Pampa judge orders drug money forfeited

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

A district judge today ordered money seized during a January traffic-stop-turned-drug-bust be forfeited to the state.

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Ron Shank of McLean testified in 223rd

District Court that he stopped the late Steven Jack Stuart, 47, on Interstate 40 four miles west of McLean on a speeding violation.

Shank told Judge Lee Waters that Stuart consented to a search and unlocked the car's trunk. Based on the search, Shank said he discovered two bags containing more than 50 lbs. of what he believed to be marijuana in the trunk of the Petaluma, Calif., man's car. The substance was wrapped in bundles covered by sticky contact paper. Shank said Stuart told him that all the luggage in the car was Stuart's.

Shank said he arrested Stuart and searched the car discovering $800 in cash in a brief case. The officer told the judge he believed it was to be used to finance the distribution of marijuana.

Supervisor Roy Murphy of the DPS crime lab in Amarillo testified today that the green, leafy substance which Shank seized tested positively as marijuana on Feb. 2.

An answer to the seizure and forfeiture suit was filed, Shank said; however, no one spoke on Stuart's behalf today.

At the time of Stuart's arrest, he was also charged with resisting arrest after a struggle with Shank.

The trooper said today Stuart died since the January episode.

PAMPA -- The Gray County Appraisal Review Board will meet Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. in the appraisal district conference room at 815 N. Sumner.

Items on the agenda include the presentation of records for 1995 and the chief appraiser's report.

Meetings are open to the public.

PAMPA -- The Lovett Memorial Library's annual summer reading program kicks off Wednesday with a presentation by Pam Green of Clean Pampa.

Children ages 3 to 14 can still sign up for the month-long program, according to Teresa Sellers, program director.

All programs run from 2 to 3 p.m., and they are all free.

PAMPA -- Community Awareness and Emergency Response and Local Emergency Planning Committees will meet Wednesday, June 14, concerning two emergency backup generators.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) -- Prosecutors claim it's too late for Roger Dale Stafford to argue in appeals that the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals didn't properly review his death-penalty case.

FORT WORTH (AP) -- Defense contractor North American Philips Corp. has been convicted in federal court of lying about faulty components it was selling the Department of Defense and NASA.

HOUSTON (AP) -- A 10-year-old Galveston boy who had admitted to setting a fire that killed a 74-year-old man has been cleared of arson charges.

HOUSTON (AP) -- A South Texas sheriff's challenge of the Brady Law will be heard by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals this week.

DALLAS (AP) -- The Texas Centennial buildings at Fair Park might soon be off limits to the public unless money is made available to repair them.

AUSTIN (AP) -- Gerry Van King is one of several street performers in the "Live Music Capital of the World" concerned about a police crackdown on noise.

"More than one (police officer) has told me they're going to clean up Sixth, and there wouldn't be nobody playing," says Van King, who plays the bass guitar and sings to crowds in the city's entertainment district.

Budding entrepreneurs

The summer sunshine sprouted a crop of budding entrepreneurs this week in Pampa. Sixto Albear, left, Javier Solis and Zack Stark put up a lemonade stand beneath the shade of a tree at Faulkner and Wilks Monday after the sun came out chasing away the rain clouds. Diners can enjoy a cool sip of lemonade today for 15 cents as summer comes to the area and temperatures are expected to reach into the 90 degree range. "They just wanted to have something to do," said Alicia Stark, Zack's mother.

Recent rains fill Lake McClellan

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Lake McClellan has reached the 11-foot mark, and officials with the lake's improvement board expect that number to go even higher, possibly even to the maximum 21 feet.

Lake officials said today that the water level had risen by six feet at the shore since Monday.

Before the lake went dry, the average depth was between 10-15 feet, but recent silt excavation has made a deeper lake possible.

The lake is still rising, much to the pleasure of those who work there.

Venita Roland, permit office manager, said she put a stake along the shore line at 9 a.m. Monday morning, and by 3 p.m. the water had risen over five feet.

One member of the improvement board said he expects the lake to continue to fill in to the maximum depth, losing only two feet after it crests at the spillway to soaking.

Sid Mauldin also estimates that another two inches of rain upstream could completely fill the lake.

This is the first time in a year that the lake has held any water, and officials want people to know the lake is back in business.

Stan Anthony, improvement project coordinator between the county and the U.S. Forest Service, says the depth is already safe enough for boating and skiing, if they can get through the sludge that has settled at the foot of the boat ramp. Prevailing winds have pushed a large amount of debris to the shore, but once the lake crests and soaks in, the debris should easily be removed.

Anthony added that he hopes the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department will stock the lake soon with fingerlings and catchable size (12 inches or more) fish. The improvement board is also in the process of buying larger fish from fish farms, hoping to attract people back to the once-dry lake.

"Fishing is a big part of getting business back down here," Gray County Commissioner Gerald Wright said.

Already a story about the fish that got away is circulating around the lake.

This weekend, after the lake had begun to fill up, Roland noticed a group of fisherman near the shore. She went down to tell them that the lake had only just started filling up and that there wouldn't be any fish in it yet.

"But we've already caught one," the men said, showing her a fish a few inches long.

As soon as they lifted the line, though, the fish slipped off the hook and back into the water.

Roland said fishermen would need to bring a license. She does not have any today.

Wright also said that another aspect of attracting people back to the lake is the ongoing improvement project.

That project included the silt excavation that absorbed most of the $360,000 capital improvement fund from the forest service, but the improvement board hopes to find funding for new restrooms and a bathhouse.

Forest service tour Lakes McClellan, Marvin and the Black Kettle National Grasslands

For eight months, forest service officials from New Mexico had planned a trip to Lake McClellan, expecting to see the dry lake bed Gray County residents have seen for the past year.

Instead, they saw a lake already half full and still rising.

"It's a real treat to see it with water again," said Jeanine Derby, forest supervisor for this area.

The forest supervisor was joined by peers from the Lincoln National Forest in southeast New Mexico and the Hila National Forest, as well as a wildlife biologist.

Next, the Forest Service officials will head to Cheyenne, Okla., to the Black Kettle National Grasslands, and after that will visit Lake Marvin in Canadian before heading back to New Mexico.

City garage sale termed success

PAMPA -- Convenience store executives were terming the weekend city-wide garage sale a success.

Celebration of Lights organizer Seleta Chance said she was very pleased with the weekend's sales.

"The weather hurt us some, but we can't control that," she said, but added that she had heard of a number of out-of-town visitors who came for the garage sales.

According to stores surveyed, business was up between 20 and 25 percent. That translates into about 3,700 additional people in the stores, convenience store association spokesman said. It also means about $6,100 in additional revenue for stores.

Store personnel reported shoppers from some 17 surrounding cities including Guymon, Canyon, Turkey and Lubbock.

Plans for next year's sales are already in the works. Among the plans are a central office and a larger map.

Chisum to speak at luncheon next week

CASA of Gray County is sponsoring a legislative luncheon featuring State Representative Warren Chisum at 11:45 a.m. on Wednesday, June 14.

CASA, an acronym for Court Appointed Special Advocates, is a group of volunteers advocating the child's side in legal actions. They deal primarily with child placement resulting from abuse or dysfunctional homes.

The luncheon will be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 500 N. Ward, and will consist of a brisket dinner with all the trimmings. Cost for the meal, which is being prepared by the Knights of Columbus, will be $7.50 per person and can be paid at the door.

Chisum will give an update on this year's legislative session, emphasizing legislation that affects this area.

For more information call, CASA of Gray County at 669-7638.

Advice to NASA on woodpecker problem flows

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -- NASA is getting a lot of advice on chasing away woodpeckers that damaged the thick layer of insulation on the shuttle Discovery's external fuel tank.

"It's been kind of interesting," said NASA Test Director Steve Altemus.

One suggestion was to place rubber snakes on the tank. Other suggestions are to spray the tank with bitter apple or pepper juice, or to use bright lights or ultrasonic blasters.

One trapper offered his services, but the woodpeckers haven't been seen since the holes in the tank's insulation were discovered a week ago, Altemus said.

NASA already is using six plastic owls to scare away the woodpeckers, along with noisy air horns and recordings of owl calls.

The damage forced NASA to postpone Discovery's launch for at least a month.

Maintenance on rails of steel

Tie gangs, surface gangs and road crossing gangs were out between thunderstorms this week performing planned maintenance on Santa Fe Railway lines from East Pampa to Pantex in Carson County. The maintenance project that has been scheduled for five years is not quite half way through, according to railroad officials. More than 100 men are involved in the project including R.W. Hill, left, and Fred Manly, both from Arkansas City, Kan., who were working on a crossing near White Deer Monday afternoon.

Archer vows to replace Federal income tax system

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, opening hearings on abolishing the income tax, vowed today "to do no less than pull the current income tax code out by its roots and throw it away so it can never grow back."

"The present code is too broken to be fixed. It must be replaced," he said.

Archer, in a week of hearings, is laying the groundwork for the most radical change in the nation's tax system since the income tax was established in 1913. Archer favors replacing the federal income tax with a broad-based consumption tax, either a national retail sales tax or a value-added tax, which is similar to a sales tax but is levied at all levels of production.

Others, such as House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, and GOP presidential contender Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., favor a flat-rate income tax that would assess all income above a certain level at a single rate, eliminating all or most deductions and credits.

Today's hearing was intended to make the case for abolishing the current code while future sessions were to examine various reform proposals.

William G. Bakin, senior tax counsel for Mobil Corp., appeared at the witness table with huge stack of paper. He said the paperwork was just a fraction of the documents his company must prepare in order to pay its taxes.

"The tax return for 1993 that you see before you ... consists of nine volumes, totaling 6,300 pages, and weighing 76 pounds," he said. "The total work papers for the 1993 return consist of about 146,000 documents."

He said the company devotes "57 man years" at a cost of $10 million just to prepare its tax return.

Democrats are split over the tax reform issue, which is developing into a crucial one for the 1996 presidential race. The senior Democrat on Archer's panel, Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida, favors a value-added tax. House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., favors a version of reform with some similarities to Arme's approach, except Gephardt would continue to tax unearned income such as interest and capital gains, while Arme would not.

However, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., likened the reform proposals to "the final nail in the coffin" of Republican plans to dramatically reduce the size of federal government and shift responsibility for social services to state and local governments.

He said that the various reform plans remove income as the basis for deciding an individual's tax burden and simply level a broad-based tax, leaving rich and poor alike to do the best they can.

In an interview published in today's editions of The Washington Post, Archer said Arme's flat tax would be an improvement over the current system but said he preferred his own because it would eliminate the need to file income tax returns. Archer said he would levy some form of broad consumption tax, at about 16 percent, exempting medical spending and some housing expenses.

Police downplay speculation that bones belong to missing mother

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Police are examining a skeleton found in a brushy area to see if it belongs to a missing woman involved in a bizarre child-custody dispute.

Relatives of Laura Lugo were called to the police station today as part of the investigation into bones and bone fragments found Sunday night on the north side of this border city. Police questioned the family, but did not immediately show them any clothing found near the bones, said Ms. Lugo's sister, Lupita Alaniz.

Police refused to speculate whether the body is Ms. Lugo's, saying there are a handful of missing people and runaways reported in the area.

"This investigation is in its infancy," said Lt. Orlando Rodriguez, head of the Criminal Investigation Division. He said various items of debris, including clothes, were found at the site and it's unclear which items may be connected to the skeleton.

Ms. Lugo, 28, disappeared in December, only two months after she won custody of her 2-year-old biological son.

Rodriguez said he will await autopsy results and forensics tests to attempt to identify the bones. A preliminary examination indicated that the bones appeared to belong to a female. Detectives so far have not found enough teeth to identify the skeleton through dental records, Rodriguez said.

"Laura Lugo is not the only missing person around, so we have to do a process of elimination," he said, adding it could take weeks or months to make a positive identification.

Without giving specifics, Rodriguez confirmed that evidence of foul play was discovered at the scene of the bones.

In a case that received worldwide attention, Ms. Lugo claimed that Rosa and Paulyna Botello tricked her into going across the border to a Mexican clinic. There, the sisters had arranged for a doctor to perform a forced Caesarean section on Sept. 1, 1992, Ms. Lugo told investigators.

Ms. Lugo, who was 8 1/2 months pregnant at the time, claimed that she was drugged and tied down. When she awoke, she said, her abdomen was scarred and her baby was gone.

Since Ms. Lugo's mysterious disappearance, the baby has been in the custody of her sister, Ms. Alaniz, and her mother, Ofelia Alaniz.

The Botellos are charged in Mexico with child-trafficking. Their case is still pending.

Lupita and Ofelia Alaniz initially told police investigators that Ms. Lugo left her apartment willingly on Dec. 23 with an unidentified man and woman.

Police later confirmed that she actually had left two days earlier, Rodriguez said. The family also told investigators that Ms. Lugo's disappearance was uncharacteristic when in fact she had left home for short periods in the past, Rodriguez said.

Police reports indicate that Ms. Lugo took nothing that indicated she intended to be away a long time on Dec. 21. She left the toddler, Jorge Daniel Alaniz, and his three older half-sisters in the care of their grandmother, telling them she would be right back, according to police reports.

Based on DNA tests, a Texas judge in October granted Ms. Lugo custody of Jorge Daniel, who had been raised by Paulyna Botello.

Paulyna Botello, 34, had claimed that the boy was her biological child until the genetic tests proved her wrong.

Ms. Lugo alleged that the Botello sisters tricked her into going to what she believed would be a routine prenatal exam at a clinic in Matamoros, just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

The FBI arrested Paulyna Botello with the boy in June in McAllen and she was deported to Mexico.

Paulyna Botello's attorneys have argued that Ms. Lugo initially agreed to give up her child to Rosa Botello for financial reasons. They contend Ms. Lugo reconsidered and fabricated the abduction story.

Gingrich plugs new book

Economist says future of Medicare not so bleak

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be as inexorable as the march of time itself — the upheaval ahead when the baby boomers retire, stop giving and start taking.

Concern about the affordability of social programs turns to alarm when baby boom retirement enters the equation. Medicare, especially, being among the hardest to control, seems set up for a fall.

It's as if that brawny generation — some 76 million strong — is going to kick back, head for the beachfront condo and Suck Dry What's Left Of The Nation's Wealth.

But some experts say that the forecasts of disaster are premature and that Americans need not be slaves to numbers pointing to a surge of old people starting about 15 years from now.

"Can America Afford to Grow Old?" economist Gary Burtless asked in the title of a book he helped write several years ago. "Yes, I think so," he answers now in his Brookings Institution office.

However, not without disruption, challenge and sacrifice, he says, in the form of higher taxes, fewer benefits, delayed retirement or a mix. "But is it an impossible burden? I just think that's overdoing it."

Baby boomers are expected to bring a unique combination of strengths and weaknesses into old age: a smaller tax-paying work force behind them to support benefits; better health and more inherited wealth; fewer adult children to support them; and more private pensions for women than their non-working mothers ever had.

Medicare may be the most challenging problem. The federal insurance program for the elderly that helps pay for hospital care and doctor bills is the wheeziest old-age entitlement.

Republicans are moving to give it a second wind, but their reforms are for the immediate years ahead, aimed at holding off the Medicare bankruptcy now forecast by 2002, and don't address the shock of the more distant future.

The problem boils down to this: a declining proportion of workers whose payroll taxes support the benefits of retirees. For every 10 retirees, America has 48 working-age people. That's expected to drop to 36 in 2020 and 28 in 2030. The proportion of national wealth consumed by programs for the aged is expected to double to 16 percent.

"We are headed to generational warfare," former Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said in calling for deep Medicare changes promptly. "There is no way you can sustain this program without having an uprising from working people who will say, 'We've had enough.'"

You can hear stirrings already. "We should send the entire generation to a financial planner," says Richard Thau of Third Millennium, an advocacy group for people in their 20s and 30s. By that he meant government should get serious about reforms.

Anticipating "an incredibly onerous demand on the nation's retirement system," Thau advocates means testing and a later age for benefits among other steps to relieve the weight on his generation.

Even so, today's young adults are "pretty well resigned to the fact we're going to pay ridiculously high payroll taxes."

Baby boomers, born from 1946 to 1964, have unnerved policymakers ever since they began rattling their cribs.

"URGENT," cried a 1950s pamphlet by the American Council on Education, issuing a "call for action" to meet that era's gathering storm of university enrollment.

Schools bulged in the '50s and '60s, crime rose through the generation's adolescence, and its splash into the work force in the '70s and '80s raised unemployment and may have suppressed wage growth.

"But despite everything, the baby boomers have done rather well on balance," the Congressional Budget Office said in a 1993 study that was surprised to find the generation was financially better off than the previous one.

The study predicted most baby boomers will go into old age with more wealth than today's retirees, but those who are single, poorly educated and don't own their own homes "may face a bleak economic future, depending heavily on public assistance."

In one sense, the United States has been through this before.

Working-age Americans supported more dependents — young and old — through the 1960s than they are expected to have to do as far into the future as anyone can pretend to see.

Back in the 1960s, however, most dependents were young. Economists say children are probably cheaper for government than old people: Apart from schools, their costs are largely borne by families.

And some fear society won't be as willing to support the old.

New consul in San Antonio named

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mexico's new consul general in San Antonio has held the same job in Toronto and was the mayor of Oaxaca until recently.

Carlos Manuel Sada Solana, who gave up his mayoral job more than six months before it expired, was appointed to the San Antonio post by Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo.

Sada's selection as consul general will not be official until his nomination is ratified by the Mexican Senate and the U.S. government gives its approval.

No problems are anticipated and Sada, 42, is expected to take over later this month. He was consul general to Toronto from 1989 to 1992 before moving to Oaxaca and becoming mayor.

Gramm denies intervening in parole cases; aide takes blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm says he never intervened in a parole case and did not authorize letters with his signature that urged authorities to grant early release to three convicts. A former aide says she sent some of the letters without Gramm's permission.

The issue surfaced after Mother Jones magazine released a story for its July-August issue citing three cases from 1979 and 1980, when Gramm was a Democratic House member. He is now a Republican and candidate for the GOP presidential nomination.

One letter advocated parole for convicted burglar and drug dealer Bill Doyle, even after a Justice Department official wrote Gramm that the man's lengthy record and prior parole violations warranted additional jail time.

Doyle was paroled a few months after a third letter from Gramm's office, and wrote Gramm to credit him with bringing about his release.

A second case involved Arnold Gene Tate, who Mother Jones said was in prison for embezzling student aid money. The third one involved Bobby Curry, a soldier imprisoned at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., for selling drugs. The outcomes of their cases were not immediately clear.

Gramm, in a statement Monday, said: "Since coming to Congress, I have made it a strict policy not to intervene in matters involving pardons or parole." The statement said he was trying to locate the former aide he believed was responsible, Mary Fae Kamm.

Hours later, Kamm, in a statement issued by Gramm's Senate office, said of the Doyle case: "Without authorization or knowledge from Sen. Gramm, I wrote in Sen. Gramm's name to federal parole authorities. ... I handled the entire matter personally and Sen. Gramm was totally unaware of any communications involving this case."

She made no reference to Tate or Curry. Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said "we don't know anything about" those cases, but have a "strong suspicion" that Kamm was responsible. The letters in those cases carry what appears to be Gramm's signature.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Business subsidies should be shelved

With the first 100 days now part of history, Congress and the Clinton administration can turn their full attention to the even more historic task of cutting the federal budget. A wonderful place to begin would be to eliminate aptly named "corporate welfare."

Every year, Congress doles out tens of billions of dollars to small businesses and huge corporations. These subsidies go into the pockets of farmers, multinational corporations, high-tech companies and economically shaky business ventures.

In a study done this spring, the libertarian Cato Institute in Washington, D.C., identified more than 125 federal programs that subsidize private business at an annual cost of $85 billion. These programs reside in just about every cabinet department, with most administered by the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce.

Among the more expensive and egregious subsidies reported by Cato:

- The Pentagon spends nearly $100 million a year to underwrite Sematech, a consortium of very large U.S. computer chip makers. The subsidy was designed to enhance American competitiveness in the world chip market, but now it primarily benefits the nation's 14 largest chip producers at the expense of hundreds of smaller domestic competitors.

- The federal government's $1.4 billion sugar beet subsidy program forces Americans to buy sugar at prices far above the world price. Cato figures about 40 percent of the subsidies go to the largest 1 percent of U.S. sugar farms.

- Large, private utility companies receive more than $2 billion a year in subsidies from the Rural Electrification Administration and the federal Power Marketing Administration. Cato notes that low-interest REA loans help to subsidize the cost of running ski areas near Aspen.

- The U.S. Forest Service spent $140 million last year building roads to benefit timber companies such as Weyerhaeuser and Georgia Pacific.

- Each year the Ag Department's Market Promotion Program spends $110 million to subsidize the overseas advertising budgets of multinational U.S. companies. For example, in 1991 U.S. taxpayers gave $2.9 million in corporate welfare to Pillsbury to advertise its muffins and pies abroad. That same year, the U.S. government spent $10 million promoting SunKist oranges, $465,000 hawking McDonald's Chicken McNuggets and $2.5 million promoting Dole pineapples and prunes.

The Clinton administration wants to pursue its own agenda of corporate welfare. In the name of "investment," it favors a number of subsidies aimed at companies that are developing, flat computer screens and high-mileage cars or are converting, from defense contracting to civilian production. But it all still falls under the title of corporate welfare.

This gravy train should stop before another budget year begins. Corporate welfare, like all forms of welfare, benefits a select few at the expense of society as a whole. In essence, it requires that the government take wealth by force from the people who earn it - in other words taxpayers - and hand it over to people to whom it does not rightfully belong. Thus, corporate welfare is just another engine for income redistribution, in this case from taxpayers to businesses.

Besides this damage to justice, corporate welfare exacts a cost on economic efficiency. It tends to reward companies that might have difficulty making it on their own at the expense of more productive sectors of the economy. It directs society's resources to companies that are more politically connected rather than to those that would be a better investment in a free market. It encourages corporations to shift resources into political lobbying efforts at the expense of true research and development.

Congress should move quickly to abolish every business subsidy in the federal budget. If the Cato list of cuts were adopted, it would save more than half a trillion dollars in government spending between now and the year 2002, when the Republicans have pledged themselves to balance the budget.

GOP victory in term limits debate

After the Supreme Court issued its decision overruling the 23 states that had chosen to restrict the tenure of their congressional representatives, supporters of term limits said darkly that professional politicians in Washington would be popping champagne corks. What they didn't note is that the celebrations would be particularly euphoric among politicians who put an (R) after their names.

The success of term limits once looked like the shortest path for the Republican Party to gain power. Their defeat, however, promises to be an invaluable help in keeping it.

The court did the GOP a great favor. Term limits were the most important of the themes the Republicans rode to victory last fall. But by March, the issue was threatening to buck them off. House Republicans, many of whom have waited a long time to be in the majority, were not eager to approve a measure to force them into retirement in just six years. Nor did they like the idea of adopting curbs that, given current political facts, would disproportionately injure Republican officeholders for the benefit of Democratic aspirants.

So they compromised by setting the maximum at 12 years. That infuriated term-limits supporters, who thought anything above six was useless and insulting. But even this generous limit was too much for members to stomach. With 40 of 229 Republicans voting no, the House fell 61 votes short of the two-thirds needed to approve a constitutional amendment. A measure providing for a six-year limit and another allowing states to set their own limits didn't come close to even a simple majority.

The danger for Republicans was that the

Stephen Chapman

Supreme Court would say no constitutional amendment was needed - that a state, or Congress itself, could simply pass a law to force rotation in office. That outcome would have given them no excuse for failure. It would also have presented the dilemma of voting for a measure that would cruelly abbreviate their careers or exposing themselves as vile hypocrites for rejecting a popular idea they had pledged to enact which could also shorten their political life expectancy.

Now, however, the bronco has been tamed. By decreeing that the Constitution forbids term limits on Congress, the court has given the new Republican majority two valuable things. The first is an alibi for failure: "We'd love to pass a constitutional amendment," they can say, "but those evil Democrats won't let us." Even if 17 percent of House Republicans oppose it, as they did in March, Newt Gingrich can argue, with considerable force, that the real blame lies with the 81 percent of Democrats who insist on blocking the way.

The second is a perennial campaign issue, which the GOP can flog to its heart's content for years to come - just as it has the balanced budget amendment and the school-prayer amendment. Republican candidates far and wide can promise every election year to do everything humanly possible to set term limits. Then they can troop back to Washington, secure in the knowledge that they will never be blamed for failing to make good on the pledge. They can achieve long careers on Capitol Hill battling fiercely for term limits.

Newt Gingrich and Bob Dole should hope that the issue is potent, but not too potent. Says Edward Crane, president of the pro-term limits Cato Institute in Washington, "The only mistake the Republicans could make is to win a big enough majority to pass a constitutional amendment by themselves." That would be inconvenient in the extreme.

Equally troublesome is any stratagem to create de facto term limits that circumvent the Supreme Court's ruling. Republican Sen. Hank Brown of Colorado, one of those dangerous types who actually believe what they say on the campaign trail, suggests that states change the definition of residency to disqualify longtime denizens of Capitol Hill. "We will make it clear," says Brown, "that someone who has been physically absent for more than 180 days a year for 12 years will no longer be considered an inhabitant."

Of course, that's still six years longer than true believers prefer. And the Supreme Court might view that sort of law as nothing more than a cynical effort to evade its term limits ruling.

Republicans can hope so. With a little luck, they can indefinitely enjoy the best of both worlds on the issue. There may be a cost in rising public cynicism, but I imagine the Republicans can live with that.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, June 6, the 157th day of 1995. There are 208 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 6, 1944, the D-Day invasion of Europe took place during World War II as Allied forces stormed the beaches of Normandy, France.

On this date: In 1844, the Young Men's Christian Association was founded in London.

In 1918, the World War I Battle of Belleau Wood, which resulted in a U.S. victory over the Germans, began in France.

In 1925, Walter Percy Chrysler founded the Chrysler Corporation. In 1933, the first drive-in movie theater opened, in Camden, N.J.

In 1942, Japanese forces retreated in the World War II Battle of Midway.

In 1966, black activist James Meredith was shot and wounded as he walked along a Mississippi highway to encourage black voter registration.

Real life occurs outside Washington

Charley Reese

It will be a long summer. Congress will busy itself picking at the knots it created with reams of previously passed bad legislation. Skirmishers from various political camps will be sniping at each other, in preparation for the war of '96. News folks, restless as ants, will be looking under every rock for a scandal or a quarrel, half-hoping for some new disaster to rescue the ratings and give temporary relief to their own ennui.

At the same time, the planet will continue in its orbit, the sun will rise and set, the moon will wax and wane, the tides will rise and fall and 260 million Americans will continue their pursuit of happiness.

Down here on the 29th parallel, I personally plan to put a dent in my reading list, do a little fishing perhaps and contemplate the leaves of a Chinese tallow tree that happens to hang over the hammock my ex-wife gave me for Christmas.

As always the dear ex had ulterior motives: She hoped I would smoke outside instead of in and spend more time with the killer dog, Wags, which she insisted was lonesome. Wags is not lonesome, but she is eccentric, if not crazy. Sometimes she likes my company, and sometimes she doesn't - not unlike a human or two I could mention.

And now for the point. The world is not the world you see on television and in the newspapers. That is only a sliver. The main business of the United States take places daily in thousands of communities and on farms in the 50 states and territories - not in Washington.

The destiny of the country is not decided in Washington. The most important people in the country are not in Washington. The wealth of the country is not created in Washington. The best minds are not in Washington.

And though the news media seem inordinately fascinated by government and the entertainment industry, neither is important enough to warrant the attention they both get. Both cost a lot of money and give very little return on the investment. Both deal in fantasy. Both are full of bounders and hypocrites. Both are money driven.

The rainfall in the Midwest, the level of the aquifers on the high plains, the state of the fishing grounds off New England, the fruit or lack thereof of research in hundreds of laboratories are all more important to America's welfare than the current movie blockbuster or the latest speech from some office clinger.

What happens in a classroom is more important than what happens at the Department of Education. What is said or not said around the family table, in the church, mosque or synagogue and in the business offices, are all more important than what is said in Congress.

Government is extraneous to the main currents of the life of the country. It can facilitate or it can hinder the flow of life - and most often it does both - but nevertheless, it is not the life of the country.

The people support the government, not the other way around. It was not, for example, the government which won World War II. It was the 12 million people in uniform and the millions of others whose brains and sweat gave them the means with which to fight. It is not the government's money that's being wasted - it's ours, taxed and borrowed.

We, as individuals, need to find that midpoint between indifference and frenzy. We have a part to play, a duty to perform, an obligation to fulfill, but in the end we too shall pass away as will all the issues which concern us.

It is unseemly, therefore, for people to act as if the fate of the universe rests on their performance. It does not. But thinking it does can make a person a fanatic. There are already too many of those. They are as bad as rabid dogs.

If you don't care for books or don't have a Chinese tallow tree, by all means find your own ways to calm down and cool off. Enjoy life as best you can.

The sun will provide all the heat we need from now until October. We certainly need not add to our discomfort by letting the hot air of Washington blow into our homes every day. Take a holiday from politics.

Social scientists discover benefits of religion

Get ready for a shock. The social scientists are waking up to what most of us already knew: What people believe makes a difference in their conduct.

Research by Dr. Richard Freeman of Harvard University shows that black inner-city youth with strong religious values are 47 percent less likely to drop out of school, 54 percent less likely to use drugs and 50 percent less likely to engage in criminal activities, than youths who don't share those values.

Other social scientists have found that adolescent girls with strong religious roots are significantly less likely to engage in premarital sex or get involved in delinquency during their high school years.

Religious belief seems to make a difference in fighting poverty. In studying this nation's charitable history, Professor Marvin Olasky of the University of Texas found that unlike the federal government's 30-year War on Poverty, America's religious institutions achieved significant success in fighting several such "wars" in the 19th century. Typical of the early poverty fighters, Olasky points out, was the YMCA, the Young Men's Christian Association. The YMCA originally was established to help fight urban blight by winning the hearts and minds of inner-city youth, not as an inexpensive health club for urban yuppies.

Of course, most Americans have known all along that eliminating problems like poverty, crime and illegitimacy means changing the values that lead people into self-destructive behavior. Until recently, when many of them changed their focus to politics, churches were pretty good at that.

Before the 1960s, most government officials recognized these truths, too. But then liberal ideas won the day, and America's leaders decided all social problems could be boiled down to economics. They embarked on a $5 trillion War on Poverty thinking they could just throw money at the problems and they'd go away. Thirty years later, crime is 800 percent higher than it was in 1960 and the welfare rolls are larger than ever.

Frightened by this outcome, Congress is considering the most significant welfare reforms in a generation. Understanding the tremendously positive influence of religious faith might help our current reformers avoid many of the mistakes of the recent past.

Of course, government can't make people "get religion," nor should it. But there are things Congress could do to help religious organizations regain their proper, historical role in our nation's struggle against poverty and crime.

For example, churches were the main facilitators of adoption until fear of lawsuits forced many of them to abandon the practice. No government agency, no matter how well intentioned, can identify good prospective parents as well as a neighborhood church. Congress should reform liability laws so churches don't face bankruptcy every time a couple feels wronged because another couple was chosen as best for a particular child.

School vouchers would allow inner-city parents to take their children out of lousy - and many times dangerous - public schools and send them to private and religious schools where strong moral values are taught. Not surprisingly, recent poll data in California and New Jersey show that poor parents are the strongest advocates of school vouchers. It's time lawmakers gave these struggling parents a helping hand that really works.

Finally, congressional leaders also can promote, in their speaking and writing, efforts by religious groups to help the poor. There are countless examples of successful efforts by such groups to turn lives around. These efforts could use a good power boost.

Social scientists - and lawmakers - need to wake up and smell the coffee. Religion makes a difference. It's part of the solution.

IBM bids on Lotus

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM displayed its hunger to again lead the high-tech world with a $3.3 billion hostile takeover bid for software maker Lotus Development Corp.

If completed, the deal would reshape the personal computer software industry and put IBM in the best position to challenge Microsoft Corp., which now dominates the array of products used by millions of personal computer users around the world.

Lotus has previously resisted IBM's advances in private talks. But it said Monday it would consider the $60 per share cash offer, twice its market value.

TV advertising up

NEW YORK (AP) — The four major broadcast networks got the strongest response ever to their advance sale of primetime advertising for the 1995-96 television season.

Network executives said Monday advertisers signed up to spend about $5.5 billion for commercial time on ABC, NBC, CBS and Fox during the TV season that starts in September.

KMart turns to Target

DETROIT (AP) — Kmart Corp., the struggling discount retailer, turned to a rival for help, naming one-time Target Stores head Floyd Hall as chairman, president and chief executive officer.

Hall was chairman and CEO at Target, a division of Dayton Hudson Corp., from 1981-84. During that time, Target grew from 97 stores to 205 stores and sales rose from $1.3 billion to $3.1 billion.

Ford sales increase

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s sales in May were 2.5 percent ahead of last year, with strong demand for vans, pickups and sport utilities making up for a decline in passenger car deliveries.

Ford's report Monday made it the last manufacturer to disclose U.S. sales for May, when the industry appears to have been pulling out of a slump that started with the new year.

Drug indictment targets cartel leaders, lawyers

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The government's biggest legal assault on the Colombian cartel that provides this country with most of its cocaine included the indictment of a former Justice Department lawyer who once led efforts to extradite the Cali drug smugglers.

Authorities also accused 61 others Monday, including a former federal prosecutor. Three other lawyers, including a second federal prosecutor, have pleaded guilty to reduced charges.

The indictment gives the most detailed view yet of the deadly Cali cartel, which is run like a Fortune 500 company and is responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine circulating in this country, federal officials said.

Those indicted range from the four reputed leaders in Cali — Miguel Rodriguez-Orejuela, Gilberto Rodriguez-Orejuela, Jose Santacruz-Londono and Helmer Herrera-Buitrago — to dozens of distributors and attorneys who allegedly helped provide legal intelligence and relay drug money payments to keep the operation afloat.

The 44-month investigation, dubbed Operation Cornerstone, is "the single most significant prosecution in history against the Cali cartel," said U.S. Attorney Kendall Coffey of Miami.

The indictment "pulls together all the threads of how the cartel worked. We have a better appreciation of their mechanisms, the steps they take to protect the cartel, the support network, the legitimate businesses that are the fronts," said Customs Commissioner George Weise.

About a third of the people named in the indictment are in the United States. Federal officials said 22 had been arrested by Monday.

The charges against the former Justice Department lawyers stemmed from their activities after they left the department, authorities said.

One such lawyer is Michael Abbell, who once headed the international affairs office of the Justice Department's criminal division. Abbell's duties included heading efforts to bring the Cali cartel smugglers to justice in the United States.

Bosnian Serbs to hostages

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serbia's president says Bosnian Serbs will free the 250 U.N. peacekeepers they're still holding, but details apparently still need to be worked out.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic met on Monday with Greek officials and the chief of security for President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, who was instrumental in getting 121 hostages released on Friday.

Karadzic said afterwards that the hostage issue was being worked out with Milosevic. But there was no indication when the issue would be settled, and the more than 250 remaining hostages could be set free.

Bosnian Serbs took the hundreds of peacekeepers hostage after NATO warplanes attacked Bosnian Serb ammunition bunkers nearly two weeks ago.

Milosevic officially severed ties with the Bosnian Serbs in August. But his influence with the Bosnian Serbs is still strong, and he is trying to use it to wring concessions that would bolster his image as a peacemaker in the West.

No word on U.S. fighter pilot

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials raised faint new hope for the survival of the American fighter pilot shot down in Bosnia last week, while Army airborne troops took a new step toward lending a hand in a potential pullout of U.N. peacekeepers.

In the first real sign that the Air Force F-16 pilot who was shot down last Friday might be alive, the Pentagon disclosed Monday that it had picked up intermittent signals from what appeared to be the airman's emergency locator beacon.

"The signals alone aren't enough for us to conclude that the pilot is alive, but it is encouraging," a senior Pentagon official told reporters Monday afternoon.

"We have been doing everything we can, but it's best that we say as little as possible," President Clinton said Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live" program when asked about the pilot and the radio signals.

The pilot, whose name has not been released, was knocked out of the sky over northern Bosnia when a Serb SA-6 surface-to-air missile slammed into the plane's underbelly, reportedly cutting it in half. Some of the wreckage has been shown on television, but the cockpit canopy has not been found.

Defense sets stage for mistrial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In opposing the removal of a black postal worker from the O.J. Simpson jury, defense attorneys laid the foundation for a double jeopardy argument if a mistrial is declared, legal analysts said.

The man was removed Monday along with a Hispanic woman who accused him of staring at her to try to intimidate her, a defense petition showed. An appeals court later rejected claims that the ouster of the black man was racially motivated.

With just two alternates remaining from the original pool of 12 — and months of testimony to go — the trial prognosis appeared grim. If the number of jurors drops below 12, both sides would have to agree to continue or a mistrial would be declared.

"I really do believe we're going to run out of jurors before we run out of trial," said Southwestern University law professor Robert Pugsley.

Coroner Lakshmanan Sathyavagiswaran was to return to the witness stand today for the trial's most gruesome phase: discussion of autopsy pictures of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

MIA remains repatriated into the U.S.

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) - Six coffins holding what are believed to be the remains of American servicemen were carried onto a plane today by an American honor guard and flown to Hawaii for identification.

The remains are due to arrive at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu on Wednesday, and will be taken to an Army lab where scientists will try to make individual identifications.

Across the city, meanwhile, an American POW activist chained himself to the gate of the compound where U.S. MIA investigators live and work, accusing them of failing to fully check out reports that American servicemen are still held prisoner in Vietnam.

The contrasting scenes dramatized two very different American views of their wartime enemy and how the U.S. government should deal now with Vietnam.

The U.S. MIA investigators at the airport ceremony say the Vietnamese are cooperating in trying to clarify the fate of America's 2,204 war missing, a U.S. condition for establishing diplomatic relations. They have conducted regular field excavations with the Vietnamese since 1992 and sent back 201 remains of possible war dead, including those today.

The protester, former U.S. Rep. Billy Henson of North Carolina, believes the Vietnamese have kept American POWs for two decades and are only interested in helping to locate bones.

"What's missing here in my judgment is an emphasis on living prisoners," Henson said after arriving in Hanoi. He chained himself twice to the MIA compound gate Saturday evening but the U.S. officers cut the chains.

Hendon was demanding that the MIA investigators drive with him to a prison 50 miles northwest of Hanoi, where he says live POWs were seen as recently as February. He told reporters his information came from a contact in Thailand quoting an intelligence source.

Army Lt. Col. Melvin Richmond, commander of the MIA office, said he brought a Defense Department investigator in from Bangkok to assess Henson's information and possibly try to visit the site. But Henson said he would only hand over the information in the presence of reporters.

Richmond refused, saying U.S. investigators never publicize the location of a POW sighting before going there.

Dr. John A. Jane, left, is helped by Dr. Christopher Shaffrey as they explain the spinal fusion that was performed on actor Christopher Reeve at the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville. (AP photo)

Reeve begins recuperation process

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) - After a successful spinal cord operation, Christopher Reeve now begins the long process of healing and rehabilitation to determine whether he has a chance to move or breathe on his own again.

Surgeons pieced together two shattered vertebrae at the base of the actor's skull to immobilize his broken neck and keep bone fragments from further damaging his spinal cord. Reeve was in serious but stable condition early today.

"Everything went well," Reeve's surgeon, John Jane, said of the six-hour operation. "We did the fusion we anticipated."

The 42-year-old star of the Superman films was paralyzed from the neck down when he was thrown from his horse during a jumping competition in Culpeper. He landed on his head, breaking the top two bones of his spine.

Surgeons used 11 titanium wires to tie together Reeve's upper two vertebrae. They also connected the first vertebra to the base of the skull with a ring. Bone shavings from Reeve's hip were grafted between the first and second vertebrae.

The operation itself wasn't expected to restore Reeve's ability to move and breathe. But Jane said that Reeve would hopefully regain some mobility as his body's shock from the accident wears off and the swelling reduces, relieving some pressure on the spinal cord.

The actor has some feeling in his neck and chest, proving his spinal cord wasn't severed, Jane said. He said it was impossible to say how much mobility Reeve can hope to achieve.

Nurses will gradually raise his head and torso a few degrees at a time. Jane said the prospect of sitting up made Reeve smile.

Propping Reeve upright should improve his breathing and help prevent any recurrence of pneumonia, a common complication in such cases, Jane said. Reeve will wear a neck collar for about a week. By the second week, rehabilitation will begin. Nurses and doctors will periodically poke Reeve's body to test for sensations. They will try to increase the strength of the head and neck muscles he is able to move.

"It could be just sitting up 10 degrees or more, but those teeny things are very important and seem like big strides," said Henry Stifel, a New York City securities broker who had two vertebrae fused after he was paralyzed in a 1982 car crash.

Reeve's fractures should heal in six to eight weeks, but doctors said it could be weeks or months before the full extent of damage to his spinal cord is known.

"There's very little else medically that can be done," said Dr. Rick Delamarter, an orthopedic surgeon at the University of California at Los Angeles Comprehensive Spine Center.

Jane said Reeve has a positive attitude, and Benjamin Reeve said his brother has retained his sense of humor through the tragedy.

Study probes Gulf War Syndrome

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A new study has found a link between the illnesses suffered by veterans of the Gulf War and the problems encountered by civilians who suffer from similar symptoms.

Dr. Claudia Miller, a consultant to the Department of Veterans Affairs on the Gulf War Syndrome, has said the study indicates the illness that sickness suffered by both groups is physical and not psychological.

Like veterans suffering from Gulf War Syndrome, patients with so-called multiple chemical sensitivity often have been frustrated by skepticism and the inability of doctors to diagnose their illness.

Both groups have symptoms that include chronic fatigue, shortness of breath, headaches, memory difficulties, depressed feelings and gastrointestinal problems.

Miller said the study adds credence to speculation the two illnesses are the same.

The claims were subjective and not confirmed by laboratory tests, Miller noted. Many of the symptoms overlap other medical problems.

Researcher surveyed 112 people from 33 states and three foreign countries for the study. All said they developed similar symptoms after exposure to common household chemicals such as pesticides, or from materials found in remodeled buildings.

Six Panhandle tornadoes video taped

LAZBUDDIE (AP) - Some amazing video has surfaced of six tornadoes in the Texas Panhandle.

The video was shot by Dennis Steinbock of Lazbuddie. It shows the twisters just outside the city limits.

The tornadoes stayed in open country and only touched down briefly.

Nobody was hurt. No severe damage has been reported.

Steinbock said he breathed a sigh of relief when the tornadoes went back up into the clouds.

Corcoran among participants in conference that examines death

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Guest writer

Ellen Corcoran

Pampan Ellen Corcoran was among 700 participants in a unique conference recently that brought together an unprecedented range of presenters to examine modern issues on living and dying.

Sponsored by the Tibet House and New York Open Center in New York city, The Art of Dying conference brought together persons steeped in Tibetan and Indian wisdom, persons trained in modern medical understanding, those who have experienced or studied near-death and those who work directly with the dying.

"The purpose of this conference was to bring about more awareness of how much death is a part of life and to make people more comfortable with dying," said Corcoran, who serves as bereavement coordinator for Hospice of the Panhandle, a not-for-profit organization that cares for the terminally ill and their families. Corcoran was able to attend the conference through a scholarship provided by the Tibet House and the New York Open Center.

"As a nun, I obviously come from a Catholic background. Yet I see that one doesn't have to be

Mind, and Kenneth Ring, Ph.D., author of Life at Death.

Buddhist beliefs focus on learning and generosity, Corcoran said.

"It all fits in so well with hospice," she said, adding, "Sometimes it was so intense it was overwhelming."

The near-death experience was a major topic of the conference, Corcoran said.

"It gives a glimpse of what could be there (after physical death.) You have to realize persons who experienced near-death haven't completed the dying process, however, and those that have don't fill out questionnaires.

"We do know that they have experienced a great deal of peace and comfortableness in dying and that has infiltrated our culture," she added. "That is something we can bring to the hospice families."

Kenneth Ring spoke about a dimension of the near-death experience - life experience, she said.

"That is not only viewing but actually reliving and coming to an understanding of what one did (in life), what one did at that time, and then find sense (meaning), feel forgiveness and forgive oneself," Corcoran explained.

Ring said it was important for us to experience life review before we die, she said.

As an example, Corcoran referred to the movie, "It's a Wonderful Life" in which the main character had no idea how his life had affected the lives of so many others until an angel showed him what life would have been like if he had never been born.

"If what Ring says about life review is true, then everything you give out in life comes back to you, not to scare, but to teach," she said. "We're responsible for our thoughts, but we are not judged for them. We are the judges."

Another presented, David Feinstein, co-author of Rituals for Living and Dying, spoke on how ritual can be a "wonderful" part of the dying process, Corcoran said.

Feinstein identifies three elements of ritual: intention, sacred space and devoted time. Intention is why the ritual is being done, such as for healing, or to find peace. Sacred space is where the ritual will be conducted, a suitable environment that lends itself to the ceremony. And finally, devoted time, the amount of time a person is willing to invest in the ritual.

"Feinstein tells us that if your intention is to live well and to die well, then you are constantly creating ritual," said Corcoran, a former kindergarten teacher with a degree in education.

"When I think of my years of educating, it makes sense to me. I know the importance of having more than one dimension (of teaching) in order to learn better. Ritual can help you learn and remember."

Corcoran was particularly impressed with one of the lesser-known presenters, Rachel Naomi Remen, M.D., medical director of the Commonweal Cancer Help Retreat featured in Bill Moyer's television special, "Healing and the Mind," and an assistant clinical professor at the University of California School of Medicine.

Dr. Remen outlined four steps to every spiritual path: show up, pay attention, tell the truth and don't be attached to the results.

"These steps apply to the hospice concept, also," Corcoran said. "We're there with our families. We're attentive to their needs. We are truthful, and we allow them to do it their way, not ours."

"Life is chronic loss and loss is the movement of what life is, Remen told conference-goers, adding that people need to examine the ways in which we lose, what they learned from their parents about how to handle loss, and then learn what will help them live, not merely survive.

"I hate to categorize, but Dr. Remen had a pithy little saying that is quite appropriate," Corcoran said.

"There are two kinds of people in this world - those who are alive and those who are afraid."

"We are all experts in loss, beginning with the birth experience," Corcoran added. "But our wisdom of loss is rarely shared, because too often we see loss as a failure. Dr. Remen sees grieving as a life art that allows persons the freedom to love again."

As a native of Milwaukee, Wis., Corcoran said New York City was not too different from her hometown, "just more intense."

"Land is a premium there. You can see just how much you can cram into small places. And I can't imagine there are enough people in the whole world to wear all the jewelry I saw in New York," she added.

Corcoran, who loves nature, was impressed by Central Park. "Right in the midst of all this chaos was this refuge," she said.

During one of her walks, she turned a corner and discovered St. Patrick's Cathedral.

"There was an orchestra playing and an opera being performed when I walked in," she recalled. "It was such a gift."

No Matter How Expressed, Words of Love Do Count

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to the letter from "A Grieving Daughter," Bethel Park, Pa., who urged the world to learn to say, "I love you."

My son, "Ken," who died of AIDS this past November, had a wonderful solution. He helped his older brother, "Greg," who was his primary caregiver, to say those very important words.

One day, Greg said to his dying brother, "It's hard for me to say the words, but you know I love you, don't you?" Ken replied, "If the words are hard, just say something else — like maybe 'green pigs' — and I'll know what you mean."

Every day after that, Greg would say "green pigs," and his brother would giggle.

After a while Greg said, "You know, Ken, I think it's easier to just say I love you than to say 'green pigs.'" Ken's response was simply, "Of course."

As he faced death at the age of 34, Ken had learned a valuable lesson and passed it on to his brother: It's not important how you say I love you — it's just important that you say it!

KEN'S MOM, HOMEWOOD, ILL.

DEAR MOM: I offer my deepest sympathy for the untimely loss of your very wise son. The lesson he taught his brother is one we should all take to heart and put into action.

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Mary Ellen," is 54, and right now she has me in the doghouse. She's mad at me because I scolded her for buying a leather miniskirt.

Now she insists on wearing her hair in a ponytail. I feel there is a time and a place for ponytails — like swimming, doing yard work or cleaning the house. When Mary Ellen was a little girl, she looked adorable with a ponytail. I just mentioned that she looks prettier wearing her hair down or up in a more dignified manner.

The other day, she sent me a picture of a social event, and one of the ladies had a ponytail. Well, I feel she was not as well-groomed as the other ladies.

How do you feel about this? I'll back down and apologize if necessary, but am I wrong, really?

ALWAYS A MOTHER

DEAR ALWAYS A MOTHER: Neither your taste nor hers is "wrong." What is wrong is your meddling, which comes across as criticism.

Since your daughter has passed the half-century mark, it's time to let her make her own decisions about what is becoming, appropriate and fashionable. And if she has the figure to wear a leather miniskirt, my hat is off to her.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter signed "Nothing in the Oven in Colorado." The same thing happened to me, and I can tell her how to put such people in their place.

This stranger walked up to me in the supermarket and asked me if I was pregnant. I said "yes" and kept right on walking. Of course, I wasn't pregnant — I was just fat!

She turned around and caught up with me and asked, "When is the baby due?" I said, without stopping, "Nine months from tonight!"

Horoscope

Wednesday June 7, 1995

In the year ahead, it could be to your advantage to keep in touch with friends who now reside in distant places. One or more might offer you opportunities unavailable in your own region.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It won't be your intention to use people today, so don't feel reluctant to call upon friends if you need a favor, especially pals you've come through for previously. Gemini, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Assignments requiring imagination, as well as innovation, will be the ones you perform best today. Routine tasks might bore you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The rest of the week will go much easier if you devote some time today to activities outside of your usual routine. Change will prove refreshing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your financial prospects look encouraging, so if you have anything on the back burners that could add to your income, give them top priority.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you have a project in mind that is large in scope, this would be a good time to implement it. You could prove very lucky with new beginnings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A profitable phase of the cycle could start for you because there are factors behind the scenes at work developing new channels for personal gain.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You mustn't let associates limit your hopes and expectations today. What might seem too big to them may be easily managed by you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are one of the lucky signs now in a good achievement cycle. However, you need lofty targets, so set meaningful goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A situation might develop today that puts your faith to the test. You will happily discover that your strengths are greater than those that oppose you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although the power to change things might remain in the hands of others, you might profit tremendously from today's shifting conditions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Although your normal inclinations urge you to act as a leader rather than a follower, today you might be far luckier playing a supportive role.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Something opportune might suddenly develop for your career today. However, in order to appreciate all of its ramifications, you'll have to stay alert.

Top-seeded Titans roll past Tennessee

By TOM VINT
AP Sports Writer

CWS ROUNDUP

second inning that all but decided the game for Titans starter Jon Ward (10-3). Ward scattered four hits in seven innings, but it was the CSF bats that caught the eye of Tennessee coach Rod Delmonico.

"I was impressed with their hitters," he said. "They did a good job of fighting off pitches, and the grand slam was the key that gave them the momentum. That was the difference in the game."

The win gave Fullerton (55-9) two days off. The Titans will await tonight's survivor for a Thursday afternoon game that would decide one of the championship spots for Saturday if Fullerton wins.

In Monday's nightcap, Stanford stayed alive again. The Cardinal has won at least one game in nine trips to Omaha. Twice Stanford has won titles.

Peterson, who pitched for Omaha Creighton Prep High a year ago, was hard to hit on the mound where he lost in last year's Nebraska state high school tournament.

"I don't know about erasing it," Peterson said of the bad memories of the 1994 loss. "It clouded it a little. This was something I had to do to prove to myself I could come out and do the job. I'm really happy with the results."

Peterson allowed eight hits, struck out seven and yielded no walks as he kept Clemson off-balance in his 10th complete game of the season. His 14th win against one loss tied a school record for most wins in a season, shared by four others.

"Kyle doesn't shake," Stanford coach Mark Marquess said. "It was a well-pitched game. As usual, Kyle has come up big for us all season. Kyle has pitched a lot of big games, but none bigger game than this. I don't think he had real good stuff, but he hung around and gutted it out."

"He wasn't really overpowering," said Douglas Livingston, who had two of Clemson's hits. "He threw three pitches for strikes all day long. When we did get a look at him it seemed like we were hitting the ball right at somebody."

Stanford scored three runs in the first and three more in the fifth. Carver homered, singled in another run and scored twice. Dusty Allen hit a two-run homer in the first, and walked and scored in the fifth.

"We're swinging the bat as well as we have all year," Allen said. "And that's exactly what you want to do going into the postseason."

"We got off on the wrong foot," Clemson coach Jack Leggett said. "The next thing we knew we were playing tight and trying to get back into the game. Their freshman pitcher did not pitch like a freshman."

The Tigers (54-14) were winless in their third-straight CWS appearance.

In today's other matchup, Florida State coach Mike Martin was thinking ahead despite the prospects of elimination against Southern Cal.

"We have our backs to the wall three times," Martin said; it would take three wins for Florida State to claim its first national title after the 4-2 second-round loss to No. 3 Miami (48-15). "It's a real challenge for our team right now."

"Clearly Florida State is a special team," Southern Cal coach Mike Gillespie said. "We are in for a dogfight. They're a deep team up and down the lineup. We are going to have to play up to what we can play."

Still, with all his glowing words, Gillespie feels comfortable. "We match up well with them," he said. "Which club wins is the club that won't make the big mistake."

The Trojans are settled into a better rhythm in Omaha after a 15-10 opening loss to Miami, coming back Sunday to eliminate defending champion Oklahoma 9-4.

Emily Waters, a Pampa Middle School 8th grader, claimed the girls 16 singles crown with a 6-1, 7-6 victory over Deann Lowder of Borger.

Waters defeated Holly Weishaar, Hereford High School's No. 3 varsity player, 6-0, 6-4, in the semifinals. Emily also teamed with her sister, Kellen, to win the girls 16 doubles title with a 6-0, 6-0 win over the team of Marable and Scott.

Billy DeWitt, a 1995 Pampa High graduate and the school's all-time victories leader, teamed with PHS tennis coach Larry Wheeler to win the men's open doubles division with a 6-1, 6-3 victory in the finals. They beat Pampa's Ken Rheams and Matt Rheams in the finals.

Wheeler also claimed the men's open singles title with a 6-1, 6-2 finals victory over Pat Haley of Borger.

The Pampa Summer Festival Tennis Tournament will be held July 1-2 at the PHS courts. Entry information can be obtained by calling 806-665-6422.

PARIS (AP) — Thomas Muster was tested to the limit today by 19-year-old Spaniard Alberto Costa before surviving a five-set quarterfinal at the French Open and extending his clay-court winning streak to 33.

The fifth-seeded Austrian, one of the favorites to win the title, nearly didn't reach the semifinals as Costa, ranked 36th in the world, displayed stretches of brilliant tennis.

Muster never wavered despite trailing after three sets, and battled to a 6-2, 3-6, 6-7 (8-6), 7-5, 6-2 victory. In the semifinals he will play either Andre Agassi or Yevgeny Kafelnikov.

In women's quarterfinals, top-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario beat Chanda Rubin; Steffi Graf overwhelmed Gabriela Sabatini; and Kimiko Date rallied against Iva Majoli to become the first Japanese semifinalist in tournament history. All three victors have gone through five rounds without losing a set.

Rubin had upset fifth-seeded Jana Novotna en route to her career-best Grand Slam performance, but was over-matched against Sanchez Vicario, the defending champion, who won, 6-3, 6-1 in 64 minutes.

The second-seeded Graf, unbeaten this year, scored her 23rd straight victory, beating the eighth-seeded Sabatini 6-1, 6-0, in just 55 minutes. It was by far her best match of the tournament.

"I was focused from the first point on," Graf said. "I was waiting patiently for my shots. My serve was perfect... I felt extremely good."

Graf, beating Sabatini for the seventh time in a row, reached the semifinals for the ninth straight year. The three-time French Open champion, seeking her 16th grand slam title, will play the winner of Tuesday's last quarterfinal, between No. 4 Conchita Martinez and fellow Spaniard Virginia Ruano-Pascual.

Sanchez Vicario's semifinal opponent will be the ninth-seeded Date, who came back from 2-5 in the first set to beat Majoli 7-5, 6-1. Date, 24, reached the semifinals at the 1994 Australian Open, but never advanced past the fourth round in four previous French Opens.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Tennessee already has been beaten by the smoking bat of Mark Kotsay. Now, the Volunteers try not to have Steve Carver do the same thing to them.

Stanford's Carver has a pair of homers, five hits and three RBIs in his two tournament appearances after helping hometown hero Kyle Peterson eliminate Clemson on Monday night. Carver homered and singled in another run in that 8-3 win, while Peterson won his 14th game against one loss in an eight-hit complete game.

Kotsay was 4-for-4 with a grand slam as the top-seeded Titans ripped No. 5 Tennessee 11-1 earlier Monday. He is hitting .750 at the tournament. Carver is hitting .625.

Tennessee (53-15) tries to rebound against Stanford (40-24) at 6:36 p.m. CDT tonight in Bracket Two after a Bracket One elimination game matches No. 2 Florida State (53-15) and No. 6 Southern Cal (46-20).

Fullerton had 16 hits against three Tennessee pitchers Monday, including 15 off All-American starter R.A. Dickey (14-4). Kotsay's grand slam came in a six-run

Randall's Light wins all-around cowgirl honors at Tri-State finals

AMARILLO — Randall's Manchie Light won the third go-around in breakaway roping and placed third in goat tying at the recent Tri-State High School Rodeo Association finals at the Tri-State Fairgrounds Coliseum. That gave her nine more points than Wheeler's Leann Keathley in the chase for the all-around cowgirl award.

The all-around award is based on more than 20 rodeos in the fall and spring season.

Keathley did take rookie of the year honors.

The all-around champions and winners of each event advance to next week's state finals in Abilene.

Results in the girls' division at the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association finals are listed below:

Breakaway roping

Third go-around: 1. Manchie Light, Randall, 2.536; 2. DeAnn Daniels, Childress, 3.510; 3. Jana McCloy, Gruver, 3.623.

Rookie of the year: Leann Keathley, Wheeler.

Magic's top defender prepared for Drexler

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — No one has to tell Nick Anderson how badly Clyde Drexler wants a title.

Anderson watched Drexler's inspired performances against Utah, Phoenix and San Antonio as the veteran guard helped the Houston Rockets into the NBA Finals. That's where they'll meet the Orlando Magic on Wednesday in Game 1.

Anderson has stopped Michael Jordan and Reggie Miller, defensive assignments that would keep most players up nights. Now comes Drexler, who played in the Finals with Portland in 1990 and 1992 but came away empty-handed both times. And Anderson feels fully prepared. "It's just another opportunity, just another task I have to take on," Anderson said.

Drexler, whose trade from Portland to the Rockets for Otis Thorpe in February was roundly criticized, has hit his stride in the postseason. He averaged more than 25 points in the first round and had another strong series against the Spurs.

"I can see it in his eyes. He's determined," Anderson said. "He wants a shiny ring just like I want one. That makes it even harder. He wants one and he'll put it all on the line."

While Anderson has gotten attention during the playoffs with his outstanding defense on two of the game's most dangerous players, he has been a steady offensive contributor as well.

He averaged 15.2 points in the series with the Bulls while chasing Jordan around the court, and helped shut down Miller in Game 7 of the conference finals.

"This is just another step," said Anderson, who has hit 31 3-pointers in the postseason. "I'm here at the big dance, and I want to dance. Just two more weeks of hard work."

Anderson was the first collegiate player drafted by the expansion Magic in 1989.

White Deer's Caffey scores in Greenbelt

CHILDRESS — White Deer's Jeff Caffey found the end zone during the annual Greenbelt All-Star Football Classic.

Caffey caught a 14-yard touchdown pass from Sanford-Fritch quarterback Tim Hayes to give the North team its first score midway through the second quarter.

However, the South team was on top, 16-14, when the game was called last Saturday night due to severe weather. There was 6:46 remaining in the third quarter when bowl organizers and game officials halted the action.

The Greenbelt Bowl featured the top/senior high school football players in West Texas, divided into North and South teams.

Paducah's Chris Canales, playing for the South, was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

Caffey, who made the Class 1A All-State team this past season for the Bucks, earlier signed a football scholarship at Abilene Christian University. His father, Stan Caffey, also played in the Greenbelt Bowl in 1973. Caffey was head coach at White Deer the past three years before leaving to become the head football coach and athletic director at McCamey.

Pampa Optimist baseball

Glo-Valve continued its winning ways with a solid 9-4 win over Dyer's Bar-B-Que last Friday to maintain first place in the Optimist Major Bambino National League.

Isiah Manzanares and Randy Tice led Glo-Valve in hitting with three hits each. Shawn Strate slammed two doubles and Nathanael Hill had a double and single for Glo-Valve. Keenan Davis with two hits, including a triple, and Adam Rogers with two hits, paced Dyers.

Kyle Keith won his first game of the season, allowing three earned runs and four hits in three innings pitched. He struck out six and walked four. He had help from Hill, who allowed a hit and a walk, but no runs in an inning pitched, and Tice, who allowed two hits, no walks and struck out two in two innings of scoreless relief. Jake Woodruff pitched a complete game for Dyer's. He allowed four earned runs, 10 hits and five walks. He struck out eight. Woodruff aided his own cause with a double in the fifth inning, but he was stranded on third.

Dyer's broke out on top in the first inning. Davis walked and stole second. He went to third on a bunt single by Thomas Long. A double steal plated Davis, while Long went to third on an error. Long scored on a single by Rodgers.

Glo-Valve collected four hits in the bottom of the first to take a 3-2 lead. Tice singled and took second on a passed ball. He scored on a double by Strate. Strate scored on a Manzanares' single. A double by Hill moved Manzanares to third. He scored on a wild pitch.

Dyer's tied the game in the second inning on a walk to Jake Mullanax and a booming triple over the center fielder's head by Davis.

Glo-Valve regained the lead in the second with four unearned runs. Matthew Smith walked and went to third on a single by Tice. Tice moved to second on a fielder's choice.

The next two batters struck out. A bad throw allowed Matt Driscoll to reach base and scored both runners. A single by Manzanares pushed Driscoll to second. Both runners moved up alertly on a passed ball. An infield single by Hill scored Driscoll. Manzanares moved to third on the play and scored a second time on a wild pitch.

Dyer's edged closer with a run in the third inning. Long walked and went to second on an infield single by Rodgers. A wild pitch moved the runners up a base and Long scored on a bad throw. Rogers also attempted to score on the play, but was nipped at the plate on a fine throw from catcher Manzanares to Keith covering.

Glo-Valve upped its lead in the bottom of the third. Tice beat out a bunt and went to second on a wild pitch. He was sacrificed to third by Keith. Strate's second double of the game scored Tice. A bad throw allowed Strate to take third. He scored when Driscoll was safe on an error. A fine throw from Dustin Scarborough to Rodgers to Long cut down Driscoll, who was trying to move from first to third on Manzanares' third single of the game.

Hill came on to pitch for Glo-Valve in the fourth inning. Driscoll made a diving catch for the first out. Dustin Scarborough walked and went to third on a single by Davis. Davis took second when the throw-to-third was too late to get Scarborough. Glo-Valve ended the inning on a double play from Hill to first baseman Driscoll, to catcher Manzanares to third baseman Keith.

Woodruff seemed to get stronger the longer he pitched, allowing no runs in the last two innings and getting the last six Glo-Valve batters in a row. He recorded the last out himself on a fine catch of a long line drive off the bat of Driscoll.

Tanner Dyer snared a line drive off his shoe tops, at third base to record the first out of in the sixth inning for Glo-Valve. Tice gave up a single to Luis Gonzales, struck out the next batter and forced the last batter to bounce out to end the game.

Dyer's had at least one hit in every inning. Glo-Valve bunched 10 hits in the first three innings and was blanked the rest of the way by Woodruff.
