Spring Starting Creeping Return To Pampa Area

Spring began to move slowly back into the Panhandle this morning following the chill weekend. The low cloudiness and fog which prevailed in Pampa this morning had nearly disappeared by 11 o'clock, but the temperature was still very wintery—like at 33 degrees.

Cloudiness in the area was expected to further decrease this afternoon with the thermometer reaching the low 50s.

Forecasts call for continued warmer Tuesday and the rest of the week. The high tomorrow is supposed to be around 60, with partly cloudy skies.

Tonight's low is predicted slightly below the freezing mark. Yesterday's high was 43 degrees and the low this morning 23.

Winds were to continue southerly today and tonight at 20 mph and gusting.

The wintry blast which dropped temperatures so low in the Panhandle over the weekend reached far into Texas, causing ice on bridges downstate that was blamed in the deaths of several persons.

In UPI reports:

It was cloudy across the eastern half of Texas with a few showers along the coast and over East Texas as the cold front moved eastward across Arkansas and Louisiana.

The National Weather Service forecast clear to partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures over the rest of the Lone Star state.

Ice developed suddenly Sunday morning on bridges and overpasses from Abilene-San Angelo eastward into the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

A 12-car pileup blocked traffic on both lanes of East R. L. Thornton Freeway in Dallas and other multiple pileups occurred to the east on the same freeway before a thaw set in. One Fort Worth fireman was injured when a fire department car piled into the rear of a fire truck.

Temperatures dropped into the teens in Dalhart and 10 at Amarillo—and spread through all of the state but the extreme Lower Rio Grande Valley by dawn Sunday. But by early afternoon most of the freezing weather was confined to a triangle formed by Abilene, Mineral Wells and San Angelo.

Steven R. Hyer, 23, an Indianapolis truck driver who was crushed to death in Fort Worth as he swerved his furniture van in an attempt to avoid a 10-car pileup on West Freeway.

North Korea Asks For 'Peace Talks'

TOKYO (UPI) — North Korea asked the United States today to begin negotiations on a four-point peace settlement of the 1950-53 Korean war. It said South Korea would be excluded from the talks.

"We formally propose to the United States of America to discuss the question of replacing the existing military armistice agreement with a peace agreement," said North Korean Foreign Minister Ho Nam.

Ho's proposal was endorsed by the Supreme People's Assembly, the North Korean Parliament. It also approved the text of a letter requesting peace talks to be sent to the U.S. Congress.

The North Korean foreign minister's proposal was broadcast by North Korea's official KCNA news agency Monday and monitored in Tokyo.

Ho put forward a four-point peace proposal appeared to have little chance of adoption by the United States because they called for withdrawal of American military forces from Korea and for an end of the United Nations' sponsorship of U.S. troops stationed in South Korea.

Ho's proposals were: —The United States and North Korea should exchange mutual pledges of non-aggression and America should stop assisting South Korea. The future of the country would be left to the Koreans.

—Importation of arms and war supplies into Korea should be stopped.

—The United Nations designation should be taken away from American troops in Korea and they should leave South Korea as soon as possible.

—After American troops are withdrawn, no foreign country should have military bases in Korea.

The United States and South Korea fought a standoff war with North Korea and China for control of the Korean peninsula in 1950-53. The fighting ended in July, 1953, in what has been called "the world's longest armistice."

North and South Korea remained divided roughly along the 38th Parallel, as they were before the start of the war.

Jaworski Grants Nixon Extension On Subpoena

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski today gave President Nixon four more days to respond to Jaworski's subpoena of more White House materials related to Watergate.

Jaworski had filed the subpoena March 15. Nixon was to have responded to it today.

Hearst Ransom Food Giveaway Resumes Today

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Urging recipients to "bring shopping carts," a revamped and expanded $2 million Hearst food ransom giveaway resumed today to try to convince Patricia Hearst's kidnapers to free her.

Responding to bitter criticism from the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers, Patricia's father, Randolph Hearst, urged volunteers of the grocery giveaway to shut down—for 17 days, as it turned out—and try to meet their demands.

The latest distribution was the fifth since Patricia was kidnaped seven weeks ago and the SLA demanded the distribution as a "good faith gesture." It took place at 17 outlets throughout the San Francisco Bay Area.

"Bring shopping carts or something to carry the food," Kramer said.

He said the program "now has a quality food to distribute," thus meeting a major complaint of the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnaped Patricia, 20, from near the University of California at Berkeley where she is enrolled as a coed.

The food program is financed by Randolph Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner, in an effort to finally free his daughter who was abducted Feb. 4.

After the kidnaping, the SLA demanded Hearst give $70 worth of food to all California's poor, even before negotiations for his daughter's release could begin.

But the giveaway as originally set up came to an abrupt halt two weeks ago after the SLA kidnapers labeled it only "crumbs for the people. They termed some of the free food as "hog feed" and "unfit for human consumption."

So far, about $1 million worth of food has been given to 120,000 persons.

But Jaworski said that at the request of Nixon's Watergate attorney, James St. Clair, he had delayed the deadline to Friday.

Jaworski said that although he had agreed to the White House request for a delay, he felt he had to publicly reemphasize the need "for material covered under this subpoena."

Jaworski's action came after Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, declared that "the time for conciliation is at hand," and urged that House investigators and the White House both "give a little" on demands for 42 presidential tapes.

Neither Jaworski nor the White House revealed what additional material he sought in the subpoena. On Feb. 14, Jaworski told James O. Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, that the White House refused to give him additional material to assist his investigation. He had asked for 27 documents.

Nixon also has refused to surrender 42 tapes and documents that the House Judiciary Committee is studying the possibility of impeaching Nixon. He has said it is necessary for its investigation.

The White House has said the committee wants to conduct a "fishing expedition" into confidential presidential files.

During a televised appearance in Houston Tuesday, Nixon hinted he might refuse to honor a subpoena from the House committee, but he made no mention of Jaworski's subpoena which had been served on him five days earlier on March 15.

Baker urged Sunday that there be a meeting of the minds between Nixon and the Judiciary Committee on the 42 tapes.

"If there is any reasonable claim that those tapes or any other documents are relevant, I think the President ought to give them," said Baker. "That would better serve the institution of the presidency and certainly the country."

However, the Tennessee Republican said the House Judiciary Committee ought to "honor whatever reasonable requests the President makes, such as the presence of counsel in the principal deliberations and investigations of the committee."

Lawyers for former presidential aide H.R. Haldeman and Gordon Strachan, both Watergate defendants, said Sunday they did not plan to appeal to the Supreme Court today an appeals court ruling that the House Judiciary Committee must receive a sealed grand jury report purportedly dealing with Nixon's handling of the Watergate cover-up.

Both men had until 5 p.m. today to make their decisions.

The committee, inquiring into possible grounds for impeaching Nixon, is considering sending a subpoena to the White House if Nixon does not surrender them voluntarily, and Nixon has said he will not because many of them are not relevant to the investigation.

"The time for conciliation is at hand," said Baker in an interview on CBS' Face the Nation. He said there was a "compelling responsibility on the part of the House and the President to give a little... otherwise he'll have a terribly, terribly unpleasant experience regardless of the outcome."

Lawyers for Watergate defendants H. R. Haldeman and Gordon Strachan plan to let pass a 5 p.m. deadline today for appealing to the Supreme Court a ruling that a sealed Watergate grand jury report be turned over to a House inquiry into the possible impeachment of President Nixon.

Simon Stresses Need For Fuel Saving Proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans should have more gasoline for summer vacation driving but they will have to conserve fuel by observing the 55 m.p.h. speed limit and curtail use of their air conditioners.

In presenting this prospect Sunday, energy Chief William E. Simon also predicted increased gasoline supplies would bring higher prices because of the resumption of imports of expensive Arabian oil. He said they would go as high as 75 cents per gallon in the northeast.

Interviewed on ABC's Issues and Answers, Simon said motorists must carry on with conservation measures such as slower driving, less use of automobile air conditioners, and not making unnecessary trips.

Sunday was the first Sunday since January that gas stations were permitted to remain open and Simon said this—coupled with the ending of the Arab's oil embargo—might lull some Americans into minimizing the depth of the energy shortage.

The United States, Simon said, had demonstrated it could conserve fuel, and had avoided the school closings, industrial shutdowns and the economic slump that some had predicted last fall.

Dean's Testimony Expected In Trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — Testimony from John W. Dean III, onetime White House counsel, is expected to be the key to the prosecution's case against former Nixon cabinet officers John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans.

The federal conspiracy trial of the former attorney general and former commerce secretary gets underway again today after an adjournment of four days because of the illness of an elderly woman juror, Mrs. Violette Humbert.

If she has not recovered, U.S. District Court Judge Lee P. Gagliardi probably will replace her with the first alternate juror, banker Andrew Cho, who has heard all the testimony in the five-week proceedings.

Dean, who was to start his testimony when Mrs. Humbert became ill, is an undicted co-conspirator in the case.

Mitchell and Stans are accused in 10 counts of conspiring to block a Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco in exchange for a secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign and lying to a grand jury about it.

The previous 24 government witnesses have failed to back up the government's charge that Mitchell, who ran the Nixon Campaign Committee, and Stans, chief of the campaign's finances, attempted to impede the SEC probe of Vesco.

William Casey, SEC chairman at the time, testified flatly last week that neither defendant ever asked him to fix the case.

The judge has disclosed that he ordered the government to turn over a transcript of the tape of Dean and Nixon discussing the Vesco case. Dean told the Senate Watergate committee that the tape was made Feb. 28, 1973, the day after a Vesco associate told SEC investigators that the $200,000 campaign contribution had been made.

'WE'VE MADE OUR POINT'

Attorneys Reject Appeal For Grand Jury Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawyers for two Watergate defendants say they will not appeal to the Supreme Court today a decision giving the House Judiciary Committee a secret grand jury report on President Nixon's handling of the scandal.

The lawyers for H.R. Haldeman and Gordon Strachan said Sunday "We figure that we've made our point," and thus plan to let a 4 p.m. CDT deadline pass for taking a U.S. Appeals Court decision to the Supreme Court.

Nixon's lawyers had not objected to the committee getting the secret report for its impeachment inquiry, but John J. Wilson and John Bray—lawyers for Haldeman and Strachan—contended that its transmittal to Capitol Hill would result in news leaks that would preclude their clients getting a fair trial.

"We're through," said Wilson, who had indicated after the Appeals Court verdict that he was disinclined to go to the highest court.

The lawyers' decision meant the committee would get the report, probably sometime today. It consists of a two-page index and a "bulging briefcase" presumably filled with materials dealing with Nixon that the grand jury collected in its exhaustive 18-month investigation of Watergate.

Bray said he intended—"first thing in the morning"—to inform the committee. Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and the Court of Appeals that the report can be released any time. The documents are in a safe in the office of District Judge John J. Sirica.

The cases of Haldeman and Strachan are in no way connected, but Wilson had said that since he had been working closely with Bray, he would join any appeal by Bray. Late Sunday Bray announced he would not appeal.

The Court of Appeals Thursday by a 5-1 vote upheld a decision by Sirica that the committee needs the grand jury report to make a thorough investigation of whether grounds exist for Nixon's impeachment.

On March 1, the Watergate grand jury indicted Haldeman, Strachan and five other close Nixon associates or campaign officials for

Henry Visits Moscow

MOSCOW (UPI) — American Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Communist Party Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev opened talks today to pave the way for a Russian visit by President Nixon. Brezhnev optimistically predicted agreement this year on a new Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) agreement.

That was expected to be the main issue in the three days of talks to try to sort out differences on arms, trade and the Middle East that have cooled the detente between the United States and Russia.

Both men were in an expansive, bantering mood when they entered the Kremlin room where the Soviet Politburo meets every Thursday.

Asked about the prospects for a SALT agreement this year, the target date set by Nixon, Brezhnev replied:

"I take an optimistic view on that. We have made a very good beginning on that process. The further we proceed from the date of the first SALT agreement in 1972, people will really appreciate the importance of that significant step."

"That document speaks of peace and good neighborliness because the only other alternative is war. There is no other alternative."

When Kissinger entered the room a moment later, Brezhnev told him he had been talking to the press. "I told them I was optimistic and they agreed with me that all went peace. That makes it easier to start."

Brezhnev also expressed the opinion that "relations at this point (with the United States) are good. 'You do want it better, don't you?' a newsman asked."

"There are such people who would like to see things worse," Brezhnev replied.

Kissinger arrived Sunday night for an expected three days of talks with Brezhnev and other Soviet officials. The major issue before them is the SALT negotiations that are now stalemated in Geneva.

Kissinger said he also would discuss the controversy in the United States over trade with the Soviet Union and his Middle East diplomacy.

Earl Wilson

Why is it, asks Bobby Vinton, that letters with checks in 'em take longer to arrive than those that contain bills? The late Joe E. Lewis used to insist that he never had a drink before noon, "but fortunately it is now noon in Thailand." A busy executive told an aide, "I have to make a speech on the Ten Commandments—give me a short resume of them." (For more laughs see Earl Wilson on Page 10.)

Fall Kills Oil Field Worker

GUYMON, Okla. — James M. Odom, 22, who came to the area last fall to work in the oil fields, fell 90 feet to his death early Sunday while working on an oil rig 13 miles northeast of Guymon.

A spokesman for the Texas County Sheriff's Department said Odom apparently fell from the rig's derrick when he lost his balance while attempting to work a drill collar. His safety belt was not fastened, reports said.

The rig is owned by the Loman and Johnson Drilling Co. of Liberal, Kan., officers said.

The victim was a Marine veteran, having served in Vietnam.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Maude Odom of Garden City, Kan., and two half-brothers, Ronnie Culbertson of Guymon and Cary Belnap of Woods.

UPI Strike In Second Week

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first strike by domestic editorial employees in the 67-year history of United Press International entered its second week today with no indication when negotiations might be resumed.

Mainly About People

The County 4-H Contest will be held at 7 p.m. Friday in the Courthouse Annex.

The Jane Long Home Demonstration Club will meet Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in the Flame Room, Pioneer Gas Building. The program will be on learning to crochet.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Combs of Levelland visited in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Combs of Lefors, this past weekend. Also visiting was Mrs. Billie Jinks, their daughter, of Amarillo.

The negotiating committee for the Wire Service Guild, which represents more than 900 domestic newsmen, photographers and editors, Saturday rejected a new wage offer Saturday that would have increased the minimum salary for top editorial employees by $55 in a three-year contract.

Federal mediator George V. Byrne has recessed the deadlocked negotiations between UPI and the Guild with no indication when he would try to get the two sides together again. Both sides said they were willing to meet at any time Byrne called them together.

Leaders of the New York unit — the Guild's largest chapter — called a meeting today to discuss the offer.

8 Persons Die In Firebombing In Pennsylvania

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — "It was horrible," said Mrs. Conchita Belasqua, 21, who lives next door to what was the Caboose Bar. "I could smell the burning flesh."

Randy Frits, another neighbor, said the victims "weren't charred, they were steamed." The skin was falling off the victims as firemen brought them out of the taproom in this eastern Pennsylvania industrial town.

The horrible spectacle was the firebombing of the bar at 4:22 p.m. Saturday.

Eight persons died, five are still in critical condition and two others are in a serious or guarded state. Three other patrons, a fireman and a police officer were injured but not hospitalized.

Forty-five minutes after the firebombing, Ernest J. Burton Jr., 24, a local man, surrendered to police.

Burton was arraigned on eight counts of murder, 10 of attempted murder, 10 of aggravated assault and battery and one count each of risking a catastrophe.

School Board Plans Meeting

Correction

It was erroneously reported in Sunday's edition of the News that participants in yesterday's March of Dimes all had pledges from sponsors of 20 cents per mile for each mile of the 15-mile course completed.

Some walkers had pledges of from a nickel a mile to two or three dollars per mile, it was reported today. The News regrets the error.

Drugs, Syringes Taken In Burglary

Police are investigating the burglary of a Pampa doctor's residence Friday in which a quantity of drugs and several syringes were taken.

Among the drugs stolen were single bottles of demoral, talwin, valium, librium and placydil. Entry was made into the residence through either the front or back door, both of which were left unlocked while the doctor and his wife were not at home.

Calvin John Cockrell, 17, is free on $500 bond following his arrest Friday by Pampa police for possession of marijuana. The bond was set by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford and Cockrell made it Sunday.

Jerry Bowers Oliver, 33, remained in Gray County jail this morning after he was arrested Saturday afternoon for carrying a prohibited weapon, a pistol.

His bond has been set at $2,500 by Justice of the Peace E.L. Anderson.

Around 1:30 a.m. Saturday, a Pampa police officer on patrol was stopped by a motorist and advised there was an overturned automobile in Hobart St. Park.

The officer went to the park and found a 1968 Oldsmobile on its top, reports said, with a large amount of blood on the interior of the car. No one was in the car.

A motor vehicle registration check revealed the car belonged to Dale Scott Carter of Canadian. He was later contacted and he told police he had been run off the road by an unknown vehicle. His car was reported to be a total loss.

G.B. Hooper, 2301 Rosewood, reported the theft of a water pump from his property sometime last week. The 300-pound pump is valued at $300.

Inter-City Meeting Set By Rotarians

An Albuquerque, N.M., author, Col. Wilfred McCormick will address the inter-city meeting of the Pampa and Berger Rotary Clubs at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Frank Phillips Junior College cafeteria.

A former district governor of Rotary, McCormick will speak on "Could Billy the Kid Have Been a Rotarian — and Why?"

Long active in community affairs, McCormick has written over 50 books, all still in print. His first book was published in 1948.

He has been a featured staff member of many writers' conferences and at the largest in Corpus Christi he was twice voted "the speaker most wanted back."

Nearly 300 of his students at the University of New Mexico have sold their literary material to a wide variety of magazines and publishers.

McCormick is listed in "Who's Who in America," "Dictionary of International Biography," and "Royal Blue Book of Leaders in the English-Speaking World." He is also a fellow in the International Institute of Arts and Letters.

The House Doctor

By HERMAN BAUM
Dear House Doctor:

Please offer a suggestion for an indestructible wall covering. The bedroom occupied by my two small boys was originally wallpapered. In less than a year, they have made a wreck of it.

At the suggestion of a paperhanger, we installed a wall covering. This has suffered the same fate. Marking the walls seems to be the way they amuse themselves while lying in bed.

ANSWER — I must admit that I am all out of tune with the modern child psychologists. In my youth, the corrective measure was packaged in the back of my mother's hairbrush, and indestructible wall coverings were not necessary.

The wallcovering that I suggest for this room is tempered hardboard, which is applied as wall paneling. It is available in solid colors as well as wood grain patterns.

This can be installed as a wainscot. Later, when there is no further need for the protection, the hardboard can be removed and any damage to the wall caused by the paneling can be repaired with a spoonful of spackle. Installation is so simple, that if you are handy with tools, you can do the work yourself.

Hardboard panels measure 8 feet by 4 feet. If you select a solid color, the long dimension can be placed horizontally. Wood grain panels must be cut in half and installed as four four-foot panels so that the simulated wood grain would be vertical.

Metal fittings may be used for finishing the top and corners, although the only one you must have is the cap. Wood molding is available for both inside and outside corners, if you prefer.

The cap is nailed to the wall first. The distance from the top of the baseboard to the inside of the cap must be 4 1/8 inches. When the cap is in place, the panels are pushed up into the cap, then dropped into place on top of the baseboards. The bottom is held in place with small wire brads.

If the dividers are not used, it may be necessary to use wire brads along the edges where the two panels meet. A colored wax material is available for covering nail heads and closing any spaces that appear between adjacent panels.

OUTPATIENTS' CLINIC
Mrs. W.T.D. — The party wall in your condominium apartment can be soundproofed by erecting a new wall adjacent to but not touching the existing wall, and with insulation packed between the two.

R.H. — The material with the self-adhesive backing that was placed over the table can be removed with trichlorethylene. If you cannot find it by its chemical name, try using Carbona.

J.A. — Empty a box of baking soda down your garbage disposal to remove any objectionable odor.

HEATING REGISTERS
Dear House Doctor:
Two registers for hot air heating system in one room fell off. The screws for attaching them were in the plaster around the edges of the ducts, and this has crumbled so that the screws do not hold. What is the remedy?

—Mrs. M.A.
ANSWER — Rake out the crumbled plaster and stuff steel wool into the spaces. You can then drive the screws into the steel wool. You could replace the plaster, but the above is the easy way.

LEAKING CELLARS
Dear House Doctor:

In our new home, we are using the basement temporarily for a bedroom. During recent heavy rains, water leaked into the area. This leak was where the floor and concrete block wall meet. How can we prevent this happening again?

—E.R.B.
ANSWER — This leak should be repaired with hydraulic cement. A groove is cut into the floor and wall and this is filled with the cement.

We have just completed a new leaflet that shows how to handle this and other cellar leak problems. A copy is available by sending 15 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The House Doctor in care of The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Bulletin No. C-58. Please be sure to place a stamp on your return envelope.

PEELING PAINT
Dear House Doctor:

My asbestos siding house was painted with oil paint. Later, I painted it with latex paint and this is peeling badly. What should I do now?

—T.H.H.
ANSWER — Latex paint frequently peels when applied over oil paint. Latex paint is satisfactory for this siding, but oil paint is not recommended. Now, you have no choice except to repaint with latex paint and continue to touch any spots that peel.

MOSS REMOVAL
Dear House Doctor:
Some time ago, you stated in your column a method for killing moss that grows on a brick walk. I do not remember your suggestion, so would you please print it again.

—Mrs. S.J.P.
ANSWER — Moss can be killed by sprinkling the area with a mixture of 1 1/2 ounces of copper sulphate dissolved in a gallon of water. In time, the moss will dry and can be swept off. This solution will kill any other vegetation that it touches, so be extra careful when applying it.

TO CLEAN A FLUE
Dear House Doctor:
There is a fireplace in the basement of the home we recently purchased. The former owner used to burn cigarette butts and paper in it. I understand that soot in the flue can be a fire hazard. How do we clean it?

—L.O.
ANSWER — Soot, in dangerous amounts, may form inside a flue when soft coal or rosin-saturated pine wood is burned. There should be no objectionable amount of soot formed by burning cigarette butts and paper.

If you prefer to clean the flue, place a straw and a brick in a burlap bag. Tie a rope to the bag and lower it several times down the flue from the roof. Seal the fireplace opening with paper to prevent soot coming into the room.

East German Gains
BERLIN (UPI) — East German gross national product rose by 5.5 per cent in 1973, the government announced. Industrial production rose 6.8 per cent and labor productivity went up by 5.8 per cent.

Smoke Rings
BONN (UPI) — Government figures show that the number of cigarettes smoked in West Germany in 1973 remained approximately the same as in 1972, despite a known drop in smokers. An industry spokesman explained this by saying "the continuing smokers are smoking more."

Weak in Writing
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Studies show that 3rd, 6th and 9th grade students in Florida are generally good in arithmetic and reading, but get poor ratings when expressing their ideas in writing.

COUNTRY MUSIC

By PATRICK CARR
Things have certainly been popping in Nashville lately.

Porter Wagoner and Dolly Parton are going their separate ways.

Burt Reynolds is in town, with his pants on, making a movie about... what else? — country music, and if all that isn't enough to keep tongues wagging from Nashville to Memphis, the latest word on the fate of the Ryman Auditorium surely will.

But more on that later.

Since Porter and Dolly announced their amicable parting, Music City has been perking over who Porter's next partner will be. The announcement had barely been made public when talent agents from New York to Hollywood were burning up the wires with the names of their clients who, to hear them tell it, look like Dolly, sing like Patsy Cline, have a heart of gold, were raised in the Tennessee hills, and have been playing guitar since they were four days old.

Relaxed Search
Porter, in the meantime, is conducting his search at a relaxed pace while the world waits breathlessly. After all, his singing partners just get better and prettier.

First he discovered Norma Jean, and guided her into a 'booming career. When she left to get married, Porter found Dolly. The rest is history. Now Porter is going to top that record is a burning question.

Reynolds' New Movie
Now, what's Burt Reynolds doing? He's making a movie called "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings," the saga of a 1950s Georgia country band who are trying to "make it" in the music business.

Several Nashville talents will have leading roles. Jerry ("I've Got The Crude Oil Blues") Reed, and Don ("Amanda") Williams will play the parts of two members of the band. Conny Van Dyke will play Reynolds' girlfriend, Dixie. Kenny Price will appear as a taxicab driver as soon as they find a cab with an extra-large front seat. The film's producers have approached Ernest Tubb about a role, but Ernest is waiting to see the final script.

Lasandered Script
The movie has certain "sex scenes" and there was a flap about some raw language. Reynolds reportedly lauded the script as a result and refers to it now as his "Walt Disney movie."

"It's the cleanest one I've ever done," he told reporters. "And I don't know if I'll do another one." Reynolds, of course, will play "W.W." But can he sing?

Save The Ryman
Good news from the White House? What could that mean? Well, in Nashville it means that there's a chance the federal government might be persuaded to designate the Ryman Auditorium, home of the original Grand Ole Opry, as a national landmark, saving it once and for all from the wrecker's ball.

People were starting to worry that the fate of the Ryman would be forgotten, and left to chance — what with all the other things going on in town — until a White House aide named David Wheat, who hails from Texas and admits to being a country music fan, entered the drama.

Said Wheat: "We're just at the start of trying to explore this thing and see if, from the public interest standpoint, there should be some sort of consideration for saving the building."

A National Monument?
He was uncertain, it was reported, about whether the government would want to take over the Ryman as a national monument (not a bad idea), or merely finance a state or local take-over. However, the city of Nashville apparently couldn't assume that role if it wanted to.

National Life (the National Life and Accident Insurance Company, owners of WSM and the Ryman) has done a lot for the city and I'm sure they'll do what's right in this case," one Metro Council member said.

But it kind of disturbs me that legally, we don't have any control over keeping a wrecking ball from tearing down the Ryman."

If you're interested in saving the Ryman, even if you've never stood in line for hours waiting to see your favorite country star perform on a Saturday night, it might be helpful to drop a line to Tennessee's Sen. Howard Baker, the Finance Committee of the Metro Council, or even the White House — they'll probably love the idea of getting mail on a topic other than Watergate, impeachment, or the oil shortage.

He enjoys Christmas thru the entire year

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For the last two years, my husband and I and our little son have been spending the Christmas holidays with my family (parents, sisters, brothers, etc.).

On Christmas morning everyone gathers in the living room and we all open our Christmas gifts under the tree. Everyone, except my husband. He refuses to open his presents at that time. He takes them home—still gift-wrapped, and opens one or two a week. It takes months before they're all opened. He says if he spreads the excitement over a long period of time he enjoys it more than opening 15 or 20 gifts in a half hour and then experiencing a big letdown. He prefers to prolong the joys of Christmas as long as possible.

I think it's rude to make people wait months to be thanked for a Christmas gift. (As of today, he still hasn't opened mine!) He says they are his gifts and he can open them whenever he feels like it. What do you think of this weirdo?

NEW MEXICO WIFE

DEAR WIFE: His behavior is somewhat strange, but he's right, they're his gifts to open whenever he feels like it. By now your family must be accustomed to this peculiarity. But it might comfort you to know that there's at least one more "weirdo" who likes to prolong the joys of Christmas. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: There is a nut who lives across the street from us who still has his Christmas ornaments up! People come from all over just to drive by his house and laugh!

It's not just a decorated tree out in front either. He's got Santa and the reindeers on the roof, and his whole front porch and lawn are decorated with every kind of Christmas ornament you can imagine.

Wouldn't you think by this time he'd take that silly looking stuff down?

When the neighbors see him, they say, "Merry Christmas" [in March!] and he responds with, "And a happy New Year!"

Print this, he might take the hint.

DISGUSTED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR ABBY: I don't mean to carp, but I was bothered by one of your reader's references to being "gypped," and by the use of that word in the headline of your column.

It's common but probably unintentional slur, for most people are unaware that the expression "gypped" comes from the word gypsy.

I am not a gypsy, but because of the connection between these two words, I am offended. Can't we stop using the word "gypped" as a synonym for cheat?

CONCERNED IN ANN ARBOR

DEAR CONCERNED: Even though [according to Ted Bernstein, my expert on words] the expression "gypped" probably does come from the word "gypsy," I doubt that even a gypsy would make a connection and feel maligned. In any case, I am not responsible for the headlines on my column. Your local editor is.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 6700, L. A., Calif. 90028. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

Karpin On Bridge

By FRED KARPIN

Kibitzers at a bridge table are barred from asking (or answering) any questions during the bidding or play. The awareness of this point of decorum can be observed in the following story:

During a tournament, the players at one of the tables had noticed that their kibitzer had not moved, spoken, or apparently breathed, for several minutes. They become concerned, and discussed whether they should shake him, or perhaps see if there were a doctor around. They spoke fairly loudly, but still there was no sign of life from the kibitzer.

"Wait," said North, as he removed his cards from the board they had just played. "What do you bid with this hand as the opening bid?" he whispered to the kibitzer.

"Two spades," replied the kibitzer as he opened his eyes. "But is it okay for you to consult with me during the bidding?"

Today's deal is not the one submitted to our kibitzer. But had he been kibitzing South on this hand, he might well have collapsed when he heard South's first, last, and only bid.

Both sides vulnerable.

The deal came up in the Masters Pairs Championship of 1950. Sitting South was John Gerber, originator of the Gerber "Four Club Slam Convention."

When Gerber bid three notrump, he really didn't mean it. He expected further bidding; and if he were doubled at three notrump, he intended to back into four hearts. But his bid turned out to be the last one.

The spade deuce was played from dummy on the opening lead, and South's nine won the trick. The queen of hearts was then led, and the finesse taken, successfully. Next came a diamond, dummy's king being taken by East's ace.

A low club was returned to the board's ace, after which the heart ace was cashed. Re-entering his hand via the heart jack, Gerber then proceeded to cash four diamond tricks. Thus he ended up making six hearts, four diamonds, one spade, and one club. The three over-tricks gave his partnership the top score on the deal.

Today's natives are adept at classifying things, often gifted in the use of sharp tools, so that scientific disciplines are open to them.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: The most useful people and resources are out of sight or very discreet in appearance. Impulse surges strongly, and most of it is toward destructive action.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: A search for unfamiliar information turns up unexpectedly helpful items. Old friends cooperate to ease your past temporary inconvenience.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Life is like a round of charades today, with everything said or done reflecting some deeper inner truth. Be yourself, all the way.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Again your private life and your career effort drift into conflict situations, and you must choose despite objections from family and relatives.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Small but necessary business moves are favored today. Many people are in a contrary humor, not to be needlessly crossed or taken as permanently so disposed.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Try for the modest beginnings of a new dispensation, fundamental improvement in your position and skills. Later hours justify mild celebrations.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Recognition is the one response you needn't expect much of today, from either people in authority or those close to you. Do your best anyway.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Regular jobs still have to be done, altho the emphasis for you shifts to the creative, experimental sort of avocation or moonlighting.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Speculation, gambling are definitely out for this week if you want to have anything left. Realize that friends are sensitive to your reactions.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: It's up to you to reconcile the discordant influences in your own daily living. The rewards are high for achieving continuity at work.

Aquarius [Jan. 20 - Feb. 18]: Vocational progress is all uphill, requiring the ability to keep your poise in the face of perhaps unfair or mistaken criticism. Travel is just as well put off.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Your share in group finances needs your individual inspection. The long-range program you're been following needs review, probable further elaboration.

Why Grow Old? The Ability To Gain Weight Is Difficult For Ectomorphs

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Statistics show that extremely thin people live longer and are more apt to escape degenerative diseases. However, that is little comfort to the young woman who has a 30-inch bustline, pipstern legs and flat hips! Those coveted curves are often very difficult to achieve and sometimes almost impossible to capture.

So many letters from readers tell me that they have tried everything and nothing adds a pound. The usual advice of plenty of sleep, mild exercise, no worry, no hurry and the essential nutrients plus some high calorie foods just does not seem to work.

If this has been your experience, you are probably an ectomorph. In other words, you have inherited this type build. Ectomorphs have slender light bones, long narrow hands and feet, and most important, a scarcity of fat cells. Fat is stored in these cells, and logically, you cannot store fat if there is no place to store it.

However, if you have this body type and wish to make a real effort to gain, there are some ideas that may help.

Studies at the Department of Nutrition at Harvard University indicate that ectomorphs become quickly and suddenly satisfied with food. They simply cannot force themselves to eat more when they arrive at this point. This suggests that six or more small meals might be more effective than three large ones.

Another plan would be to eat your usual meals but increase your caloric intake with nutritious snacks. Of course, you must be sure that these do not detract from your three regular, well-balanced meals. They should not be heavy enough or close enough to mealtimes to spoil your appetite for your three regulars.

Some suggestions are yogurt, fruit, crackers and cheeses, fruit juice, a glass of milk, or cookies. The snacks can be enjoyed at mid-morning, mid-afternoon and before going to sleep at night.

Additional help for gaining weight, plus menus, is found in the leaflet, "Nine Day Gaining Diet." For your free copy, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and your request to Josephine Lowman in care of The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Salvador Allende's "Chaos" Welcomed By The Peruvians

LIMA (UPI) — "Thank God for Salvador Allende; he kept Chile in such chaos she couldn't attack us until now," a wealthy Peruvian said.

Even foreign residents here heard such remarks frequently. An Army officer told a friend a surprise attack could come across Peru's southern border with Chile "at any minute". Businessmen said a war was just what the Chile's junta—which deposed the late President Allende—needed to distract Chileans from their economic depression.

The influential Peruvian news magazine Oiga headlined its lead article this week: "Winds of War to the South."

"The sudden and very costly increase in the Chilean Army, to which extranational motives have been assigned," the magazine said, resulted in "the most varied speculations during constant conversations in cafes, in political circles and in regular gatherings of friends and associates in Lima."

All this talk, according to the news magazine, "was perfectly natural" in light of recent events.

First, the Peruvian government issued strong denials of reports that the Soviet Union was building rocket bases in Peru and sending military missions here. It said the reports were "part of a well organized international campaign to paint Peru as a Communist bastion in South America."

Then, when the presidents of Chile, Bolivia and Brazil met at the inauguration of Brazilian President Ernesto Geise, newspapers discussed at length the possibility of an anti-Marxist bloc against the more reformist military government of Peru.

Two prominent Peruvian exiles called for a crusade of liberation to overthrow the government here.

And, with front-page headlines, Peru's newspapers reported Chile's decision to call up some army reservists between 22 and 35 years old.

"When the river roars, it is because it is sweeping rocks along," Oiga said, using the Peruvian equivalent of "where there's smoke, there's fire."

Gen. Edgardo Mercado Jarrin, prime minister and army commander, announced that the training school for tank warfare would be moved from Lima to Arequipa, 150 miles from the Chilean border.

While noting that Peru now has a considerably better equipped air force and tank division than the nearly bankrupt Chileans, diplomats here took the talk seriously.

"You Americans can't understand this because your borders have been secure for a century," one said. "But Peru's borders have been changed by a half dozen wars, and a lot of the generals fought in the last one in 1941."

The conflict 33 years ago was against Ecuador.

Peru's richest reserves of copper are close to the Chilean border and her potentially rich oil fields are in the jungles near the Brazilian and Ecuadorean border. Mercado Jarrin recently declared the development of the underpopulated jungle was an urgent priority which would be put under direct control of the army.

The biggest war in Peru's history was fought over valuable nitrate deposits on the Chilean borders. The nitrate has been made worthless by modern chemistry, but the memory of the War of the Pacific, fought between 1879-1883, lingers on. The Chilean army conquered and kept big chunks of then valuable territory.

Income Tax Deductions Have Been Liberalized

AMARILLO — Amarillo area taxpayers may reduce their taxes through liberalized federal income tax deductions for the care of children and disabled spouse or dependents, Elton W. Davidson, administrative officer for the Amarillo area, said today.

Taxpayers with adjusted gross incomes of $18,000 or less may be able to deduct as much as $400 a month for household and dependent care expenses. Those who earn more than $18,000 a year must reduce the deduction 50 cents for each dollar over $18,000 Davidson said.

To qualify for this deduction, according to Davidson, taxpayers must be employed, must provide more than half the cost of maintaining a household for a dependent under 15 or a disabled spouse or dependent of any age, and must make the payments to persons other than relatives or dependents.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — According to the Illinois Department of Revenue, mistakes made by taxpayers on their returns doubles and sometimes triples the time needed to process the returns.

Davidson pointed out that this deduction may include household expenses paid for the usual services of a housekeeper, maid or cook.

Additionally, he said, expenses performed outside the home for nursery school or day care for dependents under 15 may be included as part of the deduction if they are necessary to enable the taxpayer to work.

However, he added, these expenses are limited to $200 a month for one dependent, $300 for two dependents and $400 for three or more. According to the law, such expenses cannot include educational costs for a child in the first or higher grades.

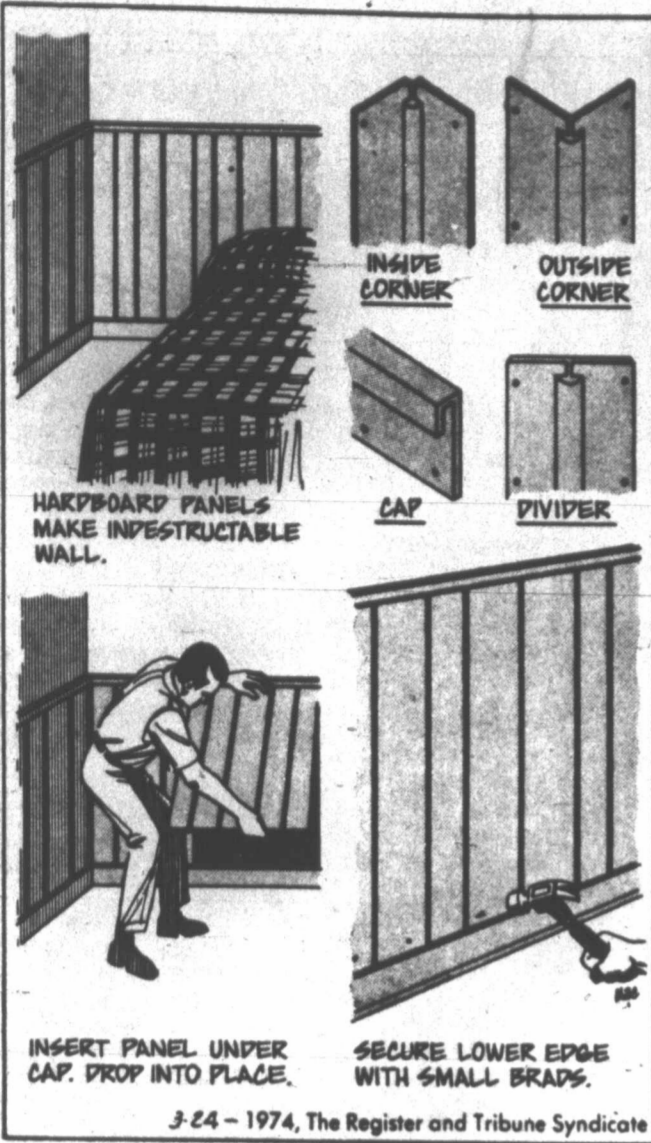

Davidson also said that deductions for care of disabled dependents over 15 years of age must be reduced by the amount that the dependent's adjusted gross income and any nontaxable disability payments exceed $750.

The expenses paid for the care of a disabled husband or wife, he said, must be reduced by nontaxable disability payments. Typically, these payments come from disability insurance policies and employ sick pay plans.

Davidson cautioned Amarillo area taxpayers that, to take advantage of the child and disabled care provisions, they must itemize all deductions on Form 1040. Form 2441 may be used to compute the deduction.

"And, as with all such items on the tax return, it's necessary to keep good records to prove expenses," he said.

Tar Sands Are "Golden"

There has been a great deal of publicity recently about oil shale deposits in the U.S. and the aggressive bidding for leases on Colorado oil shale acreage by the major oil companies. But the Granddaddy of them all is the tar sands of Alberta, Canada. Total known worldwide oil reserves are about 600-billion barrels, two-thirds of which are in the Middle East. The Alberta tar sands are estimated to have reserves of 340-billion barrels of synthetic crude oil based on the technology available for extracting the oil from the sands.

Oil sands exist outside of Canada in Venezuela and Russia but only the U.S.'s six oil shale deposits begin to compare with the huge Canadian tar sands.

The weather in that part of the world is definitely unfriendly with the temperature dropping to 60 degrees below zero in winter and hitting 100 plus or more in the summer. The terrain is a swampy, poorly drained muskeg, below which is an overburden varying in depth from a few feet to several thousand feet covering the tar sands. Mining activity is limited to the winter months when the ground is frozen hard enough to support the huge mining vehicles.

The sands themselves are a combination of sand, water and bitumen, a sulfurous hydrocarbon which has to be thinned and sweetened (sulfur removed) before it can be used commercially.

The refining process of the tar sands is rather lengthy but the finished product is a high-grade synthetic crude oil that can be refined into a wide range of petroleum products.

Present production of synthetic crude from the sands is 45,000 barrels per day with plans to raise this to 65,000 barrels per day immediately. A syndicate of four major U.S. oil companies is building a 125,000 barrel per day plant which should be on stream by 1977. Estimates by engineers indicate a cost of $3 per barrel of crude oil from a plant that size. The cost of the plant is high, a cool $1-billion.

The syndicate has already spent $50-million in the past 15 years just researching how best to get the oil out of the tar sands.

A second group composed of Shell Oil subsidiaries have a 100,000 barrel per day plant under construction with hopes of getting this $900-million venture onstream by 1980. A Belgian controlled group plans to file application for a 100,000 barrel per day plant.

Joke Not Funny

BOYCE, Va. (UPI) — Two Newark, Del., men who joked about robbing a bank soon found that townspeople and Clarke County authorities didn't share their sense of humor.

Clarke County Sheriff Albert Nicodemus said Friday that Harry Lee Christian, 18, and a cousin, Kenneth A. Christian, 33, pulled up with some other persons in two cars at the Clarke County branch of the Bank of Boyce about 5:15 p.m. The men told about 10 persons standing outside the bank they were going to rob it, the sheriff said.

The men went inside, cashed a $5 check, and then came out shouting "We made a big haul, you go this way and I'll go that way," Nicodemus said. Both men then left in the same car, he said.

The two cars were stopped by state police and Clarke county sheriff's deputies on U.S. route 340 between Boyce and Berryville a few minutes later. They were arrested, charged with disturbing the peace and placed in the Clarke County jail under $103 bond.

They were also told that the bank has been robbed twice in the past year, the sheriff said.

Bihar's Image Just Poverty

PATNA, India (UPI) — Even in the best of times life is grim in Bihar, the poorest state in a nation whose own world image is one of grinding poverty.

An average Bihar worker earns but the equivalent of $52 in an entire year and jobs are only for the most fortunate in this northeastern state bordering Nepal.

The politicians in New Delhi tell Biharis that soaring prices are a worldwide phenomenon; that the far-away Americans are in trouble too.

Eighty per cent of the Biharis are illiterate, but they know that rising food prices can kill them just as surely, if perhaps more slowly, than police bullets.

That is why hordes of them during the past week swarmed into the streets in an orgy of looting and arson, risking the armed might of the government of India, to protest alleged government corruption, soaring prices and massive unemployment.

There are, both here in the state capital on the banks of the Ganges River and 628 miles to the west in the national capital in New Delhi, complex political explanations for the Bihar upheaval.

But the essential reason is hunger, or the fear of it.

Ruling party politicians here and in New Delhi contend that the students, who spearheaded the week-old agitation that already has claimed, at the very least, 22 lives, were put up to it by extremists from the political right, which in turn blames the trouble on the political left.

Just about everyone blames most of the arson and looting on "hooligans," who in the Indian scheme of things are to be distinguished from students.

The 'Shortfall' Lesson

The term "shortfall" is a new word in American popular usage. The current shortfall is gasoline.

But according to the American Bakers Association, we can expect a different shortfall before 1974 has run its course. This will be a wheat shortfall, or more explicitly a scarcity of hamburger buns, hotdog rolls, bakery snacks, birthday cakes, and pizza. That's the grim outlook as pictured by the bakeries.

The association, citing U.S. Department of Agriculture arithmetic, gave the following balance sheet of wheat supply and wheat consumption:

Supply: 438 million bushels carryover as of July 1, 1973, plus the 1973 crop of 1,711 million bushels, plus imports of 1 million bushels equals a total supply of 2,150 million bushels as of Feb. 3, 1974.

Domestic usage: 532 million bushels for food plus 80 million bushels for seed plus 100 million bushels for livestock feed equals total usage of 712 million bushels.

Balance left for exports: 1,378 bushels. Exports as of Feb. 3, 1974: Exports shipped 814.7 bushels plus exports unshipped 514.2 bushels plus wheat products exported 50 million bushels equals total destined for export 1,378.9 million bushels.

In other words the grain dealers apparently plan to export almost one million more bushels of wheat than the visible supply.

The Bakers' Association noted that the U.S. had a wheat carryover of 863 million bushels at the end of the 1971-72 crop year, and at the end of the 1972-73 crop year the carryover was 438 million bushels. Yet the projection now is for the smallest carryover in 25 years.

"How did we get here from there?" the bakery group asks. The answer obviously is that the Soviet wheat deal in the summer of 1972 (400 million bushels at $1.45) triggered a world-wide demand as other nations saw a way to cash in surplus U.S. dollars.

"Over the past months," the bakers declared, "the USDA has employed three strategies to deal with the growing wheat shortage. First, it attempted to cover up the problem with a blizzard of press releases denying any shortage. When this became untenable because its own figures revealed the magnitude of the problem the department attempted to deny responsibility and shift the blame to millers and bakers.

Now the department is falling back on voluntary schemes to increase domestic supply and reduce exports — such as removing wheat import quotas, encouraging early sale by Canadian and European wheat agencies and negotiating stretch-outs in American export sales. But no one knows whether these devices will leave an adequate domestic supply for the remainder of the crop year."

The industry that puts bread on the American table confesses that it does not see an easy answer to the wheat shortage. Among its suggestions are that the USDA delay delivery on foreign purchases until the new crop year, on the one hand, and avoid interference with existing domestic contracts, on the other hand. That, obviously, is so unrealistic that it approaches fantasy. It amounts to an argument for selective intervention. If the businessmen of this country haven't had enough experience by now to know that you can't get just a little bit pregnant, they are beyond hope.

The self-evident steps with respect to wheat are: 1) avoid interference with the market so that higher wheat prices will draw the invisible supply onto the market. 2) put the heat on Congress for a crash lowering of direct and indirect railroad taxes so that those carriers can construct and reconstruct boxcars to carry the new crop to market at the earliest date.

But there is no way to avoid all the consequences of causes previously set in motion. Doing without — for a little while — is one way to pay for the previous mistakes of political leaders. If the shortfall helps us learn that much, we shall profit intellectually by our material impoverishment.

Union Chiefs Prepare Fight Against Environmentalists

By VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON — Had Marie Antoinette gone to Yale instead of the guillotine she might well have said, "Let them eat oysters." That in effect is what the university and New Haven environmentalists said not too long ago when they dredged a vital harbor — dredging project 17 costly months — costly to construction workers seeking their daily bread, costly to shippers sending tankers in, and costly to the community.

Back in June 1972 the Army Corps of Engineers had approved the dredging of a deeper harbor channel there. But the university intervened demanding the right to complete tests of the channel bottom, according to Operating Engineers international vice president (dredgeman chief) Steve Leslie.

Yale won permission. Then the Engineers Corps reported difficulties with ecology forces who wanted the dredging delayed out of deference to oyster spawning habits. Agreed. Then the environmentalists sued to halt all dredging. Finally work began in October, 1973. Meanwhile, jobs were lost. Money was lost because tankers entering the harbor during the delay had to go in "light loaded" because of the sandbar at the entrance.

Thus it goes, the International Union of Operating Engineers has just learned from a survey of some 70 locals by president Hunter Wharton and general secretary — treasurer J.C. Turner.

At this moment more than a billion dollars in construction is being delayed (or has been blocked in recent months) by the Sierra Club, the Audubon Society (birdwatchers, the building unionists call them), a County Federation of Sportsmen, a Lake Power Boat Club, a "Save Our Sound Fisheries Assn." and sundry environmentalists with a thousand acronyms across the United States.

"They hold every rock, stream and tree sacred," says one labor chief. "We want balance, a fine country, clean air but we want bread too."

J.C. Turner, who wrapped up the survey's results, reports the ecologists' blocking of a string of vital nuclear power plants, key interconnecting road sections, vital bridges, sewage disposal installations, dam-heightening work, river-deepening and above all, oil refineries. All this despite the need for jobs to absorb the energy-related unemployed, and to provide more gasoline and other fuels in the nation's biggest industry where supplies already are short.

The national operating engineers union dispatched letters to key people throughout the country as a follow-up to a Western (13) State conference last year. At that session the national leaders learned that fully $800 million in construction projects were being blocked by environmentalists' legal action in those 13 states. It is estimated that as much work is now being delayed by environmentalists' court action in the East. These, according to the union's records, include roads in Western New York and assembly-line floating nuclear power plant production in Florida.

Typical is the following report from one New England Local: "(This case) involved the removal of material (by dredge) in a 40-foot channel of the Providence River and Harbor in Rhode Island. The contract was awarded to the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Company and it was given notice to proceed on July 27, 1973. Before any work had begun, however, the company and the Corps of Engineers received a Notice of Violation from the 'Save Our Sound Fisheries Assn.'"

Flying Saucers: Real Or Just Imaginative?

By PAUL HARVEY

Wherever I travel to speak, if there's a question session, the first question used to be about Watergate. Since October, the usual first question has been "What do you think about flying saucers?"

If you should see a flying saucer tonight, if it lands on your lawn and you see and talk to the "little green men" and you ask permission to take a picture of them and their vehicle and they say yes and then you do — will you let me know?

I doubt it. Think about it. If you see a flying saucer and visit with its occupants, whom do you tell who won't think you're drunk or balmy?

I posed this question among professional observers — professional reporters — and they were not sure what they'd do.

Jeff Greenshaw saw and photographed and showed and told — and he's sorry he did.

Jeff was a policeman in Falkville, Ala., who photographed a mysterious silvery creature walking along a rural road.

In the weeks since, he's been fired from his job; his family was harassed until his wife left him; then somebody burned his house down.

There are fewer UFO reports now than during the rash of them in the 1960s, but the credibility of witnesses is greater now. Those reporting include lawmen, airmen, architects, scholars.

"On Aug. 9 a judge issued a restraining order against the project. On Aug. 14 the Corps of Engineers and the dredging company were named in a damage suit filed on behalf of the Fisheries Association, even though no work had been performed. A series of meetings was held with representatives of the association to no avail. In late December no work had been performed or scheduled on the operation."

There you have a case history — one of hundreds — running on a line from the Seattle area to St. Louis (a dam-reservoir project) to a Cleveland (nuclear) plant and on to Jacksonville, Fla. Some of these projects were hit by long delays. Some never started.

Our children are the only earthly possessions we can take with us to glory.

more. Several have told me that "there are too many forms to fill out" and too much chance that their professional employment records will thereafter include an implication of "crackpot."

Prof. Harley Rutledge of Southeast Missouri State University's physics department has studied the subject this year. Many letters which he and I receive obviously from "professional observers" are unsigned.

Prof. Rutledge has gone aloft to pursue unexplained lights in Missouri skies, has photographed them, can't explain them except to say "There's something out there."

The architect in Lima, Peru, who provided a photograph of his encounter with a saucer got the photograph published — but it was shrugged off as "incredible" or dismissed as "trick photography," and that was the end of it.

That's why Northwestern University astronomer Dr. J. Allen Hynek, who has been fascinated by the subject for 20 years, urges establishment of a government clearing-house under NASA to properly sift and evaluate reports.

NASA is admittedly interested in the possibilities of life on other planets; this is a logical extension of that.

USAF Chief of Staff Gen. George Brown says UFOs "plagued our fighting men in Vietnam." Our GIs fired on some.

Ohio Gov. John Gilligan says he and his wife watched an UFO for half an hour recent night near Ann Arbor, Mich.

France-Just Shrugs Off $500 Million NATO Debt

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON — The insufferable gall of the Gaul is matched only by the inexplicable pussyfooting and temporizing of the U.S.!

Since 1968, two American administrations (Johnson and Nixon) have hemmed and hawed, backed and filled on taking forceful action to collect more than $500 million owed by France for scores of military installations left there when de Gaulle booted NATO out of that country.

Nothing is still being done. Despite President Nixon's much justified tough talking in Chicago last week, inquiry by this column disclosed not the slightest indication that the White House, State Department or any other authority is doing anything to require French payment of this long-overdue obligation.

Official reaction appeared to be astonishment that the matter was being raised.

This column was prompted to bring it up by the President's blunt admonition: "The Europeans (meaning French) cannot have it both ways. They cannot expect the U.S. to maintain costly armed forces in Europe while ganging up against the U.S. politically and economically."

But that is exactly what France, first under de Gaulle and now Pompidou, has been flagrantly doing for years — and getting away with it.

A graphic instance of that is the way Paris has blandly ignored the six-year-old $558 million U.S. claim for several hundred military installations left there — and which the French have been profitably utilizing ever since.

In that period, there have been three Secretaries of State (Dean Rusk, William Rogers, Henry Kissinger) and not one has lifted a finger to require payment of this indisputable debt. Each has fearfully shied away from cracking down as if doing so would be an unardonable outrage.

In the meanwhile, France invariably has gone out of its way to harass and obstruct the U.S. — militarily, economically and politically.

The de Gaulle and Pompidou regimes have consistently displayed far more friendliness and cooperation toward the Communist rulers of the Kremlin than to the elected officials of Washington — capital of the leading NATO ally and of the country which twice within 25 years rescued France from enemy invasion and occupation and, after World War II, poured more than $7.5 billion into France to put it back on its feet.

What It's About
When de Gaulle in 1968 kicked NATO out of France, the U.S. left behind 189 military installations that cost U.S. taxpayers $912.7 million.

They included 9 airfields, 1 naval depot, numerous communications centers, scores of buildings of all kinds, warehouses, railroad sidings, commissaries, hospitals, machine shops, printing plants, schools, laboratories, recreation centers, including a golf course, etc.

Most costly facility was a $54.66 million pipeline.

In addition, the U.S. is claiming $255 million for relocation costs of American forces.

As far as is known, France has never disputed the legitimacy of these claims — based on a specific provision in the NATO treaty requiring such compensatory payment.

The de Gaulle and Pompidou regimes have simply shrugged and stalled — and been allowed to get away with it.

Not only that, but the State Department has even tried to keep secret the amount of the U.S. claim.

Rep. H.R. Gross, R-Iowa, member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, discovered that when he wrote then-Secretary of State William Rogers asking what was being done about securing payment from France. After a long delay, Gross got a reply from a secondary State Department official which was completely evasive, as follows:

"The French government," Gross as informed, "might consider it a diplomatic breach to publicize the amount of the claim. Such a breach would incite the French to give us a negative reply, thus jeopardizing the hope for at least partial compensation for our losses."

That was months ago, and that's where it still stands. Nothing has happened since — despite the President's stern verbal crackdown last week.

On the basis of the record to date, it's unlikely anything will happen in the foreseeable future. The French have a long history of not paying obligations owed the U.S.

Purdue Wins NIT Over Utah, 87-82

NEW YORK (UPI) — Back on New Year's Day, the Purdue Boilermakers weren't exactly happy about the way 1974 was getting underway. But now, as the first Big Ten team ever to win the National Invitation basketball Tournament, they figure their troubles then were a blessing in disguise.

It was in Salt Lake City on Jan. 1 that Purdue lost an 87-85 decision to Utah on a last-second basket by Utes' scoring ace Tickey Burden.

State, Warriors Meet For Title

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — To hear Marquette coach Al McGuire tell it, his team shouldn't even be allowed in the Greensboro Coliseum tonight, much less play North Carolina State for the NCAA championship.

Sloan, whose team now is 291, was willing to build up Marquette's chances of upsetting the Wolfpack, even if McGuire wasn't.

"This particular ball club caught my eye in the latter stages of the season," he said. "I even picked them to come out of the Midwest Regionals."

"They are a great basketball team, they have a fine defensive team, and they have fine players."

Sloan said the very fact that Marquette is given little chance of winning the game should serve as "added inspiration" to the Warriors.

For Schaus, former coach of the University of West Virginia and later coach and general manager of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association, the N.I.T. triumph represented a huge personal achievement.

Kansas Versus UCLA B-Team Tonight

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — When UCLA's basketball players emerged from the first-class section of the airplane which brought them to Chicago last January for the games against Iowa and Notre Dame, they provided a first-class commentary on what collegiate sports have become today.

competitiveness in the contest will be missing. But perhaps this is what comes with unprecedented success.

As Kansas coach Ted Owens said, "It's hard for me to say because I haven't won nine of the last 10 championships."

Owens does not want to play UCLA's second-liners. If he's going to lose, he'd prefer to lose to UCLA's best. "My concern is for my players," he said. "They deserve to play the best UCLA has to offer."

Wooden admits he can't make his players play, despite the fact they're attending UCLA on basketball scholarships.

Keith Wilkes was wearing a long coat with fur around it and Greg Lee looked like a beach boy. Bill Walton, the most dominant force in the game, wore the most outlandish get-up of all.

Walton wore split-out sneakers, faded jeans and a sweat shirt. Topping it off, the 6-foot-11 redhead carried a knapsack on his back.

There are some things I can force them to do though," he said. "Like take off their mustaches, for example."

Wooden is caught in the trap. It's obvious he would prefer to have a well-disciplined team, one that would wear blazers for public appearances. He'd also like to have his players go out and give their best effort for the good of the school, too. But he understands the rah-rah days are over.

Bill Walton, like Kareem Abdul-Jabbar before him, will do as he pleases. If he wants to play, fine. If he doesn't, fine.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH Is There Conspiracy Of Silence?

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have written to you before, and also to others about my condition which I have had for over 20 years. Pruritus ani. Is there a conspiracy of silence on this?

No such conspiracy here, and I've discussed it a number of times in the last 20 years. I try not to repeat the same topic too often. It depends on how many ask about something.

Pruritus ani (rectal itching) bothers an estimated 10 percent of the population, but the conspiracy of silence, if there is one, is on the part of the victims who so often are shy about asking.

That's too bad, because there are few cases that won't yield to proper treatment.

The majority of cases fall into what is known as the "primary type." That is, no visible cause can be detected. I'll discuss that in a moment.

In the "secondary" types, a specific cause can be determined and treated. Commonest is rectal disease — hemorrhoids, fissures, polyps or any condition that causes a seepage from the rectum.

Perhaps next in frequency is allergy to various things — to certain foods, to alcohol (particularly beer), to underwear fabric or toilet tissue.

A variety of other causes exist: psoriasis, seborrheic dermatitis, pinworms, crab lice, vitamin deficiency, diabetes, discharge in women with vaginitis.

Most of these cases can be treated effectively, but I offer no home remedies because in virtually all of them you need the help of a physician for both diagnosis and treatment.

Now to the "primary type." Scrupulous anal (rectal) hygiene is essential. First, check your toilet paper. Texture of the paper itself or dyes or chemicals in the paper can be irritants. Quite a few sufferers have reported success by changing from colored paper to white. Those are people whom the dyes happen to bother.

But some should avoid paper entirely and instead use a pledget of cotton moistened with water. Follow with dry cotton to remove all moisture, and then place a small bit of cotton against the anus and leave it there to absorb perspiration.

Some people place a good deal of reliance on ointments of one kind or another, and they may help, but they also tend to keep the skin too soft, which contributes to continued itching.

A steroid (cortisone-type) ointment, however, is very effective in stopping such itching.

In some stubborn cases surgery to sever the nerves under the skin may be necessary, but that's an extreme remedy.

For the greater majority, the remedies explained for "primary type" will bring relief: keeping the area clean and keeping it dry, and avoiding alcoholic drinks. A Sitz bath (sitting in a tub of hot water) also helps, both in cleanliness and in prompt relief of itching. Be sure to dry thoroughly afterward.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am in my 80s and have been having trouble with vaginal itching. Can you tell me what causes it and what I can do to help?

At your age it is not unusual for the endocrine glands to slow down in activity, with a reduction in hormone production. My suggestion would be to ask your doctor about a prescription for an estrogenic cream with often admired a Rolls-Royce. "Cool it, you ——" he snarled. "Do you think I'm made out of bricks?"

BACK IN N.Y. — Impressionist David Frye, famous for doing Richard Nixon, returned triumphantly to Jimmy's amid reports that somebody from the camp of impressionist Rich Little barred him from seeing Little's show at the Waldorf Empire Room. "I don't believe that Little personally would not want me not to see his act," Faye said. "He is too sure of his ability to perform about me."

Frye mentioned Ted Kennedy "visiting his non-campaign headquarters throughout the country" and added, "My greatest fear is that Gerald Ford will become President — I can't do him."

London Lee, the comedian with the rich father, came to the Plaza Persian Room with a new gift from his dad — handsome young singer Rick Daniels whose fans at the opening included Dino de Laurentiis and his wife Silvana Mangano. Daniels was in especially good voice considering he'd been married hours before to Phyllis Feinberg of Ardmore, Pa.

How did that feel? "Free!" said Willie instantly.

In the almost two years when time had stood still for the Chambers Brothers, several record companies had been after them to record. But they had literally been chained and undoubtedly that's why their new album is called "Unbonded," and the title is spelled out in links of chains.

What is more gratifying to The Chambers Brothers is that the album is taking off on the charts.

"We didn't lose anything except time," Joseph said. "We've changed only a little because what we did for a while was to lay our instruments aside and concentrate on singing with a back-up band. Our strength was always singing, singing the songs we composed ourselves and singing the songs we sang when we were children at home in Mississippi."

We were fortunate to be present at a recording session for their very first album. Janis Joplin then just a newcomer who was being encouraged by the brothers, dropped by the studio to hear them perform. Their sound was soul-country with a rock and a pucky, pucky. It was straight out of a country church with the added ingredients they had heard as they grew up.

It was, and is today, a great sound filled with spirit and total involvement and sung by four voices that match as only voices that have grown up together can match. There is joy in their religion and they express their religion in their music.

George told us they haven't laid their instruments aside for good.

"We're picking them up again, now, and from time to time we'll play in a number. We're going to keep the band behind us because we really want to concentrate on our singing more than on our instruments. We've found that works best for us."

As you talk to The Chambers Brothers one feels a new, openness of freedom, a freedom that spills over into their new album. They're off and running again and they're definitely "Unbonded."

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT
Durante Is Still Kicking

By EARL WILSON
HOLLYWOOD — Jimmy Durante, 81, sat straight up in his wheelchair, and clapped his flashy straw hat down toward his famous nose, when he had dinner at his house in Beverly Hills.

He called me "Oil" as he always did. He corrected my recollection of one of his songs. He's got a lot of the fire of the old Schnozzola despite his stroke more than a year ago.

His attractive wife Margie Little said she wants him to see old friends. He wheel-chaired into Nicky Blair's restaurant one night with Sammy Fain and Jackie Barnett.

"He's essentially a night person, he stays up late," Margie said. "The neighbors the Joe Pasternaks came to dinner, then we saw a screening of 'The Sting.' Jimmy laughed at the hoodlums and was impatient at delays. Margie said there was a break in the film and the show wasn't going on. 'Why, why?' demanded Jimmy."

One of my memories was of him at the old Copacabana singing. "Say it wit' flowers Say it wit' sweets Say it wit' artichokes Say it wit' eats Say it wit' joelery Or say it wit' drink But fellas — always be careful."

Not to say it wit' ink." Followed by "Inka Dinka Doo, Inka Dinka Doo," then a strut offstage.

"No, Oil," protested Jimmy from the wheelchair, proving his alertness. "After yuh say wit' ink, yuh say Inka Dinka Dee, Inka Dinka Doo, the Inka Dinka Dee comes first."

I didn't mind being corrected by the Schnozz. "Who wrote the song?" I asked him.

The nose raised ceilingward. "Oh, I fooled around wit' it a little, Oil," Jimmy said.

Elliott Gould and Jennifer Bogart — who got married after their second baby was born — now speak happily of the married life they avoided.

"We just decided to (Dec. 8) in Vegas, and it's great," the bridegroom, former husband of Barbra Streisand, said.

He's just finished his best yet picture, "California Split." An O Henry twist to the story of their delayed marriage is that Jennifer's parents, the Paul Bogarts, split after 32 years of marriage. "I got no words for it," Elliott Gould said.

Marty Allen tells of a swinger whose chick admired a ring in a window. Taking a brick from his pocket, he broke the window, gave her the ring. "That chinchilla would go nice with this ring," she coaxed. He took out another brick, gave her the chinchilla. Next she

Antibiotics Are Being Overused In Society Says Medical Journal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is increasing concern that antibiotics are being overused in the United States and the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association says patient pressure is partly to blame.

"Most patients expect some medication," said Dr. Robert H. Moser, "and this is where the wicket gets sticky."

In some cases, he said the illness clearly calls for the use of an antibiotic. The treatment is prescribed and the patient is satisfied.

But it is not so simple in situations involving nonspecific sore throats, upper respiratory tract infections and coughs with wheezes. These require bacterial cultures in the laboratory and it may be 24 hours before the doctor knows the cause of the illness, and whether or not an antibiotic should be prescribed.

Patient Still Ill
But Moser said the patient is still in the physician's office and if the doctor does not prescribe medication, the patient will leave dissatisfied, thinking the doctor is indecisive or uninformed. "The temptation, then, is to treat and once treatment is begun, the tendency is to complete the course," Moser said.

Moser was replying editorially to a report in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association by a government health official and a university medical researcher who believe antibiotics are grossly overused in the U.S. They wondered if the risks were beginning to outweigh the benefits.

Dr. Henry E. Simmons, deputy assistant secretary for health of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), and Dr. Paul D. Stolley, of Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Health, cited estimates that the annual number of new and refilled prescriptions for antibiotics jumped from 100 million in 1964 to 170 million in 1971. They said one of every five prescriptions issued is for an antibiotic.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., charged at a recent hearing of his subcommittee on health that more than 30,000 Americans die yearly from adverse drug reactions, many of which he said could have avoided if doctors had not irrationally prescribed antibiotics.

Need Little Medications
Moser said the simple truth is that many patients seen by the general practitioner or internist need little medications, much less antibiotics.

"I suspect a major dimension of our problem has been created by our inability to resist the pressures of patients and the constrictions of time," he said.

"It is unrealistic to believe that any physician wishes to use drugs that are not indicated. Patient pressure on the other hand is a formidable force. The American Medical Association intends to expand its efforts to encourage physicians to resist this pressure.

"It is here that we come down to the basic element of the problem. We must educate the patient. We need a vast program to educate the public. They lay media must assume an obligation to undo much of the damage they have done in dramatizing 'order drugs' and 'wizard cures.'

"They must counter the cultural tradition that says mild pain equals analgesic; unhappiness equals tranquilizer; fever equals antibiotic."

A&M Studying Cancer Help

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — A possible cancer inhibitor, the product of a handful of leaves picked in Ethiopia in 1965, and the process of producing it synthetically in useful amounts is being researched by a Texas A&M University team.

Dr. Kenneth Hardin, assistant chemistry professor, has received a $43,000 grant by National Cancer Institute to prove out a theory he produced in a two hour period to produce artificially the anti-tumor agent called "Vernolepin."

"We will try to develop a procedure for preparation of the agent in the lab from readily available organic chemicals," Hardin said. "My basic idea for the synthesis was developed in about two hours. Then it took about three months to document the idea and prepare specific proposals. Approximately a year later (January, 1974) we started to work."

Lightning Tips

In Texas, spring means thunderstorms and thunderstorms mean lightning. The Texas Safety Association, noting that lightning is the thunderstorm's worst killer, says the first rule of lightning safety is to stay indoors.

Also, advise safety experts, stay away from electrical appliances while the storm is overhead. Avoid open doors or windows, fireplaces, radiators, stoves, metal pipes and sinks, and don't use the telephone.

If lightning catches you out of doors, stay away from metal objects. Keep clear of fences, telephone or power lines, pipelines or structural steel fabrication. It is also unsafe to handle flammable material in open containers during lightning storms.

Seek shelter in buildings when possible, and remember that automobiles offer excellent lightning protection. Otherwise the best course is to lie low in a cave, ditch or canyon. If such protection is not available, simply crouch in the open.

Stay away from trees, poles and hills. The worst place to be is under a tree on a hill. Get out of the water and off small boats.

Bug Killer Can Be People Killer

Bug killers can turn into people killers if not properly handled, warns the Texas Safety Association.

The safety group reminds eager spring gardeners to take time to read the entire label before opening an insecticide container. Note warnings, precautions and antidotes. Never ignore label directions to use protective clothing or equipment.

Insecticides should be stored in the original container in a safe place where children and pets cannot accidentally come into contact with them.

Empty containers should be destroyed immediately. Some child fatalities have resulted from playing with empty containers.

Keep out of the path of the insecticide mist or spray and never smoke while spraying or dusting. Cover bird baths, pet dishes and fish pools to protect them from drifting poison.

After using an insecticide wash thoroughly and remove contaminated clothing immediately.
