Moon Men Exploring Mountains

SPACE CENTER, Houston. (AP) — Apollo 16 explorers drove halfway up a 1,600-foot mountain Saturday, dodging through a forest of boulders to the highest point on the moon ever visited by man.

They found some crystalline rocks but not a great many, puzzling geologists who had expected the surface of Stone Mountain might be strewn with ancient crystalline rocks of clearly volcanic origin.

"What a spectacular sight," said Charles M. Duke Jr. as they reached a point 750 to 800 feet up the mountain. "Man, you can't believe the view looking back to the east. You can see Ravine and Wreck and North Ray and Stubby. You can see the LM (lunar module) back there. It's super."

"It's absolutely unreal," agreed Apollo 16 commander John W. Young, whose driving skill took them up the mountain's 10-degree slope.

Once up there, they resumed their search for geological treasure. During their first seven-hour outing Friday, they found two white rocks that scientists studying data radioed to earth think could be volcanic, or possibly relate in some manner to the formation of the early lunar crust.

Young and Duke will make another field trip Sunday and will rocket away from the moon Sunday night to start the first phase of the long voyage home.

"That's a crystalline rock," Young said of one Stone Mountain rock. "That's the first one I've seen that is a crystalline rock. It's white; and, when I hold it up to the sun, it has a greenish cast to it."

Dr. Robin Brett, a space agency scientist at Mission Control said it was difficult to understand why the astronauts to this point have found so few crystalline rocks. Such rocks would be numerous in an area of once high volcanic activity, which the Descartes Mountain area was thought to have been.

During the climb up Stone Mountain, they reached a point called Crown Crater, and Duke said, "Here, let's stop here."

After they left the mountain, they found another rock about which Duke said: "If this isn't crystalline, I'll eat the whole thing."

It probably was, Mission Control said, but the finding of such rocks remained rare.

"Most of these rocks have a whitish cast to them," said Young at one point. But he added that nearly all of them were breccias, a type of rock made up from several kinds of material which had been melted together. Such rocks were common at earlier Apollo moon landing sites also.

North Viets Unleashing New Raids

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese forces surged forward ominously in the central highlands Saturday, attacking bases and cutting the main highway linking the two major cities, Kontum and Pleiku.

The enemy cut Highway 14 about 13 miles north of Pleiku, half way to Kontum, and halted a 100-truck convoy. Enemy troops dug in along the highway pounded the convoy with mortar and recoilless-rifle fire. At dusk the convoy still was under fire.

This followed an enemy pattern of cutting roads apparently to strangle the major cities before launching the offensive that U.S. officers have been saying is imminent.

U.S. advisers believe that, if the North Vietnamese launch a maximum effort, they will try to cut the road between Kontum and Pleiku permanently, knock out the district town of Dak To and rush past government fire bases to seize Kontum.

A minimum effort, the advisers feel, would be to cut Highway 14 in many places and attempt to choke off Dak To and 25 miles to the south.

On April 9, the North Vietnamese cut Highway 19, the major route between Pleiku and coastal bases over which 200 or so South Vietnamese trucks passed daily.

Model Congress Bills Span Gamut From Mercy Killing To Skyjacking

By RAY BAXTER

The house of representatives, Saturday, voted down a Euthenasia bill by an unexpected and overwhelming majority after debate that would delight a Freudian psychologist and make an aging journalist feel very insecure.

Members of the house were some of the 150 high school students taking part in the Pampa Jaycees Model Congress along with three of the current models in congressmen.

Opponents of the real political arena Bob Price and Graham Purcell shared duties as speaker of the house guiding students through the machinery of committee hearings, introduction of bills, debate and voting.

Texas Republican Senator John Tower was scheduled to serve as president of the senate for the day but a busy schedule cut his participation to a press conference solely for the students and a speech on the floor of the senate.

Rep. Price ended his morning tenure as speaker with an address to students and a press conference for student journalists.

In his speech from the floor,

GOP Officials Considering Meeting Site

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Republican party officials are considering a proposal to hold the GOP National Convention in Miami Beach beginning Aug. 19, Mayor Chuck Hall said Saturday.

Hall indicated that the Aug. 19 starting date would help party leaders overcome "legal complications" over convention rules concerning the earlier suggested dates of Aug. 14-17.

The assembly is scheduled for Aug. 21-24 in San Diego, Calif. But there have been reports of a search for another site due to money problems, delays in construction of the meeting site and controversy over alleged financial backing of the convention by International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.

the congressman from Pampa stressed the responsibility and potential power of the 18-year-old voter. He told them the best way to develop both was to run government. He said demonstrations were no way to down the establishment.

"Just fail to become involved and the institution concerned will die from neglect," Price pointed out. "This is true of any we have today. Have you been to church lately? If you want our religious institutions to die just don't get involved but I remind you that you can't beat death at any age."

Price went on to say the way to buck the system was to become involved but not to expect sudden change. He warned:

"The only way any change can come about instantly is through a dictatorship."

Purcell was a veritable fountain of technical knowledge and almost beatific patience as he spent the afternoon as speaker of the house guiding young minds and efforts that were deadly serious.

In an interview with the News during a breather, Rep. Purcell commented on his committee's hearings into meat prices.

"All those we have called on have laid bare their figures except the retailers," Purcell said. "They have painfully parted with the few figures we have from them and these reflect nothing of what we are seeking."

Purcell said the involvement of organized crime in New York meat prices was being handled there by the state district attorney's office and his committee was involved only to the extent of getting it into the record of the hearings.

During the ride into town from Perry Lefors field, Senator Tower told the News the only significant developments recently seemed to be the fact that it was almost certain that raw agricultural products would not be included in any further price controls that might be invoked.

Asked which Democratic candidate he expected to face in November, Tower replied:

"I can truthfully say that is a matter of supreme indifference to me."

Gray County Attorney John W. Warner was the "quarterback" for most of the day's activities with a great number of green-vested Jaycees and Jaycee-ettes in evidence.

Jaycee Benny Kirksey served as witness chairman watching a parade of authorities in many fields including local physicians, ministers, city and county law enforcement officials. Students were also committee witnesses along with their administrators, Dr. James Malone and Cameron Marsh.

Warner noted the high level of maturity evidenced by the student congressmen and women. He told of one who became genuinely angry because the "hi-jinks" of evicting a lobbyist distracted attention and his bill failed.

The Euthenasia measure—mercy killing of the aged and infirmed illustrated the gamut of imagination in producing the bills.

Lefors Boy Loses Life Accidentally

A freak accident during a game of good guys and bad guys claimed the life of a 12-year-old Lefors boy Saturday afternoon when Bryan Tate became trapped in a rope noose that could not be loosened once it drew tight.

According to Gray County Sheriff's Deputy D.L. Day who investigated the accident, Bryan was caring for his brothers, five and seven, while his mother was at work. The noose in the rope with he and the five-year-old were playing had been fastened with tape then loops taken around the taped portion to resemble a "hangman's noose."

A kitchen chair on which he was standing fell from under him and the force of the fall drew the loop tight about his neck. Even though his feet were firmly on the ground he could not make the loop slip.

When the seven-year-old was unable to free him, three neighbor teenagers were summoned and they were unable to slip the knot. Finally a neighbor working in his garage heard the commotion and investigated. He worked the rope free and artificial respiration was administered until the ambulance arrived.

Members of the Lefors volunteer fire department rushed him to Highland General Hospital where medical personnel worked to save his life.

Funeral arrangements are pending with Carmichael-Whately Funeral Directors, Inc.

Born Jan. 20, 1960, at Borger, he was a sixth-grade student at Lefors Elementary School.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Glenda Tate, Lefors; two brothers, Douglas and Kevin, of the home; and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Taylor, Lefors.

M. K. Brown Had Great Interest In Pampa

Montagu Kingsmill Brown, the man who made possible the civic auditorium that will be dedicated to his memory this afternoon, first came to Pampa 69 years ago this month, in April of 1903.

He was just one month short of his 25th birthday when he landed in New Orleans from his native England. He headed almost immediately for the Texas Panhandle where his home was to be for the remaining 61 years of his life.

The saga of Mr. Brown's impact and influence on the history and growth of Pampa and its environs, his many philanthropies and contributions to the city's cultural life—all come into new perspective with today's dedication of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

Following is the story of Mr. Brown's life as presented in the biographical material published in the Souvenir Program to be distributed at today's auditorium dedication:

MONTAGU KINGSMILL BROWN 1878-1964

Montagu Kingsmill Brown was born May 22, 1878, in the little village of Eastcote, Middlesex County, England, one of twelve children with an Irish mother and a British father. When he was seven years old, he was sent to a boarding school sixty miles from London at a place called Brackley, which was located twenty miles from Oxford and known as Magdalen College School. Here he remained until the age of fifteen when his father went broke and it became necessary for Montie to take a job. This was the end of his formal education, the remainder of it being obtained in the "school of hard knocks" as explained by Mr. Brown. He was a loyal alumnus of this latter school, but did not recommend it over formalized education, and thus it was that he dedicated himself to providing the means for many thousands of children to attend college who otherwise might not have had this opportunity. His college scholarships which he gave through the local high school and various other channels were but one of his numerous philanthropies throughout his lifetime. Through the creation of the M.K. Brown Foundation, he was able to see that these many activities were carried on even after his death.

His first job was office boy for a timber merchant in the heart of London, and for two and a half years he drew what he termed the "huge salary" of two dollars a week. Then he went to work in a bank at a salary of $250 a year and while there received a raise of $50 a year. There were no adding machines at that early date and all checks had to be listed and added up "by main strength and awkwardness" as he explained it. This experience proved invaluable to him in later years when he was employed by the White Deer Land Company in Gray County, Texas. But not knowing this at the time, he became bored with his job and told his father he would like to strike out for Australia or Canada, to start farming or stock raising. Having an inquisitive nature and an eagerness to learn about everything he could, he had become familiar with farming and such from visiting some of his relatives, and throughout his lifetime he retained this great interest in the land and its growth and productivity.

It was about this time that the Boers declared war on England. England had no infantry to speak of, and called on the various yeomanry units to furnish manpower. This seemed a golden opportunity to young Montie who was a member of his county yeomanry unit to "join up and see the world at no expense to myself." His experiences in what he called the only "gentlemanly" war ever fought were many and colorful, and when it was over, he returned to England feeling he would surely return to Africa someday.

Such was not the case, however. His Uncle Andrew Kingsmill began trying to interest him in a vast new land in the southwest part of the United States which he himself had visited. Located in the Texas Panhandle was an enterprise known as White Deer Lands, an outgrowth of the old Franklyn Land and Cattle Company which had been owned and operated by a group of Englishmen headed by the Prime Minister of England, Lord Rosebery and so it was that he had become familiar with this land company and had come to know Mr. T.D. Hobart, the manager. He succeeded in influencing his nephew Montie to change his plans for adventure elsewhere in the world for a trip to an area in Texas which was to become his home for the rest of his life. It proved to be a happy and fruitful decision for all concerned.

Mr. Brown arrived in New Orleans with only a few dollars and set out for the Panhandle of Texas where he arrived in April, 1903. He was employed by Mr. Hobart to work for White Deer Lands at a monthly salary of $25 which included room and board. He did his work well and was able to keep a set of books without the aid of an adding machine. Soon he was raised to $75 a month. In the years that followed, he served as assistant to Mr. Hobart in the management of White Deer Lands and the JA Ranch at Clarendon, Texas. Later he was a co-manager of the White Deer Company along with Mr. C.P. Buckler. White Deer Lands comprised the major portion of the counties of Gray, Roberts, Hutchinson and Carson, and was an important developer of the Texas Panhandle. When the company had sold all its land and went out of business in 1957, Mr. Brown purchased the office building located at 116 South Cuyler Street in Pampa and later began developing it as an area museum. Today it houses historical and other artifacts of the area, and is known as the White Deer Land Museum.

He and his beloved Josye were married August 29, 1922, in Ardmore, Oklahoma, her family home. She shared with him in his continued philanthropies and they enjoyed extensive travels throughout the world. After his retirement, they spent their winters in San Antonio and summers in Pampa. Even though retired from active business, he remained active in the civic and cultural life of his community until his death in September, 1964. His wife preceded him in death by five years.

M.K. Brown became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1915. He was a 32nd degree Mason, member of Scottish Rite, and a charter member of the Pampa Rotary Club. He was also a member of Pampa's first Masonic Lodge and served as a Master Mason more than 50 years. He was mayor of Pampa from 1913 to 1915, and was president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development in 1928. He was a stockholder and director of Southwestern Investment Company for 33 years. He was elected a Life Member of Panhandle-Plains Historical Society and was a member of the Pampa Genealogical and Historical Society. He was the recipient of the coveted Silver Beaver Award from the Adobe Walls Council, Boy Scouts of America; and is the only person ever to have received the title of "Chief Scout" of the Adobe Walls Council, its highest honor. Through his generous contributions the Adobe Walls Council Service Center was built, as well as the Scout camp near Mobeetie, Texas. The camping facility was named "Camp M.K. Brown" in his honor.

A much-needed bridge across Red Deer Creek on Sumner Street in Pampa was built by Mr. Brown and given to the City of Pampa and Gray County. It is located near the auditorium and appropriately named London Bridge.

His generosity to churches extended far beyond the building of his own beloved St. Matthews Episcopal Church, and included gifts to all denominations as their needs became known to him.

Perhaps his first love was for the youth of the country and his bequests were frequent to such organizations as the Girl Scouts, Optimist Boys Club, Boys Ranch, Key Club, and the already mentioned Boy Scouts.

He contributed funds for a set of Texas Civil Statutes for the American Law Library, a facility of the Bar of England in London. He established the M.K. Brown Range Life Series at the University of Texas Press for the purpose of publishing books of historical interest about ranch life in the Southwest. Ten books have come out of this series.

One of the highlights of his life came when he had conferred on him the Doctor of Laws Degree by Incarnate Word College of San Antonio.

He was one of the major contributors to the financial campaign for construction of the Coronado Inn, Pampa's community hotel, and to the Pampa Industrial Foundation organized for the purpose of attracting industry to Pampa. His financial and other aid to thousands of individuals is known only to the recipients.

His myriad of interests encompassed music and all the arts. The auditorium being dedicated today is the fulfillment of a dream which he had for many years before his death. He felt there was a need for a facility large enough to complement but not compete with the many smaller meeting places already provided by the hotel, country club, city club rooms, library, banks, utility companies, churches, and schools. His intent was that these existing facilities continue to meet the needs they now serve, and the auditorium should add to the cultural and educational life of the community by providing a beautiful setting for the larger entertainment and banquet needs.

This was the wish of the man who made this auditorium possible.

This he truly did right up to his untimely death Sept. 10, 1964, at the age of 86. Death came in Highland General Hospital several hours after a traffic accident at N. Hobart and Coronado Dr., just a block away from the site of the Memorial that will be dedicated to him today.

Auditorium Story Begins In 1966

The story of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium actually began on May 23, 1966, when Pampa received assurance that a major portion of residue from the M.K. Brown Estate would be made available within the next year to build a community auditorium.

The announcement came from the late Arthur M. Teed, then chairman of the M.K. Brown Foundation.

Mr. Teed made the surprise announcement at a meeting of Chamber of Commerce directors on the forenoon of that day nearly six years ago. An hour later he broke the news to the general public at a membership luncheon of the chamber in Coronado Inn.

It was announced at the same time that between $750,000 and $1,000,000 possible would be available for the auditorium which was one of the late Mr. Brown's fondest dreams for his hometown.

It was stated at the same Chamber of Commerce meetings that the Gray-Pampa Foundation had assured trustees of the Brown

Foundation it would provide a site on which the auditorium could be built.

Both of these assurances subsequently were carried out. The first cash contribution of $10,000 for the auditorium fund already had been deposited.

It was some four years later that agreement was reached that the auditorium would be a municipally-operated project and the Foundation at that time deposited $400,000 in cash in the City's name as the initial payment on the project.

That agreement, made Sept. 11, 1970, between the City and the M.K. Brown Foundation also provided that assets and income of the Brown Estate were pledged to retire a proposed $800,000 bond issue. The bond issue was approved by city voters on Oct. 24, 1970.

With a goal that the auditorium would be principally a theater for the performing arts, many meetings of the Auditorium Executive Committee and city officials were held with city officials and Architect Herbert Brasher of the firm of Brasher, Goyette & Rapier of Lubbock and Austin.

The City recently appointed an Operation Advisory Committee consisting of E.L. Green, Jr., chairman; Tex DeWeese, W.L. Loving, City Manager Mack Wofford and Mrs. George B. Cree.

Green and DeWeese had been members of the original Auditorium Executive Committee formed back in 1966 after announcement of the Brown bequest had been made.

There also was a General Auditorium Committee organized in 1966 consisting of 31 Pampa citizens. They included:

Crawford Atkinson, Harold Barrett, Mrs. Inez Carter, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Cree, Jr., Mrs. Robert Curry, Charles Cook, Tex DeWeese, Ray

Duncan, Mrs. Raymond Harrah, Deane Heckman, Floyd Imel, Homer Johnson, Don R. Lane, James F. Malone, Phillip McCarley, Don McGill, Grundy Morrison, Fred J. Neslage, E.E. Shelhamer, William Jarrell Smith, Roy Sparkman, Fred Thompson, Bill Waters, Floyd Watson, Mack Wofford, and E.O. Wedgeworth. Hugh Burdette, Tom Wade and Gordon Lyons (all three now deceased) also were members of the original committee.

E.L. Green, Jr., was chairman of both the general and the executive committees. Other trustees of the M.K. Brown Foundation at the time, Chairman Teed made the first auditorium announcement were Tom Wade and William Jarrell Smith.

The trustee membership of the Gray-Pampa Foundation includes Aubrey Steele, chairman; Clinton Evans, vice chairman; William Jarrell Smith, secretary-treasurer; Charles Cook and E.L. Green, Jr.

After plans and specifications for a $1.2 million structure had been approved by the Pampa City Commission, ground for the auditorium was broken on a cold, windy March 18, 1971.

Members of the ground-breaking crew were Aubrey Steele of the Gray-Pampa Foundation, Tom Wade of the M.K. Brown Foundation, Mayor Milo Carlson, Kay Fancher, then president of the Chamber of Commerce, and E.L. Green, Jr., chairman of the Auditorium Operations Advisory Committee.

Shortly after ground was broken, work was started by the general contractor, J.W. Cooper Construction Co., Inc., of Odessa.

Construction has proceeded on schedule right down to the dedication date today.

Mr. Brown Also Wanted White Deer Lands Museum

In addition to the new civic auditorium, another of the late M.K. Brown's dreams that has been carried out by the M.K. Brown Foundation is the establishment of the White Deer Lands Museum, 116 S. Cuyler.

Mr. Brown had begun to make plans for the museum in the early part of 1964. After his death in the fall of the same year, The Pampa Genealogical and Historical Society, of which Mr. Brown was a member, also has an office in the building.

The museum will be open from 6 to 6 p.m. today to allow visitors to attend the auditorium dedication ceremonies and visit the museum.

Brasher Designed Building

The beautiful M.K. Brown auditorium which will be dedicated this afternoon was designed by Herbert Brasher, senior partner of the Brasher, Goyette & Rapier architectural firm of Lubbock and Austin.

Brasher was commissioned by the City of Pampa in 1970 and has been in personal charge of the project since that time.

He was specially involved in the problems of acoustical treatment, auditorium seating, lighting and stage equipment.

Brasher and his firm have done many auditoriums in the region. He has been actively involved in planning and designing buildings in the West Texas area for more than 30 years.

Currently he is working with the Pampa Independent School District on a vocational building for Pampa High School.

New Structure Is Designed And Built In Modern Motif

The new civic auditorium is a beautiful structure, designed and built in a modern motif both inside and out.

Visitors approaching from the south get a first view of the magnificent exposed aggregate walkway and landscaping now being developed.

The $1.2 million structure was designed to present an inspirational appearance and constructed throughout to be flexible and functional for accommodation of the many types of activities for which it will be used.

Upon entering the 7,835 square foot lobby, covered with plush burnt orange carpeting, one of the first things to greet the eye is the large display case containing various personal belongings of the late Montagu Kingsmill Brown, the man whose dream now becomes a reality...an auditorium and Civic Center for all the citizens of Pampa.

The auditorium itself is hexagon in shape with approximately 17,000 square feet of space including the auditorium proper, stage, Green Room, dressing rooms and lounge facilities.

It has one of the most modern and elaborate lighting and sound systems to be found in any auditorium of comparable size in the United States.

There are 1,500 seats in the auditorium with provisions for adding an extra 100 seats. The 3,150 square foot stage lacks only about 100 square feet of being twice as large as any stage in Pampa.

Actually, the building has two main entrances which lead off a paved parkway that goes entirely around the building. There are two large passenger loading areas at the southwest and north foyer entrances.

The dining and exhibit hall, named the Heritage Room, also connects with the lobby. It contains 8,332 square feet of space with a capacity seating of nearly 800 persons. Sixty-six tables and 504 chairs already are available for banquets and other gatherings.

A portable stage platform also is part of the Heritage Room area, as well as a sound-proof portable wall to permit two functions at the same time. Two portable steam tables are provided to keep food hot while it is being served.

The entire civic center building, of course, is air-conditioned and heated.

Additional space for more than 300 cars also has been made available with a new parking lot just recently constructed.

As City Manager Mack Wofford so aptly put it:

"The citizens of Pampa can certainly be proud of their new auditorium. Each and everyone of us can be thankful to Mr. M. K. Brown for helping make Pampa a better place in which to live."

Pampans May Have Share In Contribution

Pampans who wish to do so are encouraged to share the late M.K. Brown's contribution of the new civic auditorium to the people of the community.

William Jarrell Smith, secretary-treasurer of the M.K. Brown Foundation, called this to the attention of Pampans in the following statement which also is published in the Memorial Souvenir Program:

"The Officers of the City of Pampa, the Trustees of the Gray-Pampa Foundation, Inc., the Trustees of the M.K. Brown Foundation, Inc., and the members of the Committee sponsoring today's dedicatory program were all acquainted with our honoree, M.K. Brown, in his lifetime.

"They know that M.K. was never a jealous man—always a generous one. He well knew and loved the many others who gave generously of their means and time to promote the well-being of Pampa and the surrounding area. He gloried in their unselfish zeal and generosity.

"M.K.'s friends well know that while Mr. Brown would be proud of this memorial to him, he would not begrudge others the right to share this monument to his memory.

"Accordingly, if anyone or any group desires to memorialize any one or more of these other deserving pioneers and civic leaders by sponsoring some appropriate and suitable addition to this edifice or especially needed equipment, he or such group is welcome to do so.

"If interested, please consult the City Manager, the Mayor or any Commissioner, or any member of the Auditorium Committee."

Wardlaw To Give Dedicatory Speech

Frank H. Wardlaw of Austin, a close friend and associate of the late M. K. Brown, will give the dedicatory address at today's dedication of Pampa's new civic auditorium as a memorial to Mr. Brown.

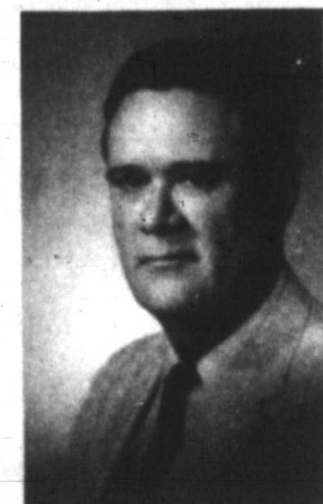

Wardlaw, director of the University of Texas Press at Austin, was born in Indianopolis, South Carolina, in 1913 and was educated in the public schools of South Carolina and the University of South Carolina. From 1933 to 1938 he was engaged in newspaper work. In 1938 he joined the faculty of the University of South Carolina's School of Journalism, also serving as director of the University News Service.

In 1945 he participated in the organization of the University of South Carolina Press and became its first director.

In 1950 he was chosen as the first director of the University of Texas and came to Austin to organize the University's new publication program. More than 650 books have been published under his direction since that time.

Wardlaw is a member of Alpha Tau Omega, Blue Key, Sigma Delta Chi, Block "C" Club, the Headliners' Club, and the Town and Gown Club, and the Philosophical Society of Texas.

He is an honorary member of the Tulane University History Department and a member of the Biddford Pool Congress. He is a member of the Board of Franklin Book Programs and is on the Advisory Committee for Publications of the Henry Francis DuPont Winterthur Museum. Today's Dedicatory Program Open To Public And It's Free

An important point brought out Saturday about today's auditorium dedication is the fact that the event is open to everyone and there is no admission fee.

City Manager Mack Wofford said his office and members of the program committee had received calls asking if an invitation is needed to attend.

"No invitation is needed," Wofford said. "There is no admission charge and we want everyone to know they are welcome to attend the dedication ceremony and take a tour of the building."

Wofford also said it would alleviate parking and traffic problems if persons attending would double up as much as possible.

"Invite your neighbors to ride with you," he suggested.

Another point re-emphasized by the city manager had to do with the auditorium tours today.

"We hope everyone will follow the arrows and listen to directions by the ushers and tour hosts and hostesses to pass through the building on a clockwise route," Wofford said.

"It will eliminate confusion and a crowd traffic jam."

Texas Crops Affected By Dry Weather, Winds

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Texas continued to suffer from lack of rain during the week, and for some any moisture will be too late to save current crops.

In south and south central portions, crops are up but rain is needed, said Dr. John E. Hutchison, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Small grains throughout the state suffer from dry weather and fields are being grazed out by livestock. Grain prospects are dim except in irrigated areas of the High Plains. Hutchison said.

Land preparation continues on the Plains and dryland farmers in those areas are hopeful that rain will come within the next couple of weeks to keep spring planting on schedule.

Ranges are dry over all of Texas although there is good grazing in southern and eastern parts. Livestock continue to hold up well but supplemental feeding is still active.

Conditions as reported by district agents are as follows:

Panhandle: Hot, dry winds continue to dry out the soil, reported W.W. Grisham Jr.,

Amarillo. Irrigated wheat is making good growth. Some corn is being planted while land preparation, fertilizing and pre-plant irrigation are active elsewhere. There is some damage from the alfalfa weevil. Range grass is retarded by dry weather.

South Plains: Preparation for planting has been active although wind and blowing dust hampered some operations. Small grains are in dire need of moisture. Dryland farmers need rain for planting which is expected to get under way in a couple of weeks. The alfalfa crop is making good progress.

Rolling Plains: Rain is badly needed for small grains, ranges and stock water, according to James Simmons of Vernon. Small grains are poor to fair and continue to deteriorate. Small grains are being grazed out in some counties. Small acreages have been planted to grain and forage sorghums.

North Central: Small grains are heading out and the crop will be short. About 10 per cent of the cotton has been planted with corn and grain sorghum planting nearing the 90 per cent mark. Some poor stands have resulted due to dry weather. Pecans and peaches are setting a good crop. Ranges and pastures range from average to below average.

Northeast: Most small grains are heading out and need rain, came the word from R.S. Loftis, Overton. Cotton planting is beginning. The corn crop is generally up to a good stand. Pecans and peaches are making good progress. Pastures are short.

Far West: Ranges and dryland crops need rain badly. Irrigated small grains are making excellent growth. The first cutting of alfalfa is under way and some cotton is being planted. Livestock conditions are holding up although supplemental feeding is active.

West Central: A few showers fell in the area but a good soaking rain is long overdue, said Allen Turner, San Angelo. Most small grains are being grazed out. Pecans are in full bloom. Pastures and ranges are below average.

Central: The moisture situation is becoming serious. Most small grains will not be harvested and some are being plowed under. Some cotton is up while some planting is being delayed due to lack of moisture. Some early peanuts have been planted in Eastland County. Pastures and ranges are in bad shape. Sheep and goat shearing is active.

East: Corn planting is active with some up. Oats are being grazed out due to the moisture shortage, said Bill Lehmborg of Overton. Pasture growth is good but rain is needed. Livestock are in good condition.

Southeast and Upper Gulf Coast: Spring planting is nearing completion and rain is needed. Irrigation of rice is active. Ranges are average to below average. Livestock are in fair shape and calving is about complete.

South Central: Crops, pastures and ranges are suffering from lack of moisture, said Bryan Swaim of College Station. Grain sorghum planting is complete, cotton is 80 to 90 per cent planted, and corn planting ranges from 75 to 100 per cent. Pastures and ranges are below average but livestock remain in generally good condition.

Relays To Austin

By CLAY LIVELY
Both of Pampa's fine relay teams won their races at the Region I-AAAA track meet held in Lubbock Friday and Saturday.

Pampa's mile foursome of Larry Marl, Terry Riddle, Dennis Stowers and Bobby Owen won with a time of 3:17.4, beating its own season best of 3:18.2, set in the preliminaries Friday.

The Harvester mile crew had a tremendous split in the race. Larry Marl ran his lead-off leg in 48.9 and all of the others broke the 50-second mark in their turn around the oval.

Before Friday's prelims, the Harvesters' best time of the year was a 3:23.0, set in El Paso, March 11.

Pampa's time gives them the fourth best recorded in the state this year.

The 440-yard relay team of Chuck Reeves, Garvin McCarrell, Rick McGuire and Richard McCampbell, won in 41.9, duplicating its best time of the year, also set in the preliminaries Friday.

Previously the sprint relay's best time this year was 42.0 set at the district meet in Amarillo last weekend.

In team standings Pampa finished third with 46 points behind Lubbock Monterey (67) and San Angelo (47).

Richard McCampbell was fourth in the 100-yard dash with a 9.7 timing. According to coach Ed Lehnick it was a real close race and it appeared that McCampbell should have been picked second.

Had that occurred, Pampa would have passed San Angelo and finished second in the over-all standings. Troy Squires of El Paso Coronado won the 100.

Bobby Owen placed fifth in the 440-yard dash in 49.5. Tim ion of Plainview won the race with a 47.3 clocking; the best time in the state for a high schooler this year.

"Monterrey was very impressive in the field competition," Lehnick said. "They only advanced one man to the state in the running events," he added.

The relay teams advance to the state finals to be staged in Austin, May 5 and 6.

Nicklaus Grabs Lead At Tourney Of Champ.

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus came from five strokes off the pace with a 67 Saturday and took a two-stroke lead in the third round of pro golf's $165,000 Tournament of Champions.

Nicklaus, heavily favored to make a successful defense of his title in this prestigious event, posted a 54 hole total of 208—eight under par on the demanding La Costa Country Club course. The tournament is sponsored by Mutual of New York.

The big blond, one of the few players strong enough to get the ball out of the deep, clinging rough on this course held a two stroke lead over challenging Lee Trevino and faltering Bobby Mitchell.

Trevino had a 68 for 210 and was tied for second with Mitchell, who held a four-stroke lead at the end of 36 holes. Mitchell slipped to a two-under-par 74, with a bogey on the final hole.

Dolphin Swim Club Has Team Dinner

Over fifty parents and swimmers attended the first annual Pampa Dolphin Swim Club awards dinner held at Furr's Cafeteria on Friday evening. Special guests of the event were the President and Past President of the Pampa Evening Lions Club, Mr. Dick Kastein, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sims, Libby Shotwell, and all the Dolphin swimmers.

The program was MC'd by Bob Steger, Dolphin Club Vice-President. After some brief remarks by Dolphin Club President, Thurman Brown, the Evening Lions Club presented eight new blue and white Dolphin jackets to Dolphin swimmers who have attended three meets or more during the season.

This has brought to twenty the Dolphin team members who have participated in three or more competitive meets this season, and have been awarded jackets by the Evening Lions Club.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jerry West and Wilt Chamberlain led a fourth quarter surge which lifted Los Angeles to a 104-100 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks Saturday as the Lakers won the National Basketball Association Western Conference playoff finals.

The Lakers advance to the NBA finals against the winner of the Eastern Conference playoffs, in which New York leads Boston 3-1.

The Lakers were down 85-75 with 10:25 to play when Chamberlain ignited the rally with a free throw and stuff shot. Los Angeles finally tied Milwaukee at 97-97 on a West basket with 2:15 left.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led Milwaukee with 35 points, and Lucius Allen missed on the Bucks' next trip upcourt and Gail Goodrich put Los Angeles ahead to stay on a basket with 1:33 left. Happy Hairston drew a foul on the play and his free throw put the Lakers up 100-97.

Two free throws by Chamberlain offset a foul shot by Abdul-Jabbar and gave the Lakers a 102-98 lead with 51 seconds to go. West delivered the clincher six seconds later with two free throws. Abdul-Jabbar scored for Milwaukee in the final seconds.

The game was tied 17 times and the lead changed hands 13 times until late in the third quarter when the Lakers went six minutes and 40 seconds with only one basket.

The cold spell enabled the Bucks to jump ahead 76-72 as reserve Wally Jones sank a basket and a free throw and set Allen up for a layup. Allen's free throw put the Bucks ahead 77-72 going into the last quarter.

The Bucks still led 96-93 with 2:30 left, but then Jones fouled out and Milwaukee lost its spark. The Bucks had to go with a three-guard offense at the expense of height much of the second half. Their star playmaker, Oscar Robertson, saw only limited action because of a pulled stomach muscle.

Robert E. Lee Wins Amarillo Invitational

Robert E. Lee Junior High won the Amarillo Jr. High Invitational Track Meet Saturday with a total of 85 points. Bonham placed second with 64, Horace Mann was third with 49 and Pampa Junior High was eighth with 20. Nineteen schools were represented at the meet.

This victory marks the first time that Robert E. Lee has ever won a track meet in Amarillo. Lee broke four school records and tied a district record in winning.

The Lee sprint relay team (Tim Thornburg, Greg Beck, Chuck Quarles and Rick Leverich) broke the school record of 46.5 and tied the district record of 45.8 in the preliminaries.

Thornburg broke the old record of 54.4 in the 440-yard dash with a time of 53.85 in the finals.

Deanie Lewis set a new school record in the 800-yard dash with a clocking of 2:10.5. The old record was 2:11.1.

Don Campbell set a school record in the 1320-yard run with a 3:40.1 clocking.

Going into the final event of the day Lee was the obvious winner of the meet. In that event, the mile relay, the baton was dropped on the final exchange and the team was disqualified.

Lee and Pampa Junior High travel to Dumas April 29 for the district meet.

Boston 11, Yanks 7

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox turned a record-tying four errors by New York third baseman Rich McKinney into nine unearned runs Saturday and went on to an 11-7 victory over the Yankees.

The four errors tied an American League record for third basemen held jointly by 17 other players, the last Detroit's Steve Boros on July 23, 1962.

McKinney booted grounders by Danny Cater and Doug Griffin in the first inning as the Red Sox scored six runs off Fritz Peterson, five of them unearned. The key Boston hit was a two-run double by pitcher Sonny Siebert.

McKinney, who came to the Yankees in a trade with the Chicago White Sox last winter, again booted a Cater grounder in the second, allowing another run to score. His error on Rico Petrocelli's ground ball in the sixth inning with the bases loaded let in two more runs and set up a third.

McKinney did not let his fielding miscues affect his hitting. He had three hits, including a solo home run in the fourth. The Yankees, who scored single runs in the second, third and sixth, added three in the eighth after loading the bases off Siebert with none out.

GOOD FOR KICKS

Tom Dempsey, who was released by the New Orleans Saints but found a home in Philadelphia, had the best performance among National Football League field goal kickers last season, hitting on 12 of 17 tries for a .706 percentage. Garo Yepremian of the Miami Dolphins led the American Conference with a .700 mark, hitting 28 of 40 tries. Curt Knight of Washington tried the most field goals in the NFL, 49 (tying a league record) and also made the most, 29.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Joe Coleman lost a no-hitter in the seventh inning but rode a 13-hit Detroit attack that gave the Tigers an 8-2 victory and ruined the Milwaukee Brewers' home opener Saturday.

John Briggs broke up Coleman's no-hitter as the Brewers' leadoff batter in the seventh with a single to deep short. Joe Lahoud followed with a line drive home run to right, his first of the season.

Norm Cash drove in three runs for the Tigers with a pair of singles and Dick McAuliffe, Gates Brown, Aurelio Rodriguez and Ed Brinkman pounded out doubles.

Coleman went seven innings, allowing two runs and two hits. Fred Schermann took over in the eighth and finished up.

Indians 9, Birds 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Buddy Bell's first major-league home run, a grand slam, led the Cleveland Indians to a 9-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Bell, 21, son of former National league outfielder Gus Bell, delivered in the seventh inning, during which Cleveland sent 10 batters to the plate and scored five runs. Bell's homer was the third of the game by the Indians and gave him five runs batted in.

The others were hit by Ray Fosse and Alex Johnson.

Johnson's homer, a two-run smash, followed rookie John Brohamer's single in the fifth. When Fosse doubled two outs later, Jim Palmer was removed.

DETROIT 8, MIL 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Joe Coleman lost a no-hitter in the seventh inning but rode a 13-hit Detroit attack that gave the Tigers an 8-2 victory and ruined the Milwaukee Brewers' home opener Saturday.

TOHILL REMAINS CONSERVATIVE AS TEXAS CHRISTIAN MENTOR

FORT WORTH (AP)—Since Dutch Meyer retired the spread formation, conservatism has been as much a part of Texas Christian football as purple jumpers. Billy Tohill doesn't expect to change, either, going into the 1972 season.

He is sold on the wishbone offense, as a mode of time-consuming, ball-control travel. Tohill's only excesses are toward defense tactics who will flat charge "and stick that hat in your jaw."

Painful as it might seem, that is a good position to start. The Frogs have some hard-hats up front, such as 255-pound junior Charlie Davis, the most impressive player in the Frogs' recently completed spring bi-ouche.

"Davis is a heckuva player," Tohill marvels. "If anyone in the conference shows me a better one, then he's a super player." Senior Ken Steel and sophomore Tommy Van Wart, 245 and 250 respectively, form what Tohill believes will be a highly competitive front.

Backing them will be one of the most talked-about new middle linebackers in the league, 235-pound Dedrick Terveen. Assistant coach Tommy Runnels describes Terveen in the same awe as he would an enemy tank force coming over the next hill.

"He doesn't like to have to chase ballcarriers," says Runnels. "If he does he hurts 'em when he catches 'em. If he meets 'em head-on though, he's likely to kill 'em."

Tohill's secondary, he says confidently, is in the capable, veteran hands of Lyle Blackwood, an all-SWC performer last year. David McGinnis and Harold Muckerroy, "they're consistent and that's what you need back there," Tohill said.

Other than Van Wart and Terveen, another new sophomore is likely to crack the defensive starting alignment in the Sept. 23 opener at Indiana—rover Chad Utley.

Now about that offense. Basically, Tohill will deploy in a wishbone. But the Frogs also will be well rehearsed in a proI formation. Tohill says that means "pass."

"If it's third-and-18, everybody in the stadium knows you're gonna pass anyway," he said. "So you might as well get in a formation you can throw 20 yards."

So, like any other wishbone coach, Tohill knows he has to have a quarterback with hands

Evar Swanson Runs into Posterity

The Fastest Man in Baseball History

MICKEY RIVERS of the California Angels, above, tried his best in a pre-game exhibition last year but he couldn't beat the all-time base-circling record set by Evar Swanson. Swanson, who set the record as a Cincinnati Red in 1929, later went on to play with the Chicago White Sox, where he twice earned the trophy as the fastest player in baseball awarded by comedian Joe E. Brown. He receives the 1934 trophy from Brown at right.

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—No one in recorded time has ever circled the bases faster than Evar Swanson. He did it in 1929.

In a contest with official AAU timers, Swanson, then the winged left fielder of the Cincinnati Reds, circled the bases in 13.3 seconds.

Last year Mickey Rivers of the California Angels, reputed to be the fastest runner in baseball, tried his luck before a game and was timed in the 360-foot distance in 14.3, a full second off.

It is true that someone somewhere might have run out an inside-the-park homer in faster time. But in no instance was that man clocked. Swanson's mark has stood since he broke the record of 13.3 set by Hans Lobert earlier in 1929.

In those earlier days, various field contests, such as foot races, fungo-hitting, homer-hitting, bunt-and-run to first base, and catchers hitting into overturned barrels at second base, were held before games and between doubleheaders.

Between games of the Red Sox-Boston Braves doubleheader on Sept. 15, 1929, a circle-the-bases contest was held. Swanson raced two other fellows against the clock. He started in a sprinter's crouch behind home plate.

Swanson beat the record and collected $75 prize.

Contests of this nature began to wane in the 1930s. No one really knows why it happened. Perhaps for the same reason that sprints, especially, are rarely held any longer. Players and managers are fearful of having a pulled muscle deter the race for a pennant.

"Also," said Swanson, now the 71-year-old postmaster of Galesburg, Ill., "players don't want to put their reputations on the line. I think."

"We did it for pride. And we did it for the money, too. Seventy-five dollars was pretty good in those days. I mean, the most I ever made in one season was $8,500 in salary. But the money these fellows make today—Good Lord, why should they risk anything in a contest?"

Periodically, though, contests do come up. For example, in 1948, Sam Jethroe, then with the Montreal minor league baseball club, raced Barney Ewell, 200-meter Olympic champion.

Jethroe beat him in a 200-meter race.

In 1957, Glen Gorbous of Omaha in the American Association threw a baseball 445 feet, 10 inches, after a six-step running start.

Circling the bases, however, is more of an art than a gimmick. Swanson says that speed is not the sole criterion. "You've got to hit the bases just right and not take big turns."

Rivers learned this. He took two wide turns at first and second.

Why did Rivers try it? It had been suggested by a fan in Florida who knew of Swanson's mark. The fan thought that Rivers, above all baseball runners today, could challenge it. The Angels front office was not adverse to some added drawing card. The Angels were far out of the pennant race.

Swanson, whose closest challenger was swift George Case of the Senators who ran the bases in 13.5 in 1943, had a short career. He played five seasons, hitting for a combined .303 average, but hurt his throwing arm and had to retire.

Bouton Wants To Play Ball

WYCKOFF, N.J. (AP)—Jim Bouton left major league baseball with a knuckleball that didn't knuckle and a book that made the best-seller list. Now, he says, he wants to play ball again.

Bouton, a sportscaster with WABC-TV in New York has asked for a leave of absence in order to try out with Pittsfield, a Class AA team in the Eastern League, and also to run for a delegate's post representing George McGovern in the New Jersey Democratic presidential primary election.

The 33-year-old right-hander was placed on the voluntary retired list by the Houston Astros in August 1970. His retirement followed by a year the publication of "Ball Four," which told of his experiences during a season in which he played with the Seattle Pilots, Houston and a minor league team.

The book was the subject of much controversy because of Bouton's stories of player behavior off the field, especially in his early career with the New York Yankees, a team for which he won 20 games in one season.

To return to organized baseball, Bouton must receive his outright release from Houston and pass waivers in both leagues.

Harvester Baseballers Downed By Caprock

The Caprock Longhorns got to Pampa pitcher Larry Knutson for three hits and three runs in the top of the first inning Friday and the Harvesters, were never able to get them back as they sustained their fourth district loss by the score of 3-1.

After the first frame Knutson settled down and pitched well, but lack of hitting on the part of his team-mates kept Pampa from ever really mounting a threat.

A great deal of the blame for that can be laid at the feet of Caprock pitcher Val Morin, who is now 8-2 on the year. Morin gave up only five hits, struck out nine and walked none in gaining the victory.

Pampa hit the ball into the field on 19 occasions but most of the time there was a Longhorn in position to make the play for the out. Pampa got men on base nine times, four of those by dint of Caprock errors, but were able to get only one man around to home plate.

Bill Simon reached second base in the third when Caprock outfielder Vic Ellyson dropped the ball while attempting a fairly routine catch. Marsh Gamblin singled into right-center to drive in the Harvester's only run.

After what turned out to be a disastrous first inning, Knutson allowed only one more hit while striking out 11 and walking just three.

The Harvesters' next game will be in Amarillo Tuesday at 4:00 against the Tascosa Rebels.

While the Harvesters are out of the district race, the game against the Rebels and the one Friday against league leading PAMPA

"Let's Hold the Line on Taxes and Spending"

"No, I don't support a state income tax. There are too many ways to save money in government available to us. We can get more for our money than we're getting now, and do more with the tax dollar than we're doing now, so it's not necessary to place additional tax burdens on our people yet. We just have to stop the waste."

Golfer Is No Better Than Mastery Of Self

A golfer is no better than his mastery of self, the founder of California's Esalen institute contends.

Michael Murphy's assertion is made in the medium of "fiction," and it appears condensed in the current issue of "Intellectual Digest," rather than "Golf Digest."

But his forthcoming book, "Golf in the Kingdom" about his physical and metaphysical experiences in Scotland, where he was introduced into the deeper mysteries of the game in "The Kingdom" by the North Sea, makes for enchanting, and instructive reading for golfers.

As the head of the world-famed Esalen, to which thousands of Americans seeking self-mastery flock each year, one expects Murphy to view the sport from the psychological. But the Viking mess, which will publish the entire work shortly, apparently regards "Golf in the Kingdom" as breath-taking literature, as well as psychological instruction.

Murphy's journey to the mythical "Links of Burningbush" near the Firth of Forth where he met the equally mythical golf teacher-philosopher Shivas Irons, provides the Esalen director with an opportunity to disseminate his loosen up and live" gospel in the terms of goldfom. As Shivas instructs Murphy:

"In gowf ye see the essence of what the world itself demands. Inclusion of all our parts, alignment o' them all with one another and with the club and with the ball, with the land we play on and with our playin' partners.

"The game is a mighty teacher, a good stage for the drama o' our self-discovery...that as ye grow in gowf, ye'll come to see the things ye learn there in every other place. Ye'll come away from the links with a new hold on life, that is certain if ye play the game with all your heart."

A vital part of the game's philosophy is the rejection of the rule-book mechanics and the intellectual in favor of the sensory, feeling approach, to play "gowf" as one would if "we would e'er ken the world from the inside," Shivas emphasizes.

To play, employing "true gravity," Shivas says is to play as man can by approaching golf "not through squeezin' it and shovin' it the way they do in the universities and laboratories."

He continues, "Ye must go into the heart o' it, through yer own body and senses and livin' experience. Ye see, Michael, merely shootin' par is second best. Goin' for results like that leads men and cultures and entire worlds astray. But if ye do it from the inside ye get the results eventually and everythin' else along with it."

Golf philosophy and the philosophy of the modern-day "group therapy" advocates come together on many points, but especially in the respect for concentration.

Just as individuals seeking self-mastery at Esalen are told to concentrate on whatever is being said or felt, and to concentrate upon, and understand, their own feelings, so Murphy writes in his book of how the mythical pro, Shivas, "addressed the ball briefly, but during that moment all his attention came to awesome focus. Like Ben Hogan, he seemed to peer into its very center and summon a secret strength."

When one concentrates and plays from the deepest, inner self, loose and free, Murphy suggests, spiritual and para-psychological forces inspire the golfer's play. As Shivas teaches Murphy how to open up, Murphy writes, "I became more and more aware of the feeling of the game."

Striving to find the feeling of "true gravity," Murphy writes, "I tried it for three or four shots but nothing happened until the ninth hole. It wasn't much, just the glimpse of a yellow light around a sea gull. As I was driving on the tenth it happened again, a tiny aura around the ball, a violet one this time. When I hit the ball I hit the 'sweet spot.'"

"Murphy, from his state of grace, asserted that Shivas believed 'my state of mind (when I played) was reflected in an aura around me. 'Your energy was good that time.' Shivas would inform him.

Once Murphy had imbibed the Shivas philosophy, he found his game had improved spectacularly: "I played the remaining holes in this state of grace. Specters of former attitudes passed through me, familiar curses and excuses, memories of old shots, all the flotsam and jetsam of my golfing unconscious—but a quiet field of energy held me and washed them away. I can think of no better way to say it—those final holes played me."

Again and again, Murphy is cautioned about allowing his intellect to foul up his natural, intuitive golf-style. Just when he is playing well, he begins having doubts and Shivas reproaches him in a fatherly tone. "They're two Michaels, I can see: Michael the plunger and Michael the doubter. What a shame it is that ye canna' even go five minutes heer without yer good skeptical mind intrudin'. Yer good skeptical mind, that's a problem for ye."

Just as many a psychologist might tell his patient he can vanquish his self-doubts, Shivas informs Murphy to take the direct, no-doubt approach to each swing. "There's nae better way to kill a dragon than to charge right up to it and shove a spear down its throat."

When thousands of golf players bumble on mechanistic. Error, Murphy writes, the game, and the physical "aura" surrounding it, are diminished. One character in "Golf in the Kingdom" remarks: "For every theory ye propose about the improvement o' the game, I'll show ye how the game is fadin' away, losin' its old charm, becomin' mechanized by the Americans and the rest o' the world that blindly follows them.

"Look at the crowded links, the lack o' leisure, the hurried startin' times, the ruination o' the old clubs where ye could gather with your friends and enjoy some good conversation. Where's the evolution in all o' that now, I ask ye?"

The speaker, a doctor, and a voice reminiscent of today's progressive psychologists and therapists, continues, "I want to tell ye tha' the language o' the body says, help! help! help! There is no apparent increase o' longevity, health, happiness or digestin' in the world as far as I can see."

"Gowf reflects all this. I see the distorted swings, the hurried rounds and now the electric carts ta' ruin the courses and rob us of our exercise. And the configuration o' physique that shows me how our twisted lives twist our bodies. We have got off the mark, gone for the wrong things, forgotten what it's all about, gotten ourself hypnotized by silly people."

"The 'Golfer' who can avoid the hurly-burly on the links, who can master himself and his game, is ripe for the higher experience of playing with other men who have done the same."

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban butcher Orlando Pena headed north in 1955 to pitch baseball for the Yankee dollar. He made his debut with the Daytona Beach Islanders... in the belly of the bush leagues.

Seventeen seasons later, he's back. "My teammates are 19 and 20 years old," grinned the Miami Orioles aging veteran. "They call me Poppa. But they know Poppa can still pitch pretty good."

The 37-year-old Pena pitched in the big leagues for nine years at Kansas City, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Baltimore. When it was over, he returned to the Florida State League.

Pena recalled pitching batting practice for the Havana team in the International League in 1957. Rocky Nelson, a legendary minor league slugger, became angry when Orlando made him look silly with off-speed pitches.

"He threw the damn bat at me. That's the way veterans treated kids in those days. I hope I can pitch forever, whether I'm in the majors or in the bush leagues. I love baseball that much. But, I admit I like the Florida State League better the second time around."

Pena played for four teams... all four won titles. He helped Miami bag a third straight FSL crown, did his five-game deed for Baltimore, appeared in 11 games for Rochester's winners of the Little World Series and then was on a championship club in the Venezuelan winter league.

Pena's No. 1 pitch is a forkball, thrown at varied speeds and angeles. He shows the 17 years of smartness, Orlando had a 9-4 record with Miami in 1971 with an incredible 0.70 earned run average.

Pena's major league record was not-so-sparkling 46-68, but most was spent with second division teams and Orlando was often used as a relief pitcher.

He says the Florida State League—the bush league bookends to his career, has changed greatly since 1955.

"Players are much better, probably because of improved high school and college coaching. You don't fool them. They also communicate better...with the manager and older players."

He says the Florida State League—the bush league bookends to his career, has changed greatly since 1955.

"Players are much better, probably because of improved high school and college coaching. You don't fool them. They also communicate better...with the manager and older players."

"I go to sleep every night believing I still have a chance to get back in the majors," he said. "My arm is still sound, my head is sound and I always listen for the phone to ring."

Pena hurled in a Baltimore uniform as late as last season, appearing in five games at mid-season when the Oriole staff needed help.

"For that, I got $3,400 in World Series money from Baltimore and a diamond ring for helping the Orioles win the American League championship. In 1972, everywhere I went I won."

Pena played for four teams... all four won titles. He helped Miami bag a third straight FSL crown, did his five-game deed for Baltimore, appeared in 11 games for Rochester's winners of the Little World Series and then was on a championship club in the Venezuelan winter league.

Pena's No. 1 pitch is a forkball, thrown at varied speeds and angeles. He shows the 17 years of smartness, Orlando had a 9-4 record with Miami in 1971 with an incredible 0.70 earned run average.

Pena's major league record was not-so-sparkling 46-68, but most was spent with second division teams and Orlando was often used as a relief pitcher.

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban butcher Orlando Pena headed north in 1955 to pitch baseball for the Yankee dollar. He made his debut with the Daytona Beach Islanders... in the belly of the bush leagues.

Seventeen seasons later, he's back. "My teammates are 19 and 20 years old," grinned the Miami Orioles aging veteran. "They call me Poppa. But they know Poppa can still pitch pretty good."

The 37-year-old Pena pitched in the big leagues for nine years at Kansas City, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Baltimore. When it was over, he returned to the Florida State League.

Pena recalled pitching batting practice for the Havana team in the International League in 1957. Rocky Nelson, a legendary minor league slugger, became angry when Orlando made him look silly with off-speed pitches.

"He threw the damn bat at me. That's the way veterans treated kids in those days. I hope I can pitch forever, whether I'm in the majors or in the bush leagues. I love baseball that much. But, I admit I like the Florida State League better the second time around."

Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Higgins of Hominy, Okla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathleen Ann, to Donald Jay Losher Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Losher, 1821 Fir. An August wedding is planned in the First Presbyterian Church of Pampa. The bride-elect, a graduate of Hominy High School, is a sophomore student, majoring in English, at the University of Tulsa. She is a National Presbyterian Scholar and a University Scholar at TU. The prospective bridegroom, a graduate of Pampa High School, is a junior student, majoring in religion and philosophy, at the University of Tulsa, with plans to enter the ministry. He is the recipient of a Cabot scholarship and is a University Scholar at TU.

Attracting Birds To Gardens Told

Birds prefer cover and tangles, a contrast to tidy, orderly gardens, stated Mrs. Bert Robinson in her speech, entitled, "Birds in My Garden," at a recent meeting of the Pampa Garden Club. Quoting from experience and research, including "The Hungry Bird Book" by Robert Arbib and Tony Soper, Mrs. Robinson stated that in planning landscaping to include a bird sanctuary, one should plant evergreens, which provide the best nesting places, and seed and fruit bearing plants, such as the mulberry, a favorite of birds. Putting out seed, food crumbs, and water daily is also an aid in attracting birds.

"In foregoing some tidiness to attract birds, the gardener is rewarded with song, beauty, and the riddance of many harmful insects," she stated. Slide pictures showing the most common of the approximately 1400 known species of birds in America were shown for identification by members.

The second part of the program, given by Mrs. Thelma Bray, was on making perfumed rose jars. Tips for collecting rose petals for drying included selecting from bushes in the most sunny and protected areas and collecting before high sun and not after a rain. After drying the petals in a darkened area, a fragrance fixative, such as one-tablespoon oforris root per quart of rose petals, must be added to aid in retaining the natural fragrance, she explained. As some roses don't retain a fragrance and others may need additional fragrance, spices, fruit peelings, and oils can be added. Mrs. Bray presented sampler of recipes she had composed.

"Airborne Objects" Bring Back Childhood Memories

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Locking backward into my childhood becomes more and more difficult as I grow older, as it does for most of us.

But there are those fleeting moments when a familiar sight or sound or smell transports me to yesteryear with a feeling of exhilaration I seldom experience these days. Such was the case on a recent warm spring afternoon as gusty winds sang through the trees around our house and the clothes on a neighbor's backyard line cracked whiplike in the breezes.

I was looking for some greenish hint of the season among the matted brown grass when from the vacant lot down the street there appeared silhouetted against the fluffy white clouds some brightly colored objects soaring high into the air.

In the few brief moments it took my memory to recall the image of a small boy standing in an open field tugging on a thin white string that trailed off into the sky, my two young sons also noticed the airborne objects.

Off to the corner variety store, where I discovered that the kite—once a 15-cent toy—has changed considerably.

No longer are they made of tissue thin paper and brittle wooden sticks. Today, thanks to modern science, a trash-bag-thick film of gaudy plastic is stretched over a frame of pencil-thick plastic rods.

Gone too is the cotton string that often proved no match for the stiff April winds. In its place are balls of stranded nylon twine with labels proudly declaring the product's superior tensile strength.

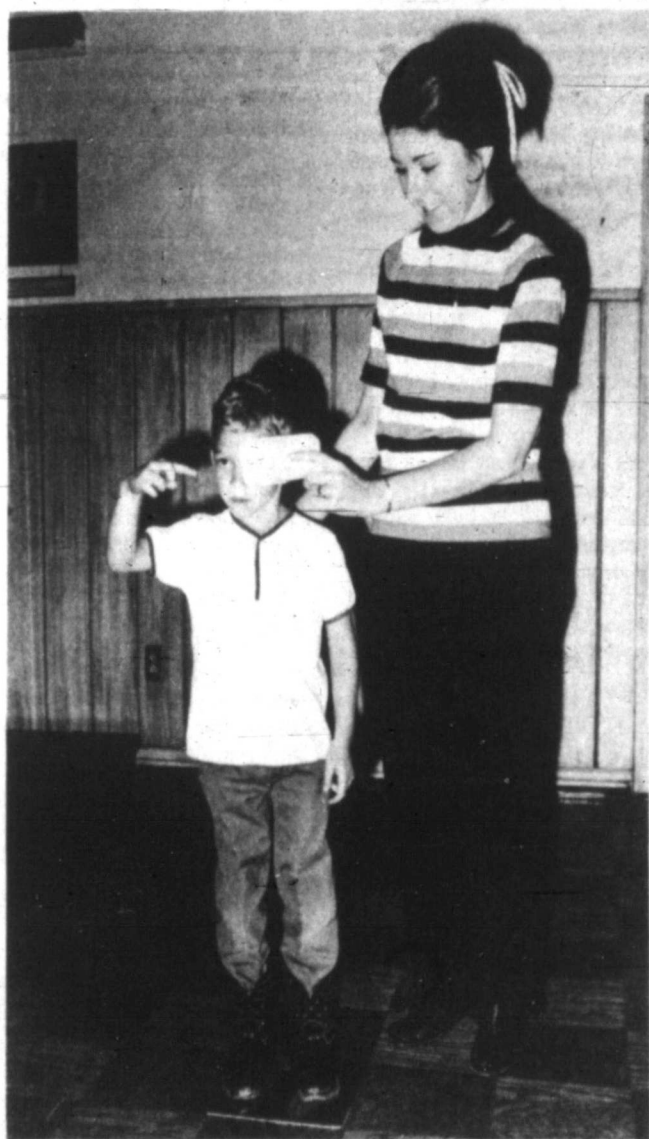

Most alarming was the inflationary impact on my childhood toy. Once you could buy many afternoons of entertainment and thrills for the better part of a quarter.

Alas, those days are gone forever, and I plunked down $3 to arm my sons with the latest in aerodynamic design, strength and maneuverability. From the label I learned that strips of multicolored cloth tied painstakingly in streamer fashion as a tail to stabilize the diamond-shaped bird was a thing of the past. The newest models resemble giant hawks in flight and I cringed as one of the boys chose one vividly imprinted with two huge bloodshot eyes that stared down at you from on high.

Despite the changes wrought by times and the economy, I quickly found that becoming a child again is not as difficult as I had thought.

I craned my neck toward the bright sky and tugged with a secret thrill against the string as it slipped through my fingers and arched into the clouds.

Jarred to reality by the tugging at my pants' leg and the whimpering of my youngest offspring, whose string was hopelessly tangled in a nearby tree, I smiled and hugged him as an older and wiser parent had once done with me.

THE "E" GAME—Keith Faught, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Faught, 1000 S. Sumner, plays the "E" game with Mrs. J.C. Beyer, 2717 Comache, as Mrs. Beyer practices for the Junior Service League Speech, Hearing and Vision Clinic, to be held Monday in the First Christian Church. Speech, Vision, Hearing Clinic Slated For Monday

Think an eye test can be fun? Not for older folks, perhaps. But for pre-school tots who learn the "E" game, complete with "magic shoes" and a topsy-turvy "table", an eye test can be a happy adventure in growing up healthy. Make sure your child has this important opportunity. "It is not too late for your child to be tested free at the Speech, Hearing, and Vision Clinic sponsored by Junior Service League," said Mrs. Robert Cotter, clinic chairman. Children without appointments may come for testing in the afternoon. The clinic scheduled for Monday, will be held at the First Christian Church, 18th and N. Nelson. The clinic is open to all children in Pampa who will enter first grade in the fall of 1972," said Mrs. Cotter. Junior Service League volunteers trained by the Texas Society for the Prevention of Blindness and a professional staff from the Amarillo's Speech and Hearing Center will check children.

All those ice cold beers leave his wife cold, too

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband folded the newspaper just right to be sure I read your column about the "cold wife." We both read your column faithfully, so now I am writing you a letter which I hope you'll print so I can fold the paper just right for HIM to read:

I am turned off in the bedroom because my husband smells like a brewery every night. I wouldn't begrudge him one or two beers to unwind every night, but Abby, he can drink 9 or 10!

The sour mash smell just gets me. I've even tried drinking a beer or two with him so I wouldn't smell it on him, but then I started thinking how we must smell to our children. Also, the beer started putting weight on me, so I quit.

My husband is a very intelligent man and he's fun to be with, but not when he's drinking. Maybe if he sees this in black and white he will realize what his beer is doing to our marriage. How come beer drinkers don't think they have a problem? UP TO HERE IN SEATTLE

DEAR UP: Because they never multiply the alcoholic content of each bottle of beer by the number of bottles they consume.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from "HURRICANE NANCY." She was mad because all the hurricanes are named after women.

Have you ever heard of a "himmicane?" SMARTYPANTS

DEAR SMARTYPANTS, No. But that could be next on the list, come the feminist revolution.

DEAR ABBY: Anybody who writes an unsolicited letter announcing how "well adjusted" he is, in my opinion, is not well adjusted.

I refer to that Ph.D. who says unlike most of his contemporaries, he still kisses his parents, respects and shares their values, and enjoys living at home. Then he challenges the Freudians to tell him what's wrong with him.

My 25-year-old son and I have identical values; this is why his 10 or 12 weekends at home are such a joy. It has nothing to do with values. Differences in tastes, habits, work patterns, recreation, etc., is the issue. Should those of a man in his mid-20s and those of a woman nearing 60 be the same?

Before one can be an effective wage earner, husband, father or citizen, he must be a person in his own right, responsible for himself with an identity of his own. This identity is established by having one's own dwelling, cooking one's own meals, remembering to send out his own laundry as well as deciding whom to entertain and how, and deciding upon what direction his life shall take. The man who moves from Mummy's house to Wife's has never achieved this side of his identity.

If the mother of our young Ph.D. really loves her son, she will kick him out. And Freud has nothing to do with it. MOTHER

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to you saying her brother was not hired for jobs because he had an arrest record—even though the charges were dropped.

Well, the same applies when a person has at one time been in a psychiatric institution for treatment, even though that person may have entered voluntarily. It is held against them whenever they seek employment. This only serves to discourage anyone who feels he needs psychiatric help from seeking it.

Isn't it a violation of a person's civil rights when he's asked this sort of question in applying for a job? WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: Yes.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90009. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

How to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90009, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, APRIL 24
Your birthday today: Opens a fairly smooth year in which the progress you make comes naturally. The important changes are subtle and realized late. Social and spiritual advance come in accord with your will. Today's natives often deny themselves the easy life in pursuit of special goals. Most of them are innate diplomats.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Expect a stiff start of the workweek, people under stress and reluctant to communicate. Pitch in with your share of the work.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: What appears creative may be merely costly speculation. Today also brings abrupt emotional turns—have patience with moody loved ones.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Demands on your time and attention leave no opportunity to make reasonable comments—what you might say would be taken as criticism.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Favor the regularly scheduled over spontaneous arrangements. Since you are likely to change your opinion more than once, postpone final action.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Money matters are delicately balanced. It may be better to let them stand. Friends and loved ones are full of wild ideas.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Shut nobody out in your search for inner peace. Take the trouble to speak gently of real ties where they exist.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Belated news from travelers or distant contacts present temporary problems, tension which shouldn't be passed on to those near you.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Financial moves based on recent information are risky. Accept a nonresponsive mood in others as a normal phase.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: New business ventures, speculations seem incomplete. Work alone or on routines requiring little cooperation if you can.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19: Interruption of your day's activity shouldn't provoke you to criticize. Your partner can't take it now.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: An economy drive is the most sensible project for today. Many gaps exist in your supply of information.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Endless discussion fills the day to no particular purpose, but no harm done either. Don't make any promises or decisions.

A random sampling of advice to parents includes the admonition to use words that value feelings, responses that change opinions, answers that make for understanding.

Among other things (on a long, long list) a parent is supposed to be kind, patient, admiring, consoling, teaching, sympathetic, realistic, sensible, accurate, astute, intellectual, down-to-earth, rational and fashionable.

He must listen with an attuned ear to complaints, worries, fears, applications for loans, applications for mercy. And all in one day too!

Open in his approach to family management, he must be also generous with allowances, discerning and discreet when questioning the youth of the household.

The perfect parent is open in mind and pocketbook. He is rich in time, never self-righteous, mild in manner, gentle in reproach.

It won't hurt a bit if he's young, athletic, liberal in politics and avant garde in his choice of clothing.

All I'm wondering is, if perhaps, just perhaps—only once in a while maybe—parents should expect a bit of understanding from the children?

I don't believe I'm being anti-child when I call for some response-in-kind.

A chance to talk with my husband alone upon occasion. (I'd settle for 10 minutes on a Saturday morning.)

The opportunity to watch television just once without having someone start playing the piano in the same room.

What I'd really love is being allowed to use the telephone in privacy but I'm not asking that. After all, that's dream stuff.

Relax!

After a hard day on the job, it'll take only a half-hour to get dressed for your big evening. Take a quick shower or bath, put a few rollers in your hair, then lie down with legs propped up and relax. Cover eyes with cold tea bags and unwind from a tedious day. After 20 minutes, splash cold water or skin freshener on your face, change your clothes, apply your make-up and you're ready to go.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY—My answer is for Sandy, who has squeaky shoes. Try a light oil, such as suggested for shavers, sewing machines and cameras. Be careful not to drip it on the shoes' uppers. Oil the EDGE of the SOLE completely from heel to toe and drip a little bit on the arch and on the spot if you know where it is. One or at the most two applications should do it.—PHYLLIS

DEAR POLLY—I think Sandy could stop the squeaking in her shoes by spraying them with an all-purpose silicon lubricant. These may be bought at any auto supply store and have worked beautifully for me.—JEAN

DEAR POLLY—The answer to Sandy's problem of squeaking shoes is an easy one—if you know it. I learned this answer just a few minutes before I was to be escorted down the aisle at my son's wedding. If the shoes are patent leather, just rub a bit of petroleum jelly on the part or parts that squeak. This is usually across the toes where the shoe bends, but I have been told that this also works on the soles. This is an immediate remedy as I well know. It saved a big day for me.—SARAH

Kadingo Lingo

By Jane Kadingo

FINALLY, THEY'VE DONE IT!...They really have! An article came across my desk this week that states the Federal Trade Commission will "offer the American homemaker a cure for mid-summer madness." July 3rd. That's when a new law goes into effect that "makes it mandatory" to have a STITCHED IN LABEL on proper care, such as machine wash, hand wash, etc., in all garments retailing for $3 or more. What a relief! I can now throw away all the "proper care" tags I so carefully have been keeping...I never throw them away! I have a big stack...only I don't know which tag goes with which garment! I guess a lot.

PTA MEMBERS were busy Monday and Tuesday attending their district meeting here in Pampa. Those of you who missed Elaine Ledbetter's speech should be eternally sorry. It was one of those "headshaking" speeches...I shook my head up and down in complete agreement with nearly every statement...and that doesn't happen to me very often. She said what I have been trying to communicate to anyone who will listen...only she said it far better than I. If you missed it, and are curious, the report is on the front page of Tuesday's edition.

A second treat was in store for me when I was able to corner the state president, Jean Harris, following Tuesday's luncheon. I can't say it was an interview. Not being known for keeping my strong views to myself, it was more of an exchange of ideas and opinions on the state of public education today.

I was extremely interested to learn that, statewide, the problem of how to finance public education in Texas, is one of the main concerns of PTA. Mrs. Harris is a member of the 44-member committee, appointed Gus Mutscher, to consider this problem. Being state PTA president Mrs. Harris has asked each unit to submit ideas. Please, ladies, let me know what the Pampa suggestions are. It's great to think we, here in Pampa, will have our ideas, possibly, heard by this committee.

Mrs. Harris and I talked a little about Federal control of education, a fear of many since new funding for education is necessary...actually, I've been told, by a reliable source, that the court case that is causing the change, does not throw out ad valorem taxes; it just necessitates an equal distribution of the money throughout the state...I think. Anyway, Mrs. Harris says the PTA has always been for local control and is hoping for things to stay that way.

Another interesting concern is a volunteer tutor training program for school children...a remedial reading program...Mrs. Harris met with a committee composed of representatives of various agencies about this program, with another meeting scheduled in May.

Knit Knacks

Dear Judy — Knitting has always been fun and relaxing for me until now. I'm simply not having a good time with this venture. It's a cable knit and while I'm working the cables, I get lost — must be something wrong with my counting. Any suggestions for a lady who's got her cables inside out? — K. A., Old Tappan, N.J.

Dear K. A. — You were right about the counting being the cause of your problem, but the solution is a simple one. When you're working your cables, unless your directions specifically tell you to do otherwise, start your row count like this, and you shouldn't have any problems:

The purled or wrong side of work, count as row one. This will insure that all the odd numbered rows come out on the wrong side and therefore the even numbered rows on the right side of your work. You'll get less confused with this method.

NEW DANCE PROJECT

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dance Notation Bureau, aided by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, is training 10 "reconstructors," people with ability to recreate and direct dance scores written in Labanotation.

Labanotation is said to be the most accurate system for recording dance.

The project began early in 1971. The works were offered to dance companies for a nominal fee.

Mrs. Harris talked about education on a national scale and said the PTA may recommend the President appoint a Secretary of Education with cabinet-level status, giving the emphasis that is really due to the importance of the education of our children. She is a great lady. I enjoyed our visit very immensely.

OUR FAMILY of kittens have been named. There is Star, named for no other reason than "we wanted to." Pee Wee WAS the runt, but being the greatest fatten, he is fast becoming the fattest. Snowball is so-named because she's nearly white...a yellowish white, but who is going to quibble over an "almost" Lastly, there is Oddball, whose psyche may be forever warped by the name. However, since he can't see himself, he may not notice that with two yellow siblings and one almost-white, his gray color is a little "oddball."

BLONDIE, our thriving duck, may get re-named. His "tufts" over his "ears," give him a much-older appearance. The children think he looks more like "grandpa" than a "blondie," and he really does. Blondie was the topic of another intellectual table conversation this week.

Mother: Has Blondie started to quack yet?

John: He still cheeps.

Nickita: It's getting hoarser though.

Anne: it's getting "Quackier."

I keep having a nagging thought in the back of my mind that he may have been left in the pen next to the chickens too long.

I LOVE TO SEE young people exert their creativity in any area, but especially in writing. Tressa Ford, 14, daughter of Wanda and William Ford, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ford and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Honaker, wrote a poem to her brother who is in the Air Force. Here's what she wrote.

HELLO AND GOODBYE

Well, brother, I hope this ain't 'bye.

Are you home to stay.

Or do you have to fly

Like a bird when it's time to go his way?

It seems like yesterday that we said "hello."

I know you have to fly to Shaw Air Force Base.

So say "hello" to the fellows.

And maybe next time we will have

More time to talk face to face.

So always remember, wherever you may go.

Our hearts will follow.

And we love and miss you so.

Madame Pompadour's Life Told To Cotillion Members

Mrs. Jack White presented the program on Madame Pompadour at the meeting of Twentieth Century Cotillion Study Club in the home of Mrs. Gene Hanks, 2517 Mary Ellen.

She told the women Madame Pompadour, christened Jeanne-Antoinette Poisson, was an accomplished woman, whose worldly education left nothing to be desired.

"She could act, dance, and sing," she related. "She could recite whole plays by heart; she played the clavichord to perfection; she was an enthusiastic gardener and botanist and knew all about the wonderful shrubs that were pouring into France from every quarter of the globe; she loved natural history and collected rare and exotic birds. Her handwriting, curiously modern, was both beautiful and legible. She painted, drew, and engraved precious stones. She was a superlative housekeeper. More important, perhaps, she was reared among people of excellent taste, who had knowledge of and a respect for art in all its forms. She profited in later life from this example."

Mrs. White explained Madame Pompadour married Charles-Guillaume le Normant d'Elieules in 1741, when she was 19 years old and her husband was 24.

Mrs. White told the women King Louis XV was bored and disenchanted by his wife, who bore him 10 children, but who was "dowdy" and "a bore." After a string of mistresses, he chose Jeanne-Antoinette as his mistress, a position she held for 20 years.

"He was enthralled by her charms and her enumerable projects," Mrs. White told the women. "Her cheerfulness and cleverness kept him in the palm of her hand. He gave her the title of Marquise de Pompadour. She was party to almost every grace the King granted, so that her court was as important as that of a prime minister. She had great power over the king, a power she had to defend ceaselessly against the snubs of the royal family and venomous attacks of her own enemies. She never ceased to suffer from her false position."

Mrs. White told of how Madame Pompadour bought or built houses, altered, decorated and surrounded them with beautiful gardens; she related how all the royal gardens were reorganized under her supervision.

"At the big palaces, the king's private rooms were always being redecorated: furniture, pictures, statues, vases and bibelots were chosen and ordered; rare materials were brought from all over the world to be mounted in gold, bronze or silver; roof gardens and aviaries were filled with curious plants, birds and beast. She was, for about 20 years, the artistic dictator whom France and all Europe praised. On these various building projects, she spent a total of nearly 250 billion dollars."

In 1752, King Louis XV made her a duchess, the greatest favor he could bestow on her, she stated, adding that when Madame Pompadour died April 15, 1766, the king cried as he watched her funeral cortege: "What remains of the woman who cost France so much in men and in money, left without honor and without energy, and who overthrew the whole political system of Europe?" Mrs. White asked. "The Treaty of Versailles; Boucharon's 'Armour'; a few stones engraved by Guay which will amaze the antiquaries of the future; and a nice little picture by Van Loo, which people will look at sometimes."

Mrs. Ben Sturgeon led the business session, during which plans were made for the annual Spring luncheon, to be held May 2, at the Pampa Country Club. Members were asked to think of a topic for study next year.

There is a Wall Street saying that the Bull gets a little, the Bear gets a little and the Hog gets nothing.

East was a hog. He decided to double four spades because he thought that South was defending not bidding to make.

He was right about that. When West opened the three of clubs there was a nice set for the taking. All East had to do was to take his ace of clubs; give his partner a club ruff and hope that his partner would underlead the ace of hearts. East would take his queen; give West another club ruff; get in with the king of hearts and lead the five of diamonds.

The defense would have five tricks in and would be sure of a sixth. Furthermore, if South made the mistake of playing a low diamond West would be able to give East a ruff and be set four tricks.

All this nice profit was waiting there for a modest individual but East was a hog. He wanted to slaughter South and decided to go after a cross-ruff.

East returned his five of diamonds.

South didn't say thank you but he was mighty happy. He went right up with the ace of diamonds; drew trumps and proceeded to discard one heart on dummy's fourth club. Then he spread his hand conceding one heart and one diamond.

Cardin's Styles For Men Called "Irresistibly Sexy"

PARIS — (NEA) — Pierre Cardin is undoubtedly the most prolific designer on the Paris fashion scene—and the only one who thinks in terms of the year 2000.

Always several jumps ahead of his colleagues, he recently showed his 1973 collection for men. A bewildering, irresistibly sexy succession of clothes for all occasions and beamed at all walks of life. His collection had appeal for the young but he also kept an eye on the business executive. He himself is a most conservative dresser. But his new "Apollo Line 1972-1973" aims to make the average man look like a cross between a romantic of the Henry James era and a Greek god.

It was, after all, Pierre Cardin who created the first jersey suit without an inch of stiffening. The first to launch the turtleneck shirt for evening, sans studs, buttons or cuff links, which in less than no time was adopted all over the world by the young and the not so young.

The Cardin silhouette of the future stresses ultrawide stiffened shoulders standing away from the arms—in sleeveless blousons. Hips are very slim with trouser tops built well above the waist. His male models are all athletic young men who prance along the cat walk, seeming to enjoy every moment of the production.

Some of his designs could easily be interchangeable—"His and Hers." Take for instance the soft, floppy romantic satin shirts with very full cuff sleeves, and front openings sometimes plunging to the waist. Or the softly sashed tunics, worn with satin or lightweight jersey pants. They would be equally becoming to Madame.

Sports wear showed "pop" pants, always in jersey, trimmed with a wide band of color on the seam, or cuffs hemmed in three different colors, or again, a futuristic motif.

Cardin long ago sensed the yen of the young for colorful clothes, wacky ideas which were fun to wear. Imagine a huge Havana-brown torso top over a pair of bright red or green boxer shorts? His sweaters fit like the paper on the wall.

The business executive is well taken care of chez Cardin with tailored suits which show the new widened shoulder line and lapels.

Attorney Outlines Proposal Establishing Educational Priorities

A "mis-match" between educational programs and career opportunities is affecting the relationship between the market demand for and the supply of college graduates, says Wayne E. Thomas of Hereford, chairman of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System. Thomas spoke at noon Saturday to the annual Panhandle Press Association meeting in Amarillo.

The Hereford attorney outlined a proposal for action designed to "match the goals of higher education with the changing needs of individuals and society."

Thomas, who was appointed to the 18-member Coordinating Board in 1969, has served as its chairman since February 1971. The Coordinating Board oversees the growth and development of the Texas system of higher education, which now includes 25 public senior, 48 public community colleges, 50 private institutions and almost 476,000 students.

The Board chairman cited a recent report from the U.S. Department of Labor as being just one of the "danger signals" of the widening gap between educational programs available and the occupational needs of individuals in today's society.

Pioneer Days Will Honor Early Settlers

GUYMON—Residents of the "No-Man's Land" area for 55, 65 and 75 years will be honored during the 42nd annual Pioneer Days of No-Man's Land May 6.

The celebration is held the first weekend in May each year to honor the early day settlers of the area, and to commemorate the signing of the Organic Act on May 2, 1890, which made what was then No-Man's Land a part of the Oklahoma Territory.

Festivities and special events honoring the old-timers will get under way with a Saturday morning sun-up breakfast on the Ideal Food Store parking lot at Tenth and Main Streets.

The chuck wagon breakfast, featuring sourdough biscuits, bacon, eggs, and black bucket coffee, is sponsored by the Guymon Ideal Food Store. The public is invited to this free breakfast. Old-timers are served first.

Registration of old-timers will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday on the first floor of the Texas County Court House at Fourth and Main Streets in Guymon.

Ribbons will be presented to 55 and 65 year Pioneers and special ribbons will be presented to those who have been residents of the area 75 years or more. Seventy-five year residents will be admitted free to both performances of the RCA Rodeo Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m. The Entre Nous Club of Guymon will provide coffee during the registration period.

The Old-timers will have a special area reserved where they will view the Pioneer Days Parade, scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. Saturday. The parade route will bring the parade in front of the reserved area at the courthouse for the benefit of the old-timers.

Over Million Summer Jobs For Young People Available

Congressman Bob Price announced that over a million summer job opportunities will be available this year for 14 to 21 year olds throughout the United States. These jobs will cost the federal government $340 million—a record amount.

Federal programs will provide 736,400 jobs. In addition, 336,100 jobs have been pledged by private sector business and industry. Some 1.9 million summer recreation and youth sports opportunities are also planned.

Federally supported summer job opportunities will be derived from a number of programs including Neighborhood Youth Corps, Youth Conservation Corps, Federal Summer Employment Program for Youth, and the Public Employment Program.

Neighborhood Youth Corps programs planned for the Northwest Texas area include those sponsored by the:

Texas Panhandle Community Action Corporation at 1605 W. 7th St., Amarillo. This agency covers 25 counties in the Texas Panhandle and has been allotted 641 summer slots for youth enrolled in school.

Burkburnett Independent School District, Box 907, Burkburnett, Texas. This agency covers the counties of Wichita, Wilbarger, Knox, Foard, Archer, Hardeman, Cottle, Clay, and Baylor, and have been allotted 400 summer slots. The jobs sponsored by the above agencies are designed to provide work experience and remedial education for disadvantaged high school students during the summer months. Work stations are schools, city offices, county offices, federal offices and other non-profit organizations.

Supervision is provided by employees of the user agencies as an in-kind contribution. Enrollees are paid $1.60 per hour and may work up to a maximum of 243 hours for the summer.

Job slots allocated to individual communities under the Neighborhood Youth Co. program include the following: Amarillo—230; Wichita Falls—130; Vernon—92; Childress—25; Quanah—25; Pampa—15; and Dalhart—6.

Congressman Price pointed out that other job opportunities for youth are available outside those mentioned above.

The Urban Corps helps to place under graduate and graduate college students in local government settings where they can get practical working experience as interns in city offices and agencies. Information on this program is available through the Urban Corps National Center, 1140 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Pampa Youth Wins Fellowship

Gary W. Blanscet, of Pampa, has been awarded a fellowship by the Southern Regional Training Program in Public Administration for 1972-73, the WTSU Department of Government announced.

Blanscet, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Blanscet, 2108 N. Zimmers, is the first graduate of West Texas State University to be accepted as a fellow by the SRTP.

Only six or seven fellowships are awarded each year in the Southern Regional Public Administration program. As a result of this high degree of selectivity, fewer than 100 have completed the program since World War II.

The SRTP is a joint undertaking by the Universities of Alabama, Kentucky, and Tennessee, and is one of the most highly-regarded public administration programs in the nation.

Blanscet will receive his

Pampan At WTSU To Hold Recital

Buzzy Green, 1969 graduate of Pampa High School, will be presenting his Senior Recital Monday, 24, in the Branding Iron Theatre at West Texas State University in Canyon, Texas at 4 p.m.

A Senior Recital is a requirement for all Music Majors, and is in partial fulfillment of requirement for Bachelor of Music Education Degree.

Green will be performing on the baritone horn, which has been his specialty during his course of study at WTSU. Performing with him will be Miss Margaret Cooper of Big Spring, on the trumpet.

LEVINES PLANS APPRECIATION DAY

Levin's Pampa has scheduled a surprise Appreciation Day for Monday, April 24, from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. The event extends the department store's 52nd Anniversary Sale an extra day and will feature new merchandise brought in at special Anniversary Sale prices.

Everybody Understands Terrorism

By TOM TIEDE

PHU ANH HOA VILLAGE, Vietnam—(NEA)—For much of his short but long-suffering life, 15-year-old Ngo Van Trong didn't really know who was right or wrong in the bitter war between his countrymen.

Now he thinks he at least knows who's wrong.

The other night the boy and his younger sister were shaken from their beds by the thunder of a Viet Cong rocket attack. The pair huddled for safety throughout nearly an hour of terrible bombardment. Then, when the barrage lifted, the sister panicked and ran outside to seek better cover. Ngo yelled for her to stop. But it was too late. He watched as she staggered, staggered and fell head to the ground in a hail of guerrilla gunfire.

"She was 12," Ngo says sadly. He helped dig the grave. "VC," he says, "I hate VC."

There have been many people in this address Southeast Asian conflict who have sided with the government for just the same reason as Ngo Van Trong. The politics of the "who" mess are beyond the scope of this article. Most of them could not care less who wins the nation. But terrorism? Everybody understands terrorism. And it's hard to stay neutral when a sister or brother is one day murdered.

And to be sure, though this war is beginning to ease, the endless murder of sisters and brothers continues to a intolerable degree. Terrorism remains the simplest and surest weapon in the guerrilla arsenal. And though it can be argued that it does their cause more harm than help, the VC go on practicing the appalling art indiscriminately.

The same morning Ngo Van Trong's sister was killed, eight other civilians died in the attack. Some mothers. Some fathers. All of them slaughtered, presumably, in the name of teaching them a lesson.

Ngo saw many of the dead. Legs blown off. Heads rolled. Bits of flesh about.

He remembers with wet eyes.

The world, for some reason, largely chooses to ignore the continuing Viet Ngo Van Trong's sister was only 12.

But the statistical relief is not of much comfort to the people still under the guerrilla gun here. Ten assassinations a day, though down from previous year's figures, is hardly cause for joy.

The other day in the Delta, the father of six children was shot in the head in front of his wife. Two teachers in Song Thuan village were killed recently when they stepped on a roadside outside their school. A hamlet chief in the north was having a small party the other night when a hand grenade interrupted to kill three guests. A few days later, five bystanders were killed and 63 others injured when a plastic charge exploded under a stage show they were watching in the Buu Son District. And the carnage goes on and on.

And it's not just the bloodshed that boggles the mind here. Sometimes, the cruellest terrorist is the one who doesn't kill. Nearly 100 civilians are kidnapped every day. Like 15-year-old Nam Nhut Xuyen of Phuoc village, or 73-year-old Nguyen Muc of the district of Duy Xuyen. Some of these people, officials say, manage to escape and return home. Many of them are just lost forever.

"I have a friend," says a

Delta rice merchant, "who had two daughters abducted by the VC. He gave up his business to go look for them. He was able to find one, in Cambodia, and brought her back on his bicycle. But he never found the other. He heard she was made into a pack animal for the guerrillas and was subjected to indecencies. He pined away for some time. Then he committed suicide."

So it goes, this war within a war here. The government, for its part, has beefed up its national police to 114,000, and placed officers in some 2,000 of the nation's 2,225 villages. And perhaps it has helped. But not really that much. Ask young Ngo Van Trong.

He stands where his house once stood. It is bombed out rubble now.

"My sister was 12," he says again. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Worry Clinic

BY—GEORGE W. CRANE, PH. D., M. D.

Sybil wants to know why staid churches resort to paid choirs. But produce few "Conversions." So analyze the 3 types of music outlined below. It is "head" music and sociology sermons that have retarded our churches!

CASE T560: Sybil G., aged 19, attended the Northwestern University School of Music.

Since I then taught the psychology courses for the Music School students, I tried to stress the viewpoint of the orator vs. that of the usual choir director.

"Dr. Crane," Sybil inquired, "Why do preachers who are revivalists produce far more converts than the usual clergyman?"

"And why do many fancy city churches pay their choirs whereas other churches with volunteer musicians, add many more new members to their church rolls?"

"I am engaged to a Garrett Biblical student so I'd like to help him develop a dynamic church that really influences people."

ORATORY VS. MUSIC There are really 3 distinct types of music, as viewed psychologically.

One is the "head" variety; the second is for the "heart," and the third is "foot" music for dancing or marching.

Professional choirs usually come under that "head" category.

For the singers focus almost exclusively on the director.

But orators, magicians and other platform artists maintain steady eye-contact with their audience.

They observe closely to see if the crowd is following them or if they need to vary their methods to gain greater attention.

Alas, far too much church music ignores the congregation. For the verses (lyrics) are often unfamiliar to the audience and the tunes are even strange.

The director also keeps his choir's attention riveted on his waving hands.

And the singers may even sit in recessed alcoves, so the congregation can't even see them!

Since they are thus invisible, and their music is neither the sort to resurrect lofty teenage inspirational memories, nor are the lyrics even understandable, such music is not productive.

For it doesn't enlist active vocal participation by the congregation nor does it arouse the crowd to a higher religious mood.

For it doesn't active vocal participation by the congregation nor does it arouse the crowd to a higher religious mood.

So it merely wastes 5 or 10 minutes of valuable time and leaves the clergyman with an emotionally "cold" audience.

Which makes it harder for the pastor to produce a mountain-top religious experience as he enters his peroration.

"Heart" music, however, brings the congregation into active participation.

(Always write to Dr. Crane, Hopkins Bldg. Mellot, Indiana 47558, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

White Deer Woman Receives Outstanding Award At WTSU

CANYON—Mrs. Betty Jean Garcia, of White Deer, was one of the recipients for the Outstanding Student Teacher's Award in elementary education at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Mrs. Garcia was honored by the Amarillo Field Chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, honorary education fraternity for men.

A member of Alpha Chi, national scholastic honor society, Mrs. Garcia is a senior education student and a candidate for a bachelor's degree at next month's graduation ceremonies.

The chapter also elected new officers for 1972-73. D.V. Biggers, principal of Austin Elementary School in Pampa, was elected president.

Cong terrorism in this nation. Perhaps because of disbelief. Perhaps out of incomprehension. But the fact is, for those who can stomach more facts on this mayhem, the Viet Cong teach lessons in this land every month. If January and February of this year, as example, U.S. sources say the Cong systematically murdered 557 people, wounded 1,150 others and abducted at least 1,269 helpless, innocent men, women and children.

The figures, actually, are not so sore as they once were. In the hottest years of terrorist activity, such as 1968, guerrillas instigated upwards of 30,000 incidents annually against civilians. Officials here believe, relieved, the terrorism graph line is falling.

Space Is Costly, But We Learn

By DON OAKLEY

Once again millions of Americans sit on the edges of their chairs watching a space spectacular being presented live and in color right in their homes.

Well, perhaps they don't lean so far forward any more. The target site is different and more photogenic, some aspects of the astronauts' assignment are new, but a moon landing is now pretty much old hat.

We know that the men of Apollo 16 can do it. We are confident they will complete their mission successfully and return safely to earth.

And such is our fickleness that when it is over, when our fingers are uncrossed and Apollo 16 is a turned page in the history of space exploration, many of us will again take up that old refrain, "Why spend so many billions on space when there are so many unsolved problems on earth?"

The question is pretty much rhetorical as far as the Apollo program is concerned. Only one more flight in the series remains.

After that, manned exploration of the moon—by this country, at least—will cease, for how many years no one can say.

The question will again become a live issue, however, as the nation cranks up Skylab, the program to send men into earth orbit for extended periods via reusable space shuttles.

There is no one good answer to the question, but the following quotations may provide part of an answer.

"The suggestion of an either-or choice between technological and social advances ignores the fact that without a technology base we will not have the capability to address ourselves effectively to any national problem," says J.F. Clayton, general manager of Bendix Aerospace Systems Division.

He points out that the task of going to the moon required a government, industry and university team which at its peak involved organizing 400,000 people, hundreds of universities and 20,000 separate industrial companies to a common goal.

The project was done in public and in full view of the world. It was done without a military objective and it was done within the cost and schedule set for it 10 years earlier. These management techniques are available to the country if ever we again decide to use them on what we now consider almost impossible tasks, says Clayton.

Aerospace writer James J. Haggerty has also spoken about the boost to technology given by the Apollo program:

"So extraordinary were the demands for performance and reliability needed to land men on the moon that to compress several decades of normal technological development into less than one, advances in aerospace technology were not, by themselves, sufficient for the task; it became necessary to force progress in virtually every scientific and technological discipline."

Finally, a passage from "Earthbound Astronauts," a book about the builders of Apollo-Saturn by Beirne Lay Jr.:

"Still struggling as we are in the Dark Ages of an understanding of human motivations (including our motivation for sending men to the moon), we can learn at least two lessons from our space program—the miracle that can result from the unemotional approach to a massive problem, and the paramount importance of proceeding step by step instead of plunging, as we have, into remedies for some of our social ills."

"Man has been given fresh grounds for confidence that he may yet achieve other 'impossibilities,' even create an environment on earth of dignity for all men, if only he can learn, as has the space pioneer, to keep his cool."

This is the legacy of Apollo.

McGovern Is Riding High Road

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

BOSTON (NEA)—The veteran Boston politician, running as a delegate pledged to Sen. Edmund Muskie in the April 25 presidential primary in Massachusetts, said:

"Why should I do anything, when he won't get off his duff?"

The attitude is common among the many state and local officeholders who were lured to Muskie at-large and district delegate slates at a time when he was riding high and expected to put out a full effort in this state.

And what this man said is a crushing answer to those who are still contending that Muskie's roster of illustrious state and local fellows will salvage something sizable for him in Massachusetts while he concentrates on the Pennsylvania primary held the same day.

I can find no impressive evidence that these politicians are laboring to save Muskie's bacon. The argument that they must do so because otherwise their own skins will be scarred does not seem to hold.

If rival Sen. George McGovern builds to something like a sweep here, as the latest Boston Globe poll suggests is possible, the name candidates on Muskie's slate may not in fact be scarred very much. In one leading Democrat's view, there is no dishonor for the politician in being "surprised" by a whopping verdict for McGovern.

"They can always claim they were overrun while sleeping in their beds," observed this politician.

Unless all this turns around sharply in the final days, it looks bad, then, for Muskie in Massachusetts. He only recently was still getting whispered assurances from top figures that they were going to go all out to get him a healthy slice of the state's 102 delegates.

The same key Democrat's comment on that:

"When you're still holding organization meetings less than two weeks before the voting, it's too late... (aside) Anything going on in your ward, Jim? No? ... Nothing is being done for Muskie."

To those in Massachusetts who were closely attuned to the outlook several weeks ago, this is an incredible come-down for the Maine senator. At that time he was figured to take probably 11 of the 12 district slates of delegates, plus the 20 at-large which go to the statewide winner. He was the one considered sure to sweep. He led McGovern in a Globe poll, 46 to 11. (Now he trails, 38 to 27).

McGovern was not nearly as well off here as in Wisconsin when he began his intensive campaigning. His organization was rudimentary by contrast. A good many parts of Massachusetts, it is widely agreed, are not prime "McGovern country." Even a few days ago, a rundown of the districts turned up several where Muskie's seeming advantages appeared strong.

On top of all this, McGovern in Massachusetts faces a late move by organized labor to stop him. And in the nation, before he gets a head of steam which might take him to the nomination in July.

Despite these things, he is bowling along on a rising curve. He is the one who is getting the attention as the developing candidate who has a busload of newsmen following him. He is the one who is plunging into every industrial center in Massachusetts. And, in the closing days, he is outdoing Muskie 5 to 1 in time spent in the state.

Muskie's limited effort, made worse by incorrect reports that it is more restricted than it is, can hardly be the stuff of which surprise victory is made. The momentum is with McGovern.

Next Case!

Having Cousin Chub visit with us is always a great pleasure. He has an enormous following among North Carolinians who know him as a prominent attorney, a good friend and as a dedicated Christian layman.

So, here he is, to call his next case, Cousin Chub Seawell!

Will Rogers used to say all he knew was just what he read in the newspapers. There used to be a time in the country when newspapers by the overwhelming majority, stood for liberty, freedom, integrity, patriotism, honesty, truth, morality and Godliness. It is hard to know now what the majority stands for. In fact they don't seem to stand for anything, but some form of intellectual atheistic liberalism.

I asked a man on the witness stand one time if he knew the general reputation of so-and-so, and he says, "Yes, I do, and I'll tell you right now, it is considerable irregular." The newspapers are right considerable irregular. They quote scripture on the editorial page, give the Sunday School lesson on another page, church news on another page, and then they advertise liquor and beer and sex on all the back pages.

This is one of the great sins of our times — the wheat and the tares all growing together in one great big burley mess. Only a man born again and filled with the Holy Spirit, can understand what is going on. So when unsaved folks are worrying themselves into ulcers, jumping out windows, getting drunk and doped up, and acting the fool in a highly educated manner, Christians are lifting up — both hands, rejoicing, singing and laughing and saying praise Jesus.

They don't know what is ahead, but they know Who is ahead. They don't know what the future holds, but they know Who holds the future, so it's glorious. Every now and then some person will give three cheers for something or other, and he doesn't know where the three cheers came from. They come from the Bible.

No Anemia Link To Blood Pressure

Dear Dr. Lamb—My friend and I have been arguing about anemia (low blood pressure). She says that if it is not treated right away you can die. I disagree. Can you please tell us the effect if you don't take care of yourself. I have anemia.

Dear Reader—Anemia and low blood pressure are two different things. Anemia means inadequate number of red blood cells in the blood stream or insufficient iron in the red blood cells that are present. Low blood pressure means that the pressure of the blood in the arteries is on the low side. This is related to how much blood you have, how strongly the heart beats and how much resistance the arteries make to blood flow.

It is true that anemia can sometimes cause low blood pressure, but they are two different things. Low blood pressure by itself in a person who has no evidence of illness, such as heart disease, anemia or tuberculosis to name a few, is not serious.

What should be done about an anemia depends on how severe it is. Girls oft-times have mild anemias which are not necessarily life threatening, but they can contribute to fatigue. The only sure way is to know how severe the anemia is and for this you will have to rely on your doctor. I would say that it is highly unlikely that you are going to die real soon, and most forms of anemia can be treated if they are severe enough to require treatment.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I am almost 24 years old and have had pain in my right chest and side since I was 20. The pain starts from the back and then spreads. I have had tests for my kidneys and I still think that is what is the matter. My doctor now thinks it is pleurisy but all he does is give me penicillin shots and pills. I am married and this problem sometimes causes trouble between us. We have been married three years and I haven't been able to get pregnant. Do you think pleurisy has anything to do with this?

Dear Reader—I don't know what you have, and if your doctor is giving you penicillin shots, he must think you have an infection. Plain ordinary pleurisy is usually not helped by penicillin or antibiotics. There are multiple causes for pain in the area you speak of, including muscular problems, problems with the lungs, the digestive tract, the kidney or liver, and the spine.

Pleurisy should not prevent you from getting pregnant and any episode of pleurisy that lasts four years is very unusual. Why don't you ask your doctor to arrange for a consultation for you with a specialist in internal medicine.

PAMPA HAS been waiting long time for the dream of a new auditorium. That, of course, is the dedication of the $1.2 million M.K. Brown Memorial Civic Auditorium.

The doors will open at 2 p.m. and the beautiful new structure will be dedicated in a program that starts at 2:30 p.m.

Some 1,500 persons can be seated at the dedicatory exercises and thousands are expected to tour the building today and tomorrow.

Conducted tours will continue until 6 p.m. today. The auditorium will be open from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday to permit art-lovers to view exhibits on display in the main lobby.

CITY MANAGER Mack Wofford has been speaking to various clubs during the past weeks and his subject always has been the auditorium.

In all these talks the city manager has emphasized that the M.K. Brown Memorial is not just the work of a small group of people, but a community-wide project in which the entire citizenry has been involved.

The auditorium, made possible by the late Mr. Brown's philanthropy, is here because everyone has followed through.

There are no single accolades for any particular person, and today's dream comes to realization because of a united effort by many.

"This auditorium belongs to the people of Pampa in every sense of the word," the city manager said. "That's the way Mr. Brown wanted it to be."

The background and history of the auditorium and stories of Mr. Brown's life and his contribution to his hometown will be found elsewhere in today's Pampa News along with photographs of Foundation members (both the M.K. Brown and Gray-Pampa Foundations) who broke the wonderful news to Pampa back in 1966.

There are also articles on Herbert Brasher, the Lubbock architect who designed the building and Frank H. Wardlaw, director of the University of Texas Press, who will deliver the dedicatory address.

INCIDENTALLY, the city manager still was concerned Saturday that visitors to the auditorium cooperate and "follow the arrows" on the tours through the building this afternoon.

The tour traffic must flow in one direction only, he explained, in order to avoid confusion in the lobby and corridors.

"If the people don't all walk in one direction, we're in trouble," he said.

The Top O' Texans Club members and hosts and hostesses of the Community Concert and Fine Arts Associations were briefed yesterday afternoon and will try their best to keep the crowds moving one way.

HERE'S SOMETHING that pays tribute to the kind of people and the type of hospitality found in our town. It's a letter from Mrs. George

Panhandle Water

By Felix W. Ryals
The Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3, South of the Canadian River in Texas was voted into being on January 23, 1956. It is now in its seventeenth year of existence. The District was created in accordance with Article XVI of the Texas Constitution with Article 7880-3C as amended with the 53rd Legislature of 1953.

Following the formation of the District, its Board of Directors, elected by the people, approved rules and regulations for the operation of the District. The first set of rules and regulations were amended November 29, 1957. They were amended again in June of 1958. Two amendments were added in 1964; two in 1965 were followed by two more amendments in 1967. In all probability, more amendments will be added in the years ahead.

The law setting up the Underground Water Conservation Districts permits the Board of Directors to enact all reasonable rules and regulations to accomplish the purposes for which the District was formed.

One of the permissible reasonable rules of the District requires the spacing of wells producing water from the underground water reservoir. This rule also permits the District to regulate the production from the underground reservoir in order to minimize the drawdown of the water table. One of these reasonable rules requires that records be kept and reports made of the drilling, equipping, and completion of wells into the underground water reservoir. The District also considered it reasonable to require accurate drillers' logs to be kept and filed in the District Office. By means of these logs, the District has been able to map the underground reservoir.

The District in 1956 set about developing comprehensive plans for the most efficient use of the underground water and for the control and prevention of waste of the underground water. Anyone driving over the District is well aware of the many fine tail-water recovery systems that have been put into operation since 1956. The District, through the years, has collected volumes of information that has provided irrigation farmers with a wealth of usable knowledgeable facts concerning the protection, conservation, and wise use of water.

Harry Burieligh, the Executive Director of the Texas Board of Water Development, may be stirring up a good sized storm as the result of a statement by him in the latest issue of the "Water For Texas" magazine published by the Texas Board of Water Development. He urged Texans to begin to consider the need for ground water management. He reminded all that most western states have already assumed management of local water. He called attention to the fact that there are 137 bills before the Federal Congress affecting ground water in one way or another, including a bill for Federal Control of all ground water.

It would be better, Burieligh suggests, for Texans to write their own kind of law. He agrees that there should not be a single law for all of Texas due to the great diversity of water resources in the various areas of the State. He also agrees that management of underground water should be on a local basis. He said he would not expect any law to govern a person's right to drill a well on his own land for domestic or livestock use. He shied away from discussing the use of ground water for irrigation. He did point out the problem along the Gulf Coast, especially in the Houston area where subsidence and waste injection has become a problem. He also pointed out the advantage of using dewatered aquifers for storage. He feels this would need management from the State level.

With this sort of thinking going on at the State and Federal levels, it then behooves all of us on the High Plains of Texas to carry out the best conservation measures possible in our use of underground water for municipal, industrial, and irrigation purposes.

Vegetables Should be Rotated

High Plains vegetable producers must shift emphasis from one crop to another as market change demands change. Planning proper rotations before planting is necessary for success over the long run.

This is the word from Dr. Roland Roberts, Extension area vegetable specialist at Lubbock. He says growers with diversified cropping systems must consider all factors that might affect the productive potential of the soil.

"For example, the kinds of vegetables planted regulate to a large extent the population of disease organisms found in a particular soil," Roberts adds. Rotations can be used to depress populations of parasitic nematodes as well as soil insects such as grubs and wireworms.

In addition, the organic matter level and soil structure are influenced by the vegetable crops grown in a single field year after year. Research has shown that many vegetables leave organic residues in the soil that are toxic to crops that follow.

"Certain vegetables feed heavily on available nutrients, and thus create unfavorable conditions for other vegetables that are less efficient feeders," the specialist explains.

Roberts says that vegetables fall into several family groups. The same disease will often attack members of the same vegetable family; so growers need to know which vegetables are related.

"Relationships like these are important because broccoli and cabbage are in the same family," the specialist says. "so planting broccoli could aggravate a clubroot disease problem that was introduced into a field by cabbage planted the year before."

"Rotations are but one tool that can be used," Roberts concludes, "but the successful growers will be the same ones who plan their vegetable crops with an eye to the future."

Successful small farm operators working as "program aides" are helping low-income farmers in 10 Texas counties to develop more efficient farming operations.

Began in 1969, the Texas Intensified Farm Planning Program (TIFPP) has brought about a 20 per cent increase in the gross farm revenue of some 224 low-income farmers in these counties.

WHEAT CONDITIONS

The last few days of dry, windy and warm weather is taking a toll on the dryland wheat. It is never too late to help in the Panhandle, but a good ground-soaking rain two weeks ago would have done wonders. Last year's summer-fallowed land is still holding. Yield will be cut severely if the present drought continues for a few more days. Many farmers are giving thought to turning cattle back on the wheat where the cattle are available.

Irrigation farmers have most of the wells running full blast. Some are watering wheat and others are pre-watering milo ground. It appears we are about to have a re-run on the 1971 weather pattern...no one asked

STATE TAX

State Tax on parts and supplies used in the production of crops has come in for some new rulings. I hope to have the data on this subject for this news column in the near future. There has been some very current changes that will help greatly on your State Sales Tax. As I understand it, farmers and ranchers are now exempt from a long list of items that they formerly paid tax on. You better look into the matter since few local businesses know about it. There is a form you can sign where you attest to the fact the supplies being purchased are for the production of food.

Thousands of dollars of tax will be saved by Gray County farmers if I interpret this new regulation correctly.

Citrus Outlook in Texas Good

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both the Texas orange and grapefruit crops are expected to be higher this season, the Agriculture Department forecast Monday.

Nationally, the orange crop is estimated at 189.7 million boxes, unchanged from March but a million fewer than the record set last season.

The estimate, based on April 1 indications, include: California, 43 million boxes for 1971-72 and 38.6 million last season; Florida 136 million and 142.3 million; Texas 6.0 million and 6.2 million; and Arizona 4.7 million and 3.56 million.

Grapefruit production was estimated at 63.5 million boxes, up about 1.7 million from the March estimate and 2.8 million more than last season, the Crop Reporting Board said.

By state, the grapefruit estimate included: Florida 45.7 million boxes this season compared with 42.9 million last year; Texas 10.2 million and 10.1 million; Arizona 2.4 million and 2.52 million and California 5.2 million and 5.16 million.

Astrology and the Candidates

(EDITOR'S NOTE: With readers bombarded with polls, surveys and professional prognostications about the campaign for the presidency, it is only right for an astrologer to make a few predictions. The writer prepares the daily "Astrograph" seen in many newspapers.)

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Coalition, compromise, change and confusion are the key words for the 1972 presidential campaign.

The waxing and waning strengths of the candidates are indicative of the vacillating astrological trends.

Democratic frontrunner Sen. Edmund Muskie appears to be fading, while Sen. George McGovern and Gov. George Wallace are showing unexpected new strength.

Bernice Osol

The news media, electorate and political pundits are scratching their heads—and well they should in this period of varying cycles. For it is not the man who makes the times, but the times which make the man.

The cycles indicate that America is shifting her emphasis from external interests to her more pressing internal needs.

Perplexity is often the companion of change, particularly now as our nation astrologically is striving toward a more balanced representation of its many factions and minority groups.

The Pluto cycle, which serves as the barometer for massive group interests, will be under adverse aspects until after the Democratic Convention early in July.

The aspects indicate additional labor unrest, a hotter war, and problems concerning welfare, waste, crime, busing and ecology. Educational inequities, inflation and prison-reform demands will all clamor for immediate attention.

Candidates will have a hard time getting a firm grasp on a clear-cut issue. The emphasis will shift constantly with the people anxious for solutions, yet wary of promises.

But even politicians can wear only so many hats. Eventually coalitions will form comprised of the most unlikely allies who will link arms to achieve some type of balance.

The second spot on the ballot will assume major importance. The promise of the vice-presidential plum might well hold the key to the primaries.

Meanwhile, Saturn's opposition to Neptune will tend to make the polls fuzzy and often inaccurate. The fault does not necessarily lie with the experts since the people themselves will tend to be indecisive and reserve their true judgment. However, the polls with contribute to the confusion by causing voters to respond to faulty evaluations.

Deceptive astrological aspects prevail. Political manipulations, such as the Republican crossover in Wisconsin that benefitted McGovern and catapulted Wallace into second place, will become more evident.

No Basis to Rule

The so-called "r" rule that oysters should be eaten only during months having the letter "r" has no basis and probably originated from observations that in summer months oysters are watery and have less substance, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Major candidates:

Sen. Edmund Muskie, born March 28, 1914, is an Aries. Aries are fighters who do not accept defeat. They are leaders of a highly independent nature, often impulsive, with a reluctance to counsel with their followers. When Jupiter was in favorable aspect to Muskie's Sun and Moon, his road appeared clear and easy. Since Jupiter shifted signs, he must now fight for whatever he attains. On the other hand, Saturn, the planet of restrictions that rewards only for diligence and effort, favors his horoscope.

Sen. George McGovern, born July 19, 1922, is a Cancer. Persons born under this sign are adept at judging public opinion and sentiment. They are tenacious in striving for achievement. In McGovern's case, with his Moon in Taurus, his tenacity and patience is accentuated. His chart shows an excellent rapport with youth, as well as strong liberal tendencies. With Pluto temporarily regressing to Virgo, his stop-the-war appeal is enhanced, giving him additional luster. However, there are indications of misjudgment.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, born May 27, 1911, is a Gemini. His sign is indicative of versatile, imaginative, highly adaptable people. They are able to roll with the punch and shift with the tide. In addition to his flexible nature, Humphrey is a man of great drive and determination. Saturn, the problem planet, is presently in his Sun Sign, limiting his appeal to young people. On the plus side, a benevolent Jupiter aids him in deriving support from powerful and influential people of conservative persuasion.

Gov. George Wallace, born Aug. 25, 1919, is a Virgo. Virgoans have a basic urge for service, as well as highly critical faculties with desires to bring order into their sphere of influence. Wallace's astrological chart, with the Moon, Jupiter, Mars and Neptune all in the fire sign of Leo, emphasizes his political charisma. For Wallace, Jupiter tends to enhance prestige and expand influence this year. However, Saturn, the planet of restrictions, opposes his Sun Sign and serves as a brake upon his momentum.

 - McGOVERN—Bigger vote than expected.
- May 6: North Carolina
 - MUSKIE—Aided by unexpected allies.
 - WALLACE—Let down by friends.
 - McGOVERN—Not a bad showing.
- May 9: West Virginia
 - WALLACE—Just makes it.
 - HUMPHREY—Close behind.
 - McGOVERN—Not too strong.
- May 9: Nebraska

 - MUSKIE—Not too bad.
 - McGOVERN—Lacks broad appeal.
 - May 23: Oregon
 - HUMPHREY—Comes on strong.
 - McGOVERN—Close on heels.
 - MUSKIE—Trails leaders.
 - June 6: California

 - MUSKIE—Last minute problems.
 - McGOVERN—Endorsers change mind.
 - June 6: New Mexico
 - HUMPHREY—Hard work pays off.
 - MUSKIE—Fighting all the way.

 - WALLACE—Good showing.
 - June 20: New York
 - HUMPHREY—Inches ahead.
 - MUSKIE—
 - McGOVERN—Make it a contest.
 - WALLACE—Chilly.
- Prediction: By convention time Sen. Hubert Humphrey should lead the parade, but not with quite enough delegate strength to lock up the convention. The Democratic convention has never been a dull affair. This year it should really be interesting.

Chosen Freeholders New Jersey is the only state in which county governments are called "boards of chosen freeholders." This name comes from colonial days, when only freeholders (property owners) could hold public office.

Nuts of Jove In the early days of Greek and Roman history, walnuts were thrown at brides and grooms for good luck. The walnut was given its present scientific name of Juglans by the Romans. It means "the nuts of Jove."

Early Cigarettes French and British soldiers adopted the habit of smoking cigarettes during the Crimean War of 1854. Hand-rolled cigarettes achieved a limited popularity in the United States between 1855 and 1885.

Obesity Obesity affects about one-fifth of the adult population of the United States, occurs more frequently between ages 30 to 50 and is more common in men than women, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Highland General Laboratory Is Full Service Organization

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the fifth in a series of weekly articles, prepared by the public relations department of Highland General Hospital, to acquaint the public with hospital officials, employees, department procedures and the many services offered to the people of Gray County.

By JUDITH KITTO
The function of a hospital laboratory is to provide ancillary diagnostic information to the attending physician. Therefore, the laboratory is basically a service directed by the attending physician and for the benefit of the patient in the realm of diagnostic and therapeutic evaluation.

The laboratory at Highland General Hospital is a full service organization divided basically into two departments. As in most full service laboratories, the director Dr. V.L. Trammell is a physician specializing in pathology and trained in laboratory and tissue diagnosis.

The clinical laboratory provides automated blood counts which aid in diagnosis of anemias, vitamin deficiencies, iron deficiencies, and particularly infectious processes such as pneumonia or other similar infections. A recent addition to Highland's laboratory is an automated 12 test chemistry profile designed to screen for metabolic disorders of most body organs.

The machine produces 12 tests in approximately two minutes which give information as to the status of parathyroid, bone, pancreatic, hepatic, myocardial, bone marrow, and kidney function. Other automated tests include sodium and potassium levels in blood serum and a radio-isotope study of the thyroid function. In addition to that, provides blood coagulation studies, blood typing and cross matching for transfusions, bacteriological studies, urinalysis and an assortment of other clinical chemistries. The chief technician is Mr. Gene Reed with associate technicians, Mrs. Joy Bivins and Mr. Raymond Neff. Parttime student assistants Cathy Pettit and Gloria Jean Jennings are employed through the Industrial Cooperative Training Program of Pampa High School. The tissue laboratory is involved in biopsy diagnosis of surgically removed specimens, such as appendices, gallbladders, and gynecological tissue which upon removal are routinely submitted for gross and microscopic diagnosis.

A related service is the frozen section done during a surgical procedure which is used as a rapid microscopic diagnosis of malignancy in most instances.

This information is provided in approximately 15 minutes so that the patient may remain on the surgical table and the surgeon can determine if further surgery is required, as in a breast biopsy which proves to be malignant and is routinely treated with a radical mastectomy. Other services such as cytology for screening early cervical carcinomas or cytological diagnosis of body fluids are provided by the tissue lab which again is a full service organization. Mrs. Kathy Ward and Mrs. Jan Stroud serve as secretary-technicians in the tissue department.

Besides, the laboratory participates on a national and internal level for quality control, including spot checks of routine laboratory examinations and subsequent comparison of the results obtained at Highland General Hospital to results with large referral type laboratories. These comparisons reveal excellent accuracy, reliability and reproducibility of laboratory examinations. This excellence in a highly technical area is an accomplishment which the local physicians, hospital administration, and above all patients can point to as an outstanding civic project for the improvement of health care for the people of Pampa.

'The Pampa Story' Will Be Shown In Coronado Inn

It was filmed in and around the Celanese Corporation Pampa facility. Melvin Parent, personnel administrative representative, Celanese corporation, will present the film and discussion.

The sacred city of Hardwar on the Ganges River in India forbids the eating of meat, fish and even eggs, for fear its sanctity be sullied by the killing of a living creature.

Rome Celebrates 2,725th Birthday

ROME (AP) — Rome celebrated its 2,725th birthday Friday without the traditional wolves—animal variety—caged near city hall to recall the Eternal city's mythical beginning.

Some said their absence was due to the city government's staggering debt.

Others were indignant that the city fathers should forget the god who founded Rome. Legend has it that the abandoned twins Romulus and Remus floated down the Tiber in a reed basket. They were found and suckled by a mother wolf, and Romulus founded Rome in 753 B.C. He killed his twin when Remus poked fun at the new city.

For years the government kept one or two mother wolves and an eagle—symbol of the ancient Romans—in two cages near the Campidoglio, the city hall atop the smallest of Rome's Seven Hills.
