DESPITE SHORTAGE

Briscoe Opposing Gasoline Rationing

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Tuesday a critical gas shortage does not exist in Texas and there is no need to think about rationing gasoline.

But in Dallas, a spokesman for gasoline retailers says many stations will be closed this Saturday to preserve fuel and many more will be out of gasoline by the middle of next week.

And federal energy chief William Simon has disclosed 20 states will receive increased gasoline allocations and some of this fuel will come from Texas supplies.

Briscoe said the Department of Public Safety checked service stations across the state for a survey on the availability of gasoline and the number of cars waiting in lines to buy fuel.

"We have not found a critical situation to exist anywhere," Briscoe said.

"You may not be able to find gas at your favorite station, but you will be able to find gas," Briscoe said. "The last thing we want to think about is rationing."

Briscoe said in order for him to think about instituting gasoline rationing in Texas "the situation would have to change drastically."

Briscoe met Tuesday with representatives of Texas gasoline retailers and said "They were unanimously opposed to rationing."

One of those who met with Briscoe was Bill Quorttr, president of the Texas Oil Marketers Association.

"We do have a shortage in some areas, but we are not going to be completely out of gasoline," he said. "I feel like our stations can handle their own problems by limiting their hours of sale and limiting quantities to stretch out this shortage."

The metropolitan areas and especially the suburbs of large cities are the areas hardest hit by fuel shortages because allocations are based on sales in 1972 and suburban population has increased considerably since then.

Chape Chapin, president of the Dallas Petroleum Retailers Association, said Tuesday many suburban stations around the state's second largest city will be dry by the end of the month.

"On the 28th most of us will have used up our allotments, which means people will have to look around Friday morning (March 1) to see who has gasoline," Chapin said. "They are trying to make it last as long as they can."

Kissinger Visiting Mexico

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today takes his deepest plunge into Latin American affairs—to hear what gripes and proposals Latin countries have about the United States.

Kissinger leaves at 1:30 p.m. CDT for Mexico to attend a three-day Western Hemisphere foreign ministers meeting on subjects as knotty as economic coercion, trade policies and multinational corporations.

Latin diplomats have often said Kissinger was always tied up with Moscow, Asia and the Middle East with little time left for their affairs. Last October at the United Nations he asked a group of them to come forward with their suggestions.

The Latins responded in November by drawing up an eight-point agenda and called a hemisphere "Conference of Tlatelolco," the Aztec name of the Mexican foreign ministry, at which to tell Kissinger more specifically what's on their minds.

In Mexico City, after two days of secret talks, the 24 Latin American and Caribbean foreign ministers abandoned efforts to choose a representative who would speak for them as a bloc. Instead, they devised a plan by which each minister could speak separately to Kissinger.

One item on the Latin-drawn agenda is "economic coercion." An example given by Latin diplomats was the U.S. cutting off military aid to Ecuador several years ago following the seizure of American tuna boats by Ecuador's Navy. Another item: How to control multinational corporations.

One agenda item calls for discussion of the Panama Canal. Kissinger, on a recent trip to Panama, renewed U.S. promises to eventually turn the canal and its zone over to Panama. Others are more general, involving trade and transfer of technology.

Foundation Slates Clean Alley Drive

Landscaping of the M.K. Brown Auditorium grounds and plans for a "Clean Alleys" campaign were among topics discussed last night at a meeting of the newly formed Pampa Environmental and Beautification Foundation in City Hall.

A report on preliminary design for the auditorium grounds landscaping was given by Mrs. James Malone of the Pampa Garden Club, which is sponsoring the project.

Also discussed was how the foundation can take part in the regional observance of the nation's 200th Bi-Centennial celebration.

The foundation decided to sponsor a campaign to be conducted annually in April and October to clean up and keep up city alleys. The clean alley drive would be conducted before the start of the Chamber of Commerce and City Clean-Up campaign in May.

Also planned is a colored slide program depicting Pampa beauty spots during the four seasons. Residents will be asked to give or loan photos to the foundation.

Officers of the foundation are:

Mrs. Thelma Bray, president; W.L. Loving, first vice president; Kirk Duncan, second vice president; Mrs. W.R. Campbell, secretary; and Mrs. Wallace Birkes, assistant secretary.

The foundation board of trustees consists of the following:

Three-year term — E.L. Green Jr., Melvin Kunkel, Mrs. Al Smith, Hugh Peeples, Mrs. James Malone.

Two-year term — Mrs. Dennis McDougall, Mrs. H.H. Boynton, Warren Hassel James Hughes, Mrs. E.L. Henderson.

One-year term — Johnny Watson, Tex DeWeese, W.A. Morgan, E.L. Henderson and Ken Ploliner.

AS HEARST AWAITS WORD

FBI Agent Expecting Release By Kidnapers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI agent in charge of the Patricia Hearst kidnaping investigation says he has a "seat of the pants feeling" that the girl will be freed today, her 20th birthday.

The remark, by FBI agent Charles W. Bates, came hours after Miss Hearst's father, Randolph A. Hearst, unveiled details of a sweeping "People in Need" project to feed 100,000 needy people free for a year in response to a demand from the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army, which kidnaped the granddaughter of publishing empire founder William Randolph Hearst 16 days ago.

"I have a seat of the pants feeling that Patty Hearst might come home tomorrow," Bates said Tuesday night after visiting the Hearst mansion in suburban Hillsborough. Bates, who heads the 125-man FBI investigating force, did not elaborate.

After two days of meetings with several groups named by the kidnapers to act as overseers of the $2 million food program, Hearst announced a plan to be overseen by militant radicals and directed by a Washington state expert on private welfare programs.

The details of the plan came on the deadline day set by the SLA for unveiling of a food program as a "gesture of good faith" that might lead to Miss Hearst's release.

The girl's mother, Catherine, tearfully told reporters she hoped Patty would be released on her birthday and said she had a "pretty bright dress" to wear for the occasion.

No Reprisals

But there was no immediate word from the kidnapers who took the girl from her Berkeley apartment two weeks ago.

BRANDO IS BACK

'Exorcist,' 'Sting' Lead Oscar Nominations

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Academy Award for best movie of 1973 can go to the devil or the Depression, or teen-age yearnings in California, light-hearted adultery in London or slow death in Sweden.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Tuesday unveiled the nominees for the 56th annual awards, to be presented with the usual televised hoopla April 2.

There were few surprises. But Marlon Brando is back again.

Leading the nominations were "The Exorcist," the boxoffice smash about a girl possessed by a demon, and "The Sting," featuring a pair of con men in the Depression.

Hearst, appearing before a horde of reporters and television news cameras outside the family home, announced he had picked A. Ludlow Kramer, secretary of state for Washington, to set up a program modeled on one successful in that state after mass layoffs by Boeing Co.

The publisher said he would be "eternally grateful" to six activist organizations approved by the SLA who would act as a sort of "executive committee" over the handout starting Friday.

He promised no reprisals against the "coalition."

Kramer, a liberal Republican elected three times as secretary of state, said the food distribution centers would be determined by the coalition and called for 1,000 volunteers.

Help For All

"We will buy our food wholesale, as cheap as we can," he said. "We will seek free warehouses and trucks."

A newsman asked Kramer: "What kind of standards will you set up?"

"We don't have time for standards, sir, we want to feed people," Kramer replied.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Never recapturing the spotlight it held last summer, the Senate Watergate committee apparently is nearing the end of its existence.

The committee voted 6-1 Tuesday to end the public hearings that began last May 17 in the dazzle of national television.

Its staff will appeal a ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Gesell denying the committee access to President Nixon's Watergate tape recordings, and will work on the final report due May 28.

The staff also will continue private investigation of some matters that were supposed to have been the subject of additional hearings — possible connections between the Nixon administration and billionaire Howard Hughes, contributions from milk producers and possible CIA involvement in the Watergate break-in.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., Tuesday held open the "small possibility" that hearings might be resumed if new developments warrant. This appeared doubtful.

The committee believes it should be careful not to interfere unduly with the ongoing impeachment process in the House Judiciary Committee or the criminal cases which will soon be prosecuted by the special prosecutor, on which the attention of the country appears now to be focused," Ervin said in a statement.

Failure On Tapes

The committee, established by unanimous vote of the Senate, began hearings eleven months after the break-in at the Watergate complex and was the center of national attention as it heard witnesses such as former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans—whose trial on another matter opened in New York this week—and former White House aides H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and John W. Dean III.

But after the first round of hearings ended in August, the work of the Watergate Special Prosecution Force pushed the committee out of the headlines.

Several other things occurred to prevent the committee from regaining its momentum:

—One witness, White House speechwriter Patrick J. Buchanan, appeared to some to get the better of committee questioners, and enthusiasm for the hearings declined among some Democrats who feared a repeat.

—Republican members of the committee were unable to provide much evidence about Democratic espionage and dirty tricks. This brought an end in October to the second round of hearings.

—A much bigger factor was the committee's inability to get access to the Nixon tapes, existence of which had been revealed in testimony before the committee in July by Federal Aviation Administrator Alexander P. Butterfield, former White House director of administration.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica as well as Gesell both turned down the committee's requests for tapes. "The committee failed to get not only the five crucial Nixon-Dean conversations it had subpoenaed immediately but the 500 tapes and documents it had subpoenaed in December."

Without these tapes, the committee was frustrated in its attempt to get information it needed for a tough, open probe of Nixon's relations with Hughes and the milk producers. Meanwhile, Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox and his successor Leon Jaworski successfully subpoenaed the tapes, got pleas of guilty from several White House aides, and promised new indictments by the end of February.

In a related development, Sirica Tuesday summoned Jaworski and Chief White House Watergate lawyer James St. Clair to his chambers to admonish them that "continued public comment" about the grand jury investigation of gaps in the White House tapes is "inappropriate" and hindering the investigation.

Simon 'Wouldn't Hesitate' To Recommend Rationing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy chief William E. Simon said today the gasoline shortage has reached critical proportions in some states and that he would not hesitate to recommend nationwide rationing if the situation became widespread.

However, Simon expressed the hope that the government's gasoline allocation program—aimed at equitable distribution of available supplies to all states and within states—would work and make rationing unnecessary.

"Right now we are experiencing rather critical shortages in various parts of (some) states, most of it centered on the East Coast," Simon said. "I would hope our allocation program would take care of that."

As part of the allocation program, to get supplies where they are most needed, Simon ordered an "emergency injection" Tuesday of gasoline for 20 states which have been hit hardest by shortages. He predicted the action would cut long lines at service stations in a matter of days.

Even if the Arab oil producing nations ended their embargo now, there would be no effect for four to six weeks on American fuel supplies, Simon said. Shortages would continue "for a period of time," running into the third quarter of the year, he said.

Questioned about whether the embargo might be lifted soon, the foreign minister of Saudi Arabia, the biggest Arab producer, said Tuesday it was a complicated matter and he had no idea when it would happen.

With gasoline station owners increasingly threatening to "pump out" and close because of shortages and hassles with long lines of motorists, Simon was asked on the NBC-TV Today Show how great the "inconvenience" would become before he would turn to rationing.

"If it grew, I would not hesitate to recommend to the President that we implement gasoline rationing," Simon said.

He said "if it became widespread, rather than spot shortages that are occurring in the country, that certainly would be the major factor."

But he said "I'm optimistic that our allocation plan is going to work to alleviate these troubled areas."

In the Tidewater area of southeastern Virginia more than two-thirds of gasoline stations were said to have pumped out their gasoline and closed because of low profit margins and long lines of cars.

Simon said he would meet again today with representatives of station operators. The energy office has set up an advisory committee composed of representatives of service station owners. "We're terribly concerned with the plight of gasoline dealers," Simon said.

"and we are trying hard to help them."

To ease the situation in "critical" areas, Simon said extra allocations would increase gasoline supplies for February by 5 per cent in 10 states and 2 per cent in 10 others.

The energy chief said today he believes President Nixon should veto an emergency energy bill passed, 67 to 32, by the Senate Tuesday on grounds it contained provisions that would be "counter-productive" to inducing greater exploration for domestic oil.

House Shortage To Be Studied

Pampa's housing shortage will be up for discussion again at a meeting called for 10 a.m. next Wednesday, Feb. 27, in the Chamber of Commerce office.

Notices of the meeting were sent today to city officials, members of the board of realtors, lending agencies, and the executive boards of the Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Industrial Foundation.

The housing shortage was discussed at a similar meeting last November. At that time persons attending were requested to give further study to the problem.

Additional information and possible solutions are expected to be considered at the upcoming meeting.

'Exorcist,' 'Sting' Lead Oscar Nominations

Other nominees for best actor were Jack Lemmon for "Save the Tiger," Al Pacino for "Serpico," Robert Redford for "The Sting" and Jack Nicholson for "The Last Detail."

Ellen Burstyn was nominated for best actress for her portrayal of the mother in "The Exorcist," and 15-year-old Linda Blair was nominated for best supporting actress for her performance as the possessed girl. Also nominated were the picture's director, William Friedkin, and Jason Miller, who played a priest, for best supporting actor. The nomination of Miller, who wrote the Pulitzer prize-winning play "The Championship Season," was the first nomination of a top ranked author for an acting Oscar.

Streisand Named

Other nominees for best actress were Barbara Streisand—her third nomination—for "The Way We Were," Marsha Mason for "Cinderella Liberty," Joanne Woodward for "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams," and Glenda Jackson for "A Touch of Class."

Two juvenile performers were in competition for the first time since 1962. Miss Blair's rivals for best supporting actress include Tatum O'Neal, the pre-teen daughter of actor Ryan O'Neal, for her performance as a tough little sharpie in "Paper Moon."

Also nominated were Madeleine Kahn for "Paper Moon,"

Candy Clark for "American Graffiti," and Sylvia Sidney, star of many 1930s gangster films, for "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams."

Other nominees for best director were George Lucas for "American Graffiti," Bernardo Bertolucci for "Last Tango in Paris," George Roy Hill for "The Sting" and Bergman for "Cries and Whispers." Lucas and Bergman were also nominated in the screenplay category for writing their films.

Other nominations for best supporting actor went to Randy Quaid for "The Last Detail," John Houseman for "The Paper Chase," Vincent Gardenia for "Band of the Drum Slowly," and Jack Gifford for "Save the Tiger."

foreign officials in the wake of the White House announcement Tuesday that Kissinger would leave Monday on his fourth peace mission to the area in three months.

Diplomatic sources said President Nixon's decision to send Kissinger out to the turbulent area so urgently — only a day after he returns from a meeting with Latin American foreign ministers in Mexico — represented acceptance of an Arab formula agreed upon in Algeria last week to try to move ahead with peacemaking in the area.

The Kissinger mission also is expected to speed the day when the Arabs lift their embargo against the shipment of oil to the United States.

Foreign Ministers Ismail Fahmy of Egypt and Omar Sakka of Saudi Arabia never did disclose the "good news" they had told reporters they planned to present to Nixon during their meeting with him at the White House Tuesday. Nor did the United States disclose exactly what it was they had said.

However, Sakka told a news conference it was only the "first step" in a proposal, agreed to by Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Algeria and Syria, for breaking the deadlock over the disengagement of Israeli and Syrian troops on the Golan front.

The Saudi Arabian minister complained rather bitterly about past U.S. support for Israel, including the $2.2 billion in military aid rushed to that country when it was about to be defeated in the October war. However, these remarks, as well as other criticisms of Washington, appeared to most diplomats to be the pro forma denunciations required for home consumption and a general interpretation of his statements was on the optimistic side.

COMIC OPERA STARS — Here are Ferrando and Fiordiligi, two members of the cast, in a scene from the Canadian Opera Company's "Così fan tutte," charming comic opera by Mozart, which will be presented in costume, fully staged and sung in English with orchestra, Monday night in the M.K. Brown Auditorium. The stellar attraction is being brought to Pampa for the one-night performance by the Pampa Community Concert Association.

Pampans To View Opera By Mozart

An unusual treat is in store for Pampa area concert-goers when the Canadian Opera Company presents Mozart's "Così fan tutte" ("Women Are Like That") next Monday night in the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

The performance, with orchestra accompaniment, is being brought to Pampa as the second attraction in the Pampa Community Concert Association's 1973-74 concert season.

The popular comic opera will be heard in English and be performed by outstanding Canadian operatic singers as well as American and international opera singers.

Considered by many the witliest operatic farce ever written, Mozart's "Women Are Like That" is a masterpiece that makes light of love's frailty, set to a score of almost ethereal beauty and appeal.

Briefly, the opera is the story of two sisters. The proud Fiordiligi and the more flirtatious Dorabella are the pawns in a wager plotted by the worldly libertine, Don Alfonso, who challenges the girls' respective suitors, Guglielmo and Ferrando, to test the real extent of their affection.

Amid hilarious disguises and encounters, the ladies prove all too susceptible to the lure of new romance, while protesting at the finale that they have been on to the game all the time. Così fan tutte, "they all do it" — but seldom with such enchantment as Mozart's unique score provides.

The Canadian Opera Company, Canada's leading operatic organization, was founded 20 years ago and has toured annually since 1958.

Its varied repertoire has received much acclaim not only in Canada's major cultural centers but in the United States as well.

Commenting on this year's production by the company, the Toronto Telegram critic wrote: "Bright, humorous, splendidly acted and very well sung... superior theater."

As usual there will be no box office ticket sale and admission will be by Concert Association membership card only. Curtain time for the Monday night performance will be 8 p.m.

Dayan Threatening To Leave Position

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Defense Minister Moshe Dayan rocked Israel's caretaker government today with a call for new elections and a threat to resign unless given a "decisive and unambiguous" endorsement from the ruling Labor party.

Prime Minister Golda Meir's cabinet went into secret emergency session this morning to discuss Dayan's surprise statements to a group of student leaders.

Political leaders said the moves put Dayan and Mrs. Meir, two of Israel's most powerful political figures, in direct conflict and could split the Labor party, which has run the nation since independence in 1948.

Ministers were on edge as they showed up for the meeting at Mrs. Meir's office.

"How the hell did you find out there was going to be a cabinet meeting this morning?" Israel Galili, Mrs. Meir's closest political adviser, snapped at one newsman.

The Israeli national radio said Dayan called for new elections and threatened to resign Tuesday night in a speech to student leaders after failing to get the Labor party to form a coalition with the rightwing Likud opposition.

"Since a national unity government is not a realistic possibility at the moment, I propose dissolving the Knesset (parliament) and holding new elections," the radio quoted Dayan as saying.

Dayan was reported saying, "I am willing to serve in the next government if I get decisive and unambiguous support from the leaders of the (Labor party) alignment and its institutions."

"Under present conditions, without such wide support, I am not willing to be a minister," he reportedly said.

Mrs. Meir, who met Dayan at her office before the cabinet meeting, was expected to inform President Ephraim Katzir during the afternoon of plans for a new coalition government without Likud.

Dayan, in statements made through associates, said Tuesday afternoon he would refuse to join Israel's next cabinet unless the Labor party agrees to share power with the Likud bloc.

Vets Agency Out To Inform C.W. Widows

The Veterans Administration plans another "outreach" effort to inform widows of Civil War veterans they're entitled to a $55 monthly aid and attendance allowance if health conditions warrant.

The agency made personal contact with the widows in 1969 to determine if they needed the allowance, which is in addition to death compensation and death pension payments.

Jack Coker, director of the VA Regional Office in Waco, noted that in December there were 511 Civil War beneficiaries (272 widows and 239 helples children) on the VA's rolls. There were 548 last June.

The average age of Civil War widows is 89.1 years, with 26 of the oldest 100 years old or more. The oldest Union Army widow is 117 years old, compared to 106 for the oldest Confederate Army widow.

Coker said 197 of the 272 surviving Civil War widows draw aid and attendance benefits. Of the 75 who do not, four are more than 100 years old. There are 1.2 million widows from all wars on VA compensation and pension rolls.

There are no Civil War veterans—the last Union Army veteran died in 1956 at the age of 109. The last Confederate Army veteran was 117 years old when he died in 1959.

TV In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A number of special broadcasts will be bringing added interest to network television during the next week.

This Wednesday, for instance, the non-commercial network offers "King Lear," with James Earl Jones starring in the production performed by Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival Company.

The same night, ABC-TV presents the highly praised movie "The Hellstrom Chronicle," which deals with insects and suggests a future in which they might inherit the earth.

Also on Wednesday, ABC-TV's late-night "Wide World of Entertainment" series pays tribute to well-known monster movies, with Vincent Price as the host.

Entitled "The Horror Hall of Fame—A Monster Salute," the broadcast scans some of the memorable films by offering excerpts.

And there are also some guests scheduled to appear with Price, including John Carandine, John Astin, Frank Gorshin, makeup artist William Tuttle and Raymond McNally, coauthor of "In Search of Dracula."

Cavett With Burnett
Yet another Wednesday presentation will be the NBC-TV teleplay "A Case of Rape."

with Elizabeth Montgomery portraying a middle class housewife who is an assault victim.

According to the network summary, the housewife is, after reporting the crime, "subjected to embarrassing and sometimes degrading questioning and treatment."

On Thursday, Dick Cavett will have Carol Burnett as his sole guest on one of his periodic "Wide World of Entertainment" outings.

Friday, meanwhile, CBS-TV presents a teleplay about Roy Campanella, the great Brooklyn Dodger catcher whose baseball career was ended by an automobile accident in 1958.

This production is entitled "It's Good to Be Alive," and is based on Campanella's autobiography of the same name.

Starring in the video adaptation are Paul Winfield, Ruby Dee and Lou Gossett. The director is Michael Landon, former "Bonanza" star who has a number of writing and directing credits.

Campanella will appear briefly in the production in an introduction and epilogue.

Martin Roasts Benny
Jack Benny will be the target of a "roast session" on NBC-TV's Dean Martin series.

And another Friday broadcast is an ABC-TV rerun of "Goodnight, My Love," an excellent, affectionate, tongue-in-cheek teleplay inspired by the private detective tales of the 1930s and '40s.

Headlining this delightful outing are Richard Boone and Michael Dunn as a pair of unlikely private eyes.

The production is set for the "Wide World of Entertainment" series, and the cast also includes Barbara Bain and Victor Buono.

On Saturday, ABC-TV has a documentary entitled "Women in Prison."

And the same day, CBS-TV will offer a presentation called "Today Is Ours," in which a landlord "is swept up by the exuberant spirits of a group of underprivileged children who want to hold a block party on his vacant lot, with the ultimate hope of turning it into a playground."

Jules Verne Story
This program stars Ossie Davis, Ruby Dee and Harry Belafonte, and is an entry of the periodic series named "CBS Festival of the Lively Arts for Young People."

Still another weekend outing is "Johnny Cash's Music Country," an NBC-TV country music broadcast that is scheduled for Saturday in some cities and Sunday in others.

NBC-TV will also have a Saturday presentation of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," a movie version of Jules Verne's tale with the cast including Kirk Douglas, James Mason, Peter Lorre and Paul Lukas.

And Sunday, the same network has another rerun of the movie "The Wizard of Oz."

In short, the next week or so may well offer television's some of the most worthwhile programming of the season.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Timings says it expects the year-end rally on Wall Street to reach a final low in the second quarter—perhaps by April or May. The letter predicts "a further and final fall to an ultimate low near the 82.12 level of the Standard & Poor's 500 which should be approximated by about 700 on the Dow." As a result, it urges investors to maintain a defensive 50 per cent cash position.

"It is time for investor sentiment to be dominated not by crises but by solutions which, as they come onstream, create profits for hundreds of publicly held companies," according to Fraser Management Associates of Burlington, Vt. It says serious investors should consider more commitments in the market while carefully weighing the impact of both a recession and inflation on the economy. "Although disillusionment is popular today," the firm adds, "we should not forget that a key background factor is the low appraisals on common stocks based upon the replacement value of corporate assets which have, over the years, risen enormously."

"While the market continues under the influence of domestic and international political and economic tendencies, the major factor in the abnormal decline in recent months is psychological," says A.W. Zelomek Associates, the firm continues, but it often lacks these friends at the end of a bear market. Since the long term outlook for common stocks is favorable, it advises investors to maintain a long position in prime securities.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lordy mercy, what will Margard Mead think of next? Now it's "marriage insurance" — the famed anthropologist is advocating!

Writing in the current issue of Redbook magazine, Dr. Mead notes that insurance would protect children against financial deprivation should their parents divorce.

As with a number of her other far-out proposals, once you get over the initial shock, it begins to make sense. Cold statistics show the logic of it:

The rate of marital crashes is presently approaching that of traffic accidents. If auto insurance to cover the damage in highway crack-ups is prudent, then so is a policy that pays off on wrecked marriages.

I'm not certain what Dr. Mead had in mind exactly, but I see the system working something like this:

Upon being notified that one of its policyholders had been involved in a matrimonial smash-up, the insurance company would send an adjuster, an appraiser and an investigator to the scene.

These experts would measure the skid marks, interview eyewitnesses and otherwise ascertain the facts of how the mishap occurred.

Then they would instruct the policyholder to call divorce lawyers and obtain three estimates of the damage.

Rates, of course, would vary according to the risk factor. It is well known that certain groups of people — movie actors, for example — are more divorce prone than others. Consequently, they should have to pay higher premiums.

In order to obtain a marriage license, both parties would have to present proof that they carried a specified minimum amount of liability insurance.

Part of their premiums would go into a pool called the "uninsured husband" fund. Any woman involved in a marital wreck with a man who had let his liability insurance lapse could collect alimony payments from the fund.

In the great tradition of the insurance business, there probably would be large numbers of policy cancellations.

If, for example, a company learned that a policyholder had started visiting a marriage counselor, it undoubtedly would send him a cancellation notice.

Persons marrying for the third or fourth time would have difficulty finding any company willing to insure them.

Such cases would be designated as "assigned risks," requiring them to pay extraordinarily high premiums.

On the other hand, many couples would fall into the "safe spouse" category and could receive premium rebates on their wedding anniversaries.

WTCC Urges Opposition To Land Control

ABILENE — The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has recommended to the West Texas Congressional delegation that they oppose a House bill which would place the land under federal control.

H.R. 10294 is now in the hands of the House Interior Committee, and WTCC's position on the federal land use legislation was stated in a recently adopted resolution.

WTCC believes Americans "have zealously guarded their right" to own and use property, and the concept that the level of government closest to the people should regulate its use to the extent necessary to protect the public health and welfare.

The real issue is whether there should be sweeping federal government intervention into a traditionally state and local matter — the use of private property, WTCC officials said.

Joe Collins of San Angelo, chairman of the National Affairs Committee of the West Texas Chamber, said, "Proposed federal land use controls will do much, possibly more than any other force between now and the end of the century, to shape our future economy and the American way of life. It could have serious effects upon our ability to meet the demands of people for energy, for food, for housing and for jobs."

"The proposed federal land use legislation demonstrates lopsided concern for the physical environment while almost ignoring the necessary use of land that is fundamental to every aspect of the American people's lives."

James A. Rogers of Plainview, chairman of the WTCC Agriculture and Ranching Committee, stated the position of the Chamber when he said, "If such federal land use legislation must be passed, that legislation should encourage and assist states and local levels to formulate and implement land use plans, and be free of dictate as to the content of those plans."

"Private property rights should be left intact and such legislation should refrain from authorizing the use of sanctions against non-complying states."

Social Security Benefits Can Reach More People

Most men who reach age 65 in 1974 can collect monthly social security checks if they have worked as little as 5 1/2 years in jobs covered by social security, according to Howard L. Weatherly, Social Security branch manager in Pampa.

Women who reach 65 in 1974 generally can get monthly retirement checks after only five years or more of work. Eligible workers can begin collecting their full social security retirement benefits at 65 or reduced benefits at 62. The maximum payable for a man who becomes age 65 in 1974 is $274.60 per month. Wives, young children, and dependent husbands can also get monthly social security payments based on the worker's benefit, Weatherly said.

"Quarters of work credit help to determine your eligibility for social security retirement benefits — but they do not affect the amount of your monthly check," Weatherly said. "The benefit amount is based on your average earnings in work covered by social security over a set period of time."

Social Security work credit is measured in calendar quarters — January - March, April - June, July - September, or October - December.

Most employees get credit for a quarter of work if they are paid $50 or more anytime in that quarter for work covered by social security, Weatherly said. Most self-employed people get social security credit for 4 quarters in any year their annual self-employment net income is $400 or more.

London's population fell by an estimated 64,000 last year to a mid-1973 total of 7.28 million.

Drew Pearson: Diaries 1948-1959, edited by Tyler Abell. (Holt, Rinehart, Winston) $15

Turn to any page in this book and you are impressed by the casualness with which Drew Pearson moved among the most powerful men of the 1950s and by the immense influence he wielded.

Take page 545. Pearson reports that the 1959 Khrushchev visit is backfiring, that a major U. S. Senator is mad at then Vice President Nixon for initiating it and may shift to political support of Nelson Rockefeller.

Two days later, the columnist identified before a House Armed Services subcommittee and commented afterward about a Congressman "regarding whom I once reported that he had run around the corridors of the 'Savoy' in London in his underpants, chasing girls. He asked no questions."

A few paragraphs later, he tells of meeting Jack Kennedy at the Capitol and being thanked for his support on a current issue.

Some scintillating stuff, coupled with marvelous details that dramatize the diverse displays of power in politics — the trade-offs for favors, the bribes, the out-and-out skullduggery.

Pearson's experiences as a Washington muckracker were unique and so was he.

As he once remarked, "I'd rather be liked than not but I can understand why some people don't like me... It is my job as a newspaperman to spur the lazy, watch the weak, expose the corrupt."

The World is Full of It, by Isadore Barmash. (Delacorte, $7.95) Barmash, a veteran financial writer, has written an eye-opening and sometimes frightening book about the role of public relations and promotion in our everyday lives. In this world of instant communication, he warns, few of us know what's really going on.

The Wild Hunt, by Jill Tattersall. (Morrow, $6.95) The heroine of this Gothic has a lot to put up with, what with her high-handed employer, the odd household in which she works, the peculiar little boy to whom she is governess and the believers in the Old Religion plotting against her. But as sure as the wind sweeps down on neighboring Stonehenge, the end is happy.

Jet Stream, by Austin Ferguson. (Morrow, $6.95) A glossy story about the goings on among airline personnel, the focus of this one is a flight from San Francisco to Chicago. On board is a typical assortment of personalities and problems, a "Grand Hotel" of the air. Interest and suspense here come from the view of the airline industry, and the threat of danger to the craft.

Bermuda in Full Color, by Hans W. Hannau. (Doubleday, $12.50) This is a pictorial book of the Atlantic vacation island so true and beautiful that it will make former Bermudians homesick and everyone else just wish they were there. 26 dum-dums were ignorant of R.S.V.P.!

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Every year my husband and I give a large gala party. This year we mailed out 82 invitations. They were marked, "R. S. V. P." with our phone number. Our return address was on every envelope.

The day before the party we had only 48 responses! I asked two of my friends to please help me phone those from whom we had not heard to find out whether they were coming.

Would you believe that 25 said, "Yes, we're coming, but we didn't think we had to let you know unless we COULDN'T make it." (Three in that group asked if they could bring their houseguests—which totaled nine extra.) Three couples declined, saying they had meant to let us know, but just never got around to it. Five couldn't be reached, so we assumed that they were out of town.

My husband was furious, and said: "Next year we're not calling up anybody. If they don't respond but come anyway, when they come to the door we'll just say, 'Sorry, we weren't expecting you.'"

Abby, please print this, and tell people that R. S. V. P. means, "Please let us know whether OR NOT you are coming?"

HAD IT IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR HAD IT: Here's your letter. And if it's any comfort to you, you have lots of company. People who ignore R. S. V. P. invitations are either ignorant or negligent. And it's a toss-up as to which is worse.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I haven't lived together for 14 years. He sleeps upstairs and I sleep downstairs. We hardly speak.

Here's my question: If two people who aren't married but have lived together as man and wife for seven years are considered legally married, why wouldn't my husband and I, who have NOT lived together as man and wife for 14 years, be considered legally divorced?

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Altho there are "common law marriages," there are no common law divorces.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about a relative of mine. She has built a chapel in her home, and I mean, it's as big as some churches have. She must have spent a fortune on it. I want to know is this proper to do—religionwise? This woman has a church to go to. She doesn't have to have a church right in her own home.

Her chapel is like a cathedral. She even has a cross on the roof! It looks to me like it is an insult to her own church. I would appreciate your opinion, and I'd also like to know how ministers feel about this.

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: A chapel is a place to pray, right? So what's improper about building a place to pray in one's home?

CONFIDENTIAL TO PORTLAND VIEWPOINT: I'm with you. Anything that breeds jealousy, misunderstanding and hostility between husband and wife should be done away with. And the Company Christmas Party which excludes spouses heads the list!

Keep Cool And Stay Beautiful

COLLEGE STATION — Lowering that thermostat helps "save your skin" while conserving fuel, according to one expert.

"At cooler temperatures, skin retains more moisture — so a person's complexion stays young looking longer," Beverly Rhoades, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System, explained.

"Dry skin, in contrast, wrinkles quicker — and when overly dry, becomes uncomfortable.

"Recent studies indicate Americans are getting drier and drier skin — probably because of low humidity in homes and offices.

"Frequent exposure to sun adds to the problem — also, not rinsing soap thoroughly from skin," she noted.

To combat this, many consumers use creams, lotions and bath oils to lubricate and moisturize skin — especially in dry air climates, the specialist pointed out.

"However, our present fuel shortage may affect availability and prices of these products.

"With many products oil-based, consumers can expect short supplies of certain ones — and higher prices," Miss Rhoades said.

"Price increases will concentrate on products made from petrochemicals, rather than those of animal or vegetable oil sources such as lanolin and coconut oil. "Pharmaceutical skin products will reflect the shortage most." Yet, things seem to "balance out," the specialist added. "Although moisturizers may cost more, consumers will need less of them — if they lower thermostats during winter months because of the fuel shortage. By living with lower temperatures to conserve fuel, a person actually lubricates his or her skin with moisture from the air."

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass 1♣ 1♦ Pass
Pass Dbl. Pass Pass
2♥ Pass Pass 4♣
Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

I'm certain that every bridge player in the world (except North) would shudder at North's one spade overcall. But the fact is that he did make the bid.

As to why East did not make a penalty double of one spade, the answer will be understood in a moment. East and West were using the convention known as the "negative double": when responder doubles a one-level major — suit overcall, he is showing 7-11 points, and at least four cards in the other major suit. Thus a double by East would not have been construed as a business double, and West would not have passed.

When the bidding reverted to West, he doubled for take-out. When it came East's turn to bid, he passed, thereby converting West's take-out double into a business double.

Most bridge players, holding the South hand, would have passed (and prayed). Had South passed, East-West had it in their power to take all 13 tricks: seven spades and six clubs. North-South would have then been minus 2000 points.

But South, evidently gifted with clairvoyancy, dredged in a two-heart call, putting North-South into their best contract (down two). When it came to East he leaped out of the bushes with a four-spade bid.

South, still retaining his power of clairvoyancy, found the "killing" lead of a low diamond. North, upon winning the trick with his ace, next cashed the diamond king. To trick three he led a heart to South's ace. To trick four South played another diamond, which North ruffed, for the setting trick.

And so North-South, who had been on the scaffold enroute to being decapitated, actually made a profit on the deal (honors do not count in duplicate bridge). When the deal was replayed, most East players fulfilled their contract of four spades, for South did not lead a diamond initially.

Water Sporters Face Danger From 'Killer'

SANTA FE, N.M. — Even in temperatures well above freezing, participants in water sports often unwittingly put themselves in danger from a little known killer called "immersion hypothermia."

Hypothermia is the rapid progressive mental and physical collapse accompanying the gradual decline of body heat, according to Ken Morgan, safety officer for the Southwest Regional Office of the National Park Service.

Immersion hypothermia, explained Morgan, involves the loss of body heat to the water. And sports enthusiasts who allow themselves to spend too long a period in cool or cold water often place themselves in jeopardy without realizing it.

Morgan said the danger is particularly acute on warm springtime days when water temperatures are still between 50 and 60 degrees Fahrenheit (10 and 15.6 degrees centigrade). At such temperatures, where a potential victim may feel secure, exhaustion or unconsciousness can come within one to two hours and death can come in one to six hours, he said.

Hypothermia creeps up on the victim, Morgan said. "The victim will know he is cold, but not realize the danger, when actually his body heat is being sapped away to the danger point. It is assumed that a person will die when his normal body temperature drops below 78.6 degrees Fahrenheit (25.9 degrees centigrade)."

A symptom of hypothermia, Morgan said, is uncontrollable shivering. Many people do not recognize it as a danger sign, however.

Morgan said most deaths from immersion hypothermia occur at large bodies of water when the victim finds himself in a situation where he cannot get out of the water. Frequently, the victim will try to swim away from an inoperative or capsized boat.

Morgan advises boaters. "Don't get into the water unless you have to. If there is a storm and danger of being capsized, find a cove where there is less danger from the wind or beach the boat. Don't attempt a long distance swim in cold water unless you can get out of the water and warm up whenever you want to."

Once in a situation where there is no possibility of staying dry, there are two schools of thought with regard to self-help — vigorous exercise or passive waiting.

Vigorous exercise dissipates heat reserve rapidly, although within reasonable time limits it may keep muscles warm and prevent stiffening. Passive waiting maintains heat production by the natural process of shivering as long as the internal body temperature remains above 95 degrees, F. (35 degrees C).

Here is the approximate range of time a man in ordinary clothes and life preserver can be expected to withstand cold water without fatal results.

—At a water temperature of 32.5 degrees, F. (0.3 degrees C), almost freezing, exhaustion or unconsciousness may come in under 15 minutes and survival time is from under 15 minutes to 45 minutes.

—At 32.5 to 40 degrees, F. (0.3 degrees - 4.4 degrees C) unconsciousness comes between 15 and 30 minutes and death in 30 to 90 minutes.

—At 40 to 50 degrees, F. (4.4 degrees - 10 degrees C), unconsciousness comes in 30 to 60 minutes and death in one to three hours.

—At 50 to 60 degrees, F. (10 degrees - 15.6 degrees C), unconsciousness comes in one to two hours and death in one to six hours.

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

During this cold weather season, many of us will suffer the consequences of a cold, flu or respiratory infection even though we may try to avoid or prevent it.

Since the chances are good to have a bout with the "cold bug" this year, it might behoove each of us to know more about what a cold is and what to do with it when you have it, say state health officials.

What is a cold?
The common cold is a name given to any of a number of short-lived infections of the nose and throat. All of them are highly contagious. They have similar symptoms.

Sometimes they are called by other names, which simply tell you what part of the upper respiratory tract is particularly affected: rhinitis, affecting the nose; pharyngitis, the throat; or laryngitis, the voice box.

What causes a cold?
The Texas State Department of Health points out there are many different viruses which cause a cold. They are carried on the droplets you expel when talking, coughing or sneezing.

How do you catch a cold?
Though a virus causes your cold, a number of conditions seem to increase your susceptibility (science does not yet know why or how.) People appear to catch colds mainly indoors. They get more of them during the colder months. Fatigue, chilling and poor physical condition seem to give the virus a better foothold.

What's the course of a cold?
From one to three days after the virus takes hold in your body, the symptoms appear. (But other people can catch your cold even before your symptoms appear—one reason why colds are hard to prevent.)

The first hint is usually scratchiness in the throat. Within a few hours, your nose gets stuffy and you have vague feelings of discomfort and illness. Usually you start sneezing, too.

Within 48 hours, your cold is in full bloom — eyes teary, nose running, voice husky, breathing obstructed, and your senses of taste and smell dulled. You may feel lethargic and aching. It's common to have a moderate headache, especially at the beginning (but a severe one may be a sign of some complication.) You may also have some fever, although that's unusual in adults.

Once the cold has fully developed, it usually continues at its peak for several days. Then there is a gradual letting up. An uncomplicated cold commonly lasts from seven to fourteen days.

Can a cold be dangerous?
In itself, no. But it can open the door to other illnesses. And it's hard to know when the door has opened, because all the

Flu Viruses Lurking Around To Pounce

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The chances are you have escaped the flu this year — so far. But there are two brand new flu viruses lurking around somewhere, just waiting to pounce. One of them is already causing trouble in the Midwest — and the flu season still has several weeks to run.

Flu viruses have a nasty habit of outwitting their human victims. They do so by changing their coats, adopting new disguises so that they are not immediately recognized and destroyed by the defensive forces of our bodies. No sooner do these defenses learn to recognize and cope with one flu virus than along comes another. Last year, for instance, when just about everyone had either had, or had been vaccinated against, Hong Kong flu, up popped "London flu." And now that a vaccine against London flu is available, yet another flu has appeared — "New Zealand flu."

The Midwest outbreak is caused by the other new virus, the so-called B-Hong Kong strain. B viruses generally cause less trouble than the A strains represented by the New Zealand virus, but even this less artful form has acquired a new disguise. So this flu season there are two quite different flu viruses around, each capable of causing separate illnesses. One reason why they have lain pretty low so far may be that their new disguises are not wholly fooling the immunity systems in our bodies. In other words, if you caught London flu last year, or received a flu shot this year, you are probably fairly well protected against New Zealand flu.

But once every ten years or so, the major flu virus changes its coat in a big way. The last time happened was in 1968 when "Hong Kong flu" came on the scene. So different was the virus from the "Asian flu" virus that had held sway for the previous ten years that existing immunity was useless — and between 20,000 and 80,000 Americans died in the epidemic of some 51 million cases of flu that swept the country.

The big problem in coping with the flu is that it takes so long to make a vaccine, perhaps as much as a year. So if a new flu virus crops up in the meantime, the vaccine manufacturers are caught on the wrong foot. What is needed is a way of speeding up vaccine manufacture.

One trick, learned from the flu virus, has already shortened the lead time. Scientists found that the major leaps taken by the flu virus occur when a human flu virus becomes crossed with a flu virus that infects animals. The result is a part-human, part-animal, hybrid virus. (This is the reason why the major new flu viruses come mainly from Southeast Asia, where man and his domestic animals often live in close contact.)

The vaccines that have been made in the U.S. for the past two years also exploit the ability of flu viruses to hybridize. A new flu virus is difficult to "tame" in the laboratory so that it will grow on chicken eggs. The resulting hybrid virus flourishes in the vaccine-manufacturing laboratories, and is enough like the new strain to protect against it.

The hybridization method shortens the time needed to make vaccines. But the hope for the future is that even "smarter" hybrids can be used. These would allow live vaccines to replace the existing killed vaccines. It takes two or three hen's eggs to make one dose of the present killed vaccines.

With a live virus each egg might produce as much as 1,000 effective doses, so speeding up considerably the time it takes to get a vaccine on the market.

Dr. Robert Chanock of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., is one of the researchers testing this idea. He has found a flu virus that will grow in the nose but not in the lungs, where things are literally too hot for the virus' comfort. So the virus causes only a very mild, almost unnoticed infection — yet a vaccine made from it protects against the disease in the future.

Dr. Chanock is presently crossing this co-called "temperature-sensitive" virus with the new flu strains, hoping to make harmless live versions of the new flu viruses as they pop up.

From his work may come a vaccine that will be more effective in giving protection, and which can also be made in large quantities quickly.

WORRY CLINIC George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Elaine is heartbroken, largely because of a mistaken notion about men's sex outlook. So study this case with care. Wives, look at your wedding ring to reassure your ego; then serve more enticing boudoir cheesecake!

So I told Elaine the story I received from a Kentucky lawyer about a court case down there.

A young mountaineer had patronized a House of Prostitution and paid $5 for one of the girls.

However, she sued him for assault and battery saying he had beaten her with his fists and blackened both her eyes.

When the feuding couple appeared before the Judge, the boy admitted her charges.

And her black eyes were ample evidence to support her claim.

"But, your Honor," complained the gangling youth, "I leave it to you if I wasn't justified."

"For there I was, having paid the last $5 I had to my name, and she just chewed on a ripe apple meanwhile."

"So I up and hit her, for I figured I deserved more enthusiastic cooperation for my $5, 'cause that was a lot of money to me."

And the Judge acquitted the boy, saying the young fellow merited more cooperation for his $5.

Well, I used that case to help shock Elaine into a realization that the women who commercialized sex, whether as prostitutes or "Call" girls, are not interested in the act itself or their customers.

No, they are enticed by the money.

It isn't Cupid but cupidity that motivates them.

When I was interning at Wesley Memorial Hospital in Chicago, I doctored a number of prostitutes who came in for venereal treatment.

One of them was really in love with a no-good pimp who procured customers for her.

And she'd routinely cohabit with maybe a dozen men in one night; then go home to be with the pimp, to whom she gladly turned over the cash she had earned as a prostitute.

For she tearfully informed me that her boy friend would desert her if she didn't bring him enough money each morning.

"But, Dr. Crane," she added, "a girl must act interested and make the customer think she is passionate, or he won't give her a tip and come back to patronize her the next time he visits Chicago!"

So I finally convinced Elaine that her husband's affair was no more an evidence of love for the "Call" girl than if she had served him a steak dinner in the hotel dining room, for which he had also paid the standard price.

When men spend money for sex, it indicates merely sensual satisfaction and not true love!

Conversely, when women take money for sex, it also indicates mere financial satisfaction rather than true love.

The woman to whom a man offers a wedding ring is usually his true love, even if he cohabits with many others, both before and after marriage!

So send for my booklet "Sex Problems in Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Eugene, Ore., Indiana 47802. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

The Pampa Daily News
A Watchful Newspaper
EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Confiscatory Meddling

Suppose yourself to be a businessman. Suppose, further, that you are in the business of supplying your customers with a scarce commodity. Suppose, still further, that, looking to the future, and in an effort to insure that your customers are taken care of, you have acquired as much of that scarce commodity as you could obtain; not all you need to keep your customers fully supplied, but all the scarcity of the commodity would permit.

Now, finally, suppose that along comes the government and orders you to share part of your supplies, supplies bought and paid for with your own funds, with other businessmen who had failed to plan for the future as you had.

Would you, in such circumstances, consider yourself to have been wronged? We believe you would, and with just cause.

Inflation's New Phase

The people of this country are now witness to a President who, on the one hand, says he is against inflation and is doing everything in his power to control it, while, on the other, deliberately introducing programs (such as the "Family Assistance Plan," short title "FAP") which can only be funded by further recourse to inflation.

And, slowly but surely, the people are beginning to get the message; that message being, that the government has no intention of stopping or even slowing its inflationary machine.

As a result, we are now in the process of moving from the "controlled" phase of inflation (meaning that the government could still reverse the process if it had the will) to the "anticipatory" or "uncontrollable" phase that hit Germany in 1922 and France in the eighteenth century.

Economist Henry Hazlitt, in an introduction to Andrew Dickson White's classic on the French debacle, "Flat Money Inflation in France" (Foundation for Economic Education, Irvington - on - Hudson, N.Y.), puts it like this: "The money managers" (once the public senses that the government is going to continue inflating the money supply) "are from then on in a necessarily losing battle. The more they increase the supply of money, the more the public opinion anticipates still further increases. Prices then go up MORE than in proportion to the increase in the money supply. The new increased supplies of money therefore do a SMALLER volume of business and have a lower TOTAL value than the previous smaller supplies of money. Then comes the characteristic complaint which White writes about, of a 'shortage of money.' The more desperately the money managers try to offset this shortage by further issues of bills, the more the public fears for the value of the monetary unit, the more the monetary unit falls, and the greater the shortage of money becomes. White writes, on his last pages of the 'LAW OF ACCELERATING INFLATION AND DEPRECATION.' This is the psychological and economic explanation of that law."

As to the later German experiment with fiat money, suffice it to say that a pound of butter went from three marks in 1918, to 2,400 marks in 1922 when the "anticipatory" phase of inflation took hold of the German economy, to 150,000 marks in the summer of 1923, to 6,000,000,000 marks in November of the same year when the German monetary system collapsed.

Auto Companies Battle Over Their Rival Safety Systems

WASHINGTON — A heated entrepreneurial battle is currently shaping around, if all things, safety on the highway. So what rugged individualist found a way to turn road safety into an automotive accessory, like vinyl upholstery and torsion-bar suspension? Let's just say, where there's a buck there's a way — and a Washington lobby to find it.

Ralph Nader aside, highway safety has become a big business. Big and lucrative enough to put two of America's largest automobile companies into bumper-to-bumper competition involving rival safety systems.

In one corner we have General Motors, which for the past several years has been experimenting with a "passive restraint" system. This means that GM's approach to auto safety requires no cumbersome harnesses. Instead, air bag contained within the vehicle automatically inflates on collision and it deflates an instant later, protecting passengers against injury.

The GM people believe their system offers the best long-range answer to passenger safety. But they say additional research is needed to establish its efficacy on a competitive cost basis. This year's GM luxury cars offer air-bag protection as an optional item.

In the opposite corner is the Ford Motor Co. and a Washington-based group called the American Safety Belt Council. This is the "active restraint" lobby, committed to protecting their investments in buckles, belts, buzzers and various other instruments designed to keep auto passengers in their place.

Currently the Ford people are doing motorized cartwheels over results of an in-house study of safety-belt use. According to the company, the study indicates that the mandatory "starter-interlock" system in 1974 Ford models has increased belt usage by some 19 percent over last year.

This "dramatic increase," Ford claims, goes to prove that American car owners can be persuaded to use their belt halters — which should lead us to conclude, the seat-belt lobbyist says "that GM's air-cushion system isn't the answer to road safety."

The Ford study was conducted last December and surveyed 729 drivers. The company claims that 62 percent wore all their harness belts — lap, shoulder, arm, wrist, mouth, whatever; 74 percent wore lap belts only; and 26 percent, obviously perverse malcontents, found a way to disconnect or bypass the system by means of contraptions.

Now, why do you suppose anyone would want to do that? Because, as has been vehemently argued in this space, some Americans don't like to be given an offer they can't refuse. What Ford prefers to call its "starter-interlock" system, transposed from automotive Godfather talk, means just this: if you don't fasten up, the damned car won't start.

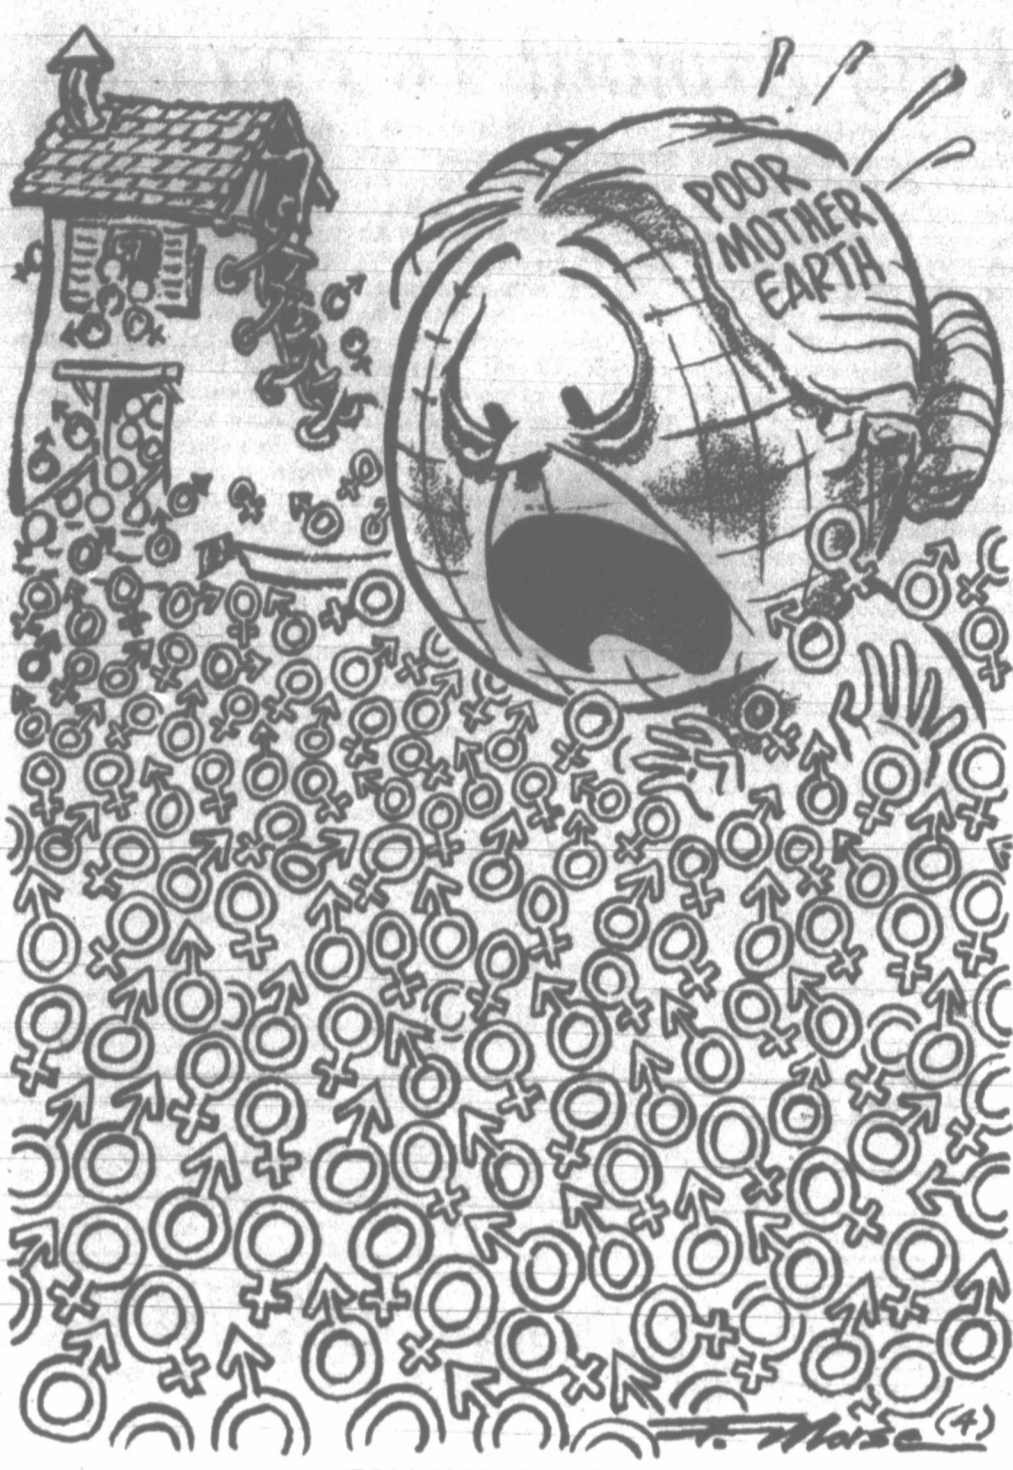

The situation is reminiscent of the color choice Ford buyers used to get, back in the pioneer days when old Henry was running the shop. Henry liked black and didn't see any reason why everybody shouldn't. Ipo facto, Ford buyers could have any color they wanted — as long as it was black.

"TELL MY LAWYER TO BE HERE AT 11:30, AND I WANT MY BROKER HERE AT 1:00. THEN TRY TO GET ME UP AN APPOINTMENT TO FILL UP MY CAR WITH GAS."

I've been around here for five years bitching about what I could do if I had the opportunity — and all at once they give me the ball.

—Sen. William Sarke, R-Ohio, on his nomination as attorney general by President Nixon.

Labor Chief Praises Soviets And Oil Boycott By The Arabs

WASHINGTON — It is time to jerk a still fleshy ghost out of a macabre memory lane just as the Soviet's Section 13 secret police pulled Alexander Solzhenitsyn from his own small Moscow home and deported him. The ghost in memory lane, the shadow in the long night during which some of us were beaten physically and psychologically for fighting world Communism, is the powerful 72-year-old West Coast maritime labor leader, Harry Bridges.

This man who controls the Pacific International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (ILWU) can paralyze the West Coast and Alaska, starve and virtually immobilize Hawaii and run a strike which can cost American wheat shippers hundreds of millions of dollars — and shores.

Longshoremen's president Harry Bridges is as unique in his strong, pro-Communist opinions as his strategically placed industrial-maritime complex is powerful. For example, he believes that the Solzhenitsyn saga and the author's majestic battle against a secret police is ghostly as Adolf Hitler's Gestapo is "junk" with which no one should bother.

"Why should I waste my time on people like that (Solzhenitsyn)?" Bridges told an interviewer recently. "Why the sudden interest in a couple of people over there like that? ... I'm not being fooled by that kind of junk."

Solzhenitsyn's crusade, according to Bridges, is merely an attempt to thwart the Soviet state and not a matter of decency and freedom.

This is, therefore, a portrait of Bridges today. To him the Arab oil embargo is not a boycott but a legitimate strike, and if it leaves the West in general and the U.S. in particular "pretty powerless" (that is as it should be).

And he derides as "cold war mentality" Congress's refusal to grant the U.S.S.R. special trade concessions because of Moscow's refusal to permit Jews and other dissidents to emigrate. Adds Bridges, "I'm a champion of the Soviet Union and always have been."

But that's not what he always said. For generations he has denied following the Soviet line (even through the Nazi-Soviet pact era). For years he has assaulted those who charged him with fronting for the Sino-Soviet bloc (now slightly splintered). For decades this powerful labor leader maligned those who, therefore, thought of him as a menace.

For years he and his other powerful colleagues in the ILWU's hierarchy mocked and demeaned those who charged they'd always put the Community interest first. For years he attacked the government as a force seeking to destroy his rights, as a mendacious monster seeking to deport him to his native Australia on charges of illegal Communist activity. This was attempted by the Labor Department in 1938, then by the House of Representatives in 1940, then by the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover in 1941, then by the Attorney General in 1942.

Finally in 1945 the Supreme Court ruled against deportation. The decision hung on a technicality. Of course, Bridges was championed by Justice William O. Douglas who said, in effect, how could anyone impugn the patriotism of this man Bridges and accuse him of unpatriotic Communist beliefs? And those who charged that Bridges actually was interested in controlling all American transportation were cut to ribbons in opinion's market place by cocktail reception intellectuals.

Now comes Harry Bridges and states that his accusers were right. He was virtually everything they charged him with.

"All the evidence they (the government) introduced was 95 percent true," Bridges admitted Jan. 29. "Always what they said was true."

"I was guilty as all hell. It was the 5 percent — that little 5 percent that they hung up on — and that is: was I ever a member of the Communist party — but the truth of the matter is that all the evidence introduced against me in that fight with the government was 95 percent true. The technical point of being a member wasn't there."

Of course, the government couldn't prove Bridges was a party member. Who could? It's not important. What is vital is the record of Bridge's many secret caucuses with others tied into an apparatus inside the old CIO — and with many who tried to prevent America from aiding the Allies against the Nazi blitz.

Or has Harry Bridges forgotten that old Communist American Peace Mobilization Committee which picketed the hite House in protest against shipping arms to the democracies during the Nazi-Soviet mutual assistance pact?

Swinging Singles Find Weekend Bash Is Flop

It's what's next for swinging singles. What rock concerts have been to footloose youngsters, the super-sex party is to unattached adults.

Probably there's a dating place in every town, but Barry Sax is making a big business of it.

He contracts with a whole hotel and advertises far and wide for singles to converge for a party. There's nothing illegal about it, and in his advertising, nothing immoral except by inference.

This past year one of his swinging weekends attracted an overflow 10,000 to the Hyatt Regency Hotel near Chicago's O'Hare airport.

There was rock music from six bands, a mixed sauna and swim party, four astrologers, contests with travel prizes and 70 bars that in Disneyland for adult leftovers.

But despite the carnival atmosphere and the crowd, loneliness crashed the party.

If any one characteristic is common of us all, it is that we want to be where we aren't. But Stephen Lewis, author of "Sex Among the Singles," says the grass is no greener on that side.

Dr. David Reuben says, "Singles activities, like computer dating, look good on paper. It would seem that all you need do is fill a dance floor or a vacation cruise ship with 500 unattached men and women and each will find what he wants."

"But," says Reuben, "like computer dating, most singles affairs tend to attract a specific category of men and women. They turn up, the same faces attached to the same bodies, week after week, place after place in a dreary, endless search."

Rick Soll came away from Chicago's super-sex party feeling "nasty, wasted."

The bash that had begun as a lark with the promise of good times in shared beds and even the possibility of meaningful contact with another human had evolved into shared loneliness instead.

But Barry Sax, the 29-year-old Canadian promoter, plans other and similar parties: "Three days in paradise for $64.00."

Few who spent three days in the cat's sandbox in Chicago will follow him elsewhere, but there are, he insists, "customers everywhere."

The supply of frustrated, fearful and lonely people is limitless, fortunately for him. Unfortunately for them, each one is seeking somebody of substance and solidity but looking in the least likely place.

Nothing was sadder than the hollow-eyed, middle-age men and women who left their downtown haunts to bring their hopes to Sax' circus of sex. They ended up sitting morosely in the lobby overdrinking, vindictively enjoying the problems the promoter was having cleaning up the monstrous mess and watching one another pass out.

INSIDE WASHINGTON Panama Canal Giveaway Stirs Congressional Ire

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON — The administration is unhappily running into a hornet's nest of vehement congressional opposition to the plan to give up U.S. control and operation of the strategic Panama Canal and Zone.

So widespread and intense is this bipartisan hostility that there isn't a chance this Congress will approve the scheme.

As far as the overwhelming majority of this Congress is concerned, that fanfare "agreement in principle" ceremoniously signed by Secretary Kissinger in Panama last week, isn't work the paper it's written on. That grandstanding event may have made headlines in ultra-liberal publications, but it also triggered a storm of irate denunciation in Congress — particularly in the House.

Significant highlights of this barrage of disapproval are:

- Introduction of three resolutions vigorously demanding there be no "surrender of U.S. sovereignty" over the Canal and Zone "except by treaty authorized by the Congress and duly ratified by the United States" — in other words, no giveaway by White House edict or State Department finagling.
- Sponsors of these militant declarations are three leading legislators who have long been directly interested in the Panama problem — Reps. John Murphy, D-N.Y., senior member of the Panama Canal subcommittee for 12 years; Mrs. Leonor Sullivan, D-Mo., chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee; and Daniel Flood, D-Pa., Appropriations subcommittee chairman.
- Not a single member of the House has said anything in favor of the hooptailed "agreement in principle." In striking contrast, there has been an anvil chorus of harsh bipartisan dissent. Foremost among the castigators are Reps. Gene Snyder, R-Ky., Joe Ewins, D-Tenn., Frank Stubblefield, D-Ky., John Rarick, D-La.
- With two exceptions, there has been a similar silence in the Senate. The exceptions are Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Gale McGee, D-Wyo. — both noted for their fervent internationalism and pronounced penchant for supporting large-scale foreign aid and other giveaways.
- Graphically illustrative of their self-righteous attitude was Kennedy's statement that while he is "conscious of the controversy surrounding every aspect" of this highly explosive issue, he nevertheless feels that the "era which produced the original treaty has long since passed; that in today's world that treaty is an embarrassing anachronism."

Rep. Murphy, West Point graduate and former chairman of the Panama Canal subcommittee, flatly challenged this contention with the blunt warning:

—That the iron-fisted dictatorial regime of Panama strongman Omar Torrijos and the leftist cabal surrounding him is highly unstable and its continuance in power extremely uncertain. Says Murphy, "It might be overthrown tomorrow."

—Two "plots" are underway to oust this military dictatorship — the 59th government Panama has had since 1903. Notes Murphy sardonically, "Some of them lasted only a few days; a turbulent history in anyone's book. During the same period, the U.S. had 12 Presidents."

—So shaky is Torrijos' regime that, to avert a military coup, he has sought to make a deal with ex-President Arnulfo Arias — whom Torrijos deposed in seizing power. The dictator proposed to restore Arias as president if he would support continuance of Torrijos as strongman — indignantly rejected by Arias with the message, "I will only return to Panama when you leave the country permanently."

—The Torrijos regime is deeply involved in the "narcotics traffic."

—There can be no new treaty with Panama without direct consideration by the House of Representatives. Any attempt by administration to bypass the House will be vehemently resisted. Declared Murphy on this key point:

—The authority of the House of Representatives is required before real and other property paid for from appropriated funds is given up or conveyed by treaty as the executive branch apparently is seeking to do in the proposed treaty with Panama. I am firmly serving notice that it is the unwavering resolve of those of us in the House who will insist that this body play a proper role vested in us by Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2, of the Constitution of the United States."

Echoing this blunt challenge, Rep. Gene Snyder, a ranking member of the Merchant Marine Committee, declared:

—The striped-pants dreamers of the State Department apparently are willing to turn over control of the Panama Canal despite an unbroken history of governmental instability in the Republic of Panama. The American people will not stand for any outright ceding of the Canal to Panama, so the State Department is in the process of doing that in a series of piecemeal concessions.

Never rise to speak till you have something to say, and when you have said it, cease. —John Witherspoon, American educator.

Dogs Destroy Pampa Hopes

By PAUL SIMS
BORGER — Joe Kerr poured in 24 points and Chuck Forrest 19, creating a one-two punch which proved to be Pampa's downfall as the Borger Bulldogs won their first district championship since 1960, downing the Pampa Harvesters, 63-57, Tuesday night in a packed North Middle School Fieldhouse here.

When the final second ticked off, hundreds of teary-eyed Borger fans rushed onto the court to celebrate with the team. Borger's come-from-behind victory, which ruined Pampa's hopes for a district playoff with the Bulldogs.

Borger finished 5-0 for the second half of district play and Pampa 3-2 after both teams and Palo Duro tied in the first half at 4-1. Pampa wound up its season with an impressive 23-8 mark.

The Harvesters led 18-13 at the end of the first period and 33-27 at the half before the Bulldogs began their second comeback effort in as many games against the Harvesters this season. In the first half of district, Pampa led 53-43 going into the final quarter before Borger pulled away with a 68-62 win. That game was played in Pampa.

Pampa, leading 39-34 midway through the third quarter, watched the Bulldogs score six consecutive points to take a 40-39 lead. Those points came on baskets by Forrest, Kerr and Don Keener. Rick Beasley hit a six-footer to regain the lead for Pampa while Kerr scored to give the Bulldogs a 42-41 lead.

The Harvesters were unable to go in front for the remainder of the contest as Borger pulled away to a 48-41 lead at the start of the fourth quarter and led by nine (56-47) with 3:55 left to play.

Kerr sparked the Bulldogs in the third quarter with four field goals and nine points while three technicals against the Harvesters aided Borger in the fourth quarter. Pampa pulled to within five (56-51) on a short jumper by Howie Lewis with 2:20 left but that was as close as the Harvesters could get.

Before the game Pampa coach Robert McPherson said the key to Pampa's winning would be keeping Borger from the free-throw line since the Bulldogs are the best foul-shooting team in the district. However, in the fourth quarter, Borger went to the line 17 times. Lewis scored 19 points to lead Pampa and pulled down 10 rebounds. Wilson scored 16 and Ray Powell seven.

Pampa lost the C-team game, 61-47. Three Reapers scored in double figures — Jewell Landers with 15 and Roby Mallard and Mike Lee with 10 each. Pampa won the junior varsity contest, 73-67, as Ed Drew scored 26. Noel Hanson added 14, Nick Slaymaker 12 and Richard Lane 11.

"I thought we (B-team) looked good. If the officiating hadn't been so one-sided, we would have won by 20. That was the worst we've had this year," said Shocker Coach Mickey Wilson.

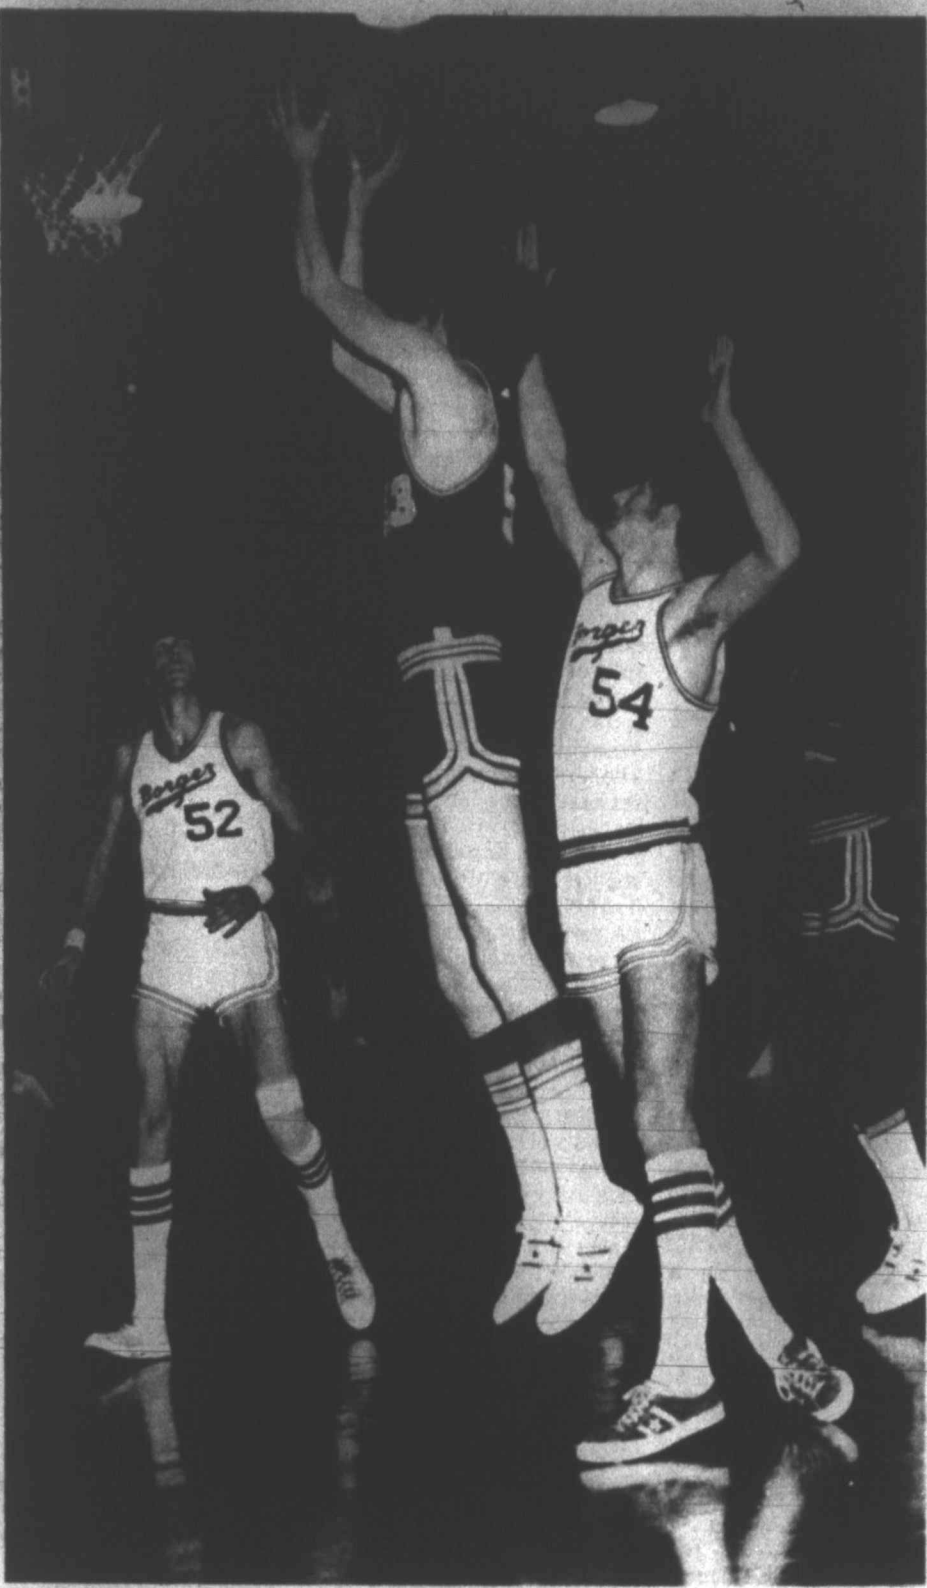

The Shockers finished their season with a 23-7 record.

PHS Golfers Shoot 324 In District To Finish 15 Shots Behind Tascosa

AMARILLO — Pampa had four golfers shoot 81's as the Harvesters carded a 324 Monday at Amarillo Public Golf Course for the first round of district play.

Tascosa scored a 299 and was followed by Amarillo with 300, Borger with 316, Pampa, 324; Caprock, 329; Amarillo B-team, 335; Tascosa B-team, 339; Palo Duro, 355; Pampa B-team, 361; Caprock B-team, 368 and Palo Duro B-team, 414.

Tascosa's Mark Moore fired a 69 to take medalist honors and was followed by Dan Bentley of Tascosa with 74 and Paul Powell of Borger, Donnie Loerwald of Amarillo and John Shankle of Amarillo, all with 75's. Par for the course is 72.

Wiley McIntire, Ron Watson, Scott White and Mickey Lowe each carded an 81 for Pampa. "That is the first time I've ever seen this happen in golf," said Harvester coach Deck Woldt.

Joel Hickey scored an 87 which was not included in the Harvesters' total.

Pampa B-team scores were Randy Watson and Danny Kohler, 87's; Mark Polk, 93; Tim Neslage, 94 and Bruce Hungerford, 96. The top four were used in Pampa's total.

"I was pleased. Before they (Harvester A-team) started, I put down everybody's score that I hoped they would shoot and a team score of 320. This is the best start I think we've had in years. Last year we shot a 343," said Woldt, whose team will compete in the Andrews Invitational Friday and Saturday.

The second round of district play will be held March 1 at Southwest Golf Club in Amarillo. The third round, scheduled previously for March 8 in Pampa has been changed to Huber Country Club in Borger due to the installation of a sprinkler system at Pampa Country Club.

FIGHT SET FOR MARCH 26

Foreman Prepares For Norton, Trainer Says Champion Is Ready

HOUSTON (UPI) — Heavyweight champion George Foreman worked out for an hour Tuesday in preparation for next month's title defense against Ken Norton. Foreman's trainer said the fighter is "damn near ready to fight next week."

Foreman's attorneys, meanwhile, were in California gathering financial records needed for a property settlement between the boxer and his wife, Adrienne.

Foreman returned to Houston after receiving the Valley Forge Freedom Foundation's "Leadership Award" during the weekend and went through a 60-minute workout Tuesday.

"I'm satisfied," trainer Dick Sadler said. "He's about where he should be two or three weeks from now. His rhythm's there and his power's there."

Foreman, who defends his title March 26 in Caracas, Venezuela, against Ken Norton, the boxer who broke Muhammad Ali's jaw, worked out with two sparring partners Tuesday and peppered the punching bag with flurries of hard rights and lefts.

"He's damn near ready to fight next week," Sadler said as he held the bag for Foreman. "Defense wise he's not getting hit and these aren't any fools he's boxing."

"This is something that ain't never been heard of — training in California, Houston, in Philadelphia, and back in Houston," Sadler said. "He's just a superb athlete, a beautiful athlete. I'm well pleased with his ability to adjust to all of this. I think it's because he hasn't been a one-town fighter. He's fought all over."

"We're very contented, very satisfied and very confident. When the time comes for the referee to say 'Shake hands and come out fighting,' George'll be ready."

Sadler's remarks tempered observations that Foreman's domestic problems could postpone the title fight. Should the fight not come off as scheduled, Foreman would probably be stepped of his title.

"I feel good," Foreman said. "I took a little hike this morning. I've got to do something, otherwise I'll feel insecure."

Domestic relations court Judge Wells Stewart has recessed Foreman's divorce proceedings until records being sought by Foreman's attorneys become available. Attorney Robert Lord said he hoped to have the court ordered bank records, fight contracts and financial statements by Thursday.

Foreman and his wife, married in December, 1971, agreed to the divorce and worked out custody and visitation rights for their one child but have not been able to reach a property settlement.

Foreman's attorneys claim the heavyweight champion is almost broke.

Tech, Texas Tied For Lead In SWC

By United Press International
 In a week's time the Southwest Conference championship picture has changed from a mug shot to a group portrait.

"The race has never been over," said Texas coach Leon Black. "It's not over now."

Indeed not. With three games left in the conference campaign, the top of the heap looks like this:

TEXAS — 8-3.
 TEXAS TECH — 8-3.
 SMU — 7-4.

The Texas Longhorns jumbled things nicely Tuesday night with a 75-74 conquest of Texas Tech in Lubbock and SMU moved to within a game of the leaders by outlasting Baylor, 78-70.

Seven days ago Tech had a two-game lead on the field in quest of its second straight championship.

But the Red Raiders have now lost two in a row and three of their last five. Texas has won two in a row after dropping two in a row. And SMU, the hottest thing in the league, has won five straight contests and seven of its last eight.

"We have a much tougher schedule ahead than Tech," Black said. "We have two on the road (including a tough battle next Saturday night against Texas A&M in College Station), and they only have one on the road."

"We can't count SMU out, either. Some say they are playing the best ball in the conference."

In the other two conference games Tuesday night Texas A&M (6-5) bumped Rice (4-7), 96-82, and Arkansas (4-7) downed TCU (2-9), 100-89.

Texas' win over Tech came as a result of another hot night from the Longhorns' Larry Robinson, who scored 30 points and made two free throws with 20 seconds that gave the Longhorns their winning margin.

"We never thought it was over against Tech," Black said. "We had some momentum with a five-point lead, but we missed a couple of easy buckets and I looked back up and Tech was ahead by three."

"Tech is too fine a team to let you run away with it." The Raiders were hampered by foul trouble. Rick Bullock, Tech's key big man, was on the bench 10 minutes of the opening half and fouled out in the second half having scored only nine points.

The tourney, which will conclude Feb. 28, got underway Monday as First National Bank downed Pampa Rotary, 68-57, and defending tournament champion Spearman belted First Baptist's men, 78-38.

High for First National was Mickey Wilson with 26 points. Charles Levi scored 19 for Pampa Rotary. Spearman's high point was David Beebe with 12, while Merrell Terrell scored 12 for First Baptist.

Pampa Rotary will play the loser of Celanese - Citizens Bank at 7 p.m. Thursday. First Baptist will play the loser of Borger Blue - Pampa X's at 8:30 p.m. Thursday. Thursday's winners will play for the consolation title at 8 p.m. Feb. 27 (Wednesday).

In the winner's bracket, First National Bank will play the winner of Celanese - Citizens Bank at 7 p.m. Monday. Spearman will play the winner of Borger Blue - Pampa X's at 8:30 p.m. Monday. IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

'Poor Little Feb' Hastening By

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — "Poor little Feb" is hastening by. In February I pause to revere the memory of a great soul, the late beloved comedian Joe E. Lewis, who was concerned about February being short-changed with a niggardly 28 days when all those big months (the bullies!) had 30 and 31.

Wonderful Joe E. died June 4, 1971, and poor little Feb's been undefended since. Feb is half over, my desk's sloped over into March, and we've got Georgie the Wash's birthday yet. Joe E. sang "Poor Little Feb" in a Broadway musical, "The Lady Comes Across," in January, 1942, and hundreds of times thereafter in night clubs. With his cherubic grin, his "It is now post time," and his "Voom, vroom, vroom," he gave sympathy to poor little Feb ... (written by Danny Shapiro, Jerry Seelen and Lester Lee) ... "Poor little February - I know exactly how you feel - You must feel exactly like a dog - Why should there be 30 days in Sept. and 31 days in Aug? - Poor little February - What a dirty deal - Fate took one look at you and mocked - Why should there be 30 days in Nov. and 31 days in Oct.?"

When Joe E., the Aristotle of the Bottle, was alive, I wrote that he might go down in History more quoted than Oscar Wilde and La Rochefoucauld. It was Joe E. who said, "While in the hospital I took a turn for the nurse," and "I follow the horses and the horses I follow, follow the horses." There should be a dinner for him every year, on the 28th of Feb.

I was there once in Las Vegas when Joe E. collapsed, and was rushed to his room and urgently treated by a doctor. Regaining consciousness, Joe E. smiled weakly at the doctor and said, "How about a drink, Doc?"

"I don't drink," replied the medical man stiffly. "Not you! ME!" snapped Joe E.

The Andrews Sisters, Patti & Maxine, needed a doctor's bag for a medical scene in their show "Over Here," now in Philadelphia. The property department dug up an old one.

By coincidence, it bore the initials L.A.R. The sisters are convinced that those initials represent their dead sister La Verne Andrews Rogers, that she's with them in spirit, and the show will be a Broadway hit.

Muhammad Ali's story is to be a movie by Budd Schulberg and Elia Kazan, with a great chance for a young fighter to play Ali as a kid. Ali will also appear in Anthony Quinn's movie "Black Majesty" but will not kiss a girl or take a drink ... The Waldorf's trying to get 100 pounds of caviar for its "Great Gatsby" premiere party Mar.

27 and says it isn't easy.

Ed McMahon birthdayed his daughter Claudia at Michael's Pub ... Some parts of Times Sq. have been cleared of prostitutes — but they've relocated in the 20s and 30s. One pimp called out "How'd we do today, honey?" When she said $85, he said, "But I told you it had to be a hundred" ... The sexiest dancingst swingingest B'way performance now, believe it or not, is by Carol Channing in "Loretta."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL... Are Jack Klugman ("The Odd Couple") and his wife a split-up couple? Neil Simon's putting his Bedford, N.Y., home up for sale, will move to L.A. ... Nureyev phoned Monique Van Vooren he wants to see the sexual musical at the Village Gate ... Elvis Presley's stepmother turned songwriter and joined ASCAP ... Josephine Baker sang some Richard Rodgers songs at Raffles — and he prompted her ... Norman Rosten's off to London to plug his Marilyn Monroe book ... Rich Little goes into the Waldorf March 14.

Lee Marvin said at La Chansonnette he had "a great disguise": "People don't recognize me with a glass of soda in my hand" ... Joe Levine, recovering rapidly from kidney stone surgery, was signed to speak at the Motion Picture Lecture Hall.

The energy crisis hit one resort area so hard that Joe Kipness says he was approached to purchase three hotels and two restaurants at scaled-down prices ... Sportscaster Mel Allen was elected to the Alabama Sports Hall of Fame.

Show Biz Quiz: What character was played by Paul Newman, Robert Taylor and Audie Murphy? Ans. to yesterday's: Daisy and Violet Hilton were the Siamese Twins.

I'D RATHER BELIGHT TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Lou Brecker described an untalented entertainer: "He couldn't attract a line of customers if he sold gasoline."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Tallulah Bankhead said it: "It's the good girls who keep diaries. The bad girls never have time."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "There's nothing wrong with having nothing to say — as long as you don't insist on saying it."

EARL'S PEARLS: Zero Mostel pointed out that you can call Dial-A-Prayer, Dial-A-Wig, Dial-A-Steak: "You can get anyone on the phone but the long-distance operator."

A man complained about the new gasoline ration system: "It means my wife can go home to her mother only on even-numbered days."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Can't Relax Over Pacemaker

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: Two months ago, due to a "heart slowdown," my husband, 59, had a pacemaker inserted.

We know the basics of a pacemaker because the manufacturer gives a booklet explaining how they work. But it doesn't explain how to live with one, nor what to expect in the future if it should fail to function properly.

My husband's doctor says, "Go on doing everything you've always done; this pacemaker is one of the best and should be okay for two to three years."

But my husband can't relax at night for fear he may roll over on that side and do some harm.

—Mrs. R.S.
Pacemakers are implanted in such a way that no activity by your husband will displace it or the connecting wires, so his doctor meant just what he said: go on doing everything you've always done.

Questions such as his have been worked out with care over the years, and it should be of some assurance to your husband to know that, according to the most recent figures I have seen, some 100,000 patients are now using pacemakers.

After some time — the "two or three years" his doctor mentioned — new batteries probably will need to be installed, but that is a relatively simple procedure, and is done routinely with this valuable device.

Doubtless your booklet (and the doctor) explains when and how the batteries need replacing.

Your husband surely sees his doctor often enough so that any alteration in heart rate or rhythm will be detected.

Meantime he is making himself needlessly miserable by his anxieties.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it wise for me to fly? I have a hole in my ear. What precautions do you advise?

—Mrs. B.D.
A hole in the ear — that is, a perforated eardrum.

If the ear is dry, no particular precautions are needed.

But if there is drainage or any discharge from the ear, that implies infection in the ear. In such a case, get your doctor's advice before flying — and do not be surprised if he forbids it until the infection has been subdued.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a friend who is a perfect gentleman. I've known him three years. We have dated and now it's at a point where he and I are in love but I am in my late 40s and scared of getting pregnant. He told me he had a vasectomy four years ago and that I can't get pregnant. How sure is it?

—N.B.
It's very sure — provided he had tests afterward that showed no sperm in his semen. If he did NOT have subsequent tests for that, then he should do so.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our niece, 3, for some time has had red blood cells in the urine. She has had a cystoscopy examination and everything checks out fine. I would like to know if this is serious and whether she will always have it?

—I.M.
That usually is a sign of infection somewhere in the urinary tract — kidneys, bladder, etc. It may be something she can throw off in time, since the cystoscopy shows no further evidence of trouble.

However, a small infection can grow into a large one, and this child should be kept under close periodic medical observation until the situation clears up, or doesn't, in which case she would require more specific treatment.

Don't take chances with "kidney trouble." It may be only minor, but it can be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys — Facts You Need To Know About Them." Write to him in care of Dr. George C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Under Twenty

DEAR ASTRID
By ASTRID CARSON

I don't know how to act around boys. Oh yeah, I've ridden in the back seat of a car with a boy I really liked a lot. He even kissed me a few times and I was very nervous.

I still like him and I think he likes me because the other night he wanted me to go with him in the back of the stage of the show hall. I would really have liked to but I knew I wouldn't know how to act so I told him I had to go home.

What can I do about the problem? Don't tell me to act normal or anything like that. Just tell me what to do and what I should say when a boy asks me questions like do I want to go to bed or do I want to ride around in the back seat of the car. I've been asked both of these questions by boys I used to like so please help me.

Dear Gee:

Telling you to act "normal" wouldn't help because you don't seem to be aware of just what that means. You also don't seem to understand the difference between being "liked" and being "used."

You do, however, seem to understand the difference between right and wrong for you and to be concerned about it or you wouldn't have written the letter in the first place. You have also shown some good sense by staying out of situations you don't think you can handle.

The obvious answer to the questions for you is definite "No." You've also got to work on your own behavior around boys because you are obviously giving them the idea that you are an easy mark. Consider yourself someone of value and by the way you behave give that impression to the boys you meet. If they don't show you the respect you deserve drop them in no uncertain manner.

Dear Astrid:

There is this real super guy. I love him but I don't know how to get in touch with him. I'm afraid he might not answer a letter from me. He lives in California and I live in Georgia. I am 16 and he is 18. I have his address and everything. What can I do to save him from any other reach?

Troubled

Dear Troubled:

The very worst that can happen is that he won't answer your letter. You won't know unless you try and the chances are he'll give you some kind of answer.

Boys, as you probably know, aren't the best letter writers in the world. Make your letter friendly, but not too friendly or demanding. You could develop a good correspondent but Georgia and California are a long, long way from each other. At the same time you try to get him interested in you try to develop some boyfriends right at home in Georgia.

Letters are pleasant to send and to receive, but they can't take the place of time spent with friends.

Dear Astrid:

Since they lowered the drinking age a lot of my friends are drinking. I don't drink but I don't disapprove of those who do. What does worry me is there have been a few times when they've had too much and drive their cars. I'm always afraid we'll have a bad accident. What should I do?

Frightened

Dear Frightened:

Call a cab, call a friend, call your family. Call anyone who isn't drinking and driving to get you home. There isn't any point to becoming another statistic added to the rest rung up by drunken drivers.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — An aide to Louisiana Gov. Edwin W. Edwards wants to establish a statewide monorail system that will zip commuters between major population centers at speeds of 80 to 110 miles per hour.

Clint Pray, head of the governor's Council on Environmental Quality, says the system would cost anywhere between $300 million and $1 billion and could begin preliminary operations by 1977.

Rock Music

By BRUCE MEYER

United Press International
Of all the stars of the late 50's and early 60's who might have turned up again a decade later with a fine new band and a series of tasty rock 'n' roll albums, one of the least likely was Ozzie and Harriet's little boy.

Yet that is precisely what has happened to Rick (Ricky no more) Nelson, well over 30 now and the father of three, including twin boys.

In the good old days, before the Beatles transformed the world, Ricky Nelson released seven straight gold albums and had an amazing string of hit singles: he was adopted by a huge block of middle class kids who couldn't identify with the likes of Elvis—he sang well, and he was clean.

Today, Rick Nelson is a mellow sort of guy, not at all what one would expect from either the adonoid punk on TV or one's own image of a spoiled rich kid carried to stardom on a bare minimum of talent and mommy and daddy's fame. He just isn't like that at all—which helps explain how he could attract the loyalty of the Stone Canyon Band.

Rick has been recording with the four-member band—through several personnel changes—for three years now. Their progress as a musical unit has been, shall we say, methodical: slow, but steady, anchored by Rick and Tom Brumley, an absolute wizard on pedal steel who played for Buck Owens for years.

Their best-known tune to date was 1973's "Garden Party," a bittersweet song about Rick's experiences at a rock 'n' roll revival show at Madison Square Garden. It sold fairly well as a single, but failed to stimulate as much widespread interest in the band as it should have; perhaps it was treated as a novelty.

Rick Nelson's latest album—his fifth with the Stone Canyon Band—is called "Windfall" (MCA-383) and it's the nicest yet—most of the tunes written by Rick or a relatively recent addition, lead guitarist Dennis Larden.

There are gentle country tunes and flat-out hard rock, well produced (by Rick) and arranged (by Rick and the band). It's an album that adds up to a little more than the individual tunes that went into it; sophisticated and mellow, like the man himself.

Celestial-rockers Yea, now on a U.S. tour, are promoting themselves with a huge, specially constructed hot air balloon that will be flown over concerts in selected cities.

Alice Cooper's favorite album: "Eli and the 13 Confessions" by Laura Nyro.

An interesting but highly unlikely rumor published recently in "Zoo World": the first great power trio of the 60's, Cream, is re-forming and already has some tracks ready for an album.

"Americans" remains one of the fastest-selling singles of all time, with three different versions on the charts, including a country cover by the late Tex Ritter.

The ostrich, a bird that cannot fly, has legs so powerful it can run as fast as a horse.
