lost?

A—This is generally called a chalazion and is caused by a stoppage of the duct of one of the oil glands in the lids. Small cysts will sometimes disappear with the application of hot compresses or yellow oxide of mercury ointment but, if this doesn't work, the cyst must be opened and drained. Treated or not, it is no threat to your sight.

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Inside Washington

By ROBERT ALLEN and JOHN GOLOSIMITH

Anti-Safeguard Opposition Could Roll Again
WASHINGTON—Some supporters of President Nixon's Safeguard ABM think they won their narrow Senate victory three weeks before the showdown votes, when the Senate met behind closed doors without aides and brain-trusters.

The secret Senate session held on July 17th, figures importantly in the accounts now being relayed by vacationing lawmakers to their constituents. ABM supporters are convinced that their presentation on that occasion stopped the anti-Safeguard bandwagon.

Oddly, views of these Safeguard supporters suggest that the well organized Senate opposition was, in a sense, a bit over-organized. In retrospect, it appears that too much of the anti-ABM spade work may have been left to dedicated and energetic aides.

In recent months, administrative assistants, and other aides to the group of senators who are out to thrash the Pentagon, have done extensive research on the ABM and other controversial weapons systems. They wrote many of the speeches made in the long ABM debate.

Before the secret session there was a good deal of discussion about which aides would be allowed inside the locked Senate chamber. In the end, leaders decided that none would be admitted except for Senate functionaries and official reporters. Not even staff members of the Senate Armed Services Committee were on hand, though they had drafted the pending procurement bill.

Under those circumstances, Safeguard supporters, headed by Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Wash., made what they believed to be a persuasive case, using classified information in support of the proposed ABM deployment. Opponents, headed by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., were handicapped without their aides at hand, according to these accounts.

One participation, a lukewarm supporter of the Safeguard system, told us that "there was a marked difference" between the carefully reasoned arguments advanced in public by Safeguard opponents and their rationale when confronted with classified data behind closed doors.

A transcript of the July 17 proceedings is eventually to be published in the Congressional Record. Each participating senator has the right to edit his remarks, however, and the transcript will then be subjected to a thorough "sanitizing"—censoring—by the Pentagon.

Much of the meat will be consumed in that process. "NO COMPROMISE"—President Nixon declared at the outset that he wanted no compromise on his proposed Safeguard deployment. There was none, and he may come to be sorry about that.

Senate strategists, including some Safeguard proponents, think the President's White House aides made a mistake in the Senate maneuvering. One of them commented, after the razor-thin victory: "They played it with their feet."

These critics think the two close votes—51 to 49 and, thanks to Vice President Agnew, 51 to 50—will extend an open invitation to opponents for a surprise reopening of the ABM controversy. An absence or two some day—and the Safeguard decision could be reversed.

The White House, in this view, could have acted long ago to embrace a harmless compromise and assure a substantial vote of confidence. When the showdown was at hand too many commitments had been made, and no such compromise was possible.

The most attractive vehicle for compromise was a proposal by Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., which would have prevented deployment of the defensive missiles, Spartan and Sprint, this year. The Nixon blueprint does not require that the missiles be deployed now.

In the final voting McIntyre's amendment got only 27 votes, but an analysis of roll calls suggests that such an amendment might have received as many as 70 if President Nixon had embraced it. If the Safeguard issue is subsequently reopened, in the narrowly divided Senate, while the President's representatives are talking arms control with the Russians, he may wish that he had done that.

ILLOGIC AND EMOTION—The closest of the Safeguard votes, the 51 to 50 margin against an amendment proposed by Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Me., offers an index of the illogic and emotion which, it is believed, involved in the current drive to curb the Pentagon.

Mrs. Smith's amendment was designed to halt research on the Safeguard system as well as any Safeguard deployment.

After about 100 orbits, however, Bonny began goofing off.

Ground controllers in Houston would let him go without the food reward only for a little while. After all, you can't let a space monkey go hungry—So earthmen would send the radio signal which would release the food pellets and water.

By the end of the eighth day Bonny had discovered that he would be fed whether he pushed the buttons or not. From then on he began to neglect his assigned tasks.

From earth, by way of sensors attached to his body, we knew that Bonny was alive, alert and well but, as a NASA spokesman complained, "He's just not trying."

There was no way to recondition him; he might starve.

The 30-day mission, after eight and a half days, was aborted.

Bonny, useless, was brought back to earth.

The primary objective of his experiment was intended to be physiological: the effects of prolonged weightlessness. It did not last long enough for that.

It did, however, become a significant experiment in psychology.

From the eighth day on, Bonny was on "welfare." Once he had learned the newer "conditioned response"—that he would get food and water whether he performed his chores or not—Bonny quite naturally deduced that there was no reason to work any more.

The moral, I hope, is too in advance, Bonny was obvious to require elaboration.

Space Monkey On Welfare Decided To Take It Easy

By PAUL HARVEY

The poor, the Bible says, we will always have with us.

The poor shall never cease out of the land, Moses said.

This acknowledges that some will always need to be cared for by others.

But our federal government, trying to help the poor, is encouraging poorness. Welfare rolls are increasing twice as fast as our population is increasing.

Our federal government now operates 1,091 federal assistance programs ranging from scholarships to low-cost housing. There are 87 million Americans on "welfare" and their upkeep is costing you $25 billion every year.

In many cities, potential workers, recognizing that they can collect more after-tax dollars for not working, are not working.

Perhaps I am about to change the subject, that is for you to decide.

Soviet scientist Pavlov pioneered research in conditioned response. He used laboratory dogs, teaching them to respond to sights, sounds and smells.

When a dog accidentally stepped on a button, ringing a bell, a pellet of food would be released.

Very soon the dog learned purposely to step on the button, thus to get food.

This, and considerably more sophisticated responses, was the basis for the recent space research involving Bonny, the astronaut.

This 14-pound monkey, or-biting overhead on what was intended to be a 30-day mission, hopefully would supply us with valuable information on the effects of prolonged weightlessness.

The moral, I hope, is too in advance, Bonny was obvious to require elaboration.

conditioned to respond to certain light and radio signals, he was taught memory-precipitation and eye-hand co-ordination, so that in space he might perform useful chores—each performance rewarded by some edible goodie.

After about 100 orbits, however, Bonny began goofing off.

Ground controllers in Houston would let him go without the food reward only for a little while. After all, you can't let a space monkey go hungry—So earthmen would send the radio signal which would release the food pellets and water.

By the end of the eighth day Bonny had discovered that he would be fed whether he pushed the buttons or not. From then on he began to neglect his assigned tasks.
