Governors Plan Approval Of Corruption Resolution

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The country's governors, whose collective political influence seldom comes together on the same cause, moved today toward approval of a strong resolution on the volatile question of what to do after Watergate.

As about 45 chief state executives gather for the 1974 National Governors Conference here, a campaign was generating support for a powerful specific statement on rooting corruption out of government.

Gov. Dan Evans of Washington, host and national chairman of the group, keyed the meeting with a direct challenge to the federal government. The states, he said, had taken "decisive action in contrast to that of the national government" in fields such as political ethics, campaign reform, consumer protection and no-fault auto insurance.

"It has been the states who have responded most fully to the problems of the day," he said. "This has been a response not in terms of empty rhetoric without action or visionary promises without dollars. It has been a response which has required executive and legislative courage, sound fiscal management plus a willingness to act."

The first obstacle to putting the conferences on record with a formal government ethics resolution was passed Sunday. The group's executive committee — seven of nine members attending — unanimously approved a statement proposed by Republican Gov. William Milliken of Michigan and Democrat Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin which called "the fight to restore citizen confidence in government" the "first obligation of every government official."

The resolution, which will be debated and acted upon Wednesday, urges "all levels of government" to ensure "loophole-free" campaign finance regulations, with limits on contributions and spending; "stringent ethical codes for government officials which clearly define conflict of interest; an end to secrecy in government with few exceptions; and registration and full disclosure of lobbying activities by all special interest groups."

Approval of the resolution was considered likely because more than 40 states have approved anticorruption legislation of varying strength in the past year. Thus the governors would not be criticizing themselves and their legislatures.

However, the resolution could be taken as a message aimed at Congress, where the Senate has passed two campaign finance reform bills since last fall but the House has failed to act.

Court Clears Way For Ray's Appeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court cleared the way today for James Earl Ray to withdraw his guilty plea to the 1968 killing of Martin Luther King. Ray claims he was influenced by the interest of his attorneys in profits from a book about the slaying.

The action could mean Ray eventually will be retried for the King slaying after a plea of innocent.

The Supreme Court refused to hear appeals by Tennessee that Ray's original plea was voluntary and intelligently made and therefore he should not be given a chance to have it changed.

The 6th U.S. Court of Appeals ordered a hearing to decide whether Ray's constitutional rights to due process and assistance of counsel were violated and if he can change his plea to innocent.

Ray was sentenced to 99 years in the Tennessee state prison after pleading guilty in 1969 to killing the civil rights leader in Memphis.

Shortly after sentencing, Ray claimed he had been coerced into pleading guilty by his attorney, Percy Foreman, well known criminal lawyer from Houston, Tex.

Foreman took over the case at Ray's request after Ray dismissed his first lawyer, Arthur Hanes. Hanes had signed a contract on Ray's behalf with author William Bradford Huie to write a book about the killing, with Hanes getting 30 per cent of the royalties.

When Foreman took over, he changed the agreement so that he would receive 60 per cent of the royalties.

Ray contended that he was advised to plead guilty by Foreman so that information about the case would not be made public in open court at the fullscale trial, thus assuring the exclusive nature of the book.

U.S. District Court Judge L. Clure Morton denied Ray's motion for a hearing on whether his plea was voluntary. Morton agreed with the state and cited the plea record. In accepting the original plea, Judge W. Preston Battle questioned Ray thoroughly and the defendant said his plea was knowledgeable and voluntary.

Absentee Ballot Casting Begins

Voters who wish to cast absentee ballots in Pampa's June 18 special election may do so now at the city secretary's office in City Hall.

Ballots for the election of a Ward 4 city commissioner to fill the unexpired term of Arthur Rohde already have been printed.

There are not candidate names on the ballot. Two candidates, A.C. Thompson, 1085 Varnon Dr., and Kermit E. Rasco, 1009 Prairie Dr., have announced intentions of seeking the Ward 4 post at the write-in election.

City Secretary S.M. Chittenden said today write-in absentee ballots may be cast at his office through Friday, June 14. Office hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

There will be one voting place in the City Commission room at City Hall on June 18. Voters may cast ballots that day from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Registered voters in all four city wards will be eligible to participate in the balloting.

Nixon Loses Claim On Evidence Ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell today rejected President Nixon's claim that he has sole authority to decide whether to surrender evidence subpoenaed for trial of former administration officials in the Ellsberg break-in.

Gesell said the law clearly gives the courts that authority and he has "various tools" he might ultimately use if the material is not produced, including contempt, indefinite delay of the trial or the dismissal of charges against all men indicted in the case.

The ruling came shortly after one of the five defendants in the case, Charles W. Colson, former special counsel to Nixon, pleaded guilty before Gesell to a single count of obstruction of justice in connection with the 1973 trial of Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg.

All other charges were dropped against Colson, who now faces a maximum prison sentence of five years.

The President claimed authority to decide what evidence to surrender after Colson and another former presidential aide, John D. Ehrlichman, sought access under subpoena to the files they once used in the White House.

Only the court can determine the relevancy or materiality of subpoenaed materials," Gesell ruled. "These are matters of law, not of policy."

"If the court determines that production is required of any document, that document must be produced."

While Gesell said "the court must reject the President's suggestion" that only he can make such decisions, the judge did accept a compromise proposed by the White House last week on the issue of defense subpoenas in the Ellsberg case.

Gesell had threatened to dismiss the indictments in the Ellsberg case if the materials were not produced. Instead, he agreed to a White House suggestion to allow the files to be examined for selection of relevant documents.

He urged that this be done promptly. Gesell said he then would examine the materials and rule on their relevancy.

Ehrlichman's lawyer said they would begin the review and selection process at the White House later in the day and Gesell scheduled another hearing Friday, the morning after the deadline for Nixon to comply with the subpoenas.

The judge noted the law requires that the government "must disclose necessary evidence and there can be no trial unless it is done." He said he would consider "further appropriate action" if Nixon refused to produce subpoenaed documents the court ruled relevant.

Colson, Ehrlichman and three other men had been scheduled to go on trial June 17 for the burglary at Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office in 1971. Colson admitted in his guilty plea they were seeking information to discredit Ellsberg in the public eye.

Firemen Battling Flames At Plant

SCUNTHORPE, England (UPI) — Firemen battled stubborn flames licking the wreckage of a northern England chemical plant today and searched through the blackened debris for workers trapped by a thunderous explosion.

Authorities said Sunday night they had recovered eight bodies from the rubble of the Nypro (UK), Ltd., plant in nearby Flixborough, 160 miles northeast of London. Another 21 persons were missing and presumed dead.

A total of 105 persons were reported injured Saturday when the massive explosion rocked the plant, damaging buildings in a 10-mile-wide area and sending up a 300-foot sheet of flame and a mile-high cloud of toxic gas.

At the time of the explosion, 70 men were in the Dutch-British owned plant, which made chemicals for the manufacture of nylon. The blast damaged every home in Flixborough, a town with 310 residents.

Police said the death toll would have been much higher had the factory been ringed by homes, as is the case with many other British chemical plants.

Gordon Oakes, undersecretary in the environment ministry, said a check was being made of chemical plants through the country.

"Dangerous processes and homes must be kept well apart," Oakes said.

Most of the 3,000 residents of seven neighboring villages returned Sunday after their homes were evacuated because of toxic gas.

"It was like a mini A-bomb," said Clifford Purves, who was in his auto two miles from the blast. "The fireball burned the paint off my car."

"Suddenly I started going round and round in the air, tossed here and there in pitch blackness," said Barry Carter, 27, a draftsman at his desk when the explosion occurred. "I thought this was what dying was all about."

PAMPA GETS 1.22 INCHES

System Brings Welcome Rains

A frontal system which entered the Panhandle regions Friday night finally brought some much needed moisture to the Pampa area during rains which fell Saturday and Sunday nights.

With prospects of more rain existing tonight, Pampa received 1.22 inches of rain in the two showers. Saturday the city gained .75 inch during a storm beginning about 8 p.m. Last night saw another .47 inch added from the rain which began falling about 10 p.m.

Forecasts called for a 20 percent chance of rain today and a 30 percent chance Tuesday.

High Tuesday should reach into the 90s, causing the possibility of warm, humid weather because of the wet ground.

Sunday's high was 80, with an overnight low this morning of 54.

Violent thunderstorms, tornadoes and hail swept through the Panhandle and the High Plains today causing some damage and some isolated cases of flooding.

Citizens deluged sheriff's departments and police offices with reports of tornadoes. Only a handful touched the ground and only slight structural damage was reported.

One tornado skimmed across the northeast city limits of Plainview today but officers on the scene reported no damage.

"We've been watching the storm all night as it moved through town," officer Ron Vandergriff said. "The tornado hasn't hurt us but we've had some hail and damaging winds."

Craig Silverthorn, a farmer and rancher who owns property in Plainview and nearby Hale Center, said most of the damage was dealt by storms in Hale Center.

"We've got a terrific storm in process," he said today from his home. "The first one hit at 8 last night and lasted for about three hours. The new storm moved in just a little while ago."

The sheriff's office in Lubbock reported today citizens were calling with reports of severe thunderstorms, tornadoes and heavy hail, but no damage was reported.

Radar picked up a tornado eight miles north of Lubbock today but it did not touch ground.

ON MILK SUPPORTS

Investigators Reject Nixon's Explanation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Watergate investigators have rejected President Nixon's explanation of why he raised milk price supports in 1971, and they suggest he was influenced by huge campaign fund pledges from milk producers.

"The facts are that (1) when the President made his decision the milk producer commitment (of $2 million) represented one of the three largest pledges to his campaign," the investigators said in a 359-page staff report approved by Senate Watergate committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin.

"And (2) the milk producers contributed far more to the President than to all other 1972 presidential candidates combined," they said.

Nixon announced the price support increase on March 25, 1971, two days after he had conferred with dairy industry leaders.

The report says Nixon's decision to boost milk price supports when he did "at the very least... was an act of political one-upmanship" and it concludes by rejecting Nixon's claim he considered only the voting "support" milk producers might give him when he decided in their favor.

"By all accounts, the 'support' they had promised him — of which he was aware — and in fact provided, included substantial contributions to the President's campaign," it says.

UPI obtained a copy of the report, which has been sent to the other senators on Ervin's Watergate committee for their consideration.

City To Review Traffic Danger

Methods of curbing speeding and reckless driving on Mary Ellen St. were being studied today at City Hall.

City Manager Mack Wofford said action is planned following complaints from residents in the 1100-block of Mary Ellen.

In a letter to Police Chief Jim Conner one resident wrote:

"I am sorry to have to resort to writing this letter, but so far nothing else has seemed to have any effect on the situation."

"I have small children and so do many of my neighbors. I will not idly sit by and see one of them hurt or killed by total negligence and disregard for traffic laws."

The letter writer suggested that if traffic on Mary Ellen cannot be slowed down, a four-way stop at Mary Ellen and Louisiana might help alleviate the situation.

California To Select Candidates

United Press International California voters, who by their sheer numbers have a huge impact on national elections every four years, select candidates Tuesday who will try to succeed retiring Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Also on the ballot is a strict new campaign finance law, and in San Francisco, voters will fill a vacant seat in the House.

Voters also will choose candidates for governor and senator in Iowa and South Dakota and for governor in New Mexico. All of those states, plus New Jersey, Mississippi and Montana, also will have primaries for their House delegations.

The California Democratic primary for governor is a four-way contest, led, according to public opinion polls, by Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., 36-year-old son of the former governor.

Reagan, a Republican, is retiring after two terms.

Brown, campaigning hard on political reform issues, is opposed by state Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto and William M. Roth, a businessman and foreign trade negotiator during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

On the Republican side, the contest is between state Controller Houston Flournoy and Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, whose campaign took a severe blow when a Watergate grand jury in Washington indicted him on three counts of perjury in connection with the ITT case.

Flournoy trailed Reinecke in the polls until the indictment. Since then he has led.

Sen. Alan Cranston has only taken opposition in the Democratic senatorial primary, but two Republicans are fighting it out to oppose him.

In the San Francisco area, a special election is being held to fill the seat vacated by Republican William Maillard, now U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States. The favorite in that contest is state Assemblyman John Burton, brother of Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif.

Iowa has a Republican senatorial primary contest for the nomination to seek the seat being vacated by Democratic Sen. Harold Hughes. But the Democratic primary for the House seat being vacated by Rep. H.R. Gross will be of concern because former Federal Communications Commissioner Nicholas Johnson is among four candidates.

In South Dakota, three Republicans are seeking the nomination to oppose Sen. George McGovern in his first election since his unsuccessful presidential campaign. The leader is reckoned to be former Air Force Lt. Col. Leo Thorness, who was a Vietnam prisoner of war for six years.

In Mississippi, James Meredith, the first black student at the state university 12 years ago, is among five Democrats running for a House seat.

AGAINST ELISBERG

Colson Gives Guilty Plea For Obstructing Justice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Charles W. Colson, former special counsel to President Nixon, pleaded guilty today to a single count of obstruction of justice in connection with the 1973 trial of Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg.

Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, in accepting Colson's guilty plea, dropped all other charges now pending against him both in the Watergate cover-up case and in the break-in of the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The development occurred before U.S.

District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell, just as he was about to begin a hearing on pre-trial motions in the Ellsberg break-in case, which had been scheduled for trial June 17.

Colson waived indictment before pleading guilty to the obstruction of justice charge which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison, a fine of $5,000 or both.

Colson is one of the highest ranking former White House officials to be convicted in connection with Watergate and related scandals. Nixon's former counsel, John W. Dean, pleaded guilty previously to a conspiracy count in connection with the Watergate cover-up and has not been sentenced.

Assistant special prosecutor William Merrill told Gesell the government could have proved that Colson was "responsible for devising and implementing a scheme to defame and destroy the public image and credibility of Daniel Ellsberg and those engaged in the legal defense of Daniel Ellsberg, with the intent to influence, obstruct, and impede the conduct and outcome" of Ellsberg's criminal trial.

He said the scheme began June 28, 1971, the day Ellsberg was indicted in connection with his release of the Pentagon Papers. All charges were dismissed against him a year ago on grounds of government misconduct in the case following disclosure of White House "plumbers" involvement in the break-in of the office of his psychiatrist.

IN ISRAEL

Coalition Approval Wanted By Rabin

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Yitzhak Rabin went before the Israeli parliament today, asking approval for his shaky three-party coalition to take power from Prime Minister Golda Meir's government. He vowed Israel would not return to its pre-1967 borders.

Rabin, who commanded Israeli forces to a sweeping victory in the six-day 1967 war, outlined policies similar to those of Mrs. Meir in a 45-minute address to the Knesset (parliament).

"Israel will not return — even within the context of a peace treaty — to the 4 June 1967 lines," he said. "These lines are not defensible borders, and they constitute a temptation for aggression against us, as has been proven in the past."

He said Israel never would allow the guerrilla organizations to participate in the Middle East peace talks in Geneva, scheduled to resume this summer.

Settlement Is Next — "Only when we are really convinced that Egypt and Syria are intent on full observance of the separation of forces agreements will the chances for continued dialogue towards peace increase," Rabin, 52, a former ambassador to Washington, said.

The next step toward peace, Rabin said, was a settlement with Egypt and then, if feasible, Syria. He offered peace talks with Jordan and warned Israel's fourth Arab neighbor, Lebanon, that it would be held responsible for guerrilla attacks from its territory.

"Let the terrorists and their leaders know that this goal will not be attained, that the IDF (Israel Defense Forces) has the strength and vigor to take bold and systematic measures against the terrorist organizations at any time or place," he said.

Rabin's shaky Labor party coalition with four Independent Liberals and three members of the Citizens Rights Movement had the nominal support of only 61 members in the 120-seat parliament. One member bolted from the coalition and Rabin depended on the left-wing opposition for the necessary votes to take office.

After the balloting, Mrs. Meir, 76, planned to resign her seat in parliament and retire to her daughter's desert kibbutz (collective farm), bringing more than half a century of Zionist activism to a close.

Bhutan Crowns 'Dragon King'

THIMPU, Bhutan (UPI) — Lamas blew horns from rooftops, bows and spears clanked against medieval armor and thousands of persons came down from the Himalayas for the glittering coronation of their new "dragon king."

King Jigme Singye Wangchuk, 18, Sunday took up the sacred five-color scarf of authority in the tiny and remote kingdom of Bhutan, becoming the world's youngest monarch.

With medieval pageantry and splendor, a two-mile procession of Buddhist monks and soldiers escorted the young ruler to Bhutan's royal palace for the hour-long ceremony.

A line of Buddhist lamas stood on the roof of the palace trumpeting the king inside as a 31-gun salute boomed out across the valley.

The scarf — colored red, white, blue, yellow and green — represents purity of speech, mind, body and knowledge and blessings in all activities. It has never been touched except by the king and head Buddhist lama of Bhutan.

DIVISION AGAIN

Delegates Return To Beach Debate

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Constitutional Convention delegates — already bitterly divided over attempts to reconsider the controversial environmental section and judiciary article — returned today to angry arguments rehearsing the open beach guarantee they wrote last week.

Rep. John Hoestenbach, D-Odessa, accused Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, of doubletalking delegates into approving terminology that would protect only seaward beaches and allow possible sales or fencing of shorelines on bays and the back sides of islands and peninsulas.

Schwartz, originator of present statutory and the proposed constitutional guarantee of public access to state-owned waterfront, said Hoestenbach didn't know what he was talking about.

The Galveston senator said the public doesn't have the same historic easement on access to landward coast lines and that future legislatures may need flexibility to trade or sell some submerged tracts there in order to establish usable parks.

Schwartz' proposal would forever bar the legislature from selling or giving away any of the seaward shoreline and guarantee the public continued access to these beaches.

"If you vote with Mr. Schwartz, you are voting to cut off the people of Texas from probably 75 per cent of the beaches and bays of Texas," Hoestenbach charged.

Canadian Okays $3 Million Bond Plan On School

CANADIAN — A $3 million bond issue for the construction of a new high school, an addition to the elementary school and a new football stadium has been approved by voters in the Canadian Independent School District.

In Saturday's election, voters turned out 415 for and 333 against.

A supplementary bond issue of $300,000 that would have provided for an olympic-size swimming pool in the new high school was defeated 464 to 273 by voters.

Construction will require two years and school will be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1976.

Accommodating 400 students, the new high school will require about $2 million. It will be built on the site of the present football field, adjacent to the present school, and will contain a new gymnasium. A middle school for grades six, seven and eight will be established in the present building.

Using $300,000, the new football stadium will be built in the south part of town.

The elementary school project, costing $700,000, will involve the addition of 17 new classrooms and a new cafeteria.

Approval of the issue will prompt an increase in the school district tax rate, which is now $1.45 on the $100 valuation.

The Almanac

United Press International Today is Monday, June 3, the 154th day of 1974 with 211 to follow. The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini. Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy during the Civil War, was born June 3, 1808. On this day in history: In 1937, the duke of Windsor, formerly King Edward VIII of England, was married to divorcee Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore. He gave up his throne for her. In 1940, the Allies completed evacuation of Dunkerque, France, where 350,000 British, French and Belgian troops had been trapped on the channel coast by armies of Nazi Germany. In 1963, Pope John XXIII died at the age of 81 after a long illness. In 1965, astronaut Ed White made the first American "walk" in space during a Gemini 4 orbital flight with Jim McDivitt.

A thought for the day: American naturalist John Burroughs said, "Time does not become sacred to us until we have lived it."

Artist Thomas Nash drew the first representation of the Democratic party as a donkey in the Jan. 15, 1870, issue of "Harper's Weekly."

WORRY CLINIC

Heed Rev. Michael's shrewd analysis of the present "quota" system. Then apply Dr. Dodge's "recoil" phenomenon and you can predict what will happen within a generation. CASE A-648: Rev. Michael, aged 54, is a successful city pastor. Dr. Crane, he said as we had dinner together, "I think you were wise to strike a blow at the pernicious 'quota' idea now so prevalent. For here in America we rely on merit, not race or religion or the color of a man's skin. And your stress on the fact that we'll not be admitted to Heaven on any 'quota' plan, pleases me greatly. For God is no respecter of persons, color or race. Yet that pernicious 'quota' system is ruining the friendly racial relations that had been developing prior to the middle 1960s. In fact, race relations have been set back at least 25 years by the efforts of minority groups to blackmail employers and especially our legislators. And it is the ignorant but vociferous elements in our minority ethnic groups that are causing trouble for the hard-working, honest and capable members of those very same minority races. For anybody who has normal I.Q., plus ambition and willingness to use plenty of elbow grease, can rise to the top here in America without any 'quota' system. The attempt to impose a 'quota' system is merely a means of letting incompetent obtain jobs and salaries for which they are unsuited. So start indicting this vicious 'quota' idea, for nobody will get past St. Peter at the Pearly Gates by using 'quota' as a passport!"

QUOTA MALARKY

Any American who can excel by his own merit, needs no "quota" system to gain a job or win a berth on the Olympic team or cop the batting championship in major baseball. This "quota" idea is decidedly unAmerican and is handicapping the talented members of every minority racial group.

It's popularity is predicated on these two factors, both of which are unjust: (1) Politicians are pandering to the minority ethnic groups, now jammed into our large inner city areas where they tip the statewide vote for U.S. Senators, plus the Electoral College; (2) Ignorant and untrained lower segments of ethnic minorities wish to usurp the prestige and salaries of the honest, competent and deserving members of their own racial groups. This is the typical communistic policy where there is a demand to "share the wealth," as well as jobs, prestige and political preferment so the lazy and ignorant can bask in the same limelight as the deserving members of the same minority race. Prof. Raymond Dodge, former President of the American Psychological Association and my professor in graduate school at Yale, warned against such propaganda. For he mentioned the "Recoil" Phenomenon that soon develops toward such agitators. Even the ancient Hebrews evidenced this same recoil when they got fed up with Manna and then demanded meat. God told them He'd send them flesh (quails) till the meat came out of their noses! Recoil is what I describe as the reverse swing of the social pendulum, and the pendulum is already starting on its wholesome backward arc!

Home Construction Continuing Decline - AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) - New residential construction continued a decline in Texas during April 1 but non-residential construction climbed to an alltime high, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research reported Saturday. The April index of total construction authorized in Texas, adjusted for seasonal variation, increased to its highest level since March 1973, the previous alltime high. Building permits issued in April totaled almost $384 million, bringing the total value of authorizations for the first four months of the year to $1.36 billion. The most substantial decreases in construction activity occurred in the categories of hotels, motels and tourist courts and service stations and repair garages.

CBS Chairman Suggests Fairness Doctrine's End

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) - Labeling it a "tempting device" to influence the content of broadcast journalism, William S. Paley, chairman of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., has called today for repeal of the Federal Communications Commission's "Fairness Doctrine." Paley, in a speech dedicating the new broadcast building of Syracuse University's S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications, accused the Nixon administration of "unprecedented direct threats to inhibit, weaken and disable" broadcast journalism. Citing what he called government attempts to infringe on freedom of the press, and to extend the principle to entertainment and advertising, Paley said, "The time has now come to eliminate entirely the Fairness Doctrine from government rulebooks or statutes. The purpose of the Fairness Doctrine was to insure that the exercise of the right to editorialize did not lead to rampant bias on the air," he said. "The new policy was designed not to repress the expression of opinion but on the contrary to stimulate a multiplicity of opinions."

In spite of the fact that the FCC has shown moderation in putting it to use, the very fact that the Fairness Doctrine confers on a government agency the power to sit in judgement over news broadcasts makes it a tempting device for use by any administration in power to influence the content of broadcast journalism. The building, which joins a Newhouse facility dedicated to studies in the print media, was made possible by a $15 million gift from S.I. Newhouse.

Dear Abby

Wife has other ideas
on lovey-dovey hubby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a very loving husband. That's the trouble. He's TOO loving. For example, this morning he drove the kids to school and came back thinking I'd drop everything and make the bedroom scene with him. He often waits around until all the kids are gone, then he starts getting lovey-dovey when I should be getting my housework done.

Will you please tell him that the time for romance is after all the kids are asleep?

Also, he always gets ideas after bowling. Bowling wears me out, but for him it's an afrodeeshiak for however you spell it. I wouldn't mind if I could sleep the next morning, but I have to get up to drive the car pool. Am I wrong to complain? After all, we're not newlyweds. We've been married for 17 years. NO BRIDE

DEAR NO BRIDE: The ideal time for romance is when both parties are in the mood and have nothing else to do, but unfortunately that's not always possible. I say, shoot the ducks while they're flying—the housework will keep. And if the situation were reversed, I'd advise a husband to do the same.

DEAR ABBY: That answer you gave "Mad at My Husband"—the gal whose husband objected to her wearing a dress with a plunging neckline—sounded like something out of the Dark Ages.

You said, "Some husbands don't mind if their wives dress sexy, but if yours does—don't!"

Abby, you're dead wrong. A woman is entitled to dress any way she chooses, and no one, including her husband, has the right to dictate otherwise.

Would your answer have been the same if a man had written to say that his wife objected to the way HE dressed? BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN: You bet your sweet bippy! [More than one wife wrote to complain because her husband had started wearing his pants too tight. I advised her, "Tell your husband that if he wants to wear the pants in the family, he should wear 'em a little looser!"]

DEAR ABBY: I am a happy-go-lucky, 25-year-old guy who is still shook by something that happened to me last week.

I went to a newsstand where they sell magazines and paperback books. I got interested in a magazine and started to read it. I was standing there maybe 30 or 40 minutes, reading, when the lady who works there came up and said, "I think you've been here long enough. Either buy that magazine or put it back and leave."

Abby, I was so embarrassed I put the magazine back in the rack and left. A couple of people heard her, and I really felt cheap. Aren't those magazines put out for people to look at? I wasn't bothering anyone or making a disturbance. Did that lady have the right to tell me to leave? RED FACE

DEAR RED: Yes, but she could have done it quietly and spared you the embarrassment. Leafing through a magazine to decide whether to buy it is one thing—reading it is something else. Magazines that have been read by half a dozen people are fairly shopworn and not easy to sell.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M. P.: Look at it this way. Hypertension is the price you pay for being a race horse instead of a cow.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

On the subject of Mr. and Mrs. Average Player, their transition from non-expert can perhaps be visualized from today's deal.

The hand came up a few years ago during the national championships. It arose in a "side game," in which experts often compete against less-skilled players. An expert, sitting South, arrived at a four-spade contract. Twice during the play he had thrown his left-hand opponent into the lead, and forced him to lead a suit which gave declarer a trick which he might not have made on his own power.

At the conclusion of play, the West defender remarked, philosophically: "I think my bridge is improving. At least I'm beginning to learn what is being done to me." Here is the deal.

Justice Darius Baker of Newport, R.I. sentenced the first automobile driver to jail for speeding on Aug. 28, 1904. The same driver had been fined a week earlier for speeding his automobile 15 to 20 miles an hour.

East-West vulnerable.

Opening lead: Jack of ♥.

West's opening heart lead was captured by South's ace, after which a heart was led to dummy's king. Next came the nine of trumps. East discarding a heart. South played his three of spades, allowing West to take the trick with the jack.

If West now returned a spade, he would lose his king. If he returned a heart instead, declarer would ruff this lead in dummy while discarding a potentially losing club or diamond from his own hand. So West, hoping that his partner held some strength in diamonds, chose to play back the diamond three.

South won this trick with his ten, after which he cashed the trump ace, leaving West with the high singleton king. The ace and king of diamonds were now played, eliminating diamonds from both the North and South hands (hearts had been eliminated earlier).

Now a trump was led, putting West into the lead with his king. If West returned a heart, declarer would ruff this lead in dummy, while discarding the club ten from his own hand.

So West had no option but to play back a club, thus giving declarer a "free finesse," and enabling him to make three club tricks. All the defenders made were West's two trump tricks — and there wasn't a thing West could have done about improving his lot. But, as he put it, he gained something — he learned what was being done to him.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 4

Your birthday today: Is characterized by an eclipse of the full moon at 6:10 p. m. EDT, beginning a year of intense personal experience, strong responses to whatever your environment provides as materials and tools. This is a time for breaking away from out-grown habits, acquiring better ones. Today's natives are often proficient writers, good talkers, who like to travel.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Now is a time for facing old issues, a day of reckoning. Give up long-standing illusions. Forgive, ask for forgiveness, go on with things as they develop.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Don't let anybody persuade you to abandon sound financial arrangements. Influential people aren't necessarily a good example—their life circumstances are different from yours.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Take nothing for granted about incoming news—it's incomplete. Reasons for behavior are likewise not visible. Exempt yourself from criticism by doing good work.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Expect a heavier burden on the job, decide on ways of getting done on schedule. You're on your own resources and later can claim full credit for the achievement.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Social action plunges ahead whether you're ready or not. The more in the center you are, the more likely the ruffling of your dignity. Let somebody else do the honors for the moment.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You express yourself too sharply or in humorous terms. Either extreme takes your remarks out of context—if you overdo. Later hours are exceptionally lively, busy.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Being unwilling to take sides yet is normal for the preliminary, tentative state of affairs existing today. Forgive yourself and others for being human.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Put aside cash to settle old scores, at a discount. Important new moves are easily upset. Everybody seems to have a different theory on how your money is to be used.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: What is done right for you today consists mostly of what you do for yourself, giving others very little chance to interfere or interrupt. Do what you can to be careful, discreet.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Your emotional orientation to commonplace activity brings unexpected reactions from all concerned. The less you say about financing of your personal ventures, the better.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Leave vaguely defined subjects as they are. The more you try to clarify them, the harsher the pattern becomes. Learn to live with the "maybe."

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: There's a special meaning in the finer details of conversation today, anywhere. Be alert to the message. Bring your personal relationships into reasonable order today.

Considerations For Use Of Specific Paint Rollers

College Notes

By HERMAN BAUM
Dear House Doctor:
My vacation project is to paint the interior of my home. I have never used a paint roller for this purpose and I would like to try this method. A cut-rate department store has rolls ranging from 30 cents to $2. The salesman seems to be taking orders and nothing more. He said to choose any one I like, as they all do the same job. I doubt that this is true. Please give me some suggestions. — D.D.R.

ANSWER — We were in a similar store yesterday, waiting at the photographic supply counter. The salesman was helping out at the cosmetic counter. That is versatility.

A week earlier, we were in a large paint store and asked the salesman for a polyester paint roller (the roller, not the paint). He handed us one with the remark, "You can use this in polyester paint." The store owners have problems, too.

There are at least seven different materials used for the covering of paint rollers. Each has its own specific use. Some of these are:
MOHAIR — Intended for use on smooth surfaces such as wood trim. It may be used to apply enamel, epoxies, and varnish. The short nap does not mat and it is easy to clean.

WOOL — Use only with oil base paint. Never use with water-thinned paint. The newer synthetic fibers are generally preferred.
FRIEZE FABRIC — This is made of looped yarn and is intended for applying texture paint and for producing a stippled effect.

POLYESTER — Excellent for use with exterior latex and oil paint on wood siding, and for applying vinyl or latex interior flat paints.
POLYURETHANE FOAM — Used principally for applying high gloss enamel to smooth surfaces such as kitchen cabinets and furniture. Produces the smoothness of all roller finishes. Do not use with lacquer.

RAYON — Phooey! When purchasing a roller, you also need to consider the length of the nap that will give the best results. Nap lengths vary from 1-16 inch to 1 1/2 inches. The shorter is used for very smooth surfaces; the longer for rough surfaces such as brick walls.

ANSWER — These companies do not tell their secrets. However, it is our understanding that they resurface the tub with epoxy enamel. The tub must be treated with acid to produce a surface to which the enamel will adhere. I do not recommend that you attempt it.

INTRODUCES BILL Price Trying To Obtain Loans For Cattle Loss

Legislation to establish a $3 billion revolving insured loan or loan-guarantee fund to aid financially stricken cattlemen and cattle feeders, has been introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives by Congressman Bob Price of Pampa.

Price had called upon the President and the Secretary of Agriculture May 15 to establish such a fund.

The congressman contended the federal assistance is important for consumers who want a continuing supply of beef, as well as for the cattle-raising industry.

"The nation's cattle feeders have sustained significant and consistent financial losses over the past 15 months," Price, a rancher himself, stated.

"Many experienced cattlemen have lost their savings, ranches and equity. Because of the massive extent of these losses, many cattlemen and cattle feeders will be unable this year to borrow funds from normal credit channels without emergency loan support.

"Yet, without needed capital, the nation's feedyards cannot be re-stocked; and without re-stocking feedlots, the industry will be unable to continue to supply beef to American's dinner tables in either the quantity or the consistent supply necessary to stabilize the beef market," the House Agriculture Committee member explained.

The Price bill would establish an emergency revolving $3 billion insured loan or loan-guarantee fund through the Farmers Home Administration specifically for cattlemen and cattle feeders.

Price said $3 billion was a "minimum required" amount necessary to help the $20-billion beef producing industry. The industry normally uses some $5 billion in annual credit in Texas alone, he said, and estimated that cattle feeding losses in Texas have already exceeded $1 billion.

Price said his bill would enable cattlemen to borrow funds who otherwise would not be eligible for credit through normal lending channels. Under the bill, the FHA would guarantee or insure loans made through private lending institutions and would pay the difference between interest payments by borrowers and interest to which insured lenders are entitled under contracts of insurance entered into by the Secretary of Agriculture.

COUNTRY MUSIC

By PATRICK CARR
Copyright 1974 Country Music Magazine

Two bicycles and a motor bike in the driveway, a basketball hoop nailed to a post; inside, the shrill sound of four yapping miniature poodles and a mynah bird.

Three pajama-clad boys of various sizes scattered in different directions as a harried, motherly voice called out domestic orders as the bedtime routine began.

Jean Shepard came into the living room and sank into a chair with a sigh. She was barefoot, her hair pulled straight back in a ponytail, and she wore a casual shirt and slacks; she looked tired, but had an air of accomplishment about her.

It was a typical family scene, being played out by young mothers all over the country at that very moment. But it wasn't quite what you'd expect of someone who'd been getting up on stage in frilly, feminine gowns for over 20 years.

This surely didn't look like someone who could have had her first hit in Eisenhower's first year or have been married to a country music legend — Hawkshaw Hawkins.

Suddenly, 4-year-old Corey came running into the room with a question for his mother.

"Oh," Jean said, shaking her head as she picked him up and hugged him tight. "I just can't afford to grow old for him."

But even if it weren't for Corey, Jean Shepard just isn't the type who'd allow herself to grow old. She has too many things to do and is having too much fun staying on top of them.

"You know, I mean this — I dare any 25-year-old woman to follow me around for a month and do everything I do. After a month she'd be in a hospital," Jean said matter-of-factly.

Jean and her husband, Benny Birchfield — who's also her road manager and a member of her band — have five boys between them; two each from their former marriages, plus little Corey. But Jean still manages to be on the road over 200 days a year. She still works as hard as she did more than 20 years ago when she was starting out in Visalia, Calif.

Her career started in high school with an all-girl Western swing band that Jean formed when she was a sophomore. She enjoys telling the now-famous story of how she came to play the bass fiddle in the "Melody Ranch Band."

"We had to have one and nobody else could play it, so I had to learn." She groaned, remembering how she used to have to stand on Coke boxes to play it. "But I wanted one real bad. Mother and Daddy put up all the furniture in our house as collateral just to buy me that bass fiddle. Bless their hearts, they did everything on earth to help me."

When Jean's group played on the same bill with Hank Thompson one night, she had an opportunity to sing with his band. Afterwards, Thompson told her he could get her a recording contract. Jean was a bit skeptical.

"Everybody startin' out has heard that," she said. "So I told him 'sure, I'd appreciate it. I was very nice 'n' all, but kind of standoffish."

"He had me make an acetate recording for him and he said he'd get it to Capitol Records. Of course, I never heard anything from them. But when Hank came through California again a few months later, he asked me if I'd heard from Capitol and I said no."

"He got real red in the face and said to me, 'I promise you, you will.' One month later, I had a Capitol recording contract."

Twenty-one years later, Jean left Capitol Records and signed with United Artists, a little more than a year ago. She began her association with United Artists by recording her first number-one single in 17 years, "Slippin' Away."

A lot of things have changed since Jean had her very first number-one record, "Dear John," in 1953. The country music business has grown — from truck stops and honky-tonks to sophisticated nightclubs — and Jean has matured along with it.

While other stars have come and gone, Jean Shepard is still around and still making hit records. She's doing it with newer techniques and a new, more polished style, and she prides herself on her ability to adapt to the times.

"I'm proud of the fact that I can still hold my own with all the new girls coming into the business," she says. "I enjoy competition."

Jean's enthusiasm for her work is apparent and she's continually striving to try new things.

"You know, I'd love to produce," she mentioned in passing. She seemed excited about the prospect.

Jean became a member of the Grand Ole Opry in 1956, and a few years later she married Hawkshaw Hawkins. Their first boy was only 15 months old and Jean was in her eighth month of pregnancy with their second when Hawkins was killed in that famous plane crash in '63, which also took the lives of Patsy Cline and Cowboy Copas.

The family is involved in much that Jean does. She continued, "We take the boys on the road with us during the summer and on their vacations. They have a ball."

And of course Benny is actively involved in all aspects of Jean's career; besides playing guitar in her band and helping her revamp her act, he also takes care of the business end.

"I don't think I could ever travel on the road without my husband," Jean says. "I couldn't be happy leaving him behind."

Would she give up her career if he couldn't travel with her?

"Oh, that's a hard one. I don't know," Jean admits. "I would definitely be more selective, though."

When Jean's unhappy about something she just has to act on it. When she didn't like the way Capitol was handling her career a few years ago — "I felt like I was being lost in the shuffle" — she had to speak up.

"I told them I wanted a release from my contract because they'd just been neglecting me," she says. "I have to feel that my record company is with me."

When Capitol continued to deny her request for more than a year, Jean began to build up a court case, and Capitol eventually agreed to give Jean her release.

When Larry Butler, who'd produced Jean for two years before leaving Capitol, heard about it, he helped engineer her contract with United Artists and is now producing her sessions. They make such a good team that she wonders if she'll ever act on her ambition to produce.

"Larry Butler is a genius," Jean says. "and we've had a lot of success together. Out of the eight singles he produced for me at Capitol, we had six in the top 10. And we have a terrific working relationship."

Like the title says, nothing's been slippin' away from Jean Shepard.

Ritalin Good For Hyperactivity

By G.C. Thosteson, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son recently was diagnosed as being hyperactive by a school-appointed psychiatrist and was put on the drug Ritalin. I have strong reservations about using a drug like that on a child since I've read many contradictory statements about it. The whole idea is repugnant to me but I feel I have to cooperate with the school as he has posed somewhat of a problem to them — he isn't the easiest child to manage. I do understand their position. But isn't a drug a rather drastic measure to take? — J.M.J.
Maybe I can make you feel better about it. I agree that blindly giving Ritalin to any child who is having trouble in school does not make sense. There are problems other than hyperactivity which aren't going to be helped by it. But when a child is hyperactive — and you have a psychiatrist's diagnosis — Ritalin is one of several drugs which have proved to be extremely helpful. Sometimes one drug is effective, sometimes another, and it is only good sense to use whichever one does the job. I must say that I have known youngsters who have benefited greatly over a period of years from measured amounts of Ritalin. I say "measured amounts" because that drug is one of a number of useful ones which have been abused by people who take excessive amounts. But the amounts the drug-abusers use are vastly larger than the amount needed by hyperactive youngsters. So I offer you two thoughts: first, why don't you give up being so fearful, or at least put your reservations in abeyance, and see whether the program of medication doesn't bring some good results? Second, I can readily understand your wanting to "cooperate with the school" because your son gives them problems — but the deeper reason for treatment is to help him, not make it easier for the teachers. The whole purpose of the medication is to help him focus his energies so that he will be constructively learning, not dissipating his energies wastefully.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT Building Career On Being Fired

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — Attractive singer Kelly Garrett's building a whole career on being fired from the David Merrick musical, "Mack and Mabel." Besides getting hired by "Your Hit Parade" TV and being booked to headline at the Rainbow Grill Sept. 23, Kelly's now got record offers and cafe deals in Puerto Rico. She was bounced by director Gower Champion who'd already fired Marcia Rodd. Bernadette Peters flew in from L.A. and got the part. Kelly's advice to her was: "Don't unpack." Republicans are circulating this in the House: "Let the who hath not committed perjury on his income tax casteth the first impeachment stone." Times change: Now girls want to play ball. I remember when they not only wouldn't play ball but wouldn't let a guy get to first base. Aristotle Onassis isn't selling Olympic Airways. Johnny Meyer assured me. His company's committed to operate it till 2024 A.D. By which time Ari'll be 118 years old... Carol Channing delicately adjusted the zipper on the costume of a male dancer "Lorelei." It was done in good taste but the wardrobe union says she's not allowed to do that. I went to the Duke Ellington funeral where Pearl Bailey, a Nixon friend, kept saying, "The President loved Duke." A reporter asked, "Because both played the piano?" Pearl retorted, "No, it was love." Pearl, who brought a Nixon letter to the family, then flew to Jordan, saying "Henry (Kissinger) and I will find something better than an oil — UNDERSTANDING." Duke once told me, "In one night in 1923, Joe Trent and I wrote a whole show, 'Chocolate Kiddies,' that played in the Berlin Winter Garden for two years and made stars of Josephine Baker and Adelaide Hall. That comes from being illiterate. Nobody'd told us you couldn't write a show in one night." Sitting on two phone books to give him height, Erroll Garner opened at the St. Regis Maisonette, with Sylvia Syms exclaiming, "Wonderful!" and critic Arnold Shaw (author of "The Rockin' 50's") asserting, "he's more dissonant, more contrapuntal, less melodic and less chordal." He added, "That's a compliment!" Joey Adams, writing his 20th book ("The God Bit"), recalls that on his first one, when he was less learned, he wrote a beginning and titled it "Forward." A wise editor told him, "Very good, Joey, but it's not a Forward, it's a preface."

Under Twenty

By KURT LASSEN
Back in the Elvis Presley days the United States Exported rock 'n roll to England. In the 1960's it had been modified and through the impact of The Beatles was shipped back from England to this country. Since the 1920's jazz has been an American export to England. Now, it too, has come full cycle in the person of George Melly and The Feet Warmers. Speaking with George one gets the impression it may be more of an invasion than an import! The invasion is both personal (a debut appearance at New York's Bottom Line) and via an album: "Son of Nuts," just released. George shares something with The Beatles. He, too, is a Liverpudlian and says, "I love New York because it reminds me of Liverpool, much more so than London." This is said with a Liverpudlian accent overlaid with what George has picked up in London over the years. But his singing is what is termed "black." "When I fell in love with jazz," he explained, "I listened to all the great ones like Louis Armstrong and Bessie Smith. My ear picked up the tones and inflections and that's the way I sing. I must say it comes as a bit of a shock when my British jokes and talk come across very British between the numbers!" In England, George is called a "raver." Here he would be called either a jazz singer or a better. "I guess I'm the only male raver in England. You see when I began to get into jazz I was too lazy to learn an instrument so I started to sing. I first heard jazz at school. It was 'eccentric' Muggsy Spanier. Then I was walking along the street one day and heard a jazz record. I went up, knocked on the door and asked if I might come in and listen. It turned out to be Louis Armstrong's 'Drop That Sack.' That really set me off and I practically made a career of hearing every recording I could get, borrow or steal." Strange things happen to George Melly (or he often helps make them happen). For example, on his opening night at the club his band was delayed by some visa problems and missed opening night. "I just got on the phone," George told us, "and called around and got some of the greatest jazz musicians around to come and play for me that night. The boys are at the airport right now. I hope they don't get lost." The opening, despite a sit-in band, was an event. There was British Nobility which "just happened to be in town." There were high society, celebrities, dyed-in-the-wool jazz buffs, high school kids, college kids. George's reputation had preceded him by stories about him in the press and by virtue of an earlier jazz album. "The labels on jazz," he told us, "are misleading. Over the years we've had Dixieland, rhythm and blues, progressive and what have you. Now jazz has sort of merged and spun together and it is difficult to tell where one left off and the other began." George's "raving" in his album, "Son of Nuts," is pure jazz even for the jazz purist. His version of Bessie Smith's "Young Woman's Blues" with slightly altered words to "fit my sex" is filled with all the pliancy Bessie gave the song. James P. Johnson's "Old-Fashioned Love" makes one feel he's in a New Orleans Bistro. "From here I'm off to Boston, then Philadelphia. Then we have to rush home for a batch of concerts in England. I wish there were more time here. I want to come back as soon as I can." The reception George Melly, the "raver," has gotten thus far to his re-imported jazz has been such that one can bet he'll be back to these shores soon — with another load! Phillies Nudge San Francisco

United Press International
The Philadelphia Phillies joked about whether Greg Luzinski was thinking or guessing Sunday but it was no laughing matter to Randy Moffitt and the San Francisco Giants.

Luzinski jumped on Moffitt's first pitch after coming in from the bullpen Sunday to hit a two-run homer which climaxed a four-run eighth inning rally and gave the Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Giants. The win kept the Phillies in a virtual tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for first place in the National League East. Luzinski explained after the game how he had out-thought (or out-guessed) the San Francisco reliever. "I faced him in the Pacific Coast League and the big leaguers and he's been tough on me," said Luzinski. "He likes to get ahead of you with his fast ball and then go to his breaking stuff."

California 0, Oakland 6 Milwaukee 4, Boston 9 Chicago 7 and Baltimore 6 Texas 5 in 10 innings.

Menne Gets Lifetime Dream By Capturing Kemper Open

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — For Bob Menne, an obscure Massachusetts native in his fifth year on the PGA tour, it was the dream of a lifetime. Victory in one of the tour's richest events, the $250,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

"This makes life worthwhile," said Menne, 32, who defeated Californian Jerry Heard on the first extra hole of a sudden death playoff Sunday by sinking a 30-foot birdie putt.

"It's something I've been dreaming about since I was a little kid," he said. "It means everything — the Masters, the Tournament of Champions and the money, which we've never had."

Menne, who had to compete in an 18-hole qualifier just to get into the field of the designated tournament, in which the game's biggest names were required to compete, pocketed a $50,000 first prize.

Heard, already victorious on the 1974 tour with a win in the Florida Citrus Open at Orlando, felt he played well and was far from disappointed at his 18-under-par showing of 270 for 72 holes.

"It just was not in the cards," he said.

Menne sank a six-foot putt for a birdie on the final regulation hole, a 441-yard par 4, to draw even with Heard and send the tournament into a playoff.

"I knew the only chance I'd have was to make it," said Menne, who had an 18-hole score of 67 to Heard's 70 over the par 72, 7,085-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

Veteran Dave Hill, with a 65, only one stroke off the course record, was third at 271. Lee Trevino's 69 put him another shot back at 272. At 273 were smooth-putting Billy Casper and lanky J.C. Snead.

Jack Nicklaus was eight strokes off the winning pace with a 70-278 and Masters champion Gary Player, victorious a week ago in the Memphis Classic, had a 72-286.

Johnny Miller, getting his game in shape for the U.S. Open, posted a final round 70 to finish at 280.

Both defending champion Tom Weiskopf and Arnold Palmer missed the cut. Palmer for the third week in a row, something that had never before happened in his career.

Texas Nips Orioles Behind Rookie, 6-5

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Wayne Garland made his homecoming quite a successful one Sunday night and it might have won him a permanent spot on the Baltimore roster.

Garland, making his third relief appearance since being called up from Rochester in the International League, came on for Baltimore in the fifth inning Sunday night and did all that was asked.

The bases were loaded with Texas Rangers and the score was tied, 5-5. Garland got the side out without further damage and allowed only two hits in six innings until Baltimore finally came up with a 6-5 decision in 10 innings.

Garland's trip to the majors has taken place

under tragic circumstances. He was brought up only because left-handed Don Hood had to leave the club a week ago on the drowning death of his mother in South Carolina. Last winter Garland and Hood were with another Orioles' minor league pitching prospect, Mark Weems, when he drowned off the Mexican coast.

The 23-year-old Garland spent two years pitching in Arlington Stadium with the old Dallas-Fort Worth Texas League franchise and compiled a 19-5 record in 1971.

"It was a big boost to me to pitch in this ball park again," Garland said. "I had that great year here in 1971 and I love to pitch in this park."

Perry Wins 9th Straight By Stopping Kansas City

United Press International
Gaylord Perry has dried up his act, but opposing American League batters may still ask him to take a saliva test.

Perry, who has admitted to throwing spitters in the past, was forced to change his routine this season after baseball's rules committee decided over the winter to make it easier for umpires to warn, and then even eject, pitchers for throwing the outlawed pitch.

Since going dry this year, the Cleveland Indians' veteran has won nine games in a row after losing the season-opener and has thrown nine complete games, including Sunday's 5-2 victory over Kansas City when he stopped the Royals on six hits.

"I was disgusted with my control today," said Perry, 35, who walked six batters but now has allowed only five runs in his last 45 innings of work and run his routine-going performance streak to five. "I had a good forkball but I got behind too many hitters."

Perry, who was traded to Cleveland by San Francisco after the 1971 season, credits the Indians' improved defense with his brilliant start this season.

Spikes Caught Otis
Part of that improved defense was shown in the eighth inning Sunday when rightfielder Charlie Spikes threw out the Royals' fleet Amos Otis who tried to score from second base on a single by Hal McRae.

Leron Lee smashed his third homer of the season in the first inning to tie the score, 1-1. Back-to-back homers by Oscar Gamble and Dave Duncan highlighted a three-run uprising by Cleveland in the fourth when the Indians chased losing pitcher Paul Splitteroff.

Elsewhere in the AL, Oakland beat Milwaukee, 6-4; Boston outlasted Chicago, 9-7; New York thrashed Minnesota, 11-1; Detroit blanked California, 2-0, and Baltimore edged Texas, 6-5, in 10 innings.

In the National League, Chicago nipped Los Angeles, 7-6; Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh, 5-1; St. Louis topped San Diego, 9-6; Atlanta shut out Montreal, 9-0, and Philadelphia shaded San Francisco, 4-3. Houston at New York was postponed because of rain.

A's 6, Brewers 4
Joe Rudi crashed a three-run homer and Reggie Jackson smacked his 14th and 15th homers in leading Oakland over Milwaukee. Jim Hunter gained credit for his eighth victory. Bob Coluccio homered for Milwaukee.

Red Sox 9, White Sox 7
Rico Petrocelli drove in four runs with a pair of homers to lead Boston past Chicago. Tommy Harper chipped in with a two-run homer for the Red Sox. Dick Allen hit his 10th homer for Chicago.

Yankees 11, Twins 1
Three-run homers by Rick Dempsey and Ron Blomberg and Lou Piniella's solo shot highlighted a seven-run sixth inning for New York in its win over Minnesota. Mel Stottlemyre scattered six hits to even his record at 6-6 and break a personal five-game losing streak.

4 Die In Speed Competition

United Press International
Speed races, both on the land and in the water, took a toll of four lives on three continents Sunday.

In Miami, George "Skip" Walther, brother of Indianapolis car driver Salt Walther, was killed Sunday morning when he was thrown from his power boat in a practice run for the $30,000 Champion Spark Plug unlimited regatta.

The accident came little more than a year after Salt Walther was burned critically in the Indianapolis 500 auto race. Salt recovered, however, and finished 17th in the 1974 Indy last week.

Ironically, Skip Walther was entered only as a replacement for Jim McCormick, who suffered severely lacerated legs when he was thrown from his boat during a test run on Thursday.

According to witnesses, Walther's boat "Redman" hit a wave and disappeared in a plume of spray at Miami Marine Stadium. The Dayton, Ohio, driver was recovered from the water and rushed to Jackson Memorial Hospital in the elbow.

Doctors said he suffered a skull fracture and massive lacerations of the brain and his arm was severed at the elbow.

Walter was the first unlimited driver to be killed since Tommy Fuhs was killed in 1969 at San Diego.

Two Japanese auto drivers, Hiroshi Kazato and Seichi Suzuki, were killed in a collision during the Fuji Grand Championship at Shizuoka, Japan, and a six-year-old boy was killed and his father seriously injured when a sports car shot into a crowd of spectators at Mainz, Germany.

The Japanese accident occurred shortly after the start when the Chevron B26 of Kazato crashed into the rail.

Irvine Downs Northern, 8-1
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Ron Spence slammed a three-run homer in the first inning Sunday evening to lead the University of California-Irvine to an 8-1 victory over Ohio Northern in the NCAA Division 2 baseball playoffs.

In a game earlier in the day, New Haven, Conn., eliminated Valdosta, Ga. State College 1-0, as Lou Pagliarunga drove in the lone run in the sixth inning, giving John Pult the win and Valdosta's Bill Petty the loss.

Today's Sports Parade

NEW YORK (UPI) — You may fool all the people some of the time, and you can even fool some of the people all the time, but you can never fool the television people at option time.

Their instincts are so good, they remind you of homing pigeons. They rarely make a mistake, especially when it comes to deciding whether to pick up an option or let it drop.

Despite a good deal of conjecture to the contrary, NBC-TV has decided to pick up hockey's option for the 1974-75 season. What that means is you'll be able to continue watching National Hockey League games on the tube next season as well as the Stanley Cup contests.

What it also means is that hockey will have an opportunity to increase its audience, pay its huge player salaries and maintain parity with baseball, football and basketball as a legitimate big league sport.

Should Be Thankful
And possibly what it means most of all is that the NHL Board of Governors should be thankful they have a guy like Don Ruck working for them.

If you've never heard of Don Ruck, don't worry. A lot of other people haven't either. That's because he does his job the way it should be done, efficiently and quietly.

Don Ruck is vice president of the NHL. That's only one of his jobs. He also is president and director of NHL services, which consume much of his time.

Ruck practically commutes between New York and Washington. You'll find him in Washington more than Pete Rozelle, Bowie Kuhn, Walter Kennedy or Mike Storen and if somebody takes a picture of the group and you can't seem to identify the one on the end — that's Ruck.

To understand the genesis of hockey's struggle for exposure on TV, an exposure it desperately needs to survive as big league, it should be remembered that hockey has the smallest audience base among the so-called major sports.

Even with the Atlanta Flames, there still are no hockey rinks to speak of in the South. Every backyard has a hoop, and every high school has a football team, but where does a kid go to learn to skate?

Wood Didn't Agree
The TV people are aware of all this and naturally were slow to shell out anywhere near the kind of money they were willing to pay professional football and baseball or even golf.

Originally, CBS-TV signed a contract with the NHL for $1.5 million a year. It expired in 1970, after which six of the NHL's new owners formed what was known as the owners' TV committee.

They went to Robert Wood, president of CBS-TV, and told him they thought hockey was worth more than $1.5 million. Wood didn't agree; in fact he suggested a drastic reduction in what the network was willing to pay.

This created an impasse, and Ruck, who had been with the NHL since 1966 and had done some work with TV, took over the negotiations.

A low key, indefatigable dynamo, Ruck, 45, has his own way of negotiating.

"I believe first in listening to the other fellow," he says. "I don't believe in the punch-in-the-mouth approach. That's okay for the hockey game, nothing else."

He put together a two-year contract that in 1970 CBS went for, but in the spring of 1972, CBS wanted out.

Ruck went to NBC. He didn't give Carl Lindemann, Jr., vice president of NBC-TV sports, any Madison Avenue flim-flam. He offered him the same package CBS rejected.

"You interested in hockey?" he asked Lindemann.

"Yes," was the answer.

"Okay, here's what you'll get," Ruck said, outlining the package.

NBC went for it, and although no figures ever are announced by either party, the NHL was reported to have received something in the neighborhood of $2.4 million.

That was for the 1972-73 season and last year NBC paid somewhere around $2.8 million, which is about what it has paid for its option next season as well.

under tragic circumstances. He was brought up only because left-handed Don Hood had to leave the club a week ago on the drowning death of his mother in South Carolina. Last winter Garland and Hood were with another Orioles' minor league pitching prospect, Mark Weems, when he drowned off the Mexican coast.

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Volunteer Army Critics

The all-volunteer army is now a reality. As a consequence, riots and unrest associated with conscription have withered. Nevertheless, the volunteer army is meeting heavy criticism.

The main objection is that attracting young men to the military service costs more than forcing them to it and that the Army is not getting all the recruits that it would like to have.

These points are unquestionably valid, but we would offer a few additional words to set them in perspective. In our opinion, this perspective shows — as long as we are stuck with paying taxes to buy protection — the volunteer military service is the least unfair.

At the outset, no one of understanding supposed that the volunteer idea would work automatically. We have seen very few ideas that do. The most common experience is that ideas have to be worked; they usually do not fulfill themselves. As the Army becomes accustomed to the plan, as it develops the "customers attitude" toward enlistees — according to the proper respect, but without pampering — you can expect to see an improvement in the quality and number of recruits.

As to the added expense, a soldier is entitled to what he is worth: that is, the defense service that he renders by training, by operational duties, or just by standing by has a marketable value. He is like a policeman on a corner; he may be doing nothing at that moment, but his very presence is a guarantee to the security of those in that vicinity.

The difference between a policeman and a soldier is that one guards the domestic tranquility and the other provides for the common defense against foreign attack.

If the time comes to pass that the American people do not value their property, families and lives, then a policeman earns nothing because he is not protecting anything considered valuable. However, so long as property, families and lives are deemed precious, the policeman earns his keep — every cent of it. And the same is true of a soldier.

It is not less inequitable to draft a soldier in order to pay him less than it would be to draft a policeman for the sake of obtaining cheap law enforcement. Generally speaking, you get what you pay for anyway.

A claim is being made of course that the military service exaggerates its financial needs, that it is wasteful. That was as true of the draft Army as it is of the volunteer Army. If government revenue systems were also placed on a volunteer basis, there might come to be some cure for excessive military demands. We do not see any practical solution at the moment except for persistent vigilance.

When you take all things together, indirect costs along with direct, when you consider troubles avoided (such as public disturbances arising from the draft), the extra expense of the volunteer army is less than what appears on the ledger sheets. No doubt about it though, if people don't want foreign enemies walking on their flower-beds, they will have to foot the bill to keep them away. With a voluntary army, the soldier's pay is determined by the manpower marketplace. Anything less is unjust.

The Modern Fairy Tale

Credit for one of the most perceptive observations we've read across lately goes to the unknown author of "Today's Chuckle," one of those little items used by newspapers to fill space. Here it is:

A little girl asked her mother if all fairy tales begin with "Once upon a time." "No," replied the mother. "Today most of them begin with 'If I am elected.'"

ALL THAT GLITTERS

Mixing Religion And Politics

By VIC GOLD
WASHINGTON — With Protestant Billy Graham and Catholic John McLaughlin in his White House, the country seems blessed with a President who, whatever his other shortcomings, is within one rabbi of performing the clerical hat trick.

No sacrifice intended. Dacripolitics, maybe, inasmuch as recent years have seen religion and politics mixed pretty liberally by social activist clergymen of all denominations.

Hardly a day goes by, for example, without word that the National Council of Churches has placed its imprimatur on some cause or ad-hoc committee of the left. Or without Cesar Chavez's latest boycott against grapes — lettuce — Teamsters being enhanced by the strident prayers of yet another local chapter of the Militant Clerics Union.

And then there is the matter of impeachment in some areas of the clergy; it's virtually an article of ecumenical faith. Father McLaughlin's activities are more than matched by the efforts of clerics of all creeds working the other side of the issue.

Where, pray tell, is all this sacripolitics going to end? To answer that question we might ask ourselves where it all began. Which brings me back to the subject of John McLaughlin, the resident White House Jesuit dubbed "Nixon's priest."

Let me be among the first to say something in defense of Father John — as he would be affectionately known had his political activism led him leftward instead of rightward. But understand before I do that I'm actually a strict constructionist on the issue of separation of church and state.

What I prefer is that clergymen walk wide of politics and that politicians swear off armband religiosity in their pursuit and conduct of public office. Meaning, that if a ceasefire and retreat could be arranged on both sides, my wish would be for McLaughlin to stop traveling around the country making political speeches.

And, while I'm at it, a few words may be in order on the style of McLaughlin's extra - pulpit sermonizing. He is, indeed, as critics charge, far too slick at the job of rendering unto Caesar. As a presidential surrogate, he has been at times the artful forensic dodger, a cavilling work-merchant who could give James St. Clair a run for his fee as the world's foremost Philadelphia lawyer - from New England.

All of which may seem a devil's advocacy defense of "Nixon's priest." But bear me out. For my point about Father John is that it was inevitable that he, or someone like him, would appear on the political scene in response to the anti-establishment clerical activists of recent years.

What McLaughlin is brewing, in high temporal profile, you see, is that social activism isn't the exclusive monopoly of the anti-establishment. And what would be kept in mind while McLaughlin's critics gather forth is that the pattern for clerical politics in our time wasn't set by the Nixon White House.

Certainly many of McLaughlin's critics, now heard to object to the invocation of scriptural morality on behalf of a President, were silent when the Berrigans and other New Left clerics were in self-righteous cry during the 1960s.

Indeed, even while they argue that a man of the cloth has no place on the executive payroll, these critics nod approvingly at the partisan fulminations of the anti-Nixon priest, Robert Drinan, at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Why the difference? Is it that one holds appointive and the other elective office? As far as the right of either man to speak out as a citizen is concerned, that is small difference. And as for the mixing of politics and piety, no difference at all.

CONSTRUCTION WAGES SOAR

$25,000 A Year For A Carpenter

By VICTOR RIESEL
WASHINGTON — This positively isn't a graduation-season fairy tale. This is a nuts-and-bolts story. Put down that cap and gown, get a hard hat and overalls, a wrench, a hammer and trowel — and you're in a fine paying business. There are union carpenters in Dutchess County, N.Y., whose new contract, if they work the year round, will net them well over $25,000 annually.

There are plumbers in Portland, Ore., who just signed a one-year contract raising wages by $2 an hour during this year. And new higher zone travel rates. That is, the further the construction job site is from one's home center, the higher the travel time "reimbursement." And a new contract is coming up next year.

And in San Antonio, Tex., carpenters just signed for a 95 cents an hour jump over a year — atop the current rate of $7.28 an hour. Also the bricklayers got 95 cents an hour more during this year over a going rate of $7.92 hourly. Before overtime. And little seasonality layoff in the fine weather enjoyed in Texas.

So the average increases are rolling this year to 11 and 12 percent just in one year.

But meanwhile back on the wage range in Dutchess County, some reckon the new increase at about 16 percent by the end of the second year of a three-year contract signed with the Master Builders. Since, for the moment, I'm talking to the cap-and-gown crowd, I'll talk in arithmetic.

The Dutchess County carpenters, Local 203, have been making $10.12 an hour basic. Before overtime. Their new contract gives them, as of June 1, an additional $1.15 an hour. Next June (1975) the rate goes up another $1.20 an hour. And same date '76, another $1.25.

Thus the total increase comes to $3.60 for the three raises in one contract. This gives a base pay rate of $13.72 an hour. On a 40-hour week this comes to $548.80. Actually the carpenters don't wait for the end of the third year to get the full amount. They begin earning it at the beginning of the third year (the end of the second year).

The percentage increases are appalling. True, the men don't work 52 weeks a year. Winter comes in heavy. But seasonality layoffs, what with modern construction methods, grow shorter. And overtime makes up for quite a bit.

But don't anyone throw away that cap and gown and degree. Carpentry is good work if you can get it, but you don't get it unless you're in the union in many areas. And that isn't always as simple as walking on water.

Well, in union there is strength. And this power is highly visible across the land. First the West Coast from San Francisco Bay Area up to Portland, Ore., and soon down to Southern California and then it all will ripple out from the construction trades industry.

So we're in 1970-71 again. And the President does read arithmetic as well as all those "high source" stories turned out by some 1,000 Watergate correspondents. He and his economics braintrust, troubleshooters rather, economic "czar" Ken Rush, Treasury Secretary Bill Simon and Office of Management and Budget chief Roy Ash (the rest are outsiders), want Congress to give them a jawboning cost-of-living monitoring task force.

But all it would have is a jawbone. No stick in the closet. And truly no one to wield it, not that George Shultz has gone on to earn a living in San Francisco — and Prof. John Dunlop is looking homeward in anger. Homeward being Harvard. Congress rejected his pleas for some sort of controls or monitoring so he could scold labor and management in public.

Further the White House now has little liaison with the powerful AFL-CIO. The national building and construction trades union chief swat with awe and bewilderment at their rank-and-file unions demand, and get, $80 to $90 a week increases per week per man (and lady) — before overtime.

There are no controls over anything but some tempers and energy products and supplies. Nor are the zoom-zoom-zoom contract negotiations limited to the construction field.

Who knows? We may all have money to burn. Literally. If this continues and prices follow, that's all the paper will be worth. (All Rights Reserved)

The Pentagon has twice as many generals and admirals as in World War II with six times fewer men to command. Just more bunk for our buck.

Secretary Mansfield would cut $5 to $10 billion from the defense budget. That could eliminate armament jobs for the retired brass.

Senator Scott thinks he has a sure thing in the impeachment race. He got it right from Nixon's mouthpiece.

David Eisenhower might run for Congress — if he can get his father-in-law not to campaign for him.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Nixon Decides To OK Legal Services Bill

By ROBERTS ALLEN
WASHINGTON — President Nixon has decided to sign that long-embattled bill to continue the widely controversial "legal aid for the poor" program.

That's the inside word in authoritative White House and Republican congressional quarters.

First year cost of this legislation is $90 million.

Three influential Republicans are credited with persuading the President to accept it.

— Leonard Garment, counsel to the President, former member of his New York law firm, and a liberal who makes no bones that he voted for Presidents Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. Little known publicly, Garment, 49, who succeeded to the title of counsel after the ouster of John Dean, has determinedly championed the legal services program throughout its stormy existence.

— Senator Jacob Javits, N.Y., ranking GOP member of the Labor and Public Welfare Committee, who masterminded the bill through the Senate and a House-Senate conference committee. Throughout, Javits, running for a fourth term this year, worked closely with Garment.

— Rep. Albert Quie, Minn., ranking Republican on the Education and Labor Committee — which wangled jurisdiction over this legislation despite vehement protests that it belonged to the Judiciary Committee. In the 18 months of backstage parliamentary backing and filling over the measure, Quie worked hand-in-glove with Garment, Javits and the Democratic leadership — which vigorously supports the legal services program launched in 1965 by the Johnson Administration.

In 1971, President Nixon vetoed a bill on the ground it lacked adequate safeguards to prevent a repetition of the widespread scandals and abuses that have wracked the legal services program since its start.

While most of the principal loopholes have been plugged up in the pending "compromise" measure, it is still scorchingly under fire.

Howard Phillips, who as head of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), sought to abolish the legal services program, spearheaded an aggressive drive to shelve the Garment-Javits-Quie "compromise." This effort came within a few votes of succeeding in the House.

A motion to send the bill back to committee for inclusion of certain restrictions, particularly barring so-called "back-up centers," was narrowly rejected 190 to 183.

During the torrid debate, both Democrats and Republicans cited numerous instances of legal services-beggared record. It was assailed as "second only to the OEO in gross and malodorous mismanagement, waste and unsavory and indefensible practices."

As the bill finally emerged from Congress, it creates an 11-member public service corporation to administer the legal services program. All these directors are appointed by the President, subject to confirmation by the Senate. No more than six can belong to one political party, and at least half must be attorneys.

Garment will have an important voice in the selection of these board members. He is said to favor the inclusion of several women and several blacks.

War of Words
There will be even more truculent Moscow fulminating about that military helicopter that crash-landed some 30 miles inside China several months ago — but no shooting.

The Kremlin is threateningly demanding the "immediate" return of the chopper and its crew — a captain and two lieutenants. It is claimed they were on a medical evacuation flight, lost their bearings and ran out of fuel. Peking defiantly charged the craft was on a reconnaissance mission, and the army officers are "spies."

To counter the Soviet's increasingly menacing tone and words, intelligence authorities expect the Chinese to pull an "end run."

The crashed helicopter will be sent back to the Russians, but the three crewmen will be held, and put on public trial as spies. What if anything can be proved against them remains to be seen.

But the crafty maneuver would put the Soviet on the defensive.

Its strident demand for return of the helicopter would be met, and at the same time Peking could justifiably contend it's exercising its right to prove the crewmen are spies.

The region where the explosive incident occurred is one of the most sensitive on the lone Sino-Soviet border. It's in the area where Russia, its satellite Outer Mongolia, and the huge Chinese province of Sinkiang come together — and where both sides have massive military forces.

The U.S.S.R. Has two armies deployed there: hundreds of combat planes, a vast radar and communications system — and a large arsenal of devastating nuclear missiles and bombs.

If war ever does erupt between these two Communist giants, it will start in this tinderbox strategic area. (All Rights Reserved)

POLICE AND COMPUTERS
Computers, like mass radio communications, are now a vital part of police work. Larger law enforcement offices around the country have found computers to be a powerful aid in the processing of criminal records, matching fingerprints and piecing together information that modern enforcement techniques require. A highly sophisticated computer process recently led to the solution of a series of robbery-murder cases in Dallas. The cracking of the cases not only served justice but also probably saved lives of merchants who could have been potential victims.

While science and technology move forward in the field of criminology, the basic ingredient of good law enforcement is still the human element. Officers doing lone night patrol provide security against the killer, burglar and hijacker. The mental computer of a seasoned detective comes up with the clues that solve stubborn criminal cases. Human courage of the man behind the badge is probably the most vital of all the resources thrown into the battle against crime.

There is still another element in the war against those who break the law. It is the support of the law enforcement agencies by

ON THE WING
SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — The Pacific black brant, official bird of nearby Mission Bay Park, has started bypassing the highly developed recreational area, the California Fish and Game Department reports.
Apparently frightened by boats, the birds are migrating farther southward.

The Atlantic and Pacific herrings are salt water cousins of the skipjack, Ohio and gizzard shad.
