'No Basis' Given For Negligence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander would make no comment Sunday on whether his agency had found any basis for negligence charges in connection with President Nixon's income tax returns for his first four years in office.

Alexander, appearing on national television, (CBS - Face the Nation), was asked that since no civil fraud and presumably no criminal fraud were found, was negligence found?

"And the answer to that question is no comment," Alexander replied. "The White House has issued a statement, and appropriately so. That statement, so far as this question is concerned, listed the aggregate amount plus interest that the IRS has asserted. It made no further breakdown of that aggregate. We don't propose to do so."

The IRS sent Nixon a bill for $432,787 in back taxes and the President announced he would pay every penny of it.

On another television network, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue which he cochaired with Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., had never intended to go into the possibility of fraud or negligence in connection with the President's tax returns.

"But I would think the House Judiciary Committee would want to look into this area," Mills said in an interview on ABC's Issues and Answers. "I would think there is enough in our committee staff report that justifies further investigation to determine whether the President or anyone connected with him violated the law."

Mills said he did not believe the IRS had charged the President a 5 per cent negligence penalty.

Alexander said apparently his predecessors had accepted presidential tax returns at face value, but under his stewardship, "in that respect we are breaking new ground."

Alexander also said his agency in the past had furnished the White House with reports on some "sensitive" tax cases, but he had stopped the practice. "Some information was furnished to the White House, but there was no continuing pattern," Alexander said. He said he stopped the practice when he took office about nine months ago.

Alexander also denied a suggestion by Sen. Lowell R. Weicker, R-Conn., that the White House used Internal Revenue Service files as a sort of "lending library" of tax information about persons President Nixon's staff listed as the administration's friends and enemies.

"But certain sensitive case reports, in our sensitive case procedure, were apparently forwarded to the White House," Alexander said.

He refused to identify the subjects of the "sensitive" by name or as being on either the "friends" or "enemies" list.

Shelby Friedman's note on streaking: "To bare is human. Highway traffic isn't always bad, notes the cynic. It generally clears up just when you get to your exit. Science has discovered many things (notes Bob Goddard) but it can't explain why a woman's slip sags down, while a man's shirt creeps up. A woman with a new mink coat can't wait to show it to the man she likes most and the woman she likes least. (For more laughs see Earl Wilson on Page 10.)"

Nixon Scores Diplomatic Success On Paris Visit

PARIS (UPI) — French newspapers and commentators — some with a touch of bitterness — said today President Nixon scored a notable diplomatic success by demonstrating the weight of U.S. influence during his weekend visit to Paris.

Minutes after memorial services which Nixon attended for the late President Georges Pompidou ended, the center of world diplomacy shifted to the U.S. ambassador's residence where Nixon met leaders of both east and west.

Roland Faure, the chief diplomatic writer for the conservative newspaper L'Aurore wrote:

"What a strange vengeance for America to see this feverish diplomatic activity taking place in the former Rothschild palace flying the American flag only a few steps from the Elysee (presidential palace), from which were issued so many condemnations of the White House and where the expulsion of American forces from our soil and France's pullout from Nato was decided."

Aurora and other newspapers said it was ironic that Nixon discussed a redefinition of Atlantic relations with Western Leaders in the same city where Pompidou had blocked such moves.

And Nixon, at a caviar-and-vodka breakfast with Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, underscored the closeness of American Soviet relations in the country where it is being condemned as a "condominium," French newspapers and radio stations said.

"The lord of the Western World," said a three-column headline in the conservative daily Le Figaro. The paper carried a cartoon showing a kneeling Europe kissing the hand of Nixon who is sitting on a throne with his feet resting on a funeral announcement, presumably Pompidou's.

ON FINANCE REFORM

Lawmakers Face Lengthy Fillibuster

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lengthy filibuster in the Senate against campaign finance reform legislation faces Congress in its push toward Easter recess beginning Thursday.

The bill for public financing of federal election campaigns, designed to end undue participation by special interest groups in national campaigns, is up for a second cloture vote Tuesday.

Cloture, the Senate gag rule, would shorten the filibuster opponents of the measure have waged the past three weeks. But more than 80 amendments already introduced must still be debated and voted upon.

The first cloture motion by proponents of public financing failed by four votes last Thursday.

The Senate is scheduled today to take up an amendment by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., to make federal election day a national holiday. He said it was aimed at reducing heavy absenteeism in U.S. elections.

Besides Humphrey's amendment, the Senate also will consider one by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., making it illegal to knowingly publish false or defamatory statements about a candidate for federal office.

President Signs Bill On Minimum Wage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon today signed a bill raising the minimum wage for nearly 57 million Americans to $2 an hour for the first time.

In approving legislation almost identical to a measure he vetoed only seven months ago, Nixon brought under the minimum wage umbrella for the first time domestic service employees and many workers in chain department stores.

The signing was a tacit admission the administration could not have sustained a veto, since approval of the measure by Congress was massive.

The signing was less than a ceremony. No congressional leaders were invited, and the only ones present for the historic presidential signature were Labor Secretary Peter Brennan and Nixon's assistant, Kenneth Cole.

The new bill, passed by Congress March 21, raises the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2 an hour. It also increases by seven million — to 56.5 million Americans — the number of workers covered by minimum wage laws.

In his oval office, Nixon took one pen from a box and signed the front of the bill, then with a flourish slid the pen across the desk to Brennan. Nixon then picked the bill up in his right hand and literally threw it into the out box on the corner of his desk.

In a written statement issued by the White House, Nixon said he had "some reservations about portions of this legislation," but added:

"On the whole, $274 contains more good than bad and I have concluded that the best interests of the American people will be served by signing it into law."

"Its basic purpose — to increase the minimum wage for working men and women of this country — deserves the support of all Americans."

"The federally legislated minimum wage for most American workers has remained static for six years, despite a number of increases in the cost of living. Raising the minimum wage is now a matter of justice that can no longer be fairly delayed."

The new bill, passed by Congress March 21, raises from $1.60 to $2 an hour. It also increases by 7 million — to 56.5 million Americans — the number of workers covered by minimum wage laws.

All indications were that even had Nixon decided to again veto the bill as inflationary, his veto would have been overridden by both the Senate and the House. The votes on passage by both chambers were overwhelming.

For most workers covered, the minimum wage would increase in two more steps to $2.30 in 1976. Coverage is extended to about 5 million federal, state and local government employees; to domestic service employees and some categories of employees in chain stores.

Nixon, back from his busy weekend, also was expected to turn his attention to areas in the Midwest and South ravaged by tornados last week, and to another Watergate decision.

He was meeting with James T. Lynn, secretary of Housing, and Urban Development, and federal disaster assistance administrator Thomas P. Dunne to review government help to the tornado-struck areas.

The President will campaign in Michigan's 8th Congressional District Wednesday in behalf of the GOP candidate James Sparling. There was some indication he might leave Tuesday for Saginaw.

IN GOLAN HEIGHTS

Israel Captures Syrian Prisoner, Loses Plane

United Press International — An Israeli plane went down in flames over the Golan Heights today in the first Israeli air loss since the October war. Israel said it captured its first Syrian prisoner in the current fighting.

Syria said it shot down the Israeli plane. Israel said its loss was from a fire aboard apparently caused by "technical mishap."

Israeli Military sources quoted by the national radio said the plane was on a surveillance patrol, checking Syrian troop movements, when its crew radioed at 11:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. CDT) that it was ablaze.

Arab newsmen in South Lebanon said the Israeli plane crashed in flames in the outskirts of Al Khureiba village, south of Shebaa village in the Marjayoun region four miles from the border with Israel.

The newsmen said the two pilots on the Israeli plane landed nearby and were taken by the Lebanese authorities.

A Syrian communique said Syrian defenses shot down the Israeli plane over the Mt. Hermon region where fighting has been going on for two days. The Israeli military command said the crew bailed out because of a fire aboard and were seen to have parachuted into Lebanese territory.

The only operational warplane used by Israel with more than one crew members is the two-seater American-made Phantom jet.

The Israeli announcement said the craft "was flying in the vicinity of Mt. Hermon when it was abandoned by its crew as the result of a fire which broke out, apparently resulting from a technical mishap."

Damascus radio interrupted a news broadcast at 1:15 p.m. (6:15 a.m. CDT) to broadcast a new military communique saying that a formation of Israeli warplanes tried to penetrate Syrian airspace in the Mount Hermon region.

"Our air defense system intercepted the enemy formation and shot down one of its planes which was seen crashing in fire in south Lebanon," the Syrian communique said.

The communique said fighting between Syrian and Israeli forces in the same region entered its second consecutive day.

The Israeli command said it used air power Saturday to drive Syrian infiltration units out of Israeli-held territory on the slopes of the craggy, basalt peak, which forms part of the border with Lebanon and Syria. But it denied Damascus assertions of further air strikes Sunday.

Israel last acknowledged losing a plane on Nov. 9, when the command said an unidentified aircraft was downed by an Egyptian ground-to-air missile over the Suez canal front.

Since then, two unmanned reconnaissance drones "fell" or were shot down by missiles over the canal, the army said.

Earlier, Israel said its troops captured a Syrian army commando belonging to an infiltration unit attempting to gain higher ground on the mountain.

Each side accused the other of escalating the fighting on its 28th consecutive day in the Golan Heights.

Israel's announcement on the Syrian prisoner said he was captured a day ago by troops who were sweeping the slopes of Mt. Hermon in search of infiltrators who had crossed the cease-fire line during the weekend. Another Syrian soldier was spotted, a spokesman said, but managed to escape.

The two nations have yet to exchange prisoners taken in the October war.

'FRESH AS A DAISY'

'Clean Up Alley' Drive Continues In 2nd Week

The Pampa Beautification Foundation is continuing its campaign to get citizens to "make their alley fresh as a daisy" during April.

Residents — property owners, tenants, occupants, lessees — are being asked to clean up the alleys behind their homes, businesses and property to help improve the appearance of the city.

The project is being conducted in cooperation with the City Public Works Department, the Sanitation Department and several youth groups.

Special attempts are being made to obtain compliance with City Ordinance No. 684, which requires trash receptacles for garbage collection and removal.

Trash receptacles should be galvanized metal or other approved material with suitable handles and tight fitting lids or covers of not less than 10 nor more than 30 gallon capacity. When filled, they should not weigh more than 75 pounds.

Anyone with large items which will not comply with the ordinance can have them removed at no charge by telephoning Allen Vickers at 665-1689.

Other information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Denny McDougall, 665-3478; Mrs. Al Smith, 665-3612; Mrs. Thelma Bray, 665-1180; Jiggs Cooke, 665-8481, or Allen Vickers, 665-1689.

People wanting help with cleaning up their alley ways may contact Pampa High School Choir members at 669-2681, who will clean up the areas for small charges.

Patricia's Parents Leave For Vacation In Mexico

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The parents of Patricia Hearst, angry, frustrated and exhausted after more than two months of agonized waiting for their daughter's release, left Sunday for a rest in Mexico.

"They just had to get away," family friend Ira Walsh told newsmen at the Hillsborough home of Randolph and Catherine Hearst.

He said "absolutely" that the Hearsts had not left to meet secretly with their daughter.

Two of Patricia's sisters, Anne and Gina, and Gina's husband, Jay Bosworth, were to join them for a stay of up to 10 days, the family spokesman said.

He would not reveal the Hearst's destination, but did say that Hearst was prepared to return immediately if there are any new developments.

Patricia, 20, granddaughter of newspaper giant William Randolph Hearst, was dragged from her Berkeley apartment Feb. 4. In a tape recording received Wednesday of last week, she renounced her former way of life, termed her father a liar, and said she had decided to join her kidnapers — the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) — and fight beside them.

In an interview Saturday, in the dining room of his home, Hearst said he thought his daughter had been brainwashed.

"I think she was — not that they had her in a tiger cage or anything like that — but I think that after 60 days you can change people. I think she believes some of the things on the tape and not others. The girl I knew 60 days before would never have made the statements she made," he said.

Hearst now terms the SLA kidnapers as "cruel people."

"I guessed wrong on the SLA all along, and I thought they were going to keep their word and didn't," he said. "I do believe she's unharmed, but to put out a message one day saying they're going to release her and then a day later put out one saying she's going to stay with them, this is just plain cruelty," Hearst said.

"I think they're just cruel people, and I think they fundamentally hate this society so much that they think anything's fair."

The day before the bizarre taped message that Patricia was joining her kidnapers, the SLA in another communication said they would reveal the time and place of her release within 72 hours.

Hearst said it was "idiotic" for anyone to think Patricia had been a party to her kidnaping.

"I know a lot of people think she was, but I think it's idiotic. When you go through that first tape and analyze it, you realize she was terrorized," Hearst said.

Guild Members Conclude Voting On Contract Plan

NEW YORK (UPI) — WIFE SERVICE Guild members across the country concluded voting today on a new two-year contract with United Press International on the 22nd day of a strike against the news agency. The vote on a new contract, for 929 Guild-covered employees in the United States, began at 2 p.m. EDT Sunday and ends at 2 p.m. EDT today. Counting of the returns was scheduled for 6 p.m. at Guild headquarters in New York.

The contract proposal calls for pay raises of 5.67 per cent in each of the next two years. The Guild sought a 10 per cent pay raise in each year.

Under the contract proposal, minimum salaries for senior editorial employees would go from the $300 in the contract that expired March 15, to $317 immediately and to $335 on Jan. 1, 1975.

The proposal is essentially the same one that UPI had made when the Guild struck at 8 a.m. March 18. The balloting marks the first time Guild members have had the opportunity to vote on the proposal.

The Guild's four-member negotiating committee unanimously recommended that Guild members reject the contract.

The committee said, in part: "Management's best offer simply fails to meet the problems of the employees. And now, after three weeks on strike, it's time the employees again have the opportunity to join with the committee in expressing their outrage at management's cheapness."

All entries must be submitted in black and white, pen and ink. The minimum design from 8" to 12" in diameter and the design should depict the heritage of Gray County.

The design winner will receive $100 or two sets of artists proofs, and will be paid by the Gray County Bicentennial Committee. There is no entry fee and entries must not be folded.

All entries should be mailed to the Gray County Bicentennial Commemorative Design Contest, P.O. Box 1556, Pampa, Texas 79065, and be postmarked by the deadline, May 11.

Anyone interested in entering the medal design contest may pick up the rules at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office in the Hughes Bldg.

Reports said entry into the library was made through a broken window in the meeting room at the north end of the building.

Legislation On Land Use Loses Much Of Support

By BERNARD SIEGAN
Adjunct Professor of Law
University of San Diego
Law School

At the beginning of the current session of Congress, in January, 1973, little seemed more certain than the passage of some form of national land use legislation. Its supporters were even then already devising new means to strengthen the federal presence once it had been established.

About a year later, the picture had completely changed. In late February of this year, the House Rules Committee voted 9 to 4 against sending a land use measure recommended by the House Interior Committee to the floor for debate and vote, and that action dimmed drastically the prospect of a national land use law for this session.

The Senate passed a similar bill last year, which like the House Committee's version would have provided $800 million over the next eight years for States to develop comprehensive plans for regulating the use of land.

Originally the administration had strongly backed the legislation but it too became disenchanted and switched support to a very mild bill. The vote of the Rules Committee and position of the Administration reflected growing opposition to the legislation.

Probably the principal factor favorable to the adoption of national land use controls was the minimal knowledge the public and the communications media had about this highly complicated area.

Backers touted the bill as an aid to a wide variety of popular causes from removing unsightly hamburger stands to saving the land for future generations from the rapacious and unscrupulous developers. It was difficult to contest legislation that is supposedly preserving one of the country's most precious resources for the common interest, not allowing it to be squandered on selfish uses.

Unfortunately for its proponents, however, the selfishness issue on the Washington scene is usually a case of the pot calling the kettle black. It became apparent that the bill's principal sponsorship was from one of the most vociferous special interest groups—the environmentalists, and would be administered by another, the politicians and bureaucrats at federal and state levels.

That is a combination that would invariably impede development of the land upon which much of business and labor is dependant for their livelihood. An unusual alliance of industry and labor consequently emerged to fight the legislation and for at least one time, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the carpenters' union had a common legislative objective.

They successfully argued to members of Congress that the bill by curtailing development would further deteriorate an already bleak economic outlook.

With that experience in hand, there was no forecasting what the bureaucrats would do when given authority over the vast amount of private property in the nation.

Second, the environmentalist movement appears for the moment to have lost its steam. The energy crisis has created great cynicism about the groups that stalled the Alaskan pipeline for years and now seek to stop the development of many conventional energy sources.

Congress may be more willing to challenge the environmentalists' demands on the grounds that their proposals are exceedingly injurious not beneficial to the living environment of the average person.

Third, this legislation loomed as a serious threat to property rights. Already publications sponsored or inspired by a Federal agency, the Council on Environmental Quality, complained that court interpretations of constitutional provisions on property rights were preventing government from having full control over the use of the land. That was the handwriting on the wall as to what could be expected from the proposed law.

The same issues would appear strongly persuasive to most voters. Too often, however, there is a huge time gap between the passage of the law and public understanding of it and its consequences.

ON NUCLEAR MATERIALS Ford Foundation Report Urges More Precaution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Warning that it is not difficult to make an atom bomb, a Ford Foundation study said that the growth of the nuclear power industry carries a "substantial risk" of terrorists or others stealing nuclear materials to make illegal weapons.

The report said present safeguards against nuclear theft are inadequate and called on the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) to act now "to develop long-term safeguards that will deal effectively with the risks."

"Terrorists or criminals or even a single fanatic might try to steal nuclear weapons material for money or for purposes of political coercion," it said. "If they succeeded, they could use the materials in a number of ways to threaten groups, governments, or whole communities."

If such a raid should occur, the report envisioned "a group of perhaps five to ten persons using sophisticated firearms and equipment" storming a power plant or other facility in search of fissionable materials. "It said officials should be ready therefore to meet "a maximum credible threat."

The 252-page report was sponsored by the Ford Foundation's Energy Policy

Project and prepared by Theodore B. Taylor, a physicist and former scientist at the AEC's Los Alamos center, and Mason Willrich, an attorney and authority on nuclear safeguards and arms control.

The authors said the power industry is using increasing amounts of plutonium and highly-enriched uranium, the stuff that goes into the explosive core of atomic bombs. Within a few years, they added, "tens of thousands of kilograms of these fissionable materials will be flowing through the U.S. nuclear power industry."

"A few kilograms (20 to 50 pounds) of these fissionable materials are enough to make a bomb of mass destruction," the report said, "and a few grams of plutonium (2 to 3 ounces) if effectively dispersed as airborne particles, could be a deadly radioactive danger in a widespread area."

Dear Abby

Boss should specify a secretary's duties

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The other day you published a letter from a secretary who professed to like her job and her boss, but she complained about being sent on non-clerical errands...

And yet it would seem to me that if the boss sends her on these errands, and she does them on company time, then they are, indeed, a part of the job and she does not have a legitimate complaint...

DEAR MS. J.: When one advertises for a typist, if "leg-work" is part of the job, the applicants should be so advised. An employer does not buy "time"—he buys "talent, muscle, or specialized skill."

DEAR ABBY: I saw you on a talk show recently, and you were asked: "At what age do you think children should be told the facts of life?"

I agree with you. I'm with Planned Parenthood, and this morning we heard from a group of angry mothers in one school district who are fuming about our week-long educational programs for 7th and 8th graders...

DEAR ABBY: Education is the answer to V. D., illegitimacy and irresponsible sex. Count me as another who wishes they had sex education in the schools when I was a kid.

DEAR ABBY: I can't resist writing this letter to "HAD IT IN NASHVILLE," who wanted to have his wife's teeth cemented together to keep her from talking...

My husband will confirm the fact that I had no trouble talking for the entire six weeks.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: Next Sunday is Easter. Please do not give a child a living gift unless he is old enough to care for it properly.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

People often ask me what the correct play is of a trump suit containing nine cards headed by the ace, king, and jack. The correct out-of-context play would be to play the ace and king, hoping to catch the queen, rather than to finesse the jack.

Unluckily for him, East ruffed this lead; and, in time, the defenders cashed three spade tricks, to inflict a one-trick set on declarer. Admittedly, declarer got a tough break in the trump suit, but he really had no one but himself to blame for his defeat.

Inga is always on the lookout for a sorority sister. She gets them to join the group and has the leadership ability which enables her to inspire her sisters to work on sorority philanthropies.

Upon capturing West's diamond lead, declarer should have led a trump and finessed his jack. With the jack winning, dummy would then be re-entered via the club ace, and another finesse taken against the East's marked queen.

Inga has also attended many of the Alpha Delta Pi state and national conventions. She has been our magazine chairman for ten years.

Each sunspot's enormously powerful magnetic field pours out streams of electrified particles that can cause radio signals to bounce crazily about the globe.

Inga is a leader in her church, taught a women's Bible class for 12 years, member and officer of the women's association and is currently working with the adult education program.

When this deal actually arose, our South declarer won the opening lead, with the board's ace, after which he led a trump to his king. He was quite unhappy when West discarded a spade on this lead.

Inga has been a constant supporter of the National Foundation, Jean, her daughter, is a polio victim. Inga has worked on the Mothers March, served on the board of this organization, been Re-entering dummy via the club ace, he next led the board's remaining trump and finessed his jack successfully, leaving East with the Q-9 of trumps. Hoping to discard one or two of his losing spades on the board's high clubs, South now led his remaining club to the board's king.

1040 U.S. Individual Income Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

- Q. I've divorced and remarried. And I have custody of my child from the first marriage. My new spouse is helping to support the child. In determining whether or not I can claim the child as a dependent, do I count amounts furnished by my present spouse as support furnished by me?
- A. Yes. A divorced parent with custody who remarries is now allowed to consider support provided by the new spouse in determining who contributed over half the support for the child.
- Q. My son spent his earnings from a summer job to buy a car. Does this amount count toward support furnished by him which I figure out whether or not I can claim him as a dependent?
- A. No. Amounts spent to purchase a car do not count toward total support.
- Q. I was out sick two months last year, but my employer paid me sick pay. The sick pay is reported on my W-2 form. Do I still have to use your form to compute my sick pay?
- A. No. If you have sick pay and your W-2 form shows the amount, you do not have to fill out a Form 2440 with your return. Just enter the sick pay amount on your Form 1040 and attach the W-2 form to your return.
- Q. How do I compute my sales tax deduction?
- A. You may deduct the actual sales tax you paid on purchases, based on your records, or you can use the tables in your tax forms package. If you use the sales tax tables to determine your deduction, you may add to the amount shown in the tables the sales tax paid on the purchase of an automobile, airplane, boat, mobile home and materials you used to build a new home.
- Q. Can every individual partici-

ate in the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Check-off?

A. Yes. Every individual, other than a nonresident alien, may participate if he has a tax liability of one dollar or more. If you want to participate, designate $1 ($2 if married filing jointly) by checking off the appropriate box on your tax return. Participation in the check-off will not increase your tax or reduce any refund you may have coming.

Q. Are scholarships taxable?

A. If you receive a scholarship or fellowship grant, you may exclude the entire amount from your income if you are a degree candidate. If you are not a degree candidate, you may still exclude up to $300 times the number of months for which you receive amounts under the grant during the tax year. The exclusion for a non-degree candidate is limited to 36 months during his lifetime. Payments under a grant are taxable if made to compensate you for past, present or future services or to allow you to pursue studies or research primarily for the benefit of the person who granted the scholarship. For more details, see IRS Publication 520, "Tax Information for American Scholars in the U.S. and Abroad." It's available free from your IRS office.

Q. What kinds of losses are deductible as casualties?

A. Casualty losses include damage from a hurricane, tornado, flood, storm, fire or accident, damage to the taxpayer's auto from an automobile accident not caused by the willful act or willful negligence of the taxpayer, damage from a mine cave-in or sonic boom and certain losses from smog or vandalism. Losses not deductible as casualties include breakage of china or glassware through handling or by a family pet, residential property damage to trees and shrubs as a result of disease, damage from progressive deterioration or moths or termites, expenses incident to a casualty, such as rent for temporary quarters, losses from reduction in value caused by a nearby disaster and the loss of future profits.

MCCALL WON'T RUN SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Gov. Tom McCall said he has decided against seeking the U.S. Senate seat of fellow Republican Bob Packwood because "Oregon is where my family and I want to be."

He added in his announcement: "By turning my back on politics I can wind up my second term most productively and face my neighbors through the years ahead with an untroubled conscience." He added that he feared an election fight with Packwood would be "arduous and the infighting would be serious."

START YOUR OWN SMALL TOWN BICYCLE SHOP

By J. SHUTTLEWORTH
Last year, for the first time since U.S. and Canadian farm families started moving to the city, the rural-to-urban exodus was reversed.

That is, in 1973, more individuals traded the hectic pace of big cities for the relative peace and quiet of small towns and family farms than the other way around. Probably even more folks would have done so, if they had been sure they could make a living "out there where the air is cleaner and the neighbors still say 'howdy'."

Such a worry needn't bother you, however, if you're really determined to build a better life for yourself in a small town. Self-employment opportunities are now burgeoning "in the sticks."

One old-but-new business enterprise that every small town needs these days — at least in hear Sharon and Gary Holmes tell about it — is a bicycle shop. Then again, maybe the Holmes have been prejudiced by the success of their bike store in Independence, Kan. (population 12,000).

Any why is a bicycle shop a good bet for a small town? "Because," says Gary, "a bike boom is underway. In 1972, two-wheelers outsold automobiles for the first time in modern history... and someone has to market and service all those millions of machines. Besides that, it's very satisfying to be a dealer in non-polluting transportation."

"There's also a great deal of satisfaction to be derived from selling really top-quality bikes — which are usually available only from specialized shops in the big cities — to folks in the country who would otherwise be forced to purchase second-rate machines from a chain store."

According to Gary, it doesn't take a great deal of capital to launch a bike business. "Sharon and I began on $3,500 and probably could have gotten by with a little less. Whatever your initial grubstake, though, we think it's best if you don't borrow the money. Today's interest rates could easily make the difference between success and failure."

However large or small the financial foundation on which you base your new velocipedic empire, the Holmes advise that you pay particular attention to the location of the enterprise.

Look for a town with a population of at least 10,000 and spend a little extra time, if necessary, making a favorable deal for a storefront right in the center of the business district.

"Our first building, which was small and rented for just $60 a month, was only two blocks from the main intersection in Independence. Since that's a short distance by city standards, we assumed we were 'downtown.' To the local people, however, our place was on the outskirts of the community and we had very little walk-in business until we moved to a roomier, better-located shop which, by the way, costs us a monthly $125."

You can find wholesale suppliers of bicycles and bike accessories by thumbing through the Yellow Pages of every major city in your area (the local telephone company should have these directories in its main office).

A few supply houses that the Holmes couple especially recommend are Titane Pacific in Hawthorne, Calif.; Alpine Distributors of Fort Collins, Colo.; Beacon Cycle Supply out of Milwaukee, Wis.; and D-I-N Industries, Inc. in Mountain View, Calif.

If you begin a bike shop with $4,000, Gary Holmes says you should set $500 aside to cover the first two months' operating expense. Reserve another $200 for initial advertising.

An investment of $1,500 to $2,000 should buy 17 to 21 medium-priced 10-speed bicycles and about $400 will purchase enough parts and accessories to put your store in operation. Keep the rest of your capital handy for the placement of the "special" order or two that just might walk in the door during the first weeks you're open.

And don't forget to allow about $100 for tools! A set of metric wrenches, some adjustable wrenches and a few screwdrivers are basic, as is the equipment for repairing bike tires. Then there are the gadgets (ask your wholesaler) made especially for removing a 10-speed's rear gear cluster, etc.

For a crash course in bike mechanics, the Holmes favor a copy of the $3.95 book, "Derailleur 5, 10 and 15 Speed Bicycle Repair" (From XYZ Information Corporation, 2116 Vanowen, Canoga Park, California 91303). They also point out that some distributors hold regular repair "schools" for their dealers.

"You'll find it well worth $25 a year to belong to the National Bicycle Dealers Association, 29025 Euclid Avenue, Wickliffe, Ohio 44092," adds Gary. "Your membership will bring you a service rate book and a listing of bicycle and parts suppliers all over the United States. By all means, join!"

Sharon and Gary Holmes won't say exactly how much their bike shop pays them in money, but they're obviously happy with the business in more ways than one.

"We feel that a good part of our income is measured in the satisfaction of meeting the people who ride bicycles... and in being able to work hard at something we like in quiet, peaceful surroundings."

So there you have it: a young couple who has made today's bicycle boom finance their way to the good life in a small town. Maybe the Holmes' example holds the key to your future too.

For a more complete explanation of how Sharon and Gary Holmes established their bike shop, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to The Mother Earth News, in care of The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 179, "Small-Town-Bike Shop."

Origins Of Anti-Semitism

The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) of the Jewish lodge B'nai B'rith has long been concerned with a phenomenon called "anti-Semitism." The term "anti-Semitism" is not very clear since Arabs are also Semitic — that is, of a race tracing its ancestry to the Biblical Shem, one of the three sons of Noah.

Webster's Third New International Dictionary gives two definitions. It says that anti-Semitism is "hostility toward Jews as a religious or racial minority group often accompanied by social, economic, and political discrimination."

Now the organization claims to have identified a new variety — an anti-Semitism that "is not necessarily deliberate in character." It accused "respectable elements in the American media, clergy and government" of this malady, naming among others Jeffrey St. John whose column for Copley News Service sometimes appears on this page.

The ADL study will be published as a book titled "The New Anti-Semitism" (McGraw-Hill, New York). St. John did not take the labeling with silence. He said the book "is a tragic confession of how far the ADL will go to use the issue of anti-Semitism as a political weapon to silence or smear those who do not share their subjective and emotional view of the Arab-Israeli conflict."

As examples of the wrong way he cited the ADL's 1964 book, "Danger On The Right," as a "transparent attempt to link political extremism and anti-Semitism with the presidential candidacy of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater."

Jew In American Politics). The shrillness of the style, recklessness of statement and readiness to substitute abuse and invective for a reasoned approach characterize the ADL attack on American conservatives.

St. John then noted that the ADL had concentrated its fire on "the right," and then pointed out "Yet as the ADL belatedly acknowledge in a tactical shift, the New Left became a source of anti-Semitism." He cited British scholar George Lichtheim who observed that the origins of Socialist anti-Semitism were the same as anti-capitalism.

The ADL and St. John appear to be agreed on one point: there is such a thing as anti-Semitism. The question is where to apply the branding iron — on the pro-capitalist ideologues or on the Socialist ideologues. The answer, if any, is subject to determination — not by argument — but by an inspection of the historical facts. The subject would be worth another ADL study.

INSIDE LABOR Neo-Revolutionists Warned

By VICTOR RIESEL WASHINGTON — In weird fashion, the grim series of kidnappings which followed the abduction of Patricia Hearst is giving labor racketeers and pension fund embezzlers a reprieve from intense investigation, pursuit and prosecution.

It all pivots on the virtually unknown, deliberately anonymous Justice Department's management-labor section which did such a fantastic job in solving the Yablonski murder case. The special unit actually is the depository of Hobbs Act investigations and cases in addition to probes of malfeasance inside industry on either side.

The little known Hobbs Act is a tough and handy weapon. It provides a sentence of 20 years in a federal penitentiary and a $10,000 fine for those convicted of attempting to extort or actually extorting, under threats of violence, property (including money) of businesses in interstate commerce.

As the kidnappings flared across the country the Justice Department sought a law under which the federal authorities could move into what might be considered "merely" violence falling under state or local jurisdiction. There are, of course, other laws. But what if the kidnaper did not cross a state line? The civil rights law could be used but there are legal complications. So the Justice Department hit on the Hobbs Act.

In the case of editor Reg Murphy, the alleged kidnappers reportedly said his company could pay the $700,000 ransom since he didn't have that kind of money. In the case of Mrs. Eunice Kronholm's abduction, the three kidnappers reportedly asked her husband's bank to pay $200,000 ransom. So the Hobbs Act was invoked.

considerable derision of Hoffa inside labor over his "use" of Pennsylvania Congressman Larry Williams to intercede in his behalf with both Mr. Nixon and Bill Saxbe. Insiders report that some influential members of Teamsters, Philadelphia Local 107 made contact with Williams who represents the Seventh District.

Williams then mooched in on Saxbe, bringing with him one of the strong men of the Philadelphia crowd. However, Williams is considered "anti-labor" by the movement's political analysts. The congressman by their scorecard has voted wrong 14 times and right only 4. He voted against labor policy on food stamps for strikers, on railroad workers' compensation, on legal services, and he even voted against the Alaska pipeline.

He fronted for Hoffa in the ex-Teamsters president's first important move on the road back to power. And it complicates life for the Justice Department as well as for the overworked management-labor unit.

This section now has several prime investigations going. It spent considerable time on the Teamsters Chicago-based Central States.

Southeast and Southwest $1.7 billion fund which has been gnawed at, according to Justice Department officials, by some of the toughest operators in organized crime. It's no secret that hundreds of millions of the fund's money is "tainted." What's vital now is the disclosure of the higher-ups.

Some former and current Justice Department sources who've spent years on the Teamsters' pension funds say any "real revelations" would show some "mighty dramatic national names" linked to the alleged misuse of scores of millions of dollars of the Teamsters old-age money.

At the moment the management-labor section has several other funds under investigation. But its first duty now is to help prosecute the kidnapers. Strategy is to show that the FBI and the unit can move like greased lightning under the Hobbs Act, put the guilty away for 20 years and fine them heavily. This would, it's hoped, discourage neo-revolutionaries from any new wild conspiracies. And keep them from being political martyrs.

Then back to the mobs. (All Rights Reserved)

INSIDE WASHINGTON Foreign Debt Write-off Limited By The House

By ROBERT ALLEN WASHINGTON — There will be no more covert billion-dollar write-offs of debts owed by foreign countries — if Congress can help it! Such bureaucratic giveaways are explicitly prohibited in an unheralded provision in the $115 million foreign disaster aid bill passed by the House.

Although virtually unknown, this ban is one of the most important pieces of foreign aid legislation enacted in years. The milestone measure is a direct outgrowth of the State Department's unannounced write-off of $2.2 billion of a $3.3 billion debt India has long owed the U.S. — without the prior knowledge of approval of Congress.

This arbitrary action triggered a storm of indignant bipartisan condemnation in Congress and demand for corrective legislation.

That was authored by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., influential member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, with the backing of 56 bipartisan co-sponsors. In spearheading this crackdown, Wolff contended, "It is Congress that votes to loan taxpayers' money to foreign countries, and Congress must retain funds."

Under Wolff's restriction, as overwhelmingly approved by the House, the executive branch of the government will no longer be able to unilaterally decide what is done about foreign debts — as in the case of the multi-billion-dollar giveaway to India.

Hereafter, Congress will have to be given at least 30 days' advance notice of such a write-off — sufficient time to block it. Following is the text of this precedent-setting curb: "The Secretary of State shall keep the appropriate committees of Congress fully and currently informed of the ongoing status of any negotiations with any foreign government regarding the cancellation, renegotiation, rescinding, or settlement of any debt owed to the U.S."

The Secretary of State shall transmit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the chairmen of the appropriate Senate committees, the text of any international agreement proposing a modification in the terms of such debt no less than 30 days prior to its entry into force, together with a detailed explanation of the interest of the United States in such modification."

It is now evident that Ambassador Daniel Moynihan "negotiated" the $2.2 billion Indian write-off on express orders from the State Department.

There was no hint anything like this was contemplated when he went to Delhi. It came to light only after he arranged the huge giveaway and returned to Washington to "explain" it to members of Congress. Legislators reacted heatedly and caustically. Alarm was voiced that other massive write-offs might be secretly contemplated.

There still remain vast amounts of debts owed by foreign countries, exclaimed Wolff. "At a time when our domestic economy is under such tremendous strains, the executive branch must not be allowed to engage in giant giveaways involving these debts without first answering to Congress. It is essential that Congress establish an explicit role in the making of executive agreements, which have become a major instrument of foreign policy completely circumventing the part Congress must play in implementing important international policies."

That's what the milestone Wolff provision does, and it remains to be seen what the administration does about it. Addendum: The $115 million in foreign disaster aid is earmarked for three countries — $50 million for Pakistan; $50 million for the six drought-stricken west African countries comprising the so-called Sahel region; $15 million for Nicaragua. Of the three, the only one that drew House fire was the funds for Pakistan.

Illustrative was the blast by Rep. H.R. Gross, R-Iowa, a ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Committee: "Pakistan is where a gaggle of Moslem potentates recently met to castigate the U.S. Pakistan was their host. What with the Arab countries piling up billions extracted from us for oil, I wonder why they can't share a few billions to help their co-religionists. Maybe we ought to let them find out if blood is as thick as oil. I suggest members ask their constituents what they think of this kind of foreign disaster relief at their expense."

Polomac Fever Senator Ervin wants to take the Justice Department out of partisan politics. He hopes to improve its arrested development.

ALL THAT GLITTERS The Heart Of Middle America

By VIC GOLD BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — We don't feel about our President down here the way you people do up there. The conservative local business man is quick to tell a visitor from the nation's capital. In the way the man says "you people up there" he might as well have been a member of the Irish Republican Army talking about the regime in Belfast.

Spiro Agnew may be gone, but the currents that made him a hero in these parts run strong as ever. Alabama's license plate boasts its geographical centrism as "The Heart of Dixie." It would be equally correct to call George Wallace's state the spiritual "heart of Middle America."

In Alabama, at least, the Nixon mandate of 1972 isn't just alive and well. It's kicking law and order, social permissiveness, the economy, welfareism, amnesty and national defense are still the front-row issues. Statewide Alabama polls show a consensus supporting my conservative business friend's firm conviction that the Watergate scandal is simply an "obsession" being fanned by the Eastern elitist media.

This is the ultimate source of Nixon's continued popularity here. Not necessarily love of the man himself or condonation of scandal as the fact that this President draws editorial fire from the same people most Southerners feel have made their region a national scapegoat over the years. Thus the enemy of their enemy is their friend. Put yet another way, can anyone who doesn't get along with Dan Rather be all bad?

There are deeper reasons, of course, for Southern revulsion to talk of presidential impeachment. The mind of the South has always been a study in contradiction. An instinct for rugged individualism lives side by side with deep respect for tradition and existing institutions. When the present incumbent invokes the spirit of "the presidency," he finds no more receptive audience than listeners "down here."

Wallace reflects this consensus by what he refrains from saying about Nixon and Watergate. Like George Foreman passing over the body of Ken Norton on his way to that really big bout with Muhammad Ali, Wallace is going through the motions of running for reelection to an unprecedented third term as governor, but his eye is on the eagle — that is a major role in the making of a President, 1976.

More than any race for Alabama governor in modern memory, the outcome of this year's contest is foregone. Four years ago, en route to a second term after the death of his former wife Lurleen, Wallace had to go down to the wire to defeat former Gov. Albert Brewer. This time around, Brewer and other heavyweight contenders passed up a confrontation with Wallace, whose crippling wounds incurred at the hand of a would-be assassin during the 1972 presidential campaign have elevated him to the status of a political folk deity.

Since the errant excesses of those people "up there" in Washington have always been a Wallace theme, an observer might consider Watergate to be ready-made grist for his oratorical mill. Certainly, if the revelations of the past year had been the product of a liberal Democratic administration, it wouldn't be too difficult to imagine the Alabama governor's citing Watergate as the ultimate example of the evils of big federal government.

But Wallace shrewdly recognizes the confluence of his own constituent strength with that of Nixon's. Free-swinging criticism of Nixon's handling of Watergate would only put Wallace on the side of the Eastern elitist media and those liberal Democrats "up there."

Meanwhile, state Sen. Gene McLain, a north Alabama gubernatorial candidate playing Ken Norton to Wallace's Foreman, is trying gamely to make a fight of it. But McLain's biggest punch to date has been to protest Wallace's having Alabama football coach Bear Bryant and Auburn's Shug Jordan introduce him at his campaign kickoff. A breakdown in the doctrine of separation of church and state, you understand, mixing religious with political duties at a single public function. (Copyright 1974)

PAUL HARVEY NEWS Now Whites Protesting

By PAUL HARVEY Now white people protest. That they are victims. Of discrimination. The U.S. Supreme Court is now considering whether white students may be turned back at the schoolhouse door in favor of black students with lesser qualifications.

And in industry, white men say they are being denied the best jobs in favor of women and blacks. Cambridge research, studying this phenomenon, is hearing complaints from employees of AT&T, General Motors, Polaroid, others — complaints that these corporations, scrambling to follow government orders, are practicing discrimination in reverse.

The federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission demands that industries employ a percentage of nonwhites "or else."

And the "or else" could include a lawsuit such as the one which cost AT&T $40 million last year. One large company told The Wall Street Journal that it is sick and tired of lawsuits — spending hundreds of thousands of dollars preparing, defending and losing discrimination cases — so that company has now ordered its personnel directors to hire and promote blacks and women or they, themselves, will be fired.

But does the law allow discrimination in reverse? In fiscal 1973, 50 white males filed their own complaints with the EEOC. And what the Supreme Court decides about discrimination against whites in schools will likely be interpreted as applicable to industry as well. The black-white confrontation has moved north. Black-white coexistence and co-operation are being accomplished without fuss or flourish in the South. Some of us have recognized for a generation the better "understanding" which exists between the races in the South; more mutual appreciation, less hypocrisy.

Now it's provable statistically. In 1965 — before there ever was a federal voting rights law — 72 blacks held elective office in the South. Today, 1,307 do. And however uncomfortable the accelerated evolution was to some Southerners, nonetheless it was accomplished with dignity, mutual respect and minimal friction.

Indeed, Mississippi and Alabama — two Deep South states which had the lowest black voter registration rate in our nation 10 years ago — no lead all Southern states in the number of blacks actually elected to public office. Mississippi now has 174 elected black officials, proportionately more than any other Southern state. Alabama has 149. And more blacks have won election to public office in the South than in the North.

The South, in the American tradition, is a melting pot. The North is a pressure cooker. (Copyright 1974)

Lefors Pirates Capture Title, Going To Regional

By PAUL SIMS
LEFORS — The Lefors Pirates ran up 186 points last Thursday to outdistance second place by 102 points and win the District 2-B Track Meet while qualifying six individuals and both relay teams for the regional meet.

The district meet was held at Perryton.

Behind the winners were Groom, 84; Follett, 80; Booker, 60; Allison, 30; Darrouzett, 25; Miami, 19; Mobeetie, 10; and Brisco, no score. Groom won the freshman division. Miami was second and Lefors third.

"We had a real good day," said Pirate coach Leonard Tolbert, who saw his Lefors football team finish with a 9-1 record, best of district teams last season. The track victory had a mild atmosphere of revenge since Groom won the district in football while Lefors was second.

"I'm very satisfied with the kids, they put out a great effort this year," added Tolbert.

Out of the 14 events, Lefors qualified in nine for regional. Those who will make the trip to Lubbock April 19 for the two-day meet include the 440-yard

FACING FINE

Mathews--The Atlanta Finley

ATLANTA (UPI) — One more pitch, one more flick of those 40-year-old miracle wrists of his, and Hank Aaron's troubles will be all over.

Not Eddie Mathews' though.

He's in for some more bad news, coming from the same source it did last time, the baseball commissioner.

Now that he's back home, Hank Aaron can hardly miss. With Atlanta opening an 11-game home stand tonight against Los Angeles, Aaron is odds on to hit at least one into the seats before the Braves wind up at home a week from this coming Thursday against San Diego.

Hank Aaron will hear from Bowie Kuhn immediately after he breaks Babe Ruth's home run record. He will hear in the form of a diamond studded $3,000 wrist watch with the numerals 715 implanted in solid gold.

Eddie Mathews will hear from the commissioner also, but in an entirely different way.

Kuhn's Message
 Bowie Kuhn's message to him more likely will be in the form of a fine, possibly as stiff as $3,500, and that's pretty stiff because $5,000 is as high as the commissioner is allowed to go.

Mathews challenged Kuhn's authority last Friday night when he said he would not start Aaron in either Saturday or Sunday's game in Cincinnati.

Kuhn got right back to Mathews.

He told him he had unlimited power under the rules of baseball.

"I can suspend you for the rest of your life," Kuhn said.

That shook Mathews up a bit.

He backed off.

Now Kuhn feels he has to follow through, and if Mathews is at all curious how the commissioner usually does this, he should check with Charlie Finley, something of an expert on the subject.

For his part, Hank Aaron is anxious to get no. 715 over with, not only because he has been shooting at it now for the past few years, but also because it will bring him relief from some of the questions. Not all, but some.

Bad Day

He didn't look good at all at the plate or in the field in Sunday's 5-3 win over the Reds, being called out twice on strikes, grounding out feebly in his only other time up and letting George Foster's sixth inning fly ball drop for a double before departing in the seventh.

The natural question in many minds was whether Aaron tried as hard as he could, or had he made only a half hearted effort knowing the Braves preferred him to get the record back home.

Aaron never so much as blinked when the question was put point blank to him — had he gone all out?

"I did the best I could," he said, softly, in that almost delicate way of his. "I played the best I could."

"Some people will naturally think you held back," one newsman offered.

"I can't help what people think," said Aaron. "I played the best I could. It's not that easy."

The Braves never asked. They goofed. It could have cost them at least a million, which is roughly what they figure to make now on this current home stand.

West Coast Teams Move Ahead Early

United Press International
 The West Coast swept to quick domination of the young National League race Sunday with their third straight victories. Henry Aaron took a night flight to Atlanta and a rendezvous with baseball history.

Both the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants swept their opening home stands with wins Sunday and moved on to Cincinnati and Atlanta for the only games on the slate on Monday.

Aaron, ordered into the lineup at Cincinnati by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, saw nothing but sliders all day and went nothing for three. The Braves returned to Atlanta for an 11-game home stand starting Monday night against Al Downing of the Dodgers.

The 40-year-old new home run king needs only one more to break Babe Ruth's record. Aaron was short with suggestions he did not try his best to break the record in Atlanta's 53 win over the Reds Sunday.

"I played the best I could," Aaron said.

After his second strike out, Aaron returned to the dugout muttering, "sliders, sliders, sliders."

The Dodgers, off to their best season start in nearly a decade, crushed San Diego 9-2 to sweep their series behind Jimmy Wynn's third home run of the new season. Wynn now has seven hits in 13 times at bat.

Rain, Snow, Jackson Hilite AL

United Press International
 Foul weather ruined three games in the American League Sunday, but there was no rain on Reggie Jackson's parade of ribs.

The Oakland Athletics got eight runs, and Jackson drove in seven of them. He hit two three-run homers and a runcrossing single, and the Athletics had no trouble beating the Texas Rangers, 8-4.

Half of the American League matchups never finished the day's competition. Boston and Milwaukee didn't start playing because of rain in Milwaukee; Minnesota and Kansas City played 3 1/2 innings before the rains came to Kansas City and California and Chicago played 10 innings before snow hit Chicago.

Where play was possible, the New York Yankees beat Cleveland, 7-1, and Detroit and Baltimore split a doubleheader.

Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers were a little shaky for the Athletics, but Jackson was a one-man show. He knocked Texas starter Pete Broberg out of the game with a three-run homer in the fifth and greeted reliever Jim Merritt with his second three-run homer in the ninth. "This might be one of my best starts," Jackson said. "As for home runs, it doesn't matter how many—it's when you hit them that really counts."

Started at Home

They could have asked to play their first three games at home. Fred Fleig, who supervises the putting together of the National League schedule says he would have had to be receptive to such a request.

Recurrent Laryngitis Disturbing

By G.C. THOSTESON M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been an elementary school teacher for six years during which time I have had numerous head colds leading to laryngitis and each attack of laryngitis means losing two days of school.

Many times this seems like a waste of sick time, since I feel okay but just can't talk. Could this recurrent laryngitis be psychosomatic or an occupational hazard? Either way is there any remedy for my loss of voice?

—D.C.
I'd vote for occupational hazard in your case, although after the repeated attacks I suppose you just might expect laryngitis when a cold develops.

Laryngitis is inflammation of the larynx, denoting irritation from some source, usually a virus, and since early grade school children haven't developed resistance to some of the 100 or more viruses that cause colds, you are exposed to a goodly crop of them.

And recurrent colds seem to be an occupational hazard for some elementary teachers. However, allergy problems can be involved, and irritation from chalk dust has been singled out as one school room hazard for some. If some of your attacks of laryngitis do NOT seem to be preceded by a head cold, you might be wise to see a throat specialist or possibly an allergist.

But let's say it's the cold bugs doing it. Then there is little to be done for the accompanying loss of voice except resting your voice and steam inhalations. In fact, try steam inhalations at the slightest indication of an attack.

Aspirin, antihistamines, and even nose drops (on the basis of brief use) sometimes help. You could try moderate doses of vitamin C, in view of all that's been claimed for that vitamin, although personally I am not overoptimistic. Still, you can try it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I'd like to give you my cure, or rather my wife's cure, for nail-biting. When I first met her I was a compulsive nail-biter and couldn't break the habit.

My wife—girl friend then—had me do two things: one was to watch another nail-biter in action. The other was that every time I chewed my nails, it meant I didn't love her.

Every time I caught myself biting after that I thought of the "didn't love her" remark.

To this day I am proud to say that my nails are now trimmed by nail clippers instead of incisors.

—C.W.
Pretty good proof that you love her. And that she loves you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About the man who loses his voice once a year in winter, that was happening to our whole family until we figured it out. We had our humidifier going almost all the time and were perfectly okay at home, but when we went to work or the kids went to school we would lose our voices. After we were home an hour, the voices would come back.

Something about the humidifier—too much humidity. We turned the humidifier to low, and it stopped happening. It took three winters before we figured it out. Maybe it will help.

—S.P.
Shrewd figuring on your part. I would translate it into a matter of not giving yourselves a chance to adjust to lower humidity outside the house. Anyway, you solved it, and I pass it along to anyone it may help.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the medical name of the specialist that deals with varicose veins?

—Mrs. T.E.
A vascular surgeon—a surgeon who deals with blood vessels. However, many general surgeons treat varicose veins skillfully.

Although cholesterol has been implicated in heart attacks and other circulatory troubles, it is also vital to human life. For this reason, Dr. Thosteson has entitled his booklet, "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly." For a copy write to him in care of G.C. Thosteson, M.D., Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Last Of Red Hot Chantootsies

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — Hildegard, "the last of the red hot chantootsies," returned to the Plaza Persian Room at the admitted age of 68.

Hildy opened there something like 33 years ago. Our hearts were young and gay then. There was a war on. We would soon be hearing her sing, "The Last Time I Saw Paris" as she thumped the piano with her white gloves on.

A woman exclaimed to me, "Doesn't she get better every year?"

At first there was an announcement: "The Persian Room regrets to announce that Hildegard will not appear this evening." This was followed by an announcement that it was April Fool's Day.

Beautiful, sexy, gorgeous blonde Janice Harper was opening over at the Rainbow Grill with Lee Evans quartet, making it official that chantootsies, as we called them in our frivolous youth, are back.

Janice is a great singer who handles songs with warmth—and beat. It was her birthday and there was a cake—and damned if it wasn't the Persian Room's 40th birthday and if there wasn't a cake there too. Let 'em eat cake, and they did.

Hildegard kids herself throughout—sipping Mountain Valley water, of course—gazing into the mirror ("Not too bad—she looks like Doris Day's mother")... a few jokes such as Eve asking Adam if he still loved her and Adam replying, "Who else?"

Introducing her singing teacher ("She makes me stretch my vowels")... and Dan Seymour, the ad company chief who was her announcer on the Raleigh Room radio show... and a delicious moment when she reached for a note, couldn't get there, and shrugged.

There was other glamour there—Ann Wedgeworth of the new show "Thieves," and Nancy Dussault. Hildy, somebody said, looked better than she did in 1941 when we were just beginning to hear about the dear that made Milwaukee famous.

Janice Harper had a handsome new admirer at the ringside (she always does) to whom she addressed, "Baby, Light My Fire" and "What Now, My Love?" Her smash was "My Life," which, she said, "I'd like to sing in my mother tongue—English."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL...

Milton Berle's busy one, coming here to star in suburban Nanuet; he's so happy with his straight role in "Lepke," having played "the Jewish godfather" in law... Bette Davis, doing a tour with John Springer, had a problem in Toledo when the film projector wouldn't work. They borrowed one from a nearby burlesque house, and two clergymen came up from Bette's audience to operate it... Ursula Andress'll probably play the title role in the "Happy Hooker" film... David Birney and Meredith Baxter, stars of the "Bridget Loves Bernie" TV series, got married this month... Soupy Sales, a great clown, shook things up at the Playboy Club opening with his zany, non-stop comedy; the audience was delighted.

Show Biz Quiz: Who played the title role in two previous "Gatsby" films? (from Norman Kean: Ans. to Friday's: Bette Davis was the only actress to become president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences.

Jeff Mont of the Robert Stigwood office talked to Martha Mitchell about a B'way musical based on her memoirs (How about a title tune, "All Alone By the Telephone"?). David Frye said, at Jimmy's that all impressionists are rooting for Nixon to stay in office, "because Gerald Ford is harder to imitate than Jello."

Tom Jones'll get nearly 400 Gs for 14 appearances in South America, leaving April 15. (He'll take along 2500 lbs. of sound and light equipment, and an entourage of 25)... Producer Ray Stark, who began filming "Funny Lady" April 1, already has it set for release next Easter... Mrs. Mortimer Solomon won first prize (a live monkey) at the "Suppressed Desire" party at Raffles; she came as a bird of paradise, in a $3,500 Galanos beads and feathers gown.

I'D RATHER BE LIGHT—Today's Best Laugh: Jack Herbert says he went to the racetrack for the first time and discovered that some horses are given very unusual names. Especially the horses that lose. Wish I'd Said That: Poem from Tony Savage: "Men seldom miss peeing. At girls who go streaking." Remembered Quote: "A buffet meal is an affair at which the guests outnumber the chairs." Earl's Pearls: The value of the dollar has gone so low (reports Bobby Vinton) that counterfeiting has dropped from a major felony to merely a misdemeanor.

Petula Clark, now at Las Vegas Caesars Palace, has a $250,000 chateau in Switzerland. "The estate's so huge," she says, "that I didn't sign a lease—I had to sign a treaty." That's earl, brother. All Rights Reserved.

Under Twenty

By KURT LASSEN

Imagine taking five years to plan and execute an album! That's exactly what Scottish-born Al Stewart did. It's an ambitious work called "Past, Present and Future," dealing with the twentieth century.

"I had the idea over five years ago," Al told us, "but I knew I didn't just want to knock it out. I spent years of research reading books on the century and on Nostradamus, who predicted the future."

Al's "Nostradamus" runs almost ten minutes in length and we discussed the difficulty of air play on such a long work.

"I didn't do the album with the idea of getting lots of air play. I didn't even do it with the idea of getting tremendous sales. I did it because it was a piece of work that interested me and that I wanted to do. Naturally, I hope it will be successful, but the joy of it has been in the doing."

Al Stewart says that his previous albums were really an "apprenticeship" period for him. He was learning the techniques of writing music and lyrics and recording to reproduce what began as ideas in his mind. These albums were "Love Chronicles" in 1969, voted the number 1 fold album of the year, and then "Orange."

"These felt like one-dimensional things to me, and that's why I decided to pursue the present album. I gathered the best contemporary musicians in England, including Rick Wakeman and the members of Quiver. They seemed to understand what I was trying to do."

What Al was trying to do and succeeded in doing was bringing historical events into a contemporary, "today" framework. His album received raves on its release, is receiving excellent air play and sales are on the way to the charts.

He arrived in London as an unknown singer and songwriter after forming his first group in boarding school when he was 16. For three years he played organ, piano and guitar with six different rhythm and blues groups in Bournemouth before trying London.

In London's West End he was pushed on the stage by his friends when the manager asked if there was a singer in the house. "I stayed there for almost three years," he told us.

"From then on it was tours of clubs and colleges and listening to the sounds of the Sixties and getting my own approach together. On tour I don't carry a band, I accompany myself on the guitar."

Al's United States tour, just underway, will take him across the country on club and college dates.

"I'm in a sort of bind," he told us. "My suitcase was left at London airport and I have to go out and buy a whole wardrobe. What I've got on is all I've got with me."

Although Al is very much his own man, there is a heavy influence of the Beatles, Donovan and Dylan. He's heavy folk with rhythm and blues overtones and his material features lyrics, a story and a point of view. His "Terminal Eyes" is a variation on John Lennon's "I Am the Walrus," which deals with the death of the 1960's rock and roll and the lifestyle that went with it.

"Nostradamus was a fabulous and perceptive person," Al said. "His predictions in the past have been amazing and I've incorporated a great deal of what he predicts for the future in my music."

Nostradamus may not have predicted it, but on the strength of "Past, Present and Future," Al Stewart has found a refreshing, new combination which should make him an important figure on the musical scene in the next few years.

Have you noticed the gradual shift in the sales pitch for foreign cars lately? "It's not a matter of price, it's the economy and the quality of construction." The reason is that the foreign car is no longer competitive in price, and price has been the only really strong thing going for the imported car.

Detroit has pushed the big car for years because the profit margins were substantially higher. The difference in the manufacturing costs of a Cadillac over a Chevrolet are not that significant, but the markup is.

This left the small car market to the imports, especially Volkswagen, Datsun and Toyota. Those three companies sold a total of 1.1 million cars in the U.S. in 1973. That was 64 percent of all foreign car sales and 40 percent of all of the cars, foreign and domestic, sold in the U.S. last year.

But now the importers are getting ready for serious problems. Foreign car sales plunged 20 percent in February. Total American made car sales were off even more, but sales of the small American made cars rose 4 percent and that's what has the foreign car manufacturers frightened.

The basic price of a Volkswagen Beetle has jumped 34 percent from $1,999 to $2,655 in just one year. The Ford Pinto and the GM Vega both sell for about $200 less. The two-door Datsun B-210 has a retail price of $2,629, just a few dollars less than the Beetle. The Toyota Corona retails for $3,500, up from $2,500 less than 24 months ago.

When the foreign car loses the price advantage it once enjoyed and still has to compete against an American made product which also offers economy, then foreign car sales are going to go just one way. Down.

The problem in Germany and Japan has been a high rate of inflation in both countries. The price of raw materials has skyrocketed while labor costs continue to rise. So the importer either cuts his price to compete and sees his profit margins disappear or he raises his prices to protect his profit margins and loses potential sales.

One answer to the problem is for the foreign car manufacturer to make even smaller, more economical cars than the American made compacts. Both Fiat and Honda have cars much smaller than the Ford Pinto, with better than 30 mpg performance. However, as the fuel shortage eases, the emphasis on fuel economy will not be as critical as it was several months ago.

Several foreign car manufacturers are considering production plants in the U.S. in order to offset the price advantage now enjoyed by American car manufacturers. Volkswagen has been looking for an assembly plant location for over a year while Toyota and Nissan, which makes the Datsun, are giving the idea serious consideration.

U.S. President Andrew Johnson was buried wrapped in an American flag.

If current name trends hold in the United States, it may be so long James and Jane and hello Jason and Jennifer, the two latest nominal rages.

THE HOUSE DOCTOR

Doesn't Recommend Concrete Blocks For Steps Construction

By HERMAN BAUM
Dear House Doctor:
I have wood steps at the rear of my home that are in bad condition. I have decided to replace them with concrete steps and hope to do the job myself. Please offer me some instructions on this project. Someone suggested that I build them with concrete blocks. Is this practical?

ANSWER - I do not recommend concrete blocks for step construction. The blocks are relatively soft and are easily chipped, making the steps dangerous. The project will always look like a makeshift job. It is much better to build wood forms and pour concrete to suit.

The construction of the wood forms is the most important part of the job. If you have never used concrete before, you should understand that it is extremely heavy and exerts great pressure on the sides of the forms.

Wood forms must be securely built and braced or they will burst open. Two designs of forms are illustrated.

One design is intended for pouring one step at a time.

This is practical if you intend to mix the concrete by hand. The form for one step is placed on top of the other after the first step is complete and the concrete has set.

The other design is intended for pouring all the steps at once, as you would do if you purchased the concrete from a batching plant.

The safest and easiest steps to climb have a tread width of 10 to 11 inches. The rise or height between one step and the next should be between 7 and 8 inches. If this height does not fit into the total height, it is best to retain the recommended height for the second and succeeding steps, and make one low step at the bottom.

For the sides of the forms, use one-inch by eight-inch boards. The illustrations show how the forms are braced. The vertical pieces shown are two inches by four inches.

If you elect to mix the concrete by hand, use one part Portland cement, 2 1/4 parts damp loose sand, and 3 parts gravel.

You can save on concrete by building a wood form inside the step form and filling this with sand, but the concrete should not be less than four inches thick on all sides of the form.

After the concrete is poured, tamp it with a garden rake and then trowel it smooth with a wood float. Wait an hour and trowel again with the wood float. Do not use a steel float, as this produces a smooth surface, which is dangerous. Round the edges, with a concrete finishing stone.

OUTPATIENTS' CLINIC
L.B. - Varnish is not recommended for redwood benches exposed to the weather. There are special sealers intended for this purpose.

G.E.H. - A loop system will provide hot water at the kitchen sink immediately, but the waste in energy to heat the water will be greater than the one gallon you are losing now before hot water reaches the faucet.

K.D.S. - In any forced hot air heating system, the oil burner comes on two or three minutes ahead of the fan, and the fan continues to run several minutes after the burner shuts off. You will accomplish nothing by replacing the furnace.

WATER HEATER
Dear House Doctor:

How do I drain my water heater? I turn off the water supply and open the drain at the bottom of the tank, but water does not come out.

-Miss B.O.R.
ANSWER - Air must enter the tank for water to flow out. Try opening a hot water faucet inside the house. If this does not work, remove the safety valve located on top of the water heater.

CONDENSATION ON FLOOR
Dear House Doctor:
We have an enclosed breezeway between the house and the garage. When the weather is damp and cold, the floor sweats. What must we do to prevent this?

-D.H.
ANSWER - There is no heat in the breezeway and the floor becomes cold. Any moisture in the air condenses on the cold surface. The only cure is to rebuild the floor with heating coils, embedded in the concrete. A floor mop is much cheaper.

WOOD TRIM FINISH
Dear House Doctor:
My 120-year-old home has beautiful varnished woodwork throughout except in the kitchen, which is painted. I want to do the kitchen over in Early American and remove the paint from the trim. I understand that the easiest way to do this is by applying heat to the paint. Do you know a better way?

-R.H.H.
ANSWER - Use a methylene chloride semi-paste type paint remover. It is slow but safe. I never recommend that the novice attempt to burn paint. It is dangerous, and you are apt to scorch the wood, which would prevent applying the finish you want.

MASTIC ON TILE
Dear House Doctor:
My son removed the wallboard around the bathtub and installed plastic tile. He failed to remove the mastic from the face of the tile, and now it is hard and I have not been able to get it off. Do you know of any suitable solvent?

-F.J.V.
ANSWER - I have removed the hardened mastic with mineral spirits and have not damaged the tile. However, the manufacturers of the tile warned that this may cause damage, so try it at your own risk.

DOOR TROUBLE
Dear House Doctor:
We have an irritating problem in our home. Some of the doors will not stay open unless a doorstop is used. Apparently, the floors are not level in these areas. Is there a simple way to correct this?

-E.M.H.
ANSWER - The trouble is caused by the doors not being plumb. If you close the doors and place a spirit level vertically on the surface, you will see that the bottom of the door is out further than the top.

The cure is to relocate one of the hinges so that the door is perfectly vertical in all positions.
