PAMPA - Early voting for the constitution amendment election will be conducted 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. beginning Wednesday in the county clerk's office, second floor courtroom of Gray County court house.

County clerk Wanda Carter reminds the public if they have moved since registering to vote, they must sign an affidavit of residency before they will be allowed to vote. This affidavit is a state requirement which prevents a voter from losing his right to vote if he hasn't changed his voting address.

GRAY COUNTY - The Gray County Tax Office reminds residents in area communities that their county tax statements will carry a little something extra this year.

In McLean, the statement will have city and school taxes in addition to the county tax. Lefors residents will have their city taxes on the county statement, and those in the Grandview-Hopkins school district will find their school taxes on the county statement as well.

All residents can mail their statement to Sammie Morris, Box 382 in Pampa, or pay them personally at the Gray County Tax Office in the county courthouse.

McLean residents can also pay them in person at the county's tax office at the McLean City Hall.

For more information, call 669-8020.

PAMPA - Gray County commissioners learned Monday that costs associated with the capital murder trial of Henry Watkins Skinner have crossed the $303,000 mark.

With the Monday submission of another bill, the prosecution and defense of Skinner has cost the Gray County taxpayer $303,904.74.

Skinner is on death row convicted of killing Twila Busby and her two sons, Elwin Caler and Randolph Busby Jr. on Jan. 31, 1993.

PAMPA - A Pampa man in jail accused of burglary was charged today with assault on a peace officer in connection with a Friday fray in the county jail.

Gray County Dep. J.R. Walker was reportedly struck by Darren William Hathcoat, 30, when Walker went in Hathcoat's cell about 6:30 p.m. Friday. Hathcoat's bond on the new charge is $10,000 set by Justice of the Peace Bob Muns.

TDCJ team evaluates prison space

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Nine employees of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice visited Pampa Monday evaluating space around the current prison unit as part of their site selection process for eight new prisons slated for construction in the next two years.

Prison officials were greeted by about 30 local people at Perry Lefors Field and joined at lunch by about 35 Pampans interested in the prison expansion effort, said County Judge Richard Peet.

Peet said the TDCJ employees will probably recommend the southwest corner of the existing fenced area, should Pampa be selected for one of the eight high security units.

"That's the original site, not the new addition that's out there," Peet explained.

Twenty Texas cities are vying for one of the eight units. Pampa is early on the site evaluation list, Peet said.

Prison employees were to travel to Amarillo Monday afternoon and on to Wichita Falls today, he said.

"Today is not the day for them to decide," he said.

Visiting with TDCJ were representatives of the city, county,

Southwestern Public Service, Energas and Pampa Economic Development Corp.

"We're kind of excited about the possibility of them building an addition," Peet said.

Peet said he felt encouraged about the visit.

"I think it is very good. I think we have developed a working rapport with the state. ... We have recognized the asset the prison has brought," he said.

Pampa City Manager Bob Eskridge was also heartened by the team.

"I think we can serve them pretty easily. We looked pretty good," he said.

The construction of a high security unit is not a cause for concern because TDCJ will provide proper security measures, Peet said.

"What are we talking about when we talk about the existing unit? There are people in the unit with some pretty serious crimes," he said. "This is not a country club set. ... (TDCJ's) intent is never to put the community in jeopardy."

Two weeks ago, county and city commissioners and the Pampa Economic Development Corporation directors each gave the go-ahead for the community to seek the expansion.

Peet, Mayor Bob Neslage and PEDC board president Vic Raymond all signed a letter indicating community support, which they hand-delivered last week to Huntsville.

The letter read in part:

"Our community stands willing and ready to assist the TDCJ in locating this new facility in the Pampa area. The Pampa community has demonstrated its commitment and desire to work with the TDCJ and provide cost effective placement of facilities into our area over the past several years. The community is again united and dedicated to providing a cost effective project to the TDCJ for this new unit."

Cattlemen seeking 'new realities' for industry at Dallas TCFA convention

DALLAS - Cattlemen came to a fork in the road leading to a more efficient, consumer-oriented industry. Thanks to hard work and dedication by many people, however, cattlemen chose the correct path and now are beginning a journey that will take the beef industry to a new plateau, according to beef industry leaders.

That, according to Bob Carter and Clark Willingham, is one of the "new realities" for cattlemen searching for ways to solidify their industry's position in a highly competitive and changing consumer marketplace.

The two cattlemen, speaking Monday during the "New Realities" annual convention of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association in Dallas, have been involved in the unification of major national industry organizations from the very beginning. Carter, of Plainview, and Willingham, who is from Dallas, are both past TCFA presidents and members of the beef industry oversight committee that engineered the history-making merger of the NCA and the Meat Board. Currently, Carter serves as treasurer of the Beef Board and Willingham is NCA president-elect.

In explaining the structure of the new industry organization to the more than 700 cattle feeders attending the TCFA convention, Carter and Willingham said those who represented the working grassroots labored long and hard to find a structure that empowers the producer with the focus, coordination, control and cost-effectiveness needed to build a more profitable beef industry.

"This has been an evolving process of consensus and compromise," they said.

The new organization will operate with a single industry plan; a unified staff structure; one chief executive officer; one planning, budgeting, nominating and evaluation process; one set of industry committees to develop policies and programs; and provisions for an annual stakeholders congress instead of four separate annual meetings which occur under the present structure, Carter and Willingham said.

However, there will be some division of responsibilities.

"Issues will be discussed jointly in the executive committee, but only those executive committee members representing checkoff interests will vote on checkoff matters," Carter and Willingham said.

"Similarly, only those executive committee members representing membership dues-paying constituents will vote on dues and policy-related issues. On other issues, such as administration and operations, the executive committee will act jointly."

"With NCA's positive vote in January, we'll have a green light to proceed with the quest to modernize our production and marketing practices, respond to consumer preferences and rebuild our market share," Carter and Willingham said.

Five found dead in barge sinking, survivors located

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (AP) - Rescue boats pulled 15 survivors out of the Gulf of Mexico today after a barge sank in a hurricane, and the U.S. Coast Guard raised the death toll from the sinking to five.

Roxanne, downgraded from a hurricane to a tropical storm with winds of 65 mph today, continued to torment tens of thousands of coastal residents by pushing the sea far above its normal level. Homes and belongings alike were destroyed by the worst flooding here since 1927.

High seas and blustery winds complicated efforts to rescue the survivors of the barge, which sank Sunday night with at least 244 aboard as Roxanne spun through the area. The barge was working for the Mexican oil monopoly Pemex.

Octavio Best, chief of navigation for this ravaged port, said 15 survivors were picked off floating wreckage by small boats early today and were being taken to another barge converted into a makeshift hospital.

"They are not well, but I have had no report of anything serious," Best told The Associated Press.

At least five people were dead, including an American, said U.S. Coast Guard officer Rene Gordon in New Orleans. She said two U.S. C-130 spotter planes rejoined the search today, and a Coast Guard cutter en route from Key West, Fla.

Best said the survivors were brought to the floating hospital because the wind and waves made docking at shore impossible. Army troops and city workers were searching for other possible survivors reported on islands of the flooded beaches northeast of the city.

The new report brings to 234 the number of those rescued from the barge sinking. Varying — but unconfirmed — reports said 19 to 30 U.S. citizens and one Canadian had been aboard the ship.

Wind gusts, recorded at up to 50 mph on offshore oil platforms, hampered helicopters as they searched for the missing, but 30-foot seas were reported to be subsiding.

All crew members had put on life jackets with strobe lights or boarded life rafts before the vessel went down, said James Stewart, a spokesman for barge owner CCC Fabricaciones y Construcciones.

Outside Best's office Monday night, wind-whipped seawater poured down the streets of Ciudad del Carmen like fast-moving rivers. Hundreds of houses were flooded — a few nearly to their rooftops — and more than 7,000 people were housed in emergency shelters set up in schools and other buildings.

People stood in water up to their knees to make calls from a phone system that somehow still worked. There was also electrical power, though some loose cables sizzled as they whipped about in the rain.

Across the state of Campeche, tens of thousands were driven from their homes by a sea surge the like of which few could recall. Ernesto Ongay, an amateur local historian, said the floods were the worst since 1927.

In the state capital of Campeche, the sea surged more than two blocks inland from the normal coastline before receding, leaving streets clogged with seaweed and the legislative building under 4 feet of water.

"I have had to wash my house out three times," said Georgina Velazquez, whose house was flooded by Hurricane Opal two weeks ago and by Roxanne's first pass last week.

Roxanne, which doubled back to sting the southern Gulf Coast after killing six people in southern Mexico on its first swing, was slowly headed north-northwest today at 5 mph.

At 11 a.m. EDT, the meandering storm was about 300 miles east-southeast of Tampico, Mexico, today, according to the U.S. National Hurricane Center.

The barge that sank was one of many maintenance ships servicing offshore platforms and oil pipelines to the mainland. Such boats often have hundreds aboard.

The Mexican navy, in a statement transmitted by Mexico's state news agency, said the barge was taking oil workers back to offshore platforms after they had been evacuated late last week when Roxanne first passed by.

World-traveling cyclists visit Pampa

The AXA World Ride cyclists were up early this morning at Best Western Northgate Inn preparing for another leg on their world ride.

The group, which includes five disabled riders, are pedaling their way across the world on a journey which begins March 17 in Atlanta. So far, they have traveled to the British Isles, Europe, past the Great Wall of China and across Russia.

Monday afternoon the cyclists arrived in Pampa to relax before resuming the final leg of their 13,000 mile trip early Tuesday morning. Before leaving Pampa for Elk City, the group had traveled 11,059 miles.

The ride will end Nov. 18 when they cycle into Washington D.C.

"I thought it would be a great way to demonstrate to people what people with disabilities can do if they put their mind to it," said Steve Ackerman of Fort Collins, Colo., one of the disabled riders.

There isn't anything he feels he wouldn't be able to tackle after he finishes this ride.

"Except walk," said the 41-year-old who was paralyzed in a car accident in 1987.

And that, he said, may eventually happen. "I still have many more years left in my life," he said.

Naval students accused of drug possession

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) - Two midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy are accused of LSD possession, and the entire student body — 4,000 people — was obliged to submit to urine tests as a consequence.

An investigation by college and Navy officials "identified a small number of midshipmen who were potentially involved in illicit drug use," said Capt. Tom Jurkowski, an academy spokesman.

The two midshipmen, who have not been identified, were confined to the academy grounds Sunday. Academy officials were expected to charge them with the purchase and possession of illicit drugs.

As part of the investigation, half of the student body underwent urinalysis on Sunday and the other half Monday.

Jurkowski said two other midshipmen were expelled this year for possession of illegal drugs.

Vehicle title applicants required to provide social security number

The Texas Department of Transport will soon require additional information on title applications for motor vehicles.

Beginning Nov. 1, Texans who request title transactions in counties using the Registration and Title System must provide their social security number.

RTS is an automated system that electronically links county tax offices to TxDOT Headquarters in Austin.

The Gray County Tax Office and its McLean branch use RTS to process motor vehicle transactions.

The social security requirement is part of House Bill 1863, passed by the 74th Legislature. The bill addresses fraud prevention in public assistance programs.

TxDOT is mandated to collect the social security numbers and make them accessible to other state agencies for the purpose of determining eligibility for those programs.

Individuals who do not have a social security number, or are not eligible for one, must complete a statement before their title application is processed.

Disclosure of the social security number will be voluntary in Texas counties not using RTS.

Questions concerning the new requirement should be directed to the Gray County Tax Office or the nearest Vehicle Titles and Registration Division office.

TxDOT is implementing RTS statewide, with completion expected by December 1996.

The computerized system makes it possible for registration records to be updated within 48 hours, which is a major benefit to law enforcement.

Customers will also receive their vehicle titles within five days of the date the title applications arrive at TxDOT headquarters.

Canadian marching festival

Canadian High School drum major Alejandra Ramirez conducts a selection from the Andrew Lloyd Webber Broadway musical Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat during Canadian's Fall Foliage Marching Festival Saturday. The festival served as a warmup for this Saturday's Region I Marching Contest in Borger. The Canadian band scored straight I's in competition, as did the Wheeler band. Shamrock received a II in the festival.

March boosts Farrakhan as national black leader

By LAURA MYERS
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Standing center stage before a television audience of a lifetime, Louis Farrakhan thrust himself boldly into the debate over racial equality in America.

Black men at the Million Man March said the Nation of Islam minister lifted their hopes. But critics feared that Farrakhan's views, by virtue of his growing leadership role, would further divide.

"This is definitely a sign of success for Mr. Farrakhan," Rep. Gary Franks, R-Conn., said of Monday's massive rally on the National Mall. "But I believe the record of the Nation of Islam is very, very clear. They have expressed hatred for Jews, toward whites and for Christians."

Still, Farrakhan tapped into a deeply felt need for a public showing of support for black males in America, where many of their peers are behind bars or in early graves, and most of their ancestors were slaves.

"There was a spiritual awakening," said Myrtle Evers Williams, chairwoman of the NAACP, which refused to back the march because of Farrakhan's past remarks against Jews, women, whites and homosexuals. "You could tell that. You could see that through the (television) monitors — through the screen."

The daylong rally was televised live on Cable News Network and C-SPAN and was heavily covered by the print and broadcast media.

Despite Williams' distaste for Farrakhan's comments over the years — that whites and blacks should live separately, that Jews are "bloodsuckers" in a "gutter religion" — she told Larry King on CNN that after Monday's demonstration of support he should be allowed to show whether he can lead.

"He's smart. He's smooth and he's moving forward and he's using all of us to do it," Williams said, noting he urged blacks to go home and join organizations like the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "I say let's give him a chance."

In Alpharetta, Ga., House Speaker Newt Gingrich called Farrakhan an "unrepentant bigot" and worried that he would gain legitimacy.

"There's no question that the biggest winner out of today's march is going to be Farrakhan, and he's going to use this to argue he is the legitimate leader of African-Americans," Gingrich said. "Leaders who show up today (to speak at the rally) are clearly strengthening his position and making him a more important figure."

The charismatic 62-year-old spoke mostly of black men becoming more self-reliant and responsible. But he also peppered his talk with the idea that blacks suffered greatly because the United States was built on "white supremacy" — the idea that "you should rule because you're white."

"The real evil in America is the idea that undergirds the setup of the Western world, and that idea is called white supremacy," he said.

March participant Pierre Brown of Newburgh, N.Y., said Farrakhan might not meet the grade of former black leaders, but he isn't afraid to say what's on his mind.

"It's too bad we can't have Martin Luther King or Malcolm X, but we have to take what we have," Brown said. "That's why we hold him (Farrakhan) so dear to us: He's the only one we have left who will speak out."

Billy Harris, a custodian who came from New York City to the rally, said, "I don't see another leader in the country who could call for this many people to come here. I cannot think of one individual that could do it."

Official estimates put the crowd at 400,000, for the fourth largest rally ever in Washington. Rally organizers put the number as high as 2 million.

In a post-march interview on CNN's "Larry King Live," a relaxed Farrakhan said he was called by God to lead the march, and no other black leader could do it.

King noted that Colin Powell, the former Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, had said he wished that another black leader had organized the march, and that he didn't want to share the stage with Farrakhan to legitimize him.

Farrakhan responded, "If He (God) had placed the call in Colin Powell's mouth, the people would not have shown up. If he had placed the call in other people's mouths, the people would not have shown up."

He answered President Clinton, who in a speech in Austin, Texas, said he supported the men who came to march — but not their leader.

Farrakhan told the rally, "I'm not a malicious person and I'm not filled with malice."

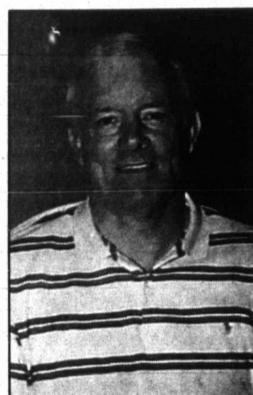

The Congressional Black Caucus and Jesse Jackson waited two months after Farrakhan called for a "million men" to march on Washington before endorsing the gathering. The National Baptist Convention, the Progressive National Baptist Convention and the National Urban League remained opposed.

During his 2 1/2-hour speech, Farrakhan said he doesn't need widespread support. "I don't need to be in any mainstream." But he seemed to play to the national audience, trying to make peace with his critics.

And Farrakhan surprised some by calling for a sit-down meeting with Jewish leaders. Those groups quickly dismissed the idea and charged that it was a public relations move to increase his profile.

United Way introduces its 1995 Loaned Executives

As part of its 1995 fund-raising campaign, Pampa United Way is once again implementing the Loaned Executives Program as a highly effective way to enlist local businesses and their employees in support of United Way. This year's program includes eight executives, each of whom The Pampa News will introduce during the course of the campaign.

Charles Jones

Charles R. Jones brings a unique perspective to Pampa United Way's Loaned Executive Program, having served in several capacities in several states during his tenure with Hoechst Celanese. 1995 marks his sixth year as a Loaned Executive, in addition to having served as Major Group chairman and Facility chairman.

"As compared to the United Way campaigns in two former localities," Charles observes, "the Pampa effort is tops in effort and performance." Charles has been instrumental in setting that standard and his calm yet enthusiastic influence has helped instill this year's volunteer team with a positive belief in their message to the community. He will play a crucial role in motivating local businesses to meet and exceed their contributions of previous years.

Charles is able to speak authoritatively about the importance of the services provided by Pampa United Way agencies due to his service as a board member of Pampa Sheltered Workshop, as well as his years of volunteer experience.

Charles earned his bachelor of science degree from Auburn University and is employed by Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group. He and his wife, Elizabeth, have been active members of the community since their move to Pampa.

Reeve leaves them laughing at first appearance since accident

NEW YORK (AP) — Christopher Reeve, his blue eyes sparkling and chiseled features as handsome as ever, put everyone at ease — joking about his misfortune and thanking those who helped him when life didn't seem worth it.

Reeve, unable to move from the shoulders down after a horseback-riding accident, presented an award Monday to Robin Williams at a benefit dinner for the Creative Coalition, an actors' advocacy group.

In a voice that was strong but not as booming as in his "Superman" days, Reeve recalled that Williams visited his hospital room five days after the May 27 accident and did a "Russian doctor act."

"I saw Robin Williams and I knew my life was going to be OK," the tuxedo-clad Reeve told about 500 celebrities in his first public appearance since the accident.

"When the chips were down and my life was hanging in the balance ... there was Robin Williams, leaping to my assistance," he said.

Breathing with the aid of a ventilator, the 6-foot-4 actor activates his electric wheelchair by blowing through a tube. He stayed in a separate room at the Pierre Hotel until his presentation.

Reeve, 42, joked about his misfortune, saying he decided to attend the gala after recalling the advice of a former English teacher to another student about skipping school.

"She said, 'The only excuse you could have is a quadruple amputation, and even then you could come in a basket,'" Reeve said. "So I thought I'd better show up."

Williams, who was being honored for work he has done with the Creative Coalition, received an award shaped like a theatrical spotlight.

He looked at the award, then at Reeve, and said: "Before we mount this new highlight on Chris' wheelchair ..."

Interrupted by laughter, Williams then kissed Reeve's forehead.

Last month, Reeve told Barbara Walters on ABC-TV's "20/20" that he had considered suicide just after the accident.

"Maybe I should just check out," Reeve said he told his wife, Dana Morosini. He decided to hang on because of his children. "I could see how much they needed me and wanted me," he told Walters.

Reeve broke his neck and several vertebrae when he was thrown from a horse and landed on his head during a riding competition in Culpeper, Va. Doctors later fused several vertebrae to stabilize damage to his spinal cord.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

They shouldn't play ball with Unabomber

For decades, The New York Times and The Washington Post have represented much of what is good, and some of what is bad, about American journalism.

From their principled reporting of the civil rights movement, Watergate, the Vietnam War and other controversial subjects, they have justly earned public acclaim and the respect of generations of reporters and editors. The Post and Times set the standard in a profession that, more than any, has helped preserve the freedoms that separate this country from all others. But the decision by the two media giants to print a 35,000-word treatise by the so-called Unabomber calls into question not only the papers' commitment to journalistic integrity, but their understanding of it.

The Unabomber is a terrorist and a serial killer. In 17 years, he has killed three people and injured 23 with a series of package bombs, while taunting law enforcement agencies who have been powerless to stop him.

In June, he demanded that the Post and Times print — unedited — his 62-page treatise titled "Industrial Society and Its Future." The essay attacks modern society, deploring the erosion of individual freedom and the increasing dehumanization of its citizens.

With the demand came a promise, to not kill again if the manuscript was published within three months by the Post or the Times. Faced with the extortionist's Sept. 24 deadline, the Post printed the treatise, with the Times sharing the cost.

In an extraordinary statement, Post Publisher Donald E. Graham and Times Publisher Arthur Sulzberger Jr. explained that they were bowing to the Unabomber's threat "for public safety reasons." The statement did not explain how acceding to a terrorist's demands might be construed as serving public safety. The statement also did not address the impact their decision might have on other psychopaths with a flair for writing. What's to keep someone from blowing up a bus, then threatening to do it again unless he gets his day in the pages of the Post or the Times.

Sadly, no amount of rationalization can obscure the fact that the Times and Post have poorly served their profession and the American people.

Journalism is anchored in the belief that news is not for sale, neither by checkbook nor by coercion.

The Post and the Times should have refused to play ball with the Unabomber. By doing so, they diminished their prestige, gave succor to the worst kind of lunatic, and perhaps opened the door for imitators with similar agendas and vacant morals.

Viewpoints

Can Fidel survive trade with us?

Fidel Castro, who has ruined an economy, a suffering populace and hardly a friend in the world, looks like a dictator whose days are numbered. The Chinese government, with its rising prosperity and close trading ties with the West, seems as solid and permanent as the Grand Coulee Dam. But if you want to bet on which communist government will still be in power five or 10 years from now, bet on Havana's.

The main reason, paradoxically, is that the people who want to force Cuba to abandon its form of government have gotten their way with the U.S. Congress, while the people demanding drastic reform in China have not.

Castro has been under an American economic embargo since the Eisenhower administration. It was tightened in 1992 and, if the House of Representatives gets its way, will be tightened again this year.

China's punishment for the Tiananmen Square massacre, by contrast, was to be allowed to more than double its trade with the United States in the following four years. President Clinton, who campaigned in favor of revoking China's "most-favored-nation" trade privileges, ultimately decided to extend them.

The U.S. government has barred trade with Cuba in an effort to inflict so much economic pain that Cubans will rise up against their rulers. The Chinese government, in turn, has done business with the West on the assumption that it can hold on to power as long as it can deliver higher living standards to its people. Both Washington and Beijing are ignoring a wealth of experience that says they are undermining their own purposes.

The two best examples are the Soviet Union and

Stephen Chapman

South Africa, which developed extensive trade and other contact with the West and thus exposed themselves to Western pressure and Western ideas. Commentator George Will wrote scathingly of American executives who, by doing business in the Soviet Union, showed that they "love commerce more than they love communism." That was just seven years before the fall of the Berlin Wall. Their dedication to commerce, it turns out, helped induce the destruction of communism.

The Soviet Union and South Africa welcomed American capitalists, without realizing the danger of what they were doing. "Business was — and is — a profoundly subversive force," writes John Chettle in the fall issue of The National Interest. "It is highly rational, which despots are not and cannot afford to be. It is focused on consumers' needs and wishes, which despots never are. It comes laden with dangerous tools: intelligence, information, computers, telephones, faxes, Xerox machines."

Commerce also expands interaction among ordinary people, and that, says Chettle, "makes an impact. It elicits information. It provokes comparison. It induces change." The Soviets and the South Africans, who had long and successful experience in suppressing unwanted developments, thought they could handle any side effects from the intrusion of Americans and other Westerners. Both were fatally mistaken.

Chettle, a naturalized American who once headed the South Africa Foundation for North and South America, argues that trade alone was not enough to topple these regimes. To preserve the trade, which many Americans opposed on human rights grounds, Moscow and Pretoria had to make concessions to appease public opinion in the United States. The perpetual threat of economic sanctions — and in the case of South Africa, the desire to escape them — forced these rulers into a series of small reforms that eventually snowballed.

For their own survival, those governments would have been wiser to seal themselves off from the West and particularly from the United States. The Iranian mullahs know as much and act accordingly. Kim Il Sung of North Korea carefully isolated his people from the outside world and died of natural causes as the longest-serving ruler on Earth.

That must be a comfort to Castro, who owes his 36-year reign mainly to Washington's efforts to dislodge him. As Chettle writes, "Any despot inclined to maintain his position should avoid contact with the United States at all costs." The U.S. boycott prevents ties between Americans and Cubans, gives Castro an excuse for the terrible state of his economy and spares him the need to cultivate goodwill in the United States by relaxing his repression.

Advocates of the embargo are forever insisting that the next turn of the screw will be the one that does the trick. But Castro has proven he can survive isolation from the United States. We should see if he can survive contact.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 17, the 290th day of 1995. There are 75 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 17, 1777, British forces under Gen. John Burgoyne surrendered to American troops in Saratoga, N.Y., in a turning point of the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

In 1919, the Radio Corporation of America was created.

In 1931, mobster Al Capone was convicted of income tax evasion and sentenced to 11 years in prison. (He was released in 1939.)

In 1933, Albert Einstein arrived in the United States as a refugee from Nazi Germany.

In 1941, the U.S. destroyer Kearney was torpedoed by a German submarine off the coast of Iceland. Eleven people died.

In 1945, Col. Juan Peron staged a coup in Buenos Aires, becoming absolute ruler of Argentina.

Welfare state begets immorality

Charley Reese

What's wrong with providing $8 billion to pay for child care for welfare mothers, as the U.S. Senate voted to do?

If you don't know the answer, then you probably don't understand the immorality of the welfare state.

What's wrong with providing $8 billion to buy child care for welfare mothers is that the $8 billion must be taken from the labor of mothers and fathers who are working hard to stay off welfare.

Thus these people, families and single moms must not only pay for their own child care, their own housing and their own medical care, but they must also pay for the child care of women on welfare. And they are already paying for the welfare recipient's housing, medical care, food stamps and monthly check.

The inescapable truth, since government has no money of its own, is that a welfare state turns morality upside down. The welfare state rewards indolence and taxes labor; it rewards irresponsibility and punishes (with taxes) responsible behavior; it subsidizes dependency and punishes independence.

In other words, when you live in a welfare state and play by the traditional rules of working hard, saving, postponing gratification and taking care of yourself and your family, then you lose.

The welfare state puts a millstone around your neck so that you must not only support your family but other people's families as well. And, if you complain, you will be called selfish and other bad names.

This sordid confiscation and redistribution of the fruits of labor is bad enough, but then we have to listen to the odious rhetoric of senators pretending to be great, compassionate philanthropists.

"We must do this and we must do that," they thunder. Well, OK, you do it, senators. Take the money out of your checking accounts and provide these things you call necessities for welfare moms. Most of you are millionaires anyway.

Certainly from the look of Sen. Ted Kennedy, one of the worst of the pseudo-philanthropists, anything that would discourage him from eating and drinking his ample personal fortune would be beneficial to his health.

But don't take this money out of the hides of hard-working men and women and then regale us with hot air speeches about your generosity. Wage earners, too poor to take advantage of loopholes and to hire fancy taxlawyers, are being taxed to death by the phony compassion of welfare state socialists.

Under the present tax system, an inescapable part of the welfare state is especially vicious because it taxes the same labor over and over. People are taxed when they earn; when they spend, they are taxed again; if they save, they are taxed again; if they invest, they are taxed again; and when they die, they are taxed again. When their children inherit — if they inherit — they fall victim to the multiple taxing system.

Americans have been duped into adopting a vile, unjust system by being fed pap about compassion not only by politicians but by the welfare industry and by the press.

Government is not human and therefore cannot deal in either charity or compassion. As a Western judge once said of corporations, the government "has no pants to kick or soul to damn."

Government can apply force (its main function) or refrain from applying force. It can confiscate money and award money. But it cannot practice charity, because to take from one at the point of a gun to give to another is theft, not charity.

Welfare should be an entirely private function, and the government should end the practice altogether at the federal level and do it only for the truly disabled at the state level.

Otherwise, pols will continue to enslave one group to buy the votes of another.

Pope could put us all on the right track

Fortunately, just as the O.J. Simpson mess was getting out of hand, the Pope landed. There couldn't have been a better time for the world's preeminent moral leader to stick his nose into our affairs.

Hard-shell fundamentalists used to wring their hands over the "popes of Rome." This was during a time of religious consensus. It could be taken for granted that however people might divide on theological questions, they accepted religious-based truth as the great guide in human affairs.

No more, that's for sure. The O.J. mess — what else do we call such a mixture of media-driven acrimony and sleaze? — makes plain how morally confused we have become. In these secularized times, the moral law doesn't "resonate" (to borrow a fashionable word).

It doesn't bind either. If it bound and restrained and guided, as it once did, fallout from the O.J. mess would be hugely different.

To begin with, O.J.'s celebrity would never have dazzled us. Not his fame but his conduct would have been the touchstone. Celebrity purchased for him perhaps not immunity from criticism but certainly the benefit of the doubt on various questions, starting with wife-beating and proceeding to capital murder. The authorities were obliged to tread gingerly in the matter of a jerk who happens to be world-famous.

And also black. The race question distorted everything. Blacks and whites, it became evident, couldn't trust each other. Or refused to, which came to the same thing. Guilt, innocence, credibility — in practice if not in theory, race continues to influence all such matters.

William Murchison

It wasn't the moral law's finest hour, the O.J. mess. ("Hour"? If only it could have been so brief!)

The pope's visit is like air freshener in the fetid environment of the O.J. mess. One doesn't have to be Roman Catholic — as I'm not — to smell the effect. John Paul II reminds us of something that formerly was much plainer than it has become in modern times. He reminds us of the true standards for judging.

How do we measure the worth of a man or woman? According to fame? According to income? The great virtues the pope preaches are faith, hope and love.

What has any of them to do with TV contracts and book deals? The pontiff would rebuke us for flopping on our stomachs before the altar of worldly achievement.

How do husbands and wives treat each other? The moral law speaks powerfully to that question. They treat each other with enduring love and respect. There is no room for abuse of any kind in a relationship sanctified by God: not physical assault and, above all, not murder.

And how do the races treat each other? There is an old Sunday school song: "Red and yellow, black and white, they are precious in His sight." Religion alone erases differences of color and culture with the knowledge and the conviction that God has made every single soul in the world. There is no surer tonic for racial division. Nonetheless, it gathers dust on the supermarket shelves. Witness all the pre-verdict tensions between blacks and whites, not to mention the post-verdict ones (which, among other things, may sink Colin Powell's presidential candidacy).

There is serendipity in Great Events. All the attention directed at the pope's coming will not obliterate all the righteous anger over the O.J. mess. What it may do is put into some minds an idea in two parts.

The first part is that a society dedicated to celebrity and preening and raw acquisition and the venting of personal — or group — grievances is a society in mortal danger.

The second part is that there's a better, safer way that is based on acknowledgment of common humanity and the obligations and responsibilities that flow from such an acknowledgment. We call that way the moral law. At least, we did in the days — not all that distant — when faith, hope and love were more central concerns than choices, preferences and rights.

They are the O.J. style and the John Paul style — for a few days, we could watch them operate side by side. I wouldn't bet on its being much of a match.

President Orders Six Gallons of Ice Cream, to Go
 SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fill this order and make it snappy — Air Force One will be waiting; 6 gallons of mango ice cream for President Clinton.

The president placed the special take-out order before coming to town today to speak to workers at Kelly Air Force Base and meet with the executive committee of the initial Base Adjustment Strategy Committee.

The dessert, which has been on the menu of the Menger Hotel's Colonial Room for more than a century, is made from mangoes from the hotel garden, hotel spokesman Arthur Cavazos said.

The 6 gallons would cost the average consumer $128.98, tax included, but the hotel is picking up the tab.

Clinton has said he got mango mania while in Texas working for George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign. Since then, he's been hooked.

"He (once) described it as one of the great treasures of American life," Cavazos said in today's editions of The San Antonio Express-News.

Grammys Stay in Los Angeles in 1996

LOS ANGELES (AP) — And the Grammy Awards go to: Los Angeles.

The 38th annual Grammy Awards show isn't until February, but Los Angeles has successfully defended its title as the host city.

The music industry awards will be handed out at the city's Shrine Auditorium, Michael Greene, president of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, said Monday.

For three of the previous four years, the music industry awards show had been held in New York, at Radio City Music Hall.

The 1994 awards, which were handed out last March, also were held at the Shrine.

The cities compete to be the host of the show, which brings prestige and millions of dollars into city coffers.

The live broadcast on Feb. 28 will air from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. on CBS, telecast executive producer Pierre Cossette said.

FBI Still Searching for Saboteur in Fatal Train Derailment

PHOENIX (AP) — A week into the investigation of a deadly Amtrak derailment, FBI agents set up rural roadblocks in hopes that someone can shed some light on the saboteur who caused the crash.

"It's too early to tell if the information will lead to anyone," FBI spokesman Jack Callahan said Monday.

The roadblocks were set up for a 24-hour period that ended about 3 a.m. Monday. Agents also have interviewed some of the 1,500 residents who live near the crash site, 55 miles southwest of Phoenix in Hyder.

The Sunset Limited toppled into a desert gulch along a sabotaged stretch of track Oct. 9, killing crewman Mitchell Bates and injuring 78 people. Copies of an anti-government letter were found around the wreck.

Jury Selection Begins In Slaying Of San Angelo Soldier

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Attorneys began questioning 150 potential jurors about their attitudes toward the death penalty, race and pretrial publicity surrounding the case of a man accused of abducting and killing a soldier in San Angelo.

Jury selection began Monday in federal court as Louis Jones, a 45-year-old San Angelo bus driver and military veteran, went on trial in the February death of Army Pvt. Tracie Joy McBride, 19.

Jones, who is black, is accused of abducting Miss McBride, who was white, from a Goodfellow Air Force Base laundry and fatally beating her with a tire iron.

Pampa United Way agency profile

This article is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 1995 "Paint A Brighter Tomorrow" fundraising campaign.

David and Diann are typical parents, working two jobs to make ends meet. With three children in school, the need to take time off from work twice a day puts a strain on their jobs. The stress is even greater if they must leave the children at home unsupervised.

Bill is also a typical parent and so is Lisa. They are each single parents raising their children alone, with only one job to support the family. This added stress can affect the emotional well-being of all involved.

Gray Latch Key was developed because of a need to reduce stress caused by after-school child care concerns. It is a Texas State Licensed Child Care Facility that offers a realistic and affordable child care alternative for parents and their children in kindergarten through fifth grades. Care is provided Monday through Friday until 5:30 p.m. Services include supervised activities, snacks, tutorials, play and a safe place for after school. Knowing the impact of caregivers on the lives of children, the staff strives to help the children feel not only happy but loved as well. They offer low rates for child care and reduced fees for some families.

To Pampa United Way and the many concerned citizens who make donations, the Latch Key children, staff and Board of Directors say "Thank you for your support!"

Billy Graham invites Unabomber to crusade

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham prepared to launch a five-day crusade by inviting the Unabomber to attend the prayer meetings and receive spiritual salvation.

"I just think we ought to pray for him and hope he'll come to the meetings," Graham said Monday. The crusade was to begin on Wednesday. Investigators have suggested that the mail-bomb terrorist who has eluded authorities for 17 years may live in the Sacramento region. His string of bombings has killed three people and injured 23 others.

Strip Dancer's Grandparents Struggle to Be Supportive

DEAR ABBY: I have seven grandchildren. The oldest, "Jennifer," graduated from high school last spring. She is a beautiful young lady, and we had hoped she would choose a career that would make us proud of her.

To our dismay, she is working as a dancer in a strip club. She says the money is fantastic and now she is able to buy herself a car and make a down payment on a condo. She has always kept in touch with us, though she lives in another town.

We love her dearly, but abhor what she is doing with her life. She wants to come and visit soon, and we will probably bring her a grand. We have always looked forward to Jennifer's visits, but we are having trouble accepting her new lifestyle. We aren't sure how to handle this, and would appreciate any advice you can give us.

FROM THE OLD SCHOOL IN FLORIDA

DEAR OLD SCHOOL: Jennifer is an adult now and has the right to make her own decisions and choose her own lifestyle, even though it may not meet with your approval.

I am from the same "old school" from which you graduated, but why not give Jennifer the benefit of the doubt? Jobs these days are very hard to find, especially for 18-year-olds fresh out of high school — so don't come down too hard on her.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am sick and tired of telephone solicitors. Some time ago, I started receiving telephone calls asking for my husband. Each time I told the caller my husband was not at home, adding, "If you'll give me the number, I'll have him return your call." He would hang up on me. After numerous calls from this man (I recognized his voice), he finally quit calling, and I thought I was rid of him.

Now the calls have started again. He won't identify himself, and he keeps asking for my husband. (My husband has been dead for 12 years.) For safety reasons, I keep my telephone listed under my husband's name rather than my own.

Have you any suggestions, Abby? I have many friends who are also widows and some of them have also experienced this.

CAUTIOUS IN FAIRFAX, VA. DEAR CAUTIOUS: Never tell a stranger on the phone that your husband isn't home; instead say, "He isn't able to come to the phone right now. If you leave your name and number, I will see that he gets the message."

Consider listing your name with only an initial instead of your husband's name. Then strangers will not know if the listing is for a male or female.

Also consider buying an answering machine so you can "screen" your calls before picking up the receiver.

If, however, you feel threatened or harassed, notify your telephone company and your local police.

DEAR ABBY: Please do not bother us Texans with advice from Californians about how to deal with the heat.

My experience as a lifelong Texan who has visited California tells me that its reputation as warm and sunny is all marketing. I was the only one around with a tan in May.

"Cool Lady in Fort Worth" was absolutely right; it takes all night to cool off enough to mow here. And as for the grass needing all night to recover — tough!

A man once wrote that if he owned Hell and Texas, he would rent out Texas and live in Hell.

FOOTBALL

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Now that their last remaining unsigned player is under contract, the Dallas Cowboys have offered a multi-year extension to middle linebacker Robert Jones that includes a significant signing bonus.

The Cowboys' attempt to reach terms with Jones has been complicated by the team's dispute with the NFL over the Deion Sanders contract and its charge to the salary cap. The Dallas Morning News reported today.

Jones, who led the Cowboys with eight tackles in their 23-9 victory over San Diego on Sunday, can become an unrestricted free agent after this season.

"This is probably our last opportunity to get something done before next season," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Monday. "We're concerned right now because we really have no idea where the NFL considers us in relation to the salary cap. But we have decided to honor the offer we have to Robert."

Jones makes $500,000 in base salary and charges $874,300 to the team's salary cap this season.

"This tells me they have confidence in me as a football player," Jones said.

Starting outside linebacker Darrin Smith signed a one-year contract over the weekend that will pay him $270,000 for the remainder of the season. The agreement includes a $100,000 bonus if the Cowboys win the Super Bowl. He had threatened to sit out the first 10 games of the season. He has to play six games to qualify for free agency in 1996.

Mariners turn to Johnson in Game 6 of playoffs

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — At this rate, Randy Johnson might set yet another major league record this season — most saves in the month of October.

Not the kind of saves Dennis Eckersley, Tug McGraw or Rollie Fingers recorded in postseasons past. No, these are even more meaningful, as in pitching performances that save the entire season.

For the fourth time in 16 days, Johnson will get the ball when a loss means elimination for the Seattle Mariners. He'll start Game 6 of the AL playoffs Tuesday night with the Cleveland Indians leading the series 3-2.

"Everybody relishes the opportunity to be out on the mound in a big game, as I do," Johnson said. "But I don't think anybody relishes the idea that if we lose this game, the season is over for us."

"I've done it three times this year where I've had to rise to the occasion," he said. "I don't sense any pressure. I'll go out there and do the best I can, as I have, and just try to pitch these guys a little bit better than I did a couple of days ago."

The Mariners are 30-3 when their Cy Young candidate pitches. His overall record is 20-2, including two wins in the postseason. He got a no-decision Friday night in a game Seattle eventually won in the 11th inning.

"He's a big game-type pitcher and if you have to put someone out there to win a game, it would be him," Cleveland third baseman Jim Thome said.

Johnson, who set major league marks this year for highest winning percentage among pitchers with at least 20 decisions (.900) and strikeouts per nine innings (12.35), began his success in all-or-nothing situations on Oct. 2.

Johnson beat the California Angels that Monday afternoon with a three-hitter in a one-game playoff for the AL West title. The following Friday night, he won again with the Mariners trailing the New York Yankees 2-0 in the best-of-5 first round of the playoffs. Two days later, he won the decisive Game 5 with three innings of relief.

In his last outing, he worked eight strong innings on a night the Mariners won 5-2 in the 11th. The Indians won the next two to take a one-game edge into the Kingdome, where Dennis Martinez will start Tuesday night.

"We're still going into the mouth of a lion," Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove said. "Everything about the Mariners team is good and they play so well at home."

This will be the fifth time this month that the Mariners have played a game in which a loss meant the end of the season. The previous four games were all at their noisy Kingdome and, obviously, they won every one.

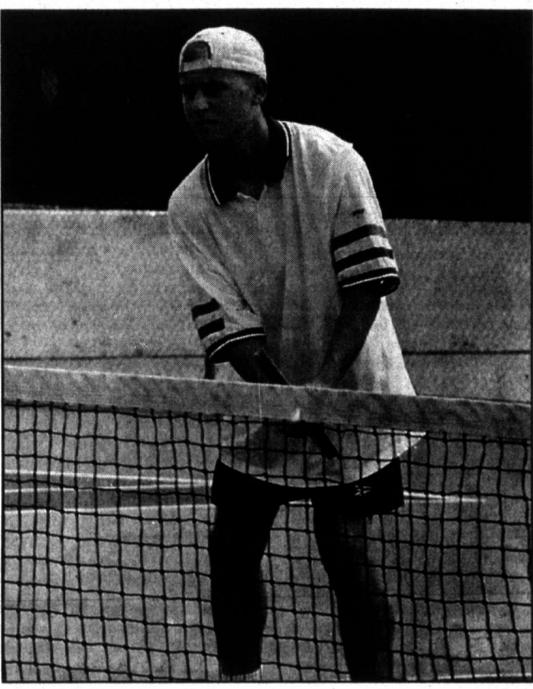

"Our backs have primarily been against the wall since the season started," Johnson said. "I don't think anybody projected us to be where we are right now."

Mariners manager Lou Piniella planned to save Johnson for a possible Game 7 had they won Sunday night in Cleveland. After a 3-2 loss, Piniella decided to bring back his ace on three days' rest, and said he would use either rookie Bob Wolcott or Tim Lincecum if there was a Game 7.

Johnson has carried Seattle so much lately that some people are wondering how much is left in that lanky, left arm. "Everybody knows that I'm a power pitcher, but I pitched pretty well last time not having a really good fastball. To me, it really doesn't matter how I get an out as long as I get an out," he said.

"I don't have to pitch any way. I'm still throwing 98 miles an hour," he said. "I'm pitching now, not overpowering people because you can't do that at this time of the year. They've seen me two or three times and they speed up their bats a little. I'm pitching by desire and that's the way I'll be getting them out."

Longhorns' quarterback may miss game against No. 14 Virginia

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas coach John Mackovic came away from a 24-24 tie against Oklahoma with more than questions about a failed fourth-down call late in the game.

His quarterback, James Brown, injured his left knee and his back to go along with a nagging strain in his throwing shoulder. Brown's availability for the 16th-ranked Longhorns' (4-1-1) game Saturday against No. 14 Virginia

(6-2) is up in the air, Mackovic said Monday.

"We just have to wait and see, but I have to put him in the questionable category," Mackovic said. "If he feels all right (Tuesday) and can move around, we'll see how he practices."

Mackovic said safety Tre Thomas (shoulder) was doubtful for Saturday's game and that Thomas' backup Robert Crenshaw (ankle) was questionable.

Harvesters resume district play against winless Caprock

PAMPA — Anyway you look at it, Amarillo Caprock will be hard-pressed to figure out a way to slow down a powerful Pampa club Friday night.

A possible advantage for Caprock, however slight, is that the winless Longhorns won't be playing at Harvester Stadium. The District 1-4A game will be played in Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium, but the homefield edge didn't do much for Garden City, Kan. or Plainview, which Pampa beat, 14-8, and 29-0, respectively.

Pampa at 4-1 climbed to the No. 9 spot in last week's Harris Rankings. The Harvesters' only setback was a 7-6 thriller against Amarillo High with only a missed 2-point conversion keeping the Harvesters from being unbeaten.

Pampa is well-rested after an open date last week while Canyon was slipping by Caprock, 24-15, on Friday night. It was Canyon whom the Harvesters demolished, 63-14, two weeks ago.

Except for a 41-0 loss to Borger two weeks ago, Caprock has been close to winning every game. The 0-6 Longhorns have lost four games by eight points or less.

"From the tapes I've looked at this may be the best Caprock team we've seen," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier. "They just haven't been able to make the right play at the proper time."

Individual statistical leaders for the Harvesters after five games are listed below:

Passing (comp-att-yards-TDs)

Broncos romp past Raiders, 27-0

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — It took six years for Mike Shanahan to get even.

Fired as head coach of the Los Angeles Raiders in 1989, Shanahan led his new team, the Denver Broncos, to a 27-0 romp over the Oakland Raiders on Monday night.

The game had all the appearances of a no-hoper for the Broncos, who had lost to the Raiders 11 of the previous 12 meetings, including six straight. Besides, the Raiders were the NFL's highest-scoring team, their 129 points in their previous three games setting a league record.

The last time the Raiders visited Mile High Stadium, most fans left by halftime. Those that remained threw trash at coach Wade Phillips following the dismal 48-16 drubbing.

Not this time. All they threw were accolades as the Broncos (4-3) stayed alive in the AFC West behind Oakland (5-2).

John Elway threw touchdown passes of 33 and 36 yards to Anthony Miller, and the Denver defense held the Raiders to 169 total yards — more than 200 yards below their average.

"To hold them to zero points and less than 200 yards, boy, is that great," defensive end Simon Fletcher said.

"To be honest with you," Shanahan said, "this was a little special considering my situation there. But this was not me against (Raider owner) Al Davis. This was our team against theirs, and this is one of my best wins because of the great effort."

"On defense, we tried to be the aggressor. On offense, we moved the football, although we didn't put it in the end zone as much as we would have liked."

Elway, who came into the game with a 6-15 career record against the Raiders, completed 23 of 46 passes for 324 yards. Miller caught seven passes for 149 yards, and Jason Elam kicked four field goals.

"This gets us right back in the hunt," Elway said. "It was a big one for Mike. Our defense just played awesome. These are always physical games against the Raiders, but we didn't back down."

The Broncos presented the game ball to Shanahan after the win.

The Raiders, averaging 30.5 points, had seven straight futile possessions from the second quarter until early in the fourth, managing only two first downs — one by penalty. In the third quarter, while Denver was building its lead, the Raiders had only three total yards on three possessions.

"Denver took advantage of our mistakes and our poor plays," Raiders coach Mike White said. "Another disappointment is that we had several players injured tonight. We not only lost the game, but they beat up on us as well."

"Elway is one of the best in the league, and Miller made some spectacular plays. I don't know who could have stopped him tonight."

Raiders receiver Tim Brown said his team "couldn't do anything. It seems like we went three-and-out 15 times."

Denver forced Raiders quarterback Jeff Hostetler from the game late in the third quarter, sacking him twice and sending him to the locker room to have X-rays on his larynx. The X-rays were negative, but Hostetler could talk only in a whisper, and Raiders officials said they didn't know the severity of the injury.

It was the second straight game in which Denver did not allow a touchdown, and it was its first shutout since Sept. 27, 1992. The Broncos also ended a seven-game losing streak in Monday night games.

The first quarter featured three turnovers, two fumbles and the ejection of Broncos linebacker Dave Wyman. Elam's 30-yard field goal, following Steve Atwater's interception, was the only score of the period.

The Raiders squandered a scoring opportunity later in the quarter, driving to the Denver 13, where Harvey Williams fumbled. Ex-Raider Lionel Washington returned 38 yards, but Wyman was ejected for scuffling with Hostetler at the end of the play.

Elam kicked a 32-yarder early in the second quarter, and the Broncos scored the only touchdown of the half with 3:10 left on Elway's 33-yard pass to Miller, capping an 84-yard drive. He hit Miller in stride in the end zone after the receiver beat Bruce Pickens down the sideline. Elway passed to Ed McCaffrey for the 2-point conversion and a 14-0 lead.

Elway appeared headed for another touchdown in the closing seconds of the half, but inexplicably fumbled as he approached the goal line, and the Raiders recovered.

Besides Elway's gaffe, the Broncos had a touchdown nullified by a penalty in the third quarter. Miller's apparent 68-yard reception was wiped out by a holding penalty against Broderick Thompson.

Elam kicked a 33-yarder midway through the third period for a 17-0 advantage.

Three plays later, Hostetler was sacked and fumbled when hit by Fletcher, and Denver recovered at the Oakland 25. After a holding

Yankees sign Gooden to one-year contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Eleven years ago, Dwight Gooden came to New York as a teen-age phenom with a blazing fastball and a can't-miss future.

His return to New York — where he collected two individual awards, a World Series championship and two drug-related suspensions — was sealed Monday when he agreed to a one-year contract with the Yankees.

The deal is guaranteed for $1 million next season and could be worth $2 million in 1997 and $3 million in 1998, plus incentives, if the Yankees choose to keep him. The New York Times reported today. The Yankees can buy out Gooden's contract for $300,000 in the second and third years.

Gooden, who won the NL Cy Young Award while with the New York Mets in 1985, a year after he was Rookie of the Year, was suspended from baseball for 1995 because of violations of his drug aftercare program.

"I feel like I've been to hell and back," the 30-year-old right-hander said in The Daily News today.

Misery, frustration continues for some 1994 flood victims

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Texas (AP) — His pursuit of a magnificent dream has enabled Charles Gant to endure 39 years of backbreaking labor at the Port of Houston.

"I wanted this ever since I was a little boy," said Gant, a 69-year-old retired longshoreman with big, strong hands and a bum knee. A proud grin belies a troubled look in his weary eyes.

"So I looked forward and I said, 'If the Lord lets me live, I'm going to get it. A place to stay, a house of my own in the country and have me some cows and some hogs, get me a tractor.'"

"Chasing a dream. That's what I done."
By carefully scrimping over nearly four decades, he slowly turned every last bit of his pastoral vision into reality. He built a two-story clapboard farmhouse on 40 lush acres, raised a few dozen cows and a few dozen hogs, filled a barn with hay. He even bought a tractor.

Everything was ready by 1989. Gant quit his job at the docks and with his wife, Louatrice, retired to their version of paradise.

Then came October 1994, and a hard rain — up to 30 inches over three days — turned nearby Little Lake Creek into a raging river that wiped out Gant's boyhood dream in about the time it takes a longshoreman to eat his lunch.

One year later, the Gants are among hundreds of families that haven't yet recovered from southeast Texas floods that claimed 20 lives and forced more than 14,000 from their homes.

Of 35 Texas counties declared disaster areas by President Clinton, Montgomery County was by far the hardest hit.

Relief groups say at least 250 families are still struggling to make ends meet. About that many more are mired in a vexing bureaucratic maze.

Not many have fared worse than Gant, who lives on the second floor of his flood-ravaged home and sleeps on a mattress in the living room. Downstairs, where water reached the 8-foot-high ceiling beams, mold still covers the walls and ruined furniture is strewn about.

Outside, the family car is covered with hoof dents from hogs that tried in vain to escape the torrents. And, worst of all from Gant's perspective, the once teaming barnyard is occupied only by four dogs that play in the grass.

"I had four horses, about 30-something head of cow and about 40-something head of hog. They all drowned," Gant said. "I was just going crazy, see, 'cause that's my life. My hogs and my cows, that's my life. That's what I wanted ever since I was a little boy — a place of my own."

As close as he can figure, Gant lost $400,000 worth of property in the floods. Since he had no insurance, Gant has relied on $22,600 worth of federal aid to replace his life. The amount hasn't come close.

Authorities acknowledge that not everyone was provided for after the floods, but there simply isn't enough money to go around to the nearly 35,000 people who requested assistance.

The state Division of Emergency Management dispensed some $80 million in its disaster housing program and another $144 million in Small Business Administration loans for flood recovery throughout the region.

In addition, about $19 million in federal money has been approved to purchase 577 properties in seven counties.

More than $11 million of that was allocated for 261 structures in Montgomery County, but county officials say strict guidelines in the buyout program left at least 250 heavily damaged properties off the list. Across the region, at least 1,000 properties were classified as "not provided-for," the state says.

Worse yet, since those left-out properties were more than 50-percent damaged, their owners cannot get a county repair permit unless they agree to raise their homes above the 100-year flood level. In some cases, that's five or six feet, and the costs involved are prohibitive.

As a result, many of the homeowners have abandoned their properties. Some have chosen to rebuild without a permit, in which case they won't be eligible for flood insurance.

Jim Strong, Montgomery County's emergency management coordinator, said the county has exhausted its resources.

Montgomery County requested an additional $25 million in federal aid but was turned down. Another option is a local bond election, which officials believe voters wouldn't support.

"You be the government. Put the government hat on your head. What options would you see? There aren't any, and that's the tragedy of the whole thing," Strong said.

State emergency management spokeswoman Jo Schweikhard Moss said after the current buyout program is complete, authorities will reassess available funds and attempt to help those left out the first time around.

It's already too late for John Elmore, 48, whose damaged home in Conroe's Woodbranch subdivision was only two houses away from the buyout zone.

"We were real close, but I guess close only counts in horseshoes and hand grenades," said Elmore, who qualified for a relocation loan and now lives in a new home.

"The real shame is we almost had our house paid off," he said. "It's another 30 years worth of debt. There's probably people who are a lot worse off. ... It's just so aggravating to have to deal with the government like this."

Once again, an event featuring pairs makes history.
