ON TALKS WITH SYRIA

Kissinger Begins Tough Mission To Middle East

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry A. Kissinger began his most difficult mission to the Middle East today, with hopes of cracking the Israel-Syria impasse that has been punctuated by numerous bloody border clashes.

The secretary of state was pictured as optimistic about prospects of his trip, although U.S. officials conceded the obstacles were large and sensitive. Kissinger himself declined to assess the outlook as he boarded his jet at Andrews AFB, Md., just outside Washington.

Before starting this fourth Middle East trip, Kissinger conferred Sunday at the White House with President Nixon. Kissinger flies to Damascus Tuesday after an overnight stop in London, where he will confer with British leaders.

Accompanying Kissinger on the trip was Joseph J. Sisco, who has played a major role in much of U.S. Mideast diplomacy in recent years.

Sisco said he felt an "unparalleled opportunity" existed for progress toward peace in the area.

Sisco, recently elevated to undersecretary of state, said on the CBS-TV Morning News Program: "I think the atmosphere in the area is favorable. I think we have an unparalleled opportunity to make progress..."

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat expressed "great hope" for success of Kissinger's new mission, and said if disengagement of Syrian and Israeli troops results, that would be a "good step" toward ending the Arab oil embargo against the United States.

"When the United States takes practical steps, my colleagues will take practical steps," said Sadat.

On Sunday, Kissinger held the latest of a series of meetings over the past week with Egypt's foreign minister, Ismail Fahmy. Kissinger was said to have assured Fahmy and others during a lunch at the Egyptian Embassy that the United States has a firm goal of improving relations with Arab countries.

Kissinger then accompanied Fahmy to the airport to see him off for Cairo. Fahmy had been in the United States more than a week and he and Kissinger held several meetings. Fahmy also conferred with President Nixon last week.

Cuba Forces Plane To Land, Wants Money

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — A plane returning to the United States with missionaries may have been flying below its assigned altitude because of cabin pressure problems when it was forced to land in Cuba by MIG fighters, a Federal Aviation Administration official said Sunday.

Jim Frazier, Hollywood, Fla., local FAA coordinator for Southeast Florida said it was his understanding that there were pressurization problems on the plane and maybe they had agreed to fly higher and this may have caused concern to the Cuban government," Frazier said.

He recalled a similar incident about six months ago when a plane had been forced to land at Havana when it strayed out of the assigned air corridor across Cuba. He said he also knows of instances when planes have been forced to land by the Cuban Air Force because they were below the assigned altitudes.

The 32 missionaries and three plane crew members were released Sunday and landed at Fort Lauderdale after their sponsoring agency, Project Partner, Wichita, Kan., arranged to pay $6,850 to the Cuban government through the Swiss Embassy in Havana.

The payment covered the cost of forcing the plane down, maintenance on the aircraft, and expenses of caring for its passengers and crew, according to the State Department, which handled the fund transfer for the sponsors.

Passengers and crew refused to discuss the incident with newsmen at Fort Lauderdale. However, Glen Shaver, Pompano Beach, Fla., told newsmen, "MIG airplanes circled them and they decided they had better land... it was pretty clear to them they would be in trouble if they didn't land."

Shaver said his son, Donald, 23, Wichita, Kan., was the pilot of the Convair.

He said his son told him he had been unable to get radio communication with Cuban authorities as the plane neared the island on a flight from Kingston, Jamaica, to Akron, Ohio.

WITH TIC SPEAKERS

'Industrial Day' Seminars Held

By TEX DEWEESE

Major factors in bringing industry into a community were outlined to Pampa industrial and civic leaders in the forenoon session of an economic development clinic being conducted today by four members of the Texas Industrial Commission in the Crown & Shield Room at Coronado Inn.

The all-day "Industrial Day" program was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Industrial Foundation, with about 35 community leaders in attendance.

Kay Fancher, president of the PIF, presided at the morning seminars. He presented Homer Tucker, industrial development consultant with the TIC, who introduced the other speakers.

The first speaker was James Harwell, executive director of the TIC, who cited three major things industry looks for in an area where it wishes to locate.

These are availability of raw material, market oriented plant location and labor-oriented plant facilities.

Harwell said if you have the answers to these three things a community is on its way to attracting industry.

He added that the next five steps necessary to implement these three major factors are: community appearance, or what will attract people to your city; can the potential industry make a profit; research and development; plant location sites and available buildings and land; and is the community ready to assist with a financing plan.

The second speaker was Jerry Heare, director of community programs for TIC. He said one of the first things industry considers is what kind of a place is your city to live in.

The answer to that question will determine whether or not industry will locate in your city.

"The appearance of your community reflects the pride your people have in it," Heare said, "and industrial prospects want to know the attitude of the people in your community."

"They want to know if your community elects leaders who are dedicated to progress in such things as fire protection, paved streets, police protection, school facilities and health facilities."

The chamber's membership luncheon, with two T-Bone steaks given away as door prizes, was conducted from noon to 1:30 p.m. with chamber President Rex McAnelly presiding. Speaker at the luncheon was Harwell.

A Top O' Texas award was presented at the luncheon to Rev. Martin Hager of the First Presbyterian Church. Rev. Hager will leave Pampa soon to become senior minister at St. Paul Presbyterian Church in Houston. He has been in Pampa since 1967.

The afternoon seminar session began at 2 o'clock and ran until 4 p.m. Speaking this afternoon were Larry Milner of the Southwestern Public Service Co. area development department, and E.H. Sheffield and Homer Tucker, industrial consultants of the TIC.

In their presentation, the three TIC representatives discussed evaluating, securing, presenting industrial sites and buildings, industrial financing and evaluation of other economic development opportunities.

Senators Want Rationing, Simon Says It Can Wait

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some members of Congress are again calling for full scale gasoline rationing, but federal energy chief William E. Simon says service station lines can be reduced without that.

"I think rationing is the only answer, because in that way you can get away from this inequitable distribution which has plagued the gasoline situation over the past several months," Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., told UPI in an interview.

Mansfield said some areas of the country have more gasoline than they need while others have long lines of cars at filling stations and rationing is needed "which would treat all people alike and give them assurance instead of chaos."

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., said the time to start full rationing "was two months ago in my opinion. I've been advocating it strongly for the last two weeks or more. When you have a less than adequate supply it makes no sense but to ration."

Their comments were in response to Simon's assurance Sunday that the federal government's existing allocation program will be able to deal with the lines which have appeared in recent weeks at filling stations in some parts of the country.

Admits Inequities

"We are going to make certain that we put the supplies out there that are going to reduce these lines," he said in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press."

He conceded there were "inequities" in distribution of gasoline among states and within states. But he stressed that the allocation program is only three weeks old and should be given a chance to work.

As to national rationing, he said, "Basically, I just think it wouldn't work." He said that with 100 million cars on the roads, rationing would be much harder to administer today than it was in World War II, when there were fewer than 23 million.

If Congress ordered President Nixon to impose rationing now, he said, he would recommend that Nixon veto that legislation.

On Friday Simon ordered an extra 240 million gallons of gasoline allocated out of reserve supplies to fuel scarce states, and on Saturday he ordered a 2-cent a gallon increase in retail gasoline prices.

Gasoline dealers in Washington and Oregon responded by calling off a threatened pump-out and urged stations to return to normal operation Monday. Other dealer groups in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Maryland and California indicated approval.

James R. Cox, president of the Oklahoma Independent Petroleum Retailers Association, said Sunday his group was "overjoyed" about the price increase.

ATLANTA (UPI) — A Miami taxidermist who was bilked out of $6,000 in a phony fuel oil deal provided the clue that identified the alleged kidnapers of Atlanta Constitution Editor Reg Murphy, it was disclosed Sunday.

Murphy, who was released unharmed Friday night after his ransom was paid $700,000 ransom, said he called W. Charles "Buddy" Becker to thank him for the tip to the FBI.

Five hours after Murphy, 40, was freed in a motel parking lot, FBI agents arrested William A.H. Williams, 33, and his wife, Betty Ruth, 26, at their home in suburban Lilburn. The ransom money was recovered intact.

"I'm glad he could pinpoint the man," Murphy said of Becker. "I think he was one of the people who led investigators to the house."

Becker said he telephoned the Miami FBI when he read that Murphy was lured from his home last Wednesday night by a man who wanted the editor of Georgia's largest morning newspaper to arrange for the WASHINGTON (UPI) — Herbert W. Kalmbach Jr., President Nixon's personal attorney, pleaded guilty today to violating campaign practice laws during the 1970 congressional elections.

Kalmbach, a long-time friend and fund raiser for the President, was the sixth person close to the Nixon administration to plead guilty in a compromise with the Watergate special prosecutor's office as a result of investigations growing out of the scandal.

More Watergate indictments are expected soon but the prosecutor's office has held off on them until a jury is sequestered in the New York trial of former Nixon Cabinet members John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans.

The two charges against Kalmbach—that he solicited $3.9 million in funds for an illegally organized campaign committee and offered a European ambassadorship to J. Fife Symington Jr.—were related to the 1970 congressional campaigns and not directly with the Watergate case.

Symington was said to be a long-time friend of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and was active in Agnew's early political campaigns.

Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said no further charges would be made against Kalmbach since he pleaded guilty. Jaworski said the pleas would not bar prosecution however if Kalmbach gave false testimony or if other offenses unknown to the prosecutor's office were uncovered.

In Senate Watergate Committee testimony last summer, Kalmbach was identified as paymaster for political saboteur Donald Segretti. American Airlines also said it made an illegal political contribution to the Nixon campaign at Kalmbach's urging.

Others who pleaded guilty of charges growing out of the Watergate investigation prior to Kalmbach's action included Egil Krogh Jr., John W. Dean III, Frederick C. LaRue, Jeb Stuart Magruder and Herbert L. Porter.

Kalmbach, senior partner in a Los Angeles law firm, answered "yes" each time Federal Judge

John J. Sirica asked him if he agreed with allegations against him by the government.

Kalmbach could receive sentences of up to three years in prison and fines of $11,000. Sirica deferred sentencing until later.

Jaworski's office said Kalmbach would be called as a witness at trials of other figures expected to be indicted in the Watergate case.

The first charge against Kalmbach alleged that he solicited $3.9 million for 1970 Republican congressional candidates through a committee which in violation of law had neither a chairman nor treasurer.

The second charge accused Kalmbach of soliciting $100,000 from Symington in return for the promise of an unspecified ambassadorship in Europe. Symington, who was ambassador to Trinidad and Tobago at the time, did not get any European post.

The $100,000 was considered advance support for the 1972 presidential campaign, the prosecutor said.

Kalmbach was released on his own recognizance by Sirica with no restrictions on his movement other than he not leave the country. No date was announced for sentencing.

Kalmbach is a longtime personal friend, fund raiser and lawyer for the President. He handled all the legal work for the purchase of Nixon's San Clemente estate in California.

During Senate hearings, he testified he arranged for about $400,000 in payments to the Watergate burglars while they were in jail, made other payments to admitted political trickster Doald Segretti, and was involved in a number of major campaign contributions to the 1972 Nixon campaign, including funds from dairy producers.

In today's court action, the government said that between March and November, 1970, Kalmbach solicited pledges of $3.9 million for Republican candidates in congressional campaigns.

The prosecutor said he did this at the direction of an unnamed White House aide, for a campaign committee set up in the District of Columbia.

SLA Terrorists Keeping Silence

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army terrorists today entered their fourth day of silence on the fate of 20-year-old hostage Patricia Hearst.

There's been no response No indication of anything," FBI special agent Charles Bates said late Sunday. "We are just having to wait and find out the next development."

Miss Hearst, daughter of Randolph A. Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner, was abducted from her Berkeley apartment exactly three weeks ago.

A deadline set by the SLA for a response to their latest demand that Hearst personally pledge an additional $4 million to a $2 million food giveaway program passed Saturday.

Hearst said the demand made in an SLA communique Thursday was "far beyond my financial capability" but the Hearst Corp., agreed to add the requested amount to the People

In Need food program contingent on Miss Hearst's safe release.

The taped SLA message had warned that communications would be broken off and Patty held indefinitely as a "prisoner of war" unless the demand was met within 4 hours. She would be kept as a hostage for two SLA members detained in San Quentin prison on murder charges, the tape received Thursday said.

The two members referred to, Joseph Remiro, 27, and Russell Little, 26 were to be arraigned in Alameda Superior Court today on charges of assassinating Oakland School Superintendent Marcus Foster last November.

A Ludlow Kramer, the Washington Secretary of State in charge of disbursing free food as demanded by the kidnapers, has promised that the chaos of last week's opening day will be remedied.

He said food would henceforth be delivered in advance of the Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday distribution days at the four centers named by the SLA.

The first day of the handout on Friday resulted in mobs that blocked traffic, attacked food trucks and tossed bundles freely. There were fist fights and four arrests as 8,000 persons received packages meant for 20,000.

In the first letter following Miss Hearst's abduction, the SLA made a food demand that would have cost nearly $400 million. Hearst responded with a $2 million program that the SLA said Thursday had to be tripled.

ON ADM. MOORER'S ROLE Committee Studies Spying Testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee is weighing conflicting testimony about Pentagon spying on the White House and about the role of the nation's top military man, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer.

The outcome could affect Moorer's chances to be reappointed by President Nixon for a third consecutive two-year term as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. His present term is up in December.

The committee is expected to release more testimony on the subject this week—in the form of Q-and-A interrogations—and that might clarify apparent conflicts in written statements so far released.

Moorer's testimony thus far appeared to conflict with that of Yeoman Charles Radford, a Navy stenographer at the White House who says he purloined for the Pentagon White House papers on a 1971 trip by Henry Kissinger to Peking, and with that of Adm. Robert O. Welander who ran the Pentagon liaison office in the White House.

In a letter to committee chairman Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., Moorer said documents he received were of little interest to him, implying he did not seek them.

Police Studying Vandalism And Break-In Cases

Police are investigating several incidents of breaking and entering and vandalism that occurred over the weekend.

The Mojave Oil Co. office, 812 W. Brown, was entered after a window was broken out of the building. Nothing was found to be missing, reports said.

Harold Barrett Ford, 701 W. Brown, reported to police a window in the building had been broken with a rock. No indications were found that entry had been made.

Two cars parked at the S&J Mart, 600 E. Frederic, had windshield broken by BBs. One, a 1965 Chevrolet, is owned by Kevin Roan, 205 Miami. A 1972 Datsun parked next to the Roan car was also damaged.

Two boys were reported Saturday to have been shooting sling - shots in the S&J parking lot. The boys were picked up by police who took them to their father. He said he would prevent the boys from shooting the sling - shots in the future.

It is not known if there is any connection between the boys with the sling - shots and the BB damage to cars.

Joe Keel, 1209 S. Faulkner, reported the rear window of his 1971 Chevrolet had been broken out with either a pellet or a rock while it was parked in the driveway of the residence Saturday.

Investigation is continuing in all of the above cases.

Senator Commits Suicide

GUERNEVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — William F. Knowland, newspaper publisher and former Republican U.S. senator, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, an autopsy showed Sunday.

"The body was recovered at the water's edge, partially in the water," Undersheriff Robert Hayes said after the autopsy.

"The weapon, a .32-caliber automatic pistol, was recovered by a diver about two feet under the water, by the body. The evidence found, as first stated, indicated a self-inflicted gunshot wound."

"We have definitely ruled out foul play."

Knowland, 65, publisher of the Oakland Tribune, died Saturday as he stood on the muddy dock of his $100,000 redwood summer home along the Russian River 75 miles north of San Francisco.

No suicide note was found and there were no clues to indicate what prompted him to take his life.

Knowland had gone to the summer retreat Saturday morning after taking part in week-long celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of his newspaper.

Education Fund Draws Criticism

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Delegates on the Constitutional Convention's Finance Committee today circulated a paper critical of an Education Committee proposal they say will create a state debt and contradict the traditional pay-as-you-go system of state financing.

Object of the criticism is the "higher education assistance fund" which the convention was scheduled to consider beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The Education Committee, in a compromise proposal authored in part by convention President Price Daniel Jr., recommended the establishment of the assistance fund, to be paid for out of general state revenues.

The fund, as proposed, must equal the amount which the universities of Texas and Texas A&M receive yearly from the available university fund, another constitutional endowment, but — unlike the assistance fund — built on interest earnings off the non-tax permanent university fund.

This year the available fund totalled about $30 million and the legislative budget board estimates that amount will increase to over $100 million by the year 2000 — thereby causing a massive need for new taxes.

Also, under the Education Committee's proposal, state college governing boards would be authorized to sell bonds for construction of new buildings and pay back the bonds with money from the higher education assistance fund.

Since the assistance fund is built on tax money, the finance committee believes the bond payments would constitute deficit spending, which was outlawed by the 1876 Constitution and is a good bet to be prohibited under the new state charter.

"A pay-as-you-go policy for state government is a worthwhile and desirable goal," the Finance Committee's statement said.

Instead, the committee is recommending the convention drop plans for the higher education assistance fund and levy a statewide property tax — based on reformed land valuation and appraisal rules. Colleges would be prohibited from selling bonds for their building programs but would receive healthy appropriations out of the property tax directly from the legislature for consideration.

Easter Seal Appeal Set For County

The 1974 Easter Seal Appeal will open in Gray County on Friday, March 1, according to Mrs. Betty Casey, who serves as Easter Seal representative for the County.

Mrs. Casey said Easter Seal Appeal letters would begin arriving at homes in the county about March 1.

As an Easter Seal representative, Mrs. Casey is the person to contact to request services from the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas. These services include physical and occupational therapy, speech and hearing programs and special information services to help solve the many problems faced by the families of handicapped children and adults.

Last year 20,570 handicapped people received help from the Texas Easter Seal Society. With the costs of providing expert professional care rising, more money than ever will be needed.

Funds help support 18 centers in Texas, where services are provided to those crippled children and adults who cannot provide for themselves and who do not qualify for help from any other source.

"The people of Texas have always responded generously to helping the handicapped, and I feel certain they will make it possible to increase Easter Seal services to crippled Texans throughout the coming year," Mrs. Casey said.

Pistol Packing Policewomen Are Holding Their Own --And More

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

No one yet refers to her as a gunshoe, a flatfoot, or even more derisively as a pig, but there she is—a policewoman, a Ms. Fuzz, performing in major American cities the same duties as the policeman.

Call it unisex in law enforcement if you care, but cops in skirts (or culottes or pantsuits) are a fact of life in cities that not too long ago had all male enforcers. Acceptance of lawwomen is a mixed bag, however, a United Press International survey around the country indicates.

The pistol-packin' mamas (all right, a lot of them are not mamas) sometimes are resented by their male counterparts and the male counterparts' wives, sometimes accepted without thought of discrimination, sometimes passed by for promotions and sometimes accused of being liberationists.

As Lynn Coons, 24, single, and two years on the Tulsa, Okla., force puts it, "From the time I started college I had decided to become a police officer."

"I support the liberation movement. When people say they have never seen a woman policeman, I tell them they still haven't because there is no such thing as a woman police 'man.' We call ourselves police officers, although we jokingly call ourselves Ms. Fuzz."

suffrage). They were then called matrons. Their numbers have increased gradually. But now women are coming out of the police academies in droves.

For a long while in New York City, she said, the policewomen worked in special areas, dealing with juvenile delinquency, family relationships, drugs, special detective work and the like. Now they do everything and are assigned around the clock.

Inspector Schimmel said, "There is no longer the question of men and women working together. It's like a doctor and a nurse. Just accepted."

New York's police departments boasts one of the least discriminatory policies of any city in the country. Of the 30,000 on the force, 700 are women.

They take the same exams as the men, are graduated from the same police academy, have the same training as the men including use of firearms, boxing, wrestling and judo. They also do the same foot and motor patrol, direct traffic, perform emergency services, operate in high crime areas.

Cops' Wives Complain

As in several other cities hiring women officers, there have been complaints. Some wives of patrolmen have harped on the buddy system of patrol—when their husband's buddy is a woman. And some patrolmen expressed worry about what they would do in an emergency. Protect the "weaker sex?"

Surely there are dangers in the job for either sex. But the big cities do a comprehensive training job. New York, for instance, gives both sexes six months of training and then one year of probationary duty.

And a police department spokesman said that of the 53,000 who took an applicant's exam last December, almost half were women. Another indication of nondiscrimination in most cities is equal pay for equal work, although this is not universally the case.

Even as the "doves" apply, however, the percentage of women police officers remains small counted nationally, according to the Police Foundation, a nonprofit group headquartered in Washington, D.C. Its purpose is to aid police agencies in urban areas.

The foundation reported only two per cent of women making up the sworn officer force in 493 police agencies it surveyed recently. The foundation also reported that female police officers seldom rose above the rank of sergeant or detective.

Discrimination Suits

This is an issue that is going to arise frequently. Only the other day in Philadelphia, a police woman filed a class-action suit in federal court seeking to halt what she termed a "pattern and practice" of discrimination against women in the police department.

Penelope Brace said she had been denied the opportunity to be upgraded to the rank of detective and had been threatened with dismissal because of her complaints.

In Detroit, there's a civil suit over the practice of assigning a female officer in the women and children's section to the same duties as sergeants in the detective bureau without the resultant rank or pay.

And in Oakland, Calif., one woman has a suit pending alleging discrimination because the department refused to give her the competitive test for promotion to sergeant.

Another "problem" in hiring policewomen has to do with pregnancy and maternity leave. New York reports the turnover greater among women as a result.

In Chicago, Angela Shreiner, 29, filed complaints with federal and state civil rights boards claiming discrimination and seeking back pay because she was not paid during maternity leave. She said policemen get full salary and benefits for up to a year on sick leave.

Some police departments reported masculine resentment of women but most did not.

"When I was hired, I could feel the strain of being a woman cop," said Lt. Marilyn O'Regan, administrative assistant to the Chicago Superintendent of Police.

But that was 25 years ago and today, she said, there are about 100 women in the department, mainly in youth programs, not walking the beat or riding the patrol cars.

"We don't compare the sexes," she said. "No records are kept on which sex is more successful than the other in special jobs. Women active in investigation often make arrests without company of a male patrolman."

Weaker Sex?

Chicago and other cities reported women especially helpful with "tender age" kids and juveniles. And a spokesman said, "Women have become invaluable in rape investigations because of their knack for establishing rapport with the victims..."

Whether women are the "weaker sex" concerns many cities. Sgt. Edward Snyder, head of the personnel and training department in Lancaster, Pa., said, "I would be extremely disappointed if most of our offices didn't feel this way (protective of women); that's male human nature."

But women are demonstrating that they can take care of themselves better than men had anticipated. The assets (of the women) outweigh the disadvantages."

Philadelphia, with 66 women among its nearly 7,000 officers, reported all its women assigned to the juvenile aid division. But Capt. Ruth Carter, 24 years on the force and commanding officer of the women's unit, said the women "handle every type of case. We have no women that are secretaries..."

From other cities, large and small, there were these reports:

Feminine Performance

—Washington, D.C., which has women on patrol just as the men are, plans an evaluation shortly of feminine performance.

—In Dallas, Norma Ferguson talked of the wife problem. She had never heard of any trouble, though there was some talk when women started working in patrol cars. "Nothing has happened," she said. "We socialize in families now. The wives know us. They are more worried about those hookers who come on like they might take the men off against their will..."

—Tulsa reported night shift doubling up of partners—to save fuel.

—Salem, Ore., reported a marriage "only last week" of two officers. Salem's acting police chief, Maj. E.J. VanOsdol, said the "feedback" he was getting indicated the men are "just a little reluctant yet to have a female backing them up..."

Love At First Bullet

—Boston, with 20 women on a force of 2,600, said the women had been doing the same job as the men for 18 months and "we've found they can be very effective, especially in family disturbances." The department reported "no hassles over romance or love at the first bullet..."

—Atlanta, reporting 75 women on its force of 1,503, said most had been hired in the last year and "we are utilizing them in virtually every place we use men..." Sgt. Mike Corbin, department information specialist, said there had been no instance where a policeman felt a policewoman had endangered him.

Don't Overlook Tax Exemptions

(This is the third in a series of five articles on 1973 Federal Income Tax returns.)

By BURKE HAYMES
President
Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants

An exemption of $750 for each dependent can help cut an individual's income tax burden, so it's important not to overlook any of the exemptions available.

A taxpayer's first exemption is himself, and if he is at least 65 years old by the last day of 1973 the $750 exemption is doubled. If the taxpayer is also blind, he is entitled to a third exemption.

Young children, of course, are dependents and the dependency continues beyond age 19 if they earn less than $750 a year, derive more than half their support from the parent taxpayer, and do not file a joint return of their own. If the child is a full-time student, the $750 gross-income test does not apply, regardless of age.

The rules applying to natural children apply also to stepchildren and those who have been adopted.

Any person who is a member of the taxpayer's household and meets the citizen or residence, income and support requirements and does not file a joint return of his own can be taken as a dependent. In the case of parents, children and certain other close relatives, it is not necessary that they live with the taxpayer.

If one shares with others in the support of a parent or other dependent, with no one individual providing more than half the dependent's support, it is permissible for one of the contributors of more than 10 per cent of the support to take the dependency exemption each year.

The others have to declare on Form 2120 that they will not claim an exemption for the individual that year, and these forms are filed with the return of the person who claims the exemption.

Any otherwise qualified dependent who was alive at any time during 1973 may be taken as an exemption. This applies to one who might have died on January 1, and to one who was born as late as Dec. 31. If a spouse died during 1973, one may still file a joint return with the deceased spouse unless the taxpayer remarried before the New Year.

Dear Abby
Checks to charities can be good or bad

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You stated that you were "delighted" when, in lieu of a Christmas gift, a fan in Tulsa sent you a signed check, inviting you to make it payable to a charity of your choice.

When my husband was sick in the hospital, we were advised that in lieu of flowers, friends had made contributions to THEIR favorite charities. This was a thoughtful gesture, but what if WE disapprove of the charity or cause which benefited in our name? Perhaps it is a political group or cause with which we do not want to be identified, and on whose mailing list we do not want to be.

Answer that one, please!

DISAPPROVING CONTRIBUTORS

DEAR DISAPPROVING: You make a good point. You can't prevent people from making contributions to THEIR favorite charities or causes in your name. But you can refrain from sending signed checks to those who could conceivably put you in that uncomfortable position.

For yet another reaction to that suggestion, read on:

DEAR ABBY: Sending a check for charity puts the burden on the receiver. He has to mail the check on, decide which favorite charity to choose, and then remember to say, "thank you." The sender admits that he is too lazy to find a charity or make the gift, yet he wants credit for sending a gift.

The whole concept of starting out to buy a gift already price-tagged is wrong. I'd rather receive a 39-cent cookie cutter from someone who knows I love to bake than a $50 check just because I happen to be on someone's Christmas list.

MRS. T. L. K.: DOVER, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Some time within the last five years I read an article in a newspaper which stated that a man had figured out how to square a circle!

I remember that this man's son was studying math, and that's how he became interested in the project. The man worked on the problem for months before he came up with the solution which led to the discovery of a new kind of curve. The article said that a university math professor confirmed the solution as correct.

When I mention that a man actually squared a circle I am told that it cannot be done, and that I am either out of my mind or I must have been dreaming.

Abby, I can't be the only person in America who read that article, but I am unable to come up with the proof. Please, please help me. I am beginning to doubt my own sanity. Isn't there some math genius in your vast reading audience who can come to my rescue?

BARBARA G. IN WILKES-BARRE, PA.

DEAR BARBARA: We'll soon find out, Genialist!

CONFIDENTIAL TO PUSYCAT IN HOLMBY HILLS: Get to know him better first. And don't try to bring out the "beast" in a man until you're sure the "beast" in him isn't a skunk.

Karpin On Bridge

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal, which came up in a duplicate game, was a well-bid one. The play by the defenders was also excellent. But whether declarer played the hand correctly is a moot question, and if the result is the criterion, his play left something to be desired.

with the seven, allowing dummy's queen to win.

Declarer next returned to his own hand via the ace of clubs, and led his remaining diamond. When West played low, declarer confidently inserted dummy's jack. East, perforce, took the trick with his king and exited with a heart. Eventually South had to lose a club trick. And so he went down to defeat.

East's refusal to win his diamond king on the initial lead of this suit was a calculated risk. He knew that if he took it, declarer would have a guaranteed contract, since all of dummy's remaining diamonds would be winners. As it turned out, his risky, deceptive play paid a handsome dividend.

Now to declarer's play. Had this been a rubber-bridge game, declarer's second diamond finesse would have been absolutely wrong, for he had a guaranteed contract. After winning the queen, all he had to do was to lead a club and finesse his jack. Whether it won or lost, his only loser would be a club. In the actual set-up, with the club finesse being successful, the ace and king of clubs would then fall East's queen, and declarer would have all 13 tricks.

But the game was duplicate bridge, in which game an

Why Grow Old?

Be Calorie Conscious
When Preparing Food

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

This is the fourteenth in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of WHY GROW OLD? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.

Spring, that beautiful romantic season, will soon be with us! At that time we fall in love all over again with life or with someone. Even a new spring outfit charm us in a special way. Soon, when you go shopping for one, you will hate any overweight you have.

Here I am again with help for those of you who are following my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan (Bip for short). I am sure none of you will meet spring with your buttons popping when the birds are hopping or with your zippers springing while the birds are singing! Let me call your attention today to the importance of food preparation.

Sometimes the way we say something is as important as what we say and often the manner in which we cook food is as important as the food itself. The most innocent items can be turned into calorie horrors. For instance think of the potato which is a valuable item on any diet and one we all like. However many reducers avoid it like poison. The truth is a medium size baked potato has only about 90 calories and is delicious with chopped chives or celery salt. A small dot of butter can even be allowed.

But, 10 french fries (each two inches long) give you a about 160 calories and potatoes mashed with lots of butter and some cream - forget it! An innocent medium size apple has about 80 calories but the story changes if you bake it with two tablespoons of brown sugar. This will sabotage you with 184 calories.

The fat on meat skins the calorie count. Use a roasting rack so it drips into a pan while cooking. When possible cook a roast or make a stew the day before you are going to serve it. After a night in the refrigerator the fat will harden and you can remove it. The general rule is to bake or broil. Also be sure to remember how those tricky additions add up.

Those of you who started Bip when it first appeared are nearing the end of this course. Don't stop just before reaching the finish line! If some of you planned to start but failed to do so, begin now. You still have time to lose between 15 and 20 pounds before the season for lighter, more colorful but more revealing clothes.

If you missed some of this series and wish to be clued in for a late start, you may want to buy Bip Kit. This has complete directions, a calorie chart, slimming menus for two weeks, spot reducing exercises, a height and weight chart and a wall chart on which you can plot your progress and see your beauty line rise as you weigh line drops. If you want this send 80 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa, 50304.

Mask Prank
PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) - A Portland attorney was arrested on a downtown street recently as he left a party wearing a face mask bearing the likeness of President Nixon.

The attorney, Phillip Lowthian, had worn the mask to a party in a local hotel and carried the prank into the street. But police arrested him on a city ordinance prohibiting masks that dates back to 1941.

Said a city official: "Not even the Lone Ranger or Santa Claus is legal here."

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

TUESDAY, MARCH 3
Your birthday today! From a slow take-off, your prosperity can build steadily all year. Self-discipline and continued investment of energy are essential, not always easy. Relationships flow smoothly once you are past an early phase of testing and being tested. Today's natives attract notice thru strong personal reactions, a flair for dramatizing even trivial routines. These people are never two of a kind, however near in age they may be.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Adopt a natural course of action, with special regard for the feelings of others, and all goes well for a vigorous day of personal progress.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Your excessive concern for home and possessions shouldn't be allowed to take you beyond the range of ready adjustment in family affairs.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): It would be hard to find less provocative and yet so potentially rewarding circumstances, once you get over a morning mood of dissatisfaction.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): A search for obscure information offers extra advantages, gets you out of line just far enough to complicate your schedule.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Flash your brightest smile, and charm your way past an early disagreement. Self-assured, move fast now that you are riding a wave of opportunity.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Additional work, perhaps under somewhat trying conditions, seems almost inescapable. An early start is more help than you can possibly imagine.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work and play both extend longer than usual. It's up to you to stick within the limits of your budget—and you may not quite make it.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentration on the fine points brings results, but you must keep an eye-out for the unexpected discrepancy which can be both crisis and opportunity.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A late start pushes you past the clashes of opinion from relatives and others. Technical advice runs into details which help your understanding.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Added cooperation should not be taken lightly or assumed as permanent. Get long-term benefits confirmed while circumstances are in your favor.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Getting your day off to a good clear beginning involves responding to irritation with calm and gently expressed resolve. Just don't be careless.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Being able to handle those who inadvertently get in the way is its own reward. It's a great day for repaying old obligations.

The Woman's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Give them the tools for safety when they're little more than toddlers and they'll use them the rest of their lives.

This is the concept of Mrs. Frank L. Chlad, who with parents, teachers, police officers and volunteer teen-agers spearheads an unusual education program called Safety Town. Those getting the indoctrination are 4- and 5-year-olds.

Dorothy Chlad, who has two teen-age daughters, says you can't teach one phase of safety apart from another; safety must be a total program.

"Our premise is that young children experience an enormous amount of daily problems and discoveries during their curious, exploring, growing-up days," she said. "To them that 'shiny big car' can't hurt them, that 'pretty medicine bottle' isn't dangerous, and that 'bright silver lighter' looks just like a toy.

"You don't shelter a child for 16 years and then turn him out in the world."

National Toll

To underscore the need for early training in safety, Mrs. Chlad recites the national toll. Accidents are the leading single cause of fatalities during childhood, plus causing an untold number of crippling injuries.

Some 30,000 die annually in accidents, another 60,000 sustain lifelong injuries, 250,000 encounter accidental poisonings, most of them under age 5, 1,000 are killed by falls and thousands injured, 2,000 lives are lost by fire and matches and 10 times that number are burned and scarred.

Plus 2,500 lives lost by drowning in tubs, pools and at beaches; 4,000 lives lost by bicycle deaths and tens of thousands crippled, 6,000 killed in traffic accidents and thousands injured.

During a visit to New York from her home in Solon, Ohio (a Cleveland suburb), Mrs. Chlad told how Safety Town started. It was the idea of a prominent accountant whose close friend was killed in an accident. The first project began in Mansfield, Ohio, in 1937. Today, there are close to 100 such programs, still mostly in Ohio.

Mrs. Chlad became involved when she heard of the programs through her preschool PTA.

Obeying Traffic Lights Now, the National Highway Safety Foundation, a publicly funded, nonprofit organization, is backing the program, hoping to spread the program to communities around the nation.

Mrs. Chlad a volunteer for 10 years, now is salaried chairman of Safety Town Council.

Safety is taught, with policeman and teacher, through the children's involvement. Most sessions are outdoors.

The children learn about crossing streets, reading and obeying traffic lights, fastening seat belts, not to go between parked cars, about railroad crossings, the danger of medicines, poisons, plastic bags and the like, school bus safety, the dangers of fire, how to play safely, how to ride a bike safely—some 4- and 5-year-olds already have shed bike training wheels, Mrs. Chlad said.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Lola was losing her husband's affection! For her "waddling walrus" figure made her look like a good old motherly soul and not a siren. By using cottage cheese in the dining room, she soon served him more enticing cheesecake in the boudoir!

CASE Z-561: Lola G., aged 33, is in the same boat with 10,000,000 other housewives.

"Dr. Crane," she moaned, "I want to buy some new clothes but I now look like that 'waddling walrus' you often mention in your column.

"Certainly" before Easter arrives, I simply MUST STREAMLINE MY FIGURE!

For my husband keeps making uncomplimentary remarks about me, saying I look like a balloon.

"And his romantic interest is waning, too."

"So how can I take off 25 pounds of my ugly fat without using drugs?"

DIET MEDICALLY

Last summer our daughter coaxed Mrs. Crane into going on a fruit, juice and fruit diet.

But that is dangerous, for your muscles (including especially your heart) need fresh protein every day!

Remember, every time your heart beats, muscle cells wear out and require replacement via fresh protein!

Otherwise, your heart grows smaller, weaker and less able to maintain normal circulation.

Then you may have trouble breathing as well as suffer pains over the heart region, and ultimately develop swollen ankles.

So be sure you include about 400 calories worth of high protein foods daily, regardless of whose diet you follow.

Besides, protein loses 15% of its calories in the process of being digested. No other food does that!

Moreover, your body can transform protein into sugar and fat but it can't make protein out of sugars and fats!

Protein is thus the universal food!

So select such menu items as lean meat, cottage cheese, the white of an egg, bread, beans, peas, etc.

And don't make a major stage production out of your dieting nor concoct intricate dieting menus.

Instead, pick food items that are rather filling, such as a boiled egg (75 calories), a small hot dog (100), banana (100), cup of cottage cheese (200).

And don't think you must avoid sugar entirely, for a very effective lunch can consist of a cup of cottage cheese with a teaspoon of jam, jelly or honey thereon, making a total of about 225 calories.

Reduce your liquids, too, as per my dehydration diet, for that shrinks your stomach and shifts your attention from food to a desire for ice water.

Head lettuce, cabbage, green beans, celery and similar salad items add bulk at very little cost in calories.

Remember, too, that whenever you lose one pound of fat, your body manufactures 2 glasses of water internally!

For body fat is broken down during dieting into water and carbon dioxide. The latter we exhale via the lungs.

Ladle your food quota on your plate in the kitchen (or carry your lunch) and then eat without any other menu items on the table to tempt you.

Limit yourself to one full glass (8 ounces) of total fluids the first day; then 2 glasses the 2nd and 3 from the 3rd through the 10th.

Women should stick to 800 calories and men to 1,200 per day, which will let you lose at least 10 pounds the first 10 days.

After the 3rd day on this dieting plan, you feel fairly content.

So send for the book "How to Lose 10 Pounds in 10 Days," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Stephen Hill, Welles, Indiana 47385. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Social Security Attempts To Get Checks On Time

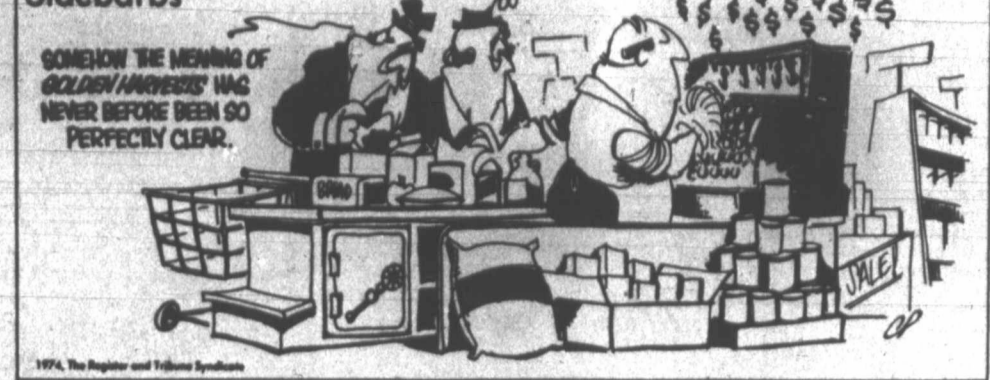

The Social Security Administration's main purpose is to get the right check to the right person on time, said Howard L. Weatherly, branch manager of the Pampa Social Security Office.

But the vast number of people receiving social security makes it a certainty that some checks will not be received despite the best efforts of the Social Security Administration.

Nearly 30 million Americans receive monthly social security benefits in the form of retirement, death, and disability benefits.

Most people receiving social security will get their check by the third of the month. If the check does not come by the sixth you should immediately

Migrant Youths Have Chance To Get High School Degrees

Six hundred youths from migrant and seasonal farmworker families in Texas will have a chance to finish their high school education under the Labor Department's High School Equivalency Program (HEP), R.L. Coffman, regional director of Manpower Administration, announced in Dallas today.

A total of $688,400 will fund four nine-month grants to help youth: 17 to 24 years of age pass the General Education Development (GED) Examination.

HEP students will live on college campuses, with access to all student facilities as well as health and medical services. Throughout the grant period they will receive intensive tutorial, counseling, and pre-vocational services.

Enrollees will be recruited from among poverty-level families by the colleges and universities running HEP, as well as through local Texas Employment Commission offices and other local social agencies.

The four grants to Texas are part of a national program of 13 grants totaling $2,330,940.

Each project maintains a staff recruiter and a placement officer. Successful completers of the GED will be placed in permanent jobs, vocational training or college. Once placed, the youths will receive regular follow-up services, including continued counseling. Texas institutions funded under the new grants are: —Pan American University, Edinburg, Texas, will train 150 youths with $218,000; —Lamar University, Beaumont, Texas, 150 youths, $158,825; —The University of Texas at El Paso, 150 youths, $186,265; —University of Houston, 150 youths, $125,400.

The average length of stay in HEP is about five months. No more than 55 students are enrolled at any given time and each student works at his own rate.

HEP has been operating since 1966. In July of 1973, the program was transferred from the Office of Economic Opportunity to the Department of Labor. During the 1973 calendar year, HEP placed a total of 1,152 youths — 480 in jobs, 279 in vocational education programs, and 385 in colleges and universities as regular full-time students.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newsweek reports that actor Burt Reynolds apparently got cold feet before posing for his famous nude centerfold in Cosmopolitan.

"It took him two hours to get out of his bathrobe," the photographer, Francesco Scavullo, is quoted as saying.

Somehow I never thought of Reynolds as the demure type. Ever since reading about the episode, I've been trying to picture in my mind the scene in Scavullo's studio.

I see Reynolds tentatively emerging from the dressing room in a heavy terry cloth robe. He spots Scavullo, who is tinkering with the lights, and quickly backs back inside.

He Gets Cold Feet

"It's okay, Mr. Reynolds," Scavullo calls. "I'm almost finished. We'll be ready to shoot as soon as you're in position ... Mr. Reynolds? ... You can come on out now."

Scavullo goes to the dressing room door. Trying the knob, he finds it locked. He raps and says, "Mr. Reynolds? Are you still in there?"

There is a long silence. Then a small voice from inside says, "I can't go through with it."

"You can't back out now, Mr. Reynolds. It's too late to line up another model."

The door slowly opens and Reynolds peers out. "Have you tried Henry Kissinger?"

"He won't be available until the January issue."

Reynolds again hesitantly steps out, clutching the robe tightly to his chest.

"Good boy!" Scavullo says encouragingly. "Now if you will stretch out over there on that couch we'll be through before you know it."

Something is Wrong

Scavullo gets set behind his camera, but suddenly straightens up again.

"I thought something was wrong. You've still got on your bathrobe."

"Do I have to take the robe off?"

"Of course. Didn't Mrs. Brown, the editor, tell you she wanted you to pose in the nude?"

"Yeah, but I guess I didn't

Taxpayers Can Lose Deduction Without Records

AMARILLO — Taxpayers can lose a $750 dependency exemption if they don't keep good records of their support for dependents not living with them, Elton W. Davidson, administrative officer of Internal Revenue for the Amarillo area, said today.

Failure to have good records cause taxpayers to lose a $750 dependency exemption if they don't keep good records of their support for dependents not living with them, Elton W. Davidson, administrative officer of Internal Revenue for the Amarillo area, said today.

Davidson said that of the five tests that taxpayers must meet to satisfy the legal requirements for claiming another person as a dependent, the one taxpayers find most difficult is the support test.

To satisfy the support test, you must show what it cost to support your dependents for the year and how much of this you provided. It's naturally more difficult to gather such records for a child who does not live at home, or for a parent or another relative in another city, than it is for the dependents living with taxpayers.

Close relatives including children, grandchildren, brothers, sisters, parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles do not have to live with you to qualify as dependents.

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

At this time of year, for the past two years, Texas has been near the peak of an epidemic of influenza-like illnesses. While no great upsurge has been recorded this year, influenza-like illnesses, similar to Type B influenza cases in other states, are being reported in small towns throughout Texas. Most victims are school children.

Normally, the big metropolitan areas are first to report outbreaks to the State Health Department. Often an increase in illness is reflected in an upswing in visits to emergency rooms of big city hospital clinics. The State Health Department is informed of many diseases through a weekly reporting system employing city and county health officers.

So far in Texas for the 1973-74 winter season, reports of influenza-like diseases have been about normal for the season. During January, for instance, the weekly average of reported influenza-like illnesses was just under 2,500, building to a high of 3,370 cases the last week. Then, for the fifth week of the year, the number increased to 5,140 cases.

While the rise may be significant, it is far below the more than 25,000 cases at the end of January, 1972. Whether the cases move to the big cities cannot be foreseen, but health authorities hope that they won't.

Outbreaks of influenza, predominantly Type B, have been reported by the Center for Disease Control in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Tennessee, Georgia, Minnesota, Iowa and Oklahoma. The characteristic symptoms are fever, sore throat, cough and headache.

Outbreaks in Texas were first reported following school closings in Brady, Plainview, Mineral Wells and Meridian. Higher than average school absenteeism was reported in more than a half-dozen other communities at about the same time. The number of affected schools has increased.

The prevailing symptoms in Texas have been fever, cough, sore throat and running eyes.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas — If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss... and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss... but is really growing hair.

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are sick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair... now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc. will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation. (Adv.)

Nixon And Inflation

President Nixon told the nation in his recent state-of-the-Union message that there would be no recession in the U.S.

Then he announced his budget for the coming fiscal year was $306.4 billion which is $9.4 billion more for spending than the government will collect in 1975.

We realize the figures in the billions of dollars are meaningless to American tax payers simply because such huge sums cannot be visualized, but it works out to about $100 additional debt for each of America's 52 million families.

What might be amusing were it not so tragic is that the budget proposed by the President is presented as a budget to fight a recession. His way of fighting a recession is to promote inflation.

One thing the American tax payer should get most clear in his mind is that there is little difference between inflation and a recession when it comes to the individual's personal lifestyle and his efforts to prepare for his own future.

A recession in the economy means layoffs at industrial plants because there is a slowed market for the goods and services. As layoffs occur, spendable income diminishes and this further slows the economy. It creates a sort of domino effect.

Uncontrolled inflation can create the same effect. When politicians put more paper money into circulation without additional productivity, prices for goods and services will skyrocket.

The political approach to that problem, of course, is to establish wage and price controls. What that means is that some bureaucrat tells the working man that he may be paid only so much, regardless of how productive he may be. It tells a business it may charge only so much regardless of how excellent its product may be.

This makes it pointless to be more productive and less attractive to increase the quality of a product or to expand a business.

At the same time, to operate the government machinery to control wages and prices, government spends huge sums of money for which nothing marketable is produced, and thus adds to the inflationary spiral.

In this condition, people on fixed incomes tend to be priced out of the buying market. So when the market loses some buyers, businesses close up or reduce their operations which means lost jobs.

The individual without a job experiences "recession" and it matters not whether it comes from a natural slowdown of the economy or from economic chaos created by government spending. A recession occurs for an individual when his spendable income does not provide for his needed goods and services. He might have pockets filled with dollars, but if inflation has diminished the purchasing power of those dollars he finds himself in such an economic bind that his income will not provide him with needed goods and services.

Our readers are aware that their wages are somewhat higher than they were five years ago. But they also are aware that practically everything they must buy costs more. Interest rates for home loans are higher.

Inflation is a fact of life, and Mr. Nixon's budget, no matter what words he uses, will add to the inflationary fire.

SUPREME COURT AND ZONING

Homeowner May Find Zoning Protection Is Just Illusory

By BERNARD SIEGAN
Adjunct Professor of Law
University of San Diego
Law School

For the past forty-six years, the U.S. Supreme Court has refused to consider any case involving local zoning, despite a great many appeals submitted to it. The Court has in all decided only three zoning cases: the first in 1926, upholding zoning in principle and in the following two years, deciding one for and one against municipalities.

Now at long last, the court's silence on zoning will cease, but unfortunately only in a literal sense. The issue it has accepted for review provides an interesting commentary on judicial priorities. The court will not be considering all the many zoning issues that have plagued the country these many years, including the deprivation of property rights and the exclusion of much housing and many people from localities.

Instead, the case to be considered belongs more on the feature than the front page. It is an appeal by a small village in New York State, Belle Terre, of a decision involving a provision of its zoning ordinance that forbids occupancy of homes by anyone other than traditional families or more than two unrelated persons. When the Village sought to apply it to six students living in a home, this provision was held unconstitutional as a violation of the equal protection clause of the Constitution by a 2 to 1 vote of a federal court of appeals. It over-ruled a district court which had upheld it as lawful.

None of the students is related and each occupied one of the six bedrooms in the home, paying a portion of the rent. The students sued the Village to prevent it from enforcing the ordinance, claiming that they constituted "one family."

The Village consists of approximately 200 homes and is zoned exclusively for single family dwellings. Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union represent the students, and a CAUSE CELEBRE is under way which, even if the students win, will probably still leave the court largely silent on such more vital matters inherent in zoning.

Considerably more at stake in this case is the extent to which the equal protection clause of the Constitution will control the lives of people. Many inequalities obviously exist in our society, and some would like to see the judiciary substantially reduce them. The Supreme Court over the years has tried to accomplish this by extending the protections of the equal protection clause.

However, to move much further in that direction would give great power to the judiciary in the affairs of a representative society, and courts are neither endowed nor empowered to control society. Judicial authoritarians are no better than any others. Because most of the present justices have shown themselves to be leary of extending the clause, a decision favorable to the students in the Belle Terre case on the basis of equal protection is most questionable (although there is nothing more hazardous than predicting constitutional decisions).

Regrettably, a decision against them might be interpreted as an affirmation of existing zoning practices. If or when zoning is laid to rest by the judiciary, it should be done through other provisions of the Constitution more appropriate for that function. One should always be cautious about the side effects of any remedy.

The case points up one of the main problems of zoning; that it tends to be self-defeating because it is unable to respond to consumer demand. There are countless examples where the existence of single family zoning prevents owners from using their land to build other forms of housing. It is rare that enough zoning is available in any area to provide adequately for the housing needs of those who want or can only afford to rent.

Constitution more appropriate for that function. One should always be cautious about the side effects of any remedy.

prevent them from satisfying their basic needs, and housing is surely one of these. Nor is any law necessary to achieve the objectives of homeowners to retain single family purity within their surroundings. These desires can be reasonably accomplished through the use of restrictive covenants, private legal declarations by which all land in a subdivision can be restricted for use exclusively for homes (about which I have said much in a prior column). Being of private origin, these covenants are usually imposed only within subdivisions, leaving unsubdivided land elsewhere to satisfy other needs and desires.

The homeowners in Belle Terre did not require zoning to protect their interests; restrictive covenants were adequate. Moreover, because they involve a private rather than a public undertaking, covenants may better withstand legal attack. The lesson of this case is that for both economic and legal reasons, the homeowner who depends on zoning may find his protection illusory.

The Exorcist: God And Devil Struggle For You

By PAUL HARVEY

It's amusing when TV's Flip Wilson grins and says, "The devil made me do that!"

It's terrifying when the child victim in the movie, "The Exorcist," screams, "The devil made me..."

The demonic possession of humans is not something Hollywood invented. It is quite as old as the Old Testament.

Jesus exorcized demons. Clergymen of the 1970s, Catholic and Protestant, can relate experiences very similar to those chronicled in the book and shown with such ghastly realism in the movie.

Frequently, in their counseling clergy experience supernatural manifestations which they are reticent to discuss from the pulpit.

The fallibility of the movie rating system is brought sharply into focus when a naked human breast keeps children out while across the street they are admitted in to see the gangrenous soul of a little girl.

In every city where "The Exorcist" has been shown, some youngsters have fled the theater screaming — many into hospitals; some are under restraint as a result of that terrifying graphic portrayal of demon possession.

The Church of England has 20 priests who carry out exorcist rites. The Rev. Mr. Neil-Smith has performed 2,000 exorcisms in the last five years.

The vicar concedes that one in 20 who seek his help is suffering from a too-vivid imagination, but the other 19 he considers to be genuinely possessed by evil spirits.

Once an ex-priest came to him, said he had been dabbling in "black magic" and asked the vicar to perform the ceremony of exorcism.

"As I raised my hands above his head," the vicar says, "I felt the spirit being transferred from the ex-priest to me. It was a strange, terrifying experience."

Chrome Boycott Adds Up To USSR Profits

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — The detente-obsessed State Department is exerting heavy backstage pressure on the House Foreign Affairs Committee to report out a bill that would restore Russia's monopoly of the U.S. supply of metallurgical chrome — vital in the production of planes, missiles and other key weapons.

The measure was unobtrusively approved several months ago by a Foreign Affairs subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., and the State Department is vigorously trying to force consideration by the full House.

Forcefully resisting this undercover drive are a number of House leaders — foremost among them Reps. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, chairman of the Administration Committee and a ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and Robert Sikes, D-Fla., Appropriations subcommittee chairman.

Both are scathingly blasting the legislation as a highly profitable windfall to the Soviets.

Says Hays: "The only thing this bill will do is force us to buy chrome from Rhodesia, which will get it from Rhodesia and charge us an exorbitant price for it. The Soviet Union has been getting chrome from Rhodesia for a long time and totally disregarding the United Nations sanctions."

Sikes, making the same charge, declares: "While the UN sanctions were in effect, we paid a costly premium for chrome, much of which was trans-shipped from Rhodesia through Russia to the U.S. at a handsome profit to the Russians. It makes no sense to put an embargo on ourselves. It makes no sense to pay a costly premium out of the pockets of the American taxpayer. Yet that is exactly what this legislation will do if enacted into law."

The State Department's detente-motivated bill would repeal the measure put through Congress by Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., in 1971 abolishing the punitive UN embargo against Rhodesia. The department strenuously opposed Byrd's precedent-setting legislation.

Sponsors of the State Department's repeal bill are two leading supporters of the detente policy — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., and Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., chairman of the Foreign Affairs subcommittee that quietly approved the measure.

Fraser, an ardent McGovernite and, like Humphrey, an ultra-liberal and zealous internationalist, is now head of the New Left Americans for Democratic Action.

Outcome of the tense backstage struggle over this little-noticed but far-reaching legislation will be decided in the House.

After a long battle and strenuous lobbying, it was rammed through the Senate last December in the closing days of the 1973 session. The State Department is now aggressively trying to repeat these tactics in the House.

Directly zeroing in on that Rep. Sikes bluntly warned that if the bill is to be defeated, that will have to be done in the House.

"It has already been approved by the Senate," he pointed out, "so if we are to prevent the reinstatement of sanctions imposed by the UN, which had adverse and highly costly effect upon our country and which would serve no useful purpose whatever, we will have to do it in the House."

"We must have no illusions about exactly what this legislation does. Under it, we would again become dependent on Russia for our chrome supply. I know of no nation on earth that would cut off its supply of a vital and strategic material from a friendly country and place itself at the mercy of an enemy country for essential defense metals. Yet that is exactly what this measure will do."

"It makes no sense to punish our friends and reward our enemies. It makes no sense to place ourselves in a position of dependence for chrome on Soviet whims. The House of Representatives must make forcefully clear to the UN and to the world that the United States knows how to place its own interests above the interests of others."

Just how lucrative the UN embargo was to Russia is graphically shown by the following:

Prior to these sanctions — put through by the votes of the Soviet bloc, black African and Arab countries — Rhodesia was the largest U.S. source of metallurgical chrome. This country has no production of this indispensable ore needed for the manufacture of military aircraft, missiles and nuclear submarines.

Following the embargo, Russia became the principal U.S. supplier, with exports soaring to 60 percent of this country's chrome requirements. Simultaneously, the price skyrocketed from $30 to $72 a ton.

In 1961, the year Senator Byrd's measure repealing the sanctions was enacted, Russian shipments amounted to more than 400,000 tons — an increase in cost to U.S. taxpayers of more than $15 million.

Columnist Goes Out On Limb And Predicts 'Things To Go'

By VIC GOLD

WASHINGTON — Readers over 30 may recall that Drew Pearson, whose diaries are newly published, would close his Sunday evening radio commentary with a list of what he called "Predictions of Things to Come."

Sounds risky, but it really wasn't. Pearson claimed 90 percent accuracy in his predictions, which beats Jimmy the Green hands down. But then, who was taking or giving points on Pearson's soothsaying? No, the political pundit buried his mistakes in the potter's field of public forgetfulness. But the sports prognosticator's boners pursue him into next season.

In any event or augury thereof, I've been encouraged by reading the Pearson diaries to risk a few predictions of my own. With any luck, they'll either be proven accurate or else forgotten in the months to come.

Prediction No. 1: Leon Jaworski will resign as Watergate special prosecutor by June 1974.

Prediction No. 2: William Saxbe, as a result of resignation or White House pressure, won't be Attorney General by the time the fall elections roll around.

Pearson made his predictions take -em -or -leave -em. Being new to the business, however, I'm game to explain why I believe Jaworski and Saxbe aren't long for Washington. But first, as Pearson would do whenever one of his predictions came to pass, let me remind you: although my prognostication record in other areas is less than perfect, I haven't done badly for seeing trouble along the Saxbe-Jaworski front.

"The Saxbe-Jaworski team in the end must be Richardson-Cox revisited," I wrote Nov. 6, shortly after their appointments. "Either they will go or (Nixon) before them."

Remember, those words were written at a time when the President and White House staff were oozing congeniality about their eagerness to cooperate with the new Watergate prosecutor. The trouble with Archie Cox, insisted the White House, was that he had taken off on a political fishing expedition in demanding documents and tapes.

Now, four and a half months later, the White House has shut Cox's replacement off from material he requests, claiming executive privilege and charging — guess what? — a political fishing expedition. Leon, meet Archie.

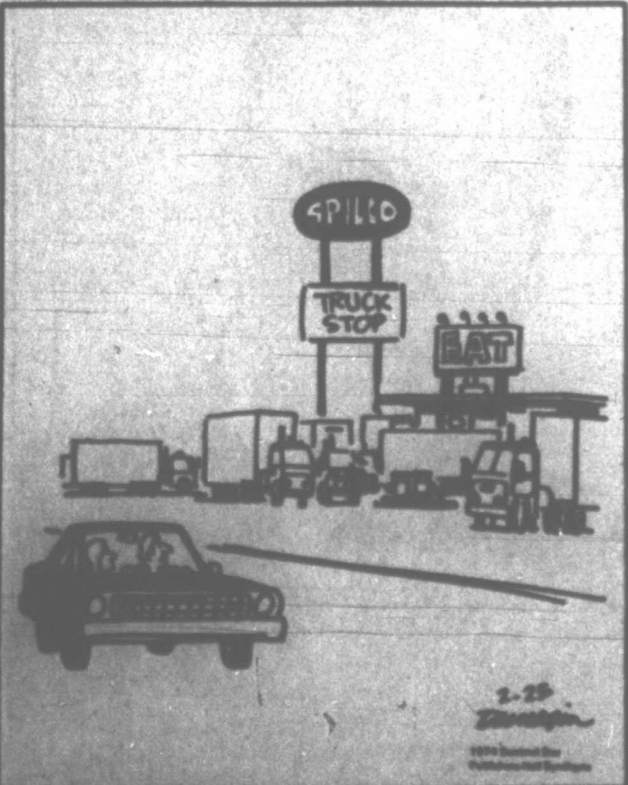

The predicted final act of the Jaworski scenario: he will look to Congress for effective weaponry to pierce the Nixon shield, but to no avail; he'll be frustrated in his efforts by the White House; and will strike back in the only way left open. By walking out.

What will happen at that point? A gusher of congressional speeches and editorial denunciations, to be sure. But the White House has heard all that before, and a Nixon still survives. The votes for impeachment — conviction just aren't there. The President hasn't outwitted his enemies. Only outwaited them.

Now, about William Saxbe. He will depart for reasons not necessarily connected with the Watergate investigation. And again, indulge a small measure of "I told you so." From the time of his appointment, this space has argued that Saxbe is temperamentally unsuited for the post of Attorney General at a time when public confidence in our system of justice is at low ebb.

Sin has the habit of running past the red signal before it stops.

1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

These tips must also be reported to the employer.

Q. My wife receives no pay for the charity work she does for a local hospital. Yet she incurs expenses for traveling from home to the hospital, paying for her lunches and hiring someone to take care of the children while she's at the hospital. Are these expenses deductible as charitable contributions?

A. If the hospital is a qualified charitable organization, non-reimbursed out-of-pocket, automobile expenses directly attributable to services rendered to the hospital are deductible as a charitable contribution. Actual expenses or a standard rate of six cents per mile may be deducted. However, the cost of lunches (unless away from home overnight) and babysitting fees are personal expenses and are not directly related and solely attributable to the rendition of charitable services. Thus, they cannot be deducted as a charitable contribution.

Q. My adjusted gross income is $13,000. Can I get the $2,000 standard deduction?
A. No. The standard deduction is 15 percent of your adjusted gross income up to a $2,000 maximum. Fifteen percent of $13,000 is $1,950. This is your standard deduction.

Q. How can I tell whether I should itemize my deductions or choose the standard deduction?
A. It usually will be to your advantage to itemize deductions if you are a homeowner paying interest and taxes; you had unusually large medical and dental expenses during the year; you paid alimony, suffered a major unusual casualty loss or made large contributions to qualified charities. Your tax form instructions contain a formula you may use to determine whether you should itemize or take the standard deduction.

Q. Where can I get information on the tax obligations of operating a business?
A. Stop in at your IRS office or post office and pick up a copy of the "Tax Guide for Small Business" (Publication 534). This booklet, which costs $1.00, will aid you in finding the answer to the tax questions that arise when starting, operating and disposing of a business. The publication is also available by mail from the Superintendent of Documents in Washington, D.C., for $1.25 postpaid.

Price Seeking EDA Aid For Fertilizer Plant

WASHINGTON — Congressman Bob Price, at the request of local citizens from Dumas, is exploring with the Economic Development Administration in Washington whether it may be possible to gain EDA assistance for the establishment of a new fertilizer plant in Moore County.

A 4-member Dumas delegation conducted a series of meetings here last week with federal officials regarding the possibility. Price had arranged for the meetings at the delegation's request.

Previously, Price asked FEO director William Simon whether a natural gas allocation could be dedicated to supply such a plant, which would be producing within a few years, and was later informed that application for such an allocation would first have to be made through the State Allocation Office in Texas.

Price has stressed that farmers in his Congressional District are particularly short of ammonia fertilizer products because of the recent closure of the old Phillips plant at Etter which had produced some 200,000 tons of anhydrous ammonia annually.

The congressman is supporting all efforts to establish new fertilizer production facilities in Northwest Texas.

Price, working with local Moore County citizens earlier, was instrumental in securing EDA assistance to enable construction of the $10 million American Beef Packers plant which will open this summer and employ some 1,100 persons.

The area qualified for EDA assistance due to the sudden and significant unemployment suffered in the area by the closure of the American Zinc Company smelter which employed some 400 persons.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The technical position of the glumora, the former institutions' favorites, is much weaker than that of most other issues," says W.E. Hutton & Co. Recent attempts to sell even a small portion of an institution's equity in a growth-oriented company have found a small demand, it continues. "The values in many stocks are excellent," the firm adds, "but the investing public is confused and indifferent."

Despite the market's upward path this week, accelerated odd-lot short selling indicates "there is considerable skepticism still prevalent regarding the market," according to E.F. Hutton & Co. The firm says the next objective for the Dow Industrial Average should be the 800 area, where "it will meet a downtrend line drawn by connecting its recovery highs of early and mid-January." But it adds that the Transportation Index, often a bellwether, has already penetrated a similar downtrend line and "chances for the industrials doing the same have been considerably enhanced."

Millions to Expo
SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — An estimated 4.5 to 5 million persons will visit this city of 170,000 during a six-month period this summer and fall during the Expo '74 World Environment Exposition. The exposition opens its doors May 4 and closes Nov. 3.

BATTIN' AROUND

Energy Czar Providing Windfall Coupons

By C.R. BATTEN

There has been a lot of talk lately about finding ways of preventing the oil companies from reaping "windfall profits" from the gasoline shortages and rising prices.

Yet, the standby rationing proposed by Energy Czar Simon calls for issuing coupons good for 32 to 35 gallons of gasoline per month for each licensed driver.

Those who do not use all their coupons can sell their surplus for whatever they can get, while those who need more can purchase them for whatever they must pay. This handy method will provide windfall profits for those who have surplus coupons for sale.

Why are windfall profits good for one class and not for another? Those of us who need more coupons may end up paying more in order to purchase the gasoline we need that we would if we allowed the free market to ration the use of gasoline.

If we allowed the free market to work, the profit would go into the pockets of the oil companies, who are the only ones in a position to solve the energy crisis.

As economist Oscar W. Cooley has said, the cure for high prices is high prices, for they provide the funds and the incentive to invest in the exploration and development of new energy supplies — the only possible solution to the crisis.

"Who's Confused?"

"Impending Energy Crisis is Nation's Most Misunderstood Problem," said the headline across the opinion page of the local newspaper. Sure enough, the writer of the column did not understand it either.

Actually, the pre - October energy crisis began in 1968," he wrote, "... when natural gas production peaked.

Now, I don't pretend to be any less confused over the energy crisis than any other writer, but I would suggest that we can date the beginning of the present crisis at least as early as the 1950's, when the federal government first began controlling the price of natural gas at the wellhead.

It is a testimony to the amazing strength of our economy that it has taken the nearly 20 years for the crisis to develop.

Traffic Fatalities

There has been a lot of publicity over the discovery that traffic fatalities have fallen since several states have imposed 55 miles per hour speed limit on their highways — as though the entire reduction in deaths could be credited to the lower speed limit.

In California, where there were 23.5 percent fewer highway fatalities in the first three weeks of January than during the same period a year ago, only 10 percent of the drop occurred on highways affected by the reduced speed limit. The greatest reductions were on highways where the speed limit was already 55 miles per hour or less.

One of Life's Little Irritations: Politicians and bureaucrats who suddenly turn in their long black gas guzzlers in exchange for more modest-sized cars, with plenty of appropriate publicity to show the voters that they are really concerned about the gasoline shortage.

Price Criticizes Actions Of Actress Jane Fonda

Congressman Bob Price of Pampa has raised the question with his House colleagues of just who it is that movie actress Jane Fonda and Tom Hayden are representing as they lobby on Capitol Hill in Washington.

Fonda and Hayden, Price said, have been visiting congressmen to urge an end to all aid to South Vietnam. Miss Fonda has issued broadcasts over Hanoi radio and her husband, Hayden, was a member of the "Chicago Seven."

"Is Miss Fonda's cause made in America, or perhaps, is it made in Hanoi?" Price asks in a "Dear Colleague" letter being circulated to all members of the U.S. House of Representatives.

In his letter, Price quotes from the publication "South Vietnam in Struggle" which is published in Hanoi by the South Vietnam National Front for Liberation. The publication is distributed in the United States only after registration with the Department of Justice under the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

The publication quoted by Price in his letter reports that Fonda has recently been "on a one-month tour of 25 cities of the United States to arouse public opinion into action for the release of the political prisoners in South Vietnam by the U.S. and the Saigon administration and their strict implementation of the Paris Agreement, and the cut-off-of-aid to the Saigon regime by the Congress."

Price says in his letter, "Thanks to the generosity of an accommodating faction of the membership of the House, Miss Fonda and Company have taken up residence in a Judiciary Subcommittee room, courtesy of the United States taxpayers, where Congressional staff personnel will allegedly be educated in the facts of life about American involvement in Vietnam."

Hayden is being allowed to use the Subcommittee room to lecture groups of Congressional staff personnel.

Price concludes his letter saying, "Yes, Miss Fonda and Company have come to lobby the Congress — but lobby for whom?"

Young Men Born In 1955 To Get Lottery Numbers

Young men born in 1955 will have their Selective Service lottery numbers drawn on March 20, even though there is no draft or plans to resume callups for involuntary military service. Col. Melvin N. Glantz, state director of Selective Service for Texas has announced.

The sixth annual Selective Service lottery drawing for the nation's young men who become 19 years of age during 1974 will be held in Washington, D.C. on that date.

"Although the nation is at peace, it is generally recognized that there is the need to maintain a strong defense capability in order to insure continued peace," Col. Glantz said. "The present 'standby' Selective Service system, which continues to register and classify young men, is a vital part of our defense preparedness program."

Texas has approximately 110,000 19-year-olds who will have their lottery numbers established by this drawing, according to Glantz.

The Military Selective

Service Act requires all young men to register with the system at the time of their 18th birthday. They are assigned their random sequence number through the lottery which is held during the year in which they become 19 years of age.

They are potentially vulnerable to induction throughout the calendar year of their 20th birthday; thereafter, each year they are placed in a lower priority selection group.

The President's induction authority would have to be restored by the Congress before these young men could be inducted. The Defense Department has issued no calls for draftees since December, 1972.

In reminding Texas' young men that penalties for failing to register can range to as much as five years' imprisonment or a fine of $10,000, or both, Col. Glantz said that Selective Service has provided ways which enable men to register with minimum inconvenience. In Pampa they can register in the Post Office building.

Alcohol Not Good For Bad Liver

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes cirrhosis of the liver, other than alcoholism? If a person has cirrhosis which is not from alcohol, would alcoholic beverages in moderate amounts be harmful?

Yes, there are other causes: infection by viruses or other organisms, faulty nutrition, obstruction in the duct through which bile should flow, toxins from bowel infections, irritation from certain drugs.

Your second question: the chemical breakdown of alcohol in the system produces an intermediate substance which can add to the liver damage. Hence, no one with cirrhosis, regardless of the cause, should consume any alcohol.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For several years I have been bothered with leg cramps. They started in the calf mostly but now affect my whole leg from toes to the groin. I wonder what causes them and what I can do to stop these spells.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About six years ago I had a wart treated with X-ray for about 15 minutes. It was on the base of my big toe so I lay on my stomach and the doctor said to hold still and he left.

all contribute their share of leg cramps. Remedies therefore include medication, exercises or other means of improving circulation, correction of foot defects (and sometimes footwear), and moderate change in diet.

Your cramps are so extensive I think you'd best get your doctor's help, but for an understanding of simple remedies write my booklet on "How to Stop Leg Cramps." Send 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me, in care of Dr. George C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120 for it.

I didn't know I was alone and as time passed I asked how much longer. I received no answer and turned and saw I was alone and I felt they'd forgotten me.

I could see a nurse through a glass window operating the machine and I called to her but she ignored me.

When the machine was turned off I was too drained to question if she'd read the time wrong. Now I have pains in that toe at night and sometimes they wake me.

Could she have used too much radiation on me? I can't help wondering if I got cancer of the bone or something because of this.

I strongly suspect that you have a severe case of runaway nerves. First of all, for warts and such, the X-ray is not of the penetrating intensity used for deep X-ray therapy. Second, the machine doubtless was not turned on as soon or as long as you thought.

If you had received enough radiation to cause "cancer of the bone or something" in a single exposure, and X-ray burn would have been apparent.

To set your mind at ease, you might best have either your doctor or a podiatrist see if anything is wrong with the toe — sprain, bunion or whatever. But if it hurts only at night, that's rather odd, and certainly doesn't sound like bone cancer.

Note To Mrs. L.F.E.:

Ophthalmology refers to care of the eyes; ophthalmic surgery is eye surgery. An ophthalmologist is a doctor who specializes solely in eye care. As to the things you've been told about cataract surgery, they are wrong. Your doctor can clear up your worries in two minutes if you'll just tell him about them.

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung disease, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, requesting a copy of the booklet, "How to Control Emphysema," enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible. Copyright 1974 Field Enterprises, Inc.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Broadway--Out Of Its Mind?

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — Extra! Broadway is going out of its mind. There's a revolution. It'll be on B-Day (B for Broadway), Thursday night, March 5.

We'll see a Broadway stage musical where you can buy beer, hot dogs, hamburgers, potato chips, balloons and sweatshirts. Producer Hal Prince has quietly made over the Broadway Theater at 53rd & Broadway with stalls and a new type of circus atmosphere.

That night he'll "commence" his sexy Voltaire-inspired musical "Candide" with a busty beauty Maureen Brennan and Mark Baker doing some things so unmentionable I mustn't mention them.

"Environmental theater" puts the theater-goer right down in the action. Youngsters will sit on a scaffold, feet dangling over, while having hot dogs. Dress will be optional — jeans, O.K. The historic Broadway, where "Fiddler on the Roof" broke the record, has been cut from 1700 seats to 1,000 to make room for beer and hot dogs.

B-Day will be additionally wild because Zero Mostel opens, the same night, in "Ulysses in Nighttown" at the Winter Garden two blocks away. Shapely Irish actress Fionnuala Flanagan will be giving such an erotic performance that my informants say "Ten years ago everybody'd have been arrested."

No kidding, readers, this may be the rebirth of Broadway. Hal Prince, who has had so many Broadway successes, is bringing "Candide" from the Brooklyn Chelsea Theater, where it was a hit. He's avoided calling it an "opening" so critics won't have to cover two shows in one night. That's a promise to producer Alex Cohen of "Ulysses." The critics will be able to see the "commencing" of "Candide" another night.

Anyway, who would have wanted to make a choice between Zero Mostel — and beer and hot dogs? Even Zero would have chosen the latter.

A blond L.A. secretary, Janet Hammond, 21, who says she thinks she may be Marilyn Monroe's "secret daughter," will appear on the ABC "Marilyn Remembered" TV program with Peter Lawford as host on Feb. 27.

The girl says she is an orphan who was born at the same time Marilyn was in the hospital.

supposedly for an appendectomy, which was not performed. Janet's friends say the voice and physical resemblance to Marilyn is "spooky." It's part of the MM mythology... New duo: Janice Harper and TV caster Lee Leonard.

THE MIDNIGHT EARL... "The Unique Monique" van Vooren had a most successful opening at the Plaza Persian Room — roses thrown at her feet, Ed Sullivan kissing her, Andy Warhol, Franco Rossellini and David Susskind screaming "Bravo" — and her estranged husband Jerry Purcell giving her a party. Connie Francis chose the moment to confirm her marriage months ago to Joe Garzilli of the travel business.

"My father introduced us," said Connie. Monique was so nervous she forgot to credit Peter Jackson who created her act.

Show Biz Quiz: Who played the title role in "The Wizard of Oz"? Ans. to Friday's: Bette Davis, Kim Novak and Eleanor Parker played the lead in the three film versions of "Of Human Bondage."

Buddy Greco sang, played piano and took off some of his clothes (tie, jacket and vest) with enthusiasm at his first-ever Rainbow Grill show. He's an audience-pleaser... Dudley Moore of "Good Evening" will be working for free — just for the fun of it — when he moonlights at Michael's Pub, starting Feb. 26.

(That's the same "salary" Woody Allen gets when he appears there)... Jacqueline Susann and Irving Mansfield turned up the super cocktail party guest of the year for Margaret Gardner — nobody less than Clifford Irving, who was free that evening.

Suzanne Astor of "What's a Nice Country Like You Doing in a State Like This?" (at Jimmy's) tells interviewers that getting the role "has nothing to do with the fact I'm living with the composer." (He's her husband, Gary Hoffman)... Met pitcher Tug McGraw'll be the next athlete to go into the restaurant business.

"I've never had an acting lesson and Bob Altman has asked me not to take any. I never did anything in acting before I met Bob and the whole thing has turned out to be a real adventure for me."

Shelley Duvall, starring in "Thieves Like Us," had been discovered by director Bob Altman in Houston and thus far has appeared in three films and is scheduled for her fourth.

"I haven't even seen a play," Shelley confided, "but while I'm here in New York I hope to see at least one. I never went to plays in Houston and this is only the second time I've been to New York. Before all this happened I had only been in Houston and one trip to Japan."

Shelley brings back memories of movie stars in years past who were found in unusual places as elevators and drug stores by producers and directors looking for the unusual.

"I give a party in Houston, something we often do, and a lot of people come and bring friends. This bunch of guys with dark glasses walked in and I didn't know who they were. One of them came over to me and told me Bob Altman wanted to talk to me. I didn't know him from Adam but I went along with it and He offered me a role in 'Brewster McCCloud' as Brewster's girlfriend.

"I wasn't sure if he was for real or not but I went along with it and sure enough he was for real! I had a great, happy life, but this was something new and exciting for me," Shelley told us.

Altman then cast her in a supporting role in "McCabe and Mrs. Miller." Then came her current starring role opposite Keith Carradine in "Thieves Like Us," a "Bonnie and Clyde" type picture set in the depression thirties. Just released, the picture has Shelley receiving rave reviews as "Keechie," a young woman who quietly, gently supports the man she loves.

"All I could think of when I saw 'Thieves' was my crooked tooth," Shelley said. What she didn't talk about and perhaps never noticed was her eyes which can only be described as large and limpid, filled with great expression. Her flat western voice is just the proper understatement for her role.

"The one thing they didn't have to do," she told us, "was to make up a movie name for me. Believe it or not my name really is Shelley Duvall and the truth is that I never had the remotest idea of going into acting or the movies. I don't know where it goes from here, but it's a wonderful experience."

Where it goes from here is a film to be shot in Tennessee in which Shelley will play a similar role, an innocent, western kind of gal.

In seeing her performances and speaking with her one gets the impression that beyond the natural qualities Shelley has there is a depth of talent, an even deeper depth of feeling for her roles. As her world opens up it is highly possible that in that depth she will find new dimensions for what is a for what is a natural talent for slightly underplaying a role with great subtlety.

"I really don't know where it is with me and acting," Shelley says honestly. "I just know that I'm loving every moment of it now."

Tall, lithe, warm and outgoing, Shelley vowed that she would see her first play. Perhaps she would learn where it is with her acting, see other dimensions of that natural instinct within the girl who never dreamed of becoming a star.

MIAMI (UPI) — Spring training officially has started, or if you want to put it another way, baseball already is beginning to feel the first pinch of the energy crisis.

Sixteen major league clubs are using Florida for spring training and the situation regarding those cars lining up for gas here is the same as it is throughout most of the country.

Few, if any, are exempt from that long, time-consuming wait in line.

It doesn't matter who you are. If you want gas, you wait.

Jim Palmer, the Baltimore Orioles' pitching ace, was talking about the gas shortage at lunch. Grant Jackson, also coming off a good year, one in which he was 8-0 and had a 1.98 ERA, was listening.

Baltimore Celebrity
The other day in Baltimore, before coming down here, I waited 45 minutes in line and that wasn't so bad except when I got to the pump, the lady running the station told me there was no more gas," said Palmer.

"A friend of mine happened to know this lady and about an hour later she filled me up. From the way she talked though, I could tell she thought I was Marty Domres. She said 'just keep throwing those touchdown passes.'"

"Wait a minute," I said, "my name is Jim Palmer. I play for the Orioles, not the Colts, and we won more games in one week than they did all year."

Jim Palmer, the American League's Cy Young winner, MVP runnerup and top-salaried pitcher at $130,000, laughed telling the story.

"Shows you how well known I am in Baltimore," he said.

Grant Jackson laughed too.

Remember Martin
"Don't feel bad," he said.

"Before I signed with the Phillies in 1962, I never heard of any baseball players either. Where I came from, Fostoria, Ohio, I never paid any attention to baseball. I used to love football. Jim Brown was my hero.

"I think Tony Taylor was the first baseball player who ever stuck in my mind and that was because I met him and liked him when I first joined the Phillies. But I never heard of fellows like Warren Spahn or Duke Snider before I got into baseball."

"Four guys come to my mind when you ask me about my first recollection of ballplayers," said Palmer, forgetting the gas crunch temporarily.

"The first one is Billy Martin. I remember coming home from school one day and watching him make that great catch against the Dodgers on TV back in the '50s. I used to love the Yankees, so the guys I remember best are the ones who used to beat them—Billy Pierce, Herb Score and Virgil Trucks."

"Virgil who?" asked Jackson. "Virgil Trucks," said Palmer. "He pitched two no-hitters once in the same season. I think, he gave the Yankees a lot of trouble. You know, being from New York, I used to be slightly prejudiced. I always thought Clete Boyer was the best third baseman and Sam Huff was the best linebacker."

Bald Baseman
"Huff was the best linebacker, wasn't he?" put in Jackson.

"He could've been," said Palmer. "but one of the things I remember is how this best friend of mine kept telling me how Brooks Robinson was a much better third baseman than Clete Boyer. This was in Scottsdale, Arizona, after my family moved there. The Orioles used to train there and the only one my friend talked about all the time was Brooks Robinson. He said Brooks was the best there was. I said 'Brooks who?' That's the truth. I never heard of him before.

Then when I saw him for the first time, I thought to myself who's this guy with no hair? How can he be the best third baseman in baseball?"

In due time, Jim Palmer found out he was.

To this day, there are few things Brooks Robinson can't do with a glove.

One of them though is get gasoline.

Thompson Wins Gleason Inverrary

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The pro golf tour's newest star, 27-year-old Leonard Thompson, has time to think about the money today—$82,000.

The hulking North Carolinian won the country's second richest tournament, the $200,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic, Sunday by a single stroke and said, "I never thought about the money." It was his first tournament victory after turning pro four years ago, although he managed to earn $91,000 last year.

Thompson looked like he was scrambling in the final two rounds over the watery, 7,128-yard Inverrary course. But his Sunday shooting netted him a 68—278, 10 strokes under par. His round included seven birdies and three bogeys.

Seven-year pro Hale Irwin of Kirkwood, Mo., missing a 15-foot birdie try on the final hole which could have thrown him into a playoff with Thompson, finished with a second place 68 — 279 worth $29,640.

Getting a third place $18,640 all by himself was 53-year-old Julius Boros with a 67—280 finish in his first regular tour event of the year.

Defending champion Lee Trevino carded a closing round 69 for a 281 total and set off a ruckus involving two veteran CBS television sportscasters, director Frank Chirkinian and announcer Ray Scott. Trevino claimed the pair cost him the tournament when Scott, relaying a joking comment from Chirkinian, told Trevino at the 17th green they could show his putt on television if he would hold up 20 seconds for a commercial to end.

Trevino was only one shot back of Thompson at the time. He joked with Scott a moment, then missed his 20-foot try for a birdie, leaving it 10 inches short. Without bothering to set up, he then missed the 16-inch putt and took a bogey 5 on the hole. Obviously upset, Trevino then proceeded to bogey the final hole, winding up three strokes behind Thompson.

Tied at 281 with Trevino in fourth place were Andy North with a closing 68, and Jack Nicklaus and young Lanny Wadkins with the best rounds of the day—7-under-par 65s.

First round leader Gene Littler and Roy Pace, who led the third round along with Thompson and Tommy Aaron, tied at 282. Aaron skied to a 75 in the final round for a 285 total.

Thompson said he plays with single-mindedness to get the ball into the cup without thinking about winning or money. After a spectacular 60-yard chip for a tap in par at 17,

Thompson had to do to win was play safe on 18. He knocked his drive behind a tree.

From there, he snaked a low four-iron between trees and on to the back side of the green from where he two putted for par and victory. He said his wife, Lee, was more excited than he when he telephoned her at their home in Lumberton, N.C.

IN PLAINVIEW

Dunnam Pleased With Harvesters

Pampa finished sixth in the nine-team Plainview Invitational Track Meet, held Saturday at Wayland Bowl in Plainview, and, according to Pampa coach Scott Dunnam, "Overall, we performed real well."

The meet opened the Harvesters' 1974 season and Dunnam was encouraged following the meet. "I was really pleased with the mile relay team and Noel Hansen did an outstanding job in the half mile. (Steve) Mathis did an outstanding job. He had water on the knee the whole meet," said the Pampa coach.

The Harvesters' mile-relay team, consisting of Chuck Quarles, Hansen, Mathis and Howie Lewis, finished second with 3:39.7 which was 1.5 seconds slower than Lubbock High 3:38.2. The Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen picked up third with 3:39.9, but won the overall meet.

Hansen gave Pampa its only first place, winning the 880 with 2:03.3. Deanne Lewis of Pampa placed fifth with 2:13.0. Mathis came in second in the open quarter with 52.8, which was two-tenths of a second behind Lane McNamara of Monterey.

Pampa's sprint-relay team, made up of Quarles, Mathis, Robert Yeager and Rick Leverich, came in fourth as did Mike Taylor in the high hurdles.

"Our field events are real weak. Also in the mile I thought we would do better — David Putnam is going to do better. And we're weak in the sprints (100 and 200)," said Dunnam.

One bright spot for Pampa was sophomore David Kitchens, who runs the mile on the B-team. Kitchens ran a 4:59 in the meet to win the division. Garland McPherson won the B-team pole vault with 10-6.

Golfers Place 13th In Andrews Meet

ANDREWS — Pampa shot a two-day total of 669 and finished 13th in the 22-team (AAAA division) Andrews Invitational Golf Tournament Friday and Saturday here.

San Angelo won the tourney with a 617, ahead of Odessa Permian, 621; Lubbock Monterey, 631 and Amarillo Tascosa, 631. Monterey and Tascosa used their fifth man's score to break the tie and the Plainsmen came in third by one stroke.

Pampa's two-day breakdown was 335-334. "It was a terrible, dusty day Saturday. The winds were gusting about 30-35 miles an hour," said Pampa golf coach Deck Woldt.

Pampa's individual scores were Randy Watson, 84-77 — 161; Wiley McIntire, 78-94 — 162; Mickey Lowe, 88-85 — 173; Scott White, 85-88 — 173 and Joel Hickey, 92-94 — 186 (dropped).

Medalist in the tourney was Randy Waterhouse of San Angelo with a 158. Mark Mattingly of San Angelo and Mark Moore of Tascosa also had 159's but lost out in a playoff.

Plainview and San Angelo tied for the team low-ball championship with 132's.

"We made double and triple bogeys that cost us sixth place. We figured it out on the way back. We could have shot 630 without the double and triple bogeys. I think potentially we should be shooting around 530 or less," said Woldt.

The second round of district play will be held Friday at Southwest Golf Course in Amarillo. The third round will be held March 8 at Huber Country Club in Borger. It was originally scheduled for Pampa, but the sprinkler system construction at Pampa Country Club is forcing the change.

Pampa shot a 324 Tuesday in the first round of district play in Amarillo and is 25 shots behind Tascosa (299).

Austin Wins Cage Title
Austin edged Travis, 24-23, as Jim Agan got in eight points, to win the sixth-grade championship in the Optimist Club Basketball Tournament finals Saturday night at Harvester Fieldhouse.

High for Travis, coached by Paul Adair, was Tommy Laycock with nine points. Austin is coached by Malcolm Douglas.

In the consolation finals in the sixth grade, Lamar, coached by Bob Lowrance, nipped St. Vincent's, coached by Dewayne Cosgrove, 30-29. Dewayne Avery scored 10 to lead the winners while Mark Hungerford of St. Vincent's led all scorers with 17.

In the fifth-grade championship game, Ronnie Chase's Mann dunned Dean Davis' Wilson, 20-16, behind Robert Chase and Eddie Guerra with eight apiece; Bruce Thames led Wilson's scorers with six.

In the fifth-grade consolation championship, Lamar stopped Austin, 39-19, as Ronnie Faggin poured in 18 points. Steve McDougal led Austin with 10. Lamar is coached by Paul Sims and Austin by James Lee.

Sixth-grade sportsmanship trophy winner was Mann, coached by Gene Brown, and the fifth-grade recipient was Wilson.

MUST WIN LAST 2 Longhorns Getting Nearer To Crown

By United Press International
The Texas Longhorns, having accomplished something no other team will in the Southwest Conference this season, now have only two less than awesome obstacles preventing them from completing their improbable success story.

Texas, tied with Texas Tech for the conference lead going into the final week of play, needs only to defeat Arkansas and Baylor—to finish with 5-7 league marks—to grab at least a share of the SWC title.

In reaching this stage of the campaign the Longhorns have won in the three toughest places to win in the conference this year—at SMU, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.

It is possible that the only conference game each of those three teams will have lost at home when the season is over will have been to Texas.

And all this from a club that won only one game in a 12-game non-conference schedule.

The Longhorns enjoyed their biggest week of the season during the past seven days—beating Texas Tech and Texas A&M on the road.

Texas enters the final two games of the season with the same 9-3 conference record owned by Texas Tech. SMU still has a hope—a game back at 8-4.

Shelby Metcalf watched his Texas Aggies blow a 15-point lead in the first half Saturday night and finally fall to the Longhorns, 88-81. He could merely shake his head.

"Just to look at them they don't look that good," Metcalf said of the Longhorns. "They get an awful lot out of their people. You don't know how they do it."

"They are good players, but Harry Larrabee and Larry Robinson have got to win their good nights for them to win."

Larrabee and Robinson, of course, had good nights against A&M, since they got together for 60 points.

Tuesday night's schedule among the contenders finds Texas hosting Arkansas (5-7), Texas Tech visiting TCU (2-10) and SMU hosts Rice (4-8). On Saturday afternoon Texas Tech must entertain SMU in a regionally televised biggie and Texas travels to Baylor (5-7) that night.

If Texas Tech and Texas finish tied, they will share the championship and will meet in a one game playoff to determine the conference's representative in the first round of the NCAA tournament, to be held March 9 at Denton.

The SWC playoff game would probably be held either March 5 or 6 in either Dallas or Fort Worth. If Texas should stumble and SMU beat Tech, bringing about a three-way tie, then SMU would represent the league because their last appearance in the NCAA predates that of either the Red Raiders or the Longhorns.

Bruins Start New Winning Streak With 2 Victories At Home Court

By United Press International
What's wrong with UCLA? Nothing at all.

The Bruins, who've won nine national titles in a row, proved that their last weekend in Oregon was just a temporary aberration.

They clobbered Washington 99-65 Saturday night after blasting Washington State 93-68 Friday night. That ran their latest winning streak to two straight.

John Wooden, the UCLA coach, tried to be cautious. "I may be getting senile but I was never confident that we would win the NCAA. I said we had as good a chance as anyone—and we have."

"Every game from now on is sudden death as far as we are concerned."

Keith Wilkes, playing his final home game for UCLA, scored 31 points in the triumph over Washington. "I think we're over our slump," Wilkes said, "the other two national titles don't mean anything to me at this point. There's only one goal. That's to win this year."

Praises UCLA
Both Washington State coach George Raveling and Washington coach Marv Harshman picked the Bruins in the March 9th rematch with Southern California in the L.A. Sports Arena after they lost to the two teams last weekend.

Raveling said, "UCLA is still the best team in the nation."

Harshman: "I would have to put my money on UCLA in a game between those two."

And you'd have to put your money on UCLA to repeat as national champions, too.

Southern California, which is ranked ninth and is now tied with the Bruins for the Pacific Eight lead, beat Washington 79-64 and Washington State 96-59 over the weekend.

It's now taken for granted that the March 9th battle between the two teams will decide the Pacific Eight crown and a trip to the NCAA tournament.

Ron's 30-Ft Jumper
UCLA and USC play California and Stanford this weekend in preparation for that showdown which is the regular season finale for both clubs.

Elsewhere among the top 10 over the weekend, only Vanderbilt and Pittsburgh were in the loss column. Eighth-ranked Pittsburgh had its 22-game winning streak snapped by Penn State 66-64 and the fifth-ranked Commodores fell prey to neighboring Tennessee, 59-53. Top-ranked North Carolina State survived a minor scare to down Clemson 80-75; No. 2 Notre Dame crushed West Virginia 108-80.

Capital's walking wounded returned to the front Sunday to prime the bullets for their final month of regular NBA action.

Phil Chenier, sidelined the past week by a pulled hamstring muscle, ripped the Detroit defense for 14 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter as Capital posted a 94-84 victory over the Pistons.

The return of Archie Clark, out three weeks with an elbow injury, also allowed Coach K.C. Jones to relax some of those tense bench muscles. Clark tallied 13 points.

Detroit, led by Dave Bing's 18 points, grabbed a 51-43 halftime lead, but Capital forged 19 unanswered tallies midway through the third period to take the lead for good.

In other NBA action, Boston beat Atlanta, 111-96; Milwaukee rapped Kansas City-Omaha, 100-93; Los Angeles surprised Chicago, 100-90; Houston mauled Portland, 133-115; Cleveland topped Phoenix, 101-97, and Seattle whipped Philadelphia, 115-105.

Celtics 111, Hawks 96
John Havlicek scored 32 points as Boston defeated Atlanta for the fifth straight time this season. The Hawks, playing without Lou Hudson (hip contusion), received a 25-point effort from Pete Maravich.

Bucks 106, Kings 93
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, held to eight points in the first three quarters, scored 11 in the final period for the Bucks. Lucius Allen carried the Milwaukee attack with 31 points. KC-Omaha lost center Sam Lacey with a knee injury midway through the third stanza. Jimmy Walker led the Kings with 26 points.

Lakers 100, Bulls 90
Gail Goodrich scored 28 points and Happy Hairston added 24 as Los Angeles closed to within 1-4 games of idle Golden State in the Pacific Division. Bob Love scored 23 points for the Bulls as they lost their third game in the last 19 starts.

Rockets 133, Trail Blazers 115
Houston hit 56.5 per cent of its floor shots and gained a 52-37 rebound margin as Rudy Tomjanovich led the assault against Portland with 28 points. Calvin Murphy added 24 and Mike Newlin had 22. Geoff Petrie topped the Blazers with 23.

Cavaliers 101, Suns 97
Three points by Lenny Wilkens and Dwight Davis' two foul shots, all in the last 27 seconds, paced Cleveland's win over Phoenix. Wilkens led the Cavs with 19 points, while Keith Erickson and Neal Walk each scored 22 for the Suns.

SuperSonics 115, 76ers 106
Seattle received rare balanced scoring from its starters as all five hit in double figures. Spencer Haywood led the Sonics with 37 points. Philadelphia, mired in the Atlantic Division cellar, was led by Tom Van Arsdale's 28 points.

Bob Talks To Writers Without Saying A Word

By United Press International
Bob Gibson, never noted for his fondness of sportswriters, came prepared to the St. Louis Cardinals' training camp this spring.

Gibson, the 38-year-old veteran right-handed ace of the Cardinals' staff, reported to camp Sunday, worked out briefly Sunday, and then left a sign on his locker designed to answer any questions the writers might ask him:

"In case I'm not here," the sign said, "knee feels bad. Weather doesn't matter. Arm doesn't feel too good yet. None of your damn business."

The ready-made answers were in, in order, reference to (1) and (2) his recent knee surgery, (3) how much he'll be able to affect where the Cardinals might finish (4) his recent divorce.

Owners Meet To Pick Site
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — National Football League owners were expected to make a final determination on the site of Super Bowl IX the first order of business today when they open their annual winter meetings.

The world championship game was awarded to New Orleans last April, but labor problems have hampered work on the ultra modern multi-million dollar Super Dome.

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle visited New Orleans last week and was to report to the owners this morning.

If the Super Dome is not ready, the game probably will be switched to Los Angeles. Miami is the site for the 1976 game.

The owners also are expected to decide on expansion and their status in negotiations with the players association. Four cities—Seattle, Tampa, Phoenix and Memphis—are considered the leading choices should the league decide to expand from its present 24-team format.

PPROA Head Protests Proposal By Stevenson

The president of the Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association has issued a statement protesting a proposal by U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson that would increase federal jurisdiction over oil and gas industry operations.

Jack M. Allen of Perryton said the proposal by Stevenson, which would grant the Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over interstate sales of oil and gas, would only further deplete the ranks of the independent oil and gas producers.

Allen's complete statement: "We are vitally concerned about future prospects for independent producers of oil and gas. Due to uncertainties as to price structure of both oil and gas and as to type and degree of government regulation, it is becoming impossible for independents to project future plans.

"After 20 years of non-workable controls on interstate natural gas prices, Sen. Stevenson now proposes to grant the Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over interstate sales. There exists today only a small fraction of the number of independents who were in the business 20 years ago. Further encroachment of non-responsive federal bureaucracy will only further deplete the ranks of independents who are responsible for more than 80 percent of all new oil and gas discoveries.

natural gas await discovery if the price structure will permit. Today's discoveries for the most part are deeper and far more expensive to find than prior fields. Today's FPC area rate prices will not economically justify deeper and more costly exploration.

"The wellhead price of gas averages 17 per cent of the burner-tip price to consumers. Immediate decontrol of wellhead prices would permit natural gas prices to rise to prices competitive with other fuels. Since over 80 per cent of the burner-tip costs are for transportation and distribution, a doubling or tripling of wellhead prices does not mean the same percentage increase at the burner-tip. A free market is essential to encourage new gas discoveries.

"Sen. Jackson seeks to roll back and completely control the price of domestic oil. Increased costs of finding same are not taken into consideration in this simplistic political proposal. Price controls on oil will only serve to reduce exploration as has been the case in natural gas exploration the past 20 years. This approach certainly will not result in additional oil discoveries.

"Various legislative proposals exist to eliminate depletion, cut back intangible drilling expense deductions, tax so-called excess profits, form a government oil and gas corporation and many other proposals which would be detrimental to independent producers — and which can only discourage additional exploration activities which must be increased.

"This country must have independents who find the bulk of new discoveries. It must also have major companies to help find, to refine and to market oil and gas. The majors must and somehow will survive today's proposed punitive measures by ultimately passing such costs on to the consumer. Independents who do not possess refining and marketing facilities do not have the means to pass on such costs.

"When the ranks of the independents have been depleted as they surely will be in absence of a free market, we will have only a few excessively regulated or nationalized domestic companies plus foreign governments to rely on for essential energy. This will be a complete disaster.

"The time has come to cease playing politics with the nation's energy problems and to restore free-market conditions which alone can cause the necessary activity to bring about self-sufficiency. Independents must not be eliminated from business because a few major companies with foreign and integrated operations made 1973 profits in excess of those made in leaner years."

Eastern Europe Worried At Abortion Rate

BELGRADE (UPI) — As much of the West gradually drops slightly but doctors said it was not due to increased use of contraceptives but because the clinic decided to keep the patient in hospital for three days after the operation. Many teen-age or unmarried women chose to go to other hospitals which they could leave only hours after the operation.

In Yugoslavia and Hungary doctors and politicians have called for measures to combat "abortion epidemic" and Poland, Bulgaria, Romania and Czechoslovakia have all taken steps to reduce the easy availability of abortion.

Only the Soviet Union remains firm in its policy of free abortion almost on demand. For health reasons Russian doctors normally limit abortions to two or perhaps three a year for one patient but some women are known to have had half a dozen or more.

A Yugoslav health official said: "Our abortion rate has reached epidemic proportions especially among teen-agers. And we are not alone in Eastern Europe. We must put the brakes on until our level of contraceptive education is high enough to permit a progressive attitude to pregnancy termination. Just in Serbia (the largest of Yugoslavia's six republics) we have 80,000 abortions a year."

Hungary's Problem
Belgrade's main gynecological clinic registers an average of 10,000 abortions yearly compared with about 7,000 live births. During the past 12 months more than 2,000 Belgrade girls aged between 13 and 18 underwent abortions in clinics. Doctors estimated the number of back street abortions for this age group as about the same or greater.

Last year the number of abortions at the main clinic dropped slightly but doctors said it was not due to increased use of contraceptives but because the clinic decided to keep the patient in hospital for three days after the operation. Many teen-age or unmarried women chose to go to other hospitals which they could leave only hours after the operation.

Hungary has the most serious problem with the average annual number of abortions running well over 200,000, giving the 10.5 million population nation the highest abortion rate in the world.

This year, following a long campaign by the government and health authorities, measures have been taken to tighten the conditions for abortions which could previously be obtained almost on demand. Family allowances have also been increased between two and three times.

Poland Needs Manpower
One of the main motives for the new measures in Hungary and the call for even stricter curbs has been a falling population rate — a problem shared by Romania, Bulgaria and the Soviet Union.

Predominantly Catholic Poland also faces a manpower shortage in the next 10-15 years and is tightening up on abortion which was made legal in 1956.

A law currently in the Polish parliament will allow a woman to have an abortion only within the first 12 weeks of pregnancy when her material situation is difficult.

Although moves to tighten up on abortion usually go hand in hand in Eastern Europe with efforts to stimulate the birth rate, authorities are increasingly realizing that this is not the best way to achieve population growth.

Better Housing Needed
During a parliamentary debate on abortion, Polish deputy

Francisek Burian said: "The experience of other nations shows that illegal abortions are dangerous for women and restrictions on abortions never increase the birthrate. The only way to increase a birthrate is to improve housing conditions."

Many officials admit that cramped living conditions have in the past made easy abortion a necessity in Eastern Europe, where contraceptives are not always readily available, sex education is often lacking and a family of four living in two rooms is common in cities.

Nevertheless Romania and Bulgaria, both of which suffer from all these problems in urban areas, have taken a tough line on abortion to combat their falling populations.

In Romania abortion is now forbidden except in special cases and anyone receiving, performing or arranging an illegal abortion faces from two to five years in jail. Official sources said that antiabortion controls may be stepped up further to deter backstreet abortionists.

Penalties Eased
In Bulgaria anti-abortion measures have been taken since the population started falling but illegal abortions have increased during the past three years. The toughest measures — including jail terms, heavy fines and forbidding doctors and midwives to practice — were passed in March 1973 to widespread public protests from doctors and sociologists.

The penalties were eased six months later by allowing abortion for unmarried women, divorcees or widows. The easing was prompted by the large number of fatalities among women trying to perform abortions on themselves or without qualified help. Otherwise, medical sources said, the campaign against abortion is being strictly maintained.

Contraceptive education was stepped up in Czechoslovakia in the mid 1960's, birth control pills are readily available and young married couples have been granted increased family allowances and birth bonuses. Women must pay for abortions according to their means. Abortion is legal only within the first three months of pregnancy for health reasons or economic hardship.

New York Dolls--A Gang 'That Plays Instruments'

By WILLIAM P. OPPEL
DALLAS (UPI)—On stage, the New York Dolls look like five drag queens. But drummer Jerry Nolan says they are actually more akin to Leo Gorcey & the Bowers Boys. "We're more like a gang that plays instruments," Nolan says. "We're not just a band, we're a gang. Like the Dead End Kids of today."

The New York Dolls are one of the few rock bands to come out of New York City and the first since Andy Warhol unveiled the velvet underground more than five years ago.

They dress in tight satin with outrageous ties and hats and their outfits are becoming the uniform of New York City's chic set. Their mode of dress has leaped across the country to Los Angeles where the Sunset Boulevard discotheques are trying to rival the dolls and their followers in outrageous fashions.

It's Like Liverpool
"New York right now is having its most widespread appeal," Nolan says. "New York right now is like Liverpool was in 1963, fresh, new, raw."

The Dolls recently completed a nightclub swing through America's heartland to see if the latest music from the sidewalks of New York actually has that much appeal.

"Anyone can identify with New York music if they let themselves," Nolan said. "There are some people in New York that can't identify with it. We just did Houston and that's one of the most behind-the-times towns I've ever played in, but yet a lot of people there dug us. They knew what was going on. Of course, some didn't."

"I'm not sure they always understand what we're saying," Bassist Arthur Kane said. "We come from entirely different backgrounds. Most of our songs are about New York City and the frustrations and the fall of the empire and all that stuff. The music rocks out and maybe they don't understand all the words. That's why it's good to have the record out so they can hear the words."

Not Hot Musicians
The New York Dolls are not accomplished musicians and they admit they do not contribute to any art form.

"It's a job," Nolan says. "We want to make a buck. We want to make a living and have a future. This isn't just a game, but it's also a party. The idea is for you to come and see us play, not just to see us play but to come and have a party first. We're the entertainers. We're the hosts. We'll entertain you. That's it."

But to come and be real serious and see Arthur play like Jack Bruce or want to see (lead guitarist) Johnny Thunders play like Eric Clapton, well it will never happen.

"We care nothing about technicalities. We don't wear our instruments in a holster. This is strictly party and don't bother coming if you want to get involved."

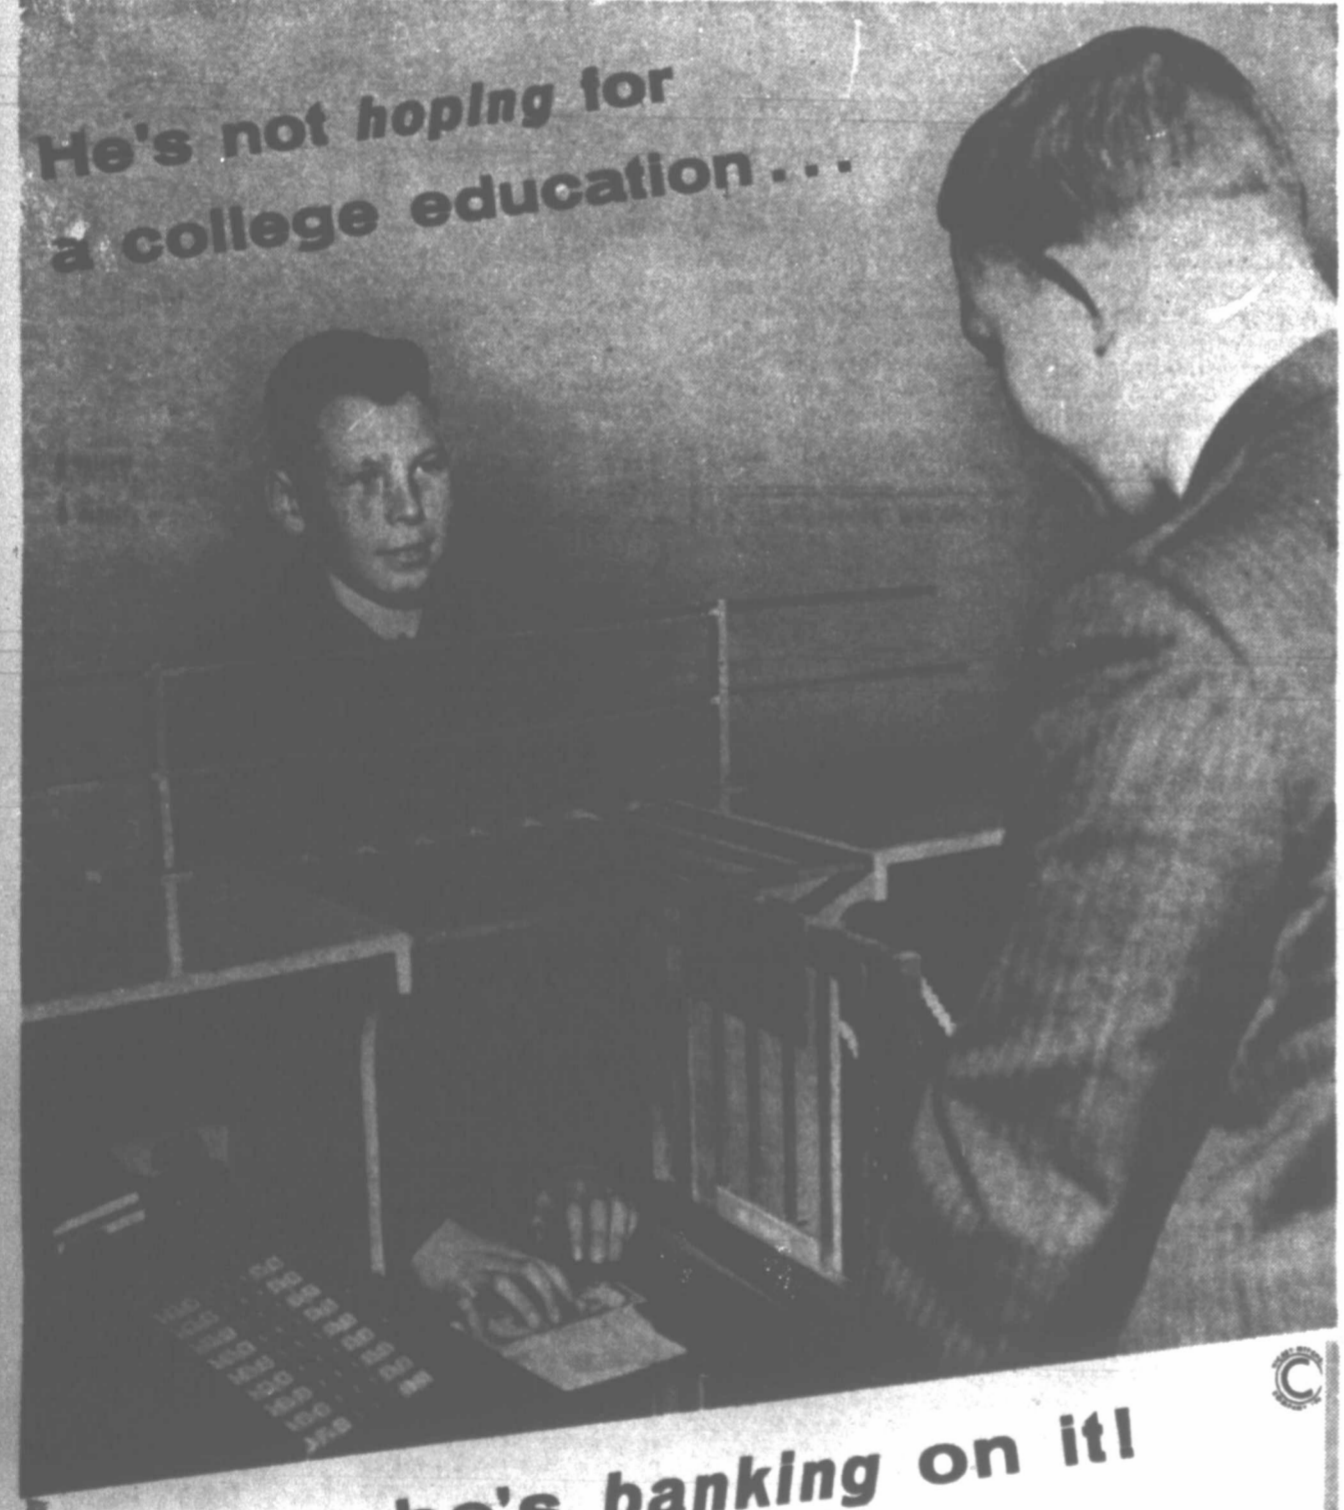

Likes TV Show
Between shows, Nolan watches the "Leave It To Beaver" hotel television and drinks malt liquor, every once in a while toasting a can to a pair of girls sitting off to one side. He wears a black body stocking, a lime-yellow body vest and a small chip on his shoulder.

"I came from a pretty tough neighborhood in Brooklyn," he says. "You had to kick a lot of butts to prove yourself. Between 7 and 13 I was the toughest kid in my gang. But at 13 everybody started getting bigger than me. The buddies that I used to beat up were beating me up."

"So I have to look for something else to prove myself. So I picked up on music. I joined rock and roll bands, started looking good, started copping that profile. It was a way to express myself, beat out my frustrations and not hurt anyone."

Dislikes Violence
"It was the first time I had experienced not hurting anyone. I didn't like to hurt anyone. But I had to in my neighborhood. So I didn't have to hurt anybody no more. And I can get just as much attention. And be noticed just as much."

Being noticed means a lot to Jerry Nolan and the New York Dolls. He said one of his most satisfying experiences was walking into a large New York department store and overhearing another customer ask the salesman for clothes that "would make me look like the Dolls."

He's not hoping for a college education...

he's banking on it!

Most newspaperboys are banking part of their savings for higher education. Even if you can easily afford to send your boy to college, you might consider this—the boy who works and saves for part of his education is the boy who will get the most out of college. He'll appreciate Pop and the checks from home more if he's already had a taste of earning money by working himself. And while his route profits are important, this is only one of a number of reasons why so many of today's successful men encourage their boys to get the benefit of Newspaper Route experience—including service, salesmanship, collections and record keeping.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

... it tells you how

Maple syrup time is fast approaching once again and, as I've mentioned before in this column, you don't even need to tap sugar maples to harvest some of this delicacy. Any variety of maple will do and prospectors out in the western reaches of Canada even make a lip-smacking sweetening by boiling down the sap of birch trees.

The diagram here shows you how to inexpensively tap a tree or two with splines made from a cut-off bean shooter or a four-inch length of green alder-berry stem with the split pushed out. Pick trees at least 10 inches in diameter, collect each day's flow in the late afternoon and figure on a total of 15 to 30 gallons of sap—which will boil down to one-half to one gallon of syrup—per tree.

And here's extra good news for the fast-food year! One of MOTHER's readers, George R. Lightsey, has found that he can— to a large extent—let Jack Frost concentrate the sap collected by the Lightsey family.

"Put the raw juice into empty milk cartons," says George, "and place the containers outside at night. Bring the frozen blocks into the house the next morning and, after about one-third of each chunk has melted, drain off the liquid and throw the ice away. Refreeze the concentrated sap the next night... and the following morning allow about half the ice to melt before you save the liquid and discard the solid remainder. It will then take relatively little boiling to condense the fluid you have left into golden, delicious syrup."

For more specific information on backyard maple sugaring, including further details about the Lightsey "freeze-concentrate" method of condensing sap, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS, in care of this paper. Ask for Reprint No. 173, MAPLE SYRUP!

Truck Drivers Disregard New Law On Speed

AUSTIN — Many truck drivers are apparently disregarding the 55 mile per hour speed limit law recently enacted as a fuel conservation measure according to an informal survey conducted by the Texas Safety Association.

"Truck drivers, as the professionals of the highways, have an obligation to set good examples for motorists," R.F. Miller, vice president for traffic safety, Texas Safety Association, said today and added: "persistent violation of the 55 mile per hour speed limit by trucks will encourage operators of private passenger cars to ignore the law thus compounding the fuel wastage."

"I realize that slower speeds lengthen travel time but this is not just true for truck drivers, it is true of all of us who travel in order to make a living.

"The traveling salesman working on commission will make fewer calls because of slower speed limits but both the traveling salesman and the truck driver will be able to continue traveling and earning a living because of fuel made available as a result of the new speed limit," Miller concluded.

The safety official also noted that the new 55 mile per hour speed limit, if obeyed, could result in the savings of an estimated 500 lives this year in Texas.
