Low tonight in mid 30s, high tomorrow in low 60s. See Page 2 for weather details.

PAMPA — The Celebration of Lights will have its opening ceremony this evening to light up the town for the holidays.

The ceremony will begin at 6 p.m. on Kingsmill between Frost and Russell streets in downtown Pampa.

Providing entertainment will be the Pampa Elementary Chorus, Madeline Graves' Dancers and the M.G. Flyers.

At 6:30 p.m., Mrs. Santa will be arriving to light up Pampa.

Celebration of Lights continues through Dec. 30.

PERRYTON — A Lupus support group will meet at the hospital here early next month.

The Panhandle Area Lupus Support Group will meet from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 4, in the classroom of Ochiltree General Hospital in Perryton.

Lupus is a chronic autoimmune disease which causes inflammation in various parts of the body, particularly the skin, joints, blood and kidneys, according to Sally Jo Boyd, Panhandle Area Lupus Support Group coordinator.

For more information, call Boyd at (806) 435-7030.

WHITE DEER — Three members of the board of directors of Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District No. 3 have filed for re-election.

Running again are Phillip Smith, Panhandle, Precinct 1; Jerry Green, Clarendon, Precinct 5; and Robert Clark, Miami, Precinct 7.

Pampa's John Spearman said Tuesday he plans to file for re-election.

Elections for Precincts 1, 3, 5 and 7 will be held 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Jan. 20, 1996 in those precincts.

Filing continues through 5 p.m. Nov. 29 at the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District's office, 300 Omohundro, White Deer.

Voters in Precinct 1 will ballot in the War Memorial Building, Panhandle; Precinct 3, Gray County Annex; Precinct 5, Donley County Courthouse; and Precinct 7, Miami City Hall.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Christmas tree in Rockefeller Center will shimmer with old-fashioned lights — and high-tech security — this year. Two men tried to set last year's tree on fire, so closed-circuit cameras and a sprinkler system will be installed this year, with extra guards posted. No one will get too close to the 75-foot evergreen, which will be surrounded by a metal fence topped with a water hose capable of dousing flames.

U.S. soldiers may be sent into Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of U.S. soldiers will be in wintry Bosnia before Christmas helping NATO keep the newly declared peace, if all goes according to a plan awaiting President Clinton's approval. Members of Congress remained skeptical today.

About 20,000 American troops are likely to participate. Their mission: to ensure the separation of Serb, Croat and Bosnian armed forces as called for in the peace accord initiated by the three parties Tuesday in Ohio.

"This is a limited, achievable mission," Vice President Al Gore said today on ABC's Good Morning America.

The total force, composed of troops from other NATO member countries as well as non-NATO European and probably some Muslim countries, is expected to be about 60,000. It would be commanded by U.S. Army Gen. George Joulwan, who is chief of all American forces in Europe as well as NATO's Supreme Allied Commander Europe.

Gen. Dennis Reimer, chief of staff of the Army, told reporters today the main U.S. force would be the Germany-based 1st Armored Division, whose 13,000 soldiers would be augmented by an unspecified number of U.S. troops from bases in the United States. Reimer declined to say exactly which U.S.-based units might go, but he said they would not include the 10th Mountain Division, at Fort Drum, N.Y., which has done other recent peacekeeping missions.

Reimer said the U.S. units that go to Bosnia have been told they will stay for the duration of the mission rather than being relieved with a rotation of fresh forces.

Congress has been highly critical of Clinton's insistence that U.S. forces lead the NATO peacekeeping mission. Just moments after the president announced the accord, Sen.

Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, declared himself "still not convinced" that the United States has enough at stake to justify risking the lives of its troops.

"President Clinton should come before Congress and explain fully the scope, length and anticipated costs of the deployment before sending" any troops, Thurmond said.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said there is "enormous skepticism" in Congress and among all Americans about sending American troops to Bosnia. But he conceded that "it's going to be difficult for Congress to prevent the dispatch of troops."

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said he would not rule out the possibility that Clinton would alter a planned trip to Europe next week to address the nation Monday to make his case for sending troops to Bosnia. It was also possible that Clinton would add a stop in Germany to visit with American troops before they begin peacekeeping duties.

Trying to blunt opposition, McCurry said that sending American forces was literally a case of peace versus war. "You either want the United States to participate in helping keep the peace ... or you want the war to continue."

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Tuesday that he looked at the U.S. troop deployment "skeptically but with an open mind" and would hold hearings next week.

Richard Holbrooke, an assistant secretary of state who helped mediate the agreement, said on NBC's Today, that American troops would not be sent "until we're absolutely sure that the peace agreement ... will work, that it will hold. And we're not going to send people into a war."

Illegally slain deer may be blessing for charities

WHITE DEER — The State of Texas wants Genesis House to have a Merry Christmas.

State Game Warden Jerry Stucki seized an illegally taken deer this week and, in accordance with state law, donated it to Genesis House, a drug and alcohol treatment program in Pampa for adolescents.

"It's state policy to see that the deer is utilized," Stucki said.

The doe, which was illegally shot, will be butchered and the meat donated to Genesis House, he explained.

Joe Freeman with Clint & Sons Custom Processing and Slaughtering in White Deer volunteered to process the meat for Genesis House.

Last year, Stucki said, nine deer were seized after being killed illegally. All were donated to charitable organizations.

Stucki said any charitable organization that could use such meat can contact him at the Gray County Sheriff's Office.

Ready for Christmas

Frank Slazenski Jr. and his fiancée Jackie Mann sit in Frank's Schneider House apartment, which is already decorated for Christmas. He set the decorations up three months ago and a few nurses who "are like daughters" to him helped. The last five of his Christmases were spent in the hospital. This year, he suffered from lung cancer and had an operation. He spends most of his days at the cancer center in Amarillo. This year, he's intent on spending Christmas at home and with Jackie. "She did a lot for me," said Frank. "I can't find any better person than that." They plan to get married in July after he has paid his hospital bills.

Woman injured in house explosion doing 'okay' in recovery, mother says

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

The mother of a local woman injured in a house explosion two weeks ago says her daughter is still doing "okay."

Marcella Hogan said this morning that daughter Janna Hogan is undergoing physical therapy at St. Anthony's Hospital rehabilitation center.

The therapy is focusing primarily on Janna Hogan's right knee, which was severely injured in the explosion that left her home in shambles.

Hogan had surgery on her knee one day after the explosion, receiving eight screws and a plate from a hip bone graft.

Marcella Hogan said her daughter had experienced ringing in her ears following the blast, but that problem seems to be fading.

It is still undetermined, Marcella Hogan said, when Janna will be released from the hospital.

Meanwhile, the investigation continues into what exactly caused the natural gas explosion at Hogan's home.

Tuesday morning, workers from a local plumbing company were performing pressure checks on the gas lines at 1214 N. Russell.

Fire Marshal Tom Adams' incident report blames natural gas for the explosion, but investigators still don't know exactly where the leak came from.

A state fire marshal investigator and investigators for Hogan's attorney, John Warner, were in Pampa last week examining the house.

Workers, including Hogan's uncle Glen Hogan, cleared rubble from the remainders of the house's floor. Investigators want to see as clearly as possible the layout of the home before the explosion to determine the epicenter of the blast.

The house should be demolished in about a week, officials expect.

Also, charges were filed Tuesday against Builder's Plumbing Supply Company, municipal court clerk Belinda Stafford confirmed today.

The three charges are class C misdemeanors, she said, carrying a maximum penalty of $200 fines each.

Builder's Plumbing workers were installing a natural gas line without a permit at the home of Janna Hogan prior to the explosion.

Dick Wilkerson, president of the company, confirmed after the explosion that workers had installed both a sewer line and gas line that day. He said they had a permit for the sewer line but had not yet requested one for the gas line.

Wilkerson said that his normal procedure is to begin a job and seek a permit at a later date.

City code enforcement officer David McKinney said at the time that such a procedure is against state codes.

McKinney said Wednesday that the charges are not currently connected with the investigation into the cause of that explosion.

Pampans give reasons for Thanksgiving

Family, friends and health are the hands-down winners in what Pampans are thankful for this year. Around town, several people were asked what they are most grateful for, and these are their responses:

"For being here, I guess," said Sue Henderson. "I'm thankful for my mother and daughter and grandson. I have a good boss."

"Family, health, friends, business. Business is good; good employees. I could just keep going on and on, I guess," said Warren Dahn.

"Really, what I'm thankful for is my family and friends and the support they give," said Susan Ratzlaff.

Ratzlaff plans to spend Thanksgiving with her mother.

"Family, friends and health, good health," said Norene Marsh.

Marsh plans to eat turkey and ham with her son and daughter-in-law Rick and Toni Marsh. They will be joined by another son and daughter-in-law, Mike and Linda Marsh.

"I'm thankful for God first thing and family and friends and good health," said Barbara Mesneak.

She will visit her parents Wylie and Opal Pettit for Turkey Day.

"(Mother) told me to bring a big appetite and I believe I can do that," Mesneak said.

"I'm thankful for my friends, my family and for good health. Those are the most important things to me right now," said Donna Brauchi.

She plans to go to Hubbard Creek Lake near Abilene for a little R&R with just her husband and two children. They will have a traditional Thanksgiving meal, Brauchi said.

Florida returns inmates to hard labor

MIAMI (AP) — With their chains clanking and machetes whacking through thick Everglades brush, inmates on the first Florida chain gangs since 1946 toiled under shotgun watch and grumbled about their plight.

Yet on orders of "About face!" the 20 inmates with their bush axes over their shoulders turned with military precision Tuesday and slogged through a shallow swamp to chop away at another stand of exotic melaleuca trees. Similar scenes played out in central and north Florida.

At a time of growing public anger over crime and its punishment, Florida on Tuesday became the third state to bring back the form of forced labor that was eliminated nationwide a half-century ago because it was considered cruel and inhumane. Many likened it to slavery; some still do.

Unlike Alabama, Florida prisoners aren't shackled together. Instead, each prisoner's ankles are tied together with a 24-inch link-chain and their 20-person work groups are monitored by three guards carrying shotguns. Arizona has introduced a similar system.

Students' recipes are a bug-lover's delight

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — A fly in the soup might mean a higher grade in Professor Frank French's class.

For a biology project at Georgia Southern University, French's students concocted recipes using termites, crickets and other bugs. Some used wild plants, but French awarded extra points for insects.

The toughest part of this semester's assignment: The students had to eat their creations, including creamy termite dip and crunchy cricket clusters.

Many insects are good sources of protein and fats, French said. "A pound of termites has more nutrients than a pound of beef or pork."

County ends policy of shooting stray dogs

SHEPHERDSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bad publicity and death threats have prompted a county to stop killing stray dogs with bullets and instead use injections.

Bullitt County had been shooting strays for 20 years, as have other counties in the state. Officials defend it as cheaper than gas or injections.

But Bullitt County Judge-Executive John Harper said Tuesday that negative reaction to news stories this month about the policy and death threats left on his answering machine compelled him to order the change.

Harper, head of county government in this town about 30 miles south of Louisville, said the county's Humane Society and a new group formed by local veterinarians will cover the cost of injections.

PEP honors Pampa for recycling efforts

The city of Pampa was honored with the Panhandle Environmental Partnership's award for the most aluminum recycled per capita for 1994-1995, according to city Sanitation Superintendent Rick Stone.

The award was bestowed on Nov. 15, Texas Recycling Day, he said.

Over 1 million pounds of materials were recycled at the Pampa Recycling Center, including nearly 60,000 pounds of aluminum.

There were 611,620 pounds of metal, including scrap and appliances, recycled and 286,068 pounds of newsprint. Magazines accounted for 56,925 pounds and white paper 70,350 pounds. Other categories were aluminum, 59,665 pounds; clear glass, 16,345; mixed glass, 16,345; mixed paper, 30,012; cardboard, 12,735; type 1 plastic, 8,509; type 2 plastic, 7,530; and steel or tin cans, 12,580.

About 800 residents use the recycling center over a month's time, said Stone. The center is located at 707 Municipal Drive, behind Hobart Street Park. It is open noon to 6 p.m. Thursday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

There are 31 member cities of the partnership.

Support sought for farm payments plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican farm bill would enable farmers who received their crop subsidies in advance to avoid having to repay them, House Agriculture Committee Chairman Pat Roberts said.

Seeking to rally support for a plan that would replace the current subsidy system with direct payments to farmers, Roberts said the change would be a big accounting help to many.

"The current system adds insult to injury by forcing farmers, many of whom had no crop to sell, to repay advance deficiency payments," Roberts, R-Kan., said Tuesday.

If the GOP farm spending blueprint is enacted, Roberts said the 1995 advance deficiency payments would simply be deducted from whatever the farmer would get under the new system. The leftover money would go back into payments for other farmers growing that particular crop.

The GOP program, Roberts said, "will avoid a major cash-flow train wreck in farm country."

The farm bill is part of the overall Republican seven-year balanced budget plan that Congress sent to President Clinton this week. The president has promised to veto the overall bill, in part because of the cuts in agriculture.

The House Agriculture Committee released estimates showing how much farmers could expect to receive if the new direct payment system became law and they signed up for the new Agricultural Market Transition Program.

Under the Republican plan, farmers who grow crops in the program — corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats, wheat, rice and cotton — would receive a direct government payment as long as they received subsidies during one of the past five years. The payments would not be tied to commodity price or production levels, as current subsidies are.

The plan would cut $12.3 billion from agriculture spending over the next seven years as part of the GOP effort to balance the federal budget by 2002.

U.S. trade deficit down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit declined to $8.35 billion in September, the lowest level in nine months, as exports hit an all-time high and the deficit with Japan narrowed to the smallest imbalance in more than two years.

The Commerce Department reported that the September trade gap showed a 0.1 percent improvement from an $8.36 billion deficit in August, reflecting in part a big surge in sales of American made autos and auto parts.

Exports of goods and services were up 1.6 percent to a record $67.24 billion. This advance helped to offset a 1.4 percent rise in imports, which climbed to $75.59 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between what the country imports and what it sells abroad.

The September improvement caught economists by surprise. Many of them had been expecting the deficit would widen sharply to more than $10 billion, reflecting weak economies overseas and a rebound in domestic demand.

In a separate report, the Labor Department reported today that the number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits edged up to 371,000 last week from 370,000 the previous week. Both figures, however, were down from the level of 381,000 hit for the week ended Nov. 4.

Even with the improvement in the September trade figure, the deficit in goods alone is running at an annual rate of $167.1 billion through the first nine months of this year, putting the country well on track to surpass the previous deficit record of $152 billion set in 1987.

The country's worsening trade performance this year has been an embarrassment to the Clinton administration, which has made trade a key component of its foreign policy, pushing through completion of a free trade pact with Mexico as well as various other high profile market opening agreements.

The deficit with Japan, after worsening in the early part of the year, has begun to show improvement.

For September, the Japanese deficit narrowed to $4.3 billion, a sharp 15.6 percent decrease from August, which pushed the monthly figure to its lowest figure since May 1993.

The improvement reflected a $400 million jump in U.S. exports, led by sales of autos and computers.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Powell's decision disappoints many

In the manner of his departure from presidential politics, Colin Powell might have deepened the regret many potential supporters will feel. The retired general was dignified, calm, civil and self-assured, offering evidence of thoughtfulness and a welcome sense of humor. Had he become a candidate, he would have been an interesting one. Perhaps he would not have been able to elevate the tone of the political circus single-handedly, but his presence would have been useful.

Even in view of all that, it could well be more helpful for American society for this thoroughly decent and admirable man to decide to make his future contributions to the country in places other than the political arena, in ways other than by reaching for power and position. How refreshing it is to hear a prominent and widely-admired American acknowledge that a race for president requires "a passion and commitment that despite my every effort I do not have for political life, because such a life requires a calling that I do not yet hear."

One of the more doleful aspects of this over-governed country is the pervasiveness of politics and political calculation in every aspect of our lives. To be sure, it is possible for politics, at least during certain times, to be a noble calling for people with an especial love of country or a principled commitment to certain ideals. But the comment of our third president, Thomas Jefferson, after a long life of participation and insightful observation: "(W)henver a man has cast a longing eye on offices, a rottenness begins in his conduct..." - remains trenchant.

If this country is to realize its true promise, the obsession with politics, the assumption that our problems can be solved if only we could elect decent people to positions of political power, the tendency to look to the president as a father-figure who is expected to make everything right for everybody, must be changed. Having a person with Colin Powell's stature make a widely noticed decision, after what must have been gratifying and flattering appeals from respected people, to stay out of the political life for now, could be an important step in a healthy process of depoliticization of public and private life.

Mr. Powell spoke of spending time on charitable and educational activities, of helping, as a private citizen with a certain degree of prestige, his newly-joined Republican Party not only to broaden its appeal (perhaps even to his own wife) but "to bring government under control and make government smaller." Those are worthy objectives, and it is salutary that he believes he doesn't have to run for office to pursue them.

Perhaps Mr. Powell would even agree with another comment from Jefferson: "I had rather be shut up in a very modest cottage, with my books, my family, and a few old friends, dining on simple bacon, and letting the world roll on as it liked, than to occupy the most splendid post which any human power can give."

Is Big Bird all its touted to be?

As congressional budget conferees huddle in back rooms, ironing out differences in the House and Senate budgets, one thing is clear - Big Bird has survived the ax. The very idea that Republicans would consider tampering with subsidies to Sesame Street was greeted on editorial pages and in television studios around the nation as evidence that the Hottentots had arrived.

Leaving aside arguments about the proper scope of the federal government, Kay Hymowitz, writing in the Autumn edition of the City Journal, argues that Sesame Street does not deserve its status as educational icon. Far from preparing young children for school and the wider world of learning, Sesame Street grooms its charges only for more television.

Kindergarten teachers have long complained that 5-year-olds are showing up with deficient language skills. This cannot, of course, be blamed entirely on one TV show. But Sesame Street's creators endlessly tout its supposed beneficial effects. The children who watch are said to be more cooperative, more school-ready and more likely to show signs of emerging literacy than those who don't watch. But the studies that purport to show this do not, Hymowitz notes, take into account the fact that parents who urge their children to watch Sesame Street tend to be more attentive in general than those who plunk their youngsters in front of Power Rangers and leave the room.

All of the hype notwithstanding, Sesame Street doesn't actually glorify learning at all. It glorifies television and the youth culture. In-jokes and references to other television programs are endless. And while they can be extremely amusing to adults - Alistair Cookie is my favorite - they soar above the heads of the preschoolers in the audience. Sesame Street invokes (and spoofs) soap operas, game shows, cultural fare like Great Performances and, most of all, commercials. Indeed, Sesame Street is self-consciously modeled on commercials, with fast cuts, jazzy music and very, very short segments. If your child cannot concentrate for more than 30 seconds, Sesame Street, in marked contrast to other programs aimed at preschoolers like Barney and Mister Rogers, reinforces that.

Hymowitz recalls that Sesame Street got its start during the turbulent 1960s, when the show was extolled as a vehicle to improve the academic performance of poor, particularly urban poor, children. This "high-minded, public-service image provided the show with a Teflon coating to which no criticisms - though they have trickled in over the years - can stick."

Even if the show's claims about improving familiarity with letters and numbers are true, Hymowitz argues, "identifying the letter A is about as central to reading as defining short-stop is to playing baseball - necessary but wildly insufficient. The skills required for reading are a complex mix of concentration, persistence, the linking of concepts" and more. Far from teaching concentration, Sesame Street schools viewers in video surfing, short takes on everything from addition to shapes and sounds.

And then there is the matter of content. The cultural tone of Sesame Street is politically correct through and through. All families are fine, kids are instructed. Some have one daddy; some have two. The worst behavior on the part of a child is not pouting, hitting or cruelty but wasting water.

Though Sesame Street is undeniably clever and carefully crafted, it does little to stimulate children's imaginations. Leading psychologists like Bruno Bettelheim have shown that traditional fairy tales - especially those featuring witches and danger - serve important functions in the imagination of the very young child. Cinderella, for example, resonates with every child who has ever felt isolated or ill-treated (that is, all). It teaches the importance of hope and punishes envy and spite. It has been a classic for hundreds of years.

But the Sesame Street retelling, like its treatment of all fairy tales, is barely recognizable. The prince, holding Cinderella's glass slipper, seeks not the woman who captivated him at the ball but the other slipper - so he'll have a matched pair.

Enchantment gets short shrift on Sesame Street, where the tone is smart-alecky and worldly wise. "Hip" and "cool" are the favorite words and the preferred mood. It is all image and flash, little depth or emotion. Sometimes fun for adults, it teaches preschoolers all the wrong lessons.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 22, the 326th day of 1995. There are 39 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 22, 1963, President Kennedy was assassinated while riding in a motorcade in Dallas; Texas Governor John B. Connally was seriously wounded. A suspect, Lee Harvey Oswald, was arrested. Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson became the 36th president of the United States.

On this date:

In 1718, English pirate Edward Teach - better known as "Blackbeard" - was killed during a battle off the Virginia coast.

In 1890, French president Charles de Gaulle was born in Lille, France.

In 1906, the SOS distress signal was adopted at the International Radio Telegraphic Convention in Berlin.

In 1928, "Bolero" by Maurice Ravel was first performed publicly, in Paris.

In 1935, a flying boat named the China Clipper took off from Alameda, Calif., carrying more than 100,000 pieces of mail on the first transPacific airmail flight.

In 1965, the musical Man of La Mancha opened in New York.

In 1975, Juan Carlos was proclaimed King of Spain.

In 1977, regular passenger service between New York and Europe on the supersonic Concorde began on a trial basis.

In 1980, actress Mae West died in Hollywood at age 87.

Ten years ago: One day after her husband, Jonathan Jay Pollard, was arrested on charges of spying for Israel, Anne Henderson-Pollard also was taken into custody. Jonathan Pollard was later sentenced to life in prison; his wife was sentenced to five years for being an accessory.

Five years ago: President Bush, his wife, Barbara, and top congressional leaders shared

Thanksgiving dinner with U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, having failed to win re-election of the Conservative Party leadership on the first ballot, announced her resignation.

One year ago: A gunman opened fire inside the District of Columbia's police headquarters; the resulting gunbattle left two FBI agents, a city detective and the gunman dead. Serb fighters in northwest Bosnia set villages ablaze in response to a retaliatory airstrike by NATO.

GOP should stick with present course

In the fall of 1982, President Reagan, who had forced a major tax cut through Congress just a year earlier, saw a worldwide recession make hash of his hope that the economic activity spurred by the tax cut would actually result in higher, rather than lower, tax revenues (as it had for John Kennedy, 20 years earlier).

The Democrats yelled bloody murder, and demanded higher taxes. Mr. Reagan, however, refused. "Stay the course," he instructed his administration and the Republican-controlled Senate. And in the 1984 presidential election, with the economy on the upswing and the country well into the longest boom in postwar history, Ronald Reagan carried 49 of the 50 states, and lost Minnesota by just 3,000 votes.

Once again, as in 1982, the Democrats think they have the Republicans down for the count. As soon as they realized that the new Republican majorities elected last year in the House and Senate seriously intended to balance the budget, and to do so in seven years, the congressional Democratic leaders adopted a cynical but effective strategy: Propose no alternative, but raise unshirred hell over every Republican proposal to reduce federal subsidies to key voting blocs.

Mr. Clinton signed on to this strategy, taking care only to float a proposal that would purportedly balance the budget painlessly in 10 years (though the Congressional Budget Office, whose predictive powers Mr. Clinton had incautiously praised, pointed out that his budget would actually fall $200 billion short of balance). Then he joined the congressional Democrats in trashing the Republican efforts.

As a result, 1995 has consisted of little but one wild shriek after another, as the Democrats and their allies in the media highlighted various Republican plans to bring the budget under control. Almost invariably, the expenditure in question will not diminish over the next seven years under the Republican plan, but actually increase. But because the increases are usually less than the amounts previously budgeted by Democratic Congresses for the out-years, the Democrats and the media have decided to call them "cuts," or even "slashes."

First, you will recall, it was our children, whose school lunches were going to be swept away. Then it was college students, whose financial aid would all but disappear. Next it was the poor in general, whose "safety net" would be "shredded" - above all, Medicaid. Then on to the elderly, whose Medicare premiums would allegedly be raised intolerably (though, as it turns out, only three or four dollars a month more than Mr. Clinton himself proposed raising them in his own "balanced budget" proposal). Last on the list are those in nursing homes, who will simply be tossed out in the streets to die.

Is it any wonder that polls indicate that a growing number of Americans "think the Republicans are going too far," "hope President Clinton will veto the Republican budget bill," etc.? As any accomplished debater will tell you, there is no truly effective way of demolishing a prediction: It is immune to disproof.

But the Republicans, who after all weren't born yesterday, know that the election won't be held until a year from now, long after their plan to balance the budget in seven years has been signed into law by Mr. Clinton (for in the long run, after cosmetic changes, he will sign it). And what the voters will see around them in November 1996 is not starving children, or poor people without medical care, or elderly corpses in the gutter, but a country that has, at long last, had the courage to tackle its problems head-on, and set itself on the road to financial health.

And they won't forget to be grateful to the party that made it all possible, despite a hurricane of lies.

Objective press versus 'pseudo-news'

The liberal media establishment is continuously complaining about the flow of Americans out of the traditional "objective" press. In a recent report, pseudo-journalist turned pseudo-academic Ellen Hume worried that the media elite was losing to "pseudo-news competitors like talk radio, advertorials and infotainment, which don't pretend to provide verified information or balanced viewpoints."

Why is it such a mystery to the likes of Ms. Hume that Americans have discovered it's the press that pretends to be "objective" which is feeding them the "pseudo-news"? Why can't our esteemed scribes understand that "verified information" is fast becoming an oxymoron in the mainstream press?

A couple of weeks ago, some outlets tried once again to smear Newt Gingrich with the brush of Jim Wright. Acting on a story in the New York Daily News, CBS reported on that night's "Evening News" that bulk sales of Gingrich's book may have violated House Ethics rules. The next day, Washington Post reporter John E. Yang noted that reporters who questioned Gingrich on the book drew a parallel with the bulk sales of another book by a previous speaker: "Gingrich also sought to refute comparisons with the bulk sales of a book by then-House Speaker Jim Wright."

Boy, do these reporters with Ivy League degrees really want to look like they can't distinguish between the two charges?

No. 1. Wright had an obviously sleazy royalty arrangement, receiving 55% of his book sales - four times the industry standard - from a "publisher" who happened to be a former campaign worker.

No. 2. Wright's book was never sold in bookstores, but dealt almost exclusively in bulk by the thousands to lobbyists like the Fertilizer Institute in order to get around House limits on honoraria income.

No. 3. Wright was charged with 69 counts of ethics violations and resigned in disgrace before indictment.

No. 4. Now let's compare: Of the estimated half-million copies of Gingrich's book To Renew America that HarperCollins has sold, the Post cited five bulk orders for a total of 517 books. That makes the Gingrich "scandal" pseudo-news.

Maybe, just maybe, it's because speakers historically get a raw deal from the press? Not exactly. The Boston Globe reported the investment firm Account Management Corp. was fined $100,000 by the Securities and Exchange Commission for secretly offering new stock offerings to its friends. One friend was former Speaker Tom Foley.

Small investors like Foley are generally not privy to these initial public offerings (IPOs), which give investors a chance to purchase new stock at a low price before it reaches the trading floor. Roll Call first noted in 1993 that Foley had been offered no less than 12 IPOs in 1992 and made money on eleven of them. Except for a single story on CNN's Inside Politics on July 26, 1993, the network newscasts ignored the story both then and now.

Then there's current House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, the supposed tribune of the poor against the evil tax-avoiding rich. Paul Rodriguez detailed in the Aug. 28 Insight that a "review of how Gephardt wound up with a luxury beach house worth more than $700,000 suggests that the Democratic leader may have violated various banking and tax laws, as well as financial reporting requirements of the Ethics in Government Act. As a result, the 10-term congressman could end up under close scrutiny by the House Ethics Committee." Armed with an obvious story of hypocrisy with great visuals, the media yawned and fled.

Rodriguez showed how Gephardt, an avid opponent of capital gains tax cuts, effectively avoided capital gains taxes by swapping a property he owned for a vacant lot in a beach-front community. Later, he reported the beach property as a rental property in what may have been a violation of the terms of the tax-free swap. Why, given Gephardt's daily demagoguing on tax cuts for the rich, isn't this a story? Because the same media that are out to get Gingrich have no interest in getting Gephardt.

Let's not forget Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, who faced charges of intervening with Forest Service regulators for a good buddy/contributor whose aviation company suffered a deadly crash. With the exception of 60 Minutes, the networks have studiously avoided mentioning that scandal all year.

These are the leaders of the Democratic Party, not back-benchers like Gingrich was in 1989. Remember during that time how the media yelped after Gingrich when then-Rep. Bill Alexander struck a blow for Jim Wright by countering Gingrich with ethical lapses surrounding his book Window of Opportunity? What's their excuse for ignoring Foley, Gephardt and Daschle?

Those liberal establishment chin-pullers who fret over the loss of responsible media "gatekeepers" should take a few hours to ponder how the gate is being kept by the traditional media: The welcome mat is out for the Democrats, the gate locked and bolted for the Republicans.

Death of suspect in police custody yields settlement
CORSICANA (AP) — The city of Corsicana has reached a $522,000 settlement with the family of a man who died while in police custody in June 1993.

Thomas was a passenger in a vehicle that was stopped by police in June 1993 for displaying expired license tags. After a foot chase, police struggled to subdue and arrest Thomas on charges of evading and resisting arrest.

The 29-year-old Wortham resident collapsed after he was booked into the Navarro County Justice Center. He died later at Navarro Regional Hospital.

An autopsy showed that he died from a combination of drugs, alcohol and injuries suffered during his arrest, including the way he was restrained.

Last season's sugar crop decreases

WESLACO (AP) — Last season's Rio Grande Valley sugar crop wasn't as big as the all-time high yield of 1993-94, but prices improved, industry officials report.

The final figures for the 1994-95 season show that 1,449,480 tons of sugarcane was ground, producing 143,140 tons of sugar and 52,709 tons of brix molasses.

Gross revenues were $63.9 million with mill profits of $1.8 million, $1.4 million less than the previous season.

In the 1993-94 season, 1,533,891 tons of sugarcane was ground, producing 144,646 tons of sugar and 55,374 tons of molasses.

Is GOP field 'charismatically challenged'?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm likes to tell how he was turned down the first two times he proposed marriage to his wife Wendy. "I don't always make a good first impression," Gramm says. "But I do well."

Like the spurned marriage proposal, the Texas Republican and GOP presidential candidate likes the story so much he keeps repeating it.

Along with telling audiences his "mamma prodded me every step of the way" to success. And how he was a "foot soldier in the Reagan revolution." Over and over.

And Gramm isn't the only presidential candidate to keep repeating things.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, a septuagenarian, reminds audiences he's younger than nonagenarian Strom Thurmond.

In surprising vote, Boeing machinists rebuff contract offer counter to union leaders advice

SEATTLE (AP) — Machinists union leaders told them to vote yes. Boeing Co. executives assumed they would.

Instead, defiant riveters, painters, electricians and other blue-collar workers rejected a three-year contract offer late Tuesday, continuing the second-longest strike in the 79-year history of the world's largest commercial jet maker.

Whooping and chanting "No givebacks, no way," and "Stop Boeing Greed," members cheered when it was announced that 60.9 percent voted to reject the proposal.

"We sent a good message to that company," said Bill Johnson, president of Machinists District Lodge 751. "This was a lift for the people."

Johnson said angry members have been berating him since the tentative settlement was reached

Sunday with the help of a federal mediator.

Union negotiators had recommended acceptance, saying the pact would boost pensions, offer some protection against job losses through subcontracting, and scale down health-care cost increases. The deal was significantly better than the offer rejected by more than 3-to-1 in the strike vote Oct. 5.

"We are extremely disappointed," said Larry McKean, Boeing senior vice president-human resources. "The company and the federal mediator were assured by the union negotiating team that the changes to the previous proposal would be acceptable to the employees."

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers represents about 23,500 Boeing workers covered by District 751 in the Puget Sound area, another 7,200 in Wichita, Kan., and 1,200 in Gresham, Ore., a Portland suburb.

About 24,000 union members cast ballots, Johnson said.

It was the first time the Machinists union had voted down a contract offer from Boeing during a strike, said Al Wydick, a former District president. The Machinists previously struck Boeing in 1989, 1977, 1965 and 1946.

The sticking point was a requirement that workers begin paying part of their health-care insurance premiums to remain in the most popular health plan.

Strikers also were angered by word Tuesday that five top executives including Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Frank Shrontz had become eligible for $2.5 million in bonuses due to rising stock prices.

University president rejects multiculturalism prerequisite

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of Texas A&M University has rejected a faculty plan to require students to take two multiculturalism courses, saying that although it was a "well thought-out" proposal, it would be too controversial.

In a letter to the faculty senate, Ray Bowen said that neither the nation nor the university had shown itself able to have civil discussions about such complex issues, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

"If there is any general observation about the environment which surrounds my decision, it is that there is no trust among the stakeholders of our university," Bowen wrote.

"This is a distressing observation because the proposal is a moderate, well thought-out modification of our core curriculum," he said.

Bowen said skeptics expressed concern that the requirement would evolve into exercises in "political correctness" or "victimology," Bowen said. He added that he would not impose the sort of administrative controls the skeptics wanted to prevent such an occurrence.

The defeat of the A&M plan, the latest battle in the 1990s war over multiculturalism on college campuses, follows by 3 1/2 years similar attempts that failed at the University of Texas.

In Texas, only Texas Woman's University and Southern Methodist University require students to enroll in multiculturalism courses.

The A&M plan would have required all students to take a course in American minority cultures and a course in international cultures from among many offerings. The offerings ranged from women in politics and the sociology of black America to the history of England and an introductory Spanish language course.

A letter was issued to members of the student body on Tuesday informing them of his decision. Bowen briefed the faculty senate's executive committee Tuesday in a meeting that members described as tense but civil.

Some faculty members later expressed disappointment that Bowen choose not to fight for something he seemingly believed in.

"I'm somewhat amazed Dr. Bowen could talk about how moderate the proposal was and then attribute his decision to external pressure," said Senate Speaker Pierce Cantrell.

"He has yielded to groups who have politicized an academic decision made after three years of extensive discussions among faculty, students and administrators," Cantrell said.

However, Bowen's action was applauded by Richard Stadelmann, adviser to A&M's chapter of College Republicans.

A controversy erupted when the group sent out a fundraising letter two months ago opposing the proposal for mandatory enrollment in multicultural courses. The A&M administration alleged that the letter violated university policy, but later dropped its charges.

"President Bowen's action denying the faculty senate's proposal for six hours of required political-correctness classes is a victory for reason and common sense," Stadelmann said.

Retirement plan abuse investigated

NEW YORK (AP) — The Labor Department has launched an investigation of hundreds of companies suspected of misusing employee contributions to retirement-savings plans, The Wall Street Journal reported today.

In all, 303 companies are part of the probe by the Labor Department's Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, which is investigating for possible theft or improper use of employee contributions to 401(k) retirement plans, the paper said.

"We have reason to believe these companies are simply taking contributions from employees and using the money for their own purposes," Labor Secretary Robert Reich told the newspaper.

The companies could face civil suits and individuals at the companies could face criminal charges, Reich said.

A 401(k) retirement-savings plan gives employees the option to put away part of their pre-tax salary into investments delaying income tax payments on that money until retirement.

Employees at companies across the nation have more than $650 billion in about 140,000 401(k) plans, the Journal said.

Sixth Floor Museum to expand facilities

DALLAS (AP) - As the nation marks the 32nd anniversary of the assassination of John F. Kennedy on Wednesday, plans are afoot to expand The Sixth Floor Museum in the former Dallas Book Depository, from which Lee Harvey Oswald is believed to have fired the shots that killed the president.

"We're excited," said Bob Porter, director of public programs for the Dallas County Historical Foundation, which runs the museum.

The Sixth Floor Exhibit, a tribute to Kennedy's life and a shrine for his death, opened in February 1994.

The foundation wants to lease the vacant, top floor of the seven-story building from Dallas County to expand its exhibit space, Porter said. The first five floors of the building are used as county offices.

"We get an awful lot of requests for exhibits of Jackie (Kennedy-Onassis)," Porter said. "We also could highlight some of the programs he (JFK) was involved with - the space race, civil rights, the Cold War. We could pursue a lot of avenues."

The new space also would be used for a classroom-auditorium for tour groups and offices.

Porter said there are no estimates yet on how much the expansion would cost.

For years, sightseers found little to mark the site of Kennedy's fatal motorcade through downtown Dallas.

The creation of an exhibit or major memorial was delayed for years because city officials feared that it would only extend any infamy attached to the city by Kennedy's death.

Visitors walk through a maze of interpretive panels with more than 400 photographs. A narrative encompasses Kennedy's life and death.

Films include footage of Kennedy's motorcade rolling through Dealey Plaza and NBC's live broadcast of Jack Ruby fatally shooting Oswald in the basement of the Dallas Police Department.

Through glass panels, visitors can see where investigators say Oswald perched on boxes, ate his lunch while waiting for the motorcade, and fired his rifle out a corner window Nov. 22, 1963. The exhibit mentions the controversies over the accuracy of the Warren Commission's report on the assassination and whether Oswald may have had conspirators.

The cost of a visit to the Sixth Floor is $4 to $6, with proceeds going to the county.

An average of 1,200 people visit the museum each weekday and about 2,600 visit on Saturdays and Sundays.

Polluters plead innocent as Taj Mahal yellows

By KRISHNAN GURUSWAMY
Associated Press Writer

AGRA, India (AP) - The graceful elegance of the Taj Mahal enchants millions of visitors each year. But many Agra residents are beginning to view the 17th century monument as a threat to their jobs.

They are worried about a decade-long lawsuit that says pollutants are eating away at the mausoleum and yellowing its white marble. Many people fear a court-ordered crackdown on emissions could force industry out of Agra.

M.C. Mehta, the lawyer who filed the suit now before the Supreme Court, says the Taj Mahal is a national - even a world - treasure and its well-being should take precedence over other concerns.

That angers business owners and workers in this city of 1.5 million people. They argue that the engineering and handicrafts industries that employ hundreds of thousands of people benefit Agra far more than the Taj Mahal.

"People come first, not the Taj," said S.M. Khandelwal, who heads a lobbying group for factories.

He says the factories meet state pollution standards and could not operate if Mehta won. Few could afford to move elsewhere and would have to close, at a cost of 200,000 jobs, he warns.

That argument has workers nervous. "If they close the factory, I'll starve," said Bholu Ram, who shovels coal into a furnace at one of the 2,054 foundries in the district.

Mehta says industrialists are whipping up exaggerated fears of unemployment. He says they do not meet government pollution standards, and could do more to reduce emissions.

Environmentalists, however, argue that 'When I was young, the Taj used to shine in the moonlight. Not anymore.'

— Motia Khan, stone carver clamps supporting the marble. Others contend the yellowing is a fine coat of dust from the nearby deserts of Rajasthan state that could be scrubbed off.

"All cities in India are dirty. All of them have famous monuments. Why single out Agra?" said Sunil Agarwal, a foundry owner.

The debate began when the federal government decided 20 years ago to build a big oil refinery at Mathura, 25 miles north of Agra, despite protests from environmentalists who worried about its effects on the region's air.

Foundry owners say that if there is an air pollution problem, it is the fault of the refinery and not them. The refinery's managers counter that their gas emissions are half the permissible level.

Government studies say the foundries frequently exceed pollution standards, but state regulatory agencies often do not prosecute offenders because of political pressure.

Two miles from the Taj Mahal, on the other side of the Yamuna River, 65-year-old Motia Khan carves slabs of white marble that will replace broken pieces at the mausoleum. The stone carver has been employed by the Taj Mahal's caretakers for a half-century.

"When I was young, the Taj used to shine in the moonlight," he said. "Not anymore."

the standards are not tough enough.

One right-wing lawmaker has even suggested that the Taj Mahal be dismantled and rebuilt elsewhere.

About 3 million tourists visit the Taj Mahal each year, and find a less than pristine view.

Foundries pour out thick black smoke, trucks and motorized rickshaws belch gray exhaust, and diesel fumes waft from generators powering 30,000 homes and shops during daily power outages. Wood stoves in homes and restaurants, brick kilns and pottery ovens add to the haze.

Many experts think sulfur dioxide from the smoke is combining with moisture in the air to become sulfuric acid, which can eat into marble.

But not everyone agrees that air pollution is the problem.

Some people say that the faint yellowing of the Taj Mahal could be caused by age and that its tiny cracks result from normal structural shifting of the bricks and iron

Crash survivor doesn't want easing of truck safety rules

DALLAS (AP) - Karen Clancy's husband and father-in-law were killed nearly two years ago while driving to a family Thanksgiving Day dinner in Mesquite.

A novice truck driver, who had been on the road for 22 hours, misapplied a special truck break while approaching the Loop 635 interchange from Interstate 30. He jackknifed, went over the median and struck the Clancy's vehicle head on.

The 32-year-old Dallas woman, who found out after her husband's death that she was pregnant with their only child, said Tuesday she will lead Texans in a national effort to halt any easing of truck safety laws.

"I am here today, with my daughter Kaitlin Michelle, who has never known her father, to enter the fight against unsafe trucks and unsafe driving practices, so that others will not have to suffer what we have suffered," she said.

The safety of large commercial trucks is being debated as a result of pressure to relax U.S. standards toward less stringent Mexican and Canadian laws under the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Karen Clancy and her brother-in-law Steve joined CRASH - Citizens for Reliable and Safe Highways - a national truck safety organization based in San Francisco.

Karen's husband David, 32, and his father Homer, 54, died when the driver's 18-wheel trailer tractor rig hit the family's Ford Explorer in 1993. Karen was injured, as were three other people involved in the multi-vehicle crash.

Steve Clancy said he planned to meet with state and federal officials about the deaths to "put a human face" on the dangers of poorly trained and fatigued drivers.

He said he and Karen also would target their efforts toward limiting any increase in allowable weight or size limits for trucks traveling U.S. roads.

A study by the National Transportation Safety Board found that in 1994, 5,112 people died in truck-related crashes, an average of about 90 a week, an increase of more than 5 percent over the previous year.

The NTSB has recommended that 60-year-old federal rules requiring driver rest periods - which it said are widely ignored - be changed.

Truckers may be required to drive up to 10 hours a day and work five more in non-driving activities, after which they must have eight hours of rest. Additionally, they may drive no more than 70 hours in an eight-day period.

But the NTSB said four hours is not enough sleep at one time and noted that drivers must also eat, take care of family matters and do other personal chores during that sleep time.

State commission studies charitable bingo

AUSTIN (AP) — A bingo industry spokesman says the game is being strangled by state restrictions and competition including the Texas lottery.

Meanwhile, bingo regulators — who are part of the Texas Lottery Commission — told lawmakers Tuesday they need more resources to investigate and enforce the law.

Both sides said they want to ensure charitable organizations make enough money on the game, which was legalized with the aim of raising funds for nonprofit groups.

The chairman of the Senate Interim Committee on Charitable Bingo, which will make recommendations for the 1997 Legislature to consider, said that's his goal.

"I think the bottom line is to try to put some recommendations together that will allow charitable organizations to be able to make more money and operate their programs," said Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville.

According to Lottery Commission figures, less than 8 cents of every bingo dollar currently benefit nonprofit organizations.

Sen. Frank Madaia, D-San Antonio, raised possibilities including limits on rent paid by charities for bingo halls and on state fees. The current cap on rent is $600 per bingo "occasion," a four-hour period of time in which bingo is played at a hall.

Bingo industry representatives also said the law should be changed to allow them to advertise their prize amounts, as the state does for the lottery.

In addition, Lucio said bingo industry representatives brought up a legitimate concern about whether it's a conflict of interest for the Lottery Commission to also oversee bingo, and about whether regulators have enough experience.

Chuck Bertani, who has two commercial bingo halls and serves on the Bingo Advisory Committee, said action is needed. But he said those like him who lease halls for games shouldn't be made scapegoats, because they allow many charities to conduct bingo.

With Texans having such choices as nearby casinos and the lottery, Bertani said, "By the time it comes to play bingo, they're broke. ... We're looking at an industry that's dying."

Lucio said figures from the Lottery Commission show an apparently stable number of people playing bingo in the past several years, but "I'm wondering why they didn't go up, and possibly lottery has a lot to do with that."

Bertani also contended that bingo regulators "don't know a damn thing about" the game and that their aim seems to be to "restrict the bingo industry, not to help."

Lottery Commission spokesman Keith Elkins noted that state law requires the agency to regulate bingo and added, "We feel we have a good mix of employees."

"I have yet to see any regulated industry where the people being regulated applauded the regulators. Bingo in Texas is certainly no exception," he said. "If the Texas Lottery Commission was not serious about trying to help licensed charities receive maximum revenues, this agency would not be spending in some cases ... as much as 70 percent of its efforts on charitable bingo issues."

Billy Rhea, the commission's security director, and other officials said more resources are needed for investigations.

Randall County employs students in forensics area

CANYON — Two West Texas A&M University graduate students have been chosen to work in the forensics area of the Randall County Police Department through the WTAMU Cooperative Education Program of Career Services.

Bobbie Kuehler, a graduate student in biology from Wheeler, and Susan Poluhovich, a graduate student in chemistry from Canyon, applied for the positions through Cooperative Education Program and started work this month. They will be going to school part-time and working at the Randall County Police Department part-time, according to Steve Sellers, coordinator of the WTAMU Cooperative Education Program.

The students will be analyzing information that the students and the Randall County Police Department collect.

"They will be analyzing everything from blood splatters to tennis shoes and tire tracks," Sellers said.

Chief Deputy Joel Richardson, the student's supervisor, said they will also be working on the department's current logging system, trying to organize existing information as well as collecting and preserving information for use in court.

"The program is just super, they are learning and getting paid for it," said Dr. John Poluhovich, WTAMU assistant professor of biology, Kuehler's advisor and Poluhovich's father. "They would both love to get into the area of forensics, so this is a great opportunity for them."

The WTAMU Cooperative Education Program helps WTAMU students obtain part-time or full-time jobs in their field of study. There are currently 223 students enrolled in the WTAMU Cooperative Education Program and more than 30 students have been placed in jobs in 30 participating companies, according to Sellers.

WTAMU Cooperative Education Program students are required to be enrolled at WTAMU, to have completed 30 hours of course work and to have a grade point average of at least 2.5 on a 4.0 scale. In addition to these requirements, the student's academic department and individual companies are also allowed to set their own requirements, according to Sellers.

Students interested in enrolling in the WTAMU Cooperative Education Program can contact the offices of Career Services and Cooperative Education at (806) 656-2345.

Study shows many patients die a prolonged, painful death

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors are often oblivious to the last wishes of terminally ill patients, many of whom die in pain, tethered against their will to life-prolonging equipment, a study found.

The $28 million study, believed to be the largest ever done on the dying, also found that living wills and other strategies aimed at promoting doctors' understanding of patients' wishes made no difference.

"We need to recognize that when someone dies after a prolonged time on a breathing machine, in an intensive care unit or in a coma, that's a bad outcome," said Dr. William A.

Knaus, a critical care specialist at the University of Virginia Medical School, who co-directed the research.

The study's findings were published today in The Journal of the American Medical Association. The research was financed by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation of Princeton, N.J.

The study was conducted in two parts. In the second phase, 4,800 seriously ill patients were monitored from 1991 to 1994.

Half were provided specially trained nurses to promote discussions between doctors and patients regarding care. The doctors were given information on the patients wishes for treatment.

"It didn't work," Knaus said.

Doctors who were helped had no better understanding of dying patients' preferences than those who weren't. And in the helped group, dying patients spent just as many days in intensive care, in comas or on breathing machines; used just as many hospital resources and endured just as much pain.

Society as a whole — not just doctors — needs to take a more creative, forceful approach toward end-of-life decision making, Knaus said. "We're going to have to develop a better vision for living well while dying."

The first part of the study tracked 4,300 seriously ill patients from 1989 to 1991. Almost half the patients, who had diseases ranging from congestive heart failure to lung cancer, died within six months.

Interviews with patients, families and doctors showed that 31 percent of patients didn't want to be resuscitated, but fewer than half of their doctors knew those wishes.

'Goldeneye' debuts at No. 1

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Goldeneye debuted as the No. 1 film over the weekend, earning $26.2 million and setting records for the best opening for MGM and James Bond.

The movie, starring Pierce Brosnan as the dashing secret agent for the first time, broke the previous record of $11.5 million set by The Living Daylights in 1987. MGM's earlier weekend record was held by Rocky IV, which earned $19.9 million in its 1985 premiere.

Goldeneye played well with the older Bond audience and action-loving teenagers, MGM said. It was the year's third-biggest opening, trailing only Batman Forever and Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls.

The Ace Ventura sequel dropped to second place with $19.5 million. The American President opened in third, earning $10 million.

The children's film It Takes Two generated marginal interest, opening in fourth place with $5.6 million. Get Shorty rounded out the top five, earning $4.3 million.

In limited release, neither The Crossing Guard when Night Is Falling nor Rockless attracted big crowds.

France sets off fourth nuclear blast in South Pacific amid outrage

PARIS (AP) — France has set off another nuclear blast in the South Pacific and a new round of public outrage.

About 20 protesters in South Korea, some wearing skull masks, pelted the French Embassy with eggs today after the fourth test blast since August under a remote Polynesian island. Police stood guard, but no clashes were reported. Australia and New Zealand protested the blast Tuesday, which seismologists said was as powerful as a magnitude-5.1 earthquake. France's Defense Ministry said it was equal to 40,000 tons of TNT.

France set off the blast under Mururoa atoll, about 3,400 miles southeast of Hawaii and 750 miles from Tahiti, less than a week after 95 countries voted for a U.N. resolution criticizing the renewed testing, which began Sept. 5.

"I am appalled that the French Government continues to show disregard for the feelings of the people of the South Pacific," said Prime Minister Paul Keating of Australia.

"The French government must realize that by sending the wrong signals about its nuclear intentions it is in fact undermining its long term security, not strengthening it."

World briefs

Child prostitution drawing tourists to Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Child prostitution is rampant in Kenya and has become a major tourist attraction, says the representative for the U.N. Children's Fund.

The trade is drawing men from Europe, America and the Middle East, Chrispin Wilson of UNICEF said in a speech delivered by his information officer Monday. He gave no statistics, but said girls are the main victims.

"Girls are particularly vulnerable to being forced into prostitution under the existing societal and cultural pressure," he said, blaming socioeconomic problems, greed and immorality.

Wilson also condemned female circumcision in Kenya, a practice he said affects 50 percent of Kenya's women. He urged the government to put in place legal measures and educational reforms to end prostitution and to work toward eliminating all forms of discrimination against women.

Rebel Serbs threatening peace accord

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Even before the presidents of Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia initiated a peace plan for Bosnia, rebel Serbs rejected it. Their defiance has scuttled previous plans, and could be crucial once more.

Although the Bosnian Serb leader, Radovan Karadzic, was conspicuously silent about the accord, his No. 2 man, Momcilo Krajsnik, wasted no time condemning it.

Krajsnik was part of a Serb delegation to the peace talks in Dayton, Ohio, led by Serb President Slobodan Milosevic. Having won the right to negotiate on behalf of the Bosnian Serbs, sources indicated that Milosevic simply ignored their objections.

Powerful rocks Mid East in early morning

EILAT, Israel (AP) — A powerful earthquake shook the Middle East this morning, demolishing a four-story hotel in Egypt and sending panicked people into the streets in pajamas and wrapped in towels.

Five deaths were reported and several dozen people were injured.

The 6:17 a.m. quake was centered in the Gulf of Aqaba 68 miles south of the resort of Eilat. It was also felt in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria.

Resort towns along the Gulf of Aqaba were hardest hit.

Social Security number for newborns: Necessity for taxpaying parents now

Milk, diapers, baby powder, and now, Social Security numbers are essentials for newborns. New parents should be aware of a new essential for newborns — a new tax law change requiring Social Security numbers for children born this year.

This change was necessary to ensure that non-existent children are not claimed by federal tax return filers.

"Any taxpayer who claims a child as a dependent on their 1995 income tax return must include the child's Social Security number, unless the child was born in November or December of 1995," said Bobby E. Scott, Internal Revenue Service director, Dallas District.

"For any child born in November or December, a taxpayer is required to include the Social Security number, if available, or write '11/95' or '12/95,' as appropriate, in the space provided on their 1995 return."

To file electronically, a Social Security number is required.

According to Michael Richard, who oversees Social Security operations in northeast Texas, parents who have not already applied for a Social Security number for babies before November of this year should apply right away. This will avoid the rush in January, which could prevent a delay in getting an income tax refund.

The application form, Form SS-5, can be ordered by calling Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213. An automated telephone response service is available 24 hours a day.

"In fact, the best times to call for a Social Security number application are on weekends or after normal business hours," Richard said.

This form is also available from the IRS by calling 1-800-829-3676.

The Form SS-5 contains information about the documents Social Security needs to see to assign a new Social Security number. An original birth certificate for the baby, another document that identifies the child and proof of the parent's identity, such as a driver's license, are needed. Actual documents, not photocopies, are needed and they will be promptly returned.

"When you apply directly with Social Security, it usually takes about two weeks to get a Social Security number," Richard said.

Parents who already applied for a Social Security number for a newborn at the hospital through the birth registration process should get the card within two to three months after the child's birth, according to Richard.

Both Scott and Richard advise tax return filers to make sure the name and Social Security number of the taxpayer, a spouse and any dependents listed on the return agree with the name and number shown on the individual's Social Security card.

For example, if a woman intends to use a new name on a tax return because of marriage or divorce, she needs to get a Social Security card in the new name. Otherwise, processing of the tax return will be delayed until the name and/or Social Security number can be verified.

Teenager admits killing restaurateur for measly $6

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston teenager admitted to police that he beat a 65-year-old restaurateur owner to death with a baseball bat and used the $6 he stole to buy a bottle of beer.

Christopher Cason, 18, who told officers of the beating death and $6 robbery, has been charged with capital murder in last week's death of Willie Prochazka in the Port Royale Restaurant in Crosby, about 20 miles northeast of Houston.

Capital murder charges also have been filed against Ronnie Lee Whitehead, 18, and a 16-year-old runaway from Austin who had been staying with Cason, in which he admitted killing the owner of the Port Royale Restaurant.

Cason and Whitehead are being held without bond. Harris County Sheriff Tommy Thomas said he hopes the 16-year-old, who has been referred to juvenile authorities, will be certified as an adult to stand trial.

The teenagers were identified through "the good work of a couple of deputies in that area and a couple of detectives," Thomas said.

The sheriff said Cason bragged to friends that he and Whitehead robbed the restaurant near Lake Houston last Thursday night.

Cason, whose criminal history includes misdemeanor marijuana possession and traffic offenses, had worked for Prochazka previously, and knew the man frequently left the restaurant's back door open while closing for the night, Thomas said.

Party-Pooper of a Husband Might Be Happier at Home

DEAR ABBY: I've been dreading the Christmas party season since last December. It's that way every year.

My husband, "Frank," has nothing in common with my co-workers. He's not a very social person and is not very good at small talk. To be honest, it's embarrassing to take him to an office party. He doesn't "connect" with anyone, and I'm sure he finds the people there as boring as they find him. Unfortunately, he has never offered to stay home. (I wish he would!)

I hate to hurt his feelings by telling him he's an embarrassment in social situations. We've been married for many years. He is a loving husband, sensitive and intelligent — but socially, he's a dud.

FRANK'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: This year, why not offer Frank the option of making other plans on the night of your office party?

If he chooses to attend with you, however, do some role playing in advance. Rehearse several topics he can discuss with your co-workers.

If the problem is shyness, books on shyness are available at your local library. You might also encourage him to join Toastmasters International. (Toastmasters is an organization that has had much success in helping people overcome shyness.)

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

Keep in mind that not all people are party animals. More important than having a glittering jewel to show off at office parties is having a sensitive, intelligent partner the other 364 nights a year.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the friend of the woman whose daughter has an incontinent dog, I have one too. "Candy" is 13 years old now.

It started about six months ago. We took her to our regular vet and a holistic vet. Both recommended a drug called "phenylpropanolamine." Given orally three times a day, it does the trick 99 percent of the time. I strongly urge the woman with the incontinent dog to ask her vet about this "miracle drug."

I also carry a thick piece of plastic and Candy's blanket with me everywhere we travel, and I make sure she knows that is her place to sleep.

My home is clean, and Candy no longer feels embarrassed. Also, please let people know that they can train a dog to take cover in an earthquake — just like other family members. Pick a "safe" spot in every room.

We practice at least twice a month. If my dogs and I are in the living room, I yell "Earthquake!" and we all run under the dining room table. If we are in the bedroom, we all run into the closet where the bottled water is stored.

Please, do not forget your pet in disaster preparedness.

YORBA LINDA, CALIF., DOG LOVER

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Baffled Barbara, Holbrook, N.Y.," whose divorced father married her mother's sister. I think I can top that:

Right after I was married 23 years ago, my in-laws divorced. Two years later, my parents divorced. Then my mom married my husband's father. That means my husband is also my stepbrother, my kids are also my nephews, and my mother is my stepmother-in-law. (I could go on, but you get the picture.)

The question I am most frequently asked by acquaintances: "Did your dad marry your mother-in-law?" (No.)

The most frequently asked question by my youngest son: "Now which grandpa was your real dad?"

JUDY GREEN, VICTORIA, TEXAS

DEAR JUDY: Your family ties are akin to confusing.

lessen your popularity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not let the negative thinking of associates arouse self-doubts in you today. Focusing on positive thoughts could provide the necessary insulation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A delicate financial arrangement can be altered to your advantage today, but wisdom and shrewdness will be required. Fire your best shot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not judge rashly today. If you make a decision which causes you discomfort, halt everything and complete the tasks to your satisfaction.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If any rewards are derived from something done in unison with a partner today, share the returns equally. Verbal acknowledgment will not be sufficient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today, you might spend more than you should and hope you'll find a way to cover yourself later. Do not count on funds that aren't in the bank.

PAMPA — A citywide pep rally for the Pampa High football team will be held at 7 Friday night at the Pampa Mall.

Parents of the Harvester seniors will be introduced and cheerleaders will be present to lead the rally.

The Harvesters meet Andrews at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Region I playoffs in Lubbock's Jones Stadium. Pampa beat Borger, 24-9, Saturday to clinch the District 1-4A championship.

CANADIAN — Canadian meets Sundown at 7:30 Saturday night in Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon.

Canadian has a 9-1-1 record while Sundown is 7-2-1.

"We'll match up pretty good with them," said Canadian coach David Flowers.

We're pretty even as far as size and speed go. Sundown is more of a running team, but they throw the ball well when they do throw it."

Canadian beat Stratford, 26-7, last weekend in bi-district to advance into the regional round of playoffs.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Maddux and Randy Johnson aren't done pitching shutouts.

On Tuesday the pair became the first unanimous picks on The Associated Press All-Star team since 1988.

Maddux and Johnson each got 66 votes in nationwide voting by sports writers and broadcasters. Maddux, who won his fourth straight NL Cy Young Award last week, was voted the top right-handed pitcher. Johnson, who won the AL Cy Young Award and took Seattle to its first playoff berth, was voted the top left-handed pitcher.

Last year, Maddux was one vote shy of becoming a unanimous pick, missing out when one voter selected Bret Saberhagen. Before this year, the last unanimous selection was Orel Hershiser at right-handed pitcher after leading Los Angeles to the World Series title in 1988.

Maddux, who led Atlanta to its first World Series title, won for the fourth straight year. Since the AP began selecting one team in 1982, the only other players to accomplish that feat were outfielders Kirby Puckett (1986-89) and Barry Bonds (1990-93).

Los Angeles catcher Mike Piazza and Cleveland outfielder Albert Belle were both one vote short of unanimity. Maddux, Piazza, Belle and San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn were the only holdovers from the 1994 team.

Boston's Mo Vaughn won at first base, Houston's Craig Biggio at second, Cincinnati's Barry Larkin at shortstop and Colorado's Vinny Castilla at third.

Dante Bichette of the Rockies joined Belle and Gwynn in the outfield, and Seattle's Edgar Martinez was elected at designated hitter. Cleveland's Jose Mesa was voted the top relief pitcher, getting all but two votes.

Piazza was picked for the third consecutive year; Larkin (1990 and 1992) also was elected for the third time, as was Gwynn (1984 and 1994).

The closest voting was at second base, where Biggio edged Cleveland's Carlos Baerga by two votes.

Ten players received votes at third base. Castilla got 19 votes, 10 ahead of the second-place finisher, Atlanta's Chipper Jones.

Other than Piazza, the only other player to get a vote at catcher was Atlanta's Javier Lopez. Other than Mesa, the only other votes at reliever were for Tom Henke of St. Louis and Mark Wohlers of the Braves.

Five TDs drive Tech's Hanspard to SWC honor

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — To get a sense for how Texas Tech has maneuvered lately, repeat this phrase five times: Touchdown, Byron Hanspard.

The Red Raider tailback rushed for 180 yards on 25 carries and caught five passes for 80 yards Saturday as Tech beat Southern Methodist 45-14.

"He was something," coach Spike Dykes said, chuckling. "He looked like he was shot out of a cannon."

Hanspard's five-touchdown performance earned the Southwest Conference

Offensive Player of the Week distinction from The Associated Press.

SWC defensive honors went to safety Chris Carter and defensive end Tony Brackens of Texas for their contributions to the Longhorns' 27-19 victory over Texas Christian.

Carter had 17 tackles, two interceptions and a pass breakup. Brackens recovered two fumbles and made 15 solo tackles, including a sack and two other stops behind the line for 13 yards in losses.

Hanspard scored five of the six Texas Tech touchdowns against SMU on runs of 23 and 2 yards and on pass receptions of 41, 25 and 4 yards. He left the game with 14:10 to go in the fourth quarter.

But it was the sixth time this season that the 6-0, 190-pound sophomore from DeSoto rushed for more than 100 yards.

"It's a great honor," he said Monday. "I give God the praise, first of all. Without the Lord living within me, I wouldn't have the ability to do the things I do."

Dykes said Hanspard uses great speed and instinct to make smart cuts. Hanspard gave credit to his offensive line.

If he manages 134 yards this week against Houston, Hanspard will outdo the Tech record of rushing yards by a sophomore (1,279), set three years ago by Bam Morris. Will he make it?

"That's a good question," said Hanspard, the SWC's second-leading rusher with 114.6 yards per game. "I'm always striving to do the best that I can."

Although he was tired Sunday morning, Hanspard said, he preached his first sermon as an ordained minister at Community Baptist Church in Lubbock. Hanspard spoke on "Who are you connected to?" from the biblical book of John.

"The Lord always seems to bless me in mysterious ways," he said.

Pampa quarterback Joel Ferland dashes for a first down on a keeper play against Borger last Saturday. Ferland, who missed the first five games with a broken foot, finished the regular season averaging 5.5 yards per carry and 2 touchdowns, 228 yards passing and 2 touchdown passes.

Pampa hopes to continue success against Andrews in Class 4A football playoffs

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

PAMPA — Pampa gave Andrews some rough treatment when the two teams played on Sept. 29 in a regular-season game.

However, PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier would prefer meeting a brand-new opponent in the playoffs.

"Personally, I don't like playing a team twice in one season, especially when you've beaten them once," said Cavalier. "In a way it's good because it can give us confidence since we've competed successfully against them. But with my personality it works the other way. I believe it can make us overconfident if we're not careful."

Pampa defeated Andrews, 34-6, in the last game before entering District 1-4A play. The Harvesters will try and repeat that win in the second round of the Class 4A regional playoffs at 2 p.m. Saturday in Lubbock's Jones Stadium. Pampa, which drew a first-round playoff bye, defeated Borger, 24-9, last weekend for the District 1-4A title. The Harvesters finished the regular season with an outstanding 9-1 record.

Andrews (5-6), the District 3-4A runnerup, shut out El Paso, 21-0, in the opening round of the playoffs.

"I'm sure Andrews will come out prepared to play and so will we," Cavalier said.

Pampa finished the 10-game regular season averaging 35.9 points per game, topping district foes in the scoring category. The Harvester offense averaged 326.3 yards per game, second behind Borger's 380.8 in district.

Pampa senior Todd Finney finished as the district's leader in kick scoring with 67 points. He padded his lead with a 32-yard field goal Saturday against Borger. Finney has kicked 8 of 13 field goal tries and has made 43 of 44 extra point attempts.

The district didn't have a better backfield punch than senior tailbacks Matt Archibald and Derahian Evans, who alternated at that position. Archibald was 1-4A's third leading rusher (901 yards) and scored 5 touchdowns on the ground. Evans rushed for 16 touchdowns and 677 yards and was the district's second leading scorer with 120 points. Evans averaged 8.4 yards per carry and Archibald, 7.6.

Both Joel Ferland and Clint Curtis have been effective at quarterback for the Harvesters. When Ferland was sidelined with a broken foot, Curtis threw for two touchdown passes and 142 yards in the win over Andrews. For the season, Curtis, a junior, has completed 45.6 percent of his passes for 473 yards and 6 touchdowns. Ferland, a senior, has thrown for 228 yards and 2 touchdowns since coming back. Ferland has also ran for two scores.

J.J. Mathis leads Pampa's receiving corps with 12 catches for 233 yards and 3 touchdowns. Floyd White has 9 receptions for 153 yards and 3 scores.

Pampa's defense virtually went unchallenged in district action. The Harvester defense allowed only one touchdown in the last four games.

Pampa allowed just 60 points for the season and held opponents to 126.2 total yards per game. Those numbers were both tops in district.

White, at linebacker, and tackle Donnie Middleton led the Pampa defense with 110 tackles each. Ends Devin Lemons and Ryan Gibson had 8 and 6 quarterback sacks, respectively.

Harvesters demolish Palo Duro Dons

PAMPA — The unbeaten Pampa Harvesters went on a second-half scoring spree to rout Palo Duro, 77-61, Tuesday night at the PD Activity Center.

Pampa led, 38-31, at halftime, but went on an 8-0 scoring run early in the third quarter to run away from the Dons. Jason Weatherbee scored the run for the Harvesters with a turnaround jumper and Coy Laury followed with consecutive goals, including a fast break dunk. Rayford Young's follow shot made it, 46-31.

Pampa build an 18-point bulge, 63-45, going into the fourth quarter.

Young, a 5-11 senior, scored 34 points and was the leading Harvester rebounder with 12 boards. Laury, a 6-1 senior, contributed 21 points and 8 rebounds for the Harvesters, who are now 3-1 for the season.

August Larson came off the bench to nail 12 points, all from 3-point range, for Pampa. Young, who had 12 field goals and was 12 of 15 from the foul line, scored a pair of 3-point goals.

Brandon Smith paced Palo Duro with 26 points and 12 rebounds. Koty Murdock added 9 points. The Dons are now 4-2 for the season.

Weatherbee added 6 points while Gabe Wilbon and Brian

Rayford Young

Waldrip had 2 each for the Harvesters.

The Harvesters are entered in the Fantasy of Lights Tournament Friday and Saturday in Wichita Falls. Pampa, the defending tournament champions, open against Wichita Falls Hirschi at 3:30 p.m. Friday at the Midwestern State University Coliseum. Much like last season Pampa has started off on a hot streak.

The Harvesters won six straight games and seven of their first eight a year ago. Pampa and Palo Duro meet again at 7:30

Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Lady Harvesters drop close game to PD girls

AMARILLO — Pampa's Lady Harvesters just missed going 2-0 for the season, dropping a 41-39 squeaker to Palo Duro Tuesday night at the PD Activity Center.

Pampa is now 1-1 on the year while Palo Duro improves to 2-0. Pampa beat Spearman and Palo Duro defeated Hereford in season openers.

Jennifer Jones was high scorer for Pampa with 20 points, including four 3-point goals. Shante Demerson led PD with 13 points.

Others scoring for Pampa were Jami Wells with 6 points, Tashia Wilson 4, Kristi Carpenter 4, Chandre Nachtigall 3 and Jane Brown 2. Pampa held a 32-29 rebounding advantage with Brown pulling down 9 boards and Jones 8.

Cowboys meet turnover kings

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys meet the turnover kings of the NFL in their matchup against the Chiefs on Thanksgiving Day in Texas Stadium.

Kansas City leads the NFL with a 10-1 record and has a league-high plus-11 in take-aways with 25 this season.

"Kansas City is good at getting turnovers and that's the way you

Ossie Barnes added 10 points for PD.

Pampa had 15 turnovers, one more than PD.

Pampa trailed by seven at half-time, 23-16, but gained a one-point lead, 30-29, going into the fourth quarter.

The lead changed three times in the final period with PO leading, 41-38, when Jones was fouled on a 3-point try with 3 seconds to go. Jones missed the first of her three foul shot attempts, made the second, and deliberately missed the third to give her team a chance for the rebound. The ball, however, was controlled by PD as time ran out.

The Lady Harvesters have a return engagement with Palo Duro at 6 p.m. Tuesday in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Thanksgiving Day games have been crucial for Lions' Fontes

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Some NFL owners and coaches have complained about the Thanksgiving Day setup. They don't like the fact that those who play are traveling either to Dallas or Detroit each year.

Minnesota coach Dennis Green isn't one of the complainers, yet he has every right to be. The Vikings (6-5) have to play the Lions (5-6) on Thursday. Normally, that might not be a problem, but there is nothing normal about Thanksgiving Day games in Detroit — not where Lions coach Wayne Fontes is concerned.

Thanksgiving has become sort of a launching point for some of Fontes' most crucial contract runs.

Since 1989, his first full season as coach, Fontes has guided the Lions to a record of 22-13 on and after Thanksgiving. His record before Thanksgiving is 34-43.

"I don't care what they say, I think it's an honor to be chosen to play on Thanksgiving Day," Green said. "It is a game I started watching with my father as a kid. 'Turkey Day game' is what I grew up calling them. It's an NFL tradition."

The Thanksgiving Day game was the brainchild of G.A. Richards, the first owner of the Lions. Richards had purchased the Portsmouth Spartans in 1934 and moved the franchise to the Motor City.

The opponent for that 1934 game was the undefeated Chicago Bears of George Halas, the defending champions. The game would determine the championship of the Western Division and Richards convinced the NBC radio network to carry the game coast-to-coast on its 94 stations.

Despite two touchdowns by Ace Gutowsky, the Bears won the inaugural game 19-16 before a sold-out crowd of 26,000 at University of Detroit Stadium.

The Cowboys, who came into existence as an expansion team in 1960, joined the Thanksgiving Day mix in 1966, defeating Cleveland 26-14.

The Vikings defeated the Lions 20-10 in the second game of the season, and Green figures there is no reason why his team can't handle Detroit again. Especially the way the Vikings are playing lately.

With 39-year-old Warren Moon playing like a man 10 years younger, the Vikings drilled the New Orleans Saints 43-42 last week. It was their third straight victory, the longest winning streak in the NFC.

But the Lions aren't the same team the Vikings rolled over on Sept. 10, either. Detroit didn't have much of a passing attack back then. As a result, the Vikings were able to key on Barry Sanders. They held him to just 35 yards rushing on 13 carries.

"They have their passing game in high gear, now," Green said. "They have terrific receivers in Herman Moore and Brett Perriman. As a result, Barry Sanders is over 1,000 yards already."

"The thing that makes Barry Sanders hard to defend this year is that Scott Mitchell is throwing the ball so much better. You can't play everybody up on the line anymore."

Mitchell, however, is questionable for this game. Chicago tackle Jim Flanigan rolled up on his right ankle last week. Don Majkowski came off the bench to complete 15 of 19 passes, including the winning TD toss to Herman Moore in a 24-17 victory.

"We have to prepare with the idea that we may see both quarterbacks," Green said. "They're both good. They'll both run the same offense."

It was the second straight win for the Lions since club owner William Clay Ford gave Fontes a "win-or-else" ultimatum.

"I hope this is a sign of a run," the beleaguered Fontes said.

Bulls bounce back against Mavericks, 108-102

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks discovered that it doesn't matter how well you rebound, if you can't get the ball in the hole.
 Dallas dominated the Chicago Bulls on the boards (66-50) and shot well from outside, but couldn't connect from in close, as Chicago rallied for a 108-102 victory in overtime Tuesday night.
 The biggest miss of all was Jim Jackson's uncontested shot under the goal with 1.1 seconds remaining that would have given Dallas a 96-94 victory in regulation.
 On an out-of-bounds play, Jamal Mashburn found Jackson alone underneath and whipped the ball to him before the Bulls could react.
 But Jackson's shot from point-blank range bounced away, and the Bulls prevailed in overtime.

Jury convicts British serial killer of murders

WINCHESTER, England (AP) — A woman accused of torturing and murdering a string of victims whose hacked-up bodies were buried around her house was convicted Tuesday of killing her teenage daughter, her stepdaughter and a pregnant lodger.

Rosemary West, who is charged in 10 killings in one of Britain's worst cases of serial murder, swayed slightly but remained expressionless as the jury pronounced her guilty. She faces a possible life sentence.

The panel continued to deliberate on seven other counts of homicide.

The portly, bespectacled Mrs. West, 41, who sat unmoved through seven weeks of often grisly evidence, denied murdering 10 young women, nine of them found buried in or around her home in Gloucestershire in western England.

She blamed all the killings on her husband, Frederick, 53, who was found hanged in his cell on New Year's Day before he could stand trial for the same 10 murders, plus two others. He had confessed to all the murders and showed police where to find the bodies.

There were gasps from the crowded public gallery Tuesday when, after a day's deliberation, the 11-member jury found Mrs. West guilty of killing her daughter Heather, who was 16 when she disappeared in 1987, and her stepdaughter Charmaine, who was 8 when she vanished in 1971.

A sister of Catherine Costello, who was Fred West's first wife and Charmaine's mother, burst into tears and was led from the courtroom, still sobbing.

Before retiring for the night, the jury also convicted Mrs. West of murdering Shirley Ann Robinson, who was 18 at the time of her 1978 disappearance. A lodger at the West home, Robinson was eight months pregnant at the time of her murder, reportedly with West's child.

The discovery of Heather's decapitated body in February 1994 was the first of a string of gruesome finds at the West family home. To cover her disappearance, the Wests pretended she had suddenly left home and claimed she was still living somewhere in the Gloucester area, the prosecution said.

Police found Charmaine's remains buried beneath the kitchen floor at a former West home in another part of Gloucester. West claimed she had gone to live with her mother, the prosecution said.
