PAMPA — The Gray County Appraisal District Appraisal Review Board will meet in regular session Monday, Nov. 13, at 1:30 p.m. at the GCAD office, 815 N. Sumner.

Items on the agenda include protest hearings, changes to appraisals and approval of supplemented records for 1995.

Meetings are open to the public.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The head of the Christian Coalition is courting Hispanic and Catholic voters to the conservative movement.

Executive Director Ralph Reed, attending the coalition's state convention in San Antonio on Saturday, said he wants to urge followers to "build bridges" with all Christians, not just those who are Anglos.

"What we in the pro-family movement have felt is that, for too long, we've had our feet planted firmly in the Republican Party," Reed told the San Antonio Express-News for its Saturday editions.

Reed said the coalition hopes to appeal to other ethnic minorities to embrace its political agenda.

Educator to stress abstinence to teens

Nationally known sex educator Pat Socia will be in Pampa this week to address parents and middle and high school students, encouraging abstinence as the only true means of safe sex.

Socia is scheduled to meet with all parents and interested community members during a presentation Tuesday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Pampa Middle School library. Refreshments will be served courtesy of Altrusa International, and child care will be available.

Wednesday, Socia will speak at Pampa High School at 9:45 a.m. She will then address seventh and eighth graders at 1:35 p.m. at Pampa Middle School.

District officials say they have had numerous requests to bring Socia back to Pampa since her initial presentation in 1992. They also encourage parents not only to attend the meeting Tuesday night, but also the sessions that their students are involved in.

Socia's message to students is "What part of NO don't you understand?" and is part of Directed Abstinence Sex Education's efforts to remind young people that abstinence is still the expectation. The program is designed to provide teens with information, direction and reveal serious dangers of promiscuity and sexually transmitted diseases.

"The program counters some of the questionable information viewed by teenagers on movies and in the television media. Pat Socia's presentation is strict abstinence and is based on facts. Many district parents and teachers have seen Socia's program presented to students and parents in the past, and we believe the program is sound and holds students' interests," said Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele.

School board member Pat Kennedy said, "I am very glad that Pat Socia is available to talk with parents as well as our children. There is a need for more adult education on teen sexuality and what is taking place in our culture. I am convinced that our parents, guardians and our churches must become more involved in communicating with teens about sex. The schools want to do what we can, but the real communicators about the dangers of premarital sex needs to be the adults who care about children and will talk to them."

According to the Texas Department of Health, the Texas teen pregnancy rate was 41.2 per 1,000 women in 1993. Texas ranked third highest among all states in the nation for teen birth rate in 1992 for ages 15-17.

Gray County reports 30 to 39.9 pregnancies per 1,000 women between the ages of 13-17.

From the 1993 Texas Youth Risk Behavior survey of high school students who reported having had sexual intercourse, four percent of males and 7.1 percent of females have been told by a health care provider that they had a sexually transmitted disease.

Of 12th grade students who reported having sexual intercourse, 2.4 percent had sexual intercourse at age 15 or younger.

According to Pampa Superintendent Dr. Dawson Orr, students in PISD's teen parent program as of Nov. 1 included 27 female parents, four male parents and five unmarried pregnant students.

The youngest parent served locally is 13 years old. The PISD day care center is presently serving about 20 children ranging in age from four weeks to 19 months old. The day care center cares for children so that the student parents may continue their education.

Band Sweetheart

Sherie Minyard, right, escorted by her father Jimmy Minyard, was announced as the 1995 Pride of Pampa band sweetheart for 1995 during the football game Friday between Pampa and Hereford. She is the daughter of Jimmy and Debbie Minyard and has been a member of the band for eight years. Sherie has participated in All-Region Band and solo and ensemble contests. She is a percussionist and has played the quads in marching band for three years. This year she is a member of the color guard. Other nominees for Band Sweetheart were Talyia Lane, daughter of Kent and Linda Lane, and Stephanie Williams, daughter of Steve and Pam Williams. The night also marked the final home performance of 17 senior members of the Pride of Pampa Marching Band, including the Band Sweetheart nominees. Others are Brad Been, Ashlee Bohannon, Dustin Brown, Jason Ellen, Erik Estrada, Kerrey Ford, Shonie Garland, Regina Hopson, Amanda Kludt, Kim McDonald, Johnny Murrell, Jeremy Nolte, Jaime Silva and Sarah Yowell.

Cold yields to mild fall weather again

From Staff and Wire Reports

Powerful southerly gusts buffeted most of Texas Friday, providing near-record warm temperatures in advance of a cold front that slicked the upper Panhandle with sleet. There was a 60-degree range of readings from north to south.

The arctic cold front blasted into the Panhandle regions early Friday afternoon, with temperatures dropping from the low 70s to below the freezing mark before sunset, with strong winds whipping around rain and light sleet.

The chilly weather didn't prevent the Pampa Harvesters from playing their final home game for the season Friday night against Hereford. And the Pampa High School band presented their halftime presentation to name the Band Sweetheart and honor senior band members in spite of the freezing temperatures.

In Pampa, the cold front dropped the overnight low to 19 degrees for Saturday morning, but sunny skies saw the temperature hit a high of 56 for Saturday afternoon.

The high for Sunday, under mostly clear skies, is expected to reach near 80 in another round of mild fall weather.

Forecasters had posted a tornado watch for part of North and Northeast Texas and warned that severe storms could sweep as far southeast as Houston.

Skies were mostly cloudy statewide and temperatures ahead of the front warmed into the 70s to 90s. At 3 p.m. Friday, it was 95 degrees in Cotulla but only 35 in Dalhart. San Antonio's 89 tied the record high for the date set in 1947.

Winds across most of Texas were from the south at 15 to 30 mph and gusty. Elsewhere, the South Plains reported blowing dust.

A cold front slammed into North Texas late Friday, dropping temperatures by 33 degrees and bringing with it winds of up to 30 mph that blew down trees and knocked out power lines.

At area high school football games, spectators screamed, cheerleaders were pushed by the chilly winds and some teams retreated to the safety of locker rooms.

WWII veteran: People don't realize what goes on in war

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

It was the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, 1918, when Allied officials and German authorities met in a railway car at Rethondes, France, to sign an armistice agreement ending the war to end all wars. It didn't.

Twenty years later, the world was at war again. This time, they began numbering them. People like Bob Fick of Pampa volunteered to defend the United States, or more accurately, to defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies foreign and domestic.

Fick was born in 1924 in Hutchinson, Kan., almost a half dozen years after the armistice that ended fighting in World War I was signed in France. That signing resulted in Armistice Day, which later became Veterans Day, but despite the hopes that the agreement between the Central Powers and the Allied Forces would bring peace, the harsh conditions of the Treaty of Versailles which formally ended World War I only brought about more unrest coupled with growing nationalism in Europe and the expansion of Japanese influence in the east.

Soon the world was at war again.

Fick joined the U.S. Navy at the outbreak of World War II. The first ship he was on went down in the Aleutians in the Northern Pacific, he says. After making it through the cold water to shore, Fick was sent to a sea plane tender headed for Okinawa.

Fick doesn't like to talk about his war experiences. They bring back too many painful memories.

"People don't realize what goes on in war," Fick said.

He speaks softly of friends lost at sea, of bodies of the Japanese defenders at Attu stacked like cord wood, of kamikaze attacks at Okinawa.

"It takes a while to put those memories away again," he said. Fick survived the war to reach Tokyo Bay as Japan capitulated in September, 1945.

"I lay off the fantail of the Missouri while they surrendered," he said.

Shutting dignitaries from ship

Sitting at the dining room table in his home on East Browning, Robert Fick nurses a cup of coffee and opens old wounds of World War II.

to ship and ship to shore in his boat from the sea plane tender, Fick waited in his small craft near the battleship, USS Missouri, while Gen. Douglas MacArthur accepted the surrender of the Japanese.

Like many other servicemen, Fick returned to the United States after the war to face the world, get married and raise a family.

He had gone to war as a boy of 18. He returned a man with experiences well beyond his years.

But Fick's work wasn't done. Five years later, he was recalled to active duty and was sent to Korea.

Later, he would make it to Pampa and raise a family with his wife. Eventually, he would retire in the Texas Panhandle city.

Through those intervening years, there were other conflicts: Vietnam, Panama, Grenada, the Persian Gulf, Somalia, Haiti. Some tore at the fabric of society. Some lasted only so long as to be a footnote in history. Each one profoundly influenced the combat soldiers involved.

Some 4,743,826 served in the U.S. forces during World War I. That number jumped to 16,353,659 in World War II. Korea involved 5,764,143 U.S. troops while 8,744,000 served in Vietnam. The Persian Gulf conflict involved 467,539.

Today, at 71, Fick is proud of his most recent accomplishment — joining the 700 club in his bowling league. He put the horrors of war behind him, and that's where he wants to keep them.

But today, there is talk of sending U.S. troops to Europe to keep peace in the same city, Sarajevo, where a Serbian Nationalist assassinated Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria on June 28, 1914, touching off World War I.

In 1914, there was a strong isolationist movement in the U.S. No one saw any need for the U.S. to get involved in a European war. By Armistice Day, 1918, U.S. troops had suffered 320,710 casualties in the war to end all wars, a war that would spill over and eventually put men like Fick in uniform to defend their nation against foreign aggressors again.

"I just want to forget it," he said, sitting at his dining room table in his house in Pampa. "You do what you have to do. You don't have to go up and down main street telling everybody about it. I just want to forget it all."

Trike-A-Thon for St. Jude

With the strong Friday winds against her, Tanisha Loftan, front, was able to take the inside track during the St. Jude Trike-a-Thon at the Community Day Care Center. Tanisha and the other youngsters of the Day Care Center did laps on their tricycles and wheelers around a mini-track Friday morning to raise funds for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, with parents collecting donations for the hospital fund-raiser.

Archaeologists: Vandals picking apart Colosseum

ROME (AP) — The Colosseum, survivor of 1,900 years of war and tourists, is being picked apart by vandals and antique hunters.
 Last week, thieves took an inscribed block of marble so big they must have used a truck and hoist, archaeology officials told the newspaper Il Messaggero.

 The Colosseum "becomes a no-man's land at night," said Piero Megrossi of the state archaeology office in Rome. The officials said they are to meet soon with police to work out an anti-vandalism plan.

 The amphitheater, once used by Roman emperors for gladiator matches, is open by day to tourists and is a popular nighttime hang out for young people.

Vatican says ordination of woman would be invalid

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican didn't deny that a woman had been ordained a Roman Catholic priest in Communist Czechoslovakia but said Saturday that such an ordination would not be valid.
 There have been persistent reports that women were ordained behind the Iron Curtain despite a Vatican ban on women serving as priests, but Ludmila Javorova was believed to be the first to say publicly that she had been.
 Kirche Intern, an Austrian magazine on the church, quoted Javorova as saying she and other women were secretly ordained in 1970, a time when the church was forced to operate underground and was short of priests.

 Javorova, contacted in Brno, 120 miles southeast of Prague, said only that the article was "not in contradiction with the truth."
 In the Vatican's first public comment on the claim, spokesman Joaquin Navarro said that "if there were such an ordination, naturally it would be invalid."
 But he expressed understanding for the determination of Roman Catholics in Communist Czechoslovakia to survive persecution in a "climate of terror."
 "Without this historical consideration, a judgment of the fact would be tremendously unfair," Navarro said.
 About half of the estimated 200 people secretly ordained, including some married priests, are believed to have continued to celebrate Mass even after Communist rule ended in 1989.

Meeting aims to help women in counseling other women

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Women to Women is just that - a woman helping women to help others.

Provided as a service of Pastoral Counseling Center, Women to Women meets monthly to provide support for the "wise women of the church" who find themselves counseling and consoling others, often with lots of faith but not much training, said Carla Landwerth, M.C., director of the Pampa center.

Women to Women meets for lunch the first Friday of the month at Le Cabaret Coffee Club, Gray and Francis streets. Landwerth presents a brief training on a selected topic, then the women present cases and get feedback from Landwerth and other women in the group.

"I would never provide counseling services without supervision," said Landwerth. "I cannot imagine how hard it must be for these women to work without a support system."

Landwerth also plans to include special speakers in the future.

Attendance is open to any woman who thinks she might benefit, she said.

They might be a pastor's wife, a volunteer with a social service agency or someone to whom others seem to turn. Twenty-six women came to the first meeting and 23 to the second, Landwerth said.

"We filled up Le Cabaret," she said.

Attendees bring up issues they see, such as grief work with children, marriage counseling, substance abuse or elder care.

"So my goal is either to give them direct information or give them a referral," Landwerth said.

She encourages them to take care of themselves, because in the informal counseling "friend to friend," boundaries become blurred, she explained.

The next meeting Dec. 8 will focus on childhood bereavement.

To make luncheon reservations, call volunteer coordinator Kay McCormack at 665-0842. For more information, call Landwerth at 669-0344.

Taking top honors in Saturday's middle school PEP chess tournament are, from left, Evan Miller, third; Jonathan Brockington, first; and Brittany Lorenson, second.

Winners named in PEP chess tournament

They were looking for Bobby Fischer Saturday at Pampa Middle School and found at least nine of them.

Those nine took the top three spots in three different divisions of a chess tournament sponsored by the Pampa Enrichment Program.

Ninety woodpushers in grades one through eight showed up to match wits over the chess board. This year marked the eighth anniversary of the annual tournament.

"It was a fantastic turnout and has grown every year," said tournament director Peter Berzanskis. "The kids are excited. What's fun is the intense look on their faces when they are playing. It's a nice way to get the kids from all over town playing together."

Assisting Berzanskis were division tournament directors Jeremy Nolte (grades one through four) and Herman Henderson (middle school); Louis Klein, fifth grade scorekeeper; and assistants David Schlewitz and Udayan Shah.

Earning top prizes in the middle school division were Jonathan Brockington, first; Brittany Lorenson, second; and Evan Miller, third.

In the fifth grade division, Zach Windhorst won first; Michael Eskridge, second; and Zach Ferris, third.

In grades one through four division, Dennis Taylor won first, Drew Jaegle, second; and Johnny Story, third.

Outdoor holiday lighting program scheduled

Pampa and surrounding areas will be celebrating Christmas with outdoor lighting. In an effort to help home and business owners "light up" safely, a program on outdoor lighting will be conducted at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Gray County Annex, east of Pampa on US 60.

Co-sponsored by the Texas agricultural Extension Service and Celebration of Lights organization, the program will feature a presentation by David McKinney on electrical codes, tips and techniques for outdoor lighting safety.

McKinney is the code enforcement officer for the city of Pampa and has a master electrician's license. In addition, a representative from the Celebration of Lights organization will share ideas for home and business lighting and displays.

"Real Estate Corner" by JoAnn Shackelford

DO YOU KNOW YOUR HOME?
The person who is selling his home is generally a poor judge of its condition. It may need a little remodeling, but often the owner has lived there so long he has learned to overlook things that a prospective buyer might feel are serious drawbacks.

That's why it's vital the seller have a knowledgeable third party go through his home and make suggestions on things that can increase the sales price and make the home sell faster.

Before you sell your home, ask your real estate agent for advice after an unbiased look at your home. Your broker can show you the little things that can turn an ordinary house into a showplace - and a profitable sale!

Whatever your Real Estate needs, JoAnn Shackelford can help. Call 665-7591 or First Landmark Realty 665-0717 and ask for JoAnn. Ask me about any MLS Listing.

New program puts parents in judge's seat for students

AUSTIN (AP) - A new pilot program here will allow some residents to decide the punishment for young people who commit minor criminal offenses.

Residents near Bedichek Middle School in south Austin will start in the program in December. They will interview accused youths and their parents to determine what - if any - punishments are needed.

"Our goal is to make the neighborhood accountable for the offender and the offender accountable to the neighborhood," Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle told the Austin American-Statesman in Saturday's editions.

Under the idea, young first-time offenders accused of such offenses as alcohol possession, fist fights or vandalism will be asked to appear before a panel of parents to talk about the offense and possible punishments.

Students who do not participate would continue to be considered for criminal prosecution if the offense warranted, Earle said. Earle said offenses involving weapons or serious injuries would not go before the residents' panel.

City and county officials are backing the idea, and training sessions for interested parents have been scheduled. Students at the middle school also back the program, but some see potential drawbacks.

Leticia Mendoza, 13, said some parents of students brought before the panel could become angry with adults on the board. She said that could cause tensions in neighborhood.

And eighth-grader April Childress said some students will face threats of criminal prosecution because their parents will not get involved or carry heavy workloads.

"How do you expect parents to get involved with this," added eighth-grader Rita Salinas. "You can hardly get some of them to come to the PTA."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Smaller is better is current fashion

The referendum on independence in Quebec means - by the slimmest of margins - that Canada as a nation won't be broken apart. But because the margin was so slim and because many of the issues behind the discontent have been discussed only superficially, all the experts say the future of Canada remains profoundly unsettled. That could have enormous implications for the United States.

Insofar as the movement for Quebecois secession is a manifestation of the desire for special privileges for cultural and linguistic minorities, it could serve as a warning against a certain degraded brand of pseudo-multiculturalism that has lately been in fashion. Insofar as it is an expression of exasperation at a central government grown too powerful, too distant and too unresponsive to special local needs, it should alert us to similar trends here.

Interestingly, the movement for Quebecois secession seems to be a bit of both and more, which throws many political observers into a bit of a dither. In Quebec, people of all political persuasions found themselves on both sides of a French-English cultural-linguistic divide that seems more powerful than mere ideological preferences.

That kind of ethnic group-think is almost always dangerous to a civil society. A society has a better chance of being free and prosperous if its government treats people as individuals, not as members of some ethnic or racial group. That doesn't mean that, as individuals, people shouldn't be free to celebrate their ethnic heritage through all manner of voluntary community activities. But the only way for people in an ethnically diverse society to be equal before the law is for the law to treat them as individuals, irrespective of their skin color or national origin.

Canada's national government, in general, has responded to the claims of historically French-speaking Quebecois not by stressing their freedom as individuals, but by granting bits and pieces of "official" recognition to the special claims of francophones. The result, predictably, has been dissension and dissatisfaction all around.

Militant Quebecois have not been satisfied with government recognition they viewed as half-hearted, while English speakers in Quebec and other provinces have become discontented with what they viewed as special privileges wrested for French speakers by political blackmail. The turmoil in Quebec has brought into the open discontent in British Columbia and the prairie provinces from people who believe they, too, have unique cultures worthy of recognition.

Prime Minister Jean Chretien has hinted that in the wake of the vote he would support formal recognition of Quebec as a "distinct society" in Canada's constitution. That might be the worst possible approach.

A better approach would be a marked reduction in the power and scope of the central government, coupled with more explicit recognition of local rights of self-governance and a renewed commitment to treating all Canadians as individuals rather than as components of a group. It might seem paradoxical, but such a devolution of power from the center to various localities could be the best way of preserving Canada as a national entity.

All this uproar occurs, it should be noted, in a world in which the long term trend seems to be for empires and large nations to break up into smaller components. Fifty years ago, the United Nations was founded with 51 members; now it has 184. Not all those countries are really economically or politically viable without outside help, but the trend toward smaller national entities (for better or for worse) seems quite strong.

In such a climate, the best chance for large nations to survive might well be to devolve and limit centralized power and treat citizens more as individuals than as members of groups. It won't be easy for Canada's government, which has been moving in the opposite direction for decades to do this. If it can't, however, it might not survive as a nation.

Black English: No such thing exists

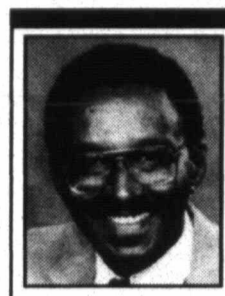

Y'awl might axin me why Ah be writin dis way. Y'awl might tink ma fambly didn't gib me a gud upbringing. Y'awl might say Ah be a no-count, woebegone yaller dawg fit for nothin but taters and chittlins. What be wrong wid yo innards and book-learning, yawl might be axing?

Run that paragraph by an intellectual multiculturalist at one of our universities. Ask him to comment on the language or dialect. Five will get you 10 he'll perk up and say, "Why, that's black English; I'd know it anywhere!" But it t'ain't. It is as white an English as you can get.

According to David H. Fischer's book, Albion Seed, in 1773, Philip Fithian, from New Jersey, went to Richmond, Va., to teach at Nomini Hall. In his journal, he told how Northerners said, "I am," "You are," "She isn't" and "I haven't," whereas Virginians, "even if high rank," preferred to say "I be," "You be," "She ain't" and "I hain't." The Virginian dialect, Fithian discovered, even had its own vocabulary: afearod for afraid, catercornered for crooked, chomp for chew, disremember for forget, and a host of similar substitutions.

Virginians tended to add syllables to words and embellish vowels such as: ha-alf for half, puriddy for pretty and wah-a-tah-mill-i-an for watermelon. They also had a way of softening consonants: sebem for seven, chimbly for chimney, mo for more and wid for with.

These Virginia speech patterns were not invented in America. They were derived from a family of regional dialects spoken throughout the South and West of England during the 17th century in counties such as Sussex, Surrey, Hampshire, Dorset, Devon, Wiltshire, Oxford and Gloucester. By the late 18th century, these words had all but disappeared from polite usage. Fischer says, "In the 20th century, words like dis or dat were rarely heard in any part of rural England, but they persisted among poor whites and blacks in the American South."

According to Fischer, a few Africanisms crept into the English language, even words of African origin; however, "The major features of the Virginia accent, however, were established before African slaves could possibly have had much impact on language."

The bottom line is the language we often hear spoken among blacks has little or nothing to do with Africa. They're speaking like purebred Englishmen of yesteryear from the south and west counties of Britain.

The question you may ask is: How come Englishmen from those regions don't speak like that today? The answer is easy. They have benefited from being educated to speak more correctly. The next question is: How come this English dialect continues to be spoken among some black people? Again, an easy answer with a minor side complexity. Those blacks have not benefited from being educated to speak correctly.

The side complexity that distinguishes them from the English is that blacks have had multicultural intellectuals to convince them that "I be" talk is a part of their heritage and roots. Bad-talking Englishmen suffered through the brutal "insensitivity" of having someone tell them they were wrong and at the same time demand proper grammar and pronunciation.

The bottom line is so-called black English is nonsense and an attempted cover-up of government school corruption and capitulation to mediocrity. It's not simply a matter of "black English" being hard on the ears. Poor command of language is devastating to learning potential and reasoning skills. After all, language is how we transmit knowledge and experiences.

But don't take my word. Just ax yourself: How many successful blacks be talkin black English?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today in History

Today is Sunday, Nov. 12, the 316th day of 1995. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 12, 1942, the World War II naval Battle of Guadalcanal began. Although both sides suffered heavy losses, the Americans won a major victory over the Japanese.

On this date:

In 1815, American suffragist Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born in Johnstown, N.Y.

In 1920, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was elected baseball's first commissioner of the American and National Leagues.

In 1921, representatives of nine nations gathered in the nation's capital for the start of the Washington Conference for Limitation of Armaments.

In 1927, Josef Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

In 1944, during World War II, the German battleship Tirpitz was sunk off Norway.

Positive message behind the march

The man who has articulated the best solutions to the crime problem, the welfare problem and the race problem is - get ready for this - Minister Louis T. Farrakhan.

How can any American take issue with his advice at the Million Man March? Go home. Don't bash whites, but instead make your communities safe and prosperous. Get out of crime and drugs and drinking, and join a church or mosque that teaches moral uplift. Don't boycott Asians; imitate their unity and hard work. Stop producing morally degenerate music and other entertainment.

In other words, Farrakhan's message to blacks is to be a proud, independent, hard-working, law-abiding and moral member of a community who assumes responsibility for his own life and for the lives and welfare of his family.

So what's all the controversy?

Well, Farrakhan, like everyone else, is a mixed bag. One minute he's preaching self-reliance, and the next he's demanding reparations from whites. One minute he's talking self-respect, and the next he's playing the victim game.

As silly as it sounds, one of the quarrels between some of Farrakhan's disciples and American Jews is an argument over which group has suffered the most. What do they think? That there's a Nobel Prize for suffering? Most of the human race suffers and has suffered and will suffer - it's part of the human condition.

But as for the comparison between slavery and the Holocaust in Europe, that boat won't float. At the end of slavery, there were millions more black people than had been brought into the United States as slaves. At the end of the Holocaust, there were several millions fewer Jews.

Slavery was morally odious, but it was not physically lethal, as slaves only did the same kind of work that poor white farmers did. No one ever tried to exterminate the slaves or former slaves. In fact, it was in the economic self-interest of the slave owner to keep the slaves healthy, as what a slave-buyer purchased was labor, and a sick or injured slave could not work.

In history, slavery was once common and by no means confined to Africans. Roman children were routinely educated by Greek slaves. Many white Europeans came to North America as indentured slaves. Slavery in North America was a moral black mark against the country, but it was not a holocaust. It really is insulting to compare involuntary servitude under reasonably humane conditions to mass murder and attempted genocide.

Farrakhan and his guys need to study more history instead of creating fantasy. It was, after all, black Africans who rounded up their black African "brothers" and traded them to the New England slave traders for kegs of rum and trinkets.

There were some free blacks living in the South in 1860, and some of them owned slaves. Several thousand black Southerners did fight with the Confederate armies. Confederates did leave their wives and children on isolated rural farms under the protection of slaves.

And some of the Confederate monuments the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People wants to take down were financed and put in place by former slaves serving in Reconstruction era legislatures. History happens to be politically incorrect and inconvenient for today's demagogues.

Slavery was a morally repugnant institution, but it was no holocaust. You won't find any monuments erected in Europe by Jews in honor of Nazis. You won't find any records of Jews serving in the German army. All you will find are mass graves of Jews. Farrakhan and others ought to drop their attempts to compare slavery to the Holocaust. There is no valid comparison.

But the kookiness aside, the Million Man March showed that many black Americans do understand the needs of their communities, the need for unity among black Americans and the need to rebuild their own communities and take charge of their lives.

A decent human being can only wish them great success.

The American press is a news release

R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr.

I have a new definition of the term "press release." The American press is a "press release." If you shared my ringside seat here in our nation's capital and followed the flow of the press releases from their Official Sources - the White House, Capitol Hill and the various lobbyists and interest groups - to the American press, you would agree. It is always amusing to read the press releases from, say, the White House - and then see how the editors of, say, The New York Times and The Washington Post edit those press releases, transforming them from the dull prose of the political flakes into the dull prose of the political reporters. It takes a gift.

The White House has yet to send out its press release on the three handwriting experts who recently scrutinized that note retrieved over two years back by White House Counsel Bernard Nussbaum from the late Vince Foster's attache case. They adjudged it a forgery. The handwriting experts, two Americans with backgrounds in criminal investigations and an Englishman from Oxford University with a background in manuscript research, revealed their findings at a press conference Oct. 25. Presumably, the organization that hired them issued a press release. Yet, the American press only reproduces press releases from Official Sources - again, the White House, Capitol Hill, Washington's lobbyists and interest groups. We are talking about distinguished news organizations - The New York Times, The Washington Post. You would not expect them to reprint just any press release.

As not one major Washington news organization has reported the dubiety of the Foster letter, the vast majority of American news organizations that rely on them for their own press releases do not know that the authorship of the Foster note is in doubt. Readers of European newspapers know. The revelations were carried widely there, particularly in the United Kingdom. Perhaps this is because one of the experts who believes that Nussbaum pulled a hoax from Foster's attache case is a respected English scholar utterly removed from political shenanigans, Professor Reginald Alton, emeritus fellow of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford.

Alton told London's Sunday Express that he recognized the hoax almost immediately. When he compared the handwriting in the alleged Foster note with that of 12 other samples verified as Foster's handwriting, he was convinced. Said the prof, "For example, the 'b' is written completely differently. Foster would write it in one continuous stroke. In the note, the writer uses three strokes." And he went on, "Foster is what I call a 'natural swaggerer' - his letters have lots of elegant flourishes. The forger failed to spot this until about the 10th line, when he suddenly started using Foster's wide, saucer-shaped loops. Foster's hand is firm, fluid and constant. The forger's is inconsistent, and his slopes are uneven." Alton believes there is some sort of cover-up surrounding the death of Foster.

Alas, he simply does not understand the American press. His countryman, Auberger Waugh, has a better grasp of the American scene. He writes in London's Daily Telegraph that "the American journalist will not print anything as fact unless it has been confirmed by an official source." One of the great gray sages of the Washington press corps explained to me the other day that the reason our press is not reporting Alton's finding that the Foster letter is a forgery is that he had been hired by "that guy in Pittsburgh," a reference to the conservative businessman Richard Scaife. Actually, he was not hired by Scaife. Moreover, the judgment commits what is known as the genetic fallacy.

Modern English: A Glossary of Literature and Language explains that the genetic fallacy "is the mistaken assumption that an idea is false or a discovery worthless because it was originated by someone we do not like ... This same fallacy, of course, may occur in Argument from Authority. Normally the origin of an idea or discovery is irrelevant; its reliability or worth depends rather upon the weight of the evidence for or against it." Most American journalism is based on two fallacies. What it prints it prints, as Waugh observes, on the false principle of Argument from Authority. What it fails to print, as with the story of the Foster forgery, it ignores on the false principle of the genetic fallacy.

The press release revealing the Foster letter a forgery originated from a source the American press does not like. Of course, if you lived in London, you could decide for yourself whether Alton is right. The English press has printed the Foster letter next to authenticated specimens of Foster's handwriting. The merit of a discovery depends on the evidence. Our journalists would rather depend on press releases from Authority. Thus, here again we have the press keeping its readers in the dark as to what is known about the Clinton Klutzes.

Letters to the editor

Look at Bush's agenda

To the editor:

On Nov. 1994, Ann Richards was running for re-election as governor with George Bush as her Republican challenger. Admittedly, Texas could not tolerate another four years of Ann Richards and her left-wing agenda. Bush was proclaiming to be the man for Texas with the best interests of Texans as his sole motivation for seeking the office. We believed him, elected him and are now getting a look at his agenda.

Very obviously, he learned nothing from the presidential elections of 1992, and the fact the American voters gave a resounding "NO" to the "new world order" agenda.

Recently, Bush was quoted as saying illegal aliens are not contributing to the crime problem in this state and country. Interestingly, Janet Reno, U.S. attorney general, was quoted as being very surprised as to the number of illegal aliens currently residing in federal prisons for such crimes as drug smuggling, arms violations and the like.

Also, Bush is demanding the U.S. send another $5 billion to Mexico to help its economy. Why doesn't he want to help our economy rather than send it to a country that is rampant with corruption and inefficiency and which is run by some 60 plus ultra rich families who will most assuredly wind up in possession of said $5 billion?

And then more recently, Bush publicly stated he would actively campaign against any candidate who does not want to continue the policy of subsidizing Mexico and its rich families.

Who gets the bill for Mr. Bush's "agenda" ??????

Thanks for name correction

To the editor:

I wish to express a heartfelt thanks to sports editor L.D. Strate for his prompt response to our request for a correction to our son's name and school standing from an article in Sunday's paper (Nov. 5, 1995). He was very pleasant to deal with and the correction was cleverly written.

Having a son with an unusually spelled name, we rarely see his name spelled correctly in print and more or less expect not to. After all, even Pampa High School has never spelled it correctly on the team roster or program. However, in last Sunday's article, his class standing was also incorrect, so my husband decided to call the newspaper to correct that at least, and while he was at it, to mention the misspelling of the name. It was wonderful to see his name in print, as it is really spelled, for the first time. We have kept the article in a scrapbook. Thank you, Mr. Strate.

Better names for streets

To the editor:

I do agree with Mr. Velasquez about the street name change. If they want to name a street, how about some of our doctors that have retired and those still giving time and doing what they know best: saving lives.

Music is OK. But the doctors have touched lives that you can't forget. Honor someone that really deserves it.

How about Veteran Avenue?

Texas needs ballot initiative

To the editor:

Texas is one of only three western states whose citizens are not permitted to place issues on the statewide ballot using the initiative process. And around the state capital a frequently heard argument is that Texans would use the power of initiative frivolously and clutter up the state ballot with trivia.

The parties making such argument are legislators, lobbyists for organized special interests and newspaper editorial boards enamored of state legislators and their work.

Isn't it ironic to see the Nov. 7 ballot contained 14 trivial issues (11 of which should have been voted down) put there by our state legislators, for the benefit of so many different organized special interests? Legislators can put trivial issues on the ballot because it is so easy — they just vote to do it.

When Texans finally get the long-denied right of initiative for statewide issues, you can be sure they will not be using it for trivial issues.

How do we know that citizens won't be as frivolous? Because unlike the Legislature, citizens putting issues on the ballot must do a great deal of work — they must collect hundreds of thousands of valid signatures of registered voters across the state. Ask your legislator to propose the initiative process for Texans.

J.G. Ford Jr.

Letters to the editor policy

The Pampa News welcomes and encourages readers to express their opinions on issues of public interest and concern. However, we also reserve the right to accept or reject any letter for publication.

Letters should be 300 words or less. Letters submitted for publication should be neat and legible, typed if possible, or at least handwritten in a clear manner. Letters may be edited for length, clarity, spelling, grammar, taste, style and potentially libelous statements. Submission of a letter does not guarantee its publication, nor can we guarantee a date of publication due to space and time limitations.

ALL letters must be signed for publication; no unsigned, name withheld or anonymous letters will be published. The writer must list an address and a telephone number or numbers where he or she may be contacted for verification; addresses and telephone numbers will not be printed, unless requested for a specific reason.

Poetry, candidate or political endorsements, letters to third parties and "thank you" letters will not be published except at the discretion of the editor, depending on general interest.

Letters may be dropped off at the office, 403 W. Atchison, or mailed to The Pampa News, Letters to the Editor, P.O. Box 2198, Pampa, TX 79066.

Rain in Spain, wind in Morocco delay launch of Atlantis shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Rain in Spain and wind in Morocco kept Atlantis grounded Saturday, delaying the shuttle's flight to the Russian space station Mir by one day.

Only slightly better weather was expected at the overseas emergency landing strips for Sunday's launch attempt. What's more, conditions were likely to worsen at the Kennedy Space Center.

NASA has just seven minutes on any given day to send Atlantis on the most fuel-efficient route to Mir. Sunday's liftoff time is 7:30 a.m.

The weather at Kennedy was perfect Saturday morning. But rain, low clouds or gale-force wind at all three shuttle runways in Spain and Morocco posed too much of a risk — a rare occurrence — and managers called off the launch.

"We're a little disappointed, but we understand how the rules work," commander Kenneth Cameron said, sighing, before crawling out of the shuttle.

Atlantis contains a Russian-built docking port that Cameron and his crew will attach to the Mir station to facilitate future shuttle dockings.

This will be the first time a space shuttle is used in station construction. It's also the first time a shuttle has been filled with Russian equipment.

The astronauts will use Atlantis' robot arm to erect the 15-foot docking tunnel in the shuttle cargo bay, then latch onto Mir via this port. The tunnel will remain behind when the shuttle leaves.

The Atlantis-Mir hookups — this is the second of seven planned — will allow the two space programs to iron out docking and communication problems before they start hauling up pieces of the international space station in late 1997.

A liftoff Sunday would have Atlantis arriving at Mir on Wednesday. The two spacecraft will be joined in orbit for three days.

The four U.S. astronauts and one Canadian will spend the time transferring water and other supplies to Mir, including science experiments for an American who will fly up in March for a five-month stay.

Mir's three residents — two Russians and a German — have been in orbit for two months and have four months to go.

Crime of the Week

Pampa/Gray County Crime Stoppers needs your help in solving an armed robbery that occurred at the Belco Conoco Station, 2101 N. Hobart, on Wednesday night.

An unidentified black man wearing a white ski mask, black hooded sweat shirt and blue jeans and described as being about 6 foot 1 inch tall with a thin build brandished a handgun and demanded store clerks give him the money bag. The incident occurred as the clerks were leaving the store after closing.

Crime Stoppers wants any information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this crime or any other felony crime or narcotics trafficking.

Tipsters remain anonymous and may be eligible for up to a $1,000 reward by calling 669-2222.

FRESHMEN FOOTBALL

HEREFORD — The Pampa Junior Varsity football team traveled to Hereford this past Thursday night and came away with a 20-15 victory to improve their record to 6-1. Kevin Jernigan, Ronnie Proby and Josh Blackmon each rushed for a touchdown to provide the scoring for the Harvesters. Jernigan and Vincent Martinez each recovered fumbles for the defense and Aaron Hayden blocked a punt. The team finishes its season this Thursday at home against Borger.

SOCCER

PAMPA — The Pampa High School Soccer Booster Club will meet at 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 20, at 808 W. Francis. Coaches Warren Cottle and Scott Lewis will present information for the UIL Soccer season which begins the first of January. Parents of players wishing to tryout for the high school teams and other interested parties are encouraged to attend. Schedules will be presented as well as a view of the new boys uniforms. Information on training and expectations will be discussed as well as possible fundraising ideas. Questions should be directed to Miles Cook, president at 665-6696.

BASKETBALL

PAMPA — Ready or not, basketball season is just around the corner.

The Harvesters open the 1995-96 season in the McDonald's Classic next weekend at South Plains College's Texan Dome in Levelland. The Harvesters meet Midland Lee on Friday and Abilene High on Saturday.

"These schools have two of the best programs around and it's going to be fun to play them. There's won't be a lot of pressure on us even though they are regularly-scheduled games," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "It will give everybody a chance to play and then we'll see what we need to work on."

VOLLEYBALL

LUBBOCK — Fort Hancock ended Fort Elliott's season with a 15-0, 15-4 victory Saturday in a Region 1-1A semifinal match at Lubbock Monterey High School.

"We just couldn't get anything going. We just weren't able to handle their serves very well," said Fort Elliott head coach Dave Johnson.

The Lady Cougars finished with a 19-8 record.

FISHING

PAMPA — The Top O' Texas Bassmasters held their last tournament of the year at Baylor-Childress.

First place went to Damon Admire and Steve Seabourn of Dumas with 16.1 pounds. Second went to Mike and Anna Young and third to Steve and Maxine Stauffacher.

Steve Seabourn took Big Bass with 5.73.

Top six for the year in order were Steve Stauffacher, Mike Young, Joe Millican, Maxine Stauffacher, Damon Admire and Steve Seabourn.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Todd Baumann threw touchdown passes of 35, 9 and 25 yards to Michael Daggs Saturday as Hardin-Simmons defeated Austin College, 31-0.

Kyle Cress also scored on a 5-yard run, and Brian Beddow had a 36-yard field goal for the Cowboys.

Kangaroos quarterback Joe Newton completed 10 of 32 passes for 121 yards and was intercepted four times, and Will Wagner picking off three of the passes.

Baumann was 24 of 31 for 332 yards, and was picked off three times.

Revenge-seeking Cowboys ready for 49ers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — The mighty San Francisco 49ers have fallen. And the Dallas Cowboys are quite willing to kick them while they're down.

The injury-depleted defending Super Bowl champions limp into Texas Stadium today for their much-anticipated NFC championship rematch with the Cowboys just trying to stay alive for a playoff spot, any playoff spot.

Four losses have turned the 49ers into mere mortals just struggling for an NFC playoff berth, let alone contending for home-field advantage in the conference.

The 49ers can't expect any mercy from the high-rolling revenge-seeking Cowboys, who are tied with the Kansas City Chiefs at 8-1 with the best NFL records.

San Francisco beat Dallas 38-28 in the NFC title game after having taken the Cowboys 21-14 during the regular season last year. The Cowboys have lived with the defeats during the offseason. They are in an ugly mood.

"We not only want to win, we want to win big," said safety Darren Woodson. "They are the champs and we want to destroy their playoff chances. If we beat 'em bad, so be it."

Woodson said it didn't matter that the 49ers wouldn't have fullback William Floyd and other key players because of injury.

"If they were 1-6 it wouldn't matter," Woodson said. "This is their name against a team with the star on the helmet."

"We don't feel sorry for them," said Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman. "Nobody felt sorry for us last year. Injuries are part of the game."

Wide receiver Michael Irvin said he's glad the 49ers are beat up.

"I don't wish they were healthy," Irvin said. "I do hope Steve Young is 100 per cent like next week. I enjoy seeing 'em struggle."

Running back Emmitt Smith said the Cowboys owe the 49ers for all the trash talking they did last January.

"They have every right to talk," Smith said. "But some of our players felt they were disrespectful. This is in the back of their mind."

San Francisco coach George Seifert was apologetic that the fall of the 49ers had taken the luster off one of the most anticipated regular-season meetings in the 1990s.

"It's unfortunate," he said. "It's really too bad. It would have been something. I know Dallas still wants to win the game very much. As for us, we're just trying to win a game so we can have the opportunity to get into the playoffs."

The game has several interesting sidebars. It will feature cornerback Deion Sanders going against his former teammates fresh off a Super Bowl championship. Sanders will be matched up against Jerry Rice, holder of numerous NFL records who has something of a running feud going with "Prime Time."

Then there's Irvin trying to set an NFL record with an eighth consecutive 100-yard receiving game.

And can Steve Young come back from a shoulder injury that has left the 49ers' All-Pro quarterback less than 100 per cent? His absence has bogged down the potent San Francisco offense.

"There's no way you can say this is a meaningless game," Aikman said. "This is still a big game for them. This is still a rivalry and I think the 49ers will be back later in the year and make the playoffs."

But can the 10-point favorite Cowboys still celebrate a win over a San Francisco team that doesn't have all of its guns?

"Sure we can," Aikman said. "A win over San Francisco means a lot to this team."

Pampa tailback Matt Archibald plunges ahead for yardage against Hereford.

Harvesters storm past Herd

PAMPA — The weather was cold, but the Pampa Harvesters continued their hot streak Friday night.

With the temperature below freezing and a stiff wind (25 to 36 miles per hour) at gametime, the Harvesters came out and scored on their first three possessions enroute to a 53-0 romp over Hereford in the final home game at Harvester Stadium.

The Harvesters, winners of their last seven games, are now 8-1 on the season and a perfect 5-0 in District 1-4A play. The showdown for the district championship is now set against Borger, who downed Canyon, 38-14, Friday night. The two teams square off at 2 p.m. Saturday in Borger's Bulldog Stadium.

Pampa rolled up 414 yards of offense against Hereford while a relentless Harvester defense held the Whitefaces to 123 yards and only 28 on the ground.

Pampa took advantage of a 14-yard Hereford punt early in the first quarter to score the first touchdown after starting on the Whiteface 28. Three plays later, Senior tailback Derahian Evans scored the first of his three touchdowns on a 4-yard run. Evans, following some strong blocking by linemen Ryan Davis and Donnie Middleton, scored on a 3-yard run with 6:07 left in the first quarter as Pampa made it, 14-0.

The Harvesters didn't score a touchdown on their next possession, but they still got on the board with a 28-yard field goal from Todd Finney, giving Pampa a 17-0 lead at the end of the first quarter. Finney, who has been bothered by a bruised thigh, booted 6 extra points and turned a busted play into a two-point conversion in the fourth quarter. After Marques Long scored on a 32-yard run with 8:22 remaining, Finney wasn't able to handle a bad snap on the PAT try, but he was able get off a pass to Devin Lemons, who made a leaping catch in the end zone.

Joel Ferland and Clint Curtis continued to do a standout job of sharing the quarterback chores for the Harvesters. Ferland scored on a 32-yard run in the second quarter and Curtis connected with Lemons on a 69-yard scoring play in the third quarter. Curtis, who completed 3 of 8 pass attempts for 116 yards, broke loose on a 62-yard run in the final period that would have gone for a TD, but was nullified due to an illegal motion penalty.

Pampa had another touchdown, a 13-yard interception by Matt Archibald, called back because of a penalty, but the Harvesters still scored on the very next play — an 11-yard run by Long in the second quarter.

For the second game in a row, Long, a junior, led the Harvesters in rushing with 70 yards on 8 carries. Evans added 63 yards on 8 tries and Archibald followed with 61 yards, also on 8 carries.

A Pampa defense, led by Ryan Gibson, Jesse Silva, Floyd White, Middleton and Lemons, had some big hits on Hereford quarterback Todd Dudley, second in the district in pass completions. Dudley threw for 107 yards, but he was sacked for 35 yards in losses.

Hereford fell to 2-6-1 for the season and 1-3-1 in district.

Fatheree takes 10th at state Class 4A cross country meet

GEORGETOWN — District 1-4A champion Jenny Fatheree of Pampa claimed 10th place at the state cross country meet Saturday.

"Jenny ran a good race," said Pampa coach Mark Elms. "She wanted to finish in the top 10 and she got what she wanted."

Fatheree's time was 12:13, which bettered three other District 1-4A runners entered in the meet. Mandy Arp of Canyon was 12th and teammate Jennifer Salazar was 14th. Canyon's Stacey Stone was 25th.

Lisa Weltzer of New Braunfels was the Class 4A individual winner with a time of 11:47. New Braunfels also won the team title with 61 points. Canyon was third (96 points) and Hereford was 10th (206 points).

Canyon won the Class 4A boys' title with 77 points. Fatheree, a freshman, finished 7th in the regionals last weekend to qualify for the state meet. Her 12:10.8 time set a new school record in the girls' division.

Fatheree won the district title with a time of 12:39. She was Pampa's only entry at the regional and state meets.

In the Class 2A girls' division, Canadian's Denise Reed finished second at the state meet with a time of 12:43.

In the Class 1A boys' division, Fort Elliott's David Helton placed 26th with a time of 10:36.

McLean closes football season with easy win

FOLLETT — Jeremy Crutcher scored four touchdowns and ran for 187 yards on 33 carries as McLean rolled to a 48-14 over Follett in a District 1-1A Six-Man finale Friday night.

Chris Flores scored twice for the Tigers and Seth Brown also added a touchdown. Flores had 134 yards on 23 carries. He scored on runs of 18 and 6 yards. Brown's TD came from 4 yards out.

Crutcher scored on runs of 6, 1, 2, and 8 yards.

Follett did lead, 14-7, after the first quarter, but McLean jumped on top, 35-14, at halftime.

McLean had 340 yards in total offense, all on the ground. McLean also had the advantage in first downs, 18-8.

McLean's defense held Follett to 169 yards. The Tigers forced four Follett turnovers.

Follett's touchdowns came on William Frazier's 31-yard run and Kenton Laubhan's 6-yard pass to Courtney Frazier.

McLean closes the season at 4-6 overall and 3-2 in district. Follett finishes at 3-7 and 1-4.

Colorado shuts out Missouri, 21-0

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — John Hessler passed for two touchdowns, extending his school record, and ran for another score as No. 9 Colorado overcame a listless start and gusty winds to blank Missouri 21-0 on Saturday.

Wheeler 20, Booker 13

WHEELER — Wheeler rallied from behind to defeat Booker, 20-13, Friday night in the final game of the season for both teams.

Wheeler was trailing, 13-6, at intermission before scoring two touchdowns in the third quarter to claim the victory.

Wheeler led, 6-0, at the end of the first quarter on a 3-yard run by Jeremy Davis.

Wheeler's third-quarter touchdowns came on a 9-yard run by Travis Stevens and a 1-yard run by Andy Francis.

Booker's second-quarter touchdowns were scored by Kelly Garton (5-yard run) and Zachary Juarez (47-yard run).

Booker had 242 yards of total offense, compared to Wheeler's 221. Each team had 15 first downs.

The Mustangs finished the season with a 4-6 overall record and 3-2 in District 1-1A play. Wheeler had won the district championship in 1995.

Booker closed at 3-6-1, 2-3.

Baylor bombs Southern Methodist, 48-7

DALLAS (AP) — Freshman quarterback Jermaine Alfred couldn't have made a more dynamic debut.

He hit Dustin Dennard with a 56-yard touchdown pass on Baylor's first play Saturday in a 48-7 victory over Southern Methodist in the last Southwest Conference game between the schools.

"We had planned on opening with that play all week," Baylor coach Chuck Reedy said.

"It was a great throw and a great catch. It was a confidence booster for Jermaine right off the bat. We hadn't gone deep all year with Dustin. I think it kind of surprised them."

Baylor, alternating quarterbacks Alfred and Jeff Watson, jumped to a 31-0 halftime lead over the Mustangs on homecoming in the chilled Cotton Bowl where 45-degree weather helped hold the crowd down to 15,941 in the cavernous stadium.

"That was not a good way to start. It gave them momentum early. We got beat by a good team," SMU coach Tom Rossley said.

Dennard said the decision on who was to start game just before the kickoff.

"We learned just before game time. Both quarterbacks did a great job," Dennard said.

"I was a little nervous, but that first pass helped settle me down," Alfred said.

Baylor, which will join the Big 12 Conference next season and not play SMU again, is now 6-3 overall and 4-1 in league play. The Western Athletic Conference-bound Mustangs dropped a nation-leading ninth consecutive game. SMU is 1-9 and 0-6 with its only victory coming over Arkansas 17-14 in the first game of the season.

Baylor defeated SMU for the seventh consecutive time. SMU leads the series 36-33-7 and there are no future games scheduled.

Alfred started in place of Watson who has had trouble getting the Baylor offense into gear.

Alfred had no problem on the first play as he faded back and found Dennard all alone behind cornerback Cornell Parker for the touchdown.

PHS swimmers have first dual Pampa — It was about as close as a swim meet could get.

The Pampa boys won five events and placed second in six others out of eleven events, but fell by one point to a combined Caprock-Tascosa squad, 44-43.

The Pampa girls won six events and placed second in four others, but dropped a 44-42 decision to Caprock-Tascosa.

The dual meet was held last week at the Pampa Youth Center pool.

"It was bittersweet. We should have won the girls meet, but we made three mistakes that cost us," said Pampa head coach David Pink. "The boys swam well, but just weren't able to come out on top."

Pampa is entered in the San Angelo Invitational Nov. 17-18. The next dual is Nov. 30 against Tascosa.

Red Raiders roll past Texas Christian in conference finale at Jones Stadium

By JEAN PAGES
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Fans of Texas Tech football witnessed a happy ending for the Southwest Conference in Lubbock.

The Red Raiders turned a one-touchdown lead at halftime into a 27-6 victory over Texas Christian during the final SWC game at Jones Stadium. It marked a big recovery after Tech's 48-7 wipeout last week by Texas.

"We got our confidence back," Tech linebacker Zach Thomas said. "We bounced back, and it was a lot due to team effort and solid leadership."

Tech (6-3 overall, 3-2 SWC) held the anemic Horned Frog offense to two field goals and six first downs.

Texas Christian (6-3, 3-2) came into the game averaging 23.3 points and in contention for the conference crown. But those hopes fell as flat as the arm of Max Knake, who had the worst game of his career, completing just five of 31 passes for 64 yards.

And without suspended tailback Andre Davis, the Horned Frogs rushed for 61 yards on 28 attempts, the longest of which was 16 yards by punter Beau Stephens on a fourth-down fake.

"Today was a big win," Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "I don't know when I've seen a better defensive game."

TCU coach Pat Sullivan called it "a very frustrating game for us. Give credit where credit is due. Tech didn't do anything unexpected, they just made some things happen while we couldn't."

TCU's defense was outstanding as well for most of the first three quarters. But the Red Raiders went up, 20-6, with 4:18 left in the third quarter when senior split end Bo Adams caught his first career TD pass. A 5-yard lob from Zebbie Lethridge.

Byron Henspard, who rushed for a game-high 126 yards on 24 carries, dashed 48 yards to score the final touchdown in the opening minute of the fourth quarter. The Red Raiders finished with 422 yards of total offense, including 175 passing yards on Lethridge's 18 of 33 attempts.

Tech took a 3-0 lead on its first possession when Tony Rogers kicked a 40-yard field goal.

Michael Reeder booted one from 47 yards out to tie the score at 3-3 with 8:54 to go in the first quarter.

But the Red Raiders regained the edge on a 7-yard TD pass from Lethridge to a falling Stacy Mitchell in the end zone's front right corner. Texas Christian then made it 10-6 in the second quarter on a 21-yard Reeder field goal.

Tech linebacker Robert Johnson's interception of Knake and 52-yard return set up a Red Raider touchdown annulled by a penalty with 2:34 left in the half. Tech settled for Rogers' 37-yard field goal that put Tech on top 13-6 at the break.

NOTES: The six points and six first downs Tech allowed are the fewest given up in any SWC game this year ... Thomas led the Tech defense with 13 tackles and now has 113 for the season ... Max Knake's five completions are the fewest in his career as starting quarterback. But his 31 attempts moves him into fifth place on the SWC career pass-attempts list with 1,049 ... John Washington has caught a pass in 20 straight Horned Frog games ... Representatives of the Alamo and Independence bowls attended the game.

Seminoles down North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Sixth-ranked Florida State inched a step closer to at least a share of a record fourth straight Atlantic Coast Conference title, getting two first-half scores Saturday from Warrick Dunn in a 28-12 victory over North Carolina.

The Seminoles (8-1, 6-1 ACC) rebounded from their first league loss in 30 games by scoring twice in the first 3:34.

First American kicks off Thanksgiving Food Drive

In the spirit of the season, First American Bank, SSB, has kicked off its statewide Thanksgiving Food Drive.

Employees at more than 50 community banking centers in Texas, including Pampa, will be donating food items for Thanksgiving dinners to be distributed to needy families in their local areas. First American Bank will furnish turkeys and collection baskets at each location.

First American invites their customers and area residents to donate non-perishable food items to assist the banking centers in their endeavor. Food and/or cash will be accepted at all First American Bank locations until Nov. 20.

First American Bank of Pampa is working with the local Good Samaritan Christian Services to coordinate distribution of the Thanksgiving dinner baskets to needy families.

First American Bank, SSB, is a $3 billion financial institution and is a subsidiary of The Adam Corporation/Group in Bryan.

Nurse entrance test set for Nov. 17

BORGER — The Frank Phillips College Nurse Entrance Test will be administered Friday, Nov. 17.

The FPC Vocational Nursing Division is now accepting applications for the 1996-97 academic year, and applicants must pass the NET. Students must also pass all of the TASP test, or be TASP exempt, before acceptance.

The NET is administered monthly on Fridays through March. The non-refundable $15 test fee may be paid before or up to the test date. Space is limited; pre-registration is encouraged.

The classroom phase of the nursing program is conducted in Borger. Hospital and other clinical sites are utilized in Borger, Dalhart, Dumas, Pampa, Perryton and Guymon.

To register or receive an application, call Marilyn Wood, Director of the Nursing Division, at 806-274-5311, Ext. 45, or come directly to Administration Room 36.

A Night of Improvisation

Matthew Gantz, Pampa High School drama teacher, reads Hades, a Cajun folk tale, during an experimental theatre session on Saturday at Le Cabaret Coffee Club on the corner of Francis and Gray. Gantz got the idea to began these theatre nights for students from coffee houses in Atlanta, Ga., which have experimental theatres. The experimental theatre starts at 9 p.m. every Saturday at the coffee house. This kind of theatre gives students a chance to be creative and artistic outside a classroom setting, said Gantz.

Putting a touch of art into the community that the students and people of Pampa can enjoy. That is what Pampa High School drama teacher Matthew Gantz did by bringing experimental theatre to the Le Cabaret Coffee Club on the corner of Francis and Gray every Saturday night.

"In Atlanta," said Gantz about where he got the idea for bringing this kind of theatre into the local coffee house. "When I was living in Atlanta. Every coffee house had some kind of experimental theatre."

Experimental theatre in coffee houses not unique to Atlanta. Most cities across the U.S. have coffee houses where experimental theatre takes place.

"When I saw this (Le Cabaret Coffee Club), I thought it'd be great for this community," said Gantz.

He decided to start the theatre to get students off the drag and a give them a chance to experience culture and art.

"Now there's a place for mature students to hang around," said Gantz. "These kids have been wanting something like this for awhile."

And students have responded well to the concept since the theatre began several weeks ago. "They absolutely love it," he said. "They like to perform and watch."

It's not required of the students to perform but Gantz said that the students battle for who gets to.

For their skits, students get their ideas from research, Gantz and speech instructor, Kayla Wilmeth, who also has students performing.

And there are the advantages students get from performing dramatics outside of a school setting.

"First of all, (they get) a sense of community," said Gantz. "What we do in the classroom can be taken out. Secondly, a chance to be artistic outside a classroom atmosphere."

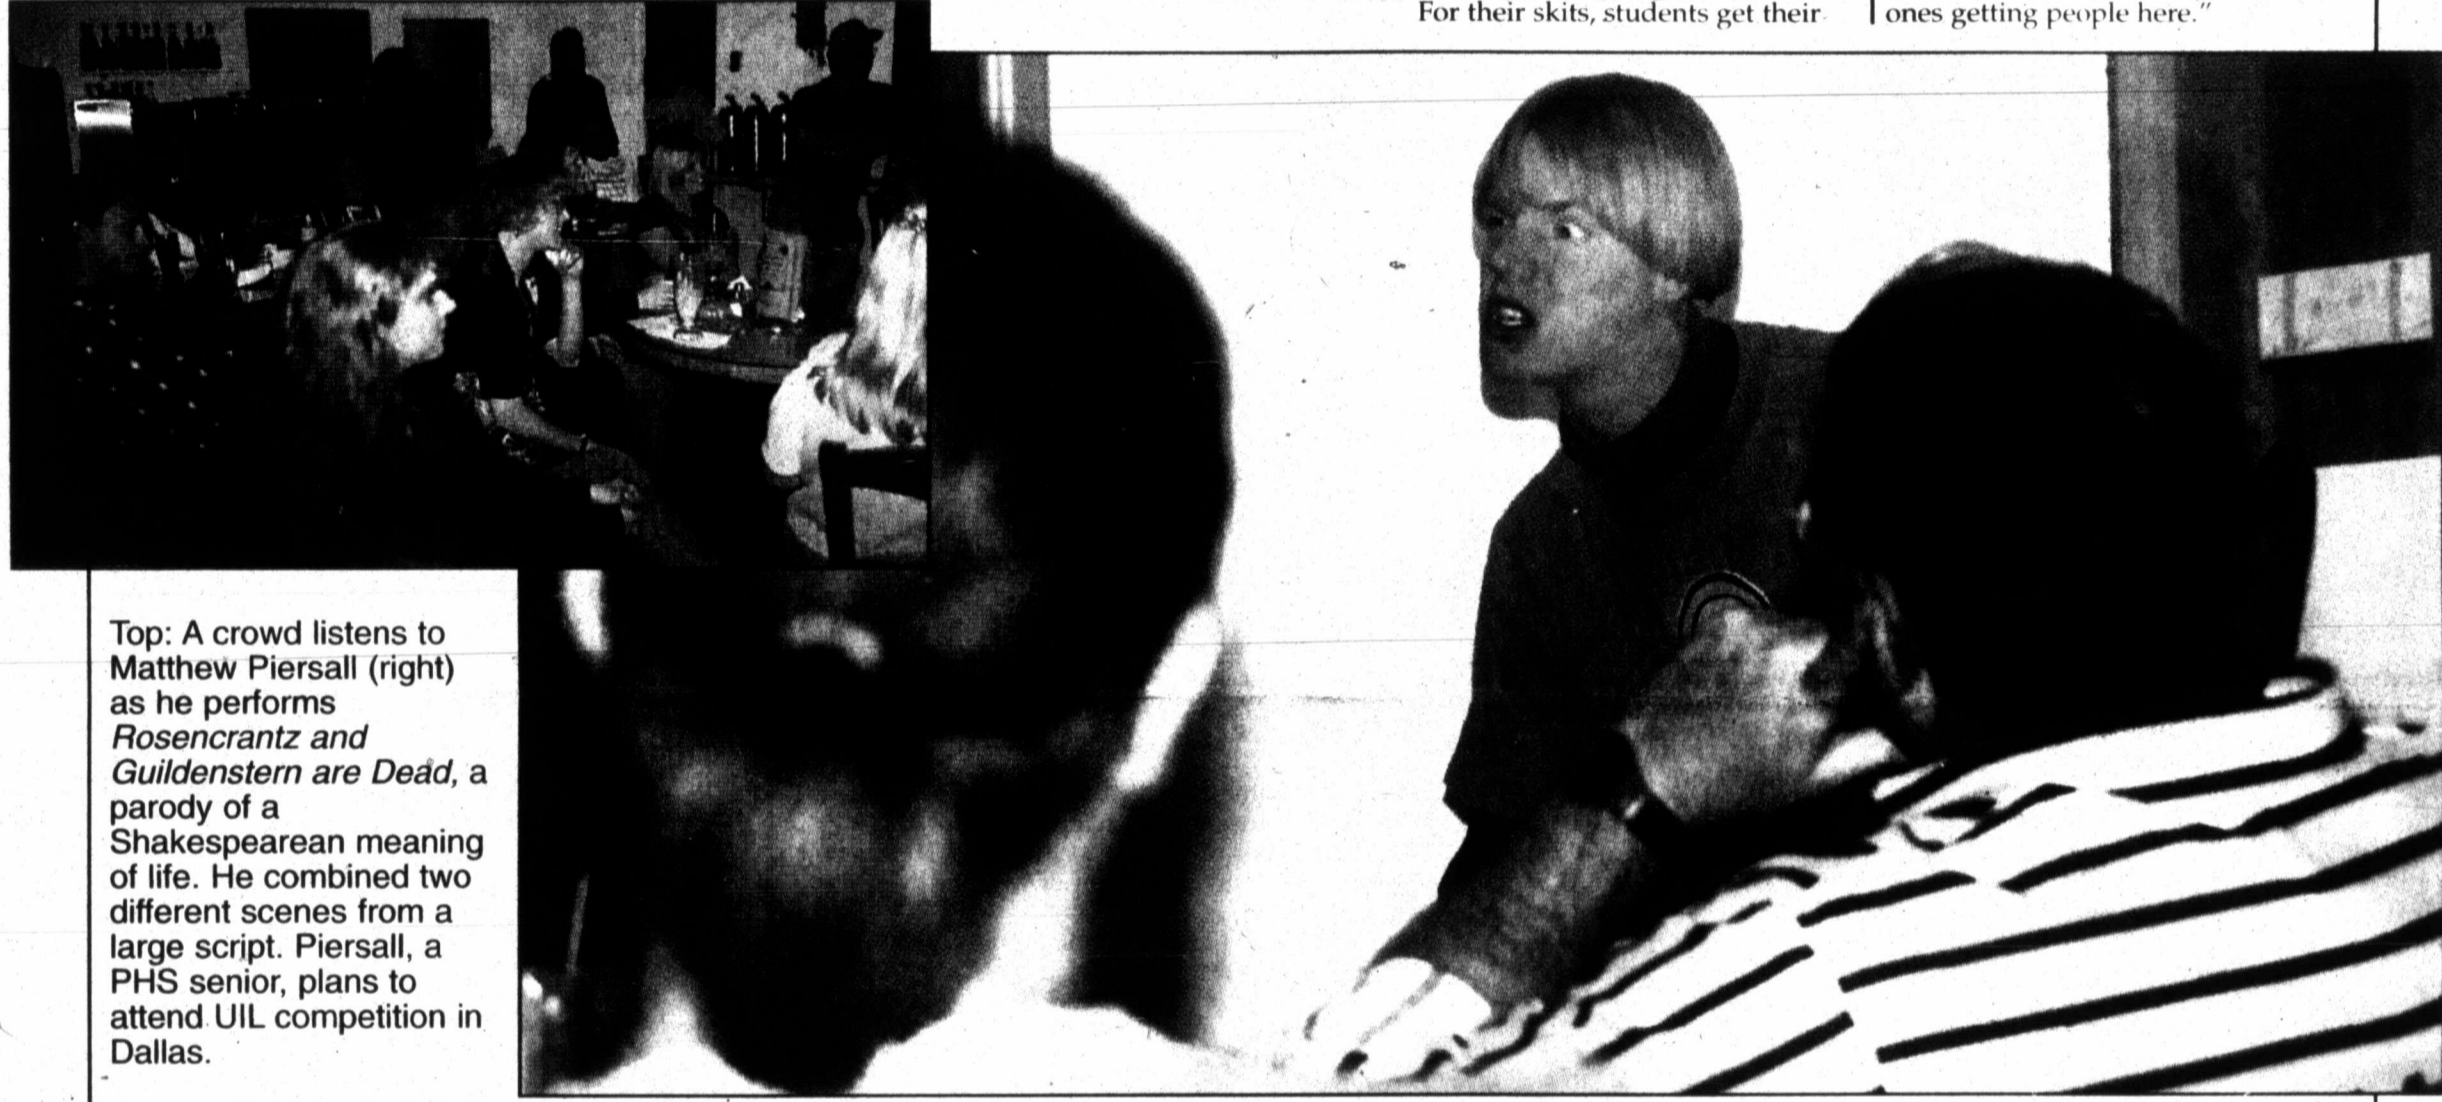

The students don't perform "cute" skits such as the ones that appear on Saturday Night Live. Gantz wants them to do "heavy stuff (such as) Extremities and Christopher Durang's pieces."

"In fact, a lot of these have gone on to UIL competition," said Gantz about the students' performances. Matthew Piersall, a PHS senior, plans to fly to Dallas for UIL competition.

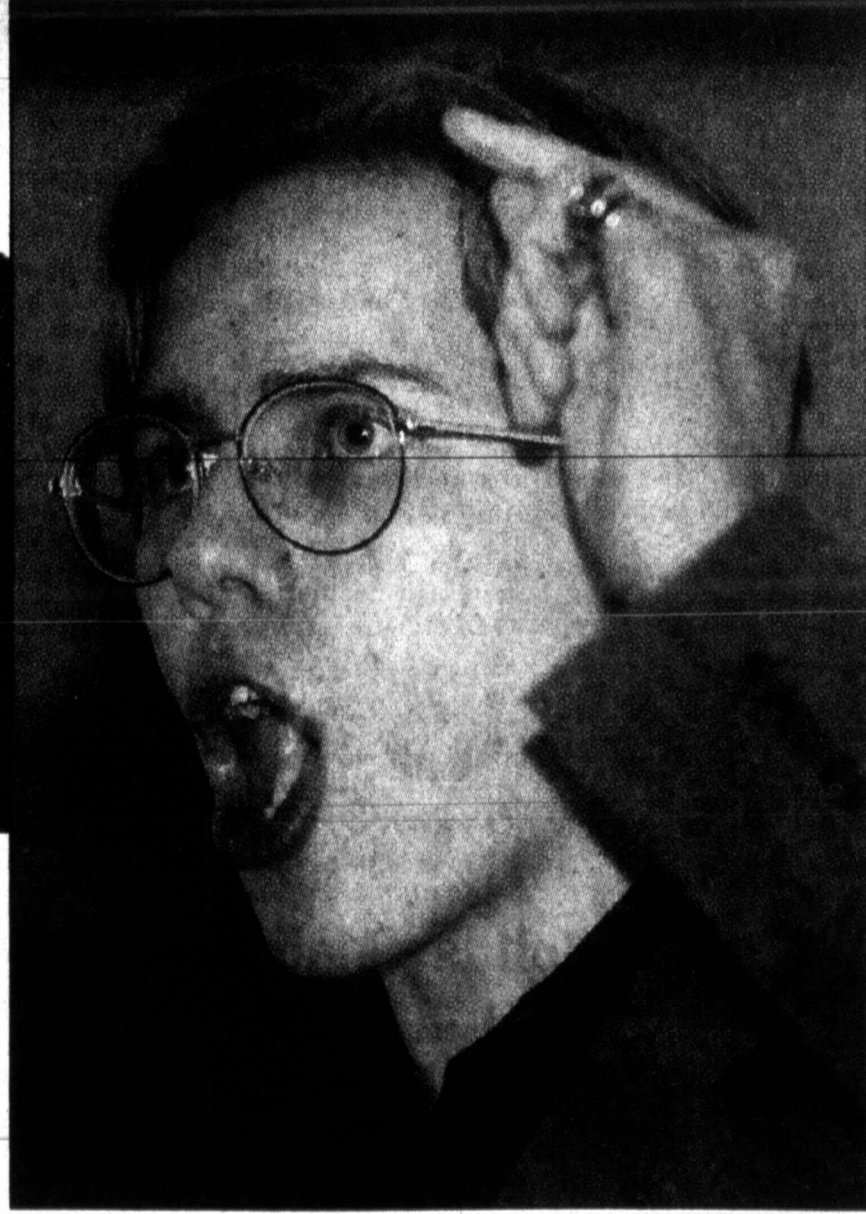

Nearly every Saturday night, the performances have attracted about 35-40 people, some drama and speech students but also adults who have heard about the performances at the Le Cabaret Coffee Club. But even the audience gets a chance to perform. Gantz likes to pull people he doesn't know out of the crowd and have them perform impromptu skits. This gives them a chance to participate in the theatre.

The experimental theatre, held at 9 p.m. every Saturday night, has been spread mainly by word of mouth.

"The kids work hard at getting the word out," he said. "They are the ones getting people here."

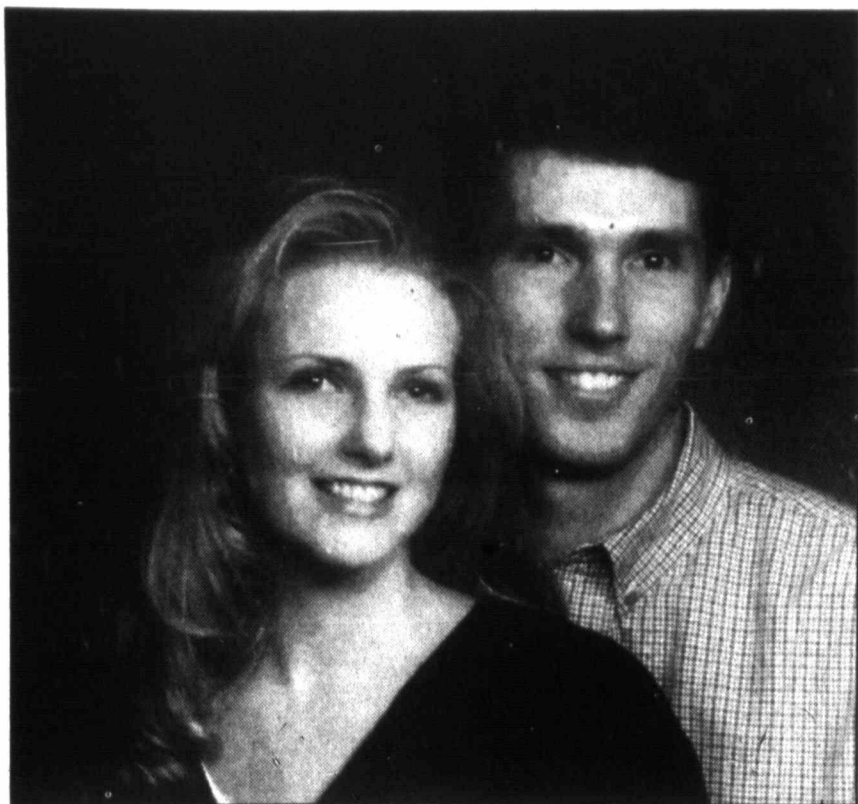

Top: A crowd listens to Matthew Piersall (right) as he performs Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead, a parody of a Shakespearean meaning of life. He combined two different scenes from a large script. Piersall, a PHS senior, plans to attend UIL competition in Dallas.

Photos above left and right: Ben Holman, a PHS senior, performs a scene from the Company of Wayward Saints. Holman did not know until an hour before that he would be performing that night. He acted out dialogue between a priest and a general, roles originally written for two actors.

Left: Two unsuspecting members of the audience were picked by Gantz to perform an impromptu skit in which the cartoon character baby "Marvin" meets the Japanese soldier from "Gilligan's Island." Both have to fix a sink. Other audience members picked the characters.

Desert canyon is rock-shaded paradise

By RICK SMITH
San Angelo Standard-Times

SEMINOLE CANYON, Texas — Sun and sky. Wood, water and rock.

For thousands of years, this sliver of rock-shaded paradise in the Chihuahuan Desert has provided food, shelter and drink for life.

Early tribes first visited the area around 12,000 years ago to hunt now-extinct species of elephant, camel, bison and horse.

Later, after the climate changed and the lush landscape turned drier, harsher, other prehistoric tribes appeared and adapted to the arid landscape.

They lived in the canyons, high up along the walls in areas sheltered by huge rock overhangs. They slept in the rock shelters, built their fires in the rock shelters.

Tips for preventing food borne illnesses during the holidays

As we approach the holiday season, food safety demands our attention. Increases in outbreaks of food borne illnesses across the country have focused in the home. The most common food borne illnesses are caused by bacteria such as E. coli and Salmonella. Ironically these are also the easiest types to prevent.

At least nine million cases of food borne illnesses occur each year, with as many as 9,000 deaths. Most food borne illnesses go unreported, so the exact number is unknown. The cost of these illnesses has been estimated to be between 3.5 and 17 billion dollars a year, including medical care, lost wages, public health investigation, lost business and legal action.

The World Health Organization regards food poisoning as one of the most widespread health problems in the world. The Center for Disease Control estimates that 97% of all food poisoning cases are the result of improper food handling practices in food service areas and kitchens. Of those cases related to improper food handling, 79 percent were from food prepared in commercial or institutional establishments while 21 percent were caused by food prepared in the home.

The World Health Organization data indicate that only a small number of factors are responsible for a large portion of food poisoning episodes everywhere. Common errors include: (1) Prepared food left too long at a temperature that allows bacterial growth; (2) inadequate cooking and reheating; (3) cross-contamination; and (4) infected food handler.

The following suggestions will make kitchens safer and healthier places to prepare foods:

- Preparation - Kitchen utensils, cutting boards and other surfaces can transfer bacteria through cross-contamination. Make sure all surfaces are clean and sanitized before food preparation begins. To sanitize hard, nonporous surfaces, use a solution of one tablespoon liquid bleach and one gallon water.

Homemaker's News By Donna Brauchi prevent juices from leaking and potentially contaminating other food in the refrigerator. It is best to leave meat products in their original wrap (unless torn) to avoid repeated handling, which increases the possibility of contamination.

- Storage - Clean refrigerators help prevent the spread of bacteria to other foods. The use of a disinfecting solution will kill germs, eliminate odors and leave refrigerators smelling fresh. Rare meats and poultry should be securely wrapped to Allow to air dry with no rinsing. For porous surfaces such as wooden cutting boards, use a solution of three tablespoons liquid bleach to one gallon water. Rinse and wipe or air dry.

Wash hands with soap and warm water for at least fifteen seconds before beginning food preparation and after handling any raw meat and poultry products. If you use gloves during food preparation, remember they need to be washed just as often as bare hands.

Cutting fruits and vegetables or other foods on surfaces that have been exposed to uncooked meats may contaminate these foods with illness causing microbes. Soap and water won't kill all of these microbes. Once a surface or kitchen utensil has come in contact with a raw animal product, wash and sanitize to prevent spread of food borne illnesses.

- Dishcloths and Synthetic Sponges: The odor in smelly dishcloths and sponges is caused by bacterial growth. Use a disinfecting solution (given for porous surfaces above) mixed in the sink. Soak dishcloths and sponges for two minutes; rinse and air dry.

- Cooking and Serving Food: Wash hands frequently during meal preparation and before serving food. Cooked foods should be served on clean plates with clean utensils. Do not serve cooked foods on the plates that were in direct contact with raw foods, especially meats.

Marinate meats in the refrigerator, not on the counter, using a glass or plastic container. Never use the leftover marinade for other dishes. Most illness-causing bacteria are active between 400-140 degrees Fahrenheit. Cooking meats to a temperature greater than 140 degrees will kill harmful bacteria. To be safe, make sure red meats are cooked to an internal temperature of 160 degrees, and poultry products are cooked to an internal temperature of 180 degrees.

- Leftovers: Leftovers should be refrigerated or frozen within two hours after cooking. Use shallow, covered containers for storing leftovers. Leave airspace around containers or packages to allow cold air circulation, which will ensure rapid, even cooling.

Questions concerning safety, storage, and preparation can be answered by calling the USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555.

For more information concerning general food safety, contact your Gray County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Simple Acts of Giving Make Life Worth Living

DEAR READERS: It's too late for Valentine's Day and too early for Christmas, but who says you can't give a gift any day of the year? Here are some gifts you can give anytime:

- Smile.
- Give someone a shoulder to lean on.
- Rub a sore back.
- Say "Good morning," even if it isn't.
- Drive within the speed limit.
- Wash the dishes when it's her turn.
- Empty the trash when it's his turn.
- Ignore a rude remark.
- Laugh when the joke's on you.
- Help a friend move.
- Or clean out his garage.
- Make the coffee at the office.
- Bring some cookies to go with it.
- Don't discuss the election with your father-in-law.
- Don't discuss the Super Bowl with your mother-in-law.
- Tell the store manager you like his tomatoes.
- Buy the wine she likes.
- Buy the cheese he likes.
- Forgive an old grudge.
- Tell her she's beautiful.
- Tell him he's wonderful.
- Take the kids to a beach.
- Take the parents to dinner.
- Laugh at an old joke.
- Serve breakfast in bed.

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: I am 30, unmarried and childless. Although I meet many men, I date only those without what I consider the "fatal flaws" of drug use, smoking and divorced with children. I also require that eligible men share (reasonably) my religious, philosophical and political views.

While these requirements have excluded some terrific men from my life, I know myself well and know what will bring too much stress to my marriage. My sister is a stepmother. It is too difficult a role for me. Single motherhood terrifies me. Being clear about what I need in a marriage, and postponing marriage until I find a clearly matched mate, means divorce is less likely for me. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Incidentally, for a year I have dated a professional golfer who has no fatal flaws and far exceeds my expectations. If we married, I suspect I'd be...

DEAR DIVORCE-FREE: I'll cross my fingers for you. A man with no fatal flaws and a low handicap is hard to find.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks so much for publishing my letter about missing library books. I have received copies of the column from all over the country, and interesting letters from other librarians. I'm hopeful that books are being returned nationwide. I know of at least one person who found a library book at a secondhand store, bought it, and returned it to the local public library.

I wondered if I personally would experience any impact from my letter. That wonder ended when I received a plain envelope in the mail with the return address of the Bonney Lake Police Department. Inside, without a letter of explanation, was a book that had been missing from my library since 1989. I had to laugh. Would you believe it... "The Cat in the Hat" came back!

Thanks again for your help, Abby.

P.S. "The Cat in the Hat" just got checked out by an elated first-grader. I love happy endings.

CBS' 'Streets of Laredo'

The Old West with the bark on (Special photo)

James Garner plays retired Texas Ranger Capt. Woodrow Call in Larry McMurtry's Streets of Laredo, which begins airing on CBS tonight. Call befriends a blind young girl (Teresa Garza, played by Vanessa Martinez) in the miniseries sequel to McMurtry's acclaimed Lonesome Dove.

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Viewers who walk CBS' Streets of Laredo tonight expecting a sequel to the epic Western Lonesome Dove will be disappointed — for about 30 seconds.

It turns out that Streets of Laredo is a richer, more intimate and detailed portrait of the Old West and its Old Westeners.

Make no mistake: The 1989 miniseries, also an adaptation of a Larry McMurtry novel, was an Event. It was vast, superb television form and gave third-place CBS a much-needed boost.

It had Robert Duvall and Tommy Lee Jones playing a couple of trailworn Texas Rangers herding skinny longhorns and young cowboys from Texas to Montana, encountering love, murder, rape and renegades all along the way.

It was a transforming journey, just like Huck Finn's trip down the Mississippi, and just as peopled with eccentrics, no-accounts, whores, grifters, dime-novel gunmen, killers and their victims.

Lots and lots of victims.
Streets of Laredo is faithful to McMurtry's vision of the West. No surprise, since he and partner Diana Ossana wrote the screenplay from his novel. They painted 'Streets of Laredo on a smaller canvas.

Instead of a 3,000-mile cattle drive, Streets of Laredo is about a doomed manhunt in Mexico that takes just a few weeks. It ends at two small, stone-stacked graves under that huge, naked sky.

James Garner plays the iron-hearted ex-Ranger Capt. Woodrow Call, still as cranky as a rusty old hinge. He takes up the hunt for boyish train bandit Joey Garza (Alexis Cruz), a fair-haired, blue-eyed, stone-cold mass killer.

"He was 9 when his stepfather sold him to the Apaches," somebody says. "Three years later he escaped. He outran the Apaches. And they couldn't track him." Whew. Tough kid.

Garza has been robbing trains pretty much just to kill people. A bad lad, he's a big disappointment to his devoted mother, Maria (Sonia Braga), who also must care for her blind, 9-year-old daughter and a simple-minded son.

Pay particular attention to the relationship of mother Maria and son Joey. See how he teases and tortures his siblings. See how mother forgives, seeks and saves him. It's a truly twisted subplot, hauntingly portrayed.

Call enlists his longtime corporal, Pea Eye Parker (Sam Shepard), in the hunt. Pea Eye's wife is Lorena (Sissy Spacek), the wistful whore who quit the life in Lonesome Dove. She is a school-teacher and mother of five.

After Pea Eye reluctantly joins the hunt in Mexico, Lorena realizes that she must go after him and bring him home.

That's the story in a nutshell. There is no transforming journey over water. Instead, a succession of beautifully realized characters propel the story. And what characters!

Garner reprises Capt. Call's infamous rage. "He's got that ... stiff look," a nervous deputy gulps only moments before Call is provoked beyond reason by an unyielding adversary. With an economy of brute force, Call virtually unbolts his foe. It's only then that a panicked Pea Eye who grapples with his boss, pleading, "He's subdued, captain! He's subdued!"

George Carlin plays a tough old geezer (yet another fine dramatic performance by the comedian) who tells Call his manhunt is "the talk of the whole West." Replies Call: "I wish the West would keep its mouth shut."

Charles Martin Smith does his fish-out-of-water act as a Brooklyn accountant haunted by nightmarish visions of the West, who nevertheless accompanies Call on the manhunt.

Randy Quaid is brilliant and unsettling as the laconic killer John Wesley Hardin. A glittering sociopath who'd shoot you out of annoyance, Quaid's Hardin is an existentially desperate man, yearning for death, yet incapable of suicide.

Wes Studi, freed from Indian Psycho typecasting, does a sublime turn as the loquacious Indian tracker Famous Shoes, whose medicine won't let him ride horses. A realist, eminently well-adjusted and intellectually curious, Famous Shoes is a conversationalist who wants to learn how to read.

And Kevin Conway, who played a vile, snaggle-toothed gunman in Sharon Stone's The Quick and the Dead, plays the vile, snaggle-toothed, dead-eye psycho Mox Mox, who has a predilection for burning people alive.

Tonight's three-hour episode introduces the characters, establishes their relationships and sets the story in motion. Tuesday's two-hour finale ties up the loose ends, some as violently and abruptly as Call's rage.

It's only when you reach the end that you will realize that there was, in fact, a transforming journey that unites the events in Streets of Laredo.

It's the marriage of Pea Eye and Lorena, a husband and wife whose love has entwined their lives and transformed them into something much more than just an old cowboy and an ex-whore.

Minding your own Business

By Don Taylor

Just H.A.M it up ...

Most of you know by now that I'm an old farm boy from way back. Breakfast is my favorite meal, and I can eat it three times a day.

So when I was in Abilene a few weeks ago, hungry for a good country dinner, I decided to opt for a double Grand Slam breakfast. For those of you who count calories and monitor cholesterol by the milligram, a double Grand Slam is four eggs, four sausage links, four strips of crisp bacon and four pancakes with a cup and a half of syrup. It covers all your basic food groups: fat, salt, sugar and lard.

The restaurant was busy and the young man who attended my table was perspiring freely. He said his name was Aaron and he served me efficiently.

During the few minutes it took to fix my order, I watched Aaron closely. He was a stocky young man and I guessed him to be about 20 years of age. I'd also guess that he might be a student at Abilene Christian University, which was nearby. In addition, I would speculate that he might be putting himself through school, and perhaps has a family to support.

How could I deduct all that from just watching him work? Well, I believe that what we do says a lot about who we are. Aaron is a serious H.A.M. kind of guy.

Three success keys

I'd be willing to bet that someday Aaron will be successful. I think he'll own his own business or lead a successful firm. I believe he is already discovering some of the key elements for success. I call these the H.A.M. factors: Hustle, Attitude and Motivation.

Aaron was hustling. Tables were filling up quickly, and there was work to be done. He hurried from table to table, delivering food, taking orders and keeping his customers well served. His pace was quick, and he didn't waste many trips.

One of my old bosses said his favorite thing was hustle. I was a mechanic at that time and he said he wanted to hear my ratchet "sing." He wanted me to move the wrench so quickly that you couldn't hear the individual clicks. If he sent us to run after parts, he expected us to run. I found out later that all bosses like hustle. Whether you're a ball player or a baker, hustle will hurry up your success.

The second success factor is attitude. Our attitude is the state of mind with which we approach any given situation. Our attitude controls our relationships, our happiness and our achievements. However, we control our attitude.

Henry Ford said, "Whether you think you can or think you cannot, you're right." Our success in life is not the problems we face, but how we face them. Our success in business is not what our competitors do, but how we react to them. Zig Ziglar said, "Your attitude determines your altitude."

The third H.A.M. factor is motivation. Webster defines motivation as "reasons or incentives that result in desirable actions." We all would do well to examine our motives from time to time. Why do we want success? Do our reasons justify our actions?

Our motivation must be honest and sincere for our success to result in happiness. When we are motivated by the desire to help others, to improve ourselves, to profit fairly and to provide honest value to others, our success will also bring personal fulfillment and joy. So H.A.M it up. The world can use a few more people who have a good attitude, are motivated to help others and who know how to hustle.

Chamber Communique

The Pampa Police Department and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce will hold a FORGERY SEMINAR to alert local merchants and bank employees to the precautions and procedures involved with the forgery problem that has increased considerably in Pampa.

Detective Terry D. Young will be conducting the seminar, and Crime Prevention Officer Corporal Donny Brown will present a briefing on shoplifting.

This community service seminar will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 14, at 7 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard. The public is cordially invited.

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Ministerial Alliance recently closed their funding efforts in assisting families affected by the June 8th tornado.

The Pampa Area Disaster Relief Fund, established by Phillips Petroleum and Hoechst Celanese, had many area businesses and individuals who generously donated $26,237.68, which assisted 76 families whose homes were damaged or destroyed during the tornado.

All the families were so grateful and appreciative for the financial help they received. Thank you!

API to hold meeting Thursday in Pampa

The November regular meeting of the Panhandle Chapter of the API will be held at the Pampa Country Club on Thursday, Nov. 16.

Lyle Lehman, who is stimulation specialist with C.W. Kelly, will present a program titled "A New Low Risk Prospecting Method."

His presentation involves the use of stimulation models to evaluate wells and properties.

A door prize will be donated by Dunlap Industrial of Pampa. A turkey and dressing dinner will be served for $10 per person. Attendees are encouraged to bring their ladies to this meeting. API memberships are available to all interested parties at the door for $7. Social half-hour begins at 6:30 p.m. and the meal will be served at 7 p.m.

SBA study shows small businesses endure large burden of regulations

WASHINGTON - Despite progress to reduce regulatory burdens on small businesses, the costs of regulation, paperwork and tax compliance continue to fall disproportionately on small firms with fewer than 500 employees, according to a new study prepared by the U.S. Small Business Administration's Office of Advocacy.

The study, "The Changing Burden of Regulation, Paperwork and Tax Compliance on Small Business," reveals among its major findings that the small business regulatory burden is 1.5 times that of large businesses.

"Small businesses bear 63 percent of the total regulatory burden while accounting for approximately 50 percent of employment and sales," according to Jere W. Glover, the SBA's chief counsel for advocacy. "What becomes obvious from analyzing this study is that small businesses - the very engine powering the American economy today - are being unfairly burdened by regulations."

Glover said that the heavier regulatory load carried by small business acts as a drag on a powerful economic engine. "If the economy is going to put the pedal to the metal, so to speak, then something more must be done to release the brake that regulation is imposing on small business."

The study also shows that such an inequitable allocation of regulatory costs is not good public policy and that, to help remedy this, public policymakers need to strengthen the Regulatory Flexibility Act to provide judicial review for small firms.

The Office of Advocacy research analyzes a number of other studies, especially one by Thomas Hopkins of the Rochester Institute of Technology that attempts to determine the total cost of regulation and to allocate those costs to business and industry by size. The Advocacy study takes the total cost of regulation, allocates it by size and industry and compares the cost per employee in large businesses with the cost per employee in small businesses.

Advocacy's chief counsel presented some of the key findings discovered in the study:

- In the Hopkins study, the average cost of regulation per employee in firms with fewer than 20 employees is $5,532; in firms with 20-499 employees, $5,298; and $2,979 in firms with more than 500 employees.

- According to the Hopkins study, such disparities mean that the regulatory cost per employee for the smallest firms is 1.86 times that for the largest companies.

- While small businesses account for approximately 50 percent of employment as well as about 50 percent of gross domestic product, small firm entrepreneurs bear 63 percent of the regulatory burden on all businesses.

- Of these regulatory burdens, the most significant to small firms are tax- and payroll-related paperwork. This paperwork burden is especially regressive in that it falls much more heavily on the small business person.

The results of the Advocacy study were released Oct. 31 at a joint hearing of the Senate and House Small Business Committees.

Ronald Lucero

Wal-Mart names new manager at its Pampa store

Ronald Lucero has been named new store manager for the Pampa Wal-Mart.

Lucero recently relocated to the Pampa area from Mexicali, Mexico, where he also served as Wal-Mart store manager.

He has been associated with the company since April 1983, and since that time has served as an hourly associate, assistant manager and most recently as store manager. Before joining Wal-Mart stores, he was associated with Jerry's Foods of Moore, Okla., where he served as an assistant manager.

The Pampa Wal-Mart store opened in July 1984, and is one of 236 Wal-Mart stores in the state. The store employs approximately 200 associates.

Lucero resides in Pampa with his wife Gloria and their two children Antonio and Emilio.

Desk & Derrick to meet Tuesday

The Desk and Derrick Club of Pampa will have its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 14, at the Pampa Country Club.

Speaker for the evening will be Rey Cardenas, marketing representative for the Pampa District of Southwestern Public Service. Topic of his presentation will be "SPS and the Environment."

Cardenas began his career with SPS 20 years ago as a meter reader in Amarillo. He was soon promoted to customer service supervisor and later became the credit manager in Amarillo. In November of 1989, he was promoted to his present position.

He has an associate of arts degree in business from Amarillo College and has attended many training courses concerning electric heating and air conditioning applications.

Social time will begin at 6:30 p.m., with the meal and meeting beginning at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend. Reservations can be made by contacting Esther McAdoo at 665-9345 or 665-3404.

SPE to host Deep Granite Wash Forum

The Panhandle Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE) will be hosting a Deep Granite Wash Forum on Tuesday, Nov. 14, at the Pampa Country Club.

A "Happy Hour" will begin at 5:30 p.m., with dinner at 6:30 p.m. and the meeting at 7:15 p.m.

A panel of experts will present information about the Deep Granite Wash formation in the Texas Panhandle, located east of Pampa in Roberts, Wheeler and Hemphill counties in the Panhandle on into Oklahoma.

The panel will be Bob Flook of Amarillo, senior geologist with Midgard Energy Co.; Dob Hudson of Pampa, president of Leonard Hudson Drilling; and John Jennings of Pampa, senior technical advisor for Halliburton Energy Services.

Flook has been responsible for Midgard's recent success in finding and exploiting Granite Wash properties in Roberts, Hemphill and Wheeler counties. Hudson is recognized as the area leader in drilling the Deep Granite Wash in both turnkey and day work basis. Jennings has been instrumental in designing, advising and performing in real time numerous Deep Granite Wash frac treatments that have become viewed as the standard in completion technology.

Four principle issues are to be covered at the SPE forum: geology of the Deep Granite Wash formation and methods for determining development trends; log analysis of typical Granite Wash log signatures and some pitfalls and false water saturation trends; drilling techniques, methods that have been proven to save the operator money; and stimulation, what technique is the most cost effective in the Deep Granite Wash.

Exploring, developing, drilling and completing the Deep Granite Wash formation has accounted for nine percent of completions and production in Railroad Commission District 10 since 1990.

Registration for the forum is $20 per person, and reservations are required. Deadline for mail-in registration is past, but late registrations may be obtained by calling Lyle Lehman, forum coordinator, at (806) 898-0538, or Mary Endacott, program chairman, at (806) 275-3561.

Kroger Co. seeks customers on Internet

CINCINNATI (AP) - Kroger Co., the nation's largest supermarket operator, said it will start selling groceries over the Internet.

Beginning Tuesday, customers in the Columbus area will be able to shop for more than 7,000 items - including olives, pudding, fish and prescriptions - by visiting the Columbus division's Internet site on the World Wide Web.

Cincinnati-based Kroger said it may expand the service to its other supermarket divisions and offer more products if customers show interest.

It will be Kroger's first venture on the Internet, the global computer network, but not its first with computers. In Dallas, Kroger has been delivering orders taken over the Shoppers Express service on America Online since April 1994.

Many products and services are already available on the Internet, but Kroger said this will be the first time users may buy a full line of grocery items.

Internet orders will be assembled at selected Kroger stores in Columbus, then delivered. Customers will be charged $10 for orders up to $100 and 10 percent of the bill for orders more than $100, payable on delivery.

Customers may phone in the order or send it electronically or by fax. Kroger will supplement the "electronic grocery aisles" with a printed catalog.

Web users also may use the Kroger site to view product information and advertisements, send comments to Kroger or read company news releases and financial data.

There are still kinks: There is no aisle labeled "bread," and the fresh fish selection is limited to six items, The Cincinnati Enquirer reported Thursday.

Kroger's Web site was developed with Smart-Food Consortium, a Cambridge, Mass.-based company.

The Internet address for the Web site is <http://www.food-coop.com>.

Phone carrier OK'd to use fiber system for business services

AUSTIN (AP) - A Nebraska-based telephone company has been cleared to offer more services to its business customers in Dallas and Houston.

The Public Utilities Commission approved an application from Metropolitan Fiber System Communications Co to expand its services. The Omaha company has used its fiber optic systems in Houston and Dallas to connect large businesses to their long distance carriers.

Up to now, it has been restricted from using its systems to provide full local service. The company in October was approved to provide local service by purchasing and reselling service from primary providers in the cities, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

and GTE Southwest Inc.

With PUC approval, the company now can use its own fiber system to provide local service instead of relying on reselling other service.

"Competition will directly benefit all telecommunications customers by offering an alternative service provider," said Royce Holland, president of MFS.

A spokeswoman for the company said it also could provide local services to residential customers, but has chosen to focus on business. She also said MFS will continue to resell other service, but will expand its capacity by using its fiber optic system.

The company serves about 30,000 business customers nationwide.

Man enjoys Texas-sized storm cellar

By RICK SMITH
San Angelo Standard-Times

WINTERS, Texas (AP) — Johnny Hobbs' $13 million home had everything: plenty of room, a constant 72-degree temperature, sound-proofing, indoor swimming pool, the ability to withstand any disaster save for a direct hit by a nuclear bomb.

It had everything, that is, except a view. "No windows down here," Hobbs said, leading the way down several sets of stairs into an abandoned nuclear missile silo near Winters.

Hobbs bought the missile silo about 15 years ago with the idea of making his home under the ground.

"It's good and solid. Cool in the summer and warm in the winter," Hobbs said, shouldering open one of four enormous blast doors that the Air Force used to protect the silo's intercontinental ballistic missile.

"But I got to be where I can see the sunshine."

For three months, Hobbs, his wife and three children lived in a 40-foot-diameter round underground room that the silo's military crew used for living quarters.

"It gets to you, not being able to look out," Hobbs said, thumping one of the shelter's 12-foot-thick concrete walls.

After three months, the family moved up and out, into a ranch-style brick home that Hobbs built just above the former missile site. Now, the silo's above-ground, bunker-like entrance butts up against his home. Open a living room door, and stairs lead down into the Texas-size basement.

The silo was one of 12 Atlas missile sites that ringed Abilene's

Dyess Air Force Base during the height of the Cold War. Then, in November 1964, barely two years after they became operational, all 12 were declared obsolete. They were disbanded and replaced by newer, deadlier weapons situated elsewhere.

Government contractors stripped the silo's equipment, and the empty hull remained, an inviting target for a generation of adventure-seeking vandals.

Hobbs learned about the missile silos almost 20 years ago, and immediately wanted one.

"It sounded like a good place to live," he said. He contacted an Abilene real estate company and they found him an available missile site, complete with a two-story, doughnut-shaped crew quarters and command center, escape hatch, assorted passageways and tunnels and a 180-foot-deep, 50-foot-diameter shaft that once contained a nuclear-tipped missile.

Over the years Hobbs put his stamp on the underground "fixer-upper," building railings for the stairs, reconnecting the electric lights and even installing a wood-burning stove in the living quarters.

But the silo still bears a military-issue look: forbidding gray metal flooring; bare concrete walls with stenciled warnings that crew members must "ensure blast doors are full closed."

And Hobbs left the site's reason for being — the 180-foot-deep silo — untouched.

"I don't even like to go back here," he said, shining a flashlight down a pitch-black tunnel that leads to the silo.

"Spooky, ain't it?" Hobbs asked, his voice endlessly echoing. He pointed a flashlight beam into the cavernous hole, which has a 60-foot-deep pool of water at its bottom.

"What do you do with something like that?" Even after 15 years of missile silo ownership, Hobbs still isn't quite sure what to do with his government surplus bargain.

Other silo owners have used theirs for everything from garbage dumps to storage rooms, he said.

Hobbs' children, when they were younger and lived at home, used the underground world for a playground, holding dances, parties and Halloween haunted houses in the passageways, rooms and tunnels.

Hobbs and his wife raise birds, and he said he plans to build aviaries for the birds in the underground rooms.

One thing he doesn't plan to do is offer guided tours.

Over the years, curious visitors have "pestered me to death," he said, wanting to see the silo.

Now, Hobbs has declared it off-limits to outsiders. But neighbors have an open invitation to seek refuge in the shelter in the spring, when fierce storms rake across West Texas.

"We go down there four or five times a year in bad weather," he said. "You could have a tornado up above and not even hear it down there."

The irony of owning an empty, $13 million basement isn't lost on Hobbs.

"It cost $13 million just for the concrete, and it was obsolete before it was finished," he said.

Ag briefs

In letters to congressmen, Texas Cattle Feeders Association President Randall (Cuppy) Graham asked for support of H.R. 2528, the Animal Drug Availability Act of 1995.

This proposed legislation is important to cattle feeders for the following reasons," Graham said. The bill will streamline the current animal drug approval process and increase the availability of new animal health products and the legislation preserves current requirements that any animal drug be safe for use in food production and the treated animal.

The bill also allows for flexibility in determining the type and number of efficacy trials necessary," he said.

Fed cattle prices reached $68 last week for the first time since May 2.

One feedyard manager said $68 looks a lot better going up than it did coming down, according to Burt Rutherford with the Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

"Seasonal tightening of supplies and a continued strong export demand continues to support prices," said TCF Market Director Jim Gill. He also said that hide and offal prices are now helping the market.

"By-product values started the year near $10, dropped to $8.18 by Sept. 27 but have been firming since then," Gill said. "Thursday's [Nov. 2] close at $8.59 is a 41 cent increase in the past few weeks and it should continue to rise for the rest of 1995 if it follows seasonal patterns."

The Food Safety and Inspection Service at the U.S. Department of Agriculture will play a leading role in ensuring food safety, according to a high ranking government official.

According to Michael Taylor, acting undersecretary for food safety at USDA and administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), the agency will play a leading role in developing constructive collaboration among industry, government and science.

Speaking recently at the annual meeting of the U.S. Animal Health Association, Taylor emphasized that FSIS sees itself in a leadership role, guiding research and other activities toward the greatest public health risks.

"The private sector must take the primary responsibility for developing and implementing improved food safety practices at the farm level," he said.

The Texas Beef Council (TBC) has announced program areas for fiscal year 1996 designed to encourage beef consumption, according to Bob Nunley, TBC chairman.

TBC's retail programs will focus on recipe dissemination and retail featuring of specific beef cuts. Research indicates that from 40 percent to 60 percent of all retail beef is sold on advertised price specials.

In the food service area, TBC will continue its restaurant promotions with companies like Wendy's and K-BOB'S, as well as provide tonnage incentives to distributors.

In the export arena, TBC will continue to promote the safety and wholesomeness of U.S. beef with foreign food writers and trade teams.

The transition executive committee of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) has released the new logo for the organization.

"The prominence of the word beef in the logo reflects the thrust of the industry's long range plan," said John Lacey, co-chairman of the transition executive committee. "As indicated in the plan's vision statement and objectives, cattlemen are determined to make beef more competitive and to increase beef's share of the market for meat."

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

WHEAT - (BULL)

OUTLOOK: A bull constantly needs to be fed. In other words, traders need a steady diet of bullish news or they get restless.

Funds and speculators can sell wheat with a phone call and in seconds put the money somewhere else - copper, crude oil or bonds. There's been a lot of this type of selling recently in the wheat pits due to a lack of new or dramatic export news. As a result, the market's faded a dime or so from the highs.

However, in retrospect it's acted quite well. Don't forget, it's rallied 80 cents/bushel in just the past three months. A small correction is healthy in the long run since it washes out the weaker players. There's support in wheat from end users and commercial interests on even minor breaks since the backdrop of this market is extremely tight supplies globally.

What happens when there's a demand surprise? Prices could gain in a day what they lost over two weeks. It's still my belief Russia, the missing link, will be in the market for a major purchase. Only the timing's uncertain in my mind. With the smallest crop in 30 years, it's just a matter of time. Look to buy the breaks.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: You still own the December Chicago 430 calls in the 23 to 25 cent range with large open profits. Hold [aren't you glad you did this?]. We're also looking to hedge 25 percent of anticipated new crop production using the July 420 puts. Buy them under 19 cents to assure $4 wheat on at least a portion of your crop.

Traders: We previously purchased the December Minneapolis wheat in the $4.57-467 1/2 range. The stop's now at 4.89. Hold.

CORN - (BULL)

OUTLOOK: This market continues to act well prior to the Nov. 9 crop report, which had not been released at the time of this writing. The crop seems to be declining, not growing this year and it's very possibly the report will hold a bullish surprise.

There are still some harvest problems, in Nebraska particularly, and this market can ill afford to lose any more production. Meanwhile, corn prices over $3.30/bushel, the highest prices in seven years, don't appear to be slowing export activity. It's brisk. Farmer selling isn't really picking up either as basis levels continue to firm.

The higher we go, the closer we get to the top, but as of this writing I don't see signs of the top yet.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: If you followed our recent advice, you sold your cash corn and replaced with "paper corn" in the form of at the money [last week the 330] March call options. These cost you about 10 to 12 cents/bushel, which is now your maximum downside risk.

Your risk in cash corn cannot be predetermined. The storage and interest costs saved by selling your corn go a long way towards paying for these options. You still own the right to buy corn in the futures market and therefore benefit from any additional price gains. Plus now you've predetermined your risk and have the cash upfront to use and pay bills.

Traders: We previously accepted a gross profit $1750/contract in the futures market stand still own the December 320 calls which are showing a paper profit at this writing. Hold through the crop report.

CATTLE - (BULL)

OUTLOOK: Well, I guess the packers were really making, not losing money the last few weeks [as some maintained]. The sharply lower wholesale beef prices seen week before last were, I believe, a ploy to shake out cattle supplies. The packers know they'll be declining over the coming few months.

Now beef prices are rising again, the packers are paying at least $2 higher than a week before, and IBP stock just hit an all time record high. Since the "market's always right," they must be making money. I still look for prices to rise above $70/hundredweight before year end.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: Cattle feeders own the December 66 cattle put options at under 50 cents. This should assure a modest profit for most operators and more importantly leave upside potential wide open to benefit from projected higher prices to come.

Cow/calf operators: Feeder prices appear extremely oversold, even with high feed costs. Therefore, hedging strategies do not appear warranted right now.

Traders: Based on a previous recommendation, you own the following spread: Long February and Short August cattle on a spread at under 500. Risk 100 points [$400 each] for a profit objective of 300 points [$1200 minus fees].

We're also still looking to buy February cattle outright anywhere under 67. Risk to a close under 66 for an eventual objective above 70.

National Farm-City Week set for Nov. 17-23

WACO - For forty years, the annual National Farm-City Week ending on Thanksgiving Day has served as a reminder of the strong interdependency between farmers and their city neighbors.

Bob Stallman of Columbus, a rice farmer and president of Texas Farm Bureau, the state's largest agricultural organization with membership approaching 300,000, looks forward to this year's observance, Nov. 17-23, as a time to reflect on mutual blessings and to strengthen rural and urban ties.

"It's in everyone's best interest for our farms and cities to remain strong and healthy. Neither farm nor city can exist in isolation. We definitely need one another," Stallman insists.

Since its founding by Kiwanis International in 1955, the on-going theme of the week long celebration has been "Partners in Progress." That partnership, says Stallman, is more vital than ever with the challenges and opportunities facing Americans entering the 21st century.

U.S. farmers and ranchers that initiate and care for the abundance consumers enjoy rely on purchased inputs, research, transportation, processing, advertising and other services. Thus, the farm-city link is essential to the economies of rural and urban communities in Texas and the nation, Stallman points out.

"With an abundance of products on our shelves and an array of jobs related to agriculture, consumers make an agriculture connection each and every day," notes the TFB leader, adding that agriculture remains an important cultural thread in the fabric of American society.

The upcoming National Farm-City Week, he suggests, gives people from all walks of life a chance to cultivate a greater understanding of their respective roles.

"With that understanding comes a deeper appreciation for this hand-in-hand relationship that finds its roots in the land," says Stallman.

Cotton farmers stop motion on boll weevil fees

PLAINVIEW (AP) - Ten cotton farmers have backed off an attempt to prevent the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation from charging them fees this year.

The farmers last week withdrew their motion for an injunction against the state's pesticide-spraying program.

Attorney Rudd Owen said his clients agreed to pay their assessments - about $19,000 - under protest and then seek a refund.

Owen said the case is moving toward an April 1 trial date.

The farmers filed a lawsuit Sept. 7 challenging the constitutionality of the eradication foundation, which was formed to wipe out the boll weevil in a zone-by-zone blitz of Texas cotton fields. Plaintiffs also question the validity of the referendum that created the South Plains zone.

Opponents of the eradication program say it unfairly makes farmers pay for spraying of areas not yet infested with the boll weevil. Supporters say all parts of the state need to join together against the pesky insect.

But backlash has been mounting. A farmer in Runnels County, near San Angelo, awaits trial for shooting July 4 at an eradication employee who had to be treated for glass in her eye. The farmer was indicted on charges of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and deadly conduct.

Teachers order kits on beef diet

More than 100,000 sets of materials, developed by the National Live Stock and Meat Board, have been ordered by teachers for use in preschool and grades K through 12 during the past year.

In all, eight different education kits are offered, all designed to help kids and their teachers understand the importance of eating a healthy diet that includes beef.

On average, 84 percent of the teachers who use the material give beef and the beef industry a positive rating.

More than 99 percent agreed with the statement, "In moderation, lean meat can be part of a healthy diet," according to an NLSMB spokesman.

Texans don't want to open wallets to help solve state's money woes

By STEVE RAY and ANNA M. TINSLEY Harte-Hanks Texas Poll Syndicate Copyright 1995 Harte-Hanks Communications Inc.

If it takes taxes to solve the state's money woes, Texans don't want it to hit them in their own pocketbooks.

Two-thirds of Texans would rather cut spending to balance the budget, according to The Harte-Hanks Texas Poll.

But if that doesn't work, they'd support personal income taxes for folks making more than $100,000 a year and more taxes on corporations.

"What everyone is saying is, 'Don't tax me,'" said Ray Perryman, an economist and resident at the Cox School of Business at Southern Methodist University. "It's a typical response: 'Less government is better, and if the government is going to be near, at least get it away from me.'"

Reform of state and federal tax structures have become big issues in Texas and across the country during recent months.

Gov. George W. Bush has initiated a study on property tax reform which Bush has promised will not result in a state income tax.

That study comes at a time when lawmakers are concerned about public education funding and federal block grants that will lower the amount of money coming into Texas to help fund human service needs like Medicare and Medicaid.

In Congress, leaders including House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas have pushed for replacing the federal tax structure with a flat tax of about 17 percent.

A majority of Texans — 55 percent — would support that proposal, according to the poll.

But when it comes to the state budget, 66 percent of Texans, up from 40 percent in 1985, believe that officials should cut spending to balance any fiscal problems that may arise. Another 24 percent believe officials should reduce spending — and raise taxes. Only 3 percent agree with only raising taxes.

If more revenue is needed, 57 percent say Texans earning more than $100,000 should be taxed and 54 percent think corporations should have taxes increased.

Other ways Texans approve of raising money including raising sales taxes, 39 percent; raising gasoline taxes, 24 percent; initiating state personal income taxes, 18 percent; and increasing property taxes, 13 percent.

Joseph M. Dodge II, a professor of law at the University of Texas who specializes in tax policy, said if Texans have to raise taxes they should look at extending sales tax to services.

"If you are going to have a sales tax ... I can't think of any reason services should be exempt," Dodge said. "If sales taxes in Texas were below 5 percent, people would probably be more in favor of raising that. But when the sales taxes get closer to see it as a real tax, not just a little nuisance ... especially when they buy big ticket items."

In a recent speech to the Texas Association of Taxpayers, Bush said he favors taxes based on consumption rather than on income and savings.

Ideas being considered by Bush's tax reform task force include expanded sales taxes, a gross receipts tax on business, increasing corporate franchise taxes and a value added tax. A value added tax is an indirect sales tax on products and services on different stages of production or distribution based on the value added at that stage.

"People are against taxes that hit them and for taxes that hit someone else," said state Rep. Rob Junell, a San Angelo Democrat who heads the House Appropriations Committee. "Trying to develop a rational tax policy fair to everybody is hard to do."

The study is also designed to find ways to replace the $9.1 billion in local property taxes spent every year on schools in Texas. The system of financing education has come under criticism as unfair to the state's property owners.

"People who own houses are getting a disproportionate tax hit," said state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "They are paying other taxes and getting hit again on this. We need to get tax-smart, not tax-emotional."

Montford said the state's $79.9 billion budget — an increase of 6.2 percent from the last budget — has been pared down to almost bare necessities.

Junell said if the state doesn't voluntarily address the property tax issue, they may later be forced to.

"Reliance on property taxes — particularly for funding schools — has got to be addressed," Junell said. "If not, I think there will be a court suit, or a crisis, that will ... require us to address it at some point in the future."

Two major studies of the state's tax system have been conducted in the past decade. Neither has produced much change, possibly because legislators fear the possibility of a state income tax.

Fifty percent of Texans oppose having an income tax in Texas even if property taxes were reduced by the same amount; 40 percent would favor such a move and 10 percent don't know.

Bush has said a personal income tax is not an option.

"If property taxes are a significant problem in people's minds, then that will be reflected (in the Legislature)," Bush said. "A personal income tax is not on the table. I am opposed to it, and believe it is unacceptable to the people of Texas."

The poll, conducted Oct. 12-23, has a margin error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The Office of Survey Research at the University of Texas surveyed 1,010 adult Texans for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc.

Texans also favored federal tax reform with 55 percent saying they strongly approve or somewhat approve of a flat tax of about 17 percent to replace the current federal tax structure.

"Texans agree that it's time to scrap the current tax code and replace it with a simple, fair, flat tax that treats everybody the same while leading to economic growth and higher wages," said Armey, who has sponsored flat tax legislation.

Others warned that a flat tax may not be as good as it sounds.

"The 17 percent is meaningless," Dodge said. "You don't know the other side of the equation. Few think that 17 percent would fund the government at a level that could even come close to balancing the budget, even with a lot of spending cuts."

Perryman, the SMU economist, said it was not surprising that a lot of people would support a flat tax in principle.

"The current tax structure is intrusive and complex," he said. "It's an idea that has got a lot of appeal. If it was structured properly, it could be fair."

"But if you actually came to do it and people realized their deductions were gone, it would probably complicate it and make it not a true flat tax."

Cow gives birth to ninth set of twins

By MARTY SABOTA San Antonio Express-News

Simpson would say, it was Cowabunga!

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lois and Arnold Bredewater are in steer heaven since their cow Bessie delivered her ninth set of twins.

"When she had two sets of twins, we thought, 'This is neat,'" said Mrs. Bredewater, 62. "And then she had three. And then she had four."

Mom and calves, who made their appearance in the first weekend of November at the Bredewater Ranch in Guadalupe County, seemed oblivious to the moo-haha they've caused.

"Pretty soon, people were gambling on it."

They shied away from reporter and photographer, although Bredewater said the tan, 1,400-pound critter is gentle "except when strangers are around. She'll eat range cubes (vegetarian protein supplements) out of my hand."

According to San Antonio Livestock Exhibition chair professor Bill Turner, about 1 of every 200 births is twins. Once a cow has twins, odds are it will have more.

But when the twins are different genders, the female calf usually is sterile. Eight of Bessie's nine sets have been a heifer and a bull calf, so they were destined from birth for the butcher.

Turner said another problem is the twins' mother often can't make enough milk. In Bessie's case, that has not been a problem, Mrs. Bredewater said as she watched the threesome cavort in a pen.

"She's a good mama," the smiling rancher's wife said. Bessie, it seems, is just following in the family tradition. Her owner, a retired Air Force colonel, is an identical twin. And the Bredewater boys married twins.

Bredewater has been raising cattle since his retirement from Randolph Air Force Base in 1969. Except for Bessie, his herd, which once averaged 100 head but now stands at 20, has produced only two other sets of twins.

"The rancher has no scrapbook of Bessie's accomplishments, since he never expected the twins streak to continue."

"Each year I'd thought she's never going to have another set and then sure enough," said the spry, 78-year-old rancher. "If we'd have had any idea, we'd have taken movies."

Teen sentenced to 14 years in child killings

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A young girl convicted of capital murder for smothering two young children in her care was sentenced Friday to a 14-year term.

Ms. Dalton will be turned over to the Texas Youth Commission, which will likely place her in its highest-security state school for capital offenders' rehabilitation.

Victoria Dalton, 13, wept when her punishment was announced in State District Judge Carmen Kelsey's court.

She will face another hearing when she turns 18 to hear recommendations from the TYC, attorneys and others on whether to transfer her to state prison or release her.

It took jurors five days to decide the fate of Ms. Dalton, who was convicted of suffocating 5-month-old Timothy Gutierrez and his 2-year-old sister, Renee Gutierrez, as she was watching them.

Jurors, sequestered at a hotel Monday night after they had been unable to unanimously determine the girl's fate, had a range of sentencing options from probation to 40 years.

Prosecutors told jurors in closing arguments that Timothy Gutierrez would be 15 months old if he were still alive and Renee Gutierrez soon would be enjoying Christmas gifts.

But Ms. Dalton had told police Renee Gutierrez's death was an accident. She said the child was crying for her mother, so she put her hand over her mouth and nose for 5 to 10 minutes.

According to the defendant's statement, she heard a "whistling" sound coming from between her fingers.

'Shotless' flu vaccine tested

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Saint Louis University is testing a flu vaccine that could eliminate a barrier that scares many people away — shots.

The university's Health Sciences Center and three other U.S. medical centers are testing a vaccine administered by nasal spray. If it proves effective, it could be used nationwide in two or three years.

tor of Saint Louis University's Center for Vaccine Development. "A new vaccine that is more convenient to give and more acceptable to children in particular might be used in schools to block the occurrence of epidemic influenza," he said.

The vaccine is being tested on 240 children between 18 months and 5 years old. Sixty children at each center will get the vaccine — some by nasal spray, some by nose drops. Others will receive a placebo.

An earlier study of 2,000 children found that flu vaccine given by nose drops is as effective as a shot. This new study will compare the effectiveness of vaccine administered by nasal spray to vaccine administered by nose drops.

Children are major carriers of flu, said Dr. Robert Belshe, direc-

Researchers believe a nasal spray may be more convenient and more effective than nose drops.

Food For Thought by Danny Bainum

Chicken Normande, the French call it: boneless chicken breasts, lightly seasoned, then sauteed. What makes it "Normande" are sliced apples simmered in apple-jack and brandy. Add a cup of heavy cream and boil until thickened before returning chicken to the pan.

Even when the recipe says "do not grease the pan," cookies behave better if you spray on a little cooking oil before baking.

How big should the serving be? If a diet calls for 3 ounces of meat, it's the size of a deck of cards or bar of soap. An 8-ounce portion is as big as a thick paperback book.

Before the barbecue fire burns down, grill some zucchini, eggplant, peppers and onion, and chill them for tomorrow's pasta salad. Grilling adds a wonderful smoky flavor.

Special treat: chocolate-covered pops made with fresh fruit! Thread cut-up fruit on wooden sticks or skewers, dip in melted chocolate, roll in sprinkles and freeze. Wrap when firm.

RELIGIOUS ERROR

Jesus Christ pointed out religious error while He was upon this earth. His apostles, directed by the Holy Spirit pointed out religious error and predicted that religious error would continue and become worse. In Matt. 15:9, Jesus said, "ye hypocrites, well did Isaiah prophesy of you, saying, This people honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." The apostle John wrote: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits, whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." (1 Jn. 4:1) Paul wrote to Timothy: "But evil men and impostors shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3:13) Quite conclusively, any and all worship, belief and service according to the doctrines of men is vain and useless. It is clearly condemned by the scriptures (Gal. 1:6-10; 2 Jn. 9-11; Rev. 22:18-19).

"Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." (Matt. 7:15-17.) The Word of God, the true teaching of God, will only produce that which God intended that it produce (Isa. 55:8-11.) Therefore, if that which is produced by a particular teaching is not that which the word of God is said to produce, then the teaching is erroneous and the teacher thereof is a false teacher.

The word of God, if heard, believed and obeyed, will produce only Christians, disciples of Christ, members of the one true church (Matt. 28:18-20; Acts 11:26; 1 Cor. 12:13; Acts 2:47.) No where do we ever read in the scriptures of people being saved by faith only, before and without baptism. No where do we ever read in the scriptures of people being saved at one point in time and then being voted on later as to whether they should become members of the church. Therefore, these doctrines, along with many others are false doctrines.

The true followers of Christ, who are identified in the scriptures as His disciples, Christians, members of His church, are exhorted to "prove the spirits", or false teachers. Jesus told His disciples:

Century 21 sales associate earns relocation service

BORGER - Borger's Karen Wright, sales associate with Century 21 Best Realty, has earned the professional designation of VIP Relocation Director, which qualifies her to provide clients with specialized referral and relocation services throughout the Century 21 system. Wright received the professional designation upon completing a series of performance development courses offered only through the Century 21 system's training program. With this training and the system's network of referral and relocation services, she will be able to provide value-added service for clients who are in the process of relocation to another city, state or country. "We are very proud of Karen for completing the training necessary to receive this special designation," said Tim Wright, broker/owner of Century 21 Best Realty. "We feel this additional training will add to the level of professional services already offered through our office." The Century 21 performance program provides comprehensive career development courses that enable Century 21 professionals to expand and sharpen their skills to succeed in the real estate industry. The Century 21 system is the world's largest real estate organization, with presence in 16 other countries and territories.
