Nanking Government Asks League of Nations for Quick Probe

DEPREDACTIONS OF JAPAN ARE CITED IN NOTE

Tsinan Is Cleared of Nationalists After Bloodshed

BOYCOTT UNDER WAY IN CITIES

U. S. Woman Missionary Is Killed by Sniper at Tsinanfu

TOKYO, May 11.—(P)—It was officially stated today that 21 Japanese soldiers have been killed in the fighting with the Chinese Nationalists at Tsinan. Seventy were wounded. Thirteen Japanese civilians were killed and nine wounded. Twenty-eight civilians are missing and two of these are believed to have been murdered.

TOKYO, May 11.—(P)—Railroad authorities have been ordered to prepare for the transportation of 20,000 men and 5,300 horses to Shantung, China, between next Sunday and the end of the month.

This will bring the total Japanese forces in Shantung to about 38,000 men.

Ask Investigation

GENEVA, May 11.—(P)—The Nanking Nationalist government today appealed to the League of Nations against the Japanese who have driven the Chinese Nationalists out of Tsinan.

The League secretariat received from the foreign minister of the Nanking government asking the intervention of the League of Nations under the paragraph two, article eleven of the covenant. It also requested that a special meeting of the league council be convened to investigate the Japanese expeditionary movement into Shantung.

The communication was immediately telegraphed to all members of the League council. It expressed a willingness on the part of the Nanking government to accept any proper arrangement which might result from international inquiry or from mediation.

The document gave a history of the recent situation in China and mentioned what it termed the "unjustified depredations of the Japanese."

Week of Bloodshed

SHANGHAI, May 11.—(P)—Tsinan has been cleared of Nationalists by the Japanese after a week of bloodshed, but anti-foreign feeling today was smoldering in Shanghai.

It was considered extremely risky for foreigners to venture into native territory. Japanese troops patrolled the Japanese section of the foreign city. Japanese residents of Canton were evacuated to Shemou, the foreign settlement, and Hongkong. A run on the Taiwan bank, a Japanese institution in Canton by Chinese depositors because of the Tsinan clashes resulted in foreign banks, especially American ones, gaining accounts.

A strong anti-Japanese boycott was under way in Canton. The city was placarded with anti-Japanese posters.

American Woman Killed

SHANGHAI, May 11.—(P)—Mrs. William T. Hobart of the American Methodist mission at Tsinanfu, near Tsinan, was killed on April 29 by a bullet fired through a small window in her bedroom from an opposite wall during fighting between the Nationalists and Northerners.

Mrs. Hobart, who was 45 years old, was born at Fishing, Long Island. She and her husband have been missionaries in China for many years.

William F. Kenn, Chum of Governor, Became Texas Cowboy then New York Contractor—Would Do Anything for Al

NEW YORK, May 11.—(P)—A friendship of 35 years that started when both were boys on New York's lower East Side attracted attention today as the result of the revelation that William F. Kenn contributed $20,000 and loaned $50,000 more to Governor Alfred E. Smith's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Kenn, after a varied career in Texas as a cowboy and a railroad worker, returned to New York to accumulate a fortune as a contractor. He has been active in politics.

Testimony before the Senate campaign fund investigating committee by George R. Van Name, Governor Smith's pre-convention campaign manager, of Kenn's contributions, caused no surprise among the friends of the two men.

The governor, speaking of his friendship with Kenn, recently said: "There is nothing in the world that Bill Kenn wouldn't do for me. Why, Bill Kenn would take his shirt off for me, if there was any call for it."

Kenn, at one time, discussing his relationship with the governor, said:

"I count my warm friendship with Al Smith one of the most happy events in my career. But my relationship with him goes no further than that. He does not ask me for advice. I do not offer any. The governor's private and political life is an open book. Anybody can read it. The governor is a most remarkable man. He does not need advice."

Kenn is a general contractor. Testimony was given before the Senate committee that he had constructed state roads and installed pipe for public service corporations. Inquiry was also made whether he was the same Kenn who had submitted bids for the purchase of government vessels from the United States shipping board.

"Mr. Kenn is a man of great wealth, isn't he?" Senator Barkley asked.

"Oh, yes," Van Name replied. "He is very wealthy. I don't think $70,000 matters in the least to him. He would do anything for the governor because of his friendship for him."

Kenn's father was a battalion chief in the fire department, and a hero to the youthful Al Smith, whose father was a truckman. The two boys were constant companions, in and out of the fire house.

Young Kenn ran away from home and Smith stayed in New York and went into politics, but the two never lost touch.

Returning to New York in 1898, Kenn was married to Miss Mary E. Hickey, and with $2,400 in the treasury they started housekeeping. Friends of Smith suggested that when he was married soon after, his financial status probably was little better.

In time Kenn built up a contracting business described as one of the biggest in the state, with an annual turnover estimated at around $40,000,000. His fortune is said to be in the vicinity of $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

CARBON BLACK PERMIT ASKED

Coltco Corporation Would Build Plant Near LeFors

A petition has been filed with the railroad commission of Texas by the Coltco corporation asking permission to erect and operate a carbon black plant near LeFors. The petition will be taken up by the commission at its regular meeting May 31 at Austin.

According to the petition, the plant will use 12,000,000 cubic feet of residue gas from the company's casing-head plant, now under construction. The corporation also asks the right to erect two additional plants within six and twelve months, respectively, from the date of the first unit permit.

The location of the proposed carbon black plant in Gray would be about three miles southeast of the LeFors townsite and near the company's gasoline plant. The same company is largely cashed plant, which will be completed this summer, is one of the most up-to-date in the Panhandle.

The granting of permission to the Coltco corporation to erect the plant will give Gray county four of the largest carbon black plants in the Panhandle. The Magnolia, carbon black plant has been in operation for the last year, while the Texas Oil Curbing company's plant in the McGee pool, and the Western Carbon company's plant in the Wilcox field, are under construction.

The carbon black industry is fast becoming one of the largest industries in the Panhandle, especially in Gray and Hutchinson counties.

The cost of the new plant was not stated in the petition.

Oil Men Will Meet at Borger Next Thursday

A meeting of oil producers and superintendents of the major corporations operating in the Panhandle fields will be held in the Black hotel in Borger next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. All interested persons are invited to attend this meeting. M. O. Danziger, chairman of the committee, announced this morning to The News.

These men hold meetings once a month in cities in the Panhandle and discuss conditions, activities, and trends in the Panhandle. The last meeting was held three weeks ago at the Schneider hotel, when 75 men

Chicago Police Commissioner Clamps on 1 o'Clock Curfew

"Go-Get-Em Mike" Hughes Declares He Will "Make Town So Tight It Squeaks" and Stop Gambling

CHICAGO, May 11.—(P)—Commissioner of Police Hughes has decreed a curfew on the city's night life at 1 a. m.

Since his return Wednesday from a vacation in Missouri, "Go-get-Em Mike" Hughes has issued ultimatums and orders with rattling gun rapidity. His first was to clean up gambling and vice conditions. Then followed instructions to clamp the lid on tight at 1 a. m.

Unless his orders were obeyed hold deputy commissioners, they would face charges before the police trial board. His specific orders were:

"Enforce the 1 a. m. closing law for poolrooms and soft drink parlors."

"Halt all rum-running vehicles and turn liquor and prisoners over to the government authorities."

"Halt all racecourses on sight and keep jailing them as frequently as they are released.

"Stop all open gambling."

"Those are your instructions," said the commissioner, "and they can't be misunderstood. See that they are followed to the letter. There will be no buck passing to the captains or subordinates. It is up to you to see that these orders are followed. If they aren't you'll go before the board."

Reports that Commissioner Hughes would resign have been denied repeatedly.

He told subordinates the results of the recent primary election indicated the voters wanted reform. "We'll give them reform," he said. "Close everything. Make a house-to-house canvass in the hunt for beer flats. Watch for slot machines and any other form of gambling. We are going to make this town so tight it squeaks."

"PUSH" AFTER BRIDGE GAME HURTS WOMAN

Partners Quarrel and One Sues Other, Getting Only $300 Award

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 11.—(P)—Bridge players knew this was certain to happen some time.

Mrs. Gene Robinson, according to testimony yesterday in superior court here in the trial of the suit brought against her by Mrs. Esther Lyon, finished her partner's spade lead. Mrs. Lyon was the partner.

Then the battle started. First it was a battle of words, words that kept flowing until the hand was played.

"Then she jumped up and I pushed her back," testified Mrs. Robinson. Mrs. Lyon declared her face was cut in that "push" by the diamonds on Mrs. Robinson's fingers. So she sued for $21,010 damages.

Inch of Rain Is Blessing to Pampa Wheat Territory

More than one-inch of rain has fallen in the Pampa territory since yesterday afternoon. A heavy rain, followed by thunder and lightning, drenched the country and practically assured one of the largest wheat crops of recent years.

Very little damage was done when lightning struck a warehouse at the Magnolia Carbon Black plant east of here yesterday afternoon.

The roads in practically every direction are almost impassable. The buses had not started running at noon today.

AMARILLO, May 11.—(P)—Rainfall, varying from one-half an inch to more than two inches in some instances was recorded in the entire Panhandle of Texas and northern New Mexico last night and today, according to reports here.

DIRIGIBLE NOW OVER REGIONS LITTLE KNOWN

First Voyage Begun at 7:45 o'Clock This Morning

GENERAL NOBLE INTENDS TO LAND

Carries Cross to Be Erected at Exact Pole Site

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, May 11.—(P)—The dirigible Italia which left Kings Bay this morning for a 40-hour flight over the Polar Regions, returned after seven hours because of bad weather conditions.

The Italia had covered about 300 miles, much of it in a heavy snow storm and a northwest wind which eventually compelled the dirigible to return to the Kings Bay in a. The crew of the Clitta Di Milano, the Italia's supply ship, was watching at the landing place and was in wireless communication with the dirigible and consequently was in readiness to haul her in.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, May 11.—(P)—The Italian dirigible Italia started on its first voyage of discovery into the polar regions at 7:45 o'clock this morning.

The Italia has been at Kings Bay since May 6 waiting for favorable weather and being prepared for a series of trips over north polar regions under General Umberto Nobile, General Nobile has made one previous flight over the pole in 1926 with Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth in the dirigible Norge.

The present undertaking intends to explore many regions about which little is known. These include Lenin land, formerly Nicholas II land, which was discovered by Russian explorers traveling in ice breakers in September 1913. They only observed the eastern and southern coasts of the land which was found to extend to the north-northwest as a continuation of the eastern coasts of the Taimir peninsula and the Chelyuskin peninsula.

General Nobile also intends to land if possible, at the pole, planting there a cross given him by Pope Pius. He hoped to check on previous expeditions of Peary and MacMillan in polar regions. A companion of General Nobile on his polar expeditions has been his dog Tialan, who seemed reluctant to leave Vadsoe, Norway, when the Italia left there for Spitzbergen, but finally decided to risk another adventure in the arctic with his master.

General Nobile is planning to use Vadsoe as an auxiliary base in the event that he should be forced south on one of his expeditions across the arctic regions. He telegraphed to his representative there telling him to remain and prepare everything for mooring the dirigible in case of necessity.

Before starting out General Nobile sent his will to Rome and it revealed that outside of his share of the $31,500 blanket policy on the Italia's crew an $11,000 life policy on himself and his government pension that the general has no property of his own. His estate is divided into three equal parts for his wife, daughter, and niece.

Prince of Wales Presents Hagen the British Golf Cup

SANDWICH, England, May 11.—(P)—The Prince of Wales presented the British open golf championship cup to Walter Hagen today as thousands of persons rushed from the 18th green to see the American professional take it for the third time.

Hagen's sensational 72-hole score of 292 beat the best efforts of his fellow American, Gene Sarazen, by two strokes and bettered the best British score, that of Archie Compston, three strokes.

"Overseas entries have added keen competition to our open championships," said the Prince in presenting the cup. "We are getting a little jealous but always want the best men to win. We hope the overseas golfers will continue to come until, as they say in America, we are able to 'put one over' on them."

Business Men Study Ordinance

Thirty members of the Pampa Business Men's association met in a noon-day luncheon at the Schneider hotel today. Discussion centered around the new city ordinance regulating peddling and hawking in Pampa and the stealing of milk bottles.

It was also decided to send Carson Loftis, secretary of the association, to the National convention to be held in Wichita Falls, May 25.

The local association will hold regular meetings every two weeks at the Schneider hotel. The next meeting will be May 25.

An argument as to how many red haired women there are in Pampa may be settled tonight. Roy Sincor of the Rex theatre offers free admission to all of them to see "Red Hair."

Pampa Lions yesterday heard inspirational addresses by two local ministers, the Rev. W. L. Evans and the Rev. James Todd, Jr.

Rev. Evans' subject was "Look Up, Live Up, Lift Up!" and Rev. Todd spoke on melody in personality and deeds.

It was announced that Lions I. E. Duncan, Otto Studer, Al Clark, Joe Strother, Marvin Lewis, P. B. Casson, and W. T. Fraser will attend the state Lions convention at Wichita Falls, May 21, 22. The local club members have been invited to attend district night ceremonies at Pampa, May 4.

SPANISH CLUB MEETS FOR THE LAST TIME

The Spanish club, El Circulo Castellano, met for the last time of this school year Wednesday evening, May 2.

This club has been very beneficial and helpful to the members in their Spanish classes. The members have learned the parliamentary rules of the Spanish Club and to hold conversation in Spanish. During this year the Spanish club became a member of the National Spanish club and will have the use of a traveling library the coming semester.

The club at present has about thirty members, eight of whom are students in Spanish I. The officers, Presidente, Vernon Culverhouse, La Vice-presidente, Maxine McKinney, La Secretaria, Melba Graham, and El Tesorero, Perry Morgan, have put forth their best efforts to make this club a success. And with the coming year El Circulo Castellano expects to be a better club and have more enthusiastic members.

Baker School News

An interesting contest, teaching children the correct way to brush teeth as recommended by dental authorities, has been a feature of the year in Mrs. Ferguson's room.

Much brushing of teeth has been found ineffective simply because the correct way to brush is not understood. And actually, it is easier to brush teeth effectively by correct use of the brush than to brush the wrong way.

We made a contest of it, in which the children took an unusual degree of interest, and found it isn't difficult at all, once the proper way is learned.

By use of what is called a typodont it was possible to demonstrate clearly just what correct brushing means and does. This typodont is a special plaster reproduction of human teeth and gums which the children found interesting to examine.

Mrs. Ferguson first gave demonstrations of correct brushing, using the typodont, then each child was permitted to give his or her own demonstration. These demonstrations brought out the fact that teeth should always be brushed from the gums toward the cutting edges, never from side to side across the teeth. The reason for this is that gums are injured when improper brushing tends to push back their sensitive edges. And also because brushing with the crevices really permits the brush to sweep them clean.

The five children who, after number of trials, gave the best demonstrations of correct brushing, were given prizes, a child size Dr. West's tooth brush. The winners in this contest were: Chattie Noah, Nadine Fogelman, Betty Blythe, Ruby Isobel, and Ray Chappell.

The pupils of Mrs. Stowell's room are very proud of the four nice sized pictures which they have bought with the money received from sandwich sales. The names of the pictures are: The Spring Song, a Summer's Day, Baby Stuart, and the Boy Jesus. The children have learned the story of each picture and know the artists of the original painting.

The pupils cordially invite the public to visit our room and see our new pictures.

THOSE FINAL EXAMS

The students of Pampa high school are facing a great trial, or rather a crisis, for they have done nothing really bad. This crisis is the final examinations. However, this crisis is promoting industry among the students and how! It seems as if most of the teachers, like a few of the students, have put off doing things until the last minute. Assignments are coming thick and fast, and both instructors and students are literally "snowed under". It is almost too hot to work, but it doesn't pay to get lazy! At the very season that we are inclined to be lax, we should be at our best.

As I have said before, all students, especially the Seniors, are facing a trial, but they have done nothing really wrong. Then let justice be done! They will be acquitted and freed from their long captivity. It won't be long now!

LAMAR SCHOOL NOTES

The Fifth Grade Boys of Lamar played the Fifth grade of Baker school last Friday evening and lost to them, 12-8. However the inclement weather hindered our playing more than five innings. But we are planning to play them again this coming Friday, and are practicing to beat them. Look out Baker school and Boys! Don't think, because you beat us one time that you are champions. We are losers, and have for our motto "Try Again."

Girl Scout Troop No. 1, took supper out to the breaks and cooked it Tuesday evening. We spent a very enjoyable time, learning to cook Angels or Horseback and other delicious scout dishes. We also learned to signal the Morse Code with flags. Our pins and registration cards were proud to be Registered Girl Scout now. Our next goal is for second class scouts.

HAVING AUTO RACE

The automobile race for the Lamar fifth grades is progressing with much interest. The cars have all reached Chicago, however, the Chevrolet is one hundred miles ahead of the Reo. The Buick got on the wrong side of the road because the occupants talked too much and forgot to watch the signs along the road. We have bought our window curtains and are working every morning from seven thirty to eight forty-five to make them. Also made enough money off our candy and sandwich sale to buy the picture "The Vanishing American" for our room. We may live in a cottage folks, but we challenge anyone to see our room. We believe we have as pretty a room as any one.

ANNE AUSTIN AUTHOR OF "SAINT AND SINNER"

CHAPTER XLVII

Five weeks later—it was in early January, just before the annual scurrying of self-coddling society folk from the rigors of a New York winter to the sunshine of Palm Beach and Nassau—Sally Barr, "one of the season's most beautiful debutantes," as the society editors called her, sat at a table for six in one of New York's most exclusive night clubs.

She was thankful for the fact that an inhumanly flexible male dancer was doing his most incredible tricks for the amusement of the club's patrons; for watching him gave her an opportunity to think, an excuse for not chattering brightly as debutantes were expected to do.

Grant Proctor, whom Enid had hoped she would marry, sat opposite her. Arthur Van Horne on her right. Beside Grant, twittering and giggling, was Claire Bainbridge, whose engagement to the heir of the Proctor millions would be announced from Palm Beach.

And yet Sally was conscious that Grant's nice, leaf-browed eyes followed her with a frustrated, doglike despondency whenever she was near him. He had told her that he loved her and Sally, terribly anxious to please her mother and to secure Enid Barr's estate from scandal, had been ready to listen to his proposal of marriage since David was lost to her, it did not much matter whom she married.

"But if he asks me to marry him, Mother, I'll have to tell him the truth about my birth," Sally had told Enid.

Now, with her wistful eyes apparently watching the agile dancer, she remembered Enid's horrified protest. "You can't tell him, Sally! He wouldn't marry you if he knew. His parents wouldn't let him. Promise me you won't tell darling!"

And so Sally had not told him, but when he did ask her to marry him he refused him. His as yet unannounced engagement to Claire Bainbridge followed swiftly, but his eyes were still pathetically true to Sally.

She shifted her position a trifle, so that she could observe Arthur Van Horne out of the corner of her eye. Not that she wanted to see him! She had been forced to see so much of him since the night of her debut party that the very sound of his mocking, drawing voice was obnoxious to her. She would never forget her mother's terror, her abject pleading and tears.

"Don't antagonize him, darling!" Enid had begged. "He can ruin us, ruin us! Be nice to him, Sally! If he was in love with you during those awful carnival days, maybe—" She had hesitated, ashamed to put her hope into words. "Van is really a rather wonderful man, you know, darling. One of the most eligible bachelors in New York society. Old family, no mother or father to dictate to him, a cynical and biased, and rather more experienced than I'd like, but—just be nice to him, darling. Maybe—"

That shamefaced "maybe" of Enid's had kept thrusting itself upon Sally's rebellious attention ever since. Enid, more frightened of Van's power over her than she would admit, even to Sally, threw the two together on every possible occasion. After Grant Proctor had retreated from the field, smarting under his refusal by Sally, Enid had almost feverishly concentrated on Van Horne. Sally had stubbornly insisted to her mother that she would not marry any man to whom she could not tell the truth about her illegitimacy, and Enid had just as stubbornly refused to consider the possibility of Sally's telling.

"If Van really knows," she had told Sally in desperation, "that is one too many. You could not possibly harm any man by marrying him without telling. You're our daughter now—the legally adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Barr. That is all that matters."

"What matters to me," Sally had insisted wearily, "is that no man that you would like for me to marry would have me if he knew. I can't cheat. Of course I don't have to marry."

"Of course not," Enid had agreed with assumed gaiety. "But since Van does know—Of course, since he already knows, if you married him it would be as much to his interest to forget it and protect me—as it is ours. But I want you to be happy, darling."

Sally, her little round chin supported on her laced fingers, her eyes brooding upon the dancer whom she did not see, reflected with an unchildlike bitterness that there was no question now of her being happy. Happiness lay behind her; she had almost grasped it, had been "half-married" to the man she loved, David! His name flashed through her heart like the thrust of a red-hot lance.

"Dance, Sally? Or do you prefer to go on dreaming?" Van Horne's low, teasing voice interrupted her bitter reverie.

She made a sudden resolution, rose with sparkling vivacity from her chair, flung a sparkling glance to her mother, whose beautiful face was a little pinched with the strain under which she had lived these last few weeks. "Dance, of course, Van!" she cried, wrinkling her nose at him with a provocative move. "I was dreaming about you! Aren't you flattered?"

She saw her mother's pinched face flush and bloom with hope, caught an austere but approving smile from Courtney Barr, with whom she had not yet reached the intimacy that should exist between a father and a daughter, even an adopted daughter. If she could make them so happy by marrying Arthur Van Horne, why let her own feelings prevent? If she couldn't have David, what difference did it make whom she married? And if she married Van Horne the only menace to her mother's reputation would be forever removed.

"You adorable little darling!" Van Horne whispered, as he swept her out upon the crowded dance floor. "So you were dreaming about me? Pleasant dreams, little Princess Lalla?" His ardent, dark face was bending close, his black eyes free of mockery but lit by a fire that repelled her.

"Did you really fall in love with 'Princess Lalla'?" Sally forced herself to ask coquettishly, fluttering her long lashes in the demure fashion which had proved so effective during her short career as a debutante.

"Absurd question! Van Horne jeered softly. "Didn't I convince you at the time? Listen, Sally, I almost never see you alone. Enid seems to have an antiquated leaning toward chaperonage."

"Chaperons are coming in again," Sally laughed at him, hiding her distaste. "Mother adores being a leader of fashion, you know."

"You're so adorable tonight that I want to run away with you," Van told her boldly. "But I'll try to be content if you'll promise me to come to my apartment alone for tea tomorrow. Do, Sally! I've something to tell you. Can you guess?"

She stiffened, every nerve on the defensive against him. But she remembered her resolution, and nodded slowly, her head tucked on one side, her eyes granting him a swift, shy upward glance.

"If you look at me like that again, I'll kiss you right here on the dance floor!" Van threatened exultingly, as his arms tightened about her.

Enid's pathetic gratitude to her for being "nice" to Van Horne strengthened the girl's resolution to carry it through. She dressed with especial care for her tea date with Van the next afternoon, pinning the corsage of Parma violets which he had sent her on the full shawl collar of her Russian squirrel coat.

But before she left, her room she took the ring David had given her from the box in which she had hidden it because the sight of it hurt her so intolerably, and kissed the shallow, flawed little sapphire with passionate grief.

"Goodby, David," she whispered to the ring, but inconsistently she thrust it into her dark-blue and gray leather handbag. No matter what sort of ring Van gave her, it could never be so precious to her as this cheap little ring that David had given her to mark their betrothal.

She had visited Van Horne's apartment once before with Enid, but as she gave the floor number to the elevator operator—it was one of the most exclusive and expensive of the new Park Avenue apartment houses—she thought she saw a gleam of amusement in the man's eyes.

Almost as soon as her finger had pressed the bell the door was opened by Van himself. Van in a black and maroon silk dressing gown over impeccable trousers and shirt. She was drawing back instinctively when he laughed his low, mocking laugh and, seizing her hands, pulled her resting body into the room.

"I think one reason I am so mad about you, Sally my darling, is that you are always fluttering out of my reach like a frightened bird. You are superb in a Lillian Gish role, but even Lillian Gish is captured and tamed before the end of the film. Like this!" And he laughed exultingly as his arms encircled her quivering, fluttering lit-

STUDY OF STREET marking and house numbering in Pampa reveals that there must be some re-naming of thoroughfares if a logical plan is to be carried out.

As the streets are now marked, an angle in a single, long street often means a new name for the short extension is given. This makes for confusion, especially since proper grading will throw the same contour all the way and leave no excuse for two names. These conditions are relatively few, however, and citizens no doubt will cooperate with the city in working out the most logical plan for the much needed numbering.

Street marking should be revised when the house numbering is completed, for the reason that it will be well to show the block numbers as well as the street names. The confusion which now exists is a derogatory influence in a city whose growth leads the visitor to expect better order and more customary facilities.

As We See It
Sometimes the kindest form of charity is a firm refusal to give help. Statistics have shown that more money goes into "charity" frauds than goes to constructive help for those really deserving.

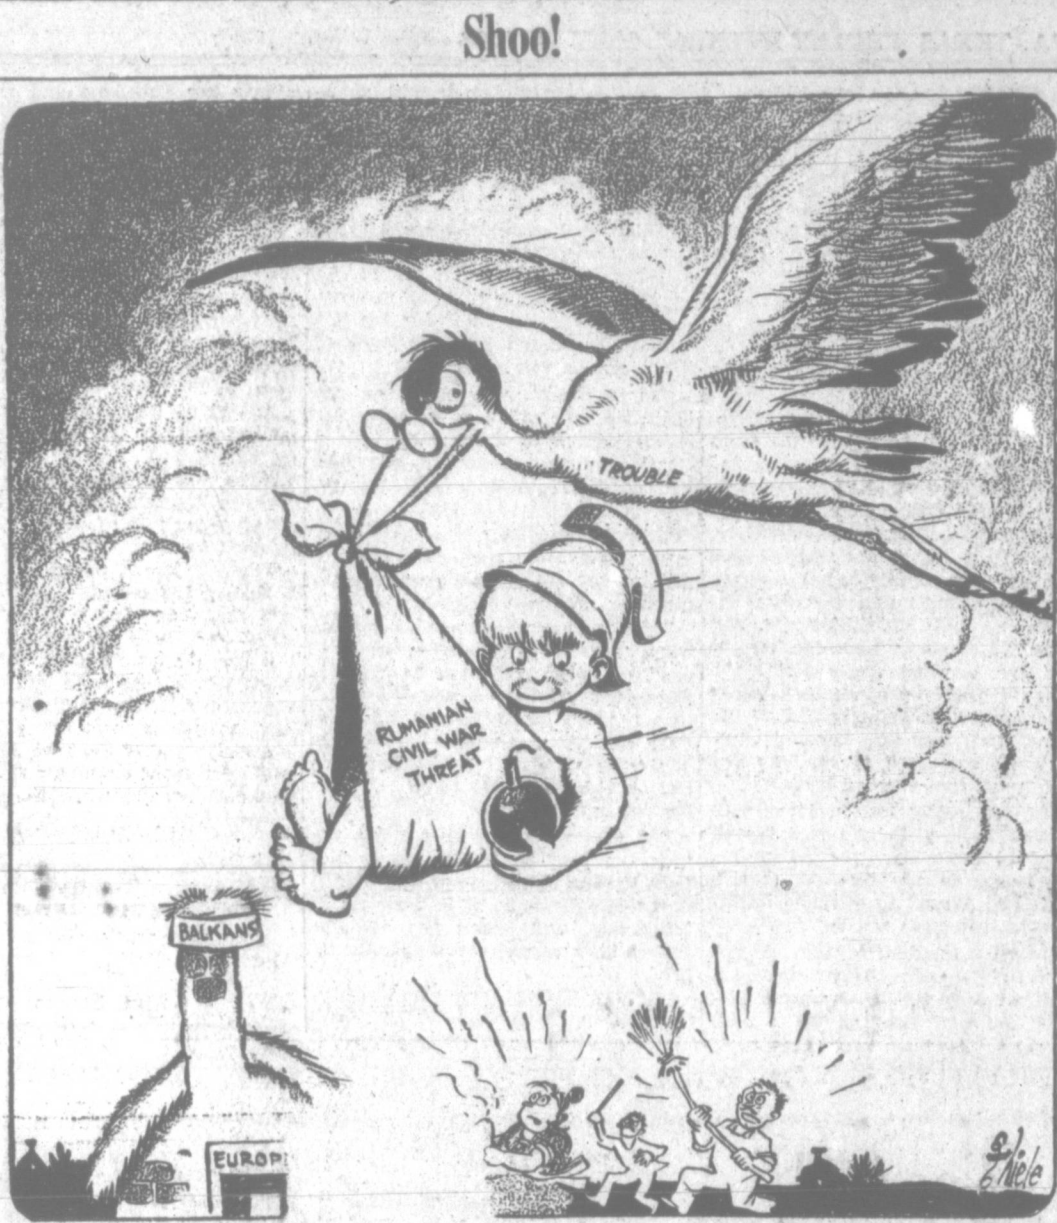

Almost daily there are persons making the rounds of business houses seeking hand-outs of one sort or another. The persons approached may be "hard-boiled" or may be kindly disposed. Yet, they have in their minds always a doubt as to whether the case in hand is a deserving one, and whether the kind of help asked is the kind that is really needed.

How is one to know? The answer is that Childress, like all other cities, has an organized charity association which takes the time and effort to look into cases. The best way to handle those who solicit help is to refer them to the organized charity.

The city of Pampa has decided on a plan of having a paid social worker, whose job it will be to investigate such cases. This social worker will also have duties connected with public health, which often link in with charity cases.

Childress has recently had brought to its attention the need for more systematic and permanent public health work. The plan adopted at Pampa seems to fit the need here, "killing two birds with one stone." It is not a very expensive, probably not nearly so expensive as promiscuous giving, if any check could be made on such giving. And such work is worth almost any price.

At the time the plan is inaugurated Pampa's city officials will be asked to prohibit street begging. This removes one of the worst liabilities a city can have, and does it without injury to the unfortunate.

fact, it is a kinder charity to force those needing help to get it through organized channels where it can be administered intelligently, than to give to them when they ask and encourage them to become more and more dependent upon begging.—Childress Index.

TWINKLES

Probably no editors wired the Associated Press for a quotation of what the policeman said after seeing a pup he pulled out of an icy stream—thinking it a child—kissed by the well dressed matron.

All policemen have big feet, but that probably is not what causes congestion at downtown street corners.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Senator J. Boomboom McWhorter welcomes the Senate investigation into the presidential campaign funds.

If the investigators can find any evidence of large contributions to the McWhorter campaign, the senator offers to split with them. He has been trying to find some for the last year and needs help.

He has canvassed about every industry in the country, but they're all deaf.

Not that McWhorter positively went running to the captains of industry and promised each one to boost the tariff on his particular product when he became president in return for moral and financial support.

That would have been dishonest.

Senator McWhorter simply let his actions speak for themselves and hoped for the best. Every day or so, for months, the senator introduced a bill to raise the tariff on a few industries that might afford to help a poor man become president if he could show himself to be worthy.

First it was crank-handles, camshafts, cork-screws and calipers. Then it was strawberries, seneca root, scallions and scammonies. After that tympanums, tachometers, tablespoons and tippets. And so on until Senator McWhorter had introduced bills for the relief of nearly everything that is made or grown.

After each bill, Senator McWhorter sat back and waited for someone to come around with something tangible. He received an inspiring collection of congratulatory letters, complimenting him on the fearless brand of genuine statesmanship which he had so obviously displayed, but none of the letters enclosed checks, except one of two dollars for 20 copies of one of the bills.

Senator McWhorter sat down and answered each letter as follows:

"Dear sir:
"Thanks for the apple-sauce.

"It certainly does a poor man good to know that his efforts are partly appreciated.

"Maybe you don't know I'm a candidate for the presidency. "Cordially, your friend, "J. BOOMBOOM McWHORTER."

Not being laden down yet with contributions, except for $15 from his Aunt Addie, who recently left after staying with the McWhorters all winter long, Senator McWhorter's principal worry in the face of the investigation is as to whether he should report the small expenses he has made from his own pocket.

Most of it has been for publicity, because the senator realizes that just to have a candidacy never does any good unless a gentleman can get his name in the papers. But the well known McWhorter patriotism does not this time impel him to reveal just how the money was spent lest he be accused of seeking publicity or something.

Champion Matsuda Easily Defeats Eastern Grappler—Kopecky Beats Boxer and Meets Tough Adversary

Wrestling is more decisive than boxing, and when demonstrated by a master like Matty Matsuda is something of a fine art in the physical realm.

This conclusion is drawn from the exhibitions at the Pla-Mor last night which, although including no Elakospearian lectures, provided everything else.

Jack Doss, 138-pound pugilist, was the only boxer who cared to crawl into the ring against the 158-pound Kopecky. Doss lasted a little more than a minute. He landed a number of solid punches, but had his arms quickly tied up by the Bohemian and, being no wrestler, he was neatly helped when on the mat.

Kopecky then took on Packer Flynn of Kansas City, manager of the athletic show at the J. Geo. Loose carnival for ten minutes. Flynn surprised the large crowd by promptly giving Kopecky a rough evening. In the ten-minute limit, the Hard-Boiled One was getting as much punishment as he gave, and when the time was up it looked as if Flynn might have continued the pace indefinitely. He challenged Kopecky to a finish match next Thursday night here, and the latter accepted. Flynn is equally as large and strong as the Taylor man, and appears to know the tricks of the trade.

Though outweighed ten pounds, the Japanese middleweight champion from El Paso was far too clever for Jack Smith, 154 pounds, of Milwaukee. Smith was strong, and gave Matsuda lots of trouble with headlocks, but the Jap was as fond of the holds and seemed able to get a toe from any position.

Matsuda brought Smith to the mat with lightning grabs for an advanced foot, and sometimes with a sweep of his own foot. He would follow quickly with toe holds or splits.

Smith worked himself down with headlocks, body scissors, and body slams—which had little effect on the champ—and at the 18-minute mark fell victim to a flying mare and was easily planned.

Matsuda was the wily champ, not a sensational performer. His cool calculations as to how to extricate himself from dangerous positions were particularly interesting.

The second fall came after thirteen minutes of comedy. Matsuda answered the crowd's insistent demand for Jiu-Jitsu and embarrassed Smith with thumb manipulations. At times the spine-tickling work was not necessary, except for dramatic effect, but Smith's involuntary heavings under the stimulus caused much merriment. The Easterner contributed to the effect by trying without success "to find the button" on the Japanese.

Matsuda pulled out of a head scissors and as Smith stood up launched a rolling toe hold which made the Milwaukee boy pat the mat energetically. It was a cleverly launched hold, following the style shown here by Yaku Joe, said to be a pupil of Matsuda and which Joe Kopecky uses in less impressive fashion.

Barnes Thinks He Can Erase Beating by Sergeant Riley

When Sergeant Sam Riley steps into the ring at the Pampa Athletic club Monday night it will be a different Floyd Barnes from the one he met here last week. Barnes has been training hard and says he is going to beat Riley. The Sergeant has also been training and has something to say along that line.

The semi-final, or second main event, will be eight rounds between Rusty Cahill and Leo Rivers, the Filipino flash, who is a portage of Packer Flynn's. On the same and will be Mickey Blake of Sherman, fresh from a sensational victory over Johnny Herrington, who will meet Young Mickey Walker, the Pampa K. O. artist.

Preliminaries will feature the sensational Jack Morrison of Borger who will stack up against Young Granite, a brother of Kid Granite's, and O. D. the newsboy and Earl Bordon.

Riley and Barnes fought eight of the fastest rounds ever witnessed here last Monday night with Riley gaining the decision after dropping Barnes to the mat for three counts. The boy from Hot Springs still thinks he is a better fighter than the Irishman.

Rivers and Cahill should put on a good battle, as both are in the best of condition. The other bouts are by good boys who have been seen here before with the exception of Blake, who comes highly recommended. He is here now working out every afternoon at the club.

Girl Athletes At T. C. U. Prepare Spring Pageant

FORT WORTH, May 9.—(Special)—Three hundred and fifty girls from the physical training classes of Texas Christian University will participate in an "Indian Spring Festival" at T. C. U. on Friday evening, May 11.

This pageant is a part of T. C. U.'s contribution to National Music week, and is also given in honor of the visiting mothers who will be at the school for Mothers Day services.

Mrs. Helen Walker Murphy, director of physical education for women at T. C. U., is the author and director of the pageant. Mrs. Murphy, who has had wide experience in this type of work will teach a class in folk dancing and pageantry at the T. C. U. summer session this year.

The pageant will be given in the T. C. U. stadium, which will be transformed into an Indian reservation surrounded by the Zuni Indian village, the set of the story. Indian dances and songs will be the feature of the pageant.

Wayland Alumni to Have Session at Plainview Soon

PLAINVIEW, May 9.—Alumni and ex-students of Wayland College will make a pilgrimage back to the Alma Mater, Saturday, May 19, during commencement exercises for the annual reunion and get-together party.

A banquet will be held at the Hotel Wars, beginning at 8:30 Saturday evening, to be followed by talks of the past, present, and future of Wayland College.

Several hundred former students are expected to gather at their old Alma Mater coming from points all over Texas and other states. Students will find the school in better financial condition than it has ever been, with the debt entirely lifted and plans for endowment well under way.

Charles C. Pierce, Dallas, president of the Alumni and Ex-Students Association is in general charge of the meeting assisted by Miss Cleve Gunter, of Pierce reports that much interest is being manifested by students over the state. Miss Gunter has the arrangements for the banquet and program well in hand and is receiving reservations for plates at the banquet.

The program for the meeting follows: Invocation, President G. W. McDonald; welcome address, Dean Z. T. Huff; response, Rev. Douglas Carver, White Deer; introduction of all present; The Jack Rabbit club; Coach Frank Kimbrough; The Wayland club, Charles Curry Pierce, Dallas; Piano solo, Beulah Boney, Plainview; the endorsement, Frank Day, Plainview; president of the Board of Trustees; business session, election of officers.

The reunion last year was declared to be the best ever held at Wayland. Students came back to the campus in greater number and expressed enthusiasm for the support of the school. Charles Pierce and his co-workers are out to make the 1934 reunion one that will go down in the history of the school.

HARVEST SCENE GIVEN CENTRAL HIGH

Lavaca Moore, a seventh grade student, has painted and given to the Central high school an oil painting of a harvest scene. After Supt. Campbell presented the painting Wednesday, May 9, in chapel the members of the senior class voted to frame the picture. The painting, which is valued at $100, will hang in the high school auditorium.

Lavaca Moore is a promising young artist. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. M. E. Moore, who is an art instructor.

The high school students are very proud of the painting and wish to take this means of expressing their appreciation.

Your Trash Hauling Solicited
CALL 555—A. S. CLARK

Only her head was free to weave from side to side as his flushed, laughing face came closer and closer. "The best kissing technique advocates the closing of the eyes, darling," he gibed, with tender mockery. "And there is a point at which maidenly coyness ceases to be charming. Now!" She submitted to his kiss then, but her lips were lax, unresponsive. When he released her, an angry glint in his eyes, she backed away, touching her lips involuntarily with her handkerchief. "Please don't—kiss me again—like that, Van," she quavered. "Not yet. I'll marry you, but you'll have to give me time to get used to—you!"

The blank amazement in his eyes made her voice falter lamely. Then he laughed, a short bark that was, utterly unlike the tenderly mocking laughter which she had always inspired in him.

"You'll marry me?" His voice was staccato with contempt. "By heaven your halvete is magnificent! You should be enshrined in a museum! Thanks for your kind offer, Miss Barry, but I must confess, if your innocence will stand the strain, that my intentions in regard to you did not include marriage. They were strictly dishonorable. When a Van Horn allows himself to be led to the altar, the successful huntress is a woman who is at least socially worthy to be the mother of future Van Hornes. There is as yet no bar sinister on our coat of arms."

"No, walk, not run, to the nearest exit." He barked his new, ugly laugh at her as Sally was backing hurriedly toward the door, her body hunched as if his words had been actual blows, her face ghastly white. "You are entirely free to go with my blessing! I am rather a connoisseur at kissing and I have just suffered a grievous disappointment. At the risk of appearing ungallant, I am forced to admit that I am afraid you would have bored me."

intolerably if you had consented to 'trust me and give me all' in exchange for my silence in regard to your birth. Goodby, Sally—and good luck!" Somehow she made her way home, crept painfully, like a mortally wounded animal, up the circular staircase to her room. Bracing her shaking hands on her dressing table, she stared at her reflection in the mirror as if she had never seen that white-faced, enormous-eyed, stricken girl before.

Then horror and loathing of herself swept over her with such force that her knees buckled, and she sank to the floor. As she fell her hand knocked from the dressing table a copy of The Capital City Press, for which she was still subscribing, over her mother's protest, to glean spare news of David.

She shuddered as the roll bounced from her knees, but in another moment her sick eyes flamed with new life, for half-revealed by the folds of the sheets was an unmistakable picture of the boy she still loved.

Her trembling fingers paged at the wrapper. Why was his picture on the front page? Was he in trouble? Hurt? Or—married?

G. French, local pastor. "You will discover the Rev. David John Foulkes to be an eloquent and persuasive speaker. You will be convinced too. He is a profound scriptural, domestic, and philosophical teacher, a man who understands his fellow man, a man who has a ready sympathy and a vast experience in binding up and healing the wounds of afflicted humanity. His object, I may repeat, is to awaken the fervor of faith in the Catholic membership and convey a message of Christian charity and good will to those who are not of the Catholic fold."

sionaries in China since 1882. Both were graduates of Northwestern university. They have four children. Two sons reside at Evanston, Ill., and two daughters are in the missionary service of the church in foreign fields. Details of the killing are contained in a letter written by Miss Helen Stumley of the mission May 3. Shot By Sniper Miss Stumley wrote: "The killing occurred on April 29 after the Nationalists had arrived and fighting was proceeding. We were warned that it was unsafe to leave the compound, but did not know we were being made targets. Mrs. Hobart left the sitting room where she had been reading and went to a bedroom which has a small window above the door facing the city hall. She was hit by a bullet through the window fired from the wall. She was conscious ten minutes and died in one hour. "From that time on we lived in the basement of the mission building, being fired at every time we left the building. It was not known what particular group of Southern soldiers was doing the firing. This is the first opportunity to get out word."

There are letters of tune And letters of tone But the best way to let her Is to let her alone.
