PAMPA — A Pampa man was arrested Sunday morning on a misdemeanor charge of possession of marijuana under two ounces.

Clint Lee Miller, 33, was taken into city police custody about 3 a.m. Sunday at his Darby Street home, according to a press release from Pampa Police Department.

Miller was subsequently transferred to Gray County jail and released on bond.

Acting on an anonymous tip at 2:30 a.m. Sunday, Lt. Shawn Fullagar, FTO Jimmy Lake, Officer Neal Sandlin and K-9 Officer David Wilk went to 1013 E. Darby and obtained a consent to search the residence. They discovered 58 grams of marijuana, which was confiscated and booked into evidence.

PAMPA — A Friday night fire that destroyed a home at 421 N. Naida was "intentional," according to fire marshal investigator Gary Stevens.

The fire marshal's office is still investigating the exact cause of the fire, he added.

Stevens placed the damage at approximately $15,000, though he said that the house was almost completely destroyed.

The fire began around 9:15 p.m. Friday. Three units and seven firefighters responded.

Gunman says he tried to end peace process

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Yitzhak Rabin's killer, appearing in court in the clothes and skullcap he wore when he fired the fatal shots, declared today that the assassination was meant to halt the Mideast peace process.

Yigal Amir, a 25-year-old law student, told a magistrate in Tel Aviv's main court, just a few hundred yards from the scene of Saturday's shooting, that Rabin wanted to "give our country to the Arabs."

"I did this to stop the peace process," Amir told Magistrate Dan Arbel in a calm, even tone. "We need to be coldhearted."

Arbel ordered Amir held for 15 days. His 27-year-old brother, Hagai, arrested Sunday, was charged with failure to prevent a crime and ordered held for a week. Israel radio said he apparently told the court he knew of his brother's intentions.

A police official said the 9mm Beretta pistol used by Amir apparently was licensed to Hagai, a college student in the West Bank. Army radio reported that police suspect the brother helped plan the killing.

Yigal Amir faces a maximum penalty of life in prison if convicted. The death penalty in Israel is reserved only for those convicted of crimes against humanity, genocide and mass murder.

Investigators are trying to determine whether Yigal Amir killed Rabin on behalf of a Jewish extremist group. Several dozen militants have been questioned, and police are looking for the head of the Eyal group — an offshoot of the outlawed anti-Arab Kach movement.

Asked where he got his ideas, Amir told the magistrate that he drew on the Halacha — the Jewish legal code.

"According to the Halacha, you can kill the enemy," Amir said. "My whole life, I learned Halacha. When you kill in war, it is an act that is allowed."

Asked whether he acted alone, Amir replied: "It was God."

The hearing, held under tight security with no spectators allowed in the court, lasted 10 minutes. Amir walked into the building through a barrage of journalists.

One reporter asked Amir, "How does it feel to be the most hated man in Israel?" He retorted that reporters were vultures "devouring carcasses." A policeman then pushed Amir's face aside to stop him from talking.

Amir was wearing the same clothes he had on when he was tackled by police after the shooting Saturday night — the black skullcap of Orthodox Jews, jeans and a blue T-shirt.

He complained that he had not been given a towel, a toothbrush or soap.

"Arab prisoners get more than I do," he told the judge.

Amir also complained that "a Palestinian state is starting to be established" because of Rabin's policies.

Constitutional amendment election to be held Tuesday

Voting is set for 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday for Texans to consider 14 constitutional amendments.

Brief summaries of each proposition and the pros and cons for each can be found on Page 15 in Sunday's Pampa News.

Gray countians will vote in the following locations:

Precinct 1 - Lefors Community Center.

Precincts 2, 10 and 13 - Lovett Memorial Library in Pampa.

Precinct 3 - Grandview-Hopkins School.

Precincts 4 and 5 - Lovett Library in McLean.

Precincts 6, 14 and 15 - Family Life Center at First Christian Church.

Precincts 7, 11 and 12 - M.K. Brown Auditorium lobby.

Precincts 8 and 9 - Woodrow Wilson School.

"Fail safe" voting will be conducted this year, said County Clerk Wanda Carter.

For people who have moved within the county, no matter how long it has been, they may vote in the precinct of their former residence by signing a statement of residency, she said.

Every voter will be asked whether they have moved within the county, she said.

Fail safe voting is designed so people don't lose their vote because they failed to transfer their voter registration to the new address, she explained.

Morales, UT to sponsor conference on international trade agreements

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has announced that his office and the University of Texas at Austin will sponsor a conference to explore the impact of international trade agreements on state and provincial law.

The Impacts of Trade Agreements on State/Provincial Laws conference is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Friday, Nov. 10, at the LBJ School of Public Affairs on the UT-Austin campus. The conference is sponsored by the Texas Attorney General's Office, the U.S.-Mexican Policy Studies Program at the LBJ School of Public Affairs, the National Conference of State Legislatures and the Western Governors' Association.

"International trade agreements, such as NAFTA, present a win-win situation for trading partners by opening markets and expanding trade," Morales said. "However, these pacts present potential problems in terms of respecting state and regional laws."

As trade among the United States, Mexico and Canada grows, regional governments have concerns regarding the impact of international trade on their sovereignty, he said. There is concern that health and environmental measures enacted to protect citizens may be compromised by the pre-emption of these standards in non-tariff trade barrier disputes under NAFTA.

For example, Morales recently met with Clinton Administration officials to voice his concern about Mexican trucks on Texas highways. One of the results of NAFTA is that Mexican trucks will have greater access to Texas highways beginning Dec. 18. Mexican trucks will be allowed to carry loads from the border to as far as Texarkana or Texoma.

Morales asked President Clinton and his Secretaries of Treasury and Transportation to support Texas' plans to enforce weight and safety laws on foreign cargo trucks that soon will be traveling throughout the state. Texas truckers are allowed to carry 80,000 pounds. A typical Mexican truck carries more than 100,000 pounds, with some carrying up to 170,000 pounds.

If state laws regarding trucking limits are not enforced, Morales said, Texas highways and the safety of Texans will be placed in jeopardy.

Grandview-Hopkins ISD gains cash award

Grandview-Hopkins Independent School District received a $1,000 award as part of the Texas Successful Schools Awards (TSSAS) program, GHISD Superintendent Solomon Kepley has announced.

The school is being recognized for gains in student performance in indicators that are part of the Academic Excellence Indicator System (AEIS), more commonly known as the state's school report card.

Grandview-Hopkins is among 1,236 cash-winning schools statewide receiving awards for exemplary or recognized performance and 401 schools receiving awards for recording gains in their performance over last year.

The award is based on schools' spring 1995 performance on the TAAS test, which measures performance in reading, writing and mathematics. Schools also had to meet performance standards for dropout and attendance rates.

Cash awards ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 per school were given.

In the recognized category, schools had at least 70 percent of all students and students in each population group (white, African-American, Hispanic and economically disadvantaged), a dropout rate of 3.5 percent or less for all students and each student group, and attendance rate of at least 94 percent.

The change in TAAS performance from 1994 to 1995 also had to be high enough so that the passing rate for all students and those in each student group would be at least 90 percent within five years.

To be eligible for a significant gain award, schools had at least 25 percent of all students in each student group passing each section of the TAAS.

In addition, a school's gain in performance from spring 1994 to spring 1995 had to be in the top 20 percent of the school's demographic group on overall gain for all students and each student group, and average at least five percent gain across all subject areas for all students and each student group.

A total of $5 million is being awarded to schools this year under the TSSAS program.

NASA ready to try building space station

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After practicing station-style science aboard Columbia for 16 days, NASA is ready to try its hand at space station assembly.

Columbia returned safely to Earth on Sunday, clearing the way for Atlantis to blast off Saturday on the second shuttle docking mission with the Russian space station Mir.

There will be no crew swap this time. Rather, Atlantis will take up a docking tunnel, food, water and other supplies for the cosmonauts. The Atlantis crew will attach the tunnel to Mir for future shuttle dockings.

It will be the first time a space shuttle has ever performed station-building tasks.

Columbia commander Kenneth Bowersox said it's important — and logical — for NASA to learn how to conduct station-type science while learning how to build a station. Construction of the international space station is just two years away.

"That way, the facility is going to be ready to be used, and will be used, as soon as it's operational," Bowersox said after returning to Earth. "It's the most efficient way to operate."

Columbia's mission was, at 16 days, the second-longest flight in shuttle history, just one-half day short of the record. The seven astronauts had been hoping for bad landing weather, but a cold front passed through quicker than expected and the wind subsided.

"Probably more than anybody, I was really hoping that we would get the duration record. I wanted to stay up a day or two, however long we could, longer," said pilot Kent Rominger. "But I tell you what, now that we're back on Earth, it sure is nice to be here."

Bowersox guided Columbia across the United States into the Kennedy Space Center just after sunrise. "Great ending," he said.

Poll: Texans split on English-only, bilingual proposals

Texans are split in their support of conducting government business only in English, according to The Harte-Hanks Texas Poll, but more than half want both English and Spanish taught in public schools.

In a state where Hispanic and Anglo cultures often intermingle, 44 percent of Texans say they support English-only laws compared with 49 percent who oppose them.

At the same time, nearly three in five residents want to follow in the footsteps of California and bar illegal immigrants from free schooling, health care and welfare.

"This state has had a bad record of denying equal opportunity to the Spanish speaking because of its history," said state Sen. Carlos Truan, who has fought for bilingual education and against English-only laws. "People continue to fight the Battle of the Alamo instead of moving forward."

Fifty-three percent of Anglos, 23 percent of blacks and 20 percent of Hispanics supported English-only efforts. Overall, 93 percent of those polled were U.S. citizens.

"The relatively low percentage of Anglos supporting English only is interesting," said Rodolfo de la Garza, a University of Texas government professor who specializes in immigration issues. "Nationally, it is probably much higher. That shows the extent to which Texas and Mexico have integrated."

The issue has come to the national forefront as Republicans in Congress consider four bills on early childhood, youth and families that would require government to conduct business and print forms only in English.

Two of the bills would also reduce or change bilingual education.

In Texas, the issue gained renewed attention after Amarillo State District Judge Sam Kiser demanded that a Hispanic woman speak English at home to her 5-year-old daughter. Kiser said that in his August ruling on custody of the girl that the child's ignorance of English amounted to child abuse — and would doom her to a life as a maid.

Many state leaders, led by Gov. George W. Bush, have denounced English-only proposals as well as any effort to establish a law similar to California's Proposition 187, which denies education, social and non-emergency health care to illegal immigrants.

"I'm not for English-only. I'm for English-plus," Bush recently said in South Texas. "I think it's very important for every American to learn how to speak English, but, as well, it's important for Texans to learn how to speak Spanish."

A spokesman for Bush said the governor supports enforcement of immigration laws in Texas, but does not believe children should be denied an education or health care.

"Texas should educate children regardless of how those children got here," said Ray Sullivan on behalf of Bush. "He has said that an educated child is one less likely to commit a crime and one more likely to be a productive and responsible Texas."

Gov. Bush has said a number of times that he does not believe Texas needs a Proposition 187, Sullivan said. "The circumstances in California are very different than those here in Texas."

A majority of Texans disagree. Sixty-one percent support laws similar to Proposition 187 in the state.

The poll, conducted Oct. 12-23, has a margin error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The Office of Survey Research at the University of Texas surveyed 1,010 adult Texans for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc.

"We need to take a hard look at immigration law, but it should not be punitive," said state Rep. Hugo Berlanga, a Corpus Christi Democrat who heads the House Mexican-American Legislative Caucus. "We sometimes end up with a mob mentality toward immigration."

"It ought to be fair and reasonable, and there is no reason to deny children who are here through no fault of their own education or health care."

Forty-four percent of Republicans said they strongly favored a law like Proposition 187 in Texas, compared to 21 percent of Democrats and 36 percent of Independents.

And 31 percent of Republicans strongly favored English-only laws, compared to 15 percent of Democrats and 24 percent of Independents.

"As for the illegal aliens, people are upset," said state Rep. Tom Craddick, an Odessa Republican who chairs the House GOP Caucus. "They are coming across the border and we are having to finance everything from health to school."

"Dollars are tight and people are upset about it."

Republicans also tend to disagree with the governor on bilingual education. Some 60 percent of Republicans polled said they wanted only English to be taught in Texas schools. Thirty-four percent of Democrats and 44 percent of Independents agreed.

"Most of the people that I've heard from feel that we ought to have enough people in our school system speaking only English," Craddick said. "This is what needs to be if (students) are going to go out and speak and live and work in an English society."

But Truan, D-Corpus Christi, who first fought for bilingual education in 1969, said speaking both English and Spanish will make Texans more marketable in the workplace. Over several years, he passed bills for bilingual education and funding.

"A lot of people in America have tried to shield themselves and have blinded themselves with the American flag by thinking the only way to be an American is to speak English," Truan said. "Other countries have been eating our lunch and teaching their children to speak several languages."

Berlanga agreed, saying that Texans will need to be fluent in many languages in order to be competitive in an international global economy.

"Being bilingual goes beyond just understanding Spanish," he said. "In the future, being fluent in Japanese and German is going to be just as important as we develop free trade all over the world."

Girl Scouts seeking new members and volunteers

Texas Plains Girl Scout Council is now starting a new registration year by recruiting volunteers and girls to form new troops in Pampa.

The mission of Girl Scouting is "to inspire girls with the highest ideals of character, conduct, patriotism and service that they become happy and resourceful citizens."

"Pampa Service Unit is needing troop leaders, a service unit manager, troop organizers and program consultants to strengthen the Girl Scout program," said Paula Goff, membership specialist for the Pampa Service Unit.

In an all-girl setting, girls ages 5 to 17 are able to "Be Your Best," which is the theme of Girl Scouts of the USA.

"If you would like your daughter to be her best by learning to make decisions, set goals, develop leadership skills, develop her social skills, make new friends, learn respect for her country and have fun while accomplishing these things, Girl Scouting is for her," Goff said.

Girl Scouts is a membership organization. The cost is $6 a year. Texas Plains provides financial assistance, thanks to the United Ways, Girl Scout cookie sale and other donations.

Galveston city manager questioned

GALVESTON (AP) — Galveston's city manager insists he can justify $16,048 in expenditures deemed illegal by an attorney retained by the City Council.

"I respect the law. I respect the charter," City Manager Doug Matthews said.

William Helfand, a Houston lawyer hired to review the matter, declared some of Matthews' spending practices "clearly illegal," said Mayor Barbara Crews, after a lengthy closed meeting Friday.

Ms. Crews released 36 pages of financial records documenting the questioned spending, including cruises aboard a casino ship for some city employees and guests and television sets awarded to employees as prizes. Matthews denied breaking the law. "I was shocked there were concerns about those documents," he said Saturday. "I am seeing this for the first time."

The mayor said Saturday the City Council would wait for results of an outside performance review of five city departments before deciding Matthews' future as city manager.

"We have promised the public that we would systematically review the city manager's performance... and we are in the process of doing that," Ms. Crews said.

Matthews said he would not resign from the position he has held for 10 years.

"I have never been a quitter," he said. "There is nothing wrong with being fired."

Serbian leaders irritated at pressure to make concessions, say deceived

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — With pressure mounting on Slobodan Milosevic to make key concessions, the Serbian leader was said to be indignant toward U.S. organizers of the Bosnia peace talks, claiming they had misled him about the contents of a draft agreement.

The conference, which brought together Bosnia's three warring parties for the first time in two years, opened Wednesday at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

It is expected to last at least two more weeks, according to an official involved in the talks, who spoke on condition that he not be identified because of the news blackout clamped on the talks.

Mediators reportedly are zeroing in on Milosevic, demanding he sack Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic, formally recognize Bosnia and Croatia, and assure human rights for ethnic minorities in Serbia.

Milosevic claims that Richard Holbrooke, the chief U.S. negotiator, did not mention such demands during his trips to the region.

Holbrooke's shuttle diplomacy laid the groundwork for the current conference by getting Muslims, Croats and Serbs to agree on a set of constitutional principles that would establish Bosnia as a union of two ethnic entities.

"Milosevic is upset because he thinks the Americans brought him to Dayton on false pretenses," said another official familiar with the Serbian leader's reaction. "They want him to make concessions that were not mentioned during Holbrooke's talks with him" in Serbia.

But Bosnia's Muslim leaders insist they will not deal with Karadzic and Mladic — both of whom are accused war criminals — and the United States has indicated it would not send troops to monitor a peace agreement unless the two men are removed from power.

Milosevic, who is anxious to facilitate a peace agreement in order to get the U.N. to lift economic sanctions against his country, maintains he has no influence over the Bosnian Serbs.

Any move to sack Mladic would put Milosevic squarely at odds with his own military commanders, who have cooperated closely with the Bosnian Serb army.

And formal diplomatic recognition of Bosnia and Croatia and their current borders would incense the Serbian nationalists who dream of incorporating parts of both states into a Greater Serbia.

Men face trial in shooting of black pedestrians

LUBBOCK (AP) — Three men prosecutors say went on a deadly rampage in an attempt to start a West Texas race war are scheduled to go on trial today for federal hate crimes.

Authorities believe the defendants were bent on causing widespread racial problems on Oct. 16, 1994, by shooting three black men on the streets and sidewalks of Lubbock, court records say.

One of the shootings killed Melvin Johnson, 37, who died on a curb from chest and neck wounds from a close-range gun blast.

A nine-count indictment says the two Hispanics and one white man set out in a 1982 Toyota Corolla "hunting black men, luring them to their car, and shooting them at close range with a short-barreled shotgun."

Facing federal charges of conspiracy, hate crimes and firearms violations are El Trevino Mungia, 21; his cousin, Ricky Rivera Mungia, 25 and Roy Ray Martin, 20. Each is accused of shooting one victim.

They also face state charges of murder and attempted murder.

Court records say the three victims were chosen at random and shot during a span of less than a half-hour.

Autry Morgan Vaughn Jr. survived a wound to the jaw. Triellis Lee Stewart was shot in his right hand and had to have one finger amputated.

The indictment says the defendants "conspired to willfully injure, intimidate and interfere, by force and threat of force, with black individuals in Lubbock because of their race and color and because they were enjoying public facilities."

The "public facilities" in this case would include the streets and sidewalks.

Court records say officers seized a photograph of Adolf Hitler, a swastika and Nazi flag from Martin's residence.

Martin was at home when he and the Mungias started the rampage after discussing "how they hate 'niggers' and 'coons,' how they wish they never existed, how good life would be without them and how 'the only good nigger was a dead nigger,'" according to court documents.

State briefs

Jury resumes deliberations in punishment phase

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 24-year-old Arkansas man is still waiting to hear whether he will be executed or given a life prison term for his role in the abduction and murder of an Arlington teenager.

Jurors were to resume deliberations today in the sentencing of Orlando Hall.

U.S. District Judge Terry R. Means presented the case to jurors Friday afternoon — just after attorneys wrapped up closing arguments — and suggested they begin deliberations. But six hours later, he sent them home with orders to return this morning.

Hall was convicted Tuesday of helping beat Lisa Rene to death with a shovel. Testimony showed she was abducted and raped repeatedly by Hall and four others in Texas and Arkansas over a two-day period.

The teenager, who had moved to Arlington from the U.S. Virgin Islands three months before the attack, was killed as retribution for a drug ripoff by her brothers. As she was being abducted, Miss Rene phoned 911 and made a chilling plea for help.

Transfer of inmates highlights economic trend

BOSTON (AP) — The large-scale shipment of Massachusetts inmates to Texas makes perfect economic sense. Massachusetts has too many prisoners; Texas has extra beds. Massachusetts has high costs; Texas is cheap.

There's only one hitch, experts say: inmates are human beings, not widgets.

Everybody agrees that strong family ties give convicts a better chance to make a life for themselves on the outside.

But corrections officials cite overriding concerns. They say their decision to roust 299 inmates in the middle of the night and fly them to Dallas on Wednesday was an emergency response to overcrowding that endangers prisoners and guards alike.

Texas Jews show unity in face of Rabin slaying

By The Associated Press

Religious unity in a world where ideological differences have resulted in yet another political assassination will be the theme tonight a memorial service in Dallas for slain Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

A former war hero who led his nation toward peace with the Arabs, Rabin was shot to death Saturday night after a peace rally in Tel Aviv, Israel.

Israeli police said a 25-year-old law student with links to the Jewish extremist fringe confessed, saying he acted on God's orders and didn't regret the deed.

In Dallas, rabbis and leaders of community groups hope to bring together worshippers from across the religious spectrum tonight in a memorial service.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Giving home owners more power, choice

A particularly good idea has come to the voters in a watered-down version for the Nov. 7 election that offers 14 state constitutional amendments for public approval.

Proposition 4 would allow Texas home owners to refinance their homes to pay off an Internal Revenue Service lien or to buy out a spouse's equity in the case of a divorce.

Allowing home equity loans goes against the grain of Texas traditionalism. Since the Homestead Act of 1877, Texans have been prohibited from borrowing against the ownership they have built up in mortgages. The intent was to prevent irresponsible home buyers from mortgaging their homesteads to the hilt and then losing them for non-payment.

But that is government at its worst, most restrictive manner. Individuals who have paid their own money toward the purchase of a house should have the option of borrowing against the value that has been accrued. If some people aren't responsible enough to make payments, on a second lien, that should be their problem, not the government as a "nanny."

In many cases, homeowners have assumed an existing loan by paying an equity up front. Why shouldn't they be able to get some of that money back before the house is paid off by taking out a second loan? Homeowners shouldn't be forced to sell their residences to get their hands on their home equity.

Of course Proposition 4 doesn't go far enough in the repeal of the Homestead Act. The two instances cited satisfying Uncle Sam's IRS agents and cutting a deal with a soon-to-be-former spouse to avoid additional litigation don't occur that often for the average person.

But maybe passage of this weak proposition will set a precedent that will lead to further relaxation of the restrictions.

Any step in the direction of additional individual rights and less government control would be welcome. Proposition 4 won't change much. But once critics realize that giving homeowners some control over their own property is a boon instead of a boondoggle, the antiquated notions behind a 12-decade-old "babysitting" provision can be wiped away and replaced with forward thinking ideas.

After all, we live in a credit driven society these days. In many cases, people have more borrowing power on the plastic in their wallets and purses than they do in the homes that they co-own with mortgage companies or other lending institutions. Their equities should be just as liquid as the credit limit on those charge cards.

In other words, it's time to get into the current century and get government out of private affairs. Proposition 4 won't do the job, but it might just-nudge general opinion another notch in the right direction.

Berry's World

"Separate the message from the messenger — sometimes."

Heston: Alone at center stage

Ask the average American to name a Hollywood conservative, and it's likely he'll cite Charlton Heston. That's largely because Heston, even at age 71, continues to be show business' most public proponent of conservative causes and Republican candidates. But it also points up a sad state of affairs: No right-winger in the entertainment industry - and there are more of them there than you may think - comes close to matching Heston's activism.

This not being an election year, Heston has been on the road promoting his new autobiography, In the Arena (Simon & Schuster). Most of the book details his career on screen and on the stage, but toward the end, the actor takes dead aim at modern liberal blights.

Among his targets: affirmative action ("a stain on the American soul"), labor unions ("Labor is no longer the working man with a lunch bucket; it's fat cats in limousines milking the shrinking union membership to fund the AFL-CIO as a political money-raising machine"), and political correctness ("egregious nonsense (that) has done much to destroy civil discourse in American life").

In perhaps the most illuminating, and definitely the most amusing, political anecdote in the book, Heston recounts the telephone calls he received during the 1992 Los Angeles riots from anti-gun friends, asking if they could borrow one of his weapons ("I tried to buy one, but they have this waiting period ...") Last fall, Heston campaigned for 24 Republican House and Senate candidates, 19 of whom won their races. Many elected in the 1994 GOP landslide, including Sens. Mike DeWine of Ohio, Rod Grams of Minnesota and Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, had Heston on the hustings for them.

Heston brings to the table a contagious enthusiasm. Late in the campaign, Santorum and Heston barnstormed Pennsylvania for a day. Mike Mihalke, now Sen. Santorum's communications director, contrasted liberal incumbent Harris Wofford's "closed, wine-and-cheese-type events (attended by) President Clinton and Hollywood establishment liberals" with the Heston/Santorum rallies, which, Mihalke said, drew "families, everyday people. (Some of those) people had been on the sidelines, had not previously been plugged into the campaign. (Heston's) appeal had great resonance with grass-roots conservatives."

Heston also assisted in black Republican J.C. Watts' successful campaign to win one of Oklahoma's House seats. With his efforts on Watts' behalf, Heston in a sense closed a circle. In 1961, before celebrity participation in the civil-rights movement became chic, he had picketed several Oklahoma City restaurants that would not serve blacks.

The Republican National Committee certainly appreciates Heston's efforts. Asked what impact Heston had on the '94 campaign, RNC chairman Haley Barbour told me that "the best ally of the GOP is a well-informed public, so having spokesmen who can command media attention (is) a huge benefit to us. ... Chuck Heston is one of the few Hollywood celebrities who will publicly identify himself with Republican and conservative causes."

Heston has done, and continues to do, far more than his share for the cause. So, why is he out there seemingly all by himself? True, one finds some celebrities endorsing some GOP candidates, and a few of them will even support conservative causes - but only when there is no risk factor for them. "Many (celebrities) are reluctant to be as vocal as Charlton Heston because they are afraid the dominant culture in Hollywood will sanction them for doing so," believes Barbour. "(They're) afraid to risk damage to their careers."

Conservatives are a minority in Hollywood, but their numbers are far from negligible. After Clinton's '92 victory, it could have been argued that conservatism was in retreat and therefore unfashionable. But that excuse (and it is an excuse) no longer holds. Since the triumphs of November 1994, the signs for Republicans and conservatives have been positive: passage of the Contract With America, Democratic elected officials on the state and national levels switching to the GOP in droves, Democrats like Bill Bradley and Sam Nunn declining to run for reelection, sharply increasing Republican chances to pick up those seats, and, of course, Clinton's failure to develop a coherent policy on, well, pretty much everything.

Celebrities wanting to hitch their wagons to trendy causes need look no further than the conservative movement. What, after all, does the left have to offer on anything that inspires passion at the grass-roots level? If they want to publicly join the bandwagon, they will be welcomed with open arms. But they should acknowledge their debt to Hollywood's conservative point man, Charlton Heston.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Nov. 6, the 310th day of 1995. There are 55 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Nov. 6, 1860, former Illinois congressman Abraham Lincoln defeated three other candidates for the presidency of the United States.

On this date:
In 1854, the king of American march music, John Philip Sousa, was born in Washington, D.C.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was elected to a six-year term as president of the Confederacy.

In 1888, Benjamin Harrison of Indiana won the presidential election, defeating incumbent Grover Cleveland by gaining the required number of electoral votes, even though Cleveland led in the popular vote.

In 1893, composer Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky died in St. Petersburg, Russia, at age 53 after contracting cholera.

In 1900, President McKinley was re-elected, beating Democratic challenger William Jennings Bryan.

In 1906, Republican Charles Evans Hughes was elected governor of New York, defeating newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst.

Exploring welfare's dirty secret

What is the "dirty little secret" of the welfare state?

Just this: Across the country there are more than 40,000 hurting, adoptable children languishing in foster care, waiting for moms and dads - and plenty of would-be moms and dads are waiting to adopt them.

Yet, standing between the two - seemingly hell-bent on keeping them apart - is an army of highly paid welfare bureaucrats who don't like adoption and have erected a practically insurmountable array of barriers against those who wish to adopt.

Why? According to Conna Craig, president of the Institute for Children and a former adopted child herself, there are three reasons.

First, the public adoption system rewards and encourages foster care over adoption. When foster parents are paid between $200 and $530 per month, based on the number of children they care for, it creates a financial incentive to keep children in temporary homes. Private adoption agencies, by contrast, are paid by the number of successful adoptions they arrange. In other words, the cash flows in the direction of adoption, not foster care.

Second, since adoption often is put forward as an alternative to abortion, feminist groups and their allies have succeeded in inculcating an anti adoption bias in the social service community and mainstream media. Magazines, ranging from Good Housekeeping to Playboy, have painted adoption as a traumatic event that can cause psychological damage to both mother and child. In fact, the benefits of adoption far outweigh long-term foster care. A study by the Search Institute of Minneapolis has shown that adopted children rate their relationship with their parents even more positively than a national sample of non-adopted adolescents.

Third, the social service community has placed the whims of irresponsible parents above the well-being and happiness of children. Too many kids are repeatedly returned to abusive or unfit parents, as if "family reunification" is more important than the physical safety of children. Craig says one-third of all children returned to their "birth families" eventually must be returned to state care.

Reforming this system won't be easy. Eliminating barriers against transracial adoptions - as if white parents would be worse for a black child than no parents at all - would be a step in the right direction. Because of these barriers, black children make up 40% of the foster-care population, even though they are only 15% of all children.

The government shouldn't be funding permanent foster-care situations, but rather encouraging families to adopt and making it easier for them to do so. One way would be to enact a means-tested, inflation-adjusted tax credit of up to $5,000 to help pay the expensive one-time cost of adopting a child. By contrast, the government spends, on average, $13,000 per year to care for a foster child.

Why not spend less than half that on the better alternative adoption?

Down with current mores in journalism

The University of Michigan is dropping its master's program in journalism? The University of Washington is considering a similar move? And Ohio State? And the University of Tucson? As old Gabriel Heatter used to intone on nationwide radio, "Ah, there's good news tonight!"

The good news is that a much needed redirection of American journalism training could be in the offing. Today's journalist, on whom the future of democracy depends, can turn a congressional debate into a pyramid-shaped story with a strong lead and snappy quotes. But has he any idea what the Federalist Papers contain or what caused the War Between the States? You sure can't take it for granted.

Concerning the inspiration to drop graduate journalism at Michigan U., the program director says, "It was an intellectual decision that the college should expose students to thought and not methodology." Brilliant! Why didn't someone think of this years ago? A program aimed at training journalists is about as socially useful as athlete's foot.

For a century, our academic institutions have been grinding out professional journalists, schooling them in reporting, ethics, headline writing and a host of routine skills learnable on the job in, oh, two months. In return, we have The National Enquirer, People magazine, Cosmopolitan, Soap Opera Digest and Geraldo.

There's high-brow journalism, too: the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, National Review, Jim Lehrer and Ted Koppel. But shallow and laddish writing is much more the rule than the exception in modern journalism. And with journalism consisting more and more of chit chat, the tedium factor rises. We have people telling us the news who don't understand the news. They've mastered headline writing or speaking techniques when they should have been studying constitutional law or market theory.

Thus Charles A. Dana, whose New York Sun produced some of the 19th century's liveliest journalism, prescribed for his profession: "I had rather take a young fellow who knows the 'Ajax' of Sophocles, and has read Tacitus, and can scan every ode of Horace - I would rather take him to report a prize-fight or a spelling match, for instance, than to take one who has never had those advantages." Why so? For the larger view, for the ability to make a prize fight or a spelling match fit its place and setting - and to recount it with clarity and economy.

However, there's a larger truth in all this. It is that would-be journalists are far from alone when it comes to snubbing liberal education. That's American higher education for you - the clipping and snipping of broad disciplines to specialty length, and the emphasis on careerism as opposed to knowledge.

Teachers learn to teach by taking education courses, prospective businessmen study finance, and future farmers and ranchers take "ag" courses.

It's the natural thing, you say. Well, sure. It's also sterile, time-wasting and socially fragmenting. We've created a world of specialists: Everyone remains in his own niche, knowing hardly anything about anyone else's niche or about the sweep and the majesty of our culture.

What to do with journalism schools? Abolish them all. Pension off the faculties, and put would-be journalists to work studying history, literature, political philosophy and economics. And the 'Ajax' of Sophocles. Teach routine skills in summer on-the-job programs.

What to do with colleges of education? Fit them up with dynamite. Warn away innocent bystanders. Sow the sites with salt. Immerse prospective teachers in the subjects they intend to teach, not omitting history, literature, etc., etc. Inculcate in them love of the subjects - and a burning desire to communicate that love.

Schools of medicine? Wait. You can carry a good thing too far. A specialty dedicated to keeping us breathing requires specialized knowledge. But someone remind Doc occasionally to plug in a tape of The Federalist Papers - just in case Ira Magaziner gets another high government job.

Perot Ohio branch trying to block third party move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dissidents in Ross Perot's Ohio United We Stand America chapter are trying to block Perot from using their state's money and other assets to support creation of a new political party.

After qualifying his Reform Party for the California ballot next year, Perot has shifted the effort to Ohio and Maine, the two other states with 1995 deadlines for 1996 ballot access.

He is expected to succeed in Ohio, but is getting a fight from longtime United We Stand members who have become disillusioned with his leadership and vehemently oppose using the organization as a springboard to a new party.

In a letter to the Federal Election Commission on Friday, the Ohio dissidents asked for a ruling on whether Perot can use United We Stand America funds and other assets, such as computers, telephones and mailing lists, to help qualify the new party for the ballot.

Pump prices drop average penny-and-a-half a gallon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average pump price of gasoline dropped 1 1/2 cents per gallon over the past two weeks as retailers passed on wholesale price drops, an industry analyst said.

The average price, including all grades and taxes, was 115.90 cents per gallon on Friday, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 stations nationwide. That was down 1.42 cents from the Oct. 20 survey, continuing a decline that started in summer.

"This is way, way, way down," survey publisher Trilby Lundberg said Sunday. "It's nearly 13 cents lower than it was in early June, when it peaked."

On June 9, the Lundberg Survey reported the average at 128.62 cents.

St. Louis was the mecca of inexpensive gas, she said, with an average price of 88 cents per gallon for regular unleaded gas at self-service pumps.

The average price at self-service pumps was 108.86 cents for unleaded regular, 119.30 cents for mid-grade unleaded, 127.61 cents for premium unleaded and 110.54 cents for leaded regular.

At full-serve pumps, the average price was 148.08 cents for unleaded regular, 156.94 cents for mid-grade unleaded, 163.93 cents for premium unleaded and 146.47 cents for leaded regular.

Scientists turn DNA tests on Bigfoot mystery

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Scientists are trying to pin down Bigfoot by the hair of his chinny-chin-chin.

Ohio State University researchers are using DNA analysis on a few tufts of hair found in a Pacific Northwest forest where three men, including two former forest rangers, spotted a group of "Bigfoots" about 100 feet away in the dark.

"I don't expect anything to happen because I'm pretty skeptical about this. But good science requires some wild-goose chases from time to time," Frank Poirier, chairman of the Ohio State's Department of Anthropology.

The analysis should determine if the hair came from a human or another known primate.

"After the creatures left, they picked up hair from the locale, as well as footprints and knuckle prints," he said.

One of the men, Wes Sumerlin, of Walla Walla, Wash., hopes the DNA testing proves what he already knows: They're out there.

"There's no doubt in my mind I saw one," he said Sunday.

No Bigfoot has ever been killed or captured, and no carcass or bones have ever been found.

Many hope peace process will be strengthened by assassination of Israeli peacemaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The clear and heartfelt grief of Yasser Arafat symbolizes how far he and Yitzhak Rabin had moved toward peace. The act of a Jewish extremist who cut down Rabin and the celebrations by Arab opponents of conciliation demonstrate how far the process still must go.

President Clinton is attending today's funeral for the man he called "my partner and my friend." The president was on the edge of tears when he stood in the Rose Garden and said, "Goodbye, friend."

Former presidents Bush and Carter were also in the large U.S. delegation to the funeral for the warrior turned peacemaker. It was a tribute to the man as well as a signal of U.S. determination to keep the peace process moving forward.

How has Rabin's murder changed the prospects for peace?

"Peace must be and peace will be Prime Minister Rabin's lasting legacy," said Clinton.

Americans involved in the peace process over the years expressed hope that the assassination would strengthen Israeli support for reaching agreements with their Arab neighbors.

Helping kids enjoy their chores

Today's working parents must organize their responsibilities and manage their time much like skilled executives.

Cooking, cleaning, laundry, shopping, money matters, community activities, athletics, church and school events all vie for a parent's limited amount of free time. Couple this with the young child's tendencies for messy play, dawdling, experimentation and mood swings and the battle lines are clearly drawn when it comes to getting kids to help at home.

Gaining cooperation at home for help with chores is not an easy task for any parent. But there are a few points to consider if this is an area you would like to strengthen in your home.

It's always best to start while children are very young and help them accomplish small tasks that are appropriate for their age levels. Making a game out of picking up toys or setting the table goes a long way with a toddler. Singing with them while doing chores around the house brightens everybody's day. It's worth a try.

Second, consider organizing your home in ways that encourage helping by the younger set. For example, plenty of child-height clothes racks and low, open toy shelves make cleanups easier.

At the same time, take a look at

Homemaker's News

By Donna Brauchi

the way in which household tasks are distributed in your home. Writing down and posting jobs that must be done daily, weekly or occasionally helps everyone see what it takes to keep a home running smoothly. Dividing the jobs evenly and deciding on a system for rotating them is a great topic for a family conference. If allowances are within the budget, be sure to underscore the relationship between completed tasks and "payment in full."

The third and perhaps most important consideration in assessing housework as it relates to your family is your attitude. Are you drawing a distinct line between chore time and family time? Is working together on the house or yard stated as a necessary evil before there will be time for fun?

Children might not view the task before them as chores if they do them alongside a positive and patient parent. If you can begin to think of all of your time together as family time, great strides can be made in increasing harmony in your home. True, it may take longer to get the chores done when they are shared with children, but keep in mind that these are great learning opportunities for your kids.

In these settings, life skills such as cooperation, diligence and problem-solving can be effectively taught, as well as the more reading and language development. By including your children in everyday tasks, you are sending a very strong signal to them — that you are interested in them and that you enjoy and want their company. If you try to keep these experiences positive and lighthearted, you might find it a little easier to "get a little help around here."

DA defends plans for harsh punishment of teen

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio prosecutor says his decision to press for harsh punishment for a girl found guilty of smothering two young children is part of the duties of his office.

"There's no joy in going after a 12-year-old girl, but there's also no joy in going after a 35-year-old man," District Attorney Steve Hilbig said. "But it's what I have to do. People have to be held accountable."

Jurors in Judge Carmen Kelsey's courtroom are expected to begin deliberating today on a sentence for 13-year-old Victoria Dalton, who has been found guilty of smothering two young children.

Miss Dalton's attorneys are asking jurors to give the girl probation, while prosecutors say such a sentence would not fit the crime she was found guilty of committing.

Miss Dalton was found guilty of murdering 5-month-old Timothy Gutierrez and his sister, Renee Alicia Gutierrez, 2. Because the teen was charged under the Determinate Sentencing Act, she could face punishment ranging from probation to 40 years in prison.

Determinate sentences allow for a judge, upon the juvenile's 18th birthday, to determine whether the teenager should serve the rest of his or her sentence in the adult system or stay with the Texas Youth Commission until age 21.

The judge also has the discretion to release the individual if it is determined he or she has been rehabilitated and no longer is a threat to society.

Hilbig said critics of prosecutors' push to punish young offenders should note that determinate sentences merge punishment with rehabilitation.

"You have an opportunity to remove and stabilize them and give them an opportunity to correct the behavior that got them into trouble," Hilbig said.

"There can never be rehabilitation without punishment," he said. "There still has to be an accountability factor."

Robin Brown-Gouger, executive director of KidShare, said she would hope Miss Dalton, if incarcerated, would receive the support and understanding she probably has been denied while growing up.

KidShare offers counseling to children.

"It seems that she has been victimized, too," Ms. Brown-Gouger said.

Miss Dalton lived in a small two-bedroom apartment with up to 14 other people at times. The Gutierrez-Valdez family was staying with the Daltons at the time of the two deaths.

Interested in trivia about Texas? Read 'Statistical Abstract'

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's that time of year again when the government's bean counters attempt with numbers, percentages and tables to put a face on U.S. society.

The newly released Statistical Abstract of the United States 1995 isn't likely to pop up on any best-seller lists or find its way onto most Americans' bookshelves.

Nonetheless, the Census Bureau volume offers a fascinating compilation of arcane — sometimes thought-provoking, sometimes unusual — nuggets of information about the United States and its residents.

Where else could you learn that more than 24 million Americans took to the golf links at least once during the year? Or that annual snowmobile sales were expected to hit $530 million? Or that the domestic fishing industry snagged 162 million pounds of squid in one year?

Unfortunately, all of the data isn't broken down in state-by-state summaries. But there are enough interesting kernels about Texas in the 1,045-page book to make for some interesting reading.

Among the Texas tidbits in the 1995 edition:

—Eight percent of Texas households don't have access to an automobile. Fifty-six percent of all Texas households have two or more vehicles.

—Texas has 2,824 of the nation's 40,368 shopping centers; and 35,370 of the United States' 453,308 car dealers.

—Slightly less than 64 percent of Texans are believed to be Christian adherents, significantly higher than the U.S. average of 52.7 percent.

—Texans recorded higher death rates from accidents, diabetes and suicide than the national average; but a lower mortality rate from heart disease, cancer and pneumonia.

—In 1993, 185,600 Texans got hitched, while 98,700 dissolved their marriages.

—Eighteen percent of Texans read a daily newspaper, a dip from the national rate of 23 percent.

—Texas' population is slightly younger than the national average, with 10.2 percent of Texans 65 or older, compared to the 12.7 percent U.S. rate.

—Texans accounted for $20 billion of the $323 billion spent by Americans on domestic travel at least 100 miles from home.

—The state is home to the third-largest illegal alien population, behind California and New York. The undocumented alien population nationwide was estimated last year between 3.5 million and 4 million, of which 300,000 to 427,000 were suspected in Texas. California's total dwarfed Texas, with a range of 1.3 million to nearly 1.8 million undocumented immigrants.

—Texas recorded a far lower abortion rate than the nation as a whole. For every 1,000 live births in Texas in 1992, there were 297 abortions — compared to a national average of 379.

—The state's 18.3 million people live in 6.5 million households, with an average household size of 2.75 people. Nationally, the average household size is 2.64 people.

—85,000 Texas homes — or 1.2 out of every 100 homes — lack complete plumbing. Eight percent of Texas households don't have a telephone.

—Of the nearly 393,500 Texans living in group quarters last year, 101,000 were in nursing homes, nearly 92,000 in college dormitories.

WT Dance Ensemble stays busy with fall season events

CANYON — The fall semester marks the beginning of another busy season of performing for the WTAMU Dance Ensemble.

The returning dancers who spent their summer performing in the outdoor musical drama TEXAS enjoyed a brief vacation before returning to the hectic class and rehearsal schedules, while the new students prepared for the new experiences which lay ahead.

The ensemble is currently in preparations for what has become a favorite Christmas tradition: the Lone Star Ballet's production of The Nutcracker, scheduled to take to the stage of the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium Dec. 8-10.

The ensemble got a jump on things in September performing in Michael Martin Murphy's WestFest, which is held annually in Palo Duro Canyon. The ensemble spent the first two weeks of the fall term preparing for this event. The group premiered many new pieces with styles ranging from Country and Western, Folklorico and Native American.

Soon after WestFest, the dance troupe once performed at the canyon, this time for the Texas Travel Summit in conjunction with the TEXAS Musical Drama. This performance was designed to promote tourism for Amarillo. Those attending the summit saw a few dances from the show TEXAS including the Grand Finale from the show complete with the Six Flags Horsemen and fireworks display.

The WTAMU dancers also performed at the Jan Werner Adult Day Care Center and at the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle.

At the end of September, the Lone Star Ballet presented Ballet Austin's world premiere of Firebird, Specter De La Rose and Les Sylphides.

October saw no slowing of work for the ensemble. The dancers first performed at Taste of the Arts at Westgate Mall, and then participated at the third annual career day performance at Sunray High School. Following their performance, several dancers shared their experiences in the performing arts with the Sunray students and answered the students' questions about dancing and about what they expected to get out of a career in the performing arts.

In mid-October, guest artist and choreographer Alexia Hess, from New York City, choreographed two contemporary ballets for the group. Alexia has performed with the New York City Ballet, Jerome Robbins' Broadway, Carousel and Brigadoon, and was dance captain for one of the touring productions of Phantom of the Opera.

The dance ensemble also said good-bye to one of their members. Went Odom, who had performed in TEXAS for the past five years and has been a member of the WTAMU Dance Ensemble and Lone Star Ballet for two years, was just recently picked up by Jean Ann Ryan Productions to appear in a Broadway revue aboard the Norwegian-Cruise Ship the M/S Dreamward. Went is the seventh dancer from Lone Star ballet to work for Jean Ann Ryan Productions, which produces entertainment for several cruise lines.

Today's hope is that the far broader peace initiative now under way will survive the loss of a leader. Arafat looked visibly shaken when he expressed the hope that "the Israelis and the Palestinians have the ability to overcome this tragedy against the peace process and the whole situation in the Middle East."

Rabin and Arafat were blood enemies through the years that the Israeli served his country as a military leader and Arafat worked for Israel's destruction. They met for the first time at the White House in September 1993 when they signed the peace agreement between Israel and the PLO. With Clinton looking on, Arafat held out his hand. Rabin hesitated, almost recoiled, but then reached out. The world saw their handshake and knew that something significant was happening.

Their handshake didn't end the terror — Arabs against Jews, Jews against Arabs.

Yet the talks went on and Rabin emerged as a staunch defender of his old enemy Arafat. When the PLO cracked down on extremists, the Israeli prime minister was quick to acknowledge it and to say, "We appreciate the efforts of the Palestinians."

Memories of Grade-School Harassment Still Cause Pain

DEAR READERS: Recently I ran a letter signed "Worried Mom in Virginia," who sought help for her son, a sixth-grader who was being harassed by his schoolmates. I asked readers to share their solutions to this painful problem. A deluge of letters offering encouragement and a wealth of experience poured in from parents and educators, as well as from adults who had suffered as children:

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: My heart goes out to "Mike," the son of "Worried Mom in Virginia." I have walked in his shoes. Starting in the fourth grade at a private school in Atlanta, I was taunted and teased by many of my peers for reasons I was unable to understand. I was neither ugly nor pretty, fat nor thin, rich nor poor, but nonetheless, I was called names too mean-spirited to repeat.

I transferred to a "better" private school, but since some of the same kids were there who knew me from my former school, the ostracism followed me. These kids were so vicious, they even picked on a very nice, soft-spoken Italian boy in my class because his English was poor. (His father owned Fiat and his mother was a countess.) They singled us out because we were "different."

Then a miracle happened. Because my grades were poor, my mother no longer wanted to spend all that money for a private school where I was miserable, so she sent me to a public school where I knew no one, and no one knew me.

My grades went up; I had boyfriends and girlfriends. I had not changed, but my environment had.

I agree. Get the kid into counseling. Listen to him and help him appreciate his worth. Love him well and praise him often. And above all, put him in a new school where he can have a fresh start and leave all those miserable slobbs behind.

The spiteful kids I went to school with may have won a battle or two, but I won the war! Tell Mike that one day, he, too, will stand tall and say, "I know who I am, and I know my worth. There is life beyond grade school."

PATRICIA PALMER, JUNEAU, ALASKA

DEAR PATRICIA: Thanks for a wonderful letter. I heard from literally hundreds of readers who recalled the agony of being taunted by cruel classmates.

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Victims of constant teasing should get counseling. I was one of those boys. Never one of the crowd and not a good athlete, I was tormented on a daily basis.

Even though I made good grades, I had (and have) no self-esteem. A loving wife and recent counseling have begun to make a change in how I feel about myself. I am 58 and somewhat successful in my career. I would have been even more successful if I'd had more self-esteem.

My son had the same problem, and I failed to recognize it. He was miserable in school and tried to make up for it by being the class clown. I feel this is the reason he has refused to see or speak to his mother and me for the last five years. He needs help. He's bright, good-looking and has everything going for him — except self-esteem. Like me, he has trouble making friends.

Parental love is not enough. A qualified therapist is the only answer. You need to hear from an outsider that you're worthwhile.

PAMPA — Pampa romped past Dumas, 47-0 in a junior varsity game last week.

It was the first home game of the season for the Pampa JV team, who now have a 5-1 record.

Kevin Jernigan scored three touchdowns on runs of 43, 19 and 3 yards, and Jeremy Knutson scored twice on runs of 1 and 66 yards. Ronnie Proby added a 1-yard touchdown run.

Josh Blackmon was 5 of 7 in passing, including an 18-yard TD pass to Brian Gwin. Blackmon also kicked 5 extra points.

Shawn Harris and Jeff Griffith recovered fumbles and Jason McEwen intercepted a pass for the Pampa defense.

JV coaches said both the offensive and defensive lines played very well in leading this outstanding team effort.

Pampa JV's play Thursday at Hereford.

PAMPA — Anyway you spell his name, Pampa back Marques Long had quite a game against Dumas last Friday night.

Long, a junior, ran for two touchdowns and 105 yards on eight carries as Pampa won, 54-6.

Long's first name was misspelled in Sunday's Pampa News article on the District 1-4A game. He was also incorrectly listed as a senior in the article.

The Harvesters, 4-0 in district and 7-1 overall, host Hereford at 7:30 Friday night in Harvester Stadium. Hereford is 1-2-1 in district and 2-5-1 for the season.

Hereford battled Canyon to a 28-28 tie last Friday night.

AUTO RACING

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Dale Jarrett, who does not consider himself much of a mathematician, has proved he knows something about angles.

One of several Winston Cup stars stepping down to the Busch Grand National series to take part in Sunday's dedication of the new state-of-the-art Homestead Motorsports Complex, Jarrett came home the winner of the season-ending Jiffy Lube Miami 300 in an improbable ending that saw the top three drivers taken out in a wreck two laps from the end.

With the 200-lap race on Homestead's treacherous 1.51-mile oval nearing its end, Kenny Wallace, Winston Cup star Rusty Wallace's little brother, was leading by inches over Hermie Sadler, who was inches ahead of Larry Pearson, who was inches ahead of Jarrett.

As the four-car freight train came rumbling down the 1,200-foot back straightaway, Sadler dove low on the slightly banked track and pulled alongside Wallace. Pearson tried to follow as Jarrett remained in the high groove.

Then Sadler seemed to bog down as the first two cars neared the third turn. Pearson, a two-time Busch Series champion and the son of former Hall of Fame driver David Pearson, rammed the rear of Sadler's car, which turned into Wallace's Ford.

The three leaders slid hard into the outside wall.

"I was going for it, got loose in turn three," Wallace said. "I looked in the mirror, saw Hermie lift and I said, 'Oh damn.' He tagged me and we all went in the wall."

Sadler said, "I got run over. I was making a pass on the backstretch and the guy in third (Pearson) ran over the back of me."

Pearson admitted as much, saying, "Hermie got under Kenny and Kenny started going sideways and I hit them. I'm sorry and I apologize. I certainly didn't mean to hit them. I hit the brakes and the car jumped sideways. There is no margin for error out there."

Jarrett, also the son of a Hall of Famer, Ned Jarrett, drove his Ford Thunderbird through the mess unscathed and wound up cruising behind the pace car to his third Grand National victory of the season and the 11th of his career.

It's moving experience for Oilers, Browns

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Let's see. You had the team from Houston that's headed for Nashville playing the team from Cleveland that's headed for Baltimore.

For the moment, Nashville seems to be getting the better deal.

Chris Chandler passed for two touchdowns and ran for another Sunday as the Oilers beat the Browns 37-10 before a somber Cleveland Stadium crowd that was bracing for worse news today — possible confirmation that the Browns will move to Baltimore.

There were sporadic angry chants directed at Art Modell, who stayed away from a home game for the first time in his 35 years as owner, while the Browns themselves felt like visitors in their own home. There were an uncharacteristic 7,868 no-shows.

The Oilers empathized. "The same type of thing happened to us with the Nashville rumor," Chandler said.

"You look around toward the end of the game and you see signs like 'Keep the Browns here' or 'Art this' or 'Art that.' The fans were probably more hostile toward the situation than toward us."

Houston (4-5) capitalized on the unusual circumstance, scoring on seven consecutive possessions from the time Al Del Greco kicked a 44-yard field goal late in the first quarter to Blaine Bishop's 62-yard interception return early in the fourth.

The Oilers worked with excellent field position all afternoon, set up by a missed field goal, three interceptions and two fumbles; the Browns never punted.

Chandler finished off a 60-yard drive with a 2-yard scramble midway through the second quarter, then hit Haywood Jeffires with a 23-yard scoring pass a minute before the half.

The Browns (4-5) closed to 17-10 on Matt Stover's 20-yard field goal on the first drive of the second half, but they would not score again. Chandler responded with a 15-yard TD pass to Malcolm Seaborn, and Cleveland rookie Eric Zeier was then intercepted on each of the Browns' next three series, putting Houston in position for two more field goals by Del Greco before Bishop's return ended all doubt.

"They had to play catch-up, and that played into our hands," Bishop said. "We put a lot of pressure on them, and then we were fortunate enough to break on the ball and make some big plays."

Zeier was 28 of 54 for 273 yards with one touchdown — a 4-yard pass to Andre Rison on Cleveland's first possession — and three interceptions. He was sacked three times.

Rison's touchdown was the 500th reception of his career.

"I'll take the blame for this loss," said Zeier, who beat Cincinnati a week earlier in his first start in place of demoted Vinny Testaverde. "As an offense, we got put into some situations that we didn't want to be in, and that's when you have to force things a little bit."

Zeier said all the talk about the pending move to Baltimore had little effect on the team, although he suggested the lack of enthusiasm from the normally rowdy crowd made a difference.

"That always hurts a little bit," he said. "You want your fans out there, and you want support. I know with all the rumors around, they are not real happy. This team is going to continue to work hard for the city. Whoever wants to come out and give us some support, we'll welcome it. We need it."

Chandler was 16 of 20 for 149 yards before leaving because of a sore elbow in the fourth quarter. Precautionary X-rays were negative, and Chandler said he expects to play next week.

His absence, though, gave the Oilers a chance to use first-round draft pick Steve McNair for the first time all year. McNair was sacked on his only pass play.

Houston rookie Rodney Thomas had his best game, rushing 17 times for 108 yards. "That was a very poor and embarrassing performance today by the Browns," Cleveland coach Bill Belichick said. "We're going to have to reach down and find a way to do a lot better than that."

Despite 9-0 record, Ohio State may miss out on national title bid

By The Associated Press

The Southern Cal Trojans haven't been to the Rose Bowl since 1990. For Ohio State, it's been even longer.

The Buckeyes last made the trip to Pasadena in 1986. But because the Rose Bowl doesn't participate in college football's bowl coalition, No. 2 Ohio State (9-0, 5-0 Big Ten) might not have a chance to play for the national title.

"We just have to keep on winning," said running back Eddie George, who rushed for 178 yards and three touchdowns Saturday in a 49-21 victory over Minnesota. "I'm not going to sit here and talk about moving up. All we can do is do our talking on the field."

On New Year's Day, the Buckeyes might be talking to 12th-ranked Southern Cal, which moved within a game of earning its first Rose Bowl berth in six years Saturday with a 31-30 victory over Stanford.

The Trojans (7-1-1, 5-0-1 Pacific-10) need only beat last-place Oregon State, a team they have not lost to since 1967, next week to secure the berth. Failing that, a victory against cross-town rival UCLA on Nov. 18 would get the Trojans to Pasadena.

The Trojans needed a 2-point conversion with 7:18 left to keep from tying Stanford. Southern Cal coach John Robinson said he couldn't consider going for a tie because that would have given both Stanford and UCLA a shot at the bowl berth. "I did all the math on Stanford, Washington, UCLA and Oregon, and the math came out (saying) don't tie this game," Southern Cal coach John Robinson said.

In other Top 10 games Saturday, it was No. 1 Nebraska 73, Iowa State 14; No. 3 Florida 58, Northern Illinois 20; No. 4 Tennessee 42, Southern Mississippi 0; No. 5 Northwestern 21, No. 19 Penn State 10; No. 7 Kansas State 49, Oklahoma 10; No. 8 Notre Dame 35, Navy 17;

Bowe's manager wants Tyson put on fight list

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Riddick Bowe had barely finished knocking Evander Holyfield silly and wanted nothing more than some rest and recreation with his five children.

Rock Newman had something else on his mind, like a fight with Mike Tyson.

"I called Don (Tyson's promoter Don King) about an hour ago and we had a very pleasant conversation," Newman said Sunday morning. "If we don't make an attempt, Tyson-Bowe won't be made, and I will make the attempt."

Bowe's manager wasted no time in trying to push his fighter's advantage after a wild fight Saturday night that saw Bowe get off the canvas in the sixth round to knock Holyfield out two rounds later.

Though Tyson is unlikely to take a risky fight against Bowe until he has a few more fights, Newman pushed the fight as one needed by both fighters.

"To regain credibility, they (Tyson and Don King) have to do something dramatic, and we want to be part of the drama," Newman said. "I think it would be a perfect fight for Riddick."

Bowe slept through the Sunday press conference after staying up most of the night so he could call his children in Maryland.

After the fight Saturday night, though, his thoughts were not of future fights, but of his home life.

"I've been gone three months. I just want to go home," Bowe said. "At the first of the year we'll talk about somebody."

A more probable next opponent for Bowe might be Lennox Lewis, who was at the fight and challenged Bowe in a post-fight press conference for a rematch of the 1988 Olympic super heavyweight final won by Lewis. It is a bout favored by Seth Abraham, president for sports for Time Warner, operator of HBO and pay-per-view TVKO. Bowe's victory Saturday night was carried by TVKO.

"It could happen if we make it quickly," Newman said of a fight against Lewis, who held the WBC heavyweight title before being stopped in the second round of his fight with Oliver McCall. "There will be no monkeying around."

When Lewis called Bowe a chicken at the post-fight news conference Saturday night, Newman said, "All contenders who got knocked out by Oliver McCall, wait your turn."

Tyson was to have fought Buster Mathis Jr. down the street opposite the third fight between Bowe and Holyfield, but that fight was canceled earlier in the week after Tyson reinjured a broken thumb in training.

Tyson may still fight Mathis in January, then will likely fight WBC champion Frank Bruno March 16 for the title.

Tyson spent Saturday afternoon at Caesars Palace, the site of the Bowe-Holyfield fight. He was there not to fight, but to go on a shopping spree in the hotel's posh shopping mall.

If Tyson was watching, he couldn't have liked what he saw as Bowe firmly established himself as arguably the baddest heavyweight in the land.

Bowe was bigger and stronger. But it was his punishing left jab and remarkably effective inside boxing ability that made the difference this time around.

Though Holyfield caught him with a left hook that nearly ended the fight in the sixth round, Bowe came back with a tremendous right hand in the eighth round that put Holyfield face-first on the canvas. Holyfield struggled up at the count of nine, but went down quickly again from a grazing right hand and referee Joe Cortez stopped the fight.

Rockets sneak past Suns

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — If Mario Elie ever wondered if he's a money player, he found out for sure on his return to the America West Arena.

Last May 20, Elie hit a 3-point-er in the final seven seconds to lift Houston to a 115-114 victory over the Phoenix Suns and send the Rockets on to the Western Conference semifinals.

Before the Rockets met the Suns in their first 1995-96 meeting, Elie walked back to the same spot on the floor, close to the left sideline.

"It took me six shots to make one," he joked after delivering a seven-point swing in momentum which put the Rockets in control in the Sunday night contest, a 106-104 Houston victory.

Elie tied it for the final time at 97-97 when he threw down Charles Barkley's block of Chucky Brown with 4:05 left.

Then he sank a 3-pointer 36 seconds later and assisted on Sam Cassell's fast-break basket with 3:09 to go, putting Houston ahead 102-97.

"The game was close and competitive. I enjoyed it," said

Hakeem Olajuwon, who carried the Rockets with 24 points and 12 rebounds.

The Suns had a chance to tie with 10 seconds left, but Elliott Perry and Kevin Johnson missed long jumpers as time ran out.

"I think that because we've been in a lot of tight games, and there have been numerous elimination games that we've won, it's really built a lot of togetherness," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said.

Clyde Drexler scored 21 points for the defending NBA champions, while Cassell had 16 and Elie and Robert Horry scored 14 each.

Barkley had 23 points and 17 rebounds, and Wesley Person scored 22 as the Suns got off to an 0-2 start.

Barkley said he wasn't worried, because the Suns played better against a better team than in a 112-106 loss to the Los Angeles Clippers.

"Don't sit around and harp on this one. It's disappointing, but nothing in life is easy, and it's a long season," Barkley said.

Johnson, who scored 39 points in the Suns' opener Friday night, had only five against their nemesis this time. He and A.C. Green each were 1-for-10 from the floor.

"If it drops, we're real happy right now," Phoenix coach Paul Westphal said about Johnson's final miss.

The Suns wanted to avoid losing their home opener, and the game was intensely played — 33 lead changes and 15 ties. Phoenix outbounded the Rockets 52-37, but couldn't overcome the combination of Olajuwon and Houston's outside shooting. Horry, Drexler and Cassell each made two 3-pointers in an 8-of-20 team effort.

Barkley was 2-of-3 on 3-pointers, and Person made 3-of-6, but the rest of the Suns, who traded Dan Majerle and did not offer Danny Ainge a new contract, failed to connect on a total of 12 attempts.

"They are easier to defend, because they don't have so many 3-point shooters," Elie said. "If you stay home on Wesley, (rookie Michael) Finley kind of hesitates, and the rest don't want to shoot it."

The Suns led 52-51 at halftime, and Barkley had 12 points and seven rebounds in the third quarter, sending Phoenix into the final period with an 83-82 lead.

Whatley has great end to season with win at Del Rio

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

RODEO

Steer roper J.B. Whatley isn't having as good a year as he did last year. But he isn't the least bit upset about it.

"The end of the year has been great," Whatley said. "I ended it on a good note."

Whatley won the Texas ProRodeo Circuit Rodeo and Reunion, Oct. 27-28 in Del Rio, in 23.0 seconds on two head, earning $1,826. But unlike last year, Whatley won't be making a trip to the National Steer Roping Finals, Nov. 24-25 in Guthrie, Okla. That was where his horse hurt his back.

"I got him over it, but I don't rope as good on him (now)," he said.

Whatley started this season with a new horse, but things just didn't seem to work right. So he bought another one last month.

"The more I rope on him, and with the adjustments I made on him and myself, he seems to have come around in the last 35 to 40 days," said the 40-year-old cowboy from Gardendale.

"He's the damndest horse I ever had in my life. He wants to please."

Whatley said he's competed in 22 rodeos this season. In the past two weeks, he's won two rodeos and tied for second at another. Whatley won the average at the Brazoria County Fair and Pro Rodeo, Oct. 11-14 in Angleton, earning $1,175. He tied for second with Rocky Garnett at the Guadalupe County PRCA Rodeo in Seguin, earning $647. Whatley finished the season 23rd in the Crown Royal world steer roping standings with $9,201.

"I haven't been to as many (rodeos) as I normally go because of the horse change," he said. "I certainly had the opportunity to go to the Finals this year, but I missed some good steers."

At Del Rio, Whatley didn't place in the first round, but won the second round in 10.1 seconds.

"I was 12.9 on a big steer that really didn't have a good track record," Whatley said of his first round. He said since Guy Allen was one of the steer ropers who just couldn't get that same steer tied down at another rodeo, "I consider myself fortunate to have a time on him."

Whatley has been a PRCA member since 1979. He started out as a team roper, but switched to steer roping, 10 years ago because of time constraints.

"I could get good (team roping) partners, but I couldn't go as much as those guys wanted to go," Whatley said. And he has no regrets about switching events.

"Steer roping is going places," Whatley said. "There are lots of contestants, good stock contractors and a lot of money to be won."

"I'm ready for '96," he said.

Other winners of the Texas ProRodeo Circuit Rodeo and Reunion were: Ken Lensegrag (Piedmont, S.D.), bareback riding, 80 points on Bad Company Rodeo's Warrior, $613; Tom Reeves (Stephenville, Texas), saddle bronc riding, 84 points on Bad Company Rodeo's Copenhagen Sensation, $637; Reed Corder (Melvin, Texas), bull riding, 85 points on Bad Company Rodeo's The Jam, $881; Glenn Dobbs Jr. (Paris, Texas), calf roping, 9.1 seconds, $1,094; Sid Steiner (Austin, Texas), steer wrestling, 3.8 seconds, $970; Kevin Stewart (Glen Rose, Texas)/Martin Lucero (Villanueva, N.M.), team roping, $827; Kay Blandford (Stockdale, Texas), barrel racing, 15.94 seconds, $443.

Walesa and Kwasniewski in Nov. 19 run-off

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — President Lech Walesa and a former Communist leader will face each other in a runoff after each captured about one-third of the vote in Poland's second democratic presidential elections. Early results from a fraction of the 22,000 polling stations showed today that Aleksander Kwasniewski won 34.9 percent of the vote Sunday versus 33.3 percent for the former Solidarity hero. The two men will meet in a Nov. 19 runoff.

Kwasniewski, 41, heads the reconstituted Communists, who have dominated Parliament and the Cabinet since 1993. Winning the presidency could give his Democratic Left Alliance a significant say in shaping a new constitution six years after the Communists were toppled.

But Poles remain divided over whether former Communists can be trusted to lead the nation without restoring corrupt apparatchiks to power. A former regional Communist boss, Jozef Oleksy, is the current prime minister.

Bank braces for deposit crisis, but customers calm

TOKYO (AP) — Bracing for a run on deposits, Daiwa Bank ordered its employees to work early today and had extra cash on hand. But its flow of customers was normal on the first business day since Daiwa's stunning expulsion from the U.S. market.

The company's stock even rose on speculation that Daiwa could benefit from a reported plan to merge with Sumitomo Bank.

U.S. regulators accused Daiwa on Thursday of hiding $1.1 billion in bond-trading losses, and ordered the bank to close its U.S. operations within 90 days. Friday was a holiday in Japan, so depositors didn't have a chance to react to the news until today.

Attempting to calm fears about the bank's finances, Daiwa executives said Friday that a merger with the stronger Sumitomo was possible. News reports suggested they have decided to merge if the details can be worked out.

Americans enjoy freedom, vow to promote democracy

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Two Vietnamese-Americans jailed for promoting democracy in their homeland enjoyed their first full day of freedom today in Thailand and said their political views have not changed.

Nguyen Tan Tri and Tran Quang Liem were resting after more than two years in Vietnamese prisons. They planned to fly to the United States on Tuesday.

Tri, 50, a restaurant owner in Houston, and Liem, 45, an assembler at an electronics company in Santa Ana, Calif., were given early releases Sunday and put on a plane to Bangkok in a conciliatory gesture to the United States.

Tri, Liem and seven Vietnamese were arrested in 1993 for attempting to hold an international conference on development and democracy in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly called Saigon. Authorities accused them of attempting to overthrow the government and put them on trial in August.

Bunker austere shelter for Congress

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — A once top-secret bunker built to house Congress in the event of a nuclear war sits 64 feet beneath a posh Allegheny Mountains resort. But the spartan refuge has little in common with its upstairs neighbor.

The two-story bunker is mostly a maze of narrow halls connecting small, stark rooms and offices, with each floor about the size of a football field. It rests under a west wing of The Greenbrier, although guests looking west out the lobby windows see only a grassy hillside.

In fact, hotel auditoriums and a convention room under the west wing were built as part of the bunker and would have provided office space for congressional officials in a time of war.

Congress and the Defense

Department decided to close the bunker after its existence was reported by The Washington Post in 1992. It was decommissioned July 31 when the contract with Greenbrier's parent company, CSX Corp. of Jacksonville, Fla., expired. CSX was given ownership of the bunker.

Outsiders got their first peek at the bunker Friday through NBC's Dateline news show, which took its cameras on an exclusive tour. On Sunday, The Associated Press was the first print news service given access to the site.

State and federal lawmakers were scheduled to tour the bunker along with other reporters today. Hotel employees will be given tours this week, and eventually the bunker will be opened for limited public tours.

The Greenbrier, about 190 miles southwest of Washington, D.C., has long attracted wealthy and renowned guests, including presidents and diplomats. Congressional Democrats formerly held their winter caucuses here, and during World War II the military used The Greenbrier to intern Japanese diplomats.

The concrete-and-steel bunker was built at the behest of President Eisenhower in 1958 for $14 million to give Congress a place to meet in case of war. The executive and judicial branches have other secret meeting places.

Bunker inhabitants would not eat and sleep in the manner of The Greenbrier, where rooms cost between $340 and $2,600 a night and world-class chefs prepare mouth-watering meals.

Union vote ends strike at windshield plant

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Workers at Chrysler's main windshield plant were back on the job today after voting to end a strike that had threatened to shut down two auto plants.

More than 99 percent of the 600 striking workers who gathered Sunday at a union hall in Dearborn voted in favor of ending the four-day strike.

Workers began returning to McGraw Glass Division plant in Detroit on Sunday and it was gearing up to full operations today. Chrysler spokeswoman Nicole Solomon said the settlement means the company does not expect any interruptions in vehicle production.

The plant makes windshields and window glass used to build cars and trucks at all but two of Chrysler's North American assembly plants. Union officials said Chrysler would have had to shut down its minivan assembly plant in Missouri on Tuesday and its minivan plant in Ontario on Wednesday if the strike had continued.

The United Auto Workers union said it agreed to stop the walkout in return for a company commitment, worth at least $35 million, to preserve jobs at the Detroit plant.

Chrysler's trend has been to divest many components operations and rely on outside suppliers that have lower labor costs. It agreed under union pressure earlier this year to not sell McGraw.

Chrysler also will bring back in the plant some work that had been contracted to outside glass makers, and will work with the union to refine existing manufacturing processes and develop new ones, the union said.

"We wanted a solid guarantee that the plant would be around for 10 years or so," said Erskine Terrell, president of Local 227.

WT plans to focus on more paper recycling

CANYON — West Texas A&M University will spend Nov. 15, Texas Recycles Day, recommitting itself to the campus' paper recycling program called "We're Talking Trash," begun nearly a year ago.

According to figures released by Amarillo Waste Management, the company is collecting eight tons of recyclable-quality paper products from the WTAMU campus per month. Those eight tons translate into the monthly saving of 204 trees, 32,800 kilowatt (kw) hours of electricity, 56,000 gallons of water and 24 cubic yards of landfill space.

"We are very pleased with the efforts made thus far, be we think we can do better," said Gary

Barnes, vice president for business and finance. "It's largely a matter of making recycling bins available and accessible, convincing faculty, staff and students of the importance of recycling and then encouraging them to actively participate in the program."

The university has set its sights on 13 tons per month, which is an attainable goal, according to a joint study involving Texas Tech University, Amarillo Waste Management and WTAMU.

The collection of an environmentally lucky 13 tons would increase the university's monthly savings to 332 trees, 53,300 kw hours of electricity, 91,000 gallons of water and 39 cubic yards of landfill space, Barnes said.

Teacher, wife accused of having sex with and giving drugs to pupils

ABINGTON, Pa. (AP) — It started out as afternoon homework sessions at the fifth-grade teacher's house, where one pupil says if he got a question right, he got to kiss the teacher's wife.

It degenerated into overnight parties filled with beer, marijuana and sex with the teacher's wife as he watched or, at least once, joined in, prosecutors say.

Seven students, aged 13 to 17, have come forward to say they drank beer and smoked marijuana that David Miller and his wife, Maryanne, gave them at their house. Two boys say they had sex with Mrs. Miller, one once and the other more than 60 times in the past year.

The Millers were ordered Tuesday to stand trial on a laundry list of criminal charges, including involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, statutory sexual assault, criminal conspiracy and intimidation of witnesses.

They have denied the charges, although police say Mrs. Miller confessed to giving the youths beer and marijuana and having sex with one boy with her husband sometimes joining them.

Miller's attorney, Roger B. Reynolds Jr., said the confession was coerced. Plus, he said, the teenagers had tried marijuana and beer before they met the Millers.

"We're not dealing with the Hardy Boys here," he said.

Mrs. Miller echoed that Wednesday, in a brief interview at the couple's home in Abington, a suburb just north of Philadelphia. Standing in the doorway, a wilted Halloween pumpkin carved to a frown on the porch, she acknowledged that a few of the charges were true.

"Some of them," she said. "But it's not like we lured them in or anything."

In court papers, Miller only admits to giving the youngsters occasional sips of beer.

According to police and prosecutors, the outgoing, popular couple gained the trust of parents by inviting the teenage boys and girls into their home to study and do homework.

Miller had worked with kids for years, coordinating the before- and after-school program at a YMCA before landing his teaching job 2 1/2 years ago. At Highland Elementary School, he coached a team in an academic competition to a Southeastern Pennsylvania championship. He headed up a Boy Scout troop.

"He seemed to present a picture of a very bright, dedicated teacher," said Abington School District Superintendent James McCafferty.

The picture began to change near the end of August. Police responded to a disturbance call at the Millers' home and found a 13-year-old boy drunk on their porch.

Unabomber not terrorist, but serial killer type

NEW YORK (AP) — The 35,000-word manifesto written by the Unabomber — who investigators believed to be a political terrorist — reveals a man with the profile of a serial killer, The New York Times reported today.

The publication of the document, requested by the Unabomber as a condition to stop his 17-year campaign of violence, has produced no breakthrough, investigators told The Times.

But they now say the manuscript that was published in September suggests a different sort of man than previously thought. And they're also moving away from the theory that he had studied mathematics or computer science; rather, they say, his writings suggest someone versed in the social sciences.

As a result of the publication of the full manuscript in The Washington Post seven weeks ago, investigators have received thousands of leads from the public that have resulted in the revised profile of the criminal whose 16 bombs have killed three people and injured 22 others.

Law enforcement officials have said he is a white man in his 40s who lives in California.

Some experts say the writings of the self-described anarchist condemning what he says is a corrupt and dehumanized technological society contain little original thinking, according to the Times. They say the manifesto is a passable but dated treatise by someone versed in academic argument.

The revised view of the Unabomber — a serial killer who attacks to satisfy some psychological need — was based on a pattern of erratic behavior this year, including a false threat in June to blow up an airplane and the growing strength of the bombs he planted over the years, the Times said.
