Chapter 10—Mountain Music Bard Rackets to Fame Win His 'Beautiful Texas,' Many Other Songs Are Given United States Recognition.

By C. L. DOUGLAS and FRANCIS MILLER

The red interurban of the North Texas Traction Company rocketed along the rails between Fort Worth and Dallas—the country's green and inviting, flashing along the right of way.

Beautiful Texas! W. Lee O'Daniel, the Fort Worth flour mill manager, thought that as he gazed idly from the window of the Crimson Limited, too bad Texas had no song describing its natural beauty, for Texas had everything—rugged mountains, expanse of plains, beaches stretching along the Rio Grande, pine woods, and the rolling, grassy slopes of the Cross-Timbers.

"Well, why not?" O'Daniel asked himself. He began turning over in his mind the words for such a song, and humming a little tune to fit the theme.

"You have all read the beautiful stories of countries far over the sea. From whence came our ancestors? To establish this land of the free."

Yes, that sounded all right; it had a ring to it, a certain lilt, and the director of radio Light Crust Doughboys went ahead.

"There are some folks who still like an oval. To see wheat they have over there. But when they go look, it's not like the book. And they find there is none to compare."

To Beautiful, Beautiful Texas—The most beautiful place I know. The chorus came easy, with a touch of patriotism and a bit of landscaping thrown in for good measure.

To Beautiful, Beautiful Texas, Where the beautiful bluebonnets grow. "We're proud of our forefathers Who fought at the Alamo— You can live on the plains or the mountains. Or down where the sea breezes blow. And you're still in Beautiful Texas."

The most beautiful place that I know. There it was, and when Mr. O'Daniel returned to Fort Worth from his business trip he hummed the tune and the words before his Doughboys until they caught it. Then, on a regular program one morning in 1933, he put it on the air over WBAP, the station from which he was then broadcasting.

LETTERS POUR IN FROM LISTENERS The response, as usual, was terrific. Letters poured in asking for copies, by this time, through use of the more powerful station, Mr. O'Daniel had regular morning listeners in many states.

The music-publishing firm of Shapiro, Bernstein and Company in New York, introducers of "The Last Roundup" and "The Old Spinning Wheel," heard about it and asked for publication rights, which were granted. The song, "Beautiful Texas," became known all over the country, and it was formally introduced a little later by Charlie Davis and his Hotel N. W. York orchestra, over a national network; to be still later featured on one of Major Bowes' Capitol Family programs.

Thus a Kansas farm boy, turned mill executive, broke into the big-time ranks of Tin Pan Alley.

Already, he had written from time to time, and a bit secretly, a sheet of music for strictly family consumption, but he now turned to the work of a troubadour in real earnest. Writing flour shipment orders with one hand, he employed the other to give vent to his poetical talent; turning out, among other things, such self-explanatory titles as "Your Own Sweet Darling Wife," "Put Me In Your Pocket," "That City for Shut-In's," and "On to Victory, Mr. Roosevelt."

All this, despite the fact that he plays no musical instrument and never had a lesson in the notes and sharps and flats. You may wonder how he managed it. Well, the children were growing, and were proficient in music—Pat on the banjo, Mike on the piano and accordion—and he always could call on them when he felt a tune coming on. He merely whistled what he wanted and the children, or some of the Doughboys, set it to music.

Both he and the orchestra were surprised at the speed with which he could throw himself into the inspiration and mood of composition. For instance when the Charles Lindbergh baby was kidnapped he sat down and dashed off a number called "Please Bring Back My Daddy to Me."

He whistled the melody until the Doughboys caught on, and put the piece on the air that same day. Next morning the postman stumbled into the Burrus office with thousands of requests for the song. A photograph concern in New York heard about it and asked for rights.

Of course, Mr. O'Daniel "ad-libbed" and made parodies a great deal in that period just as he does in current Hillbilly Flour days with things like—

Like mountain music, Good old mountain music, Played by a real hillbilly band. I like bread and biscuits, Big white, fluffy biscuits— Hillbilly flour makes 'em grand. So while we sing and play, And try to make folks happy, We hope you'll say "Please pass the biscuits, Pappy."

But that was business. In this verifying line of endeavor he liked best to appeal to the hearts of his listeners in a more timely and sentimental vein.

SONG DEDICATED TO MRS. WILLY ROGERS When the universally beloved Will

Although W. Lee O'Daniel has written both the music and words to numerous songs, he neither plays a musical instrument nor reads music. O'Daniel just gets the words and the tune in his head, hums it to one of his sons or members of his hillbilly band, and has them put the tune on paper after they have picked it up from his mental tune.

Most successful of all of O'Daniel's music is his song, "Beautiful Texas." So popular is this song that the words of it, printed on the back of his flour sacks, helps sell his flour. The back of the "Beautiful Texas" flour sack is shown above. Sales for O'Daniel's song, "Beautiful Texas," the front of which is shown at lower left, have more than tripled since his recent election, music stores report.

Beautiful Texas You have all read the beautiful stories of the countries far over the sea. From whence came our ancestors? To establish this land of the free. There are some folks who still like to travel. To see wheat they have over there. But when they go look, it's not like the book. And they find there is none to compare.

Rogers, whom Mr. O'Daniel admired so much, met his death with Wiley Post in an Alaskan plane crash, the miller immediately wrote a song, dedicated to Mrs. Rogers, and put it on the air. It goes like this: "Someone in heaven is thinking of you— Someone who was always loyal and true; Someone who used to be close by your side; Laughed when you laughed and cried when you cried."

These are just bits from the O'Daniel album of poetry and song, but they serve to give a clear insight into the mind and versatility of the man who fashioned them—the next governor of Texas. He takes his inspiration from a multitude of sources. One time when Mike was combing his mother's hair, Mr. O'Daniel, who sat watching, took up pencil and paper and wrote "The Boy Who Never Gets Too Big To Comb His Mother's Hair."

Another was called "The Orphan Newsboy" was prompted by contact with a child of the streets; and "Human Blossoms" came after visiting a crippled child who had written to say that he lived some distance from the highway but would like very much to personally hear the Hillbilly Band.

Moved by the letter, the future governor made a special trip to the lad's home and gave him a special concert.

Naturally, "Your Own Sweet Darling Wife" is a favorite with Mrs. O'Daniel, but she lists these among others she particularly enjoys: "In Mrs. Garden," "Que Baby," "Your Ship is Coming," "Your Pot of Gold," "Lonesome Road," "Thoughts at Eventide," "Wracks Along Life's Highway," and "Marvelous Mother."

You can be sure that these, now treasured by the future First Lady in a scrapbook, will appear when the governor-elect puts his unpublished works into book form.

Just what duties the new chief executive will perform in collaboration with Muse during his coming administration is, of course, a matter of conjecture, but he will have the distinction of being the first troubadour head of the state government since the elegant Mirabeau Eustachio Lamar, as second president of the Texas republic, dipped his quill in Poesy's ink-well back in the days of Samuel Houston Davy Crockett and the other Texans. 10 New Oil And Gas Wells Tested In Plains Field

POTENTIALS OF 2793 BARRELS OF OIL FILED

The Panhandle field continued its upward trend last week with the staking of five new locations and testing of five oil and five gas wells by the railroad commission.

The five new oil producers, four in Hutchinson county and one in Gray county, were given total open flow potentials of 2,793 barrels. The five gasers, three in Hutchinson county and two in Carson county, added 105,607,000 cubic feet to the field potential.

Gray and Hutchinson counties tied in new locations with four each. The other first intention was in Wheeler county. Drilling almost reached the west city limits of Pampa in two places with announcement by the Continental Oil company that it would drill its No. 2 M. K. Brown in section 115, block 3, I&GN survey, adjoining the northwest part of the city and staking of a location by the Drilling and Exploration company for its No. 4 W. B. Henry in section 114, block 3, I&GN survey, plots 137 and 153 of the suburbs of Pampa, adjoining the southwest part of the city.

The Gibson Oil company announced its first location on newly acquired lease in section 12, block M-21, TCRR survey, Hutchinson county, and the Phillips Petroleum company staked its first location on a new lease in section 7, block M-16, AB&M survey.

Best oil well of the week was the Midstates Oil corporation No. A-20 Whittenburg in section 11, block M-21, TCRR survey, Hutchinson county, which gauged 796 barrels.

Stekoll and Dye registered two excellent gasers in Hutchinson county when their No. 1 Whittenburg in section 26, block 3, W. Neil survey, gauged 44,637,000 cubic feet and their No. 2 Whittenburg in the same section tested 46,122,000 cubic feet.

A Panhandle wildcat drawing much attention is the Sinclair-Prairie No. 1 Bush, deep test northwest of Amarillo in section 23, block 6, BS&F survey. The test is drilling below 2,981 feet. It is the first deep test to be drilled outside of the large gas area. Contract depth of the well is 8,500 feet.

Wheeler County Not On Compliance List

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Agricultural Adjustment administration listed 75 counties in 13 states today as failing to comply with the dairy amendment to the 1938 farm act.

The amendment provided that AAA payments could be made only on farms which had not "substantially increased" their dairy production for market by using soil-conserving crops produced on land shifted from soil-depleting crops.

The AAA said a check of individual farms would be made in the counties listed as "out of substantial compliance," and payments to individual farmers complying with the amendment would not be affected.

The counties listed as "out of compliance" included: Wheeler, Wichita and Wise.

The AAA said that in the "out of compliance" counties, farmers would be deemed out of compliance with the amendment "only if they have increased their herds more than two cows above normal and then only if they used shifted acreage for their commercial dairy production."

VFW Will Attend Ohio Encampment

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 21—To save America for democracy will be the theme of the 29th National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States when upwards of 50,000 overseas veterans meet in Columbus this week.

Five nationally known speakers will take part in a symposium on the five freedoms which form the basic principles of American democracy when the opening session of this veteran gathering is held on Monday, August 22.

Commander-in-Chief Scott P. Squires, Oklahoma City, will preside. The rights of free speech, free press, religious worship, assembly and petition will be discussed in the program named by Herbert Bayard Swope, famous war correspondent and Pulitzer prize-winning reporter; Herbert Agar, associate editor of the Louisville, Kentucky, Courier-Journal; Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, director of the National Conference of Jews and Christians; Alexander F. Whitney, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Greenville Clark, member of a widely known law firm and a recognized authority on Constitutional law.

Hughes Completed Stratosphere Trip

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (AP)—Resting after his speedy transcontinental flight to test a new type of oxygen mask, Howard Hughes, breaker of air records, predicted tonight that transport flying was about to enter a new era.

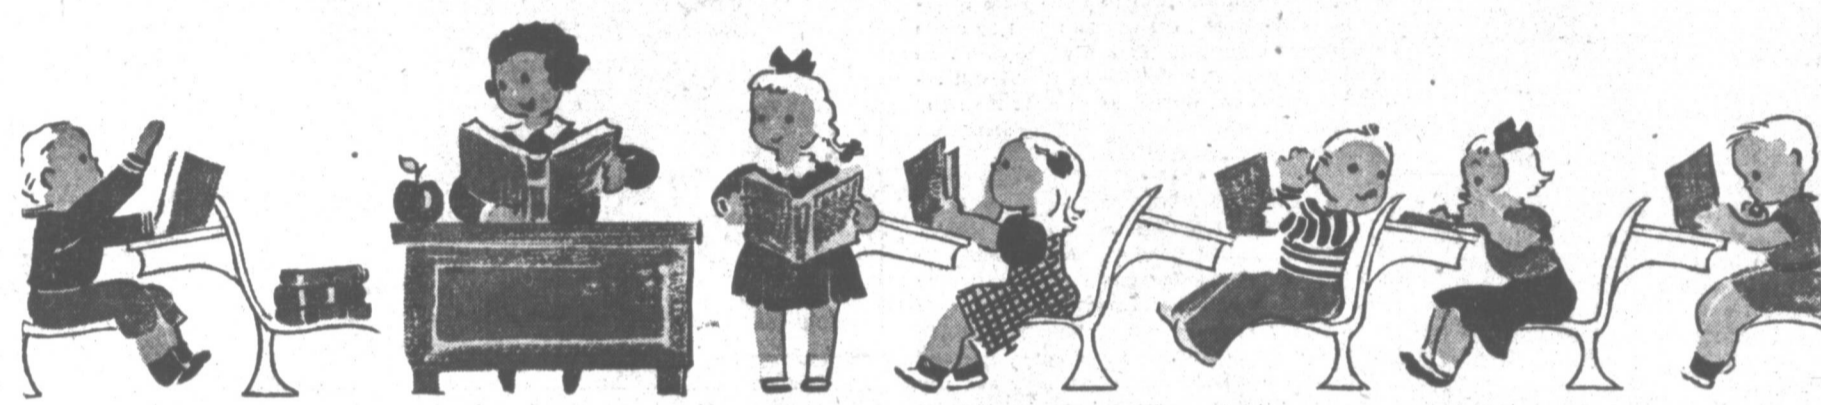

The lanky flier, who set a new record today for flying across the country in a transport type plane, expressed belief that all commercial flying will be done in the stratosphere height of 30,000 feet as soon as proper oxygen masks and other equipment are manufactured.

Hughes averages 236 miles an hour in making the flight from Glendale, Calif., in 10 hours 34 minutes.

most famous little girls in the world, the Dionne quintuplets, and their equally famous "docteur," Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, in a new picture why visitors to Callender are more intrigued by the quintuplets this summer than ever before. The quint's mentor, who is a "city boy," has changed in his manner and in his dress as everyone does who rides the hero's wagon. He is still friendly and full of sly humor and is, in appearance, he is now undistinguishable from a big city doctor as he looks younger than he did three years ago and somehow one more sophisticated. Dr. Dafoe reads everything—but especially mystery stories. He is out to the Quintuplet Hospital every morning at 6 o'clock and later in the day he fills whatever appointments he has.

Demonstration on Bread Conducted By Mrs. Kelley

"Good bread is nearer a well balanced diet than any other item in our diet," Mrs. Julia E. Kelley stated in a bread demonstration for the Bell Home Demonstration club at the home of Mrs. George Kurtz last week.

For health and economy the daily diet should contain not less than six slices of bread. The chief value of bread in the diet is to supply a tasty, cheap source of food energy, and bread used as a source of energy is not fattening. The presence of bread in the diet helps one to reduce safely, helps burn up body fat and helps to prevent acidosis. Bread is one of the most easily digested of all foods, she pointed out.

No one food contains all of the elements necessary for nutrition and health is assured by eating a variety of foods. Several kinds of yeast bread were made including orange bread, poppy seed sticks, coffee cake, and Graham nut muffins. The recipe for the muffins is as follows:

One cake of yeast, four tablespoons of molasses or brown sugar; two cups of milk, scalded and cooled; 4 tablespoons of melted fat; one egg, well beaten; one and one-half cups graham flour; one and three-fourths cup of sifted white flour; two teaspoons of salt; and three-fourths cup of chopped nuts.

Dissolve yeast, sugar, and molasses in lukewarm milk; add fat, egg, graham and white flour gradually, using enough flour to make a thick batter. Add salt and nuts beating in well. Cover and let rise until light about one hour. Fill greased muffin pans about two-thirds full; cover and let rise to fill the pans, about one-half hour. Bake in moderate oven 400 degrees. Makes 14 muffins.

Plans were mailed for the regular monthly party Saturday night, during the business session and a picnic was planned for the afternoon of August 28. Plans for the Tri-State Fair and the Dallas Fair made by the Educational committee were read by Mrs. C. McKnight.

Tea and the various breads made were served to nine members, two visitors, Misses Dorothy Skibinski and Gertrude Kurtz, and Mrs. Julia E. Kelley.

The next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Roland Daner on September 7.

plenty of time for fun together thanks to ELECTRICITY

their monthly bill averages $6.25 or 20c Per Day

It covers light, and the power to heat and run an electric range, a washer, an ironer, a vacuum cleaner, a water heater and a dishwasher, as much as needed to keep the home operating at maximum efficiency. It also covers the use of small appliances such as percolator and toaster, and electric hand iron.

The old adage that woman's work is never done is not true in an electric home. With the help of electricity woman's work gets itself done with surprising quickness and ease. And the whole family enjoys a home life not possible in the days before electricity came to do the hard tasks and let the women of the household have free time to enjoy with their families. Are you making the most of electricity's help? It's easy and inexpensive to own and use all the electric appliances you want and need.

SERIAL STORY

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, The Amoses congratulated each other after their little act before Kinks and Sally.

CHAPTER XII

"I COULD kill Spencer Ames," Sally said venomously, as she headed the car out of Winstock.

"Seems to me he could," said Kinks. "Didn't old Kenworthy say he just about owns that bank?"

"Wilton was decent about it, anyhow," said Sally. "He made an impassioned plea, all right," Kinks admitted.

"Good heavens, I'm too busy to marry anybody. If you or Wilton want to get married, you'd better find some girl who isn't trying to run a cockeyed hotel."

"An alien car stood in the driveway as they approached the Restorium. And off the porch, in conversation with Mr. Harkness, sat a tall, thin female whose pale-gold hair, threaded here and there with gray, flourished in wild abandon about her head.

"Marry?" exclaimed Sally. "Good heavens, I'm too busy to marry anybody. If you or Wilton want to get married, you'd better find some girl who isn't trying to run a cockeyed hotel."

"An alien car stood in the driveway as they approached the Restorium. And off the porch, in conversation with Mr. Harkness, sat a tall, thin female whose pale-gold hair, threaded here and there with gray, flourished in wild abandon about her head.

"Well," he said to Mr. Harkness, as Sally and Miss Fenimore departed, "there's another one. I hope you don't mind the mixed company around here."

"MR. HARKNESS made no reply. He was gazing volubly after Wolfgang, the dachshund, Kinks, perceiving his trend of thought, respected it with silence. It was obvious that Mr. Harkness was considering Wolfgang as a subject for electrification.

On the following day a major tragedy occurred. Mr. Harkness lost his pliers.

Up to that point the business of installing batteries in the various mounted animal heads had been progressing by leaps and bounds. Now, however, it was suddenly suspended. And the electrical genius mooned about dolefully, searching everywhere, and constantly getting under the feet of Sally and Mrs. Clipstick.

"If that little man asks me if I've seen his pliers, just once more," Sally told Kinks, expectorately, "I'm going to take him across my knee. He's pestered me to death."

Miss Clara Fenimore

"What's he making so much fuss about?" said Kinks. "I mislaid my tobacco pouch this morning, but you haven't heard me squawk."

"Et tu, Brute?" said Sally. "It seems to be a day for losing things. Mrs. Clipstick can't find her potato peeler."

They had been down to the river and were now approaching the house across the back lawn. "How's the Fenimore liking the place?" Kinks asked.

Sally laughed. "She says her nerves are better already. She's gone off in her car, happy as a lark."

"KINKS' reply was cut short by the sudden appearance of Mr. Bull Griffin. A look of alarm dominated Mr. Griffin's rock-ribbed countenance.

"Hey," he said agitatedly, "I've lost me rod."

"Your what?" said Sally. "Me gat, me iron."

Sally turned to Kinks. "What on earth," she commanded, "is the man talking about?"

"He's lost his gun," Kinks translated. "Dat's it," said Bull. "Me gun. I leave it in me coat, an' me an' Spaldin goes fer a walk an' now it's gone."

"Well," began Sally, "you don't need . . ."

She stopped abruptly. A second-story window had opened. The head of Mrs. Clipstick was thrust out.

"Miss Pennington," called Mrs. Clipstick in a portentous voice, "can you and Mr. Parker come here a minute?"

Sally and Kinks hurried upstairs. Mrs. Clipstick stood in the room recently assigned to Miss Clara Fenimore. One hand was raising a corner of the mattress off the bed. The other pointed to a collection of articles lying on the springs. And the Clipstickian face wore a severe expression.

"I don't know what's goin' on in this house," said Mrs. Clipstick. "I was doin' this room and look what I found!"

Kinks and Sally looked. Huddled together on the bed springs were three spools of silk, an ash tray, a small china ornament from the living room mantelpiece, Mrs. Clipstick's potato peeler, Kinks' tobacco pouch, Mr. Harkness' pliers, and Bull Griffin's revolver.

Sally put a hand to her head. "My Lord," she exclaimed. "What is the woman? A junk collector?"

Kinks saw light suddenly. "No," he said. "Unless I'm way off, she's a kleptomaniac."

GREEN CLAIMS FOR APPROVES LABOR CHANGE

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY. HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt is ready to seek changes in the Wagner Labor act, William Green reported today.

The president of the American Federation of Labor, after a long talk with Mr. Roosevelt here, told reporters:

"We discussed possible changes in the (labor relations) law thoroughly. We are in accord on the necessity of making some changes in the law to overcome objections the A. F. of L. has offered regarding the board's administration."

Green referred to the National Labor Relations Board. He said its members should be "more judicial minded" and asserted he had given the President numerous specific complaints against its activities.

Green did not specify discussed changes in the labor act, but he said possibilities included reducing the board's authority or a clarification of the law to define exactly the board's duties.

The board, he said, has not observed "the spirit" of the labor law. The A. F. of L. head told reporters a story which Mr. Roosevelt told him:

Miss Marian Dickerman, member of the administration commission studying labor relations in Great Britain and Sweden, recently talked with Mr. Roosevelt, the chief executive asked her what had impressed her most during the commission investigation.

Miss Dickerman replied that she had been impressed by two things: First, clauses in British labor contracts requiring employers to recommend that their workers join the union, and second, "the extraordinary good manners employers and employes maintain toward each other."

"The President thought that was very significant," Green continued, "and I agreed with him."

"They cooperate and behave themselves," he added, "while here in America we are still at war."

On June 30, 1926, there were 2107 county agents and 114 assistants in the United States. The first agent started his duties in 1911.
