U.N.'s 50th anniversary marked

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) - Presidents and premiers converged on New York Saturday to mark the 50th anniversary of the United Nations, in a four-day diplomatic jamboree of speechmaking and toasts, meetings and motorcades through chaotic city streets.

It is history's greatest gathering of world leaders - and New York's biggest security nightmare.

"It will probably be the largest security force ever implemented in the city," said the local FBI chief, James Kallstrom.

Fidel Castro will sermonize from a Harlem church pulpit.

Yasser Arafat will fundraise on Wall Street. Bill Clinton will host minisummits with his Russian and Chinese counterparts. Street protesters, from Cubans to Tibetans, will dog delegations.

Thousands of city police and federal agents will wrap a security blanket around the dignitaries, deploying rooftop anti-sniper teams, bomb-sniffing canines and, around Manhattan island, police boats with frogmen. Helicopters scoured the U.N. property, which sits next to the East River, late Friday.

Security concerns may have prompted one last-minute cancellation: by Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak, who escaped assassination four months ago in Ethiopia, apparently an attempt by Islamic extremists. Another Islamic target, Algeria's President Liamine Zeroual, was still scheduled to attend.

Safety was only one worry for organizers, who had to decide, for example, what kind of food to serve dignitaries from more than 180 lands.

Chief caterer Liz Neumark settled on chicken, lamb and a vegetarian selection. For dessert, the potatoes will partake of a Ben & Jerry's ice cream "bombe."

The dinner, however, was hardly noncontroversial. Giuliani compiled his own "enemies list" - including Castro and Arafat - and left them off his guest roster.

The Cuban president won't be idle. Business leaders are flying in by corporate jet from around the country to meet with Castro to explore economic opportunities in Cuba if the U.S. embargo is lifted, said John Kavulich of the U.S.-Cuba Trade and Economic Council.

"By Wednesday, he will have seen close to 200 business executives," Kavulich said.

Arafat, meanwhile, had his own party arranged - at the same time as Giuliani's and right across the street. Arab-American groups organized a dinner to honor Arafat to raise money for causes connected with the emerging Palestine "entity" in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arabs were still wrangling with the Americans and British Saturday over wording in the three-day special session's final declaration, particularly a paragraph reaffirming peoples' rights to "self-determination" under "foreign occupation," phrases long linked to Israel's occupied territories.

The declaration, a recommitment to U.N. ideals, will be adopted Tuesday, the anniversary of the Oct. 24, 1945, ratification of the U.N. Charter. It will climax a marathon of five-minute speeches by more than 200 kings, presidents, prime ministers, foreign ministers and leaders of U.N. member states and international organizations.

Old Glory to fly again from fort's flag pole

Ada Lester, right, president of the Old Mobeetie Association, and Wheeler County Judge Wendell Morgan, center, accept a U.S. flag from Sgt. Mike VanDeventer of the 4th Cavalry reenactment group during ceremonies at Old Mobeetie Saturday morning. The flag, authentic to the period of the late 19th century, was raised by a 4th Cavalry detail on a flagstaff that was originally used at Fort Elliott, a frontier fort established in what is now Wheeler County in 1875. The fort was abandoned by the army in 1890 and the flag pole was moved first to Wheeler then to in front of the Old Mobeetie jail which now serves as a museum.

Mauro stumps for vet loan program

By DAVID BOWSER
STAFF WRITER

In a rare display of unity, Democrats and Republicans joined together in Gray County courthouse to speak in favor of propositions on the ballot in the constitutional election of Nov. 7.

Flanked by Gray County Commissioner Jim Greene and

Gray County Judge Richard Peet, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro campaigned in Pampa Friday for Proposition 5 which would authorize the Veteran's Land

Board to issue $500 million dollar of general obligation bonds to finance low-interest home loans for Texas Veterans.

Mauro said Texas has a tradition of helping veterans purchase land and homes dating back to when Texas was a Republic.

"The first act of the Congress of the Republic of Texas directed Land Commissioner John Borden to issue grants to veterans," Mauro said, "veterans of the War for Independence from Mexico and of the War for Independence from Spain."

The first grant was to Francisco Ruiz, who received two leagues of land in what is now Karnes County.

Mauro said that among other early grants made by the Republic's Congress was one to Davy Crockett's widow and grants made to the heirs of others who fought at the Alamo.

He said his office has a copy of a letter sent to Borden from Crockett's widow asking to exchange the grant for land in a safer area, the letter states that Indians had burned them out three times at the original site.

"Nobody complains much anymore about the Indians," Mauro said, "but we're still helping veterans."

Texas voters approved a constitutional amendment establishing a program to help veterans of World War II, and the Texas Veterans Land Board made its first loan in 1949.

"We've made more than 65 loans worth almost $1.2 million here in Gray County," Mauro said. "On Nov. 7, voters will decide whether to authorize an additional $500 million in tax-exempt, general obligation bonds to support the VLB's Home Loan Program. It's Proposition 5 on the ballot."

Mauro also endorsed passage of Proposition 14 which would raise tax exemptions for disabled veterans.

"Being a veteran myself," said Peet, "I'd certainly encourage it's passage."

"These two propositions are not going to cost anything," said Greene.

Mauro noted that the default rate on VLB loans is less than one percent, well below the general market default rate of four percent.

"Veterans pay their bills," he said. "That's why the VLB programs have never cost Texas taxpayers a single penny - and they never will."

Mauro quoted Texas Governor George W. Bush, a Republican, as saying, "This is a successful program which helps people help themselves at no cost to the taxpayers of Texas."

"I don't always agree with the governor," laughed Mauro, a Democrat, "but we've on the same team this time."

Bulah Cox, president of the Pampa Board of Realtors, also spoke in favor of passage of the amendments.

Gray County Commissioner Jim Greene, left, joins Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, Gray County Veteran's Service Officer John Triplehorn and Gray County Judge Richard Peet in the Gray County courthouse Friday as Mauro criss-crosses the state to campaign for Proposition 5 on the Nov. 7 general election ballot. Proposition 5 is a state constitutional amendment which would authorize the Veteran's Land Board to issue bonds to finance low-interest home loans for Texas veterans.

Jane was dealing her mother's misery. While her mother, a single parent, worked two jobs to support them, Jane began sneaking out of the house, lying and experimenting with drugs and alcohol with new "friends."

Jane represented authority from adults, lost respect for her mother and often had temper outbursts which developed into verbal abuse.

In desperation, Jane's mother sought help through the Genesis House outpatient program called the Pampa Counseling Service. While her mother learned parenting skills in monthly counseling sessions, Jane moved into the Genesis House residential program, where she remained for eight months. There she learned to control anger, respect authority, take responsibility for her actions and deal with the consequences of her actions. Counseling taught her about the dangers of alcohol, drugs, HIV/AIDS and STDs.

One of the counselors at Genesis House holds a group counseling session with some of the teenagers at the agency. Group counseling sessions are held Monday through Friday.

Jane was assigned home chores, had supervised attendance at school and took part in a varied recreational program. Her school grades improved and so did her self-esteem. After completing the program, Jane returned home with the good feeling that she and her mother could resolve issues openly, honestly and calmly.

Genesis House, entering its 25th year of operation, is designed to reverse such inappropriate and destructive behavior as dropping out of school, running away, violating laws and taking part in inappropriate sexual activity and other behavior that can be destructive to both the physical and mental health of adolescents.

The program provides a strong structure to help the client develop good decision making skills and study and work skills. Wage earning opportunities teach them about budgeting, wise shopping and good work habits. A sliding scale fee means no one is turned away for inability to pay.

Jane is currently doing well and is on her way to becoming a productive member of society thanks to Genesis House, a United Way agency.

Tough year to be a Texas Demo

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's been a tough year to be a Texas Democrat in the nation's capital.

Democrats from the Lone Star State returned to Capitol Hill in January to find their whole world order upside down, Republicans calling the shots in the House for the first time in 40 years.

Forty-two year House incumbent Jack Brooks of Beaumont and 32-year veteran J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin were gone, lost to defeat and retirement respectively. Six-term Houstonian Mike Andrews also hung up his spurs, while a pair of three-term incumbents, Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo and Craig Washington of Houston, fell to challengers.

Reduced to near irrelevance during the Republicans' vaunted 100-day juggernaut known as the "Contract With America" and on the sidelines much of the time since, the Democrats adjusted painfully to their new minority status.

They no longer could look to Austin, either, for Democratic direction, with Republican George W. Bush replacing Ann Richards in the governor's mansion.

The year hasn't gotten much better for the Texas Democratic crowd. Witness:

— In June, four-term Democratic Rep. Greg Laughlin of West Columbia switched parties, becoming the fourth congressional Democrat this year to jump ship.

— Last month, five-term Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, announced he wouldn't seek re-election to East Texas' 1st District. Chapman is exploring a run for Republican Phil Gramm's Senate seat.

— In the neighboring 2nd District, 12-term veteran Charlie Wilson of Lufkin is widely expected to announce Monday that he's retiring too. Wilson and Chapman hold two of Texas' five seats on the House Appropriations Committee — which lades out federal dollars — with no guarantees that Texans will be appointed to replace them.

— Earlier this month, Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle announced he'd step down in December after 15 years at the helm of the party, pushed aside by top statewide Democratic officeholders eager for a new direction. Former Clinton administration official Bill White, whose candidacy is backed by those seeking Slagle's departure, is campaigning hard for the job.

— Rep. Frank Tejeda, who represents South Texas' 28th District, underwent surgery to remove a brain tumor nearly three weeks ago. The San Antonio Democrat's office has been tight-lipped about his health. While not addressing his long-term prognosis, Tejeda says his recovery is going well and he will seek re-election.

Democrats acknowledge the year has been a turbulent one, but predict they'll emerge strengthened and at the very least retain the 18-12 House split they hold over Republicans. They say they'll keep the Chapman and Wilson seats, and promise strong challenges in Laughlin's district and against the man who toppled Brooks: Republican Steve Stockman of Friendswood.

"The Texas Democratic Party has always been a boisterous, outgoing, gregarious family and in the year before an election has been willing to have a few family squabbles," said party executive director Ed Martin, who rejects any characterization that Democrats are adrift.

"I frankly think this is a year where we are going through the kind of changes any family goes through," he added.

Rep. Pete Geren, a conservative Democrat from Fort Worth, termed the change cyclical.

"Every delegation goes through that. When you lose a speaker of the House, it is a loss and you make up for it," he said, speaking from experience. Geren stepped into the seat vacated by Speaker Jim Wright, who was brought down in 1989 by a messy ethics investigation.

DPS reviews Joost family deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — The director of the Texas Department of Public Safety says his agency will "take another look" into the deaths five years ago of a Texas Racing Commission official and his family.

The deaths of David Joost, his wife and two children were ruled murder-suicide, but that ruling has been challenged almost from the start.

James Wilson did not say he would re-open the case, but said DPS investigators will study evidence and interview key witnesses as part of a review of the case. "We're not trying to prove that we were right or wrong, but simply to take another look at it," Wilson said. "I'd like to be able to resolve it one way or another. I don't know if we will or won't."

Joost and his family were each shot through the heart on March 4, 1990. DPS officials said Joost killed his wife, and two children, then turned the gun on himself in his home in Buda, near Austin.

The bodies were discovered the morning Joost was to brief the racing commission on a controversial contract.

Some family members and some law enforcement authorities have never believed those findings and say he may have been murdered because he uncovered corruption in the racing industry.

The family's concerns grew after recently opened case files showed the Rangers lost or misplaced important evidence.

Transcripts of closed-session court hearings obtained by the Houston Chronicle show Rangers may have misstated pertinent facts.

Wilson met with the Joost family's private investigator for nine hours last week.

"I'd like a neat answer, but quite often life is not so neat," Wilson said. "There will probably be things always unanswered."

A Houston Chronicle review of recently opened case files and court transcripts revealed that Rangers apparently misplaced or failed to keep notes of interviews with Joost's co-workers and lost taped interviews with one key witness. Also missing was Joost's briefcase.

Last month, Wilson said a crime lab specialist had told him a lack of fingerprints and blood on the gun was because an officer had picked up the gun and "stuck it in his trousers."

On Friday, however, Wilson said a DPS trooper told department officials that no one had picked up the gun.

Federal inmates attack prison workers

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — Several inmates at the Federal Correctional Institution attacked two staff members on a day that saw prison disturbances in several states, officials said.

The prison issued a statement saying the staff members were assaulted in a housing unit Friday night and taken to local hospitals for treatment.

One of the workers suffered cuts and bruises to the head, while the other was treated at a local hospital and released, prison spokeswoman Sandra Butler said.

The statement also said that after the first attack, which occurred about 9:15 p.m., two inmates in another housing unit were attacked by other inmates. Neither their injuries nor those of the workers were considered life-threatening.

It was not clear whether the attacks were related to violence at prisons in Alabama, Tennessee, and Pennsylvania, which erupted late Thursday. Butler said federal investigators are looking into the cause of the disturbance.

The suspects in both incidents have been identified and have been put in a special housing unit until the FBI has investigated. The prison was under lockdown Saturday.

Oklahoma City bombing suspects Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols are being held in strict isolation at the El Reno prison awaiting trial.

Prison employees raise United Way funds

Employees of the Rufe Jordan prison unit raised more than $5,000 during the month long state employees charitable campaign.

The recent first annual Jordan Unit Charity Golf Tournament, sponsored in conjunction with 39 local businesses raised $2,650 on behalf of Pampa United Way. Eighteen four man teams played at Hidden Hills Public Golf Course on Oct. 14.

Golf tournament proceeds plus employee contributions raise the money donated to charity to exceed $5,000.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Texas Opinion

San Angelo Standard-Times on bilingual benefits:

It's plain common sense that being able to speak two languages is better than speaking one. Often, that can mean a better salary, and bravo for those who benefit.

But two Texas lawmakers, state Sen. Mario Gallegos and state Rep. Gerald Torres, Democrats from Houston, want to make sure bilingual employees benefit. They will file bills in the next session of the Legislature forcing employers to pay a premium when being bilingual is a job requirement.

Plainly put, the Legislature has no business telling employers how much to pay the people who work for them. The free market system seems to have worked pretty well without that.

A person who speaks two languages and who works in a position in which that ability benefits the employer, is free to negotiate for higher pay or to seek another employer who would be more appreciative. The same applies to a person with a master's degree or who has superior computer skills or who can type 95 words a minute.

The bill is so lacking in merit that it won't ever see the light of day. Still, it's annoying to know that lawmakers waste their time on such silliness instead of legitimate issues that affect Texans.

Austin American-Statesman on aid to Mexico:

President Clinton's decision to help bail out the Mexican economy despite congressional criticism has clearly helped Mexico weather the incredible string of disasters she has suffered recently.

Stability and progress in Mexico can only rebound to the good of both Mexico and the United States, especially border states such as Texas.

No one can prevent natural disasters such as earthquakes and hurricanes that have recently devastated parts of Mexico. But economic disruption is just as devastating as natural disasters and, unrelieved, only adds to the difficulties posed by political and social upheaval.

The $12.5 billion loaned to Mexico is clearly a success, and it has been reported by The New York Times that the further $7.5 billion that had been promised probably won't be necessary.

Indeed, the U.S. Treasury has already received $470 million in interest as well as one early repayment of principal on the loan. Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo managed that by a bond issue on private markets.

Arranging such a bond issue wouldn't have been likely if the American loan package hadn't helped stop the peso's free fall.

The president and Gov. George W. Bush may not see eye-to-eye on many political issues, but both are farsighted enough to understand the value of being a good neighbor in more than name only.

We need more multiculturalism

Fallout from the O.J. Simpson acquittal has produced a rage of sorts that threatens to engulf the white community. As such, it's a sign that white people haven't availed themselves of a multicultural education. If they had an understanding of multicultural theory, as Johnnie Cochran has, white people would know it was impossible that O.J. could have murdered his wife and Ron Goldman because police officer Mark Fuhrman is a racist. Prosecutor Marcia Clark's behavior is understandable; she doesn't look like she's taken even one multiculturalism class. Don't ask me to explain Chris Darden's behavior.

White people showed another multiculturalism deficit in their anger at seeing television shots of cheering Howard University Law School students when the O.J. verdict was announced. Their glee is understandable. Howard University students have been steeped in multiculturalism theory. They know that rich white people have gotten away with murder. There, when a rich black man can hire high-powered lawyers and also get away with murder, it's a sign of racial progress. We've moved closer to equality before the law, and hence, it is an occasion for celebration. The trial itself creates incentive for Howard's law students to become district attorneys and eliminate Marcia Clark type shenanigans.

Howard's students know that the O.J. verdict is also a sign that parity of a sort has finally been achieved. For decades, particularly in the South, white jurors wouldn't think of convicting a white person for murdering a black. Predominantly black juries are catching on to what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. But let's not credit the O.J. jury with originality.

A while back, a New York jury acquitted Limerick Nelson, a black, in the face of overwhelming evidence for murdering Yankel Rosenbaum, a Jew. Under multiculturalism, trials are a waste of time. Guilt can be established by simply asking two questions: What is the race of the accused? What is the race of the victim(s)? Some white may call this black racism, but a basic tenet of multiculturalism is this: Blacks cannot be racists!

Had O.J. been convicted, the prospects of riots loomed large. If black people will torch a city when police officers are acquitted for simply beating a criminal, one shudders at the thought of the mayhem had a hero like O.J. been convicted of a murder he could not have possibly committed because Fuhrman is racist. You don't have to be a multiculturalist to settle the question: Should O.J. be acquitted, or should Los Angeles, Chicago, Washington and other major cities be leveled in fires of rage with the loss of thousands of lives? You just have to love our country. Multiculturalists reach the same conclusion but for a different reason. They know that most lives lost in a "rebellion" would be black. Therefore, loosing the Juice saves lives. The multiculturalist vision of property destruction is another matter: Black people have the right to turn their communities into wastelands so long as white people misbehave.

White people rebel but not like blacks. They do sneaky things like moving out of our major cities under the cover of darkness, taking their tax base along with them. They relocate businesses to locations with small black populations and taunt "Affirmative-action is now!" They automate their businesses because machines can't bring discrimination suits and demand diversity in the workplace. If the trends continue, multiculturalists are going to have to ask Clinton to pass an executive order requiring permits for white people to relocate businesses and residences. The only real hope for racial peace and harmony is for us to pay greater attention to race experts and extend multicultural education.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Oct. 22nd, the 295th day of 1995. There are 70 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 22, 1962, President Kennedy announced he had ordered U.S. air and naval forces to blockade Cuba, following the discovery of Soviet missile bases on the island. Kennedy demanded the Soviets dismantle the rocket sites.

On this date:
In 1746, Princeton University in New Jersey received its charter.

In 1797, French balloonist Andre-Jacques Garnerin made the first parachute descent, landing safely from a height of about 3,000 feet.

In 1836, Sam Houston was inaugurated as the first constitutionally elected president of the Republic of Texas.

In 1844, legendary stage actress Sarah Bernhardt was born in Paris.

In 1883, the original Metropolitan Opera House in New York held its grand opening with a performance of Gounod's "Faust."

Is this plan crazy or stupid?

Charley Reese

The real question about President Clinton's desire to send 25,000 Americans to the Balkans is this: Is this plan crazy or stupid?

The blamey version is that Americans must contribute to a NATO peace-keeping force. Why should we? "Peace keeping" is a euphemism designed to hide reality. If the three ethnic groups wish to live in peace, you don't need peace keepers. If they don't, there's no peace to keep.

You can see how crazy-stupid this idea is when you try to answer the following questions: What, precisely, is the mission? How will we know when it's been accomplished? How long will it take? What will be the cost? What will be the benefits to the American people?

I know that last question strikes a jarring note among internationalists, but after all, these troops belong to the U.S. government. The only source of authority for the U.S. government is the Constitution. The Constitution does not say one syllable about forming a more perfect union, ensuring domestic tranquility, promoting the general welfare and securing the blessings of liberty in Bosnia.

In fact, that famous preamble says quite specifically, "We, the people of the United States" seek all those things, "including the blessings of liberty ... to ourselves and our posterity." The sole purpose and reason for the existence of the U.S. Army is to provide for the common defense of the American people.

President Clinton and other internationalists propose to use the American Army as international errand boys and leg breakers for the United Nations, for the European Union and for miscellaneous multinational corporations.

The American people should insist Congress call a halt to this abuse. Perhaps we need a constitutional amendment limiting the powers of the commander in chief so that under no circumstances will Americans even have to wear an international uniform, serve under any but American command or go in harm's way for any purpose other than defending the United States.

One reason Switzerland is such a happy little country is that it has wisely maintained a policy of armed neutrality. The people support their government's military preparations (they have universal military training for all men) but because they know their sons' lives will not be thrown away in some two-bit international scheme or foreign adventure.

As usual, the Clinton administrations has been deceiving. It was U.S. Army officers who trained and probably directed the Croat invasion, which, by the way, resulted in ethnic cleansing and atrocities. Because the victims are Serbs, neither the United States nor the news media has shown much interest.

The United States has been supplying the Muslims with intelligence and has schemed with the Muslim government to instigate NATO planes to heavily bomb Serb military positions. That is not the role of a broker of peace; that is the role of a covert intervention in another country's affairs.

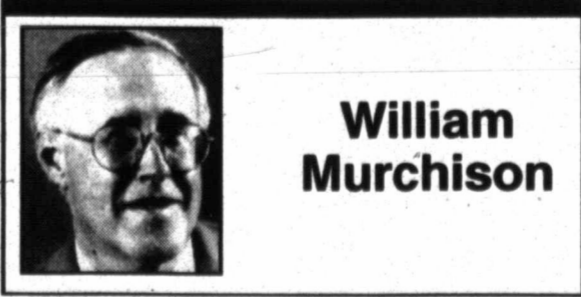

All of this, I suppose, was designed to get Clinton a photo opportunity as the man who brought peace to the Balkans. Nonsense. The tentative agreement involves partition of Bosnia, and that agreement could have been signed three years and several thousand lives ago. There is no peace in the Balkans.

As for putting U.S. forces on the ground in the Balkans, that will prove to be a disaster. What will they do? Disarm the Serbs? We couldn't disarm the Somalis, and the Serbs are 100 times tougher than they were.

And does Clinton think that the Serbs don't read or watch television? They know all they have to do is start killings Americans. In Lebanon, it took about 241 dead Americans to force us out; in Somalia, about 18.

How many American lives is Clinton willing to sacrifice for his photo opportunity as a phony peacemaker before he ignominiously retreats? His plan will waste American lives and further damage America's standing among nations. The Balkans are none of our business. It's stupid and crazy to go there.

The unsolid South - the party's over

William Murchison

Breathing bourbon and branch water, fingering white linen lapels, they ran the Democratic Party and the American scene pretty much to their liking. Or so goes the popular myth concerning the oldtime Southern Democrats - Byrd and Glass of Virginia, Russell and George of Georgia, Stennis and Eastland of Mississippi, and so on.

It was, needless to say, a long, long time ago, and if the '90s don't obliterate memories of that era in American politics, nitroglycerine may be necessary. Turn off the lights - Sam Nunn is retiring; the party's over.

The senior senator from Georgia, who allowed Monday that he will bow out next year, wasn't a conservative in the classic sense. He just looked that way compared with his Democratic colleagues. His announcement shows how great is the transformation in today's South.

Republicans in the 11 Southern states hold most of the U.S. House seats, 59 of 101, and nearly half the Senate seats, 12 of 22. There are five Southern Republican governors and six Democratic ones. Legislative chambers in Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee are under Republican control. You'd think Reconstruction were still going on. And you'd be about half right.

Republican Reconstruction duly ended, to be sure, with Rutherford B. Hayes' victory in the 1876 presidential election, whereafter federal troops were withdrawn from the South. It was the Democrats themselves, the party to which conservative Southerners pledged allegiance in the post-bellum period, who instituted the Second Reconstruction. This was in the 1960s. The motive was to enforce the civil rights of blacks, as to schooling, voting and other democratic prerogatives. The civil rights offensive, with which Republicans cooperated, need not have dislodged the Democrats from preeminence in Southern politics. But there were other factors, such as No. 1 Democratic resistance to the Vietnam war, No. 2 the counterculture, which effectively took over the party with George McGovern's nomination, No. 3 the push beyond integration, in the form of busing, No. 4 consistent Democratic backing for high taxes and big government and No. 5 Bill Clinton. All the while, the Republicans, national and Southern alike, kept a conservative profile. The term "conservative Southern Democrat" became one of the great oxymorons. There weren't any such, save in the minds of the media.

There will be even fewer in the next Congress, with Nunn's retirement and that of three more senators - David Pryor of Arkansas, Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and Howell Heflin of Alabama. Republicans have an excellent chance to grab all four seats.

Meanwhile Democratic office-holders kick loose the traces and flat out declare themselves Republicans. Usually, they announce how much more philosophically comfortable they feel in the Grand Old Party, never mind, suh, how long-dead Republicans treated the South. That was then, this is now.

In the O.J. Era, everything has a racial angle. Various Democrats portray the flight to the GOP as proof of its having turned into the racist party - the kind to which white Southerners just naturally flock. If it makes Democrats feel better to believe such drivel, let them go right ahead.

The Democrats do love racial quotas, and they display a poorly modulated disdain for heartfelt religious conviction, for traditional moral standards, for honest labor and free competition and the right to safe streets. None of this sits well with Southerners - or with millions outside the South. Being human, we rarely vote for people who make nasty faces at us.

The conservative South, loudly as liberals have always yipped about it, keeps America more serious than it might otherwise be about fundamental concerns. Southerners - the demographically dominant whites, along with growing numbers of blacks - object to centralization, high taxes, bad manners, hedonism and social rot. Are they always right? No. Are they God's chosen people? No. What they are, these days, are Republicans.

Letters to the editor

Keep the treasurer

To the editor:
I am writing to encourage area voters to vote AGAINST Proposition No. 10 to "Abolish the Office of State Treasurer." It is only a mere gesture meant to symbolize fiscal concern and its adoption will provide only illusory actual dollar savings, at best. Its adoption would result in an actual loss to Texans. The state treasurer is charged with a host of duties in restraint upon the powers of the state comptroller of public accounts.

If the office is abolished, the simple but sensible, "checks and balances" by the state treasurer upon the state comptroller would be lost and the power transferred to the comptroller's office. It would mean further concentration of power in the state office already vested with enormous power. The savings would be minimal: the salary of the treasurer is $79,247 or .00002 percent of the state budget of $39.6 billion. The employees of the state treasurer's office would transfer to the comptroller and to the Employee Retirement System and NO dollar savings to Texas citizens would be realized.

Texas has had a treasurer since 1876 when the Constitution was approved; early Texans were suspicious of government and wanted its powers spread among many elected officials to avoid too much power concentrated in any one official. In this concept the office of state treasurer was born and endures today as an integral element of state government. Both former governor Ann Richards and U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison served Texas as state treasurer.

In conclusion, I ask "should Texans vote to abolish the office of state treasurer?" The answer is NO! There is no benefit that will accrue to Texans by such action.

Thank you for allowing area voters to read the truth.
Scott B. Hahn
Gray County Treasurer and vice president of the County Treasurer's Association of Texas.

Drive safely around buses

To the Editor,
If you want a story that is in with the times well here is one? Ask any bus driver what he dreads most. He will tell you that the one thing that bothers him the most is for people not to stop when he is stopped.

It makes no difference loading or unloading. There is the chance that a child will run out from some hidden place. Maybe they are

Austin attorney files for court of criminal appeals judgeship

AUSTIN - Brad Wiewel, former briefing attorney for Judge Leon Douglas of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, Friday announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. He is running for the seat being vacated by retiring Judge Bill White.

Wiewel, an Austin attorney, cited the "increasing invasion of violence into the lives of ordinary Texans" as one of his primary reasons for running.

He said, "Too many Texans are being terrorized by crime. As the final stop in the Texas court system, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals is critical to the proper functioning of law and order in our state. The safety of Texas families cannot be compromised."

Wiewel pledged to bring a common sense approach to criminal justice.

eager and are afraid that they will be left behind.

I'm not talking about the big city transit, I'm talking about the busses that pick children up for the purpose of taking them to church on Sunday morning. I drive a church bus on Sundays and worry about the babies that love riding that old bus. And we try to be as safe as we can but on Sunday the 15th of October one of our bus workers was hit by a car.

She was bruised and sore but ok. This time all came out with a warning. Next time we might not be so lucky. What I ask your readers for is to stop when they see a bus stopped and not to pass unless they are waved by. This will not only save lives but it will save people that accidentally run over someone.

P.S. If you don't believe me, just stop any church bus driver and ask him for yourself.

Thank you,
Johnny L. Belt

Support Prop. 3

To the Editor:
Rural Texans have long felt their concerns were not being heard in state government. HARK! State government has heard our rural plea to develop financing for diversification of agriculture, at last!

The legislature established the needed funding for a market-based finance program that helps Texas agriculture and Texas workers, without creating any taxes or bonding authority. Ninety percent of everything raised in Texas goes out of state to be processed; one of the worst rates in the nation. To bring Texas up to the national average of 20 percent in state production would add $22 billion dollars to our Texas economy.

On the November ballot, find Proposition and vote YES! Proposition 3 will shift resources from an underutilized program to a program that will benefit rural Texans. The program is the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority (TAFE), and the amount is $200 million. This money can be shifted from the existing bonding authority of the Farm and Ranch Finance Program, an underutilized program, to expand the TAFE program. TAFE has already be able to add $400 million to the state economy, effectively and efficiently, on a limited amount of funding. Imagine the economic impact TAFE could have on rural Texans with the funds and opportunity to multiply the benefits. With the passage of Proposition 3, more bond money will be accessible for expansion, development, production and marketing of Texas agricultural products, which means jobs for rural Texans and economic growth for rural Texas.

Continue to make the voice of rural Texas heard at state government, vote YES to Proposition 3 on Nov. 7.

Sincerely for Rural Texas,
Honey Dowdy
Rural Economic Development Specialist

City workers, inmates start alley clean up Monday

Beginning Monday, the city of Pampa in cooperation with inmates and officials of the Rufe Jordan Prison Unit will begin a massive alley clean up project.

Alleys will be cleaned by ward in numerical order and inmate and city workers will remain in the area until the alleys are clean, said sanitation superintendent Rick Stone. The clean up effort is scheduled to last three to four weeks, he said.

The project is an effort to eliminate the back log of work orders for alley clean up.

Stone asks that city residents who have something in the alley now which they wish to save to move the item the inside of the property by Monday.

The city, he said, will not be responsible for items removed that were left in the alley after Monday.

Refrigerators and tires are the residents responsibility, he said.

Ward boundaries are:
Ward 1 - Area north of Kentucky Street, north to city limits just north of the hospital; area west of Hamilton and Perryton Parkway, west to city limits. Also area south of Harvester to Georgia.

Ward 2 - Area east of Hamilton and Perryton Parkway, east to city limits; area north of Georgia and north of Harvester to city limits.

Ward 3 - Area south of Harvester and east of Cuyler and Barnes streets, south and east to city limits.

Ward 4 - Area south of Kentucky, west of Cuyler and Barnes streets and north of McCullough Street to city limits on west side of town.

Thunder Junction meeting to feature major announcements

Westwood Enterprises, Inc., developers of Thunder Junction, has announced plans for the construction of the Old West Town. The town will feature a wagon wheel design layout of retail shops with each street reflecting a specific period in Texas history.

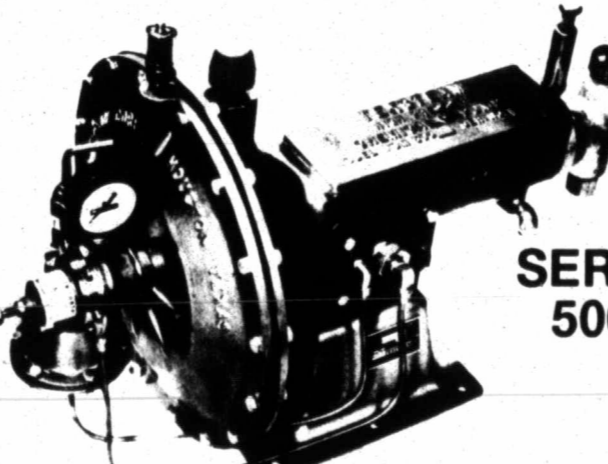

The town will feature arts and crafts, shopping, dining and musical entertainment," said Stan McClendon, spokesman for Thunder Junction. He added that potential vendors and con-

Pampa woman named to state association post

AUSTIN — Janie V. Shed, owner of Shed Realty Inc. in Pampa, has been elected to serve as the 1996 Texas Association of REALTORS (TAR) Region 1 vice president.

Shed was installed on Sept. 23 during TAR's 75th Annual Convention in Corpus Christi and will take office Jan. 1, 1996.

A 17-year veteran real estate licensee, Shed is a REALTOR and appraiser, who has served in volunteer positions with both the Pampa Board of REALTORS and TAR.

Statewide, Shed has attended every TAR convention and spring meeting for the past 14 years and was a TAR director from 1990-94.

Shed is also a member of her chamber of commerce and the American Women's Business Association. She has received several community revitalization awards, serves as secretary for the Pampa Planning and Zoning Commission, and was president of "Clean Pampa" in 1993.

As Region 1 vice president, Shed will help coordinate activities and serve as liaison between TAR and the area REALTOR boards and associations.

Minding your own Business

By Don Taylor

Turn it down

If my college-freshman daughter was still living at home she would assume that this column's headline was directed at her. Frequently, as I've written this column down the hall from her bedroom, I've had to ask her to turn down the volume on her stereo.

However, this column has nothing to do with Christi, or the decibel level of her stereo. The message is for business owners. The subject is: Not all business is good business. In fact, some business is best handled by turning it down.

For most of us the thought of turning business away is somewhat frightening. We work hard for prospects, struggle to please them and go all out to keep them coming back. Surely no one in their right mind would run off business intentionally.

Just say no

As a professional speaker, I have a hard time saying no to any potential customer. My male ego somehow equates landing a speaking engagement with winning. There fore, if I say no to a job, I lose. Winning is more fun, so I say yes.

Since our Up Against the Wal-Mart book came out last year, my phone hasn't stopped ringing. I've been asked to speak to some interestingly diverse groups. Usually, I'm comfortable with the requests and enjoy the opportunities.

However, I accepted two speaking opportunities recently that I should have turned down. The requests came from other referrals, the organization's expectations were high, and both requests were really outside my core competencies. I should have politely declined these speaking invitations.

Here's why: Taking on this fringe area work required me to spend a lot of extra time and effort learning background information. Actual preparation time increased by a factor of five, and I was much less comfortable with the content and execution of the work.

In addition, stress levels were high prior to speech day. These two presentations and their prodigious time requirements caused other work to suffer as well. My motto is now: "Do what you do best, and say no to the rest."

Don't take the risk

Venturing out into new areas in your business always involves risk. If the risk is greater than the potential reward, don't take the risk. Your business reputation is at stake every time you deliver.

Some examples of bad-risk business might include customers with poor credit, customers with a history of unreasonable expectations, clients with vague requests or needs, customers in remote geographic locations and customers who ask for work outside of your area of expertise.

Two examples

Tim is a contractor in a small rural community. When work slowed down at home, he bid a job 100 miles away. He needed the work so he bid the job with thin profit margins. Still, he was elated when he was awarded the bid.

However, two key employees quit because of the long daily commute. Those who stayed wanted to be paid for travel time. In addition, needed tools were often left in the warehouse at home and had to be rented. The result: Tim lost money on the job and would have been better off sitting at home.

Vicki is a commercial artist. During a slow month, she reluctantly agreed to create a logo for two finicky business owners at a reduced rate. She submitted several samples, but none were just right. After several reworks and many hours of effort, the business owners informed Vicki that the work wasn't what they expected and they refused to pay.

I know it's hard to say no to any potential for profit. However, we must learn to evaluate the risk that comes with doing any job. If the business isn't good business, turn it down.

AMPI closing Portales, N.M., plant

PORTALES, N.M. (AP) — Associated Milk Producers Inc. has announced it is closing its Portales plant and offering the 45 employees a choice between accepting jobs with other AMPI plants or a severance package.

About half were offered jobs at the Roswell plant, while the remainder would have to work elsewhere in the company or accept severance based on seniority, a company news release said. Employees were told of the decision Monday, and AMPI spokesman Jerry Clark issued the statement to the public Tuesday.

"It's just pure economics," Clark said. "The bottom line is to be more efficient for the people who own us, and that's the dairy farmers."

It was no great surprise to local officials.

Banks agree to settlement for Hispanic borrowers

PECOS (AP) — Security State Bank has reached a $500,000 settlement with the U.S. Department of Justice stemming from allegations of bias against Hispanic borrowers.

The bank was charging an average 18 percent interest rate on loans to Hispanics, while non-Hispanics were charged an average 15 percent rate, from October 1991 to October 1993, according to the Justice Department.

"This is unusual in that people don't know they're victims," said Paul Hancock, chief of the Justice Department's housing and civil enforcement division. "They don't know the price anyone else paid."

In addition to the settlement reached Wednesday, the bank must pay $10,000 in civil penalties and set up a bilingual customer assistance program to provide information on loans.

American Petroleum Institute convention set for November

WASHINGTON - Texas Gov. George W. Bush, former Secretary of Education William J. Bennett and Alexander J. Trotman, chairman and chief executive officer of Ford Motor Company, are among the speakers at the 1995 Annual Meeting of the American Petroleum Institute (API).

The 75th Annual Meeting will be held at the Hyatt Regency Houston Hotel in Houston Nov. 12-14.

This year's agenda has been expanded to include a full two and a half days of speaking engagements, discussion sessions on oil and natural gas issues, meetings of various API committees and social activities.

On Sunday afternoon, concurrent sessions will be held on "Managing Energy Risk" and "Going Global: International Standardization and Quality Programs." A reception for all annual meeting attendees will round out the evening.

Monday's events will begin with an address from Rep. Steve Largent (R-Okla.), a freshman member of the House Budget Committee and former Seattle Seahawks professional football player, at the petroleum industry prayer breakfast. The general session will feature Gov. Bush; Trotman; Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute; and Michael Barone, columnist for U.S. News and World Report and co-author of The Almanac of American Politics.

At 12 noon Monday, Kenneth T. Derr, chairman and chief executive officer of Chevron Corporation and chairman of API, will be the featured speaker at a luncheon for all annual meeting participants. He also will present the API's Gold Medal Award for distinguished achievement to this year's recipient.

On Monday afternoon, concurrent sessions will be held on "Flat Tax, VAT Tax, USA Tax - Replacements for the Current System?" and "The Fuel That Made Milwaukee Famous: Perspectives on RFG Implementation." API also will host an evening reception.

A major economic session, titled "Economic Future of the Petroleum Industry," will be held on Tuesday morning. Among the featured speakers will be Dr. John Rutledge, chairman of Rutledge & Co. Inc. Two additional speakers will be announced later.

The API Annual Meeting will close following a luncheon featuring speaker Dr. William J. Bennett, former Secretary of Education, drug enforcement czar during the Bush administration and author of the best-selling Book of Virtues.

SBA seeks award nominations

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) is looking for the successful small business man or woman for America's "Small Business Person of the Year" for 1996. The deadline for nominations is Dec. 15. Winners of the state competition compete for the national title.

Each year since 1963, the president has designated a week as national Small Business week in recognition of the small business community's contributions to the economy. Nearly 21.5 million strong, small businesses now employ 54 percent of the private work force, produce 50 percent of the private sector output and create two of every three new jobs.

Business owners from every state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Guam who have been named as their state's "Small Business Person of the Year" will travel to Washington for three days of small business related activities.

From among these state winners, the national "Small Business Person of the Year" is announced by the president during a White House ceremony. In addition to receiving national recognition, the winner often becomes a frequent source for print and broadcast journalists on small business issues.

"Small Business Week is a long-standing tradition," said SBA Administrator Philip Lader. "The SBA is honored to be the sponsor of this event which honors small businessmen and women who are among the nation's most successful entrepreneurs."

Each state's Small Business Person of the Year must meet criteria which includes staying power, growth in employment, increase in sales/unit volume, innovation, response to adversity, and evidence of contributions to his/her community.

Advocate awards are also presented to persons who have used their professional skills or personal talents to further public understanding and awareness of small business. Candidates must have taken an active role in creating opportunities to promote the interests of small business.

Advocate categories include: Women in Business, Minority, Veteran, Accountant, Financial Services and Media. Special awards are also presented to the Small Business Exporter and Young Entrepreneur of the Year, and the Federal Government

Small Business Prime Contractor and Subcontractor of the Year. Large companies that started as small businesses and became big businesses are also honored with the Entrepreneurial Success Award.

Among America's top small business owners who have received the national distinction in recent years are: a California businessman who recently sold interests in his successful 168-employee environmental technology and equipment firm with sales of $21.5 million to a major corporation; a Utah businesswoman who opened a plant store in 1975 and built it into a thriving million dollar a year enterprise; a

Wisconsin bird food manufacturer with $70 million in annual sales; and an Oklahoma grandmother who started making hair-bows for her granddaughters as a hobby and turned it into a multi-million dollar a year business.

Nominations in the Small Business Person of the Year, Advocates of the Year and special Small Business Week awards categories can be made by any individual or organization dedicated to the support of the small business community, including professional and trade associations, business organizations, chambers of commerce, banks or a small business' employees.

Food For Thought by

Danny Bainum

Grilled banana sundaes offer a taste of the tropics. Cut bananas in half crosswise, then lengthwise; brush with butter and a little orange juice, then grill on medium coals. Serve with vanilla ice cream and warm caramel sauce. Top with coconut and almonds.

Food won't slip off kebabs and into the fire if you thread it onto two skewers at once. Also available: blade-shaped skewers that food can't roll around.

Fruit pops are good-for-you treats the kids love. Buzz together a cut-up banana, a cup of crushed pineapple, a pint of strawberries, hulled and halved, a cup of vanilla yogurt and 1/4 cup honey. Fill paper cups or plastic pop holders; insert sticks and freeze.

Do super things to boneless chicken breast halves with a marinade of dark beer, soy sauce, chopped cilantro and jalapeno chili and a little lime juice. Chill up to four hours, then grill or broil just until done. Serve in thin slices with salsa.

FOOTBALL

PAMPA — It was a dream come true for Glenda Cobb of Pampa.

Mrs. Cobb, a self-described "sports nut" had always wanted to go to a Texas-OU football game, but had never been able to get tickets. Thanks to a generous boss with two extra tickets, she was able to make the trip to Dallas last weekend.

"It was great. I'll want to go back every year now," she said. "I'm hooked."

Mrs. Cobb said she couldn't believe all the noise and excitement in the Cotton Bowl.

"Everytime somebody moved on the field there was this loud roar from the stands that was just unbelievable. It was an experience I'll never forget," she said.

Mrs. Cobb, 55, is no stranger to college football games.

"I used to go see Texas and Arkansas play back when they were big rivals, but the OU-Texas game was something I've never been able to make," she added.

This year's game ended up tied, 24-24.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Star running back Andre Davis was suspended by Texas Christian on Saturday pending an investigation into allegations of contact with an agent.

The school announced the suspension in a one-paragraph release before the Horned Frogs' 16-11 victory Saturday afternoon against Tulane in Amon Carter Stadium. Close followers of the team were caught by surprise by the announcement, which had not been subject of any media speculation.

"Within the past 24 hours a question has been raised regarding Andre Davis' alleged relationship with an agent," the news release read. "Texas Christian University is looking into this matter while working fully with the NCAA."

"As a precaution, Davis and head coach Pat Sullivan have agreed that he will sit out today's competition. No further statements will be issued until this issue is resolved."

Backup fullback Matt Moore replaced Davis at tailback against Tulane and ran for 98 yards and a touchdown.

PAMPA — Pampa defeated Caprock, 38-18, last week in 9th grade football action.

Jared White scored three touchdowns for Pampa on runs of 5, 7 and 70 yards. Justin Roark threw two touchdown passes, both to Ollie Lowe for 25 and 17 yards. White, Randall Ellis and Joel Barker scored conversion runs for Pampa.

"Our entire defense played exceptionally well," said Pampa coach Dennis Doughty. "Our first-team defense didn't give up any points."

FISHING

PAMPA — The Top O' Texas Bassmasters held its October Tournament at Lake Ellsworth in Oklahoma.

First place went to Mike and Anna Young with Mike taking Big Bass with a 4.59 pound catch. Second place went to Roy and Mary Alderson and third place went to Floyd Lott and Lynn Odom. The tournament was sponsored by Fydo.

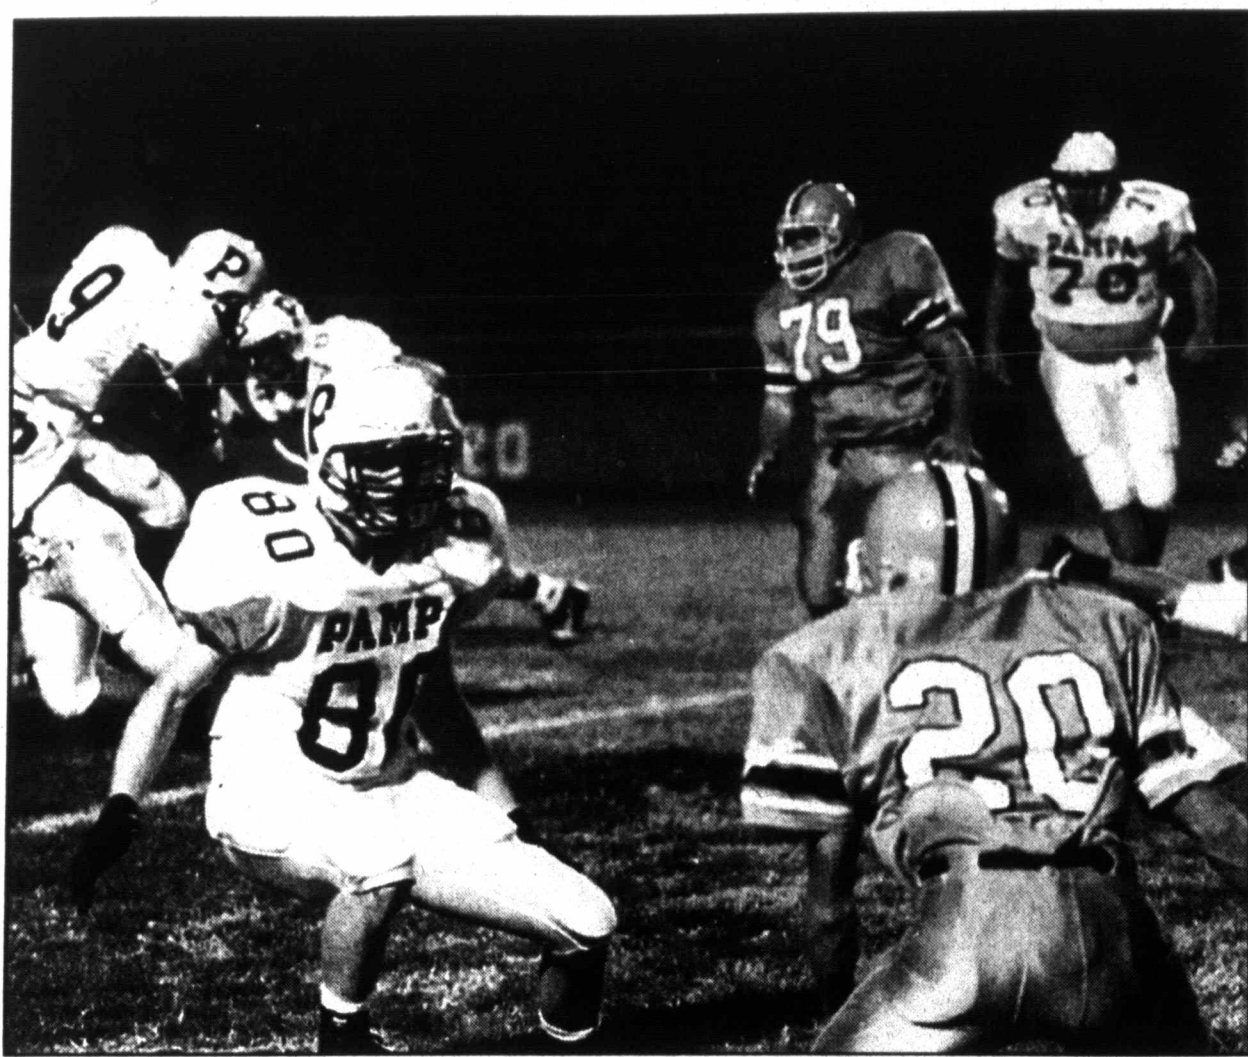

The November tournament will be held at Baylor Childress Nov. 4-5.

VOLLEYBALL

PAMPA — Pampa won over Caprock, 15-8, 15-3, in junior varsity volleyball play Saturday at McNeely Fieldhouse.

April Lopez led Pampa in serving points with 14. Tiffany McCullough, Lisa Kirkpatrick and Lopez played outstanding defense.

The Pampa JV team is 7-4 in district and 15-8 overall. They play at Randall in the final match of the season Tuesday.

Harvesters blitz Caprock to go 2-0 in district play

AMARILLO — Pampa demolished Amarillo Caprock, 42-7, Friday night as the Harvesters improved to 2-0 in District 1-4A play and 5-1 for the season.

It wasn't 63-14 like two weeks ago against Canyon, but the Harvesters had the situation well under control in the first half.

The Harvesters scored the first four touchdowns of the game and led, 28-7, at halftime. Pampa led, 14-0, at the end of the first quarter.

Senior running backs Derahian Evans and Matt Archibald sparked Pampa's offense, which rolled up 436 yards in total offense. Evans rushed for 111 yards and scored four touchdowns, including a 42-yard scamper late in the second quarter. Archibald was the game's leading rusher with 120 yards and he scored on a 6-yard run in the second quarter.

Senior quarterback Joel Ferland saw his first action of the season since being sidelined with a foot injury in a pre-season scrimmage. He responded well, completing 4 of 8 pass attempts for 81 yards, including a 65-yard TD pass to J.J. Mathis in the first quarter. A touchdown pass from Ferland to Floyd White in the second quarter was nullified because of a penalty. Clint Curtis, who had been starting at quarterback throughout the season, was 2 of 4 for 55 yards in passing.

The winless Longhorns (0-3, 0-7) did muster some offense behind quarterback Justin Ruiz and end Jimmy Lopez. They combined for a 73 yard touchdown pass with 2:20 to go in the first half.

It looked like Pampa might go scoreless in the third quarter, but a 55-yard run by Archibald put the Harvesters inside the Caprock 10 with time winding down. Behind some strong blocking by Donnie Middleton, Josh Calfy and Josh Starnes, Evans scored from two yards out and Pampa led after three quarters, 35-7.

Plenty of reserves got playing time for the Harvesters. Ronnie Proby, called up from the junior varsity, recovered a Caprock fumble in Longhorn territory in the fourth quarter that led to the Harvesters' last touchdown, a 6-yard run by Evans.

Pampa's defense held Caprock to 160 total yards and no first downs in the second half. Devin Lemons and Seth Heiskell had quarterback sacks.

In other 1-4A games Friday night, Borger shut out Dumas, 51-0, and Randall blanked Canyon, 7-0.

Pampa's Thomas chosen as Dick Butkus semifinalist

ORLANDO — Texas Tech linebacker Zach Thomas, a senior from Pampa, has been named one of 10 semifinalists for the Butkus Award, which honors the best linebacker in college football. The 10 semifinalists were announced Thursday by the Downtown Athletic Club of Orlando, Inc.

The semifinalists include five seniors, four juniors and one sophomore as determined by a confidential voting of a 24-member selection committee. The original list consisted of 59 candidates.

On Nov. 16, the three finalists will be announced and will be invited to the awards ceremonies on Dec. 9 in Orlando.

Legendary linebacker Dick Butkus will help make the presentation.

Thomas leads Tech with 67 tackles, six of them for losses. He also has two sacks and has returned an interception for a touchdown. Thomas made several all-america teams last season at Tech.

Other semifinalists are Greg Bellisari of Ohio State, Daryl Bush of Florida State, Dwayne Curry of Mississippi State, Percell Garskins of Kansas State, Kevin Hardy of Illinois, Jarrett Irons of Michigan, Ray Lewis of Miami, Simeon Rice of Illinois and Matt Russell of Colorado.

Bucks claim first win

GROOM — Two big first-quarter plays, one by the offense and the other by the defense, helped spark White Deer to an 18-8 win over Groom Friday night in District 1-1A action.

On the opening kickoff, Chris Mize gave White Deer a 6-0 lead on an 81-yard touchdown run. The Bucks made it 12-0 when Torey Craig returned a blocked field goal attempt 77 yards for the score.

It was the first win of the season for the Bucks, who are 1-6 overall and 1-1 in district.

"We were finally able to turn things around a little bit," said Bucks' coach Ralph Samaniego. "It was a big W for us, that's what we needed."

The Bucks led, 18-0, at half-time on a 25-yard scoring run by Craig Urbanczyk in the third quarter. Urbanczyk was the game's top rusher with 198 yards on 19 attempts.

Groom's touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a 10-yard pass from Brad Sustaire to David Munoz.

Groom was fired up and played well against in the second half, but we were able to hold them off," Samaniego added.

Groom's record is 0-2 in district and 1-6 for the season.

Lefors 55, Higgins 28

HIGGINS — Lefors came on strong the second half, breezing to a 55-28 win over Higgins in a District 1-1A Six-Man game Friday night.

Keith Franks ignited the Pirates' offense as he threw for five touchdowns and ran for one in a comeback win.

Lefors trailed 22-12 at intermission, but the Pirates rallied for 23 third-quarter points to turn things around.

Franks, who passed for 246 yards, threw touchdown passes to Jeremie Howard (24 and 31 yards), Matt Green (37 and 17 yards), and Craig Seely (48 yards). Franks also ran for a 17-yard touchdown. Archie Summers added a touchdown for the Pirates on a 1-yard run.

Lefors rolled up 404 yards in total offense, compared to 125 for Higgins.

Lefors is now 1-1 in district play and 4-3 for the season. Higgins is 0-2 and 1-5.

The Pirates host McLean next Friday night.

Waldorf leads Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Duffy Waldorf boasted early on that he felt no pressure in this year's Texas Open.

Entering the tournament he was 54th on the PGA Tour money list, a nice spot but not close enough to the top 30 to worry about qualifying for next week's Tour Championship.

How quickly things have changed.

Waldorf held a one-stroke lead after three rounds of the $1.1 million tournament, 18 holes from his first victory on the PGA Tour.

"I think I feel a little pressure," Waldorf said Saturday after a 1-under-par 71. "I'm not often this close. ... It's exciting."

Red Raiders hold off Rice, 31-26

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech proved a football team can take about as much comfort in a big lead as it can a trip to the dentist.

The No. 25 Red Raiders let Rice score 18 points in the third quarter Saturday before holding off the Owls 31-26.

"They had the momentum going," said Tech coach Spike Dykes. "Being ahead 21-0 at the half is like pulling teeth convincing the team that we still had 30 minutes left to play hard."

Zebbie Lethridge threw touchdown passes of 68 and 9 yards and set a Southwest Conference interception-free record in Tech's victory.

The Red Raiders (4-2 overall, 2-1 SWC) blew a 24-0 lead in the third quarter as 18 points came pouring in from the Owls (1-5-1, 0-3).

"You get kind of bored with their offense and then — bam! — they hit you with some big plays," said Tech free safety Dane Johnson, who had seven tackles and one interception. "I'm glad it's gone."

The game's final eight points came from the Owls, whose outside kick attempt with 24 seconds remaining went out of bounds. Lethridge took the snap and went down on one knee as time ran out.

Lethridge completed 11 of 22 passes for 144 yards and set an SWC record for interception avoidance along the way. He has now made 187 straight throws without getting picked off.

He also scored on a 1-yard run. "We did a nice job on (Lethridge), but he got out of our grasp a couple of times and that was the difference," said Rice coach Ken Hatfield.

Rice backup quarterback Chad Nelson was the Owls' top rusher with 145 yards on the ground. He finished with 49 passing yards on 2-of-8 passing with two interceptions.

Nelson came in when Rice starter Josh LaRocca, who had been averaging 132.5 passing yards per game, sprained his right foot and left in the second quarter after throwing for just 12 yards.

Unlike last week, when fan-flung tortillas on the field cost Tech 45 yards in penalties, the edible discs did not surface this game.

The game remained scoreless in the second quarter as Rice's Jeff Sowell blocked a 30-yard field goal attempt by Tony Rogers. Joe Davis recovered for the Owls on their own 26.

But the Rice drive stalled and Tech went up 7-0 on its next possession on a drive of four plays, capped when Lethridge hit Byron Hanspard on a 68-yard bomb over the middle.

On the Raiders' next possession, Stacy Mitchell took a reverse 49 yards to the Rice 2-yard line, setting up a Lethridge dive to give Tech a 14-0 lead with 7:33 to go in the half.

Lethridge's 9-yard TD pass to Hanspard put the Red Raiders ahead 21-0 at halftime.

Rogers padded the lead to 24-0 with a 39-yard field goal in the third quarter and things looked under control in what could be the teams' final meeting.

But then came the third quarter's midpoint, when Nelson made a 9-yard TD run and threw to Thad Bridges for the two-point conversion to make the score 24-8.

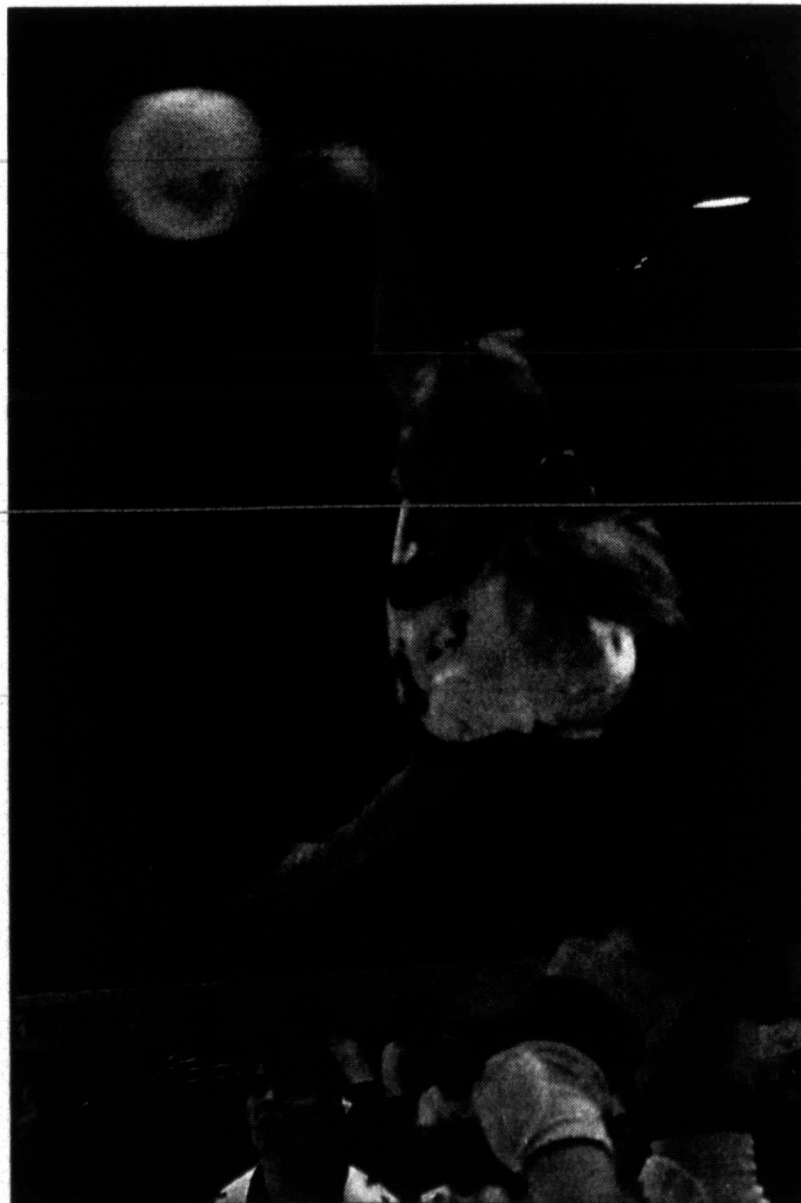

Gusty winds helped Mike Ruff hit a field goal of 52 yards for Rice, and 38 seconds later, the Owls scored again after recovering a Hanspard fumble on the Tech 25. Nelson's 12-yard keeper elevated Rice to within 24-18 with 1:08 to go in the third.

Hanspard, who rushed for a team-high 93 yards, put the Red Raiders up for good on an 18-yard zig-zag score with 11:25 to go.

"We're going to sulk over this loss on the way home, but we're not going to quit," said defensive end Ndukwe Kalu. "We know we can't go anywhere this year, but we're going to build off our second half, and try to win out the rest of the season."

Notes: Tech won its seventh straight SWC game at home, a record victory streak since the Red Raiders joined the conference in 1960. ... Dykes secured his first victory over Hatfield in five tries. ... Until Sowell blocked a Tech field goal attempt, Rice hadn't snuffed a field goal since 1992. ... Ruff's 52-yard field goal was the longest for Rice since James Hamrick kicked a 57-yarder to beat Tech 29-27 in 1985.

Spiking the ball

Pros, cons of propositions on constitutional ballot

AUSTIN (AP) — Here, based on studies done by the Texas Legislative Council, are arguments for and against the 14 proposed constitutional amendments on the Nov. 7 ballot.

PROPOSITION 1
To allow the Texas Higher Education Board to issue up to $300 million in bonds to finance more student loans.
FOR — College attendance, producing a well-educated, productive work force, contributes to the growth of the state's economy. The need for student loans is increasing because of tuition and fee increases designed to require students to bear greater percentages of the actual cost of higher education.

AGAINST — Providing student loans is properly a function of the private financial sector. Although the student loan program has historically been self-supporting, there's no guarantee it will remain so.

PROPOSITION 2
To authorize lawmakers to exempt Masonic lodges and some other state charitable organizations from property taxes.

FOR — The existing property tax exemption for charitable organizations is too restrictive. The limited nature of the proposed tax exemption will prevent it from having a severe impact on property tax revenues or other taxpayers. The amendment authorizes the Legislature to place limits on the exemption.

AGAINST — The current property tax exemption for charitable organizations is available to any organization that is dedicated to performing worthwhile and beneficial functions. The proposed exemption, like all such exemptions, merely shifts the tax burden onto other already pressed taxpayers. The proposed exemption is too broadly stated.

PROPOSITION 3
To allow use of existing bond authority of the Texas farm and ranch finance program to include assistance for expansion, development and diversification of production, processing, marketing and export of Texas agricultural products.

FOR — It would provide increased efficiency to the state and convenience to borrowers by consolidating administrative responsibilities of the Veterans Land Board and Texas Agricultural Finance Authority. It would more effectively meet financing needs of agricultural businesses by transferring money to the Texas agricultural fund, which may make loans for various purposes, from the farm and ranch finance program fund, which may make loans only for purchase of land. No increase in bonding authority would result.

AGAINST — Loans and loan guarantees are often made to businesses that can't obtain financing from traditional financial institutions. The proposal would allow for transfer of $200 million in bonding authority and make less money available for purchase of farm and ranch land. The Veterans Land Board is adequately administering the farm and ranch finance program fund.

PROPOSITION 4
To allow Texas homeowners to refinance their homes to pay off an Internal Revenue Service lien, or in the case of divorce to buy out the other spouse's equity in the home.

FOR — Current Texas homestead law is antiquated, and the amendment would ease restrictions only in two very limited circumstances. The amendment would help avoid litigation.

AGAINST — The constitutional prohibition against a forced sale of a homestead was intended to be strict so debtors and their families wouldn't lose their homes except in very limited circumstances.

PROPOSITION 5
To permit the Texas Land Board to issue another $500 million in general obligation bonds to finance low-interest home loans for Texas veterans.

FOR — The demand for veterans' housing loans has increased substantially. Veterans in Texas receive few state benefits for the sacrifices they have made in serving their country. The programs, posing almost no financial risk to the state, help veterans and the state as a whole.

AGAINST — The amendment would authorize a large increase in state debt and greater governmental intrusion into the capital markets. Veterans already are eligible for benefits, including federal housing loans, college tuition assistance and hiring preferences.

PROPOSITION 6
To extend the over-65, senior citizen homestead property tax exemption to the surviving spouse of an elderly person between the ages of 55 and 65.

FOR — A surviving spouse of a person over 65, who isn't yet 65, is likely to suffer financial hardship, including reductions in pension and other income. Granting the exemption wouldn't harm taxing authorities or other property owners, and the number of people eligible would be small.

AGAINST — The proposed exemption is unfair because it would grant an exemption to surviving spouses between 55 and 65, but not to others of the same age who may be in the same or worse financial condition. The exemption would shift taxes saved by the surviving spouse onto other taxpayers.

PROPOSITION 7
To eliminate $250 million in general obligation bonds set aside for the now-defunct superconducting supercollider project.

FOR — Since Congress has discontinued funding for the supercollider, there is no reason to issue the remaining bonds. This would reduce the state's total potential debt.

AGAINST — The amendment unnecessarily clutters the ballot. There is no obligation and currently no reason to issue the bonds.

PROPOSITION 8
To allow residents of Mills, Reagan and Roberts counties to abolish the office of constable.

FOR — Abolishing the offices and transferring those functions to the county sheriffs mean more efficient management of law enforcement business and savings for the counties.

AGAINST — Although county government may need streamlining, a piecemeal approach isn't the answer. This will lead to a rash of amendments as other counties seek exemptions for themselves.

PROPOSITION 9
To allow investment of money from the Texas Growth Fund in a business without the business's disclosure of investments in South Africa or Namibia.

FOR — The disclosure requirement was adopted to object to South Africa's system of apartheid. That no longer exists, so the requirement has no purpose. Eliminating it also saves the state the cost of collecting, examining and recording disclosure affidavits.

AGAINST — Neither the Texas Legislative Council nor League of Women Voters found arguments presented against the proposal.

PROPOSITION 10
To abolish the state treasurer's office and merge it into the comptroller's office.

FOR — The comptroller can perform the duties of the treasurer's office at substantial savings in both state money and the number of state employees required to perform the duties.

AGAINST — The state's finances involve many billions of dollars, and checks and balances are needed on the state's financial practices. The treasurer's office is essential to a balanced system.

PROPOSITION 11
To permit open-space land used for wildlife management to be treated like agricultural land in property taxes.

FOR — If open, undeveloped land were taxed like agricultural land, based on productivity rather than market value, the lower taxes would encourage preservation of wildlife habitat and stimulate the hunting and fishing industries.

AGAINST — Doing this would extend an already unfair tax break for agricultural land that opponents say should be taxed on market value rather than productivity.

PROPOSITION 12
To exempt from property taxes personal property and mineral interests when the total that comes in doesn't cover the costs of collecting the levy.

FOR — This would save counties and the taxpayers money. Appraising property costs an average of $13 for an account, and property worth less than $500 yields taxes lower than that in most cases.

AGAINST — The change would hurt counties that depend on property taxes from multiple small oil and gas leases, which are much cheaper to appraise and tax. Tax lost would have to be made up by other taxpayers.

PROPOSITION 13
To give local governments the option to exempt shrimp and fishing boats from property taxes.

FOR — The constitution gives farmers and ranchers relief from property taxes on land and farm implements. People in the fishing industry harvest food and should get the same kind of tax relief. The amendment makes it optional for local taxing authorities.

AGAINST — Too many exemptions from property taxes already have been granted, eroding the tax base to where government services can't be maintained. Exemptions shift the burden to other taxpayers, and a local option provision means the exemption would be granted inconsistently.

PROPOSITION 14
To increase the property tax exemption for disabled veterans.

FOR — The current exemption for disabled veterans, set at a maximum of $3,000 when it became law in 1972, never has been raised. Inflation and rising home values mean the deduction is worth much less today than when passed.

AGAINST — The amendment would result in the loss of property taxes to local governments and school districts. Raising the level is only a temporary answer to inflation, and it would be more effective to provide for automatic increases.

"ONCE SAVED, ALWAYS SAVED?"

"Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." (1 Cor. 10:12.) There is a prevalent and popular doctrine taught and believed in denominational circles, known as "once saved, always saved", or "the perseverance of the saints", or sometimes it is referred to as "the security of the believer".

This particular doctrine is contrary to the plain teaching of the scriptures. Peter writes of those who "have escaped the defilements of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" and then "are again entangled therein." (2 Pet. 2:20.) He says "the last state is become worse than the first" (2 Pet. 2:20.) The "first state" would obviously be before they had escaped the defilements of the world. The "last state" would obviously be after they had become entangled again in the defilements of the world. In the first state they were lost. In the second state they would not only be lost but they could also reflect upon the salvation they had had but had lost because they fell away. Note 2 Pet. 2:21: "For it were better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after knowing it, to turn back from the holy commandment delivered unto them." They were lost before the holy commandment was delivered to them and they were lost after they had obeyed the holy commandment IF they turned back from it, or were entangled again in the defilements of the world. If they were lost when they were in the "defilements of the world", then they would be lost when they were "again entangled" in the "defilements of the world."

There are many scriptures which teach the possibility of apostasy, or that a person can be lost after being saved. In 2 Pet. 1:10-11, Peter wrote: "Wherefore, brethren, give the more diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never stumble (fall): for thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Now if a person does the "things" Peter lists he has the guarantee of entering into the eternal kingdom, what will happen if he does not do those "things"? Conclusively, he would fall or be lost. Paul knew he could be rejected (1 Cor. 9:27). Simon was lost after being saved (Acts 8:13-24.) So it is possible for a child of God today to be lost after being saved.

In Calvary Baptist Church's "Hallowed House '95," Satan (Rick Crosswhite) taunts Christ (David Martin) in the ultimate battle between good and evil: Jesus versus Satan. Bill Crook (left), and Charles Cross (far right), play the parts of Roman soldiers in the drama which is set for 7-9 p.m. Oct. 29 - 31 at Calvary Baptist Church.

The Hallowed House

"Hallowed House '95" is set for three nights at Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd.

Hours are 7 to 9 p.m. Oct. 29, 30 and 31. Guided tours will lead guests through dramatization of the most vicious supernatural battle of all time — Jesus versus Satan. Each tour lasts about 20 minutes and is free.

This is the third year for the program which has drawn over 1,600 visitors in the last two years.

This dramatization, which originated at Calvary Baptist Church, has drawn national attention. Because of an article appearing in a national magazine, churches from around the country have called requesting information about program.

A fully costumed cast and crew of 70 will participate in this year's "Hallowed House '95."

Professional lighting, scenery and special effects will be used to create the setting for Christ's battle with Satan.

A "true to life" crucifixion and resurrection scene will close the program.

"Hallowed House '95" is directed by Rick Pearson.

Because of the graphic, historical detail, some scenes may not be suited for smaller children. Parental guidance is suggested.

Below: Jennie Hon plays a leper in the production.

Randy Hendrick plays the part of a demon.

The Branson Limited offers European service to downhome destination

By SHIRLEY JINKINS
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas — They're unmistakable, those quaint, royal blue and beige rail coaches in line behind a mammoth gray Amtrak column, bringing up the rear and bringing out the beauty of bygone train travel as they pull out of Fort Worth's downtown depot.

American Orient Express, they're labeled, in that distinctive block script. It's the Branson Limited, plying its way into the Missouri Ozarks from San Antonio on the South Texas prairie. And even though the Branson destination is downhome, the American Orient Express service, surroundings and atmosphere are straight out of an old movie or vintage mystery novel.

Late-afternoon sunlight gilding the starched-white tablecloths of the dining car has a golden, parchment quality. Leaving the city behind, gliding into timeless countryside, the numbing sensation of slipping back 50 years is palpable.

Train travel like this isn't designed for anyone who's in a hurry to get there. Schedules, like babies, don't keep, and lengthy waits on sidetracks as freight trains went by were commonplace. But, out there in rural America, small boys still chase the Branson Limited, and farm families on front porches still wave as the early morning train cruises by.

If you treasure solitude, the Branson Limited may not be your ride, either, though one could stay closeted in a private compartment the entire time. But companionable — conversation flows in the public cars, and fellow travelers are a big part of the fun.

The scenic route is especially beautiful from Little Rock on into Hollister, the quaint Missouri station where the tour culminates — two miles from Branson. It was once the route of Missouri Pacific Eagles through Texas and following the White River of Arkansas for more than 100 miles before reaching the Ozarks.

According to one rail enthusiast on the return trip, the Branson-to-Newport, Ark., stretch is a must-ride. The scenery's great, and the cast rails are remarkably smooth. Add to that, the distinction of being in the New York car (he immediately seated himself on the rear circular lounge and removed his shoes) and you've got a memorable, aficionado's trip.

The train at its capacity can accommodate 112 passengers in 11 cars: six sleepers, two club, two dining, and the New York parlor/observation lounge. A recent Branson excursion in April included four sleepers, the Chicago dining car, St. Moritz club car and New York parlor/lounge.

The cars were renovated, of course, in 1989; most were built between 1948 and 1958 by the Pullman Standard Co. in Chicago, the St. Louis Car Co. and American Car and Foundry.

The sleeping accommodations, with car names like Berlin, Vienna, Paris and Istanbul, are like napping in your favorite old movie. Paneling is all mahogany, and each sleeping compartment includes a water closet (snug, yes, but private), upper and lower berths at make into a day couch, a vanity with a sink, and an irresistible picture window.

Teach Your Children Well By Setting Good Example

DEAR ABBY: I thought this poem might be worth printing — if you agree, and have the space.

E.C.U. IN IOWA

DEAR E.C.U.: I wholeheartedly agree it is worth printing — and I am making the space. Thank you for sending it.

TODAY
by Henry Matthew Ward

When I got mad and hit my child
"For his own good," I reconciled.
And then, I realized my plight
Today, I taught my child to fight.

When interrupted by the phone,
I said, "Tell them I'm not at home."
And then I thought, and had to sigh
Today, I taught my child to lie.

I told the tax man what I made,
Forgetting cash that I was paid.
And then I blushed at this sad feat
Today, I taught my child to cheat.

I smugly copied a cassette,
To keep me free of one more debt.
But now the bells of shame must peal
Today, I taught my child to steal.

Today, I cursed another race.
Oh God, protect what I debase.
For now, I fear it is too late
Today, I taught my child to hate.

By my example, children learn

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

That I must lead in life's sojourn
In such a way that they are led
By what is done, not what is said.

Today, I gave my child his due
By praises for him instead of rue.
And now I have begun my guide:
Today, I gave my child his pride.

I now have reconciled and paid
To IRS on all I made.
And now I know that this
dear youth
Today has learned from me,
of truth.

The alms I give are not for show,
And yet, this child must surely know
That charity is worth the price:
Today, he saw my sacrifice.

I clasp within a warm embrace
My neighbor of another race —
The great commandment
from above
Today, I taught my child to love.

Someday, my child must face alone
This world of fearsome undertone.
But I have blazed a sure pathway:
Today, I taught my child ... to pray.

DEAR ABBY: A note to "Livid in Salem, Mass.," the receptionist in a physician's office who complained about children's messages on patients' answering machines:

I agree. Long messages on answering machines are both time-consuming and irritating, but how about when a patient calls a physician's office only to be put on hold for five to 10 minutes listening to elevator music? That's what I call suffering! As long as it's not an emergency, I'd rather be asked for my name and phone number and get a return phone call than be put on hold that long.

"Livid," if that's all you have to gripe about with all the suffering you see while working in a physician's office, I'd say you have a pretty good life.

From Bellow to Vonnegut

Memories of salad days at University of Chicago

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Kurt Vonnegut was a fringe student in anthropology.

Susan Sontag had no creativity at all.

And Philip Roth was as neurotic as they came.

Three authors have one common bond: the University of Chicago. This intellectual mecca where the atom was split, where Nobels are abundant and Heismans rare (current score: 65 to 1), also has been a breeding ground for some of America's premier writers.

A new book, An Unsentimental Education, is a collection of first-person essays from 21 novelists and poets who attended or taught at the university — some, such as Nobel-Pulitzer winner Saul Bellow, did both — reminiscing about the impact of the school and the city on their lives and their careers.

"I think in general, writers go their own way, no matter what they have in common," said Molly McQuade, the book's editor. "The university helped them learn what their own way was."

She said she discovered this eclectic group shared one personality trait.

"Everyone in the book seemed kind of fanatical, really dedicated to what matters to them," she added. "The university had something to do with cultivating some of their zealotry."

For some, the high-brow atmosphere provided the spark for transforming ideas into words, then putting those words on paper. Roth, who received a master's degree from the university and taught composition there during the mid-to-latter 1950s, wrote most of the stories published as Goodbye Columbus, while at the school.

"I had nothing to do with any but literary or bookish people," Roth said in his essay. "I should say bookish men. With women I was more ecumenical."

"Neurotic classmates? I suppose I would qualify," he added. "High-strung. Volatile. Opinionated. Argumentative. Playful. Animated. Quarrelsome. I'm sure I was as neurotic as any classmate I had."

For others, the school was a place for reasoning and reading, but never writing.

Sontag, the novelist, essayist and playwright, began writing around age 7, but put it aside while an undergrad student, partly because she was so consumed by her studies.

"I had no creative powers at all during that period," she said in her essay. "The university annihilated them. ... The university was a total situation, a benevolent dictatorship. Which was fine with me."

Sontag's school experience was so memorable, she has carried mimeographed reading lists for all her courses through 20 moves in her life.

While the university was a place for serious scholastics, there also was time for socializing, sometimes with some unlikely friendships forming among the literati during their salad days.

Sontag met an up-and-comer, film director and budding improv comic, Mike Nichols. Roth met a man of whom he was in awe — Bellow, who was a student in the '30s, then returned to teach for three decades.

George Steiner, the writer, scholar and critic who has contributed to the New Yorker magazine, tells of encountering a "brilliant" man in his poker circle — Playboy founder Hugh Hefner.

And Marguerite Young, writer and poet, reminisces about meeting Thornton Wilder — who taught at the university — and Gertrude Stein at the "opium lady's house."

Prize-winning poet Hayden Carruth speaks of how his evening sojourns to jazz clubs shaped his writing.

McQuade, a university graduate, said it took four years to conduct the interviews, edit and organize the essays. "I would look for the thread of a story ... (which) had to be about the making of a writer."

She asked the same basic questions, but each interview veered off into different directions. All but two are monologues and are preceded by her impressions of the writers.

Vonnegut, she recalled, was both wry and an idealist.

"I'm not even sure what my message as a novelist is," he said in his essay. "But I would like to infect with people with humane ideas before they're able to defend themselves."

Vonnegut, who arrived at the school as a World War II veteran, husband and father, studied anthropology; his master's degree was awarded on the basis of his book, Cat's Cradle. He also honed his writing skills at the time as a bottom-of-the-rung reporter for a city wire service.

Unlike many other writers who found kindred souls at the school, Vonnegut said he was an outsider — "a very fringe character" in his department.

"I liked the University of Chicago," he said. "They didn't like ME."

Fishman guest conductor of Amarillo Youth Orchestra

Paula Fishman will serve as guest conductor for the opening concert of the Amarillo Youth Orchestra's season Thursday, Oct. 26, announced Nancy Reavis, chair of the Amarillo Symphony Youth Orchestra Committee.

The concert will be held at Amarillo High School at 7:30 p.m., and there is no charge for admission.

"We are very pleased to have a guest conductor with such experience to substitute for our music director, Dawn Harms. [She] has taken a leave of absence from the Youth Orchestra, the Harrington String Quartet and the Amarillo Symphony to play with the San Francisco Opera for three months," Reavis said.

Fishman was the music director and founder of the Jacksonville Symphony Youth Orchestra in Jacksonville, Fla. in 1993.

She was also the associate conductor of the Savannah Symphony Youth Orchestra from 1991 to 1992.

Previously, Fishman was the orchestra director for the Winter

Park High School Orchestra in Winter Park, Fla., where she had more students win positions in the Florida All-State Orchestra than any other school in the state. She has been a frequent clinician in Oklahoma and Florida and a board member of the National Orchestra Association and the American String Teachers Association.

In addition to conducting, she also performs with the Amarillo Symphony as a violinist. She is from Oklahoma City where she was a member of the Oklahoma Symphony for seven years.

She was a viola major at the University of Texas and the University of Oklahoma and has studied with the principal violinists of the Dallas and Houston symphonies. She moved to Amarillo in January.

"I am delighted to be able to lead this fine group of young musicians in their opening concert of the 1995-96 season. We will perform music by Bartók, Bloch, Brahms, Gould, Mussorgsky and Saint-Saëns," Fishman said.

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

WHEAT—(BULL)

OUTLOOK: There's been a lot of talk about the massive fund ownership in wheat. The assumption is because the funds have a record large long position in the futures, they will need to sell it out at some point which will cause a market collapse. However, I believe there needs to be some change in the fundamentals before the funds blow out. The fundamentals are as follows; USDA as well as private estimates of global wheat stocks keep shrinking. The numbers point to a critically tight supply of the world's food grain. As we've discussed in the past, the supply of wheat in relation to the population of the world looks to be record tight! As long as these fundamentals remain valid, this market should remain strong and trade higher yet.

STRATEGY: Hedgers. The trend of the market remains up. Therefore hold previously purchased call options (bought as a replacement for old crop wheat sales). There's no reason to hedge new crop yet. We're not attempting to pick the top in the wheat market, rather follow the trend until there's a sign the trend has turned (this will come after the top is in, but hopefully from higher levels). Based on previous recommendations, you own the December Chicago 430 calls in the 23 to 25 cent range. Traders: Based on a previous suggestion, we own the December Minneapolis wheat in the $4.57-$4.675 range. Raise the stop to 4.73 and hold.

OUTLOOK: The USDA crop report came in surprisingly bullish last week. A surprise if you haven't been reading this column for the past year, that is. I'm getting a little uncomfortable now that the crowd is getting bigger. Early this year when we first looked at the supply/demand and became bullish corn, we were in a minority. Prices were then over 70 cents lower. Now it seems everyone is getting bullish. The open interest and volume have risen dramatically. I think it's time to become a bit cautious but not necessarily bearish. The market should be well supported on breaks by end users who have been waiting for a harvest break to extend purchases, but are so far out of luck. However, the huge open interest at present makes the market vulnerable to sharp unexpected breaks. If you're not already in the market at lower levels, I wouldn't chase the market at this time. Wait for the breaks.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: We're 50 percent hedged in the December 280 and 310 put options. Last week we added an additional 25 percent using the 320 puts at 5 cents. Sell these as you market your corn, or if the market trades under 310 or by month's end. Traders: We now own the December 320 calls after having taken a profit in excess of 35 cents ($1750 gross profit) per contract in the futures. This reduced our risk substantially, assured a profit, plus we maintain upside profit potential.

SOYBEANS—(BULL/BEAR)

OUTLOOK: While the trend in beans is up and the outlook is essentially bullish, the market may have overreacted to the USDA crop report last week. You may recall, prices gapped higher on the open that day for an early gain of almost 20 cents per bushel. This market is challenging contract highs above $6.70/bushel in the November contract. I'd be surprised to see a sustained rally at this time. After all it's the middle of harvest, and the more recent reports we're receiving indicate the yields are getting better. Longer term, world soybean production looks to be declining and demand prospects are good. In the short run don't be surprised to see a harvest related break.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: We've previously recommended a combination of cash sales, futures and options which added up to $1.00 per bushel to this season's sale price. At present, I would look to sell newly harvested beans just like we did last year. When the opportunity presents itself we can always reestablish ownership on the board. In the meanwhile, you can use, the cash to pay down debt, or earn a positive interest return. You avoid storage costs and storage hassles. It made sense last year and still does.

Traders: No new recommendations this week.

CATTLE—(BULL/BEAR)

OUTLOOK: The packers lost the last round in the never ending feeder/packer war. They had to raise their bids a couple of dollars last week. This is in sharp contrast to the week before when they had the luxury of letting the market come to them. The reality of declining supplies is in force, here. Longer term this will become more of a factor as supplies are projected to decline into year end. While I still look for cash cattle prices to move above 70 prior to year end, for now the market appears to be in balance. Look for a choppy affair into month end.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: In the present market environment, we still favor put options as the preferred hedging tool. These make sense given the following: 1) Most feeders can lock in at least a break even using at the money puts, 2) We're looking for higher prices down the line and puts will not limit upside potential, 3) There's no assurance the higher prices will come, so why not buy some peace of mind insurance!

Cow-calf operators: We've previously recommended the purchase of the $64 feeder cattle puts to provide some downside protection. The major risk to feeder cattle prices remains the strong feed prices. Yearling supplies remain tight and should firm, however, on any slight break in the corn price.

Traders: Last week we took a small profit in our October feeder cattle position when the market traded above 6525. No new recommendations this week.

Selenium produces mood upswing and weight gain in men

WASHINGTON (AP) — A diet rich in selenium — a mineral found in high-protein food such as fish, poultry, beef and nuts — appears to improve a man's outlook, according to the Agriculture Department.

It also seemed to provide some help to male patients wasting away from AIDS and cancer, researchers said.

In a 15-week USDA study involving 30 men, those on selenium-rich diets reported feeling "clearheaded and elated." Men

More feeder cattle coming from Mexico

SANTA TERESA, N.M. — The USDA Market News Service reported an estimated 16,000 feeder cattle were imported from Mexico to Texas and New Mexico during the past week compared to 12,098 the week before and 18,883 for the same period last year.

Mexican feeder cattle sold fully steady. Demand was good for yearling steers and moderate for calves and heifers weighing under 400 pounds. Most of the cattle weighed 250 to 600 pounds. The numbers included 450 head of slaughter cows.

on low-selenium diets felt their moods had worsened over the course of the experiment.

High-selenium diets contained 3.5 times the recommended daily allowance of the mineral and low-selenium diets contained 40 percent of the recommended allowance.

Researchers said the study seemed particularly significant because men tend to be less likely than women to report mood changes.

In another USDA study involving selenium, the mineral was shown to cause slight weight gain in men suffering from wasting syndromes, such as those afflicting AIDS and cancer patients.

Volunteers who consumed diets rich in selenium — spaghetti with meat sauce, beef with curried rice, and beef and noodle casserole — gained about 1.5 pounds, even though scientists had tried to stabilize their weight.

And the volunteers who were on a diet with only one-fifth the recommended daily allowance of selenium lost 1 pound and their fat-burning rates increased.

While selenium therapy holds promise for patients who cannot retain their weight, selenium consumed at 10 times the recommended daily allowance can be toxic, according to the study.

One of the foods containing the highest amount of selenium is Brazil nuts. One ounce of the nuts contains between 300 and 850 millionths of a gram. The recommended daily allowance of selenium is 68.5 millionths of a gram.

Because selenium is found in such a range of foods, selenium deficiency is rarely seen outside of hospitals where patients are fed intravenously for long periods.

Farm-state lawmakers seek fresh probe of meatpacking industry

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is under pressure to start a second investigation into concentration in the nation's meatpacking industry even before the current study is completed.

A group of farm-state lawmakers led by Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota introduced legislation Wednesday that would require President Clinton to appoint a commission to carry out the second study. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman immediately endorsed the bill.

The lawmakers fear the current study, started by the Agriculture Department in 1992, won't agree with ranchers' contention that meatpackers have manipulated the market to suppress prices.

The meatpacking industry is dominated by a handful of companies.

The USDA study will be outdated as soon as it is released later this fall, because it relies on data gathered in 1992 and 1993, lawmakers said.

"This is an effort to broaden the review," Daschle said. Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., urged Glickman to appoint the commission on his own without waiting for Congress to act.

The American Meat Institute, which represents the packers, said the legislation was "unnecessary and premature."

Ranchers are stuck in a deep slump at a time when the meatpackers are said to be earning record profits. Since 1993 the price of a 500-pound calf has dropped from $500 to $300.

Many ranchers say at least part of the blame for their low prices is due to a series of mergers among packers.

Four companies control more than 80 percent of the industry — IBP Inc. of Dakota City, Neb., Montfort Inc., of Greeley, Colo., owned by ConAgra Inc.; Excel Corp. of Wichita, Kan., owned by Cargill Inc.; and National Beef Packing Co. of Kansas City, Mo., part of Farmland Industries Inc.

"People in my state think they are getting a raw deal," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont. "We're only asking for a fair deal. We're asking for a fair market."

In a test of antitrust law, the USDA filed suit this summer against IBP, alleging that the packers gave undue preference to a group of Kansas-based feedlots. IBP insists the contracts are legal.

Glickman said that if necessary, he will ask for more authority to enforce laws against concentration in the meat industry.

World food and demand to double next decade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food aid will have to double over the next 10 years to satisfy the world's demand, the Agriculture Department says.

World demand is not fully satisfied now — with aid reaching only 80 percent of hungry populations. But even that figure will not be realized unless food aid compensates for new agricultural policies and reduced budgets that continue to diminish food production, said a new USDA report.

Next year total food aid need is projected at 15 million tons. But by 2005 that number will increase to 27 million tons, according to the study, "Food Aid Needs and Availabilities: Projections for 2005."

The need for additional food in sub-Saharan Africa will double even under the most optimistic scenario, the report said.

Chronic food aid needs are caused by rapid population growth, slow agricultural production and depressed economic growth. Emergency food aid needs, which comprise only 20 percent of the applications, result from production variability and political turmoil.

Budget tug-of-war stalls farm program payments

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lon Lyman was supposed to get nearly $30,000 from the Agriculture Department early this month. The Okaton, S.D., rancher is still waiting, and he's getting very angry, because he has a Nov. 1 tax bill to pay.

Lyman says he needs the check "to pay taxes and keep going." He was hounding members of Congress by telephone on Wednesday about his payment under the Conservation Reserve Program, which idles nearly 35 million acres. Lyman gets $40 per acre each year for idling 700 of his 7,000 acres.

He learned quickly that his payment under the popular conservation program was caught up in a political tug-of-war between Republicans and Democrats. The spat, part of the budget debate, has held up about $1.8 billion in payments to thousands of farmers and ranchers.

The payments were due the first week of October. Under the program, created 10 years ago, landowners are paid to idle their erodible land and other environmentally sensitive land, and they get help planting a grassy cover, trees or other protection.

Although criticized for its generous payments for land that could safely be farmed, the program has worked its way into the livelihoods of rural America. Farmers bank and borrow on the money. Absentee landlords could profit from government largesse. Many farmers have used it as a way to retire.

"It's just like if you took some people in town and shut off their Social Security all of a sudden," Lyman, 52, said in a telephone interview.

Jeff Campbell, president of the Security State Bank in Dunsieith, N.D., said farmers count on the payments to pay off loans for equipment, machinery and livestock.

There's still time for the Agriculture Department to pull through, Campbell said, because many bank payments become due in November, December or the first of the year "to leave some room for this type of a situation or whatever else may come up."

Still, he said, "I've had three or four people in the last week ... that are kind of tapping their fingers and wondering when it's going to happen."

At issue is USDA's spending bill for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, which Congress approved a week ago today. It is the third of 13 appropriations bill that Congress passes to keep the government running. Of the first two, President Clinton signed one and vetoed the other. He plans to sign the agriculture bill.

But because the USDA bill has not been delivered to Clinton for his signature, the department says it cannot make the payments on 375,000 land contracts.

Behind that is an anticipated budget showdown next month between congressional Republicans and the president. Republicans have talked of sending all remaining spending measures to him in one package in several weeks, and then adjourning.

They hope that would force Clinton to sign the bills or cause a broad shutdown of federal agencies. Administration officials countered that the president would veto the package and order Congress to return and continue working on legislation.

Farm-state lawmakers of both parties have begun complaining.

Among them is Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. Dole told Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman that the payments could be made under existing stopgap spending authority.

Glickman said Congress could fix the problem by sending Clinton the bill to sign. "You want to get these programs moving, get the bill to the president," he said.

People like Lyman don't really care. Both parties look bad.

"One of the Democrats called me back and told me what dirty the Republicans were," he said. "But I found out what dirty the Democrats were."

AIDS-infected artist turns health battles into syndicated comic strip

EDITOR'S NOTE — The artist has AIDS. There's nothing funny about that, but this victim deals with his fatal misfortune with a comic strip. Comical? Not always, but real. And he says, therapeutic. Some are poignant enough to win recognition on his mother's refrigerator.

By SHAWN DONNAN
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jon Eikenberg's comic strip isn't always funny. Instead of a gentle tickle, it can feel like a fist to the stomach.

The artist's cartoon, "The Endearing End of Emmett..." is about a tender subject: falling victim to the ravages of AIDS.

"Emmett thinks having AIDS is really cool," Eikenberg writes in the preface to one strip.

"It can be superfun as well as very dramatic, if you're so inclined — and with so many wonderful ways to die, the possibilities are endless. Wouldn't it be exciting if you could choose how? Surely, most people would secretly like to go out with a big bang."

The comic strip is distributed to a handful of gay and alternative newspapers. It's Eikenberg's big bang.

Dancing on the edge of propriety, and with a blunt humor that can leave readers uneasy, "The Endearing End of Emmett..." is Eikenberg's way of documenting and dealing with his own death. He was diagnosed with AIDS in November.

Despite his disease, Eikenberg looks robust, younger than his 38 years. His muscular build gives him an intimidating presence.

His conversation is infused with dry wit. "If I didn't have AIDS I could seduce you right now," he deadpans to a reporter sitting across from him in his studio. "Just kidding," he adds.

The off-putting Eikenberg is a classically trained painter and illustrator with degrees from the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and the Philadelphia College of Art. He had never tried cartooning until he started drawing Emmett last year.

Now he calls it his best art. And his therapy. "It's a way to shake off that bogymen," he says.

Eikenberg's isn't the first cartoon to deal with AIDS.

Other artists, including some with the disease, have created animated films and strips. One California comic book company, Image Comics, even had one of its superheroes die of AIDS. Shadowhawk, a district attorney turned vigilante, contracted the disease when crooks injected him with AIDS-tainted blood. He died in May.

Eikenberg's strip features the day-to-day travails of Emmett, a pseudonym for Eikenberg.

One strip deals with his battle to keep up his weight, others about fear of losing his hair because of AIDS-related infections. And readers share his experience on the day he learned his immune system had faded.

"Emmett has a 'spot' on his hip that won't go away," Eikenberg begins one strip dealing with Kaposi's sarcoma, a cancer often associated with AIDS that causes lesions on the skin.

"Kaposi's is such a creepy thought. He was Italian, right?" he pens above a steaming plate of spaghetti and meatballs.

It is an unfortunate fact that an increasing number of people know just what Eikenberg is talking about. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, more than 441,000 cases of AIDS have been reported in the United States and the number continues to grow.

But Eikenberg doesn't see his audience as being limited to people with AIDS.

"The experience of having a terminal illness is universal," he says. "It doesn't have to be AIDS."

Despite the growing audience there is the inevitable question of propriety. How could someone — even someone with AIDS — be flippant about such a terrible disease?

Eikenberg's answer is prompt. He's sorry if he offends anyone, he says, but the fact is he has AIDS. He has watched many of his friends die from it. He believes that gives him some right to poke fun if it helps him cope.

Ask Millie Eikenberg if her son's strip is funny and she'll pause.

She has watched her son nurse friends in their final hours, accompanied him to the doctor, and has promised her son to carry out his final wish — that he not linger when it's time to go.

"I don't look at it as being funny at all," she says. "It's more poignant to me than funny."

Some of her son's strips have a place of honor on her refrigerator. "It's only hard because it's such a forbidden subject," she says. "I don't feel the punch in the stomach like some people might. ... I've kind of gotten a little hardened to it."

Among her favorite strips is one in which her son reveals his fear of giving AIDS to his sisters' babies if he picks them up. His doctor has told him that despite the minimal risk, he should wear latex gloves and a mask:

"First, Trish had a bouncing boy — Matthew Everett. Emmett stayed across the room — with a tear in his eye. ... Then, Julie had a little girl — Cecelia Grace. Emmett cooed from 6 feet away — wanting to hold her but not daring to. ... And Jeanne had a beautiful boy herself — Kyle Patrick. Emmett adored him but didn't touch — if only he could smell his hair."

The cartoon ends with a picture of Eikenberg wearing latex gloves and a surgical mask with a smiley face drawn on it as a grinning baby crawls toward him.

The artist confesses he's still terrified of picking up his little nieces and nephews. "I don't even want to breathe on them," he says.

Some of the most powerful strips come from Eikenberg's discussion of everyday anxieties for people with AIDS, says Rawley Grau, editor of The Baltimore Alternative, a gay newspaper which began running Eikenberg's strip in July 1994.
