PISD to review school consolidation proposal

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Architects will soon begin a study of the six Pampa elementary schools — a study likely to lead to consolidation of schools and closing of one or more campuses.

Nothing has been decided yet, study coordinator Ray Thornton pointed out in an interview last week. But a study done here in 1994 by the Texas Association of School Administrators found that four elementaries are all that are needed to handle the projected enrollment.

That would, the study suggested, require the closing of two campuses and remodeling of four others to handle enrollments of 500-600 students each.

The last time school consolidation was considered — in 1991-92 — Baker was targeted for closure, but "considerable" concern from the community led the district to back off the idea at the time, Thornton said.

The idea was broached by an ad hoc committee of citizens and teachers — "all internal," according to Superintendent Dr. Dawson Orr — because of low enrollment at the elementaries. Baker was selected at the time because of the physical state of the facility, Orr said.

Now, he said, the resurgence of the idea of school consolidation again comes mainly from economics.

"Studies have indicated that elementary schools with 500 students are the most efficient. Our

Consolidation study timeline

Timeline of key events in school consolidation study:
November 1991 — Ad hoc committee of citizens and teachers begin meeting to address the problem of low enrollment in the district's elementary schools.

March 1992 — Facing opposition by concerned citizens and parents, the school board decides against closing Baker Elementary.

October 1994 — The board authorizes a facilities and enrollment study by the Texas Association of School Administrators, a study that recommended the closing of two schools.

May 18, 1995 — In an administrative report, Superintendent Dr. Dawson Orr asked the board to consider authorizing the development of a plan to consolidate elementary schools.

May 31, 1995 — The board authorizes a consolidation study in a special meeting, appointing former Woodrow Wilson Principal Raymond Thornton to coordinate the study.

Oct. 17, 1995 — The school board approves the purchase of computer software designed to review the effects of closing any school and analyze transportation costs.

Nov. 16, 1995 — The board approves Bureson-Singleton Architects of Irving to perform a master plan facility study to determine which buildings could justifiably continue running and which ones most reasonably qualify for phase-out.

Dec. 19, 1995 — The board will hold a public hearing to gather input from Pampa citizens on the consolidation plan.

population has declined but we have continued to maintain six elementary schools," Thornton pointed out.

The district is "looking for places to save money and make better use of our resources," he continued. "It's come time to examine very carefully [the idea] of operating fewer campuses ... [and] operating what we have left more effectively and efficiently."

To reach that point, the school board in October approved the purchase of computer software called On-Pass that should allow the district to review the effect of closing any given facility on the other schools. Included in that review would be total enrollment, enrollment by grade levels, ethnicity, distance of students from a campus and transportation costs.

In conjunction with that program and aiding in studying transportation costs is the Dispatch program, software that examines bus routes for potential savings.

Anti-abortion protesters lose high court appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected an appeal by five anti-abortion demonstrators who had been ordered to pay the nearly $100,000 in lawyer fees spent by a California abortion clinic they targeted.

The court, without comment, let stand rulings that said the lawyer-fee award did not violate or wrongly "chill" the abortion protesters' free-speech rights.

In other actions today, the justices:

— Refused to revive an Alabama lawsuit that accused the South's timber industry of illegal racial bias in preventing blacks from becoming wood wholesalers.

— Turned away an appeal by a Tennessee girl who received a grade of zero for doing her ninth-grade English research paper on the life of Jesus Christ.

— Refused to limit the scope of a second trial for a former Hare Krishna leader accused of using murder, kidnapping and fraud to protect the religious community he founded.

— Turned down a Puerto Rico policeman's argument that three officers present when a fellow officer shot him in the penis had a duty to protect him.

The Feminist Women's Health Center operates four medical clinics in Northern California, including one in Sacramento that since 1988 has been the scene of anti-abortion demonstrations.

Some of the demonstrators merely picket peacefully, but others on occasion have blocked the clinic's entrance or harassed its patients and staff members.

The center's operators sued in state court in 1989, naming anti-abortion activists Theresa Reali, Murray Lewis, John Stooz, Jay Baggett and Don Blythe Operation Rescue and others as defendants.

The lawsuit sought to bar the demonstrators from taking certain action, and also sought to have them pay all lawyer fees in connection with the litigation.

Operation Rescue and the other defendants did not show up to defend themselves and lost by default. After trial a state judge ruled against Reali, Lewis, Stooz, Baggett and Blythe.

The judge imposed a "speech-free zone" within 20 feet of the clinic's entrance, and ordered the five defendants who went to trial to pay $99,106.98 for the lawyer fees incurred by the clinic's operators.

Prisoners to make collect calls

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Federal prison inmates will be allowed up to two hours of collect telephone calls each month under a far-reaching settlement of a lawsuit filed by prisoners at the Federal Medical Center in Lexington.

The lawsuits were filed against the U.S. Bureau of Prisons after the inmates learned the government planned to install a phone system which would require them, not the receiving parties, to pay for their calls.

The settlement, reached after more than two years of litigation, allows prisoners at every federal prison to continue to make collect calls — but with some limits.

The agreement was tentatively reached in August and approved earlier this month by U.S. District Judge Henry Wilhoit in Lexington.

It covers the Bureau of Prisons' 84 facilities because the two lawsuits were consolidated into a class-action suit. That meant all 90,000 federal inmates were members of the affected class.

The agreement allows the bureau to install the debit calling system that spawned the lawsuits. Now, inmates will be allowed to make 120 minutes of collect calls a month and an unlimited number of direct-dial calls using a debit card they can buy at the commissary.

Clinton to address nation on Bosnia tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will tell Americans at 7 p.m. CST tonight that U.S. troops should be sent to Bosnia because "we now have a choice between war and peace," his spokesman said today.

"What the president will do tonight is remind the American people of the extraordinary loss of life — over a quarter of a million dead, 2 million refugees, some of the worst atrocities we've seen since the Holocaust," White House press secretary Mike McCurry told CBS.

"The president will argue we've got interests in Europe. That's why we shed our blood there in two great world wars. And now for the sake of peace, we must help preserve that peace and honor the commitments we have," McCurry added.

"The president will say, very simply, we now have a choice between war and peace." Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Clinton must use the speech to answer five questions: what America's vital national interest is in Bosnia, how many soldiers will go, how long they will be there, how much will it cost and what the strategy of America's eventual exit from Bosnia will be.

"If he can't persuade the American people, he won't persuade the Congress," Dole said in Milwaukee. "I want to be in a position to support the president. It seems to me, when it comes to foreign policy, if we speak with one voice, we're better off."

"The United States has learned the dangers of what happens when we turn our back on Europe," White House National Security Adviser Anthony Lake said Sunday, urging support for the participation of 20,000 U.S. ground troops in a 60,000-member NATO peacekeeping force.

Clinton addresses the nation tonight in an effort to convince a skeptical public and hostile Congress that the accord initiated in Dayton, Ohio, last week can't succeed without an active U.S. role in keeping the peace.

Lake, Defense Secretary William Perry and Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, the chief U.S. negotiator at Dayton, appeared on the Sunday news programs to lay the groundwork for the president's speech.

"American values and interests are at stake," Perry said on CBS' Face the Nation. He said the United States must stop the bloodshed that has taken 250,000 lives in the 3 1/2-year war, live up to its obligations to NATO and stop the war from spreading to neighboring countries.

School

Then in November, the board agreed to use Bursleson-Singleton Architects of Irving to perform a facilities study to see which elements could justifiably continue running and which ones "most reasonably qualify for phase-out," Thornton said.

Thornton said that the decision process would flow from the architects through the computer program before resting with the administration and the school board.

He explained that the architects would perform their study, reporting their findings to the board. That report would enable the board to begin making decisions. In that process, they would utilize the software to see the feasibility of assigning students to different schools.

"We want to minimize the impact on the transportation system. This being a largely economics-based decision, we don't want to spend money on a lot of new buses [or other transportation costs]," Thornton said.

He added that once the archiects should finish their study approximately 60 days after they begin. The computer study could be complete in another 60 days following that.

"The magnitude of the changes is going to rest largely with the school board and the recommendations that will come from the architects," Thornton said.

Before any decision is made, though, the school board will hold a public hearing in conjunction with its Dec. 19 meeting, tentatively scheduled for 6 p.m. at the Pampa Middle School library.

Some Canadian doctors leaving in hopes of more freedom — and money

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Frazzled by as many as 100 patients a day jamming his Toronto office as part of the government-run health care system, Dr. Ivan Krajbich made a run for the border.

The pediatric orthopedic specialist is one of a growing number of Canadian doctors who have packed up their practices and gone to the United States.

"Here, you have choices. The whole attitude is different," said Krajbich, who left two years ago and now runs the spinal program at the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children.

"In Canada, everybody was overworked, demoralized," Krajbich said. "It became very frustrating — to me and my patients, to my secretary, to the administration. There were no winners."

Added his wife, Suzanne Gwilliam, also a physician: "You should have seen him when he got home on those days. I could see that it was going to kill him."

While the Canadian system provides free health care to all citizens, many doctors say a shortage of government money has translated into longer waits, a lack of hospital beds and difficulty accessing specialists such as Krajbich.

It also has meant capping doctors' salaries and cutting their reimbursements in many provinces.

Between the North American Free Trade Agreement loosening regulation of work visas and a shortage of doctors in some states, hundreds of doctors have come south. And the numbers are increasing, says Dr. Jack Armstrong, president of the Canadian Medical Association.

In 1994, Canada had a net loss of 410 doctors, compared with 207 in 1990. More than 600 of the 800 who left in 1994 came to the United States. About half of the doctors moving to the United States were primary-care physicians.

The Midwest, rural towns and other areas where there are shortages draw the most Canadians. But even states such as Oregon — a heavy-duty managed health care state that has a surplus of doctors in metropolitan areas — attracts its share.

Many Canadian doctors in Oregon say they will take the state's form of managed care run by health maintenance organizations over Canada's government-run system any day.

"I'm amazed at how quickly I can get tests done here," said Gwilliam, a primary care physician. "It's a lot easier to give care here for people who have coverage."

Managed health care has created a demand for primary care physicians in Oregon and other states, since they see patients first and serve as the "gate-keeping" doctors in HMOs.

Dr. John Fitzgerald, also a primary care physician, moved to Salem, Ore., from Victoria, British Columbia, in February. He said the main problem with Canada's system is that it's underfunded.

In America, it's the "incredible amount of administrative work" that surprises him, Fitzgerald said. Gwilliam agreed that managed care in the United States is bureaucratic. But she said it also is more cost-effective, since HMOs keep close tabs on tests that doctors order and other treatment.

She also believes that the lack of a user copayment in Canada has caused Canadians to take their system for granted. That's not the case here, she said. "If something becomes free, it becomes undervalued," Gwilliam said.

But Fitzgerald points out that the two systems aren't that different: one filters health care through a health maintenance organization, the other through the government.

"There is an essential conflict of interest with managed care," Fitzgerald said. "Physicians are no longer working directly for their patients."

Armstrong said there's little doubt that an "atmosphere of mistrust" exists between Canadian doctors and their government. But that doesn't mean they are anxious to copy the American movement toward managed care organizations.

For many, small Texas town drama will never be solved

DALLAS (AP) — The lawyers and TV cameras — once drawn to the small East Texas town of Gilmer after a girl's mysterious disappearance and allegations of murder, child abuse and satanic cults — are gone.

The effects of the saga, however, have taken their toll on many of those involved, and the town's 5,000 residents are left to wonder about truth and justice.

Two years after the case garnered the national spotlight and four years after the 17-year-old girl vanished, Kelly Wilson is still missing. The murder charges have been dropped, along with several dozen child-abuse cases against a local family.

Earlier this month, Assistant Texas Attorney General Lisa Tanner asked that 45 of 48 indictments against 10 people be dropped because the special prosecutor and a team who once handled the case "irreparably tainted" the children who were to testify.

In February, Danny Kerr Jr. will turn 10. But today he lies in an East Texas nursing center bed, unable to walk, talk or feed himself. With luck, doctors say, he could live another decade.

He is just one victim of a satanic cult scare that tore through Gilmer. His father, uncle and grandparents were among eight people charged with ritually murdering Miss Wilson. Also charged was the police officer assigned to solve her disappearance, Sgt. James Brown.

In November 1993, according to some of Danny's siblings, one or both his foster parents beat his head against the floor.

The children — social workers had assigned 10 to the home — said he was brutalized during a session of "holding," a technique that included forcing them to run up and down stairs until exhausted and squeezing them under the arms until they screamed.

Within three days of Danny's injury, both his foster parents, James and Marie Lappe, had killed themselves.

Experts who have reviewed the case say the Lappes and other foster parents used holding to induce the Kerr children to confess — falsely — that their real parents were Satan worshippers and cannibals.

Among the tales told by the 15 children in the case, one had extraordinary resonance. During a holding session, a 7-year-old boy said that the Kerrs had kidnapped and killed Miss Wilson.

In January 1994 a special prosecutor hired to handle the child-abuse cases against the Kerrs persuaded a grand jury to indict Brown and seven members and acquaintances of the Kerr family on charges of murdering Miss Wilson.

The indictments were dropped almost immediately, after the Texas Attorney General's Office determined that they were groundless. But the case has taken a toll nonetheless.

"Danny will never recover. He's a ward of the state, and he will die a ward of the state," John Talley, the lawyer assigned to look out for him, is quoted as saying in Sunday editions of The Dallas Morning News.

Family sues police in jail death

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Pasadena police officials say Moises De La O hanged himself with an electrical cord while family members waited for his release from jail.

De La O's widow and five children don't believe that, and they've filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court alleging wrongful death and civil rights violations by the Police Department.

De La O, a 35-year-old immigrant painter, was arrested for public intoxication on Nov. 20, 1994, and held because of outstanding traffic fines.

Unable to pay off the fines, he agreed to work them off as a trusty in the Pasadena City Jail kitchen. Five days later, just as he was to have been released, De La O was found hanging in an isolation cell.

Officials ruled the death a suicide. Pasadena police refused comment on the case because of the pending lawsuit, but internal police investigations concluded that De La O, who drank heavily, became paranoid after four days in jail and confused dreams with reality.

A review of the jail scene, morgue photos and official records by the Houston Chronicle raised several questions about the death, including:

— How did De La O suffer three broken ribs and numerous other injuries between a hospital examination, in which no such injuries were noted, and his death a few hours later?

— Why did police turn away paramedics' efforts to resuscitate him, then leaving him hanging in the cell for more than four hours?

Texas attorneys' advertisements via Internet to be scrutinized by state bar association

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas attorneys who advertise their services on the Internet have a new obstacle — the state bar association.

The State Bar of Texas has decided to subject lawyers' home pages on the World Wide Web to the same rules as print or broadcast advertisements.

The decision last month by the bar's advertising review committee means lawyers wanting web pages will have to pay $50 to have the content reviewed by bar officials.

In addition, with every "material change" to the web page, another $50 must be paid and another content review conducted. Committee members are working now to enact guidelines that will control the content of graphical web pages.

The bar's decision has alarmed many attorneys who say strict regulations will make Internet advertising too cumbersome.

Houston attorney Boyd W. Shepherd, who has a home page, said the web is scary enough to most lawyers. Most don't even know how the Internet works, he said.

"If they come to see this as a good medium for advertising, they still won't make that leap because it is just one more state bar rule they are going to have to comply with," Shepherd is quoted as saying in Sunday editions of the Houston Chronicle.

"And it is hard enough to comply with all the rules for the more traditional printed media; it is just another roadblock to competing in the marketplace."

Richard Hile, chairman of the bar's advertising review committee, said the group has worked for months to formulate guidelines that will both protect the public from misleading ads and allow attorneys to maintain a presence on the Internet.

"We don't want to burden the lawyer to the point that the process of putting a page on the web becomes such that it is not worth the time and effort to utilize it," Hile said.

The new guidelines, officially called interpretive comments, are expected to be finished in the next few weeks.

Under current proposals, attorneys would submit their main web page for review, while other pages would be submitted only if they are geared toward soliciting clients, Hile said.

Pages devoted to publishing materials such as legal journal articles and resumes would have to abide by the rules but would not have to be submitted for approval.

After the guidelines are released next month, attorneys will have a grace period of 30 to 60 days to submit their pages and bring them into compliance, Hile said.

State bar records indicate that approval of advertising is not a rubber-stamp process. A mid-November review by the Texas Lawyer revealed that 40 percent of all ads received by the state bar were rejected by the review committee.

Another rape reported on Okinawa

TOKYO (AP) — Amid nationwide uproar over the rape of a schoolgirl on Okinawa by a U.S. serviceman, police on the southern island said today they are investigating allegations a woman was raped by an American last week.

U.S. military officials and Okinawan police said an Okinawan woman claimed she was raped Saturday by an assailant she described as an American. They said details remained sketchy, however, and police had not decided whether to seek charges.

"We informed the Ginowan City police, and they have assumed jurisdiction," said Col. Stuart Wagner, spokesman for the U.S. Marines on Okinawa. Wagner said the woman initially reported the rape to military police at Marine Corps Air Station Futenma, which borders Ginowan. The case was turned over to local authorities because the alleged incident occurred off base.

A senior police official in Ginowan, who demanded anonymity, said police were questioning the woman to determine the truth of her complaint and also were seeking corroborating witnesses.

He refused to comment further. Wagner said that though the woman claimed her assailant was American, there was "no evidence" he was attached to the Marines or any branch of U.S. service.

The conduct of the American troops on Okinawa fell under intense scrutiny when two Marines and a sailor were accused of abducting and raping a 12-year-old Okinawan girl in September.

State briefs

Landowners upset at new storm-water fees

DALLAS (AP) — Farmers here say they face financial ruin because the city of Dallas has begun using a new state law that allows municipalities to collect storm-water utility fees from previously exempt landowners.

Some city farmers, such as Wayne Merrifield, are faced with monthly fees from $9 to $10 an acre. For farmers who own several acres, the net effect can be close to a disaster, said Merrifield, who works more than 300 acres in southwest Dallas.

"It's gonna run us off," Merrifield said.

He has 130 head of cattle and raises wheat and corn on his property in the Mountain Creek area — and said he now faces more than $3,000 in new monthly fees.

"We're talking a bunch more than my place can bring in," Merrifield said.

Two countries cracking down on unlikely polluter

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — In Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, plumes of black smoke gush from brickmaking kilns each night. The smoke drifts over the border before dawn and, by 7 a.m., schoolchildren in neighboring El Paso, are being told to stay indoors.

Three hundred miles to the north in New Mexico, Los Alamos National Laboratory materials engineer Karl Staudhammer sits at a computer, drawing pictures of how to convert kilns to burn cleaner. He models different shapes, air flows and temperatures, and dreams of clear, blue skies.

Smoke from brickmaking may not seem like a tremendous problem, but the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency lists brickmaking as the third-largest polluter along the U.S.-Mexico border, after automobiles and dust from dirt roads. Bricks are molded out of clay, set out in the sun to dry — then baked for about 24 hours in kilns that burn old tires and other trash.

The Mexican government has been trying to get brickmakers to change their kilns for about 10 years. But that nation's 130,000 brickmakers rebuffed loan offers from bureaucrats, businesses and banks to fund conversions to natural gas.

After the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, the Mexican government made it illegal for brickmakers to burn tires in their kilns. And that restriction works during the day when inspectors are around.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covering commandment.

Opinion

Tracking the peso's plummeting course

The sagging price of Mexico's peso hardly bodes well for future stability. The Mexican government apparently decided to bolster the peso with a little more of the bad medicine that created - or at least aggravated - the problem in the first place.

Last month's price of 7.80, after a sudden drop of 10 percent, represented the lowest value the peso has ever had, about 56 percent lower than it was last December, when a financial crisis plunged the country into recession. Perhaps the current crisis will not last long, but most signs are not encouraging - after trading floors closed the government announced that inflation in October continued unabated. And the price of the peso was "stabilized" through intervention by Mexico's central bank selling off dollars rather than because of investor confidence.

But just such intervention in the currency markets was an important reason for the sudden drop in the peso's value.

When a government tries to bolster the price of a weak currency, it almost always simply delays the drop in price and makes the drop more sudden and drastic than it would be otherwise.

That's part of what happened to the peso. The Mexican government has been trying to prop up its value for months, even as it has been considering reducing interest rates to give the stalled economy a shot in the arm.

Finally, the two contradictory policies could no longer be sustained, and the peso's price fell quickly. The fall was accelerated by speculative frenzy, making the situation much worse than if the Mexican government had simply let the peso "float" and lose value gradually.

So the peso's price was "stabilized" by the Mexican government. If the government is lucky, the freefall will end. If it isn't, the price will start to fall again, and the temptation will be strong to intervene once again, to partake of "the hair of the dog" once again.

One of the reasons the Mexican government has the capacity to intervene in the currency markets by selling dollars is that it has lots of dollars, thanks to the line of credit extended to it unilaterally - without the sanction of Congress - by President Clinton. This line of credit, by giving the Mexican government a cushion that softens the impact of unwise government policies, has been more mischief than help. The new peso crisis is just the most recent and prominent example.

Mexico's problem is more political than economic. The Mexican economy itself is sounder than recent news would suggest and loaded with potential, but the country is badly misgoverned. Whether economic potential can overcome bad government is an open question.

Berry's World

MR. PRESIDENT, WHAT DO YOU STAND FOR?

WE'RE WORKING ON THAT!

Fantasy of objective reporting

Moderator: Welcome to "Meet the Media," the fantasy world of objective journalism, where some of the most important media leaders in the land convene to give you the unfettered truth - their expert analysis concerning the important issues of the day. Today, we look at the budget crisis. Let me start with you, E.J. If President Bill Clinton were to sign the GOP bill, what would happen?

E.J. Dionne (The Washington Post): "I think that with those kinds of cuts in Medicaid, you really could do a lot of damage or at least cause problems for middle class people."

Alan Murray (The Wall Street Journal): "If enacted, it would largely get the federal government out of the business of helping the poor. It would mean a much smaller government. It would probably mean a balanced budget. But I think the critics are also right that in some important ways, it would mean a less humane government."

Moderator: Wait a moment, Alan, you sound like Dick Gephardt here. The Republican bill includes a spending increase of $2.6 trillion over the next seven years. That's hardly a smaller government."

Robert MacNeil (PBS): "Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle said the Democratic plan would cut $89 billion over seven years, a third of what the Republicans have proposed to slash."

Moderator: "But that's my point. Politicians like Daschle and Clinton talk about $271 billion in cuts for Medicare, but actually, under the GOP plan, spending in 2002 will be $86 billion higher than 1995. That's an increase of 6% annually - which is far more than inflation. It sounds like the Democrats don't have their facts straight, Eleanor."

Eleanor Clift (Newsweek): "The Democrats, the big mistake they've made is they ought to have advertisements about deterioration of quality. They ought to show an elderly person in a hospital, bell ringing for a nurse who doesn't show up. That's where the cutbacks are going to be."

John Yang (The Washington Post): "President Clinton has declared the GOP budget proposals too extreme and threatened a veto unless Republicans agree to scale back their $245 billion tax cut and the massive cuts in health care for the elderly and poor, welfare programs, student loans, and the Earned Income Tax Credit for the working poor."

Moderator: "I thought I just explained to you that under the Republicans, there are no massive spending cuts proposed! And even with the tax cuts, the Republican plan projects tax revenues to increase by 41% over the next seven years."

Dan Rather (CBS): "Republicans vowed to press for huge cuts in government spending and $245 billion in tax cuts. President Clinton vowed to veto it as too radical and too extreme."

Moderator: "Dan, are you listening? Oh, never mind. Let's move on. The political landscape. Who can the Republicans count on for support?"

Clarence Page (Chicago Tribune): "Most of the KKK has joined the Republican Party."

Moderator: "Whoa! You may not like the Republicans, but where did that come from?"

Michael Gartner (USA Today): "There's more to governing than likability. We learned that from the likable Ronald Reagan, who charmed us with stories as he amassed huge deficits and spent billions on goofy defense plans. No, the record is more important. And Bill Clinton's record is just short of terrific."

Moderator: "Really? Conservatives, particularly the religious right, will tell you he's completely out of step with the cultural revolution sweeping the land. Just look at the outpouring of love for Pope John Paul II when he was here last month."

Robert McFadden (The New York Times): "Without naming names or even mentioning the Republican-dominated Congress, the Pope seemed to admonish the supporters of propose laws to restrict immigration and dismantle many of the nation's programs for the poor. In doing so, he appeared to echo many of President Clinton's warnings."

Moderator: "OK, so it's resolved: The Pope's a Democrat. We've only got a few seconds left. Last question to Cokie and Lisa: Is there a bias in the media's coverage of the budget debate?"

Cokie Roberts (ABC): "I don't think the coverage of Gingrich and the GOP Congress has been liberally biased."

Lisa Myers (NBC): "I also think there is a bias in favor of spending money, but I don't think it's liberal versus conservative, but a bias in favor of government programs and spending money to try to solve problems. And it's compassionate to spend money - even if there is not money there to spend and even if you're heaping debt on the next generation."

Moderator: "And that's the last word. A final programming note for our audience: I, of course, am a fictional creation. My guests, however, are real, and so is every single quote attributed to them. Have a good day."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Nov. 27, the 331st day of 1995. There are 34 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
Twenty-five years ago, on Nov. 27, 1970, Pope Paul VI, visiting the Philippines, was attacked at the Manila airport by a dagger-wielding Bolivian painter disguised as a priest. (Although the Vatican maintained the pontiff was not hurt, it was revealed in 1979, a year after his death, that Pope Paul had, in fact, suffered a chest wound.)

On this date:
In 1839, the American Statistical Association was founded in Boston.

In 1901, the Army War College was established in Washington D.C.

In 1910, New York's Pennsylvania Station opened.

In 1942, during World War II, the French navy at Toulon scuttled its ships and submarines to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Nazis.

Constitution and Christmas in Utah

Rachel Bauchman, a 16-year-old sophomore at a public high school in Salt Lake City, Utah, feels religiously persecuted. As a member of the school choir and the only Jew, Bauchman objected to having to sing two Christian songs for the school's graduation ceremony. She demanded more "balance" in the musical selections. This was declined. School administrators next tried to finesse the problem by permitting Bauchman to skip choir rehearsals and sit in the library (while still receiving a grade of "A" for music). Bauchman was not satisfied, and so she did what any healthy, patriotic American teenager has been taught to do - she sued - and a court enjoined the school from permitting the Christian songs.

Many American Jews would side with Bauchman. They have been persuaded that Jews are in danger in America if any expression whatsoever of Christian spirit is permitted in the public domain. Abraham Foxman, national director of the Anti-Defamation League, argues that Bauchman's struggle is linked to the "larger struggle to protect minority rights."

But that is stretching the concept of "rights" beyond any reasonable interpretation. Bauchman's rights were in no way endangered by being asked to sing a couple of Christian hymns. And, unless the Supreme Court finds a right to sing in high school choirs in the Constitution, her rights would certainly not have been implicated if she had exercised the option of sitting out choir practice in the library.

Rights are not the issue in her case - feelings are. As events unfolded, when the graduation concert was finally performed, members of the audience - angry that the court had interfered - began to sing one of the forbidden Christian songs. The choir joined in, and Bauchman left the stage, feeling, as she later told The New York Times, "extremely horrible."

Poor Rachel Bauchman. She was ill-served by her family, the Jewish community and the legal system. Her suffering was the least necessary one can imagine.

Large segments of the Jewish community teach their children assiduously not the tenets of their own faith but the flawed lesson that they have a constitutional right to be shielded from any expression of religion at all, particularly Christianity. They are aided and abetted in this by tame courts and judges who have agreed thoroughly to secularize every aspect of life that can be called "public."

But a Christian looking at Bauchman's behavior might reasonably conclude that she (and her co-religionists) are intent upon preventing the majority from being what they are. Though Jews bristle at this wording, this is, historically, a Christian nation. It was founded by devout Protestants because they were devout Protestants. To its eternal credit, it has made room for Catholics, Jews and manifold others not just as tolerated minorities but as full citizens.

It is impolite, not to say ungrateful, for a young woman in Bauchman's position to insist that the school choir refrain from singing Christian hymns (yes, I know the Supreme Court has a different view). It is she who should defer to the feelings of the 99.9% of the students who are not Jewish, not the other way around.

I recall what it felt like to be a Jewish student (though far from the only one) asked to sing Christian songs in which I did not believe. Sometimes, for the sake of my integrity, I would not sing certain words. In a choir of scores of kids, the absence of one voice during the words "Christ is our Lord" would never be noticed. That was how I remained true to my beliefs.

It is never religious Jews who bring cases like this, challenging the constitutionality of creches or carols. Religious Jews are so well grounded in their own faith that they do not feel threatened by that of others. It is secular Jews who worry about what Christmas carols will do to their children.

But, with all due respect, that is their problem, not the Christian majority's. If Jewish parents want their children to feel more secure in their identity, they should steep them in Jewish tradition and learning rather than sending them into the world to play Grinch.

May the Republican party hang tough

Leon Panetta, the president's chief of staff, lets us know just how nice and well-mannered the controversy over welfare reform and budget balancing is going to be. "This is the Republicans against the American people!" snorts Panetta, not even bothering to wink.

Well, those scum, those no-goods! If they're against the American people, let's hang 'em all! Come to think of it, hanging's too good for them. Let's take away their parking places.

Amid all this furor and footwar, let us bear in mind that the spectacle now under way is as necessary as it is nasty. It's the political process trying to clean up the political process. Perhaps we should modestly avert our eyes, but, apart from the entertainment value of watching a head-on collision, too much is at stake here.

If Panetta's evaluation of the GOP is accurate, the Republicans should have a mental examination. They propose to disembowel the American people by strengthening and enriching the American people. This by bringing the federal budget into balance over the next seven years, by junking a federal welfare system culpable in the destruction of the family and the culture, and by pulling back Medicare from the precipice of bankruptcy.

These are signal services. Yet, Panetta and his boss, the president, object to them. Maybe "object" isn't the right word. "Resent" is possibly better. The Clinton administration hates ceding to the other party the credit for doing things the Clintonites might have attempted a long time ago - but for their fixation on homosexuals and health care.

William Murchison

The Clinton-Panetta remonstrances might sit better if all along the administration had put forth ideas about these projects. But that didn't happen. When, for instance, the Clintonites did offer a budget-balancing plan, it didn't even compute - the Congressional Budget Office found the plan would produce $200 billion deficits in perpetuity. Clinton, campaigning for office, promised to end "welfare as we know it." He never offered a serious plan to that end.

You know, Mr. President - this is what happens in life, as in politics. You fail to do what you say you'll do, and somebody else comes along to fulfill the promise and claim the credit.

The Republicans, to be sure, run a risk here. The risk is that Clinton and Panetta will convince various voters of the Republicans' evil intentions - how they want to starve helpless children, let the old die in misery, that sort of thing. At such an awful prospect, various Republicans may wince or cry aloud. They will go to their leaders, saying: Get us off this hook - let's do a deal with the White House. All that some of us can say is that they'd better not. Not if they know what's good for them. Talk about the penalties that pour down on those who fail to fulfill solemn undertakings: Those penalties will pour down on the Republicans with double force if they are seen to back away from the present fight. And Bill Clinton will win reelection.

Afterward, when Republicans promise change, a chorus of yawns and Democratic votes will suffocate them.

The irony is that Clinton and Panetta are engaged in an ultimately fruitless task - propping up the old New Deal-Great Society superstructure. Social, moral and economic trends are against them. What they have left, chiefly, is rhetoric - Republicans at war with America, that sort of thing.

Likewise, there is Clinton's perception, 34 months deep into his presidency, that toughness gets you further than constant yielding and backpedaling. The Republicans may too loudly have broadcast their expectation that Clinton would knock under once the going got tough. This amounted to double-dog daring him. On welfare and on the budget, Clinton now may thumb his nose at Congress just to show he hasn't forgotten where his hand is.

Politicians love to be loved. Republicans, being politicians, must hate the bashing they are in for from the White House and its well-wishers. Nonetheless, if they want to know real pain, let them drop to their knees before the president, shrieking "Stop!"

In its 24th season under the direction of Jeanne Willingham, the Pampa Civic Ballet will be presenting its Christmas season production of The Nutcracker at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

Guest artists to appear with the company are Gina Patterson, a principal dancer with Ballet Austin, and Cornel Crabtree, principal guest artist with the Pacific Northwest Ballet.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students. For ticket information, call (806) 669-6361.

Members of the Pampa Civic Ballet are Glennette Goode, Deanna McGill, Amanda Jacobs, Candice Jameson, Jennifer Rapstine, Kristen Stephens, Carla Wood and Meredith Hendricks-Young, junior member.

Serving on the board of directors are Mary Wilson, president; Carol Frugé, vice president; Cile Taylor, secretary; Otis Nace, treasurer; Iris Day, company representative; Jeanne Willingham, artistic director; and board members Louise Chittenden, Jane McDaniel and Linda Reed.

Auditions for the company are held each year in September. As a non-profit organization, Pampa Civic Ballet serves many purposes in the community by providing cultural exposure and educational activity for young and old alike.

For the company members, it promotes interest in professional ballet while teaching dramatic arts, staging and other phases of ballet not experienced within the classroom. Educational workshops and guest artists stimulate students toward further growth and advancement.

(Special photo) Maegan Wheeler performs as Clara and Chris Shaffer as the Nutcracker Prince. Maegan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tim Wheeler of Pampa, now living in White Deer, and Chris is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Craig Shaffer of Pampa.

Guest artists to appear with Pampa Civic Ballet

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., Ms. Patterson studied with Mansur Kamaletdinov, the Joffrey School and Briansky Saratoga Ballet Center. She was with the Pittsburgh Ballet before joining Ballet Austin, where she is currently a principal dancer.

Crabtree, born in Tripoli, Libya, began studying ballet at 14 and was awarded a scholarship for the school of American Ballet. He subsequently joined the New York City Ballet in 1980. He toured with the New York City Ballet in the United States and abroad. Most recently he has appeared as principal guest artist with Pacific Northwest Ballet.

At Ballet Austin, Patterson has performed as Juliet in Lambros Lambrou's Romeo and Juliet, the Sugar Plum Fairy and Swanhilda in Petrus Bosman's Coppelia, along with other leading roles in Giselle, Paquita, Piano Concerto No. 2, Byzantium and Sundances.

She has also performed principal roles in various guest choreographers' productions, including John Butler's Othello, Vincente Nebrada's A Dance for You, George Balanchine's Tarantella and Valse Fantasia as well as resident choreographer Stephen Mills' Red Roses, Women and Light, Dreams and Torso.

Patterson has guested with the Icelandic Ballet, and in Houston in a work created for her by Trey McIntyre. Her extensive repertoire includes Les Sylphides, Snow Queen from The Nutcracker, Giselle, Raymonda Pas de Dix and Swan Lake, among others.

Crabtree has been on television in the PBS "Dance in America" series and the "Live from Lincoln Center" broadcast of A Midsummer Night's Dream. He performed in Athens at "The Stars Shine for the Acropolis," where he danced The Black Swan Pas de Deux with Valentina Kozlova.

In 1989, he danced the title role in the Irish National Ballet's production Oscar. In 1990, he danced the White Swan Pas de Deux with Darci Kistler at the National Theater in Taiwan. From 1990-1992 he performed as a principal dancer with the Miami City Ballet.

Crabtree's repertoire includes Black Swan and Sleeping Beauty Pas de Deux, Christensen's Divertissement D'Auber, Paquita, Balanchine's The Nutcracker, Raymonda Variations, Stars and Stripes and more.

Bone Marrow Donors of Mixed Race Are Desperately Needed

DEAR ABBY: Like so many others, I never thought I'd be writing a Dear Abby letter.

My 10-year-old daughter, Michelle, has acute myelogenous leukemia. Like so many other children, she is in need of a bone marrow transplant. Her doctor has said she cannot survive unless she receives a transplant with matching bone marrow. Time is running out for my daughter; the percentages are not in her favor.

There are 17 million wonderful people who are registered potential donors with the National Bone Marrow Bank. None of them has bone marrow that matches Michelle's. What makes our daughter "different" isn't that she has leukemia, nor is it because I am in the Baseball Hall of Fame. Michelle must find the "needle in the haystack" because I am African American and her mother is Caucasian.

People with African ancestry and other ethnic minorities are under-represented in donor pools. The largest percentage of donors are Caucasian, followed by African American, Latino, Asian and, finally, a donor with mixed black and white blood types. The only donor who can give the gift of life to Michelle and others like her is a person 18 or older of mixed race — specifically African American and Caucasian.

Our prayer is that the awareness of our daughter's need, and the need of so many others, will motivate people to action. We hope your readers will step forward. The process is quite easy and virtually painless. Donors share only a small portion of bone marrow, and the body soon replaces it. A simple blood test can determine whether someone is a candidate to help Michelle and others like her.

Abby, we believe with today's technology and your wide readership, we can surely find that needle in a haystack. Time is short. The needle must be found today.

Not only for our daughter, but for all the children and adults in this country like her, my wife and I urge your readers to call 1-800-627-7692 to start saving lives today — before it's too late.

ROD AND MARILYN CAREW

the number for the National Bone Marrow Bank — 1-800-MARROW 2 — and obtain information on becoming a donor.

DEAR ABBY: I went to a coffee shop and sat at the counter to read my paper. I ordered a cup of coffee.

When I was ready to leave, I discovered that I had only enough money to pay for the coffee — and none for a tip.

I didn't want the food server to think I was a tightwad, so I took 35 cents from the tip left by the man who had been sitting next to me. I put it near my saucer as my tip.

I feel somewhat guilty for doing that. Was it wrong? And if so, what can I do about it now?

A READER IN OREGON

DEAR READER: Yes, it was wrong. Go back to the coffee shop and either 'fess up — or order another cup of coffee and double your tip.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

CANYON — Sundown held off a Canadian comeback for a 14-13 win Saturday night in a Class 2A area play-off game.

Sundown held a 14-0 half-time lead when Canadian started its rally. Kevin Zenor scored on a 6-yard run in the third quarter and the PAT by Luis Sanchez narrowed the margin to 14-7.

A 17-yard TD run by Daniel Hilton made it 14-13, but the Wildcats failed on the extra-point kick.

Hilton was the Wildcats' leading rusher with 119 yards on 28 carries while teammate Tomas Ruiz added 67 yards on 12 tries.

Canadian ends the season with an 8-2-1 record. The Wildcats were making their fourth straight playoff appearance.

Texas Tech receives Copper Bowl bid

By The Associated Press

The bowl picture for Texas teams became clearer with the announcement that the Builder's Square Alamo Bowl will take the loser of Saturday's Texas-Texas A&M battle and the Texas Tech Red Raiders accepted an invitation to play in the Copper Bowl.

The winner of Saturday's clash for the final Southwest Conference championship will represent the conference in the Bowl Alliance and probably play in the Nokia Sugar Bowl New Year's Eve in New Orleans.

The University of Iowa and Pacific-10 co-champion and 20th-ranked Washington will battle in the Sun Bowl.

And Texas Tech will travel to Arizona for its college football matchup.

No. 14 Michigan accepted an invitation Sunday to play Texas or Texas A&M in what will be the Alamo Bowl's first matchup of big-name, traditional teams.

"We're delighted with the matchup of two national powerhouses, no matter which Texas team we get," said Alamo Bowl executive director Derrick Fox.

"We're stepping it up a notch." The No. 9 Longhorns (9-1, 6-0) and No. 16 Aggies (8-2, 5-1) meet Saturday in College Station for the final Southwest Conference title and a spot in the Tier One bowl alliance. The winner likely gains a Sugar Bowl berth against either No. 8 Florida State (9-2) or No. 12 Virginia Tech (9-2).

The presence of Texas or A&M gives the Alamo Bowl its first real chance for a sell-out in the 65,000-seat Alamodome. It will be televised by ESPN.

The Raiders all but assured themselves a bowl berth Saturday with a 38-26 triumph against Houston. The victory gave Tech eight wins in the regular season for the first time since 1989. The Raiders finished their final season as a Southwest Conference member by winning seven of their last eight games.

Copper Bowl officials extended the invitation after meeting Sunday morning.

"I thought we would play in a bowl," said coach Spike Dykes, who has guided Tech to bowl berths in four of the past seven seasons. "I told our players we would after the game (Saturday). I felt certain that we would. I just wasn't sure where." Tech (8-3 overall) will face Western Athletic Conference co-champion Air Force (8-4) at 7 p.m. Dec. 27 in Tucson, Ariz. The game will be televised nationally by cable network ESPN.

For the Raiders, the bowl berth marks their third consecutive postseason appearance. Only once before, from 1972-74 under Jim Carlen, had Tech played in three straight bowl games.

The decision to accept the invitation must be formally approved by Tech's Board of Regents.

"I have a feeling the regents will endorse the recommendation of the athletic director and president," Tech athletic director Bob Bockrath said Sunday.

Sun Bowl officials Sunday also finalized the matchup for this year's game, choosing the University of Iowa to meet Pacific-10 co-champion and 20th-ranked Washington.

Sun Bowl Executive Director Tom Starr, himself a 1969 Iowa graduate, said the bowl's selection committee settled on the Hawkeyes after the Outback Bowl took Penn State and the Alamo Bowl picked Michigan.

At 7-4 overall, 4-4 in the Big Ten, the Hawkeyes had the best record of the other available teams from the conference.

"Iowa brings a lot of talent to the table. They're kind of on fire right now," Starr told the El Paso Times in Sunday's editions.

Iowa has beaten Wisconsin 33-20 and Minnesota 45-3 in its last two games. Washington completed its season last week and brings a 7-3-1 record to El Paso.

Though Iowa will be new to the Sun Bowl, its head coach, Hayden Fry, has been there before. Fry brought Southern Methodist to the first game played in the current Sun Bowl stadium in 1963.

"To end up with a bid to the Sun Bowl is a testament to all the hard work put in by the players, coaching staff and everybody associated with Iowa football," Fry said.

Each team will be required to purchase 8,000 tickets to the game, Starr said.

The Cotton Bowl announced last week that No. 7 Colorado will play No. 14 Oregon on Jan. 1 in the 60th annual classic. Both teams have 9-2 records.

Harvester tailback Matt Archibald (33) rushed for 141 yards and a touchdown against Andrews in the Class 4A area playoffs Saturday in Lubbock.

Harvesters will play Denison in Class 4A regional playoffs

LUBBOCK — The Pampa Harvesters meet the Denison Yellowjackets at 2 p.m. Saturday in a Class 4A regional playoff game in Wichita Falls.

Pampa downed Andrews, 17-13, while Denison defeated Sweetwater, 34-15, Saturday in area playoff action.

The Pampa-Andrews clash turned out to be closer than expected but the Harvesters came up with some big defensive plays to preserve the win. The biggest one came when middle linebacker Floyd White intercepted a Marcus Bueno pass near midfield with 2:15 to go in the game. The score was 17-13 and the Harvesters were able to run out the clock.

The Harvesters' defense held Andrews to 144 yards, including just 39 yards on the ground. Other big defensive plays were made by Donnie Middleton, Trey McCavit, Devin Lemons, Ryan Gibson, Ryan Bruce, Marques

Long and Ryan Cook.

Pampa's offense scored only one touchdown, a 39-yard run by Matt Archibald in the first quarter, but the Harvesters still piled up 221 yards on the ground.

Archibald was the game's leading rusher with 141 yards on 22 carries, giving him 1,038 yards for the season. For the second year in a row, the senior tailback has gone over the 1,000-yard rushing mark.

Pampa's other touchdown came when Derahian Evans returned an Andrews fumble for a touchdown on the opening kickoff. It was Evans' 21st touchdown for the year.

Todd Finney booted a third-quarter field goal for the Harvesters giving him 9 for the season.

The Pampa-Denison game will be played at Memorial Stadium.

Toledo returns to AP gridiron poll

By RICK WARNER AP Football Writer

Holy Toledo! It took 24 years, but Toledo is back in The Associated Press college football poll.

The Rockets (10-0-1), the only unbeaten team in Division I-A besides Nebraska and Florida, are No. 25 in this week's media rankings.

"It's great news," coach Gary Pinkel said. "The players and the staff were excited because this is what we have worked so hard for."

It is Toledo's first appearance in the AP poll since the end of the 1971 season, when they finished 14th. The Rockets posted three straight perfect seasons (35-0) from 1969-71.

The only blemish on this year's record is a 28-28 tie with Miami of Ohio, the team that handed No. 3 Northwestern its only loss. Toledo won the Mid-American Conference championship and will play Nevada in the Las Vegas Bowl on Dec. 14.

"This conference is better than people think," Pinkel said. "I hope this will open the door not only for us, but for other good MAC teams in the future to get recognition."

Pinkel, who is 33-19-3 in five seasons at Toledo, said getting a national ranking was the team's top goal this season.

"We've cracked it, now we want to keep it," he said.

Florida moved up to No. 2 this week, setting up a Fiesta Bowl showdown against No. 1 Nebraska.

Florida (11-0) rose one spot after beating No. 8 Florida State 35-24 Saturday. If the Gators defeat No. 23 Arkansas in the Southeastern Conference championship game, they will play Nebraska (11-0) for the national title on Jan. 2.

Nebraska remained No. 1 after defeating Oklahoma 37-0 Friday. The Huskers received 51 first-place votes and 1,539 points, while Florida got 11 firsts and 1,499 points.

Northwestern (10-1), which finished its regular season a week ago, moved up one notch, and so did No. 4 Tennessee (10-1), which beat Vanderbilt 12-7.

Both teams jumped over Ohio State (11-1), which fell from second to fifth after losing to Michigan 31-23.

Notre Dame (9-2) was sixth, followed by Colorado (9-2), Florida State (9-2), Texas (9-1-1) and Kansas State (9-2). All those teams were idle except Florida State and Texas, which defeated Baylor 21-13 Thursday.

Rounding out the Top 25 were Kansas, Oregon, Virginia Tech, Michigan, Penn State, Texas A&M, Auburn, Southern Cal, Virginia, Washington, Alabama, Miami, Arkansas, Clemson and Toledo.

Weaker teams making their move in NFL

By BARRY WILNER AP Football Writer

The Arizona Cardinals, New England Patriots and Indianapolis Colts kept finding themselves in a strange place — the end zone.

Three of the weakest offenses in the NFL awakened with a vengeance Sunday. The Cardinals, Patriots and Colts all scored at least 35 points in winning, joining teams you'd expect to collect points in bunches, such as San Francisco, Atlanta, Green Bay and Denver.

Arizona, playing in its third straight home overtime game, fourth overall and a record 20th for the league this season, edged Atlanta 40-37. The Cardinals scored 171 points in their first 11 games and didn't reach 40 in their three-game slide that ended with Sunday's victory.

"I can't believe all of the games we've taken into overtime this season," said placekicker Greg Davis, whose 28-yard field goal won it for what was the NFL's lowest-scoring team. "It's giving me gray hair. I'm going to have a coronary one of these days."

New England, which had one of the NFL's most prolific attacks last season, broke out against Buffalo, winning 35-25. Drew Bledsoe hit Ben Coates for three scores.

"I think we're capable of playing competitive football with anybody in this conference. Today is a good example," Patriots coach Bill Parcells said.

The Colts withstood Dan Marino's record-setting as Jim Harbaugh threw for three scores and ran for another in a 36-28 decision. Marino set the NFL mark for touchdown passes, getting four to up his career total to 346.

"I'm never going to be a threat to Marino's record. He's the best in the business, without a doubt," Harbaugh said.

But Harbaugh's been pretty good in 1995 himself. He leads the league in passing efficiency. "I do pinch myself a lot," Harbaugh said. "But I try to stay in that compartment of my brain where I keep doing the same thing, keep believing in myself and my teammates."

Houston got the most points Sunday, beating Denver 42-33. Also, it was San Francisco 41, St. Louis 13 in Steve Young's return; Green Bay 35, Tampa Bay 13; Pittsburgh 20, Cleveland 17; Cincinnati 17, Jacksonville 13; the New York Jets 16, St. Louis 10; Chicago 27, the New York Giants 24; Philadelphia 14, Washington 7; and New Orleans 34, Carolina 26.

On Thanksgiving, Dallas beat Kansas City 24-12, while Detroit took Minnesota 44-38, starting the offensive onslaught. Tonight, Oakland is at San Diego.

Cardinals 40, Falcons 37, OT

Dave Krieg passed for 413 yards and four TDs for host Arizona (4-8), which toppled Atlanta (7-5) from a tie for first place in the NFC West.

"Hopefully it's a confidence level we can maintain for the rest of the season," said Krieg.

Jeff George had three TD passes for the Falcons.

Patriots 35, Bills 25

Coates caught a 15-yarder with 1:23 left to cap a 22-point fourth quarter. Rookie Curtis Martin rushed for 148 yards on 27 carries and surpassed 1,000 yards for the season for the visiting Patriots (5-7).

Chris Slade returned an interception 27 yards to clinch it with 57 seconds remaining. Jim Kelly was picked off three times for Buffalo (8-4).

Colts 36, Dolphins 28

At Indianapolis, Marino overcame a third career mark set by Fran Tarkenton. He now has the most completions, yardage and TD throws in NFL history, and all three records came in losses for slumping Miami (6-6).

"We feel like we have the talent, we're capable. But we're not winning games," Marino said.

Indianapolis (7-5) built a 24-0 first-half lead.

49ers 41, Rams 13

The Super Bowl champions are expected to score a lot of points, particularly with Young returning from a shoulder injury that cost him five games. He threw for three scores, two to rookie J.J. Stokes.

Young was intercepted on his first pass, but was 21 of 32 as the 49ers scored 35 straight points, including an 86-yard interception return by cornerback Eric Davis. St. Louis (6-6) has lost 11 straight to the Niners (8-4).

Oilers 42, Broncos 33

Chris Chandler outduelled John Elway with three TD passes as only 36,113 showed up to see the Oilers (5-7), who are headed for Nashville next season.

Elway connected twice with Anthony Miller for TDs. But Chandler was 18 of 26 for 280 yards as the teams combined for 920 yards.

Rodney Thomas had a 74-yard TD run and Chandler had TD passes of 36 and 35 yards to Chris Sanders. Terrell Davis had a 60-yard TD run for the Broncos (6-6).

Packers 35, Buccaneers 13

At Green Bay, Robert Brooks caught two of Brett Favre's three TD passes and had six catches for 144 yards as he went over 1,000 yards receiving for the first time. Favre, the NFL's leader with 28 TD passes, completed 16 of 24 for 267 yards for the Packers (8-4).

Errict Rhett, the NFC's third-leading rusher, was held to minus-1 yard on 13 carries as the Bucs (6-6) lost for the fourth time in five games.

Steelers 20, Browns 17

In what might be their final visit to Cleveland, the Steelers (8-4) maintained a three-game lead in the AFC Central. Neil O'Donnell was 21-for-30 for 251 yards and a TD, while Norm Johnson's 27-yard field goal at the start of the fourth quarter was the difference in Pittsburgh's fifth straight win. The Steelers can clinch the division title next week.

Cleveland (4-8) has lost four straight since the move to Baltimore was revealed.

Bengals 17, Jaguars 13

At Jacksonville, Jeff Blake struggled. So did Carl Pickens. But Blake (19 of 39 for 210 yards) threw a 5-yard TD pass to AFC receptions leader Pickens (two catches, 19 yards) with 17 seconds left to lift Cincinnati (5-7). It was the 19th straight game with a TD pass for Blake.

The Jaguars (3-9) went ahead on a 39-yard field goal by Mike Hollis with 3:19 left.

Northwestern advances to Rose Bowl; Michigan shocks Buckeyes

By The Associated Press

COLLEGE ROUNDUP

Syracuse 35-24.

Coach Gary Barnett promised Northwestern fans a Rose Bowl and, with a little help from Michigan, that's just where the Wildcats will spend New Year's Day.

For the second time in three years, Michigan spoiled Ohio State's postseason plans for Pasadena, beating the Buckeyes 31-23.

Two years ago, Wisconsin won the Big Ten championship when the Wolverines ended State's unbeaten season. This time, the beneficiary was Northwestern.

"There are no words to describe it," said Barnett, who stood up during a basketball game when he took the job nearly four years ago and promised he would "Take the Purple To Pasadena."

His first three seasons, the Wildcats won just eight games, two fewer than they won during this 10-1 season.

"I feel like we delivered, and that's fulfilling. We needed a little help to do it, but we got it," he said.

Most of the help came from Tim Biakabutuka, who rushed for 313 yards in Michigan's upset of Ohio State. The loss left the No. 5 Buckeyes at 11-1 and headed for the Citrus Bowl against No. 4 Tennessee (10-1).

"I don't know that I've been more disappointed in my life," Ohio State coach John Cooper said. "The Citrus Bowl is not the Rose Bowl."

Northwestern might not have noticed. The No. 3 Wildcats had not had a winning season since 1971 and struggled through a 34-game losing streak during the '80s.

The Wildcats, who last played in the Rose Bowl in 1949, will face No. 18 Southern California (8-2-1), a regular visitor making its 28th appearance in the game.

"Now we could win the Rose Bowl, everybody else could lose and we win the national championship," said fifth-year senior Geoff Shein, who played in the program before Barnett came to Northwestern.

"Who knows? This is a magical year."

After Saturday's games, it seems almost certain that top-ranked Nebraska (11-0) will play No. 2 Florida (11-0) for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl. Florida, which defeated Florida State 35-24, is a heavy favorite against No. 23 Arkansas in next week's SEC championship game.

While the Fiesta Bowl has virtually locked up a 1-2 showdown between Nebraska and Florida, the matchups for the other two bowl alliance games still aren't set.

The Orange Bowl would like Notre Dame and Miami, which tied Virginia Tech for the Big East title. But that could change if the Sugar Bowl goes for Tech. Since there's only room for one Big East team in the alliance, that would drop Miami to the Gator Bowl.

If the Sugar takes Virginia Tech, Notre Dame probably would play Florida State in the Orange and Tech would meet the Texas-Texas A&M winner at New Orleans.

Otherwise, the Orange would get Notre Dame-Miami and the Sugar would pit Florida State against the Texas-Texas A&M winner.

Unlike past years when all three games were played on Jan. 1, the Fiesta, Orange and Sugar will be held on consecutive nights. The Sugar will be played Dec. 31, the Orange on New Year's night and the Fiesta Jan. 2.

Other announced or projected bowl matchups: Cotton (Colorado-Oregon); Aloha (UCLA-Kansas); Sun (Washington-Iowa); Holiday (Kansas State-Colorado State); Outback (Penn State-Auburn); Liberty (East Carolina-Stanford); Peach (Virginia vs. Arkansas, Alabama or Georgia); Gator (Clemson vs. Virginia Tech or Miami); Las Vegas (Nevada-Toledo); Copper (Texas Tech vs. Utah, BYU or Air Force); Alamo (Michigan vs. Texas-Texas A&M loser); Independence (LSU-Michigan State), and Carquest (Syracuse-North Carolina).

In other Top 25 games Saturday, No. 4 Tennessee downed Vanderbilt 12-7. No. 15 Penn State beat Michigan State 24-20. No. 16 Texas A&M defeated Texas Christian 38-6, and No. 22 Miami beat

No. 2 Florida 35, No. 8 Florida State 24

Danny Wuerffel threw for 443 yards and four touchdowns as Florida tied a school record with its 11th straight victory and beat Florida State (9-2) for only the second time since 1987. Ike Hilliard caught six passes for 192 yards and two TDs while Chris Doering had seven receptions for 124 yards and one score and set SEC records for TD receptions in a season (16) and career (30).

No. 4 Tennessee 12, Vanderbilt 7

Jay Graham ran for 211 yards, including a 1-yard TD with three minutes left, as Tennessee survived a scare from 37-point underdog Vanderbilt. Vols quarterback Peyton Manning was 26-of-42 for 265 yards to set school records in all three categories.

No. 14 Michigan 31, No. 5 Ohio State 23

Biakabutuka had the second best rushing day in Michigan history as the Wolverines (9-3) spoiled Ohio State's perfect season. Biakabutuka's 313 yards was 34 short of Ron Johnson's single-game record, but he did break Jamie Morris' school record for rushing yards in a season with 1,724.

No. 15 Penn State 24, Michigan State 20

Bobby Engram caught a 4-yard TD pass with eight seconds remaining, giving Penn State (8-3) the comeback victory. Working without any timeouts, Wally Richardson completed 11 passes in the winning 73-yard drive.

No. 16 Texas A&M 38, TCU 6

Leeland McElroy scored twice and Corey Pullig threw for 253 yards. The Aggies (8-2) can gain a share of the last Southwest Conference title by beating Texas Saturday.

No. 22 Miami 35, Syracuse 24

Danyell Ferguson rushed for 163 yards and the Hurricanes (8-3) scored the final 21 points to win their seventh straight after a 1-3 start.

Top secret intelligence agency stars in television documentary

WASHINGTON (AP) — A super-secret U.S. intelligence agency whose satellites have kept watch over the earth's surface since 1960 is stepping in front of the camera to tell its story.

Critics say the agency — the National Reconnaissance Office — merely wants to justify its existence now that the Cold War is over. But the agency says it's taking advantage of its newly declassified status to discuss with the American public the many ways its data can be used.

The agency — whose very existence was not confirmed until 1992 — will be featured in a Discovery Channel documentary, Spies Above, scheduled to be broadcast in March.

Arcwelder Films began producing the hour-long documentary for Discovery weeks after the chairman of Discovery's board of directors was approached last spring by the agency's director, Jeffrey Harris.

According to Pat Wilkerson, spokeswoman for the NRO, the two men met for lunch and agreed that an original documentary exclusive for Discovery would be "mutually beneficial" for both organizations. David Whipple, executive director of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers, said the NRO's intelligence gathering activity continues at an unprecedented rate. He said the film is an attempt to get the American public to "look benignly on intelligence collection."

"They would like to open up the eyes of the American public that intelligence produces things that are very, very positive in terms of scientific and medical breakthroughs," he said. Whipple's group is a private, independent group of former officers who lecture and publish articles on intelligence.

However, critics say the agency is exaggerating the degree of openness represented by Spies Above, and the items it has recently declassified are still too encrypted to be of value to most Americans.

Last February the NRO declassified thousands of photographs taken between 1960 and 1972 by its Corona satellite, meaning agency analysts working on projects connected with the photographs are now permitted to speak about their work. Since Corona's launch the NRO has gathered more information than any other agency in U.S. history, experts say. What began as blurry images of Soviet nuclear plants has evolved into sharp photographs of items the size of a license plate.

John Prados, author of Combined Fleet Decoded, History of American Intelligence in World War II, said the Discovery Channel documentary is a shrewd way for the agency to dispose of files it no longer values. "They need space and it's costly to keep it classified. If they can get this stuff out there and get good press out of it — it's a twofer," he said.

But Prados warned that while Corona's photographs contain information significant to seasoned intelligence analysts, they are useless to the average civilian. "It's one thing to say that a database is very valuable, but actually drawing the value out of this depends on people going into the photography and detailing it. The NRO's position is based on the theoretical notion that value can be drawn," he said.

Nation briefs

Token booth burning similar to scenes in new movie

NEW YORK (AP) — In a virtual replay of scenes from the new movie "Money Train," two men squeezed a flammable liquid into a subway token booth and ignited it, blowing it up and critically burning the clerk.

"We know from experience that when you get movie and television depictions of criminal activity, it is often copycatted," Transit Authority President Alan Kiepper said after the explosion Sunday.

The early morning blast in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section shook apartments a block away, splintered the bulletproof booth and sent 50-year-old clerk Harry Kaufman screaming up the station stairs in flames.

"Somebody blew up my booth. ... Please help me," police officer

Teresa Cohen said the man told her as he ran into her arms with only bits of underwear still clinging to his shredded skin.

Model's injuries 'not consistent' with accidental death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Preliminary autopsy results cast doubt on a photographer's claim that he accidentally killed model Linda Sobek by hitting her with a truck during a photo shoot.

Sobek's injuries were "inconsistent" with such an accident, coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier said Sunday.

Carrier also said it did not appear she had been shot, stabbed or suffered any obvious major head injury. It will be several weeks before a cause of death can be determined, pending results of drug and tissue tests, he said. The autopsy was performed Sunday, a day after Sobek's body, clad in shorts and a top, was exhumed from a makeshift grave in the San Gabriel Mountains.

Carrier said Sobek's body had "a little bruising on her cheek," but otherwise it appeared to be in "remarkably good condition" considering that she had been buried for more than a week. He declined to provide details on other injuries.

Photographer Charles Rathbun, 38, told investigators he struck Sobek with a loaned prototype Lexus sport utility truck as he demonstrated tight turns, or "doughnuts."

He said after he was unable to revive her, he panicked and buried her alongside a mountain road about 25 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Whitewater: Bankers' donations to Clinton explored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whitewater prosecutors expanded their investigation of Bill Clinton's 1990 campaign for governor, but the probe has been stymied since the summer because two Arkansas bankers are waging a secret court battle that is blocking access to their financial records.

In an investigation that originally focused on White House aide Bruce Lindsey, Whitewater prosecutors are trying to determine whether funds from a bank owned by Herby Branscum Jr.

and Robert M. Hill were funneled into Clinton's campaign, say lawyers familiar with the investigation.

The focus of the probe: $7,000 in donations from the families of Branscum and Hill, owners of the Perry County Bank in Perryville, Ark., where the Clinton campaign kept its accounts.

Attorneys for Branscum and Hill deny any misuse of bank funds.

According to three non-government lawyers familiar with the investigation, former Perry

County Bank president Neal Ainley told prosecutors he was reimbursed from a bank expense fund for $1,000 he donated to the Clinton campaign on the same day the Branscum and Hill contributions were made.

Ainley told prosecutors he believed that the Branscum and Hill family donations came from bank funds, too, but that they had been disguised, said the lawyers, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Ainley's lawyer, Jay Bequette of Little Rock, Ark., declined comment.
