Thornberry says rural health care needs attention

By JEFF CARRUTH
Staff Writer

Congressman William P. "Mac" Thornberry, R-Clarendon, sounded the warning on the future of Medicare and reviewed legislation pending before the House during a stop in Pampa this week.

Thornberry visited Coronado Hospital to explain the way changes in Medicare could affect rural areas and take suggestions from doctors and hospital staff.

"Rural health care was one part of the whole equation that got forgotten when they were talking about health care last year. And we can't afford to let rural areas get neglected when we talk about it this time," Thornberry said. "It's important to keep basic health care available to people in rural areas."

The trustees for Medicare say the system will become bankrupt in seven years without changes. Proposals in Congress call for reducing the amount of annual increases in the Medicare budget.

One proposal calls for moving seniors into health maintenance organizations. Thornberry said that option may not be available in the 13th District where HMOs are not prevalent.

"(Reform) does not have as much to do with the total amount of money spent in the program as how that money is spent and how providers are reimbursed," he said.

Medicare payroll taxes could double if there is no overhaul, he said during his Wednesday visit.

The budget ax will fall on specific programs when appropriations bills come to the House floor to implement the budget for fiscal year 1996, Thornberry said.

"Every program other than Social Security is going to be looked at to see if it's worth taking money out of some taxpayer's pockets to pay for that program."

The congressman defended a proposed constitutional amendment that would give power to Congress and the states to prohibit burning of the U.S. flag. He condemned the idea that it is "somehow an expression of free speech to burn a flag, to stomp on it, or whatever sort of thing you can imagine."

Thornberry said it "didn't make much sense" that bald eagles were protected by law but the U.S. flag was not.

Thornberry called President Clinton's threat to veto the House-passed rewrite of the Clean Water Act "a tragic mistake."

"A huge majority of people in my district think we've gone too far with environmental regulations," the freshman representative said.

Thornberry said part of what is in that bill is defining in law for the first time what wetlands are, as well as adding more of what he calls "common sense" to that definition.

Thornberry said the bill also adds more community control over storm water runoff and clean water standards, adding that he was generally pleased with the bill.

Thornberry served on the committee that helped rewrite those wetlands protections.

On other issues, Thornberry said the 1995 Farm Bill will likely have a more market-oriented approach, and reductions in government price supports should be followed by reductions in government regulation. He said most farmers in the 13th District were willing to give up price supports if taxes were decreased and trade agreements continued to reduce subsidies in other nations.

Two Pampa men indicted in deadly shooting spree

A grand jury on Thursday returned charges against two men held in connection with Wednesday's deadly shooting spree around Prairie Village Park.

James Wilbon III, 17, was charged with first degree murder for the alleged shooting death of 25-year-old Sanford La Craig Kelley.

Judge M. Kent Sims set bond at $100,000, the amount requested by the state.

Arguing for the $100,000 bond, District Attorney John Mann said the victim was unarmed and was shot in the back five times.

Kerrance Ramone Brown, 25, was charged with attempted murder for the alleged shooting of 14-year-old Audery Wilbon.

Audery Wilbon sustained a gunshot wound to the upper right arm while inside a residence across the street from the park. She was treated and released from Coronado Hospital.

Bond was denied for Brown, who also faces a count of delivery of cocaine and a count of possession of cocaine in Hutchinson County.

Mann said the court will hold a hearing June 7 to determine if denial of bond should be continued for Brown.

Both suspects were transferred to Gray County Jail, where they remain in custody.

Police and sheriff's deputies led Brown and Wilbon in and out of the courtroom. Both suspects were restrained by handcuffs and leg-irons.

James Wilbon III

Neither suspect had retained counsel for the arraignment hearing. Judge Sims instructed each suspect on his right to seek court-appointed counsel.

Pampa attorney Michael A. Warner is Brown's court-appointed attorney for his charges in Hutchinson County.

Wilbon and Brown were arrested in the aftermath of a basketball court argument that resulted in gunfire Wednesday afternoon around 2:30 p.m.

Services for Mr. Kelley, a 1988 graduate of Pampa High School, will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the First Church of God in Christ in Carthage, Texas, where he was born.

The carnival opens at 6 p.m. today and at 2 p.m. Saturday, and will be open Sunday from 1-6 p.m. at Coronado Center.

Former Cowboy 'Hollywood' Henderson tells inmates to stay sober after release

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, former Dallas Cowboy all-pro linebacker, spoke Thursday afternoon to a crowd of 250-300 inmates at the R.H. "Rufe" Jordan unit as part of the Texans' War on Drugs "Sobriety Is an Option" program.

"If you make them laugh, then you can make them listen," Henderson said in an interview before his speech, and laugh they did during his 40-minute speech in the gymnasium at the minimum-security facility.

Henderson related a number of humorous incidents from his career as a professional football player, but all of the stories had a serious undertone - his addiction to drugs and alcohol.

Henderson said he was a crack addict and was sent to jail in California in June 1984 to serve a 28-month sentence. He has been sober for over 11 years, he told the crowd, thanks to the help of various 12-step programs.

"Alcoholics Anonymous turned me from a taker to a giver," he said.

Henderson said that five years ago he began to realize that all

Texan inmates got when they were released from prison was a small stipend and the address of their parole officer.

"It seemed to me that these are human beings who have made a mistake. If release from prison is an indication that they've paid their debt and they are going to embark on a new life, they should have at their fingertips information about human resources in their county and city," he said.

So, working with the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Henderson helped start the Texans' War on Drugs. The organization provides information to inmates about drug and alcohol abuse, as well as pointing out such resources as shelter, food, food stamps, Social Security and medical attention.

The main message: "If you'll stay sober, you'll stay free."

David Peña, an official with Texans' War on Drugs, said in introductory comments that four things most often lead to recidivism - alcohol, drugs, lack of education and lack of job skills. His organization tries to help with all of those, but focuses primarily on alcohol and drug abuse.

'If you keep doing what you've been doing, you'll keep getting what you've been getting.'

"If you stay sober, you'll have a better chance at the life you dream about," he told the inmates.

Henderson encouraged the inmates to spend their "downtime" to start planning for life once they got out of prison.

"If you keep doing what you've been doing, you'll keep getting what you've been getting," he said.

Henderson, who played in Super Bowls X, XII and XIII with the Cowboys, says he speaks at prisons across the state once a month.

He and the other nine speakers with Texans' War on Drugs, said Peña, do 50 or more educational/motivational presentations a year and have spoken to over 150,000 inmates across the state.

Lake McClellan faces loss of federal funding

Funding for continued improvements at Lake McClellan may dry up, according to Gray County Commissioner Gerald Wright.

The county commissioners court recently received a letter from the U.S. Forestry Service indicating that the county may not receive the budgeted $360,000 it was expecting.

Wright said the county has been involved in a number of years in a "challenge cost share agreement" with the Forestry Service to excavate silt from the lake bed. The county provides manpower, and the service reimburses equipment and fuel costs.

Without funding, Wright says further excavation will not be possible because "Gray County can't bear the cost by itself."

The commissioners court will write 13th District Rep. William

P. "Mac" Thornberry, R-Clarendon, as well as Senators Kay Bailey Hutchison and Phil Gramm to encourage them to work with the Forestry Service and secure money for the Lake McClellan project.

Wright also encourages concerned citizens to write the three legislators.

Already, the county has excavated about one-third of the silt from the lake.

'Crimes' provides infectious fun

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

ACT I's version of Crimes of the Heart may be just one of a number of entertainment options for Pampans this weekend, but few activities will be as enjoyable as this play.

Crimes won its author Beth Henley a Pulitzer Prize in 1980, and the 1986 movie was nominated for a number of Oscars. This community theater's interpretation lives up to its predecessors well.

The play tells the story of two days in the lives of the three McGrath sisters, Lennie, Meg and Babe. True Southern tragedy balanced with a liberal dose of morbid humor make up the entertaining story; the girls' mother hung herself about 15 years ago because she was "having a bad day," and Babe has just shot her husband because she "didn't like his looks."

Brandy Ketchum plays the eldest McGrath sister Lennie, a 30-year-old, lonely woman who feels obligated to take care of her grandfather. As a result, she's never allowed herself to fall in love. And worse, her sister has just shot her own husband, her grandfather is deathly ill and her horse has just been struck dead by lightning. A character like this could easily become pathetic, but Ketchum manages to make the audience feel sympathy for her character, never pity.

Middle sister Meg is strongly portrayed by Sandra Keeton in her premiere performance with the community troupe. Meg is a bit rough around the edges, but her love for her sisters is never in doubt. Keeton turns in one of the evening's most convincing performances as the down-on-her-luck singer who can't help that she's in love with a married man.

ACT I veteran Debra Bressler plays Babe to silly perfection. Though she admits to shooting her husband in the stomach while aiming for his heart, the audience never loses sympathy for her. Babe just cannot seem to do anything right, as evidenced in a scene in the third act that must be seen to be believed.

The supporting actors in the performance are uniformly entertaining as well.

Maya Parker plays annoying cousin Chick with broad humor and deft timing. Bill Hildebrandt does a fine job as Babe's lawyer, Barnette, who's on a vendetta against her husband and is more than willing to defend her for attempted murder. Bud Behannon's sad-sack Doc Porter is nicely understated and well modulated.

Throughout, the cast is obviously having a great deal of fun. That fun is infectious and should spread rapidly through the audience.

The play opens tonight at 7:30 and continues Saturday evening. The cast will also put on a Sunday matinee at 2 p.m.

For reservations, call 665-3710.

U.N. source says Serbs shoot down U.S. fighter jet flying over Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — An American fighter jet went down today in Bosnia, and a U.N. source said it was shot down by Bosnian Serbs. Just hours earlier, the Serbs had promised to free the 377 U.N. peacekeepers they held hostage.

In Washington, the Pentagon said the downed plane was an F-16 Fighting Falcon flying for NATO and that a search and rescue operation was under way. It was unclear whether the plane had one or two crewmen on board.

NATO said it was not known whether the plane had been shot down or crashed because of some mechanical failure. But a U.N. source in Bosnia, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plane was shot down by Serbs over Banja Luka, a heavily contested battle zone about 90 miles northwest of the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo.

Capt. Jim Mitchell, a NATO spokesman in Naples, Italy, refused to release any other information immediately, citing the "sensitive" nature of the event. White House officials said President Clinton had been briefed on the incident.

Before the NATO plane went down, the Serbs' conciliatory gesture to release the U.N. hostages seemed likely to ease a weeklong crisis over the United Nations mission in Bosnia.

Sources in the Bosnian Serb stronghold of Pale, speaking on condition they not be named, said 120 Yugoslavians were to be taken to Zagreb today, but there was no indication they have been released.

By 3 p.m. local time (9 a.m. EDT), one hour before the 120 were expected to reach the border, they had not left Pale.

The Serbs' announcement followed increasing military pressure by the West for the unconditional release of the peacekeepers, taken in retaliation for NATO airstrikes last week.

The Bosnian Serbs had demanded promises of no new airstrikes, but the West had remained steadfast in its refusal to negotiate their release.

Britain began dispatching the first of a threatened 6,000 new troops to Bosnia, while France and the United States positioned crack military units in the Adriatic in a show of force.

"From the highest authority in Pale we have been informed that either today or by tomorrow all UNPROFOR personnel would be released," said Lucie Sternthal, deputy chief of the Red Cross mission in Pale.

UNPROFOR is the name of the U.N. mission in Bosnia.

The ICRC said the hostage release was "without condition."

"That's welcome news," U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gary Coward said in an interview on CNN. "We look forward to the Bosnian Serbs' delivery."

Only hours before the Serb announcement, Serb soldiers kidnapped three Ukrainian peacekeepers from an observation post near Gorazde, bringing to 377 the number of U.N. soldiers held hostage or blockaded in Bosnia.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic warned Thursday against trying to rescue the U.N. hostages, scattered throughout Serb-held territory, saying such attempts would lead to slaughter "that would resemble a butcher's shop."

He said the hostages won't be released unless NATO pledges not to launch any more airstrikes on Bosnian Serb territory.

Marilyn Monroe now on postage stamp

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — As Marilyn Monroe's breathy voice cooed "I Wanna Be Loved By You" and the audience cheered, Postmaster Marvin Runyon unveiled a wall-high version of her commemorative 32-cent stamp on Thursday.

"In every poster, picture and production, she cast a spell," Runyon said. "It wasn't fame she wanted, but meaning."

The stamp, designed by Michael Deas, is the first in the U.S. Postal Service's "Legends of Hollywood" series.

At the Beverly Hills post office, collectors waited in line to get their stamps canceled with the date of issue, which would have been Monroe's 69th birthday. She died in 1962.

"I had a crush on her, like many teenage boys at the time," said 51-year-old Amnon Friedman, who bought $128 worth. "I felt like somehow, I'd be the right one for her."

The stamp depicts Monroe striking a sultry, slightly over-the-shoulder pose in a glittery gold gown. The lettering of her name is a facsimile of her signature. At the corners of the stamps, the perforations in the paper — normally round — are star-shaped.

On hand at Universal were Monroe co-stars Eli Wallach, Don Murray, Hope Lange and Zsa Zsa Gabor.

Wallach said he imagined Monroe looking down and saying, "God, they've given me a stamp. Men have been stamping on me all my life, and now I'll get a chance to stamp on them."

Legislative session good for workers

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas workers were winners in the just-ended legislative session and will benefit from several major bills adopted by lawmakers, the president of the Texas AFL-CIO says.

"We had our best year for several years," Joe Gunn said in an interview during the group's 35th statewide convention.

Prior to the legislative session, the 200,000-member organization selected 11 issues it planned to target either for passage or defeat.

The final scorecard? All but three issues ended in victory — or at least partial victory — for labor, Gunn said.

One of the biggest wins was a measure added to the welfare reform bill to consolidate 30 different work force development programs into a new agency.

The new agency will be charged with training workers to meet business demands for highly skilled labor and helping people on public assistance make the transition into the job market.

It will be composed of three members appointed by the governor, one representing labor, one representing employers and one representing the public.

"That's extremely important to us. We came out with what we intended to," said Gunn, who added that the proposal initially would have placed the program in the hands of one gubernatorial appointee.

The legislation is awaiting the signature of Gov. George W. Bush.

Another measure that will benefit workers is the new telecommunications law, Gunn said.

Signed by Bush recently, the law is aimed at bringing competition to local telephone service. The measure also includes several infrastructure commitments by telephone companies, which Gunn said would create an estimated 70,000 jobs.

"Our major legislation was ... great," Gunn said.

Among the defeats for labor were proposals to cap hiring of state employees and their salaries and reform the state's civil justice system. Gunn said the civil justice revisions will keep injured Texans from collecting adequate damage awards.

With the Legislature adjourned, the Texas AFL-CIO is turning its focus to the national political scene and gearing up to fight the Republicans in the upcoming presidential election, Gunn said.

"Our people know it's either time to give back or take back," he said.

Bush signs bill curtailing inmate release program

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush says Texans will be safer under a new law to prevent the automatic early release of prisoners with a violent history.

The measure signed into law by Bush also will give the State Board of Pardons and Paroles power to veto the early release of convicts in the so-called mandatory supervision program.

That program has required some prisoners to be released automatically after the good-conduct time they earned, when added to their time served, equaled their sentence.

Under the new law, inmates with a previous conviction for a violent offense won't be eligible for the program, Bush said. Other inmates' release under the program could be denied if they are considered a public danger.

The measure will apply only to people serving sentences for crimes committed on or after Sept. 1, 1996. The starting date was determined for fiscal reasons, Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said.

"The Legislature acted in the best interests of the people of Texas when it acted to protect the public safety within the confines of available dollars," Bush said.

During the 1994 gubernatorial campaign, Bush said the mandatory early release of prisoners should be ended.

"He didn't get everything he wanted, but this is a major step," Ms. Hughes said.

Bush said he wanted to ensure that the parole board and "not some automatic mathematical formula" would determine when and if prisoners could be safely released.

"This new law gives the parole board the authority to deny release for any prisoner it believes might endanger the law-abiding citizens of Texas," he said.

Bush signed the bill — which was sponsored by Rep. Peggy Hamric, R-Houston, and Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson — in Houston at a ceremony attended by crime victim representatives.

Among them was a woman whose family had been attacked by a man released on mandatory supervision, said Ms. Hughes.

Trials proceed against Dow Chemical

HOUSTON (AP) — Dow Chemical Co. says it will appeal a Texas appeals court ruling that will force the company to appear in court this summer for a series of breast implant suits.

The 14th Court of Appeals in Houston rejected a request from Dow Chemical, co-owner of breast implant maker Dow Corning Corp., which sought to remain out of court during implant suits.

Dow Chemical spokesman Dan Fellner said the company will be taking the matter to the Texas Supreme Court.

"We don't believe it was appropriate for us to have to defend in court the product of another company," Fellner said. "But we will be prepared to represent our case if there are trials and remain confident that we will ultimately prevail."

"Dow Chemical never designed, tested, manufactured or distributed breast implants," he added.

Plaintiffs' attorneys say Dow Chemical should be made responsible because company shareholders profited from breast implant sales from 1964-1992 and because its facilities were used in early tests on silicone.

"We're very happy. We're delighted with it," said Mike Pfifer, one of several Houston attorneys representing some 3,000 women who are suing breast implant manufacturers, claiming they were injured by the implants.

"Dow Chemical has done everything it can to avoid responsibility, but it's running out of options. Hopefully it's going to run out of one more option," Pfifer said.

State District Judge Michael Schneider in Houston cut off Dow Corning Corp. from hundreds of implant suits after the Midland, Mich., company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, leaving Dow Chemical as the primary defendant.

Attorneys for Dow Chemical tried through the appeals panel to block the action.

The appeals court refused, and made public its one-sentence ruling in a letter received by attorneys.

A few trials are set for this summer. Schneider's trial coordinator, who handles the scheduling for the 157th District Court, could not be immediately reached for more information on the trials.

Dow Chemical and Corning Inc. each own half of Dow Corning Corp., which made breast implants from 1964-1992.

In 1993, the two parent companies were absolved of legal liability for breast implants because a Birmingham, Ala. judge said there wasn't enough evidence that the companies had participated in decisions involving the manufacture of the implants.

But recently the same federal judge, Sam C. Pointer, stripped Dow Chemical of its legal protection, saying juries in some states could consider whether Dow Chemical was guilty of "negligent undertaking" because it took part in some tests on implant components.

Gramm quits Whitewater committee

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, says he doesn't want his bid for the presidency to interfere with the Whitewater investigation by a special Senate committee so he's quit the panel.

"Participation in the investigation could be construed as inappropriate and potentially damaging to the integrity of the inquiry," Gramm said recently.

Hearings by the special panel are expected to begin in late June or in July.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveyng commandment.

El Paso Times on burning the American flag:

People should be careful in waving the American flag to not waive the freedoms for which it stands. As recently as 1990, Congress has properly rejected the idea of a constitutional amendment prohibiting flag-burning. The Supreme Court ... has rejected flag-burning bans three times in six years, pointing to freedom of speech.

The Republican takeover of Congress, however, has sparked renewed discussions. The U.S. House is expected to vote on the proposal next month. Forty-nine state legislatures, all but Vermont's, and numerous veterans, civic and patriotic groups have called for a constitutional amendment banning flag burning. While such groups argue that the flag needs protection, wiser Americans will see the best argument against a ban is in the strength of the star-spangled banner.

The American flag needs no protection for protestors. It is too strong, too proven, too much a part of a nation's heart to be harmed by burning.

A constitutional ban on flag-burning is no more necessary than a compulsory salute to the flag. As former Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan wrote in 1989, "We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration, for in doing so we dilute the freedom that cherished emblem represents."

Just as improper burning desecrates the flag, denying freedom of expression would desecrate the Constitution. Congress has more pressing issues to address.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on the cattle market:

Ranchers in the Midwest and in Texas have a beef. It has to do with the price of cattle — the low, low price of cattle.

Some cattlemen see a suspicious lack of spontaneity in the market that has made shoppers smile at the supermarket but has left their industry reeling. They want federal officials to check for manipulation of beef prices and supplies.

Ranchers feel hogtied because the prices they get for feeder cattle have dropped more than $140 a head since early March. They are questioning the amount of market power that is concentrated in the hands of major meatpackers.

Nebraska's Sen. Bob Kerry has brought the Justice Department into play because "we are not seeing the kind of competition we ought to have when it comes to buying cattle."

One should not be too quick to brand meatpackers as guilty parties. After all, beef has been encountering stiff competition in the market from pork and poultry.

Cattle market rules might need changing, but which ones should be changed, and how, needs to be studied carefully. A report on the cattle market that was ordered by Congress in 1992 and is due in October should help clarify the issues.

Surrealistic reporting on the budget

The '94-'95 prime-time television season has officially ended. Some results were unsurprising: NBC's Seinfeld was the top-rated series, and the same network's ER the most popular new show. ABC, powered by such hits as Home Improvement and Grace Under Fire, won the overall network competition.

It's instructive, though, to look closer to the bottom of the 142 Nielsen-rated programs. What you find in the prime-time cellar gives added impetus to the notion that the public is growing weary of Hollywood's cultural world view.

Three shows, all of which finished in triple digits in the final ratings standings, serve to illustrate. ABC's cult teen series My So-Called Life wound up at No. 115 and has been canceled. The show, which dealt with the angst-ridden existence of 15-year-old Angela Chase, was pretty good artistically, but as its title suggests, there was nothing of value in its content.

Teen sex, hetero and homo, was the driving force in My So-Called Life. The openly bisexual Rickie, a teen-age male character, was treated approvingly by most on the show. In one episode, he pursued a new male love interest at a school dance. Two of Angela's girlfriends were sexually active, one to the point of promiscuity, and while Angela refused to bow to peer pressure, wanting to wait until she was "ready," the morality of remaining a virgin until marriage was never once addressed.

Abstinence as a goal was taboo for the series - even when Angela's mother feared Angela was sexually active. Instead, mother urged daughter to use contraceptives.

CBS's The George Wendt Show was heavily hyped, and why not? It marked the return to television of the actor who played the beloved barfly Norm on Cheers. Cheers was a long-running hit in part because it eschewed sociopolitical advocacy in favor of entertainment. Conversely, Wendt's sitcom went in the opposite direction, as did its ratings - No. 106 in the Nielsens.

In the strongly anti-Catholic premiere, one character vowed revenge against a priest for all the "mental abuse" the cleric subjected him to as a child. After a big winning streak at a church casino night, the character was told the priests were dismayed by their losses. "Good," he responded. "After all the hell they put me through as a kid ... I think it's their turn to squirm." For good measure, Wendt's character noted that being in the church building evoked memories of "the gradual stripping away of a young boy's self-esteem."

Wendt indulged in sexual envelope-pushing, too. In one episode, the lead character and his brother took an interest in two women who turned out to be lesbians and who subsequently kissed twice - purely for shock value. After expressing their desire to have children, the lesbians asked the brothers to act as their sperm donors. Did I mention this was a comedy?

NBC's Amazing Grace (No. 123 in the Nielsens) starred Patty Duke as Hannah, a minister who routinely dispensed sagacious advice regarding the quandaries du jour. It sounded promising ... until it aired.

In the show's premiere, Hannah's daughter declared her agnosticism, but her mother showed little concern for her offspring's spiritual well-being. Another installment had Hannah worrying that the daughter was sexually active; this woman of the cloth urged the daughter to "protect" herself against pregnancy and AIDS but, like the mother on My So-Called Life, couldn't bring herself to advocate abstinence.

Before Grace premiered, NBC entertainment boss Warren Littlefield stated that because TV networks "ignore the issues of religion and spirituality, (NBC) wanted to find a program that could potentially touch on these themes." Too bad the show's producers weren't listening. Indeed, the powers behind Grace were proud - and publicly so - of their show's minimizing of traditional faith.

"This is not a show about religion. It's about hope," Executive Producer Jonathan Estrin told TV Guide. Duke herself said that she "wanted someone on television ... who said it was OK to believe" but added that Grace doesn't want to be "the leader of the family-values" contingent. "We rarely use the word G-O-D," she claimed. Sadly, that was true, and that's what was most amazing about this series. The minister made virtually no mention of God or Jesus Christ and never imparted religious truths in her dialogue.

My So-Called Life was well-crafted but packed with anti-family values themes. The George Wendt Show featured one of television's most lovable actors, only to devote its energies to attacks on religion and morality. Amazing Grace was promoted as a family-values series - only to reject that standard in its content. All three shows failed. The public is finding political correctness to be politically obnoxious.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 2, the 153rd day of 1995. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 2, 1953, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain was crowned in Westminster Abbey, 16 months after the death of her father, King George VI.

On this date:

In 1851, Maine became the first state to enact a law prohibiting alcohol.

In 1883, the first non-league baseball game to be played under electric lights took place, in Fort Wayne, Ind.

In 1886, President Cleveland married Frances Folsom in a White House ceremony. (To date, Cleveland is the only president to marry in the executive mansion while in office.)

In 1924, Congress granted U.S. citizenship to all American Indians.

In 1941, baseball's "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, died in New York of a degenerative disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

Folksifying is becoming standard practice

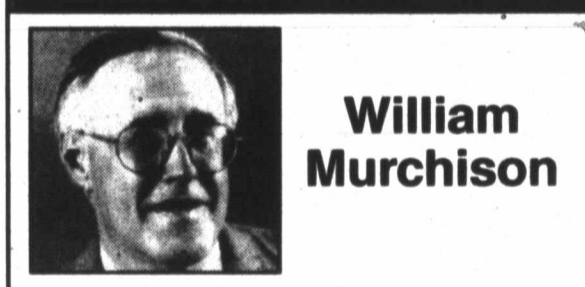

The ball that Jimmy Carter got rolling 18 years ago is traveling faster and faster. I wouldn't be surprised if, by this time, the whole game were lost. Maybe we'll never again have a U.S. president who doesn't go by his high-school yearbook name.

The '96 election campaign makes plain that folksifying one's Christian name is now the standard practice among presidential candidates.

Jimmy Carter. Bill Clinton and Al Gore. But look who stands in the wings, waiting for Bill's job: Bob Dole, Phil Gramm, Pat Buchanan, Pete Wilson, Bob Dornan, Dick Lugar.

Just two Republican candidates have failed to folksify: Lamar Alexander - because there's no useful or accepted way to tone down "Lamar" (Mar? Lammy?) - and Alan Keyes - whatever is wrong with Keyes that he thus stands on his dignity? Didn't anyone ever call him "Al"? No wonder he lost two U.S. Senate races in Maryland: no common touch.

With several of these candidates, it wasn't always thus. Against Jimmy Carter in 1976, Dole ran on a decidedly proper Republican ticket. The man at the top was Gerald, not Jerry, Ford; Dole was Robert. Gramm, when he broke into the Wall Street Journal in 1973 with a column on the energy crisis, was W. Philip Gramm. He retained this moniker for several years. At some point - I forget when exactly - he became Phil, just good ole Phil from over yonder a piece. This no doubt was fitting in a man whose speeches often tout the needs and insights of his friend Dickie Flatt. Similarly, Bob Dornan used to be

William Murchison

Robert, and Buchanan was Patrick.

Informality is a notorious hallmark of American politics, but there used to be limits. Whereas we could talk about Teddy Roosevelt and Cal Coolidge, that was for purposes of cracker-barrel chitchat. The country was actually run by Theodore and Calvin. Indeed, the former wore a silk hat, and the latter was photographed fishing in his business suit. Neither could have envisioned one of his successors jogging through downtown Washington in shorts and a baseball cap.

Personal dignity, albeit of a hearty democratic sort, went naturally with the office of president. The chief magistrate was your leader, not your pool-shooting pal. Some distance had to be kept, but not for the sake of snobbery - for the sake, rather, of mutual respect. A leader who eschews fake buddy-buddyisms shows higher respect for the individual voter than the leader who wants to compare T-shirt logos with him.

But then, people-to-people respect doesn't exist abundantly in modern America. Boys let girls open their own car doors, airline passengers wear shorts and muscle shirts, motorists shoot "the bird" at whoever offends them, receptionists address visitors by their first names, and presidential candidates say, "Call me Bob/Phil/Bill/Jimmy." So we do. With what effects?

It would be silly to suggest that what's in a name is - well, everything. A rose by any other name would smell as sweet - or foul, depending on your viewpoint - as Bill or Phil. What the candidate believes is what counts most of all, because what he believes normally determines what he does, once he is in office.

Still, it's pleasant to imagine that a real leader might lead us back toward a nicer sense of differentiation: not everything (for once) flat-out the same; some things in fact raised above other things, looking fresher and smelling better because of it. Differentiation is the human faculty least exercised today.

Why couldn't a President Bob Dole help us differentiate? Or even a President Bill Clinton? Presumably he could. But the Bob/Bill business indicates he might not want to, having absorbed, or made his peace with, the culture of everybody-just-alike - the culture of muscle shirts at the airport.

If only George Washington could have foreseen what the 20th century would bring! Or, again, what good luck he couldn't!

OBSESSIVE-COMPULSIVE BEHAVIOR

Seeking to subtract power from Washington

A militia-mood lobby, convinced there's a conspiracy lurking, has shown the political power of the militant right by blocking a conference on stronger state government - even though it seemed to match conservative aims.

The objective was to begin subtracting power from Washington and adding it at the state and local levels of government. Ironically, the opponents who stopped that movement for at least a year are the groups most suspicious, and hostile, toward the federal government.

"It's like fighting the wind," one of the sponsoring governors lamented after conceding that sessions planned for this fall won't be held for lack of the resolutions they had sought from a majority of state legislatures. They're stalled at 14, and expect one or two more this year.

"We outran our blockers," said the other chief sponsor, Republican Gov. Mike Leavitt of Utah.

He and Gov. Ben Nelson of Nebraska hadn't realized they needed any.

They thought state approval of their idea to convene a conference on the balance of government power, and proposals to strengthen the state role, was a given, all but automatic.

Governors always are looking for ways to reclaim state power they feel has shifted unduly to Washington.

So they drafted a plan for a high profile conference on the balance of government powers, and sent it out to their colleagues for approval by state legislatures, figuring they could count on a 26-state majority in a hurry.

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

With the backing of four organizations that represent governors, state legislatures and state governments, approval of their Conference of the States looked so routine that tentative dates, Oct. 3 to 25 in Philadelphia, already had been set. Coincidentally, United Nations Day falls in the middle.

And to militants who see a global conspiracy trying to impose world rule on America, that was a sign. They networked word that the conference should be stopped, that it might somehow become a constitutional convention menacing their rights. Gun activists, militia groups and others on the right joined in a campaign that startled the unwary sponsors and at least temporarily undid the whole idea.

They'd known that there would be liberal opposition, and there was. The AFL-CIO, for example, was against the conference. States' rights always had been a conservative cause. And the social programs liberals tend to favor are more easily won and run centrally than in 50 states.

That opposition wouldn't have blocked the conference.

The twist is that the militant conservatives who did stall it say they want the same thing the sponsors do, to strengthen the 10th Amendment which reserves to the states and the people all powers not constitutionally ceded to Washington, and to curb the federal government.

The conference would have had no authority to do that or anything else; its only power would be political persuasion, the message that a majority of the states want Congress to pay attention and change Washington's ways.

The resolution was shelved or scrapped in a dozen legislatures. It wasn't worth the trouble of coping with an opposition movement that used the Internet to spread its conspiracy fears, flooded legislative fax machines with messages against the conference, spread the word on talk radio, rallied at state houses when resolutions were to be considered.

It happened to Nelson at his capitol in Lincoln when the conference resolution was up for action. "The rotunda was filled with people I had never seen before," he said. They claimed there was a conspiracy afoot. It took two nights to deal with what he'd thought would be routine approval.

"It was a scary scene for a lot of legislators," he said. Nelson said that if he hadn't been one of the prime sponsors, the resolution probably would have been dropped as not worth the hassle.

"This is a small group of people, but they are very powerful ...," Leavitt said. "There's an element of it in every state ... There is a deep, unsettled feeling, and not just among extremists."

"It's hard to get things done their way," Nelson added. "It's easy to get things killed."

Knowing all the pearls of the world

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Edition

The world, you might say, is Christopher Walling's oyster. And this international jewelry artist, specializing in pearls, draws inspiration from a personal background colored by adventure, history, and intrigue.

One of his best designs is an X-shaped freshwater pearl from Japan's Lake Biwa, known as the Biwa pearl. Crisscrossed with strands of pave diamonds, the pearl is known as "the kiss." Walling has a dozen variations on the theme.

Now, due to a shortage of freshwater pearls, Walling's canvas is a handful of gem-quality pearls found in American lakes and rivers each year and saltwater pearls from Australia and Tahiti.

Operative words are scarce and nearly extinct. Ten years ago, Walling could sell a Tahitian natural black pearl necklace for $5,000; today, the price has at least tripled.

Elizabeth Taylor is a fan of his decidedly unostentatious designs. So are Kathleen Turner, Linda Grey and New Age guru Marianne Williamson.

Walling recently opened his first boutique, in Aspen, Colo. The San Francisco emporium, Gump's, will begin selling his pieces this spring. The pieces also are available by mail order from his New York showroom. Prices start at about $300.

At his New York showroom he might be talking to Hong Kong, while planning a trip to Hawaii. Pink diamonds from Australia's Argyle mines also beckon. He covers the globe and caters largely to connoisseurs of the art world by appointment only and through museum benefits.

"Part of the reason I'm traveling nearly nonstop is to buy stones, see clients and have exhibits in museums," says Walling, a tall, charming man of 45 with a thick moustache and a ready wit.

"But I also want to see every conceivable piece of jewelry that's been made before. Last time I was in Paris, I took a side trip to Moscow and St. Petersburg because there was nothing closer that I hadn't seen. And I went behind the Iron Curtain before it opened up because I needed to see Europe's earliest jewelry museum, the green vaults in Dresden."

Covering the world has always been Walling's destiny, coming from a family that moved around the globe. Walling's father worked — and traveled — for the World Health Organization, the United Nations and UNICEF in their earliest days.

Interlocking block systems are a big help in building retaining walls of landscape

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Special Features

Retaining walls are a real staple of the landscape business. Not only can they solve a wealth of erosion problems but they can also lend a lot of character to otherwise uninspired grounds. And a decent, serviceable wall can be made out of a wide range of different materials to suit just about anyone's personal taste.

We've all seen our share of concrete, concrete block, brick, stone, log and even railroad-tie walls. And many of these still look wonderful after years of great service. But, unfortunately, many of them don't look so wonderful. In fact, it can seem that for every wall you see in good condition, you've seen at least two that are failing. Some are cracked, some are crumbling and some are leaning so far, they seem to defy gravity.

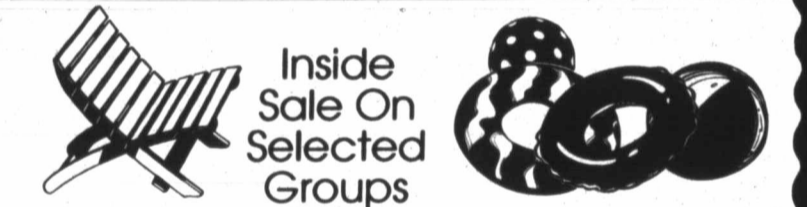

One of the biggest troubles with traditional retaining walls is that they are difficult to build well, especially for the inexperienced worker. It's relatively easy to erect a wall that looks good when you're done. But it's quite another to have the same wall look good in three months and still another for it to look good after a cold, hard winter.

Seed catalogs

By The Associated Press

A pick of the crop in the new spring seed catalogs:

— An dramatic tall presence in the garden is the Pretoria Bengal tiger canna from Wayside Gardens. Deep orange blooms atop foliage striped in bright yellow and green can stand 6 feet high and bloom for six months a year.

— The bright-faced geranium wallichianum Buxton's Variety, also from Wayside, features five-petal blooms edged in varying shades of lavender to blue, with contrasting white centers and dark stamens. The hues intensify in cooler weather; blooms start in early summer and last until fall.

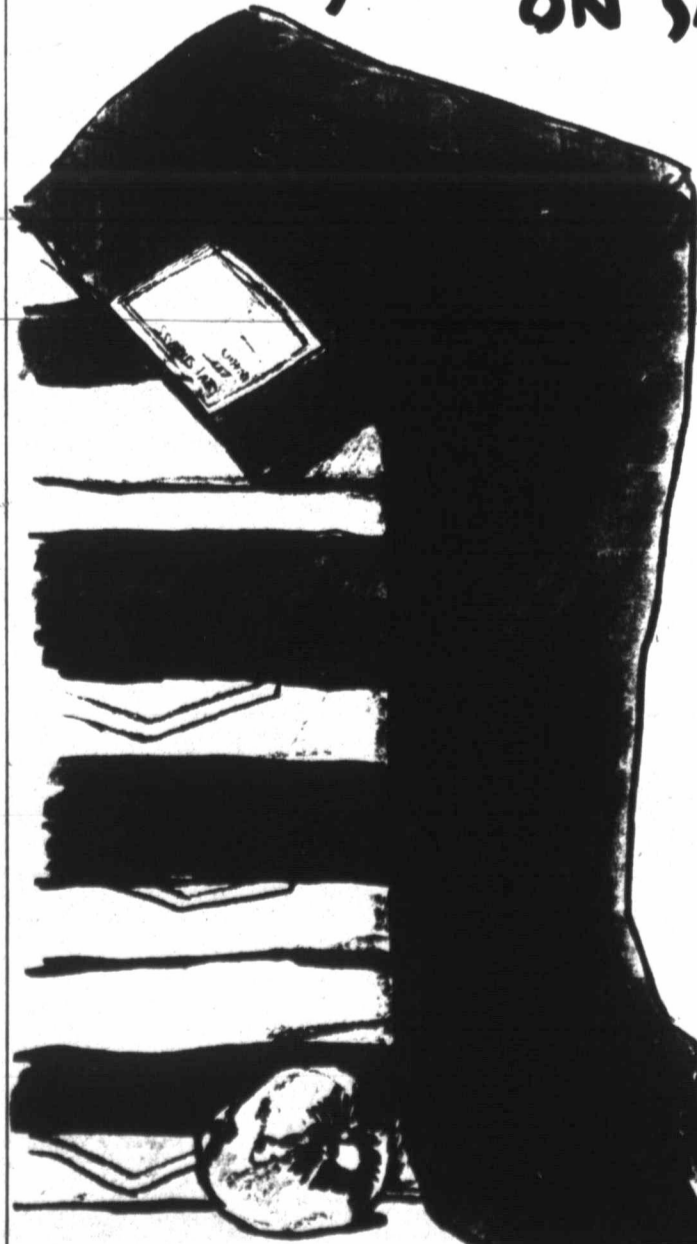

— If you prefer delicate colorings, try the Verbasum Southern Charm from Burpee in beds, borders and cutting gardens. Hundreds of 1-inch blooms in delicate pastel shades of lavender, buff and dusty rose on long spikes (30 to 36 inches) make elegant cut arrangements.

— At the other end of the scale is Coneflower Magnus, also from Burpee. Its rosy purple blooms can measure 6 inches across. Drought- and heat-resistant, it blooms from July to September.

— A classic climber, the Rose Zephyrine Drouhin from Park Seed features loose, semi-double carmine-cerise flowers evocative of traditional cottage gardens. The thornless canes make it a choice for close quarters or where children play.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

...AND THE LORD HARDENED PHARAOH'S HEART!

IT HAS BEEN SAID MANY TIMES, "THE LORD WORKS IN MYSTERIOUS WAYS, HIS WONDERS TO PERFORM." WITHOUT A DOUBT, ONE OF THESE INSTANCES HAS TO BE THE EVENTS LEADING UP TO THE DEPARTURE OF THE HEBREWS FROM EGYPT UNDER THE GUIDANCE OF MOSES. ALTHOUGH MOSES, AT THE LORD'S INSTIGATION, PERFORMED MIRACLES BEFORE PHARAOH'S EYES, THE BIBLE TELLS US, OVER AND OVER AGAIN, "...AND THE LORD HARDENED PHARAOH'S HEART..." (EX. 9:12) SO THAT PHARAOH WOULD NOT BELIEVE WHAT HIS EYES BEHELD! UNTIL THE VERY DAY OF THE EXODUS WHEN THE HEBREWS WERE WELL ON THEIR WAY TO THE RED SEA...

OBVIOUSLY THE LORD INTENDED THE DESTRUCTION OF PHARAOH AND HIS ARMIES FOR THE HARSH TREATMENT THEY HAD GIVEN THE HEBREWS. MORE THAN A DOZEN VERSES IN THE SCRIPTURES RELATE THIS TYRANNICAL BEHAVIOR IN THE FACE OF SO MANY PROOFS THAT MOSES WAS ACTUALLY A MESSENGER FROM GOD HIMSELF. WHY ELSE WOULD AN INTELLIGENT RULER OVERLOOK THESE FACTS...!

Calvary Baptist breaks ground on auditorium

Members of the Calvary Baptist Church will break ground on a new auditorium Sunday at 12 noon at 900 E. 23rd.

The structure will seat approximately 700 people, pastor Lyndon Glaesman said.

It will also contain overflow seating and a nursery.

Glaesman said the architectural and landscape plan will depict the 23rd Psalm because the church is located on 23rd Street.

The plan calls for interior greenery to correspond to the passage, "He makes me lie down in green pastures." Waterfalls will correspond to the passage, "He leads me beside quiet waters."

The master site plan calls for display of virtually every part of the verse, Glaesman said.

Construction on the auditorium is expected to be completed in eight months.

Docs do 'right thing' with little reward

By JEFFREY BAIR
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A trip to the doctor typically ends with a prescription, a pat on the back and a bill. Three idealists in one of the city's poorest neighborhoods have added God to the mix.

The doctors at the new North Side Christian Health Center ask patients to pray with them at the end of each appointment.

"I've not had anyone refuse," said Dr. Daniel Holt, who abandoned dreams of being a pastor to treat the poor. "One woman reached out gave me a hug when we were done."

The North Side clinic does not make money. One-third of the 54,000 people in the neighborhood are poor under the federal government's definition. Half of the patients seen in the clinic's first three months had no health insurance. People pay only what they can afford.

"So maybe we don't drive Mercedeses. I mean, Dan might have trouble starting his Volkswagen every once in a while, but we're not hurting that much," Wahrenberger said.

Similar clinics operate in Baltimore and Boston, part of an effort to accommodate doctors to help ease a nationwide shortage of general practitioners in U.S. cities.

At the last stage of medical school, the doctors approached Mercy Hospital, located in another part of the city, with their idea for a clinic. They agreed to work for a salary at the hospital's office in West View in exchange for a $125,000 grant to finance the non-profit clinic on the North Side.

Until the clinic opened, many of the area residents relied on emergency rooms for their health care or were forced to travel to see a physician.

"I was going some distance to see a doctor, and I didn't like him," said Daniel Miller, a 70-year-old retired hotel worker with high blood pressure. "And it's a pain in the rear to have to go over to Allegheny General, so this is really ideal for us. ... I really like Dr. Wahrenberger, even if he is on a no-smoking kick like most doctors."

The doctors said their religions have taught them to serve God in whatever career they choose. They first discussed founding a Christian clinic while they were undergraduate students at Gannon University in Erie. The idea gained favor as they built houses during a missionary visit to Kentucky.

Guy, 31, was most reluctant of the three, wanting to treat farmers and retirees. Later, he experienced an epiphany about the clinic on a Saturday morning and called his college buddies right away.

Holt, 30, joined after considering a seminary and having doubts about becoming a gynecologist. Wahrenberger, 30, was the driving force. He volunteered at another city clinic and wanted to apply its ideas on the North Side, where he lives and attends church.

The doctors advocate "whole-person care." The most frequent diagnoses in the early going have been high-blood pressure and depression. General practice doctors are allowed to practice psychiatry, allowing the clinic's physicians to address the ills of the mind as well as the body.

Anything complicated might be referred to another doctor, and the physicians are not above begging. Wahrenberger wanted to send one man with a broken foot to a bone specialist recently.

"It took five or six calls before I was able to find someone to see him. In 1995, it is hard to find a doctor who will treat anyone with his type of insurance, which is basically no insurance," he said.

The doctors hope to hire a social worker to help patients obtain government services and a fourth doctor to be at the clinic full time.

Texans reach out in medical mission to Guatemala

By ALICIA COLLIER
The Daily Tribune (Bay City)

BAY CITY, Texas — Peter Berger once said the Technological Age "has also brought on a revolution on the level of human consciousness, fundamentally uprooting beliefs, values and even the emotional texture of life."

The surgeons, ministers, dentists and support staff of Faith in Practice who traveled to Guatemala recently rediscovered that emotional texture of life.

Faith in Practice Inc., a not-for-profit Christian group, sponsors medical missions to Guatemala. The vision the Rev. Todd Collier, its executive director, now encompasses surgeons and nurses from Southwest Memorial Hospital in Houston, members of Memorial Drive Presbyterian Church in Houston, dentists, assistants and hygienists from Bay City and other members of First Presbyterian Church in Bay City.

Collier was inspired to form the mission when he visited Herman Pedro Obras Sociales, a hospital in Antigua, Guatemala, in 1993, to inquire about health care in the area. He was touched by the patients he saw, mostly war orphans with debilitating conditions and the conscientious staff there who kept them groomed and healthy.

"You have to remember the memory — try to feel their pain," he explains. "When you look at how they're loved and cared for by the workers in the hospital and how, in the midst of some real trauma, they are able to overcome it and live happy lives — that is what is amazing to me."

Collier shared his vision with the members of Memorial Drive, the physicians at Memorial Hospital and the people of First Presbyterian, and 44 people responded by making the fifth Faith in Practice trip to Antigua, Guatemala, at the end of last April. Some volunteers, like Drs. Charlotte and Richard Alexander and Vera and Joe Wiatt had been with him since the beginning and were now coordinating the trip.

Each one knew of the region's political unrest due to an ongoing civil war, but yet they proceed with the preparations — packing and labeling trunks with donated medicines and supplies — and ventured forth.

Advertisements in the Prensa Libre and radio spots announced to the Guatemalans that "the doctors" were coming. The specialists who arrived the second week were met by a crowd of 300-500 people waiting to be screened for treatment. The people came knowing that there would be no appointments and definitely no rainchecks, but the chance to be seen by the specialized team was worth the risk.

"I had only been on the one trip in October (1994)," Dr. Gary Card, an ear, nose and throat specialist at Memorial Southwest, says, "but this was different in respect to the volume of patients we screened and the number of surgeries. They came from as far away as the borders of El Salvador and Mexico. There are such poignant stories of how they got there."

One woman carried her child for three hours from a village in Northern Guatemala until she could catch a bus for the remaining six hour trip. She persevered, standing in the crowded waiting area after wading through a sea of other needy people and was the last patient seen. Another woman was aided by a missionary from Minnesota. The child they brought had waited years for the opportunity to receive the facial surgery he needed. His prayers were finally answered this time when he was the first to be screened.

Surgeons filled the need for cleft lip and palate repair, corrective surgery for burns and orthopedic abnormalities as well as

'Ugly Accusations' of being Gay Reveal Uglier Prejudice

DEAR ABBY: I saw the letter in your column from a man who complained that he was being hurt by the rumor that he was gay because he was sharing an apartment with another man instead of a woman. I was shocked by your reaction. You labeled the rumor an "ugly accusation." If someone thought this man was Jewish, Catholic or African American — you would call that an "ugly accusation"?

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

As a gay man, I strongly object to your response, which implied that being gay (or thought to be gay) is ugly. Remarks such as yours serve to fuel the prejudice against us.

Perhaps your comment should have been, "Just tell people that your sexual orientation, like anything else about you that you choose not to discuss, is none of their business." Abby, you are too widely read to permit yourself to thoughtlessly feed homophobia.

It is prejudice that is ugly — not being gay. I believe you owe all of us an apology.

GAY, PROUD AND OUTRAGED

DEAR GAY, PROUD AND OUTRAGED: Anyone who has read my column for any length of time knows that not only am I not homophobic, but for decades I have spoken out to promote understanding and acceptance of gays and lesbians.

You have my profound apology. I completely agree with your statement that what is ugly is prejudice — not one's sexual orientation.

You are only one of many who wrote to say they were disturbed by my response. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Joe From Little Rock" reflected a common but unfortunate attitude. People inferred that Joe was gay because he was single and had male friends over to visit. You referred to these inferences as "allegations" and "ugly accusations" — as if being gay were something to be ashamed of, like molesting children or robbing banks.

Abby, perhaps the "accusers" view gay people this way, but you appear to have given your approval to their prejudice. Please set the record straight. The appropriate response to the "accusation" of being gay is, "And ...?" Optional follow-ups for the ensuing silence include, "No, I am not gay, but would it make a difference to you if I were?" or, "Yes, I am gay; does it matter?"

DAVE AND BOB IN PORTLAND

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the letter in your column from "Joe From Little Rock," who was disturbed that his gossipy neighbors thought he was gay because he shared an apartment with another man. He called the rumors "ugly" and "vicious."

Abby, I understand that being misunderstood can be annoying, but being gay is not a bad thing — so if people were to think that I am gay, I would not feel they were being vicious or ugly. I would just think that they were wrong.

Please do not add to the prejudice against homosexuals by considering it an insult to be called gay.

My twin sister is gay, and she is 100 percent wonderful.

VOLLEYBALL

PAMPA — The Pampa Middle School gymnasium will be open on Mondays and Wednesdays June 5 through July 13 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. for any student who would like to play volleyball. There will be supervision while the gym is open.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Rice outfielder Jose Cruz Jr. was the No. 3 pick in today's baseball draft, selected by the Seattle Mariners, and Grand Prairie right-hander Kerry Wood was picked fourth by the Chicago Cubs.

Also going in the first round were Kingwood right-hander Andy Yount, selected No. 15 by Boston, and Texas outfielder Shea Morenz, picked 27th by the New York Yankees.

Cruz, 21, the son of former major leaguer Jose Cruz, hit .377 with 16 homers and 76 RBIs in 223 at-bats.

Wood won his first 10 starts this season, compiling an 0.81 ERA and 117 strikeouts in 60 innings.

The Texas Rangers selected Florida State right-hander Jonathan Johnson as the seventh pick in today's baseball draft.

Johnson was 10-3 with a 3.10 ERA and 120 strikeouts in 116 innings for the Seminoles.

The Houston Astros used the 22nd pick on Tony McKnight, a right-hander from Arkansas High School in Texarkana, Ark.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Matt Hyers hit a two-run homer and added a two-run double in the second inning Thursday night to lift Middle Georgia to a 16-4 victory over Odessa, Texas, in the National Junior College Baseball World Series.

Hyers, who went 2-for-4 with 5 RBIs in the game, sparked the Warriors' (54-11) eight-run second inning in which 12 Middle Georgia hitters went to the plate. Aric Burkhardt added a two-run shot to help the Warriors take a 12-4 lead at the end of the inning.

The game was called after the fifth inning due to the ten-run rule.

In the earlier game, Indian River, Fla. eliminated St. Louis-Meramec 11-5.

Middle Georgia generated 13 hits off five Odessa (49-11) pitchers in the nightcap, staying alive in the hunt for the national title.

GOLF

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jim McGovern eagled the 15th hole and took the lead with a 7-under par 65 as the rain-interrupted first round of the Memorial tournament was completed this morning.

McGovern had a one-shot edge over Greg Norman and Mark O'Meara, both of whom completed first-round play Thursday.

McGovern was among the 55 stranded by darkness Thursday night who returned to the saturated Muirfield Village Golf Club course to finish first round play this morning.

Playing in a light rain, they turned around immediately for the start of the second round as officials attempted to get the tournament schedule back on track.

Tom Watson, Scott Hoch and 31-year-old rookie Woody Austin also were among the day-late finishers and joined three others at 67.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, Jim Gallagher and Mike Sullivan played in the same threesome and got their 5-under-par scores on the board late Thursday.

McGovern had seven holes to go when he resumed play, and he began birdie-par-birdie.

That took him to the 15th where he hit a 246-yard 3-wood second shot to about 8 feet behind the hole.

"It was fairly easy putt. I just had to get it rolling," he said.

Rockets make return trip to NBA finals

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The I-10 series between Houston and San Antonio is over, and the Spurs are road kill.

Perhaps no team has had a more precarious or improbable route to the NBA Finals than the Rockets.

They were defending champions. But after a sixth-place finish in the Western Conference, nobody gave the Rockets much of a chance for a repeat title.

Now, after coming back from the brink of elimination against Utah and Phoenix, Houston has disposed of San Antonio, the team with the league's best record, and is headed back to the Finals.

"Once again, we proved all the doubters wrong," Houston's Sam Cassell said. "This ball club is a playoff team. When the playoffs come, we know what to do."

The Rockets finished off the Spurs 100-95 Thursday night, putting to rest the homecourt demons that haunted this series. It took six tries, but finally the home team won a game, and Houston won the best-of-7 series 4-2.

"I'm probably the proudest man in the world," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "I don't want to take anything away from last year. It was special. I don't want to tarnish that, but right now this was better."

As usual, Hakeem Olajuwon was magnificent. He had 39 points, 17 rebounds and five blocked shots. In six games against the league's MVP, David Robinson, Olajuwon averaged 35.3 points and 12.5 rebounds.

The showdown between these two Texas towers was no contest. Olajuwon's play made his fifth-place finish in this year's MVP voting seem ridiculous.

"I've never seen anyone on this planet play like this guy," Houston's Clyde Drexler said. "He is phenomenal, right in and night out. He does it so easily people come to expect it. That's the ultimate."

Drexler, the Rocket without a championship ring, had a rough start Thursday night, but he made big plays down the stretch and finished with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Olajuwon's biggest help, though, came from Robert Horry. Shifted to power forward much of the time as coach Rudy Tomjanovich went with a smaller lineup, Horry made six of 11 3-pointers and scored 22 points.

His last 3-pointer, with 1:58 to play, put Houston ahead 97-93, then he clinched the victory by making two free throws 13 seconds from the finish.

"I was feeling it the whole game," Horry said. "When it's a hot gym, I get into the flow of things."

Robinson scored 19 for San Antonio, but missed two free throws and committed a fatal turnover in the final 1:06.

Avery Johnson had 19 points and 10 assists, Sean Elliott scored 18 points and Dennis Rodman had 14 points and 17 rebounds for the Spurs.

Someone asked the Rockets' Kenny Smith if, with all the dramatic comebacks, this was a team of destiny.

"I wouldn't say destiny," he said. "I can't predict the future. But when we put our game together, no one can beat us."

The clincher didn't come easily. After Drexler stole Robinson's pass and found Elie for a layup with 5:56 to play, Houston led 92-83.

But San Antonio's Doc Rivers scored seven during a 10-0 run. Robinson capped the rally with a free throw, putting the Spurs ahead 93-92 with 2:42 remaining.

Robinson drew his fifth foul with 9:48 left and went to the bench, but came back for what probably were the most miserable 6 minutes, 15 seconds of his career.

Drexler, who came to his hometown of Houston in a Valentine's Day trade, made two free throws to put the Rockets ahead for good, 94-93 with 2 1/2 minutes to play.

"We were in position to take it," Spurs coach Bob Hill said. "We just couldn't finish it."

Robinson, just 6-for-17 from the field for the game was 0-for-3 in the final quarter. After he missed inside, Horry made his final 3-pointer.

Robinson also missed two free throws with 1:06 remaining. After Cassell made one of two free throws, Rodman's rebound basket with 28 seconds to go kept San Antonio's fading hopes alive.

But Horry was fouled by Rodman and made both free throws.

San Antonio had won four straight on the road and liked its chances of sending the series back to the Alamodome for a deciding Game 7, especially since Houston was playing its 16th game in 30 days.

Pampa Middle School athletes participate in Amarillo volleyball league

AMARILLO — A group of Pampa 7th and 8th graders finished their participation in a Power Pool Volleyball League at the Amarillo High and Caprock High School gyms.

Play was each Wednesday from April 12 through May 17 and the Pampa team posted a 12-6 record with three of those six losses coming against teams with players 16 to 18 years of age. A number of their wins came against older teams.

Teams from around the panhandle participated in the league, which was designed to provide low-cost competitive play for teams or individuals desiring to advance their skills in the off-season.

Team members included eighth graders Lisa Dwight, Kimberly Clark, Lisa Kirkpatrick, Lori Lindsey and Jessica Maddox; seventh graders Tandi Morton, Lindsay Earl and Carrie Walker. Haley Rex was team manager.

Strong serving performances were turned in by Jessica Maddox, Kimberly Clark and Lori Lindsey, with strong blocking and spiking from Tandi Morton, Carrie Walker, Lisa Kirkpatrick and Lisa Dwight. Lindsay Earl provided exceptional digging skills and both Lindsey and Clark did an outstanding job of setting.

Coach Whitney Morton said an overall team effort was the key to Pampa's success.

Morton noted that most of her team members were involved in middle school track, Lady Harvester softball and volleyball at the same time. Also, Carrie Walker was singled out as the most improved player as she gained confidence with each game played, Morton said.

Top scorer for Pampa was Kimberly Clark, followed by Tandi Morton. Pampa's top blocker and spiker was Lisa Dwight with Morton again second in those categories.

Nolan Ryan has new job

HOUSTON (AP) — Retired pitching great Nolan Ryan has only been on the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission for only four months and he's already been given a promotion by his peers.

Ryan on Thursday was elected vice chairman of the nine-member board that oversees the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Outgoing vice chairman Walter Umphrey of Beaumont nominated Ryan as his replacement and he was confirmed by unanimous vote.

Ryan, appointed by Gov. George W. Bush in February to a six-year term on the commission, will serve one year in the vice chairman's post, but can be re-elected.

Attorney general warns consumers of long distance 'slamming'

By DEAN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — An Atlanta-based long distance company embroiled in legal troubles over an unethical business practice is shutting down and may leave some customers without service, the Texas attorney general's office says.

In Texas, Sonic targeted Hispanic residents in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Austin, El Paso and McAllen.

Sonic Communications Inc. has been the source of numerous complaints filed with the attorney general's office by customers who say the company changed their long distance service without authorization, a practice known as "slamming" in the industry.

Slamming often leaves consumers paying much higher rates than with their prior carrier, the attorney general's office said.

Under scrutiny from attorney general's offices in several states, including Texas,

California, Illinois and New York, Sonic filed for bankruptcy in April.

Because of allegations of fraud and mismanagement on Sonic's part, the bankruptcy court appointed a trustee to run the company, Attorney General Dan Morales' office said.

The service shutdown, already begun for business users, is proceeding for individual consumers, according to Morales' office.

"Since Sonic is known to have switched consumers' long distance service without authorization, we urge all consumers, especially those with Hispanic surnames, to check their latest telephone bills to see who is their long distance provider," Morales said.

"If your long distance service is provided by Sonic Communications Inc., you may want to immediately contact a new, reputable long distance service company or your local telephone company to acquire new service," he said.

No one answered phone calls to Sonic's office in Atlanta.

Morales' office said it is playing a role in Sonic's bankruptcy case and plans to ask for restitution to consumers, civil penalties and $400,000 owed to Texas in state sales taxes.

One Texas lawmaker during the 1995 legislative session tried to get a bill passed to cut back on the practice of slamming.

The bill by Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, would have required a long distance carrier to have a written letter from a consumer specifically authorizing a change of service.

Violating the bill's provisions would have been a state jail felony.

The bill, however, died. "The slammer's lobby was fairly effective this session in making sure that bill died. The penalties may have been exorbitant and that may have helped kill it," said Tom Smith, executive director of the consumer advocacy group Public Citizen. "While we thought some serious penalty may be in order, a lot of people weren't sure that it was something that deserved to be treated as a felony," he said.

Slamming takes many forms, but in most cases the provisions authorizing a switch in long distance is written in almost unreadable fine print.

"It's a fairly common problem and one that we should have been able to pass some legislation to fix," Smith said.

Ward Tisdale, a Morales spokesman, said the attorney general's office has settled eight slamming cases since 1991.

The Texas Public Utility Commission, even though it doesn't regulate long distance companies, has fielded about 275 slamming complaints so far this fiscal year — between September and April. That number is up from 150 during the last fiscal year, but it is close to the nearly 300 the year before that.

A PUC spokeswoman said the practice is an unfortunate offshoot of competition in the long distance industry.

Kmart closing 72 more stores, 13 cut in Texas

DETROIT (AP) — The troubled Kmart Corp. will shut down 72 of its least profitable discount stores nationwide, cutbacks that will cost 5,800 jobs, the company said Thursday.

Thirteen of the stores are in Texas — in Bay City, Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Euless, Fort Worth, Houston, Lake Jackson, Lewisville, Spring, Stafford, Texarkana and Webster.

The retail chain's sales and profits have lagged in recent years partly because its aging stores have been unable to compete with its rivals' newer branches. Kmart also has had major inventory problems.

Under pressure from stockholders, the board ousted chief executive and President Joseph Antonini in March. It has yet to name a successor.

The cutbacks announced Thursday follow the closing of 110 stores late last year and early this year as part of a major corporate overhaul. Kmart also relocated, consolidated or closed 120 stores earlier in 1994.

Those changes, along with cuts at the company's suburban Detroit headquarters, eliminated about 7,100 jobs.

The announcement was expected so did not surprise Wall Street. Kmart's stock closed up 12.5 cents at $12.875 a share in early trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The cost of the latest closures was provided for in a $1.35 billion store restructuring charge recorded in the fourth quarter of 1993.

Donald Keeble, vice president of store operations, said the stores have not met performance standards set as part of the restructuring. The stores are in 23 states, with the most in California and Texas.

"As we continue to strengthen Kmart's core business, we will insist that our stores fully meet these investment standards," he said.

Spokeswoman Mary Lorencz said no more mass closure announcements are expected this year. "Could another store or two close? Yes, because we're always assessing our stores."

But analyst L. Wayne Hood of Prudential Securities in Atlanta said many more stores could face closure if their sales do not respond to recent upgrades in inventory and management systems.

"They have maybe another 200 stores that I would put on the marginal list," Hood said.

Kmart reported a $28 million loss in this year's first quarter, its ninth consecutive quarter of lackluster earnings amid tough competition from Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the Target chain of Dayton-Hudson Corp. and others.

Still, some analysts say Kmart is on the right track.

"I expect stronger earnings gains in the second half of the year," said Ron Petrie of Roney & Co.
