AUSTIN (AP) — The longest lines at the fifth annual Austin Chronicle Hot Sauce Festival led to the beverage tents.

More than 10,000 people braved the heat for Sunday's salsa extravaganza, but some didn't even lift a chip.

"I stay away from it," said Susie Hutton, 67, who drove with her husband, Gene, from Oklahoma to provide moral support for her two nephews, who flew in from South Carolina and Michigan to enter their homemade salsa in the festival.

Their submissions were two of about 320 commercial, restaurant and homemade salsas reviewed. Inside an airconditioned room, judges waded through the entries.

There were sauces with fruit, sauces with beans and sauces with every imaginable pepper. Festival-goers divided their time between dips and sips.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $10 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 12, 17, 33, 42, 45 and 47.

There were 150 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,774. There were 9,196 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $104. And there were 171,534 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $17 million.

U.S. condemns Serb rocket attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration today condemned rebel Serbs in Bosnia for a deadly rocket attack on Sarajevo's main marketplace and said it would push ahead with a diplomatic offensive to end the war in the former Yugoslav republic.

Shelling of the Bosnian capital, designated as a protected haven by the U.N. Security Council, claimed the lives of more than 30 people. Dozens were injured, including women and children and the elderly.

A statement read by Nicholas Burns, the department spokesman, did not directly threaten the Serbs with NATO bombardment, nor differ in any marked way from similar denunciations after past Serb attacks on civilians in declared havens.

Burns said the shelling was "another vivid reminder of the brutality of the Balkans war" and "another crime against humanity."

The shelling occurred as Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke prepared for a meeting in Paris with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic. Holbrooke is due to go to Belgrade Monday night for a talk with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic.

After today's shelling in Sarajevo, the Bosnian government suggested it might suspend meetings with the U.S. diplomats until it got an assurance that the Serbs would be targeted by retaliatory NATO air strikes.

The United Nations said air raids remained a possibility — but not before it established who fired the shell. The Serbs denied the shell was theirs and accused the Muslim-led government army of firing on its own people to scuttle peace talks.

"The United States condemns in the strongest terms this latest outrage and will press ahead with our own determination to bring the fighting to a stop," Burns said. "Military pressure of this sort will not push us off the negotiating track."

The closest the U.S. official came to threatening the Serbs was to say, in response to a reporter's question, that "there are certain things" the United Nations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization can do jointly.

NATO airstrikes or a withdrawal of U.N. peacekeepers are two options if the latest round of diplomacy does not produce a settlement, Holbrooke said Sunday.

"If this peace initiative does not get moving, dramatically moving in the next week or two, the consequences will be very adverse to the Serbian goals," he said. "One way or another, NATO will be heavily involved, and the Serbs don't want that."

On Tuesday, Holbrooke and his new negotiating team, named to replace three diplomats killed Aug. 19 in an accident outside Sarajevo, plan to travel to Belgrade, the Serbian capital.

If the next round of talks fails, Holbrooke said NATO could take a more aggressive role in the region or help U.N. peacekeepers pull out.

"NATO will either assist a U.N. withdrawal or there will be more active NATO air over the skies," Holbrooke said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "These are not things the Serbs should want. So we hope that they will recognize that the coming week or two is potentially decisive."

In some of the most skeptical comments to date on U.S. plans, Bosnia's army commander, Gen. Rasim Delic, described the U.S. proposal as incomplete, "without a head and without a tail," and he questioned whether the West was capable of ending his country's war.

Wilson kicks off presidential campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — California Gov. Pete Wilson formally kicked off a slow-starting GOP presidential campaign today, charging the nation and its values are "under siege" by an out-of-control federal government.

Americans are suffering under "the oppression of federal tyrants," the fear of violent crime and a climate of welfare dependency, Wilson said in a speech launching a five day announcement tour.

He also denounced illegal immigration as an example of unfair burdens borne by law-abiding Americans, a theme that helped him win reelection as governor last year.

Wilson set the tone for his tour by using the Statue of Liberty as a backdrop for the public announcement of a candidacy that has been in place for several months.

The famous statue symbolizes a nation welcoming immigrants, but Wilson in his Battery Park speech used it to underscore his theme that there is a "right way to come to America and a wrong way."

"We teach our children to respect the law, but nearly 4 million illegal immigrants in our country break it every day. And Washington actually rewards these lawbreakers by forcing states to give them benefits paid for by the taxpayers," he said.

Illegal immigration, along with attacks on affirmative action and career criminals, are pillars of Wilson's pointed appeal to disgruntled Americans.

He plans to stress that message as he tries to make up for his late start in the presidential race, already crowded with Republican contenders.

His announcement tour was taking him today from New York to the first primary state of New Hampshire, and then Tuesday to Boston, Philadelphia and Buffalo, N.Y. Stops later in the week will be made in Georgia, Florida and Iowa, then in San Diego, where he served 11 years as mayor.

Even before Wilson spoke today, leaders of the California Democratic Party, proclaiming themselves the "Pete Wilson Truth Squad," attacked him as a "chameleon" who has changed his position on major issues ranging from immigration to taxes and the environment.

"We are here to warn the American people that whatever Pete Wilson says today, whatever Pete Wilson says any day, don't you believe him," said State Party Chairman Bill Press.

U.S., China making attempts to improve diplomatic relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a sign of improving relations, China has decided to send its ambassador back to Washington. But some Republicans are saying Hillary Rodham Clinton's planned trip to Beijing for a conference on women's issues sends the wrong message to the Chinese people.

Ambassador Li Daoyu was recalled in mid-June after President Clinton approved a visa for Lee Teng-hui, the president of Taiwan, to attend an alumni gathering at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

The ambassador's return follows the release of Harry Wu, a human rights activist convicted of espionage, and an announcement Mrs. Clinton would visit Beijing for the international conference that opens Sept. 4.

In the meantime, the United States and China are making preparations for a summit in October between Clinton and Chinese leader Jiang Zemin. The return of Ambassador Li was disclosed by a U.S. official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Some Republicans are criticizing Mrs. Clinton's decision to go to Beijing. "Clearly when Mrs. Clinton goes as first lady of the United States of America, it sends a number of mixed messages," Rep. Susan Molinari, R-N.Y., said Sunday. "There's no doubt that China's going to use the visit of Mrs. Clinton as a propaganda tool."

Wu, whose release by the Chinese cleared the way for Mrs. Clinton's visit, said today if the first lady was determined to go, he hoped she would speak out on human rights.

"It is a very important conference, but I think anybody, including Mrs. Clinton, should be aware her appearance in China will give Chinese people a lot of credit and become a part of propaganda," Wu said on NBC's Today show. "So I would suggest if she decides to go, I really hope she can bravely, publicly and frankly denounce Chinese system and put the Chinese human rights abuse issue in front of the Chinese Communist government."

Molinari worried that the first lady's visit would allow China to whitewash its human rights record and ignore the plight of women there.

But Geraldine Ferraro, U.S. ambassador to the U.N. Human Rights Commission, called Mrs. Clinton's decision to attend the U.N.-sponsored World Conference on Women in Beijing "a win for women throughout the world."

Ferraro said that a planned statement the Sept. 4-15 conference will issue, addressing economic and political rights for women and violence against them, will have an impact on Chinese society.

"China will be criticized in that document," she said.

But Molinari, who joined Ferraro on ABC's This Week with David Brinkley, questioned whether that message will reach the Chinese people through the nation's tightly controlled state media.

As the debate continues, U.S. diplomats said they were discussing a visit by Chinese President Jiang Zemin to the United States, which could include a meeting with President Clinton to discuss Sino-American relations.

Madeleine Albright, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said neither the proposed meeting nor Mrs. Clinton's attendance at the conference were linked to China's release of Wu.

Wu said Saturday that the first lady's trip would be a mistake, suggesting it would be interpreted as a victory for China.

"We're all very glad to have Mr. Harry Wu back in the United States where he is free to make statements like that," Albright said on CBS' Face the Nation.

Albright said Mrs. Clinton was driven to attend the meeting by her commitment to improving the lot of women around the world, and that her visit to the conference would focus on "human rights and women's rights."

Report: Fort Worth gets big share of released sex offenders

FORT WORTH (AP) — Three out of four paroled sex offenders living in Texas halfway houses are lodged in Fort Worth, and that makes some residents of the city uneasy.

Some people say they fear Fort Worth has become a dumping ground, at a time when many cities are actively turning away those with a history of sexual offenses.

All but 40 of the 167 sex offender parolees living in the state's halfway houses are in two Fort Worth facilities, according to recent data from the state's Parole Division.

Only 19 of the parolees are from Tarrant County. The rest were rejected by their home counties and went where the space was available — in Fort Worth.

Deborah Moore, a Fort Worth psychotherapist who counsels sex offenders, said she worries that the large numbers "stretch the ability to supervise" the parolees.

"You overload any county, and if they're lax on watching them, you have a very dangerous situation," Ms. Moore is quoted as saying in Sunday's editions of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"The community needs to be concerned because we're getting some very high risk offenders."

Ms. Moore and others said they fear that Fort Worth is becoming a "dumping ground" for sex offenders, who pose a high risk of repeating their crimes.

State officials said they do not keep data in a form that would indicate how many sex offenders remain in the city after being released from the halfway houses. Local parole officials declined to discuss the matter.

Fort Worth police said they are unaware of any crimes being committed by the parolees, but said they do not have immediate access to figures proving that.

But halfway house officials said that security is tight at the two facilities and that residents must receive treatment while they search for work and a permanent place to live. Treatment has been shown to reduce recidivism, and most parolees remain in therapy after they leave the halfway house, usually after a few months, officials said.

Still, Fort Worth halfway house officials and police said they were surprised to learn that the city houses the majority of the state's paroled rapists, child molesters and other sex criminals.

"My gosh, that's pretty incredible, real incredible," said Lt. J.C. Williams of the Fort Worth Police Department's violent crimes division.

LeAnn Bherms, community education coordinator for the Rape Crisis Center of Tarrant County, said the increase in sex offenders sent to Fort Worth represents "very scary numbers."

But the increase could be attributed to Tarrant County's having become a state leader in treatment, she said.

Jerry's toll: Six dead in flooding

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) - Flooding caused by up to 15 inches of rain forced hundreds of people from their homes in the Carolinas and drowned six people, including a fireman trying to make a rescue and an 8-year-old skateboarder.

Another person was missing, and two traffic deaths also were blamed on the wet weather, produced by the dregs of Tropical Storm Jerry.

Northwestern South Carolina was hardest hit by the rain, with 15 inches over the weekend at the Greenville-Spartanburg airport, the National Weather Service said.

"I've never seen rainfall like this in my life," said John Tomko, a weather service meteorologist at the airport.

Sixteen people had to be evacuated in Orangeburg, S.C.

"We had areas that we wouldn't think would be flooded and boom, everything is under water," said Tim Ridgeway, a diver for the Greenville County Sheriff's Office.

In western North Carolina, 11 inches of rain fell in 36 hours.

Hundreds of people had to flee their homes in Charlotte, Chapel Hill and Robbins. Among them were 63 residents of a Charlotte nursing home, and 60 people from a long-term care center at Kannapolis.

And as many as 15,000 Duke Power customers lost electricity during the weekend in North Carolina.

Flood flash watches remained in effect today for 71 counties of central and western North Carolina and 12 counties of eastern South Carolina.

A dam broke in Lexington County, in central South Carolina, but no injuries were reported. Another dam sprang leaks in North Carolina's Rowan County; workers this morning lowered the water level behind the dam to protect homes downstream.

Along the coast, septic tanks overflowed.

"There's nothing a plumber can do," said Beaufort plumber Dewey Ackley, who said he pumped out several septic systems, which then filled up again. "We can't stop the rain."

At Gaffney, S.C., about 60 miles northeast of Greenville, 8-year-old Bryant Eagle was skateboarding on a sidewalk when he fell into a flooded drainage ditch and was sucked into a storm pipe. His mother, Donna Eagle, said she tried to pull him out.

"We couldn't grab him. It was strong. He didn't have time to call out," she said Sunday night, hours after a rescue crew recovered his body.

The body of Christoffer Michael Douthy, 18, was found Sunday in a flooded Greenville County creek. He drowned after jumping in to save a teenage girl who survived.

Federal judge OKs delay for scheduled execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - A federal judge in Houston today blocked the scheduled midnight execution of a man involved in the shooting death of an armored truck guard more than 14 years ago.

James Meanes, 39, had faced lethal injection for the fatal shooting of guard Oliver Flores during an unsuccessful attempt to rob the truck of some $1.1 million.

Meanes' accomplice in the heist, Carlos Santana, 40, a native of the Dominican Republic, was executed in March 1993.

Defense attorneys won the reprieve from U.S. District Judge Kenneth Hoyt. The Texas attorney general's office did not oppose the request.

The case has received notoriety because it literally fell through the cracks of the appellate judicial system. After Hoyt rejected an appeal in 1988, prosecutors did nothing for seven years because they said they didn't realize the judge had ruled in the case.

The case file had been unopened for so long it was shipped to an archives office in Fort Worth. It remained dormant until early this year when Harris County district attorneys, reviewing long-standing cases, discovered the oversight and began moving the process along again.

Meanes and Santana were arrested shortly after the noon robbery and shooting April 21, 1981 outside a Houston department store.

Flores was walking from his Purolator Armored Inc. van to the store when he was killed with a single shotgun blast that went through his body.

The gunmen then turned their attention to the truck, using shotguns to blow out the windows. They unlocked the doors, ordered another guard inside to leave and drove away.

Using information from eye-witnesses, police captured Meanes and Santana an hour later about a quarter-mile away. A dozen money sacks were recovered, including one that held more than $400,000.

Another heavy oil spill reported near Salina Cruz port

SALINA CRUZ, Mexico (AP) - The fifth spill of heavy oil this year has been reported near the Pacific port of Salina Cruz in the southern state of Oaxaca, the newspaper El Universal reported Monday.

The state oil monopoly Pemex said the spill was estimated unofficially to involve 78 gallons.

However, leaders of the fishing and salt workers' industries estimated that 94,500 gallons were spilled, damaging several fishing areas and tourist beaches.

The paper said the spill took place when a 10-inch valve being used to load an oil tanker failed from high pressure.

Gramm sweeping up most of Texas presidential funds in early campaign season

WASHINGTON (AP) - As Republican presidential candidates avidly seek the precious dollars needed to fuel their bids for the White House, Texas is proving itself the big enchilada of the early campaign season.

Texas - not fellow political big-dollar meccas California and New York - is at the top of the charts in terms of most money given by individual donors for the first half of the year.

Of the $38.5 million raised by presidential candidates from nearly 50,000 individuals between January and June 30th, nearly $4.9 million came from Texas, according to a computer-assisted analysis of Federal Election Commission records.

A surprising second was Tennessee, with $4.1 million; followed by California, with $3.9 million; and New York, with $3 million.

Predictably, no one is benefiting more from the generosity of Texans than favorite son Phil Gramm. A prodigious fundraiser who has represented Texas in the Senate since 1985, Gramm accounts for $3.9 million of the nearly $4.9 million in presidential contributions of $200 or more by Texans.

GOP frontrunner Bob Dole, the Senate majority leader, is a distant second in Texas, receiving just shy of $395,000 - though in terms of contributions from individuals nationally, he holds a slight edge over Gramm: $9.1 million to $8.7 million.

Dole isn't conceding Texas, however. "We think the Lone Star state is up for grabs in terms of both cash and votes," said Dole campaign spokesman Nelson Warfield, noting that Dole held a half-million-dollar fundraiser in Dallas in April.

Former Tennessee governor

Lamar Alexander, who single-handedly accounts for Tennessee's open wallets, is third in Texas, with $245,000. Lagging behind are California Gov. Pete Wilson, with $68,000; television commentator Pat Buchanan, $45,500; Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar, $22,000; and Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter, $11,500.

"I anticipate the other candidates will be able to raise some money in Texas but nowhere near what Sen. Gramm has raised and will continue to raise," said Texas GOP Chairman Tom Pauken. "Clearly Sen. Gramm has the strongest support among the activists and among the contributors in Texas."

Gramm has estimated it will take $20 million to win the GOP nomination. He took a big step toward that goal in February, with a Dallas fundraiser that brought in $4.1 million (not all in Texas money).

Gramm's success in Texas is far from duplicated by the current White House occupant.

So far, Texans aren't rushing to contribute to President Clinton's re-election. As of mid-year, the Democrat had raised only $149,000 of his $5.7 million in individual contributions from Texas - a state he rarely visits and which gave him only 37 percent of the vote in 1992.

But Clinton has yet to hold a Texas fundraiser. His state fund raising to date has resulted from direct mail appeals or unsolicited contributions.

Texas Democratic Party executive director Ed Martin said the Clinton campaign has yet to crank into high gear in the Lone Star state. "I'm confident the president is going to have very successful fund raising in Texas in the last half of '95," he said.

Energy institute receives $75,000 grant for state-wide wind research

CANYON - West Texas may seem like the wind capital to many, but researchers at West Texas A&M University's Alternative Energy Institute (AEI) are looking at other areas of the state that may also be leaders in wind and solar energy with a $75,000 grant from the Texas General Land Office received July 26.

Through the installation of wind and solar monitoring equipment at five sites in South Texas, AEI is recording and monitoring data to evaluate the potential value of the wind and solar resources. The monitoring equipment was set up using existing towers in the area. AEI collects data weekly through computers and cellular phone connections set up at each site. The site computers call an AEI computer based in Killgore Research Center to record data.

According to Ken Starcher AEI research associate, data collections will be made for a minimum of two years and a maximum of five years at these five sites and another 28 sites set up through other funding sources. Starcher said the data collected could provide researchers with data needed to propose solar and wind energy to Texas utility companies.

The grant funding enabled researchers to install equipment near Alice, La Paloma, Raymondville, Rio Grande City and Carta Valley. The areas chosen have a low population and have the potential space to host several wind towers or solar collectors.

Starcher said the low population areas could potentially provide energy for metropolitan areas such as Houston, Dallas and San Antonio.

"The goal is to find a good match between the times the sites can produce the most energy and the times people use the most energy," Starcher said. "For example, the ideal situation would be for the wind and solar sites to provide maximum energy at the time most people are running their air conditioners in the middle of the day."

Starcher described the overall process as load matching - a match between wind and solar energy providers and utility companies' needs.

Dr. Vaughn Nelson, dean of the Graduate School, Research and Information Technology and director of the Alternative Energy Institute, said load matching is what is needed for utility companies to consider alternative fuels in their generation planning.

"If there is load matching, it's worth the money to utility companies to install the equipment," Nelson said.

Banks to merge in largest bank deal, worth $10 billion

NEW YORK (AP) - Chemical Banking Corp. and Chase Manhattan Corp. agreed to merge in a $10 billion stock transaction that will create the biggest banking company in the United States, the banks said today.

The combined company - to be called Chase Manhattan - will have $297 billion in assets, out-ranking Citicorp, at present the largest U.S. bank company with $257 billion in assets.

The new bank will have 25 million customers across the nation and rank third in mortgage lending and fourth in credit cards. In New York, the new Chase will be number one in consumer and business banking. The bank will also be a global leader in several corporate banking businesses.

"We are seizing upon a truly unparalleled opportunity to create a premier global financial services company," said Walter Shipley, chairman and chief executive officer at Chemical.

"The combination is a unique strategic fit, with complementary product capabilities and market coverage that will give us leadership positions across all our major business lines," he said.

The merger, expected to close by the end of March 1996, will result in 12,000 job cuts from a combined staff of 75,000 in 39 states and 51 countries. Both Chemical and Chase are based in New York.

The cuts and other merger-related consolidations cost $1.5 billion, 16 percent of the bank's combined operating expenses.

The boards of directors of both companies approved the merger agreement Sunday. Under the agreement, 1.04 shares of Chemical stock will be exchanged for each of Chase's shares, making the deal worth about $10 billion.

On Friday, Chemical's shares closed at $54.37 1/2 cents on the New York stock exchange, up 87 1/2 cents. Chase's shares close at $53, up $1.12 1/2.

The deal is subject to shareholder and regulatory approvals. Shipley, 59, will be chairman and chief executive at the combined company. Thomas G. Labrecque, 56, Chase's chairman and chief executive, will become president and chief operating officer of the new bank.

Talk of a Chase-Chemical merger began July 12 after a Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. analyst issued a report that called such a combination compelling because of revenue potential and cost savings.

A wave of big mergers has swept the industry in recent months as companies pair up to be more competitive. The largest deal, a $5.4 billion deal between First Union Corp. and First Fidelity Bancorp, was announced in July.

Hispanics discuss rights at women's conference

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Despite a long cultural and religious tradition to the contrary, Hispanic women must take charge of their reproductive health and rights, participants of a weekend conference decided.

The Mujeres Project presented A Latina Reproductive Rights Conference on Saturday that included workshops on reproductive rights, prevention issues, the roles and responsibilities of women's organizations on reproductive issues, abortion, sexuality and self-esteem.

"This is groundbreaking. It is historic," declared Olga Morales Aguirre, the project's executive director, to the 100 invited participants.

"As far as I know, this has never been done in San Antonio before, or even the state," she said. "Why? Because for many, the issue is cultural and church-based, and we never saw any Latina leader step up to the mike and say, 'Let me be part of the process and have an opportunity to agree or disagree.'"

A recurring commentary in the sessions was that Hispanics, historically, have been taught and socialized not to talk about their bodies, sex or sexuality and to respect authority figures, such as clergy and doctors.

Patient families sometimes refuse organ donations

DALLAS (AP) - Just signing an organ donor card isn't always enough to assure that a potential donor's organs will make a transplant possible at death.

Officials say the decision ultimately is that of the family, and unless they've discussed it with their loved one, the decision frequently is overruled.

"People sign a donor card, and they feel they've done all that they need to do," said Daniel Whiteside, executive director of the Association of Organ Procurement Organizations, which represents 51 organ procurement organizations across the country.

The yo! word okayed by Scrabble

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Yo, Adrienne! Wanna play Scrabble? Sylvester Stallone's alter ego, Rocky, might be pleased to know that his trademark greeting - one that's been part of Philly street lingo for generations - has received the blessings of Scrabbledom.

The 1996 edition of The Official Scrabble Players Dictionary will confer legitimacy on "yo." Scrabble players looking to unload a "y" or an "o" will be able to earn five points for the word (10 if they land on "double word score").

The Scrabble guide relies on five dictionaries to determine what's legit. Yo - described in one reference as an exclamation used in greeting or to express excitement - made it into the Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, Tenth Edition, in 1993.

"We say that a lot around here," Mark Williams, manager of Rocky's Gym in South Philadelphia, said of yo.

Phyllis Patukus, leader of a Chester County Scrabble club, said players are pleased with the addition for strategic reasons. "Any extra word is just more opportunity for scoring," she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Antitrust campaign against business

The most fascinating aspect of a federal appeals court's decision to reinstate an antitrust settlement between software giant Microsoft and the U.S. Justice Department was the explicit reprimand dealt to U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin, who had rejected the settlement in February because it didn't deal harshly enough with Microsoft.

The appeals court said it was "deeply troubled" and "distressed" by Judge Sporkin's handling of the case and took the highly unusual step of ordering that the case be assigned to somebody other than Judge Sporkin.

Judge Sporkin was a highly ideological and controversial figure when he was enforcement chief for the Securities and Exchange Commission under President Carter. He combined a seldom concealed distaste for business in general and for large, successful businesses in particular with a touching faith in the ability of government regulators armed with sufficient power and ruthlessness to second guess the marketplace and set things right.

The fact that he has been appointed a judge, with a mandate to decide cases on the basis of evidence presented in court, doesn't seem to have altered his determination to make public policy on the basis of his ideological proclivities.

Specifically, the appellate judges criticized Judge Sporkin for relying more on a muckraking book about Microsoft than on the information developed during four years of Justice Department antitrust investigation. They also found it troubling that Judge Sporkin wanted to allow a group of computer companies with a vested interest in seeing Microsoft slapped around a bit challenge the Justice Department settlement, anonymously. "Such proceedings would, as Microsoft argues, seriously implicate due process," wrote the appellate judges. To say the least.

Finally, the appellate court remarked dryly that a federal law requiring judges to review consent decrees in antitrust settlements "cannot be interpreted as an authorization for a district judge to assume the role of attorney general." In other words, if Judge Sporkin really wants to be a prosecutor and an enforcer, he should get a different job than that of judge, which requires at least a mask of impartiality.

The entire imbroglio demonstrates the extent to which antitrust laws which in theory are supposed to promote open markets and fair competition - are in practice used almost exclusively to manipulate markets to the benefit of one company or another. The comments about the appellate decision stressed that Judge Sporkin's delaying tactics had probably benefited Microsoft's competitors even though his decision was overturned.

Laws that are used to benefit competitors rather than to promote competition stand in need of revision - or perhaps repeal. Congress, take note.

Conference that spells disaster

With eyes as open as they ever get, the Clinton administration is walking into a potential catastrophe, called the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women.

The Clintons, in their deflated state, need all the friends they can get. Can they afford to stoke anti-Clintonism to evermore brow-mopping temperatures? They are doing so with great effect, and the conference, which is to be held in Beijing, Communist China, starts Aug. 30.

The conference will be attended by a high-level U.S. delegation, possibly headed by Miz Clinton herself. Dr. James Dobson, who is America's most rational (as well as most popular) commentator on family questions, calls the meeting "the most radical, atheistic and anti-family crusade in the history of the world." There's plenty of competition for such a doubtful honor, but Dobson, founder of Focus on the Family, points to a Peking agenda, in which "marriage is seen as the root of all evil for women," the family is redefined in gender neutral terms and homosexual and lesbian rights are strongly affirmed.

None of this has happened yet, I emphasize. If it does happen, normal people are entitled - indeed, obligated - to kick, complain and denounce. Not to do so would be abnormal. The conference's pronouncements will shape the policies of those countries willing to be shaped by nonsense and presumption from on high.

And yet ... and yet ... you still wonder: Why? What is the purpose of this ridiculous exercise?

William Murchison

What's to be gained from U.S. representation at a booby hatch? The agenda is only part of the problem. There's also the site: the capital city of the human concentration camp called China. China - Red China, as we used to call it in saner times - routinely abuses women through compulsory abortion.

"This is a nation," writes Dobson, "that monitors menstrual cycles so it can identify young women with unapproved pregnancies and drag them into medical clinics to have their babies killed. It is also a country that has murdered tens of millions of female infants." And that, according to congressional testimony, kills young prisoners in order to sell their body parts. And that holds captive an American citizen, the human-rights activist Harry Wu. What a wonderful place for a conference on women!

Yet, the Americans are going, and Hillary Clinton is trying to decide whether to go with them. Clearly, she doesn't understand the conference to be in any sense anti woman, when, in fact, it can't be understood otherwise.

Pat Buchanan justifiably makes political capital of the matter when he calls on Hillary Clinton to stay home and Congress to enforce "a total boycott" of the conference. Imagine what others will say once the conferees start conferring and resolving. Every insult directed at the traditional family, every studious attempt to avoid looking directly at the human rights scandal in China, will rebound in the Clintons' direction. The presidential couple, it should go without saying, needs this conference the way they need holes in both their heads.

It's scandalous, blessing and consecrating the deliberations of a meeting whose agenda is semi-barbarous and whose attendees, many of them, hate Western, and especially American, culture. We accomplish the blessing by the very act of showing up instead of staying home.

(Clinton and her sisters wouldn't attend a militia muster or a Klan rally, but they seem happy enough to gratify the moral monsters in Beijing by showing up and treating the occasion like a garden club meeting: Just us girls getting together, don't worry about a thing.)

Worrying comes naturally when the meeting is such as the one in Beijing. It would be best if no Americans at all turned up, but since the Clintons aren't going to let that happen, the attendees will just have to reckon with the consequences. These have already commenced, with indignation and raised voices. Where it goes from here, we won't know fully until Election Day.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Aug. 28, the 240th day of 1995. There are 125 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Aug. 28, 1963, 200,000 people participated in a peaceful civil rights rally in Washington D.C., where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. delivered his "I Have a Dream" speech in front of the Lincoln Memorial.

On this date:
In 1609, Henry Hudson discovered Delaware Bay.

In 1749, German author Johann Wolfgang von Goethe was born in Frankfurt.

In 1774, Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton, the first American-born saint, was born in New York City.

In 1828, Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy was born near Tula.

In 1917-18 suffragists were arrested as they picketed the White House.

In 1968, police and anti-war demonstrators clashed in the streets of Chicago as the Democratic national convention nominated Hubert H. Humphrey for president.

America needs a Renaissance man

I was telling some of my colleagues the other day about the remarkable career of my friend J. William (Bill) Middendorf II, and it occurred to me how few renaissance men grace today's world. It's our loss.

Today, Americans seem most impressed by two-sport athletes, billionaire investors, tell-all sex therapists, and actors, models and politicians who can chew gum and tie their shoelaces at the same time. Deion Sanders of Atlanta is a hero because he plays both professional baseball and football. When I was in college, 6-foot, 10-inch Gene Conley played center for the Boston Celtics, and during the off-season threw fast balls for the Red Sox. Basketball superstar Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls gave baseball a try, but several hundred feeble at-bats later decided to return full-time to his specialty.

I mean no disrespect toward professional athletes, but if this - or the professional politicians who inhabit Washington and our state capitals - constitute America's vision of the heroic man (and I include the distaff side here, too, of course) we are in big trouble.

The classic renaissance man is rare enough. Thomas Jefferson, our third president, was an architect, diplomat, lawyer, political philosopher, scientist and brilliant writer. He founded and designed the original campus of the University of Virginia, near his beloved Charlottesville estate, Monticello. Benjamin Franklin was a scientist and statesman, founder - in 1794 - of the U.S.

Edwin Feulner

Post Office, and among the co-authors, with Jefferson, of the Declaration of Independence. Theodore Roosevelt was a politician, statesman, conservationist, and outdoorsman. In 1906, he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his role in ending the Russian-Japanese War.

A wonderful new book, The Sign of the Golden Grasshopper, by the late Perry Gresham, tells the story of Gresham's ancestral hero, Sir Thomas Gresham, the merchant adventurer who served as financial advisor to four British monarchs, Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary I and Elizabeth I. (Gresham's law: "Bad money drives out good.")

The book takes its name from the Gresham family coat of arms. Once reputed to be the richest man in England, Sir Thomas, when not advising monarchs or amassing fortunes, was a spy, royal smuggler, diplomat and early philanthropist. He is credited with almost single-handedly saving the realm (a fancy term for "the throne" to us non-Anglophiles) from its wealthier rival, King Philip II of Spain. He had a helping hand, of course, from Sir Francis Drake, the global explorer who in 1588 led the British fleet against Spain's supposedly invincible Armada (much of which ended up on the rocks off the coast of Ireland, thanks to heavy seas and bad weather.)

While Bill Middendorf has never been a spy or smuggler like Gresham, to the best of my knowledge many other titles certainly fit: diplomat, financier and philanthropist. An investment banker, now in his mid-70s, Middendorf served three U.S. presidents, as U.S. Ambassador to the Netherlands, Secretary of the Navy, U.S. Ambassador to the Organization of American States, and U.S. Ambassador to the European Community.

But that's only the public man. He is also an art critic and historian, composer (of seven symphonies; an opera; and numerous marches, including the "Heritage Foundation March" and "U.S. Naval Academy March"), and an accomplished athlete: winning the national masters sculling championship in 1979 and the world masters rowing championship in 1985, at the age of 61.

There are very few giants such as these on the scene today. Compared to the likes of Middendorf and Gresham, President Clinton is just another crafty lawyer turned career politician and Donald Trump is a four-bit speculator.

What ever happened to greatness?

Grandiose time in path of Hurricane Felix

Here I am, vacationing by the sea, having a grandiose time in the surf and sea breeze. I am slaying abundant quantities of bluefish, flounder and sea trout right in the surf. And what happens? Mother Nature strikes back! She sends Hurricane Felix roaring at me. The demon is moving at 90 miles an hour. I can see his brutal, cunning leer. I can feel his cold breath. Well, I ain't leaving. I shall continue to fish.

The beach patrol flies at me on one of those obnoxiously noisy three-wheeled vehicles, reeking of carbon monoxide and probably built in Japan. The patrol insists that I leave. "Mandatory evacuation," they threaten. Well, I ain't leaving. What do they think I am - another Good German? A sad automaton from the now-defunct Union of Soviet Socialist Republics? Let Felix do his worst. I shall do my best - which is to catch fish, admire the driftwood as it rolls onto the beach and disdain the long lines of bumper-to-bumper traffic lining the beach road along the North Carolina Outer Banks. The Good Germans have been ordered to evacuate, and there they sit in the largest rush-hour traffic snarl since the last natural indisposition to strike this chain of islands. There must be a better way.

Mother Nature has threatened me thus before. I do not back down. Though, allow me to pause midst this effusion of braggadocio. Mother Nature's assault allows me once again the opportunity to remind the environmentalists and other allied enemies of freedom that Mother Nature is neither as fragile nor as agreeable as they would have it. Mother Nature? Think of poison ivy, sunstroke, termites! Think of this dreaded Hurricane Felix! As I have said repeatedly while the environmentalists bleat about the black-footed ferret, wetlands and Lake Ontario - we must get Mother Nature before she gets us.

Out here, she is trying to get me. The sand is whipping against me at 30 miles an hour. Soon, it will be up to 90 miles an hour or more. I shall endure, unfazed. I shall fish. The clouds cover the sun, but I shall sun. The bikini-clad damsels have all left in their Nissan Pathfinders and other unladylike vehicles, but I shall pretend they are still sauntering down the beach. And why not? I thought they claimed to be equal to combat conditions. Let the German tourists and the relics from the Soviet Union respond docilely to the peremptory "mandatory evacuation." I shall respond in the American way: "Don't tread on me!"

As I stand here with my chest thrust out to the east against the oncoming Hurricane Felix, I think to myself, "What would my president do?" This big, lovable lug of a guy we call Mr. President would surely announce, "I am not leaving either." And then he would leave. Later, The Washington Times would report that the president and the first lady left. Hillary would respond, "These are old charges. We answered them years ago back in Arkansas."

What would Bernie Nussbaum say? He would say, "I never talked to the first lady. She was not interested in the storm. She had more important things to do. I talked to her chief of staff, Maggie Williams. She says the president did leave." Maggie would insist that she never said, "The president did leave." Bernie would respond, "Surely you realize that in emotional moments like this, people have different recollections. I mean, everyone was upset. The president was upset. The girls in the bikinis had vanished. Even the fat ones. And cut out this talk about my being a 'tough New York lawyer.' That is a code-term for balding. I am not balding. My hair is actually growing back. I am unbalding. Soon, I shall have as full and lovely a head of hair as Brooke Shields."

The wind is still picking up. The white puffs of cloud that scudded through the dazzlingly blue sky a few hours ago have been overcome by gray. In fact, a menacing gray ceiling has come down on us. There is no sun. The sea breeze has turned into a gale that leaves a greasy, wet film on everything. The storm is to hit us in a couple of hours, and finally, the traffic along the beach road has thinned out. Well, I ain't leaving. But why did local government scare some 200,000 people into clouds when the storm was not going to hit for 36 hours or more? Why not issue their phony "mandatory evacuation" in stages? For instance, those with last names beginning with "A" through "G" leave at a certain hour and so on? The answer is that the government does not believe in the rationality of its citizens. That is why I stand with Madison, Jefferson and Gingrich in shouting for limited government.

And now, I shall slip into my car and depart. The roads are clear. That is the American way.

New laws affect Texans' pocketbooks, way of life

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — People who thought life didn't change much in the wake of the Legislature's 1995 session might be in for a surprise this week: Hundreds of new laws kick in, affecting everything from Texans' pocketbooks to their safety to their divorces.

Topping the list — because state government programs can't function without it — is the $79.9 billion, two-year budget.

The budget represents a 6.2 percent increase over current spending. Critics said it doesn't do enough for the needy or education, but lawmakers said it was the best they could do without new taxes.

Texans' wallets also will be affected by higher education laws.

One will increase university tuition, while another gives parents a break: A program still being developed will allow the purchase of contracts to prepay tuition and fees for children under 18, freezing them at today's prices.

Older Texans may benefit from a law allowing higher education institutions to permit senior citizens to enroll in up to six hours of courses each semester tuition-free.

In other pocketbook issues, Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer gets the power to cut insurance rates to reflect expected savings from a civil justice overhaul limiting lawsuit damage awards.

An overhaul of Texas telecommunications laws, while partly deregulating the business, will require telecommunications companies to put $1.5 billion over 10 years into high-tech equipment at schools, hospitals and libraries.

And the cost of obtaining public records from the government will be affected by another new law, which provides for uniform pricing while updating the Texas Open Records Act to include computer records along with paper documents.

PUBLIC SAFETY: Texans' money isn't the only thing touched by laws taking effect Monday, which marks 90 days after adjournment of the 1995 Legislature, and on Friday's start of the state fiscal year.

Their safety is at stake, too. Lawmakers passed numerous anti-crime measures, including a package of laws sparked by a Dallas girl's murder.

"Ashley's Laws" are named for 7-year-old Ashley Estell, who was abducted from a park and murdered in 1993. Michael Blair, on parole after being convicted of burglary and indecency with a child, was convicted in her death.

Under one of the laws, anyone convicted of indecency with a child or other sex offenses who has two prior sex-related felony convictions will be automatically sentenced to life in prison.

Other laws require notification of communities when a sex offender moves into the area and creation of child safety zones to make such areas as school playgrounds off-limits to convicted child molesters.

Among other crime-related measures, the Legislature authorized crime victims to make a statement to a court and the defendant after sentencing; prohibited officers from requiring rape victims to take a polygraph exam; and moved to speed up the appeals process for death-row inmates.

Lawmakers also voted to allow Texans to begin carrying concealed handguns, although there's dispute over whether that will make the streets more or less safe.

Would-be pistol packers may begin the application process for a concealed gun permit Friday, when certified instructors also can begin offering the training classes required for a license. The right to carry a concealed gun begins Jan. 1.

WELFARE: Texans who aren't crime perpetrators or victims also will be affected by new laws, including a sweeping measure to overhaul the welfare system — and do a few other things, too.

The welfare revamp requires recipients to abide by rules including working or studying to get benefits, which are limited to a maximum of three years. Some federal rule waivers are required for the bill to take full effect.

The legislation also includes provisions not strictly related to welfare.

Spouses who are past due on court-ordered child support can lose state licenses, including driver's, professional and recreational licenses, under the measure. In addition, the law establishes limited alimony in Texas: A court can order payments to be made to an ex-spouse who can't support himself or herself, if the couple has been married at least 10 years.

LAWSUITS: Lawsuit reform measures like welfare reform, a priority of Gov. George W. Bush, also take effect this week to make it harder for people to sue, restrict where a case may be tried, limit punitive damages and impose penalties for filing frivolous lawsuits.

But some other legislation could pave the way for additional lawsuits.

The Private Real Property Rights Preservation Act, for example, gives property owners power to sue state and local governments over action that devalues their property.

And the so-called veggie libel bill allows farmers to sue those who make unfounded allegations against their products. The farmer must prove the statements were false under the bill, which Bush allowed to become law despite his father's publicly voiced distaste for broccoli.

HONORING BUSH — THE ELDER: But while he may have to keep a lid on the broccoli-bashing, former President Bush also is due for an honor, courtesy of the Texas Legislature. A law takes effect this week to designate State Highway 190 in Dallas, Collin and Denton counties as the President George Bush Highway.

FBI questions high schools in search for Unabomber

CHICAGO (AP) — The FBI believes the Unabomber may have attended high school in the Chicago area, and agents have interviewed dozens of teachers at two suburban high schools and requested records at three others.

Agents also plan to interview teachers at other Chicago area high schools, said George Grotz, an FBI spokesman in San Francisco, where a Unabomber task force is based.

Grotz said the task force also is interviewing owners of Chicago-area machine shops, believing the Unabomber would have needed machining skills to make the bomb materials himself.

Earlier this year, the FBI conducted interviews at universities and machine shops in the San Francisco area and Northern California.

In fowl racing, Robert Duck fits the bill

DEMING, N.M. (AP) — Robert Duck is no quack.

Duck won first and second prize at the 16th Annual Great American Duck Race on Sunday with his entries "Grateful Duck" and "No Bill Prize."

The new feathers in his cap earned him $3,000.

The race involves webbed-footed competitors waddling down 17-foot long, "aerodynamically" designed lanes at Duck Downs — a.k.a. the Southwestern New Mexico Fairgrounds.

Under the rules of the competition, duck owners may encourage or threaten their feathered racers — but "fowl" language is forbidden.

Federal probe sparks unresolved controversy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In 1991 during the Persian Gulf War fervor, federal agents swarmed into Jasmine Azima's engineering business, confiscating records.

In the years since, no grand jury has been convened. No charges have been brought. No apologies have been issued.

But U.S. Attorney James H. Deatley has sent Ms. Azima's attorney a letter, the San Antonio Express-News reported in a copyright story in Sunday's editions.

"This is to advise that at the present time there are no federal criminal charges pending against your client Jasmine Azima," Deatley wrote to lawyer Van Hilley. "It is my understanding that the items taken pursuant to a search warrant have been returned to Ms. Azima. I am closing our file subject to being reopened should additional information come to our attention."

Said City Councilwoman Lynda Billa Burke, a longtime friend: "She was crucified and for what?"

The federal government's investigation, Burke and other friends and associates believe, was sparked by an anonymous tip to authorities possibly from a competitor, and timed to capitalize on the Gulf war hysteria. Some have speculated that the tipster was angered over a business deal gone sour.

Ms. Azima, a permanent U.S. resident alien from Iran who has been in this country for 19 years, had operated San Antonio-based Jasmine Engineering Inc. for 10 years.

Agents of the FBI, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the General Services Administration took part in the raid, which came on the second day of the war with Iraq.

Employees were searched and interrogated for almost two hours before Ms. Azima returned from a business meeting. She also was frisked.

"I was shocked," Ms. Azima said. "The agents didn't say anything, except that they encouraged us to leave. They wouldn't say what they were looking for."

Gary Renick, chief investigator for the San Antonio INS office, told reporters waiting outside Ms. Azima's office that the search warrant was executed in connection with an ongoing criminal investigation.

All of Ms. Azima's financial transactions for more than 10 years were confiscated and held in federal custody in Dallas. Workers in her firm were forced to make photocopies, spending thousand of dollars, at a Dallas federal building so they could continue operating the business.

During the ensuing weeks, Ms. Azima's employees were further interrogated at their homes and by telephone.

Still, federal government contractors for engineering work kept rolling in.

The day after her office was searched and documents were hauled off, Ms. Azima's firm was awarded a contract for engineering work at a U.S. Border Patrol station to be built in Los Indios. The contract was awarded by the General Services Administration and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Then in April 1993 Jasmine Engineering received a notice of audit from the General Services Administration saying Jasmine Engineering had under-billed the government for work it had performed.

'TEXAS' marks 30 years with successful season

The TEXAS musical drama has celebrated 30 years of successfully dazzling audiences, and 1995 proved not to be an exception as attendance totals surpassed the previous year's.

From Uganda, East Africa to Mt. Beauty, Australia, tourists traveled from all around the globe in 1995 to see the 30th anniversary of the nation's best-attended outdoor drama, TEXAS.

Astonishing special effects, combined with Pulitzer prize-winning author Paul Green's story of the settling of the Texas Panhandle, have all contributed to the success of the internationally acclaimed TEXAS.

In 1995, TEXAS greeted 91,609 guests, a slight increase over 1994. Since 1966 this production has been performed for over 2.6 million people. Large groups visiting TEXAS continue to play a vital part in attendance figures as the drama welcomed 708 groups this season.

This year marked 30 years for the historic TEXAS. A company reunion brought together over 150 individuals from past years. The July weekend celebration drew former company members from ten states and as far away as New York.

The Pioneer Amphitheater seats 1,724 spectators, and the average nightly attendance totaled 1,454. The theater was filled on average to 84 percent of its capacity.

The popularity of TEXAS remains widespread. This season visitors came from nearly 100 foreign countries and every state in the union.

A miniature replica of the triangle, traditionally used to call cowboys to the chuck wagon, is awarded each night at TEXAS to the visitor who travels the farthest to see the show. No one from the continental United States has won this prize since the show's first season in 1966.

The Australians led the way in capturing the prize 16 nights this season. India followed with 9 chow-call triangle winners. Visitors from New Zealand came in a close third with 10 winners. In all, the triangle went home to 20 foreign countries from Bahrain to Singapore.

Despite its successful season, TEXAS experienced one rainout this summer. During its 30 year history, the show has averaged only one rainout per year. A record 24 nights of rain or rain in the area were logged over the musical drama's 64 night run, but this unusually wet weather did not dampen the spirits of the 150 individuals who work the show.

Even though the basic story never changes, improvements to the production for the 30th anniversary have been immense. Director Neil Hess believes that it is important to keep the show fresh for our repeat visitors and thrilling to first timers. Major renovations to the first and second act overtures included remixing of music that is more inclusive of the Native American and Hispanic cultures in the Panhandle. Colorful new costumes, props, choreography, and expanded fireworks were all added to enhance the 30th season.

The greatest numbers continue to come from farther distances. During the 30th season, only 25 percent of the audience was considered "local," traveling less than 120 miles; 32 percent came from more than 500 miles away. Almost half of those attending TEXAS in 1995 had seen the show at least once before.

Poll finds gun permit not in demand

DALLAS (AP) — According to the latest Texas Poll, Texans won't be rushing to take advantage of a new law allowing them to carry concealed handguns.

Only 24 percent of 1,000 adults polled this month said they're likely to apply for a permit to carry a concealed handgun; 75 percent said they probably wouldn't.

Law enforcement officials say they think the ratio will be even less than that. They say they think the result in Texas will be similar to that in other states — about 2 percent.

Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, who sponsored the bill, said many Texans probably don't realize what they have to go through to obtain the permit.

Geographic Identity Crisis Is Old Problem in New Mexico

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite letters from 1980.)

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to the letter from Hawaii. Your Hawaiian correspondent was put out by the number of people who didn't know that Hawaii was part of the United States.

We who live in New Mexico are constantly running into the same situation. Let me give you a few examples:
New Mexico was the only state in the union whose license plates were stamped with "U.S.A." in the lower right-hand corner of the plate.

I also have seen maps in which New Mexico was completely omitted!

As a counselor who assists students in applying for financial aid to further their education, I have been asked why they did not seek aid from their own country (meaning Mexico)! And this from so-called educated administrative assistants and executive secretaries!

Many people visiting New Mexico comment on how surprised they were that they didn't have to go through customs or present a passport. They actually thought New Mexico was a part of Mexico.

FROM MEXICO
(THE NEW ONE)

DEAR FROM: Move over.
Many from West Virginia wrote

Abigail Van Buren

to say that their state is sometimes considered the western part of the state of Virginia. And while we're on the subject of geographical ignorance, many wrote to say that they wish people would quit getting Australia confused with New Zealand.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are friendly with another couple whom we do not see very often because of the distance between us. We have dinner at one home or the other about twice a year. Tonight, they were our guests.

They arrived promptly at 6:30 p.m. and we had drinks on the patio. At 7 p.m., my husband went inside and turned on the TV to catch the beginning of a football game. After 15 minutes, he rejoined us, "freshened" the drinks, then went back inside to watch the game, leaving me to entertain the couple. I tried several times, without success, to root him out.

At 7:30, my husband emerged, put the steaks on the grill (on the patio), then he ran inside again to watch the game, returning in time to turn the steaks. He rushed through dinner and — you guessed it — he sneaked in to watch the game again. I made conversation with the guests until the game was over. Then my football fan joined us for a spirited 20 minutes of conversation after which our guests departed, saying they had a long drive home.

Needless to say, I am terribly upset and wonder if we will ever see these lovely people again. What should I have done? And how can I keep this from happening again?
FOOTBALL WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: You should have kicked your husband in the end zone as soon as he started to pull the disappearing act. And in the future, don't schedule a dinner party on a football night unless everybody enjoys football and wants to watch it together.

Horoscope

Tuesday, Aug 29, 1995

In the year ahead, your chances for advancement in your chosen field look hopeful, provided you build upon your present foundation instead of searching for greener pastures.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Remain prudent in the management of your personal resources today. You're wasteful now, remorse could follow later. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be your usual gracious self today, but do not hesitate to assert yourself in a development where you feel you're being put upon by another.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Make certain that anyone you praise today truly deserves your accolades. Flattery for the sake of flattery could stain your image with insincerity you don't deserve.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you step out of character today and are nice only to the individuals who you hope to get something from in return, you'll be severely disappointed.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will be important today to understand others like you for who and what you are. Your approval won't need to be embellished by pretense.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Confidential matters you hope to keep secret could become common knowledge at this time if you talk to the wrong people. Select those you trust carefully.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Examine your motives honestly today regarding your treatment of a friend. Ask yourself if you're being cool just because you're a trifle envious.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not vacillate today about pertinent issues. If your position is fuzzy, it will serve to confuse, as well as frustrate, your allies.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you find it necessary to work with unfamiliar tools or materials today, at least be sure to read the instructions first. Guesswork could penalize you.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although potential love interests will find you interesting and appealing today, don't be taken in by one who manipulates others through flattery.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not make any promises to your mate today simply for the sake of expediency. He or she will hold you to your word and won't let you wiggle out of it.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It may prove wiser in the long run today to temporarily shelve a distasteful task. If your heart isn't in your work, your mind won't be on it either.

AUTO RACING

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Terry Labonte knew he had gotten away with one.

"I went the whole race without a single scratch and then I wind up with a smashed up car in the winner's circle," Labonte said with a grin following his hard-earned victory in Saturday night's Goody's 500.

Labonte's Hendrick Motorsports Chevrolet took the checkered flag sliding backwards after the hard-charging Dale Earnhardt slammed into the rear of the leader's car coming off the fourth turn on the last of 500 laps on Bristol International Raceway's .533-mile concrete oval.

"That's the first time I've ever won a race going backwards," Labonte added. "But I'm not mad at Dale, because I won. If I hadn't won, I might have been a little mad at him."

NFL teams start trimming their rosters

By The Associated Press

Good performances in exhibition games didn't necessarily guarantee a roster spot for NFL players. Gary Blanchard found that out with the New Orleans Saints. As did Darrick Owens with Denver. And Tyrone Rush and Olanda Truitt with Washington.

Those players were among numerous cuts Sunday, the day NFL teams trimmed their rosters to 53 in preparation for the opening of the 1995 season next weekend.

Blanchard was cut despite making four of six field goals and all of his tries inside the 50. Instead, the Saints kept Chip Lohmiller, who had missed a 27-yarder, a 50-yarder and an extra point.

"I'm upset," Blanchard said. "I wish I could come in and miss four field goals inside the 50 and still make the team."

Owens also felt his cut was unkind, even though he had been hampered by injuries and was trying to break in at a position where the Broncos are deep in talent, wide receiver. Owens was MVP of the American Bowl exhibition game in Tokyo with five pass receptions for 78 yards, including a 6-yard touchdown.

Rush and Truitt were among the Redskins' leading receivers in exhibition play but didn't fit into Washington's plans.

Rush had 270 multi-purpose yards in the first two exhibitions but was hampered by a hamstring pull.

"I'm not healthy, and they have to do what's best for the team," Rush said. "Hopefully next Sunday, if I'm not playing here, I'll be playing somewhere else. Offseason I worked hard getting ready for this, and I'm not going to quit now."

Truitt caught 10 passes for 176 yards and two touchdowns in exhibition games, but Washington coach Norv Turner decided to keep just four wideouts while retaining seven running backs.

Quarterback Jim McMahon was one of the biggest names cut on Sunday. McMahon was released by the Cleveland Browns, but coach Bill Belichick said the veteran may be re-signed within days once he decides what to do with some injured players.

The well-traveled McMahon, 36, signed with the Browns in early August as insurance in case third-round draft pick Eric Zeier did not pan out. Zeier, however, had an excellent exhibition season and became No. 2 on the Browns' depth chart behind Vinny Testaverde.

Marion Butts, a six-year veteran who rushed for 1,225 yards with San Diego in 1990, was among seven players cut by San Francisco. Butts struggled in exhibition games, gaining only 28 yards on 13 carries.

Also cut by San Francisco was defensive end Burt Grossman, who had hoped to make a mark as a pass rusher, but saw limited duty in exhibition games.

"It was a surprise," Grossman said of his pink slip. "But I wasn't put into many nickel situations, so you have to wonder."

The Kansas City Chiefs released fullback James Saxon and placed safety Ronnie Lott on injured reserve. Lott, a 10-time Pro Bowl selection in his 15th year, was signed as an unrestricted free agent in the offseason but fractured a leg bone in an exhibition game. By being placed on injured reserve, Lott can't play for the Chiefs this year. When he recovers, he can be waived and could sign with another team, the club said.

Final cuts for the Dallas Cowboys included four-year veteran Bucky

Richardson, a former Houston Oilers quarterback who had hoped to make the roster as a backup fullback and a special teams player.

"Bucky made three tackles on special teams against Houston Saturday night (in a 10-0 win), but we needed better blocking from him at fullback, so we decided to keep David Lang," coach Barry Switzer said. "Bucky just didn't fit our (backup) fullback situation."

The New England Patriots cut veteran defensive ends Mike Pitts and Jon Hand and one-time starting offensive guard Doug Skene.

Among other cuts, veteran tight end Ed West, who ranks 10th in Green Bay history in pass receptions and second among tight ends, was let go by Indianapolis. Wide receiver Michael Bates, a bronze medalist in the 200 meters in the 1992 Olympics, was among those released by Seattle.

The NFL wrapped up its final weekend of exhibition play on Saturday, as Kansas City beat Minnesota 17-13, Carolina defeated the New York Giants 6-3, Dallas blanked Houston 10-0 and San Francisco turned back Seattle 17-7.

Pampa's Jamisen Hancock (above) won a singles match and teamed with Juan Campos to win two doubles matches for the high school varsity tennis team over the weekend at Hereford.

Lefors has starters sidelined in scrimmage against Miami

LEFORS — Going into Friday night's scrimmage with Miami, the Lefors football team had two key starters sidelined with injuries. It made quite a difference as the Pirates' offense had trouble getting started.

"We didn't move the ball as well as I thought we could and we dropped some passes that should have been caught. But two of our starters, Kevin Franks and Justin Howard, were out with injuries and we had some new kids playing different positions," said Lefors assistant coach Richard Moore.

Moore said senior back Tommy Green looked good in the pass-run department for the Pirates, who scrimmage at McLean next Friday night starting at 7:30.

Last season, Green scored 216 points, which was the best mark among 6-man players. He rushed for 1,335 yards and passed for 882.

"We lack depth in some places, but I feel like we're going to come around," Moore said. "It's just going to take some time."

Moore said Franks and Howard should be ready by the time season opener rolls around Sept. 8 against Silverton.

"We've got 12 out for the team right now and we sure don't want any more injuries," added Moore.

The Pirates recorded a 7-3 record last year and just missed making the playoffs. They finished in a three-way tie for second and a tiebreaker prevented them from advancing to post-season play.

Lefors hosts Silverton Sept. 8 in the 1995 season opener. Lefors and Miami square off again during the regular season on Nov. 3.

Tiger tames Newport course

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Tiger Woods was trained by his father from the age of 6 months to be a golfing champion.

On Sunday, he confirmed — again — his budding greatness with a shot worthy of a champion.

Moments after hitting a 140-yard fairway shot within 16 inches of the cup on the final hole of the U.S. Amateur, the 19-year-old Stanford student had his second straight victory in the tournament and his fifth national title in five years.

Only four other players have captured as many national titles as Woods: Bobby Jones, with nine; Jack Nicklaus, with eight; and Jay Sigel and Jerome Travers, five each.

That's heady company for a young man who hasn't even started his sophomore year in college. But Woods maintained the best thing about beating 43-year-old Pennsylvania auto dealer Buddy Marucci was winning the automatic invitations to the Masters and U.S. and British Opens that go to the U.S. Amateur champ.

"It's the experience that I get to have because of winning" that's the best reward, Woods said.

Woods' experience playing slick fairways and wind-blown links courses in this year's British and Scottish Opens may have been the key to winning at Newport Country Club, which is as similar to St. Andrews' Old Course as any 18 holes in America.

That and the hours of practice he put in after being let down by short-iron shots in the Masters.

"I spent hours and hours on the range and it paid off on the 18th hole," Woods said.

One-up heading to the final hole, Woods lofted his second shot from the middle of the fairway and watched it spin back to the pin. He pumped his fist as he walked up to the green.

"Hit it straight and let the wind just ride it," Woods said.

Cowboys blank Oilers in "Governor's Cup"

By KELLEY SHANNON Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The not-so-pretty preseason is over at last.

Now the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers are preparing for their regular season openers next week. The Oilers travel to Jacksonville to take on the expansion Jaguars, and the Cowboys play the Giants in New York.

The two Texas teams ended the preseason with an exhibition game in the Alamodome vying for the so-called "Governor's Cup."

Dallas, relying on its reserves while stars like Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin looked on, managed to defeat the Oilers 10-0.

Afterward, the Oilers predicted they'll be prepared for next Sunday's game at Jacksonville. In fact, Houston spent much of last week getting ready for the expansion Jaguars instead of the Cowboys.

"We have been doing a lot of preparation for Jacksonville and not much for Dallas," Oilers quarterback Chris Chandler said. "We need to get rid of the mental mistakes and just get ready for next week."

The Cowboys scored midway through the third quarter Saturday night on a 23-yard field goal by Chris Boniol. Then cornerback Alundis Brice ran 23 yards for a touchdown on an interception with 2:28 remaining in the fourth.

A rookie from Mississippi, Brice also caught another interception in the third quarter. Sunday, he waited anxiously before learning he had survived the final cut to a 53-man roster.

"If I was on the cut list I was going to go out in style. I performed as hard as I could," Alundis said. "I'm looking forward to playing with the Cowboys for a long time to come."

Houston entered Saturday's game having missed a preseason contest the previous week. The Oilers' Aug. 19 exhibition game against San Diego was canceled because of field problems in the Astrodome.

Oilers coach Jeff Fisher said he couldn't blame Houston's loss to Dallas on the unexpected lull in the Oilers' preseason schedule.

"I can't blame it on that," he said. "We practiced hard all week."

The Oilers' fate hinged on its seven turnovers. Dallas had only two.

"We're lucky we didn't lose 45 to nothing," Fisher said. "The defense did a great job. Offensively, nothing happened out there that can't be corrected. I can guarantee you that."

With the loss, Houston fell to 0-3 in the preseason, while Dallas finished 2-3.

Justice seeking original video of 'racist' roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department could ask a judge to order lawyers to turn over the original videotape purporting to show racist activities at an annual "Good Ol' Boys" rally for federal agents, a spokesman says.

"But at this stage of the game, we're still talking to the attorneys," said Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern.

The New York Times reported Sunday that the source of the tape and stories about racism at the roundups was Richard Hayward, a former Fort Lauderdale, Fla., police officer. The Times said Hayward was upset when he was prevented from expressing his own white supremacist views at the outings. Hayward then provided his tape, taken at the 1990 roundup, to the National Rifle Association, just as it was gearing up a membership drive attacking the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, according to the newspaper.

Justice has issued an administrative subpoena for the original tape to the Gadsden Minutemen, a paramilitary group in Alabama, Stern said. Hayward said he gave the original tape to the group, the Times reported.

"Obviously, if they won't produce the tape, that will lead to the implication that it's not on the up-and-up," Stern said in an interview.

He declined to confirm the Times' reporting on Hayward. He also stopped short of saying Justice investigators doubted the tape's authenticity.

"Obviously, you have to determine whether there are discrepancies between what is seen on that tape and the events that are known to have occurred on the particular dates," he said.

He said he expected the department's inspector general to finish his probe in the early fall.

But civil rights leaders and the organizer of the annual roundups, a former ATF agent, have said they believe the 90-second tape may have been doctored, particularly the part showing a banner proclaiming "Nigger check point."

Some have suggested that Hayward himself may have hung the banner.

Hayward denied those suspicions to the Times, and insisted the tape and his stories are genuine. Hayward could not be reached Sunday; he had no telephone listing in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The roundups, held in southeastern Tennessee, generally draw 300 to 400 law enforcement officers and guests, nearly all of them white. The weekend gathering, which was May 18-20 this year, features picnics, volleyball, golf, rafting and beer drinking.

But it also allegedly has been the scene of drunken lewdness and displays of racism such as the sale of T-shirts with racist themes.

Young people learn from extracurricular activities

Parents who chauffeur children to dance class, sports practice and games and 4-H and scout meetings are stretching themselves thin, but children actually learn from these extra activities.

Students who are involved in extracurricular activities tend to do better in school and in other areas of their lives. Young people who get involved in community and school programs tend to have a more positive self-concept than those who do not. This positive self-concept carries over into all areas of their lives.

Young people with a positive self-concept tend to be more involved in clubs and activities because they try new experiences more freely and believe they will be successful. They also are better able to fit in with groups because they are more open to liking other people since they like themselves.

Involved students also develop strong social and communication skills because they deal with different people in different settings. They also learn to work in groups and to cooperate with other people.

A main benefit of after school involvement is the development

Homemaker's News

By Donna Brauchi

of responsibility. Young people learn they are expected to fulfill their obligations to the club or team.

Parents play an important role in encouraging extracurricular involvement, especially in a child's younger years. Parents should encourage their children to explore their interests at a young age. Starting early with good habits, pays off in the long run.

However, young children may need some guidance to prevent them from jumping from one activity to the next. Parents should help their children choose one or two activities that really interest them and then encourage them to stick with them. If a child does not like an activity, the parents should encourage their child to stick with the activity unless a good reason exists to end it. By letting the child quit, parents are condoning a quitter mentality that becomes a pattern of starting and never finishing things.

Children should choose their own activities as long as the proposed activity is wholesome, positive and affordable. If the child decides to do several things, parents should encourage the various interests. Some people are more focused and want to do one thing very well, but others would rather be involved in several things at a moderate level. Each way is fine as long as the young people are enjoying what they are doing.

After children become involved in extracurricular activities, parents should continue their encouragement and support, and attend all events if possible. Young people with parental support tend to be more involved.

Sometimes students can become involved in too many activities, but determining what is too much may be difficult. No magic number exists for how many activities are the appropriate amount.

If schoolwork, family time and student's personal health begin to suffer, that student is overdoing it somewhere and needs to cut back. But if the students are enjoying what they are doing and keeping up their academic and home responsibilities, parents should continue to encourage their children to get the most out of their extracurricular activities.

The Gray County 4-H Youth Development program for boys and girls grades 3 - 12 is starting a new year! Interested boys and girls and their families are invited to the enrollment and information night on Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 7 p.m., at Recreation Park.

World briefs

Fierce fighting continues in Mogadishu

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Militias loyal to Mogadishu's two rival warlords battled each other for a third day today, forcing the closure of the Somali capital's seaport.

Officials at three hospitals said 21 people are known to have been killed and 79 wounded since the fighting erupted Saturday along the line dividing the city.

Most of the victims have been civilians caught in a crossfire of machine guns, mortars, antitank weapons and rocket-propelled grenades.

The fighting spread Sunday into the Bermuda district of southern Mogadishu, then into another neighborhood directly across from the seaport, the city's economic lifeline.

Stray mortar rounds falling into the seaport forced the suspension of operations, although there were no reports of casualties among workers or serious damage to equipment.

Hundreds of people carrying cooking utensils, blankets, mattresses and other household goods were seen fleeing the Waberi district near the seaport early today.

Militiamen loyal to Mohamed Farrah Aidid, who controls most of southern Mogadishu, and Ali Mahdi Mohamed, who rules in the north, accuse each other of starting the fighting.

A U.S.-led multinational force arrived in Somalia in December 1992 to protect aid shipments from warring clan factions after an estimated 350,000 Somalis had died of famine, drought and war. The United Nations withdrew the last of its peacekeepers in March after a failed effort to bring stability to the Horn of Africa nation.

Swiss banks to return millions to Philippines

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Switzerland has approved the transfer to the Philippines of nearly a half-billion dollars in Swiss bank accounts of the late Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos.

Zurich District Attorney Peter Cosandey said today that the decision, which is still subject to Marcos family legal appeals, would put the money into an escrow account in the Philippines pending court action there.

The move was a major step in the 10-year battle between the Philippine government and the Marcos family for control of the money that the Philippines asserts was ill-gotten gains amassed during the 1965-86 Marcos dictatorship.

Cosandey, the Swiss official in charge of the case, confirmed to The Associated Press that he had made the decision Aug. 21. The AP learned of the move initially from a lawyer representing the Philippines.

Indians get health equipment from closing military bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — To the military, the stuff is just taking up space in a warehouse. But to the money-strapped hospitals and clinics that serve American Indians, $6 million in medical supplies and equipment is a godsend.

Everything from bandages to X-ray machines is being shipped from an Air Force warehouse this month to Indian health facilities from North Carolina to Alaska.

The equipment, some of it never used, comes from U.S. bases that are closing in Great Britain and Denmark.

"The military was stuck with a lot of perfectly good medical supplies and equipment that normally would be given to undeveloped countries," said Kenneth Bricker, a spokesman for the federal Indian Health Service.

The supplies were earmarked for Ukraine, but Congress intervened and ordered the Pentagon to give them to American Indian facilities instead. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said the material would fill a critical need.

Another $90 million in equipment and supplies is expected to become available over the next two years as additional European bases shut down, he said.

The material is badly needed, both to replace obsolete machines and furnishings and to stock new health-service and tribally owned facilities that often must open without adequate equipment, according to the agency.

"A lot of this equipment has never been used or it's in excellent shape," said Vincent Mosser, an agency official in Minnesota.

The Indian Health Service is so chronically short of money that the agency says it meets only 70 percent of the medical needs of Indians.

Some 55 tons of equipment worth nearly $1 million was shipped to Alaska last week. A 10-bed hospital at Barrow, on the northern tip of Alaska, is getting some X-ray equipment to replace its aging machines. Other facilities in the state are receiving refrigerators, sterilizers, testing equipment and even whirlpools.

In South Dakota, the ambulance service on the Cheyenne River Reservation is getting two suctioning machines. One will replace the antiquated device on a 22-year-old ambulance. The other will replace a machine that's broken on a second ambulance.

"Our budget is very minimal. We can only afford a few things," said Alta Tiger, who manages the service.

In Minnesota, a health care center under construction on the White Earth Reservation is getting a traction machine, whirlpool and other physical therapy equipment. It's difficult to recruit physical therapists to a reservation, but the equipment will make it easier, Mosser said.

The Defense Department is picking up the shipping costs for the project.

The material is being distributed by Air Force planes and the military reserves. Congress authorized the Pentagon to spend as much as $5 million on the transportation, but it's still a bargain for the government, said IHS spokesman Bricker.

The $6 million in supplies and equipment would cost three times that much new, he said.

"This is responsible stewardship of federal resources, not a waste of taxpayers' money," he said.

The project is a "perfect example of what can be creatively achieved when federal departments and agencies cooperate with each other in the spirit of teamwork," said Philip Lee, an assistant secretary for the Department of Health and Human Services.
