Pampa, Texas

50¢ DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Low tonight in the upper 50s, high tomorrow in the middle 80s. See Page 2 for weather details.

PAMPA - Engineers will complete the first phase of a study examining options of a northern extension to I-27 by February 1996, Texas Department of Transportation District Manager Billy D. Parks told members of the Pampa Rotary Club at a luncheon Wednesday.

Parks said he thinks a four-lane divided highway could be chosen over a full interstate highway or a high-volume two-lane highway.

Parks said the study will identify two 10-mile wide corridors for the proposed extension. He said Texas Hwy. 70 was one of several viable options.

The engineering consulting firm conducting the study will hold its next public meeting in Lubbock on July 18. Parks said supporters should keep their cards and letters coming to the consulting firm.

Parks also said bridges crossing the Canadian River on Hwy. 70 north of Pampa and U.S. Hwy. 83 north of Canadian are scheduled for replacement.

PAMPA - The last regular registration period for the City of Pampa Recreation Department's annual Summer Recreation Program will be Friday from 6-8 p.m. at the Pampa Middle School at 2401 Charles Street.

Registration forms must be signed by a parent or a legal guardian.

The program is divided into two sessions which will be held during weekdays only. The first session is June 5-16 and the second session is June 19-30. The registration fee is $10 per student for the first class and $5 for each additional class. Fees are payable at the time of registration. Each registered participant will receive an official T-shirt.

Late registration will be on the first day of summer recreation classes at Pampa High School.

For more information, call 669-5770.

PAMPA - The Celebration of Lights committee is encouraging Pampa residents to be aware that there will be many people from out of town visiting Pampa this weekend.

Visitors will be on residential streets looking for garage sales and in various stores and businesses taking advantage of sales bargains.

"We encourage our residents to be helpful and friendly to these visitors," said Vicki Phillips, committee member. "Every dollar that comes into our community benefits all residents."

Phillips added that the committee is proud "of all the fine people who work with the public and know they will be especially friendly and welcoming to our visitors."

Pampa man killed in shooting

By JEFF CARRUTH
Staff Writer

Grand jury indictments were expected today for two men held in police custody after a deadly south-side shooting spree on Wednesday.

Sanford La Craig Kelley was pronounced dead at Coronado Hospital by Dr. W.E. Bowles at 2:40 p.m. Wednesday. A police incident report indicates he suffered gunshot wounds to the torso and legs.

Pampa Police Chief Charles Flemins said an autopsy is being performed today in Lubbock on Kelley's body to pinpoint the cause of death and gain forensic evidence.

Injured in a related incident was a 14-year-old female who suffered a gunshot wound to the upper right arm. Emergency workers transported her to Coronado Hospital, where she was treated and released.

Held in police custody are James Wilbon III, 17, and Kerrance Ramone Brown, 25, both of Pampa.

Chief Flemins said police received a call at 2:30 p.m. that a fight and shooting had taken place at Prairie Village Park. Officers arrived and discovered Kelley with multiple gunshot wounds approximately 150 feet from the park's basketball court. Reports indicate Kelley was shot in the park and walked to a yard at the intersection of Prairie Drive and Crawford.

Witnesses told police the incident ignited from a dispute during a pick-up basketball game in Prairie Village Park. "The fellows in the basketball game got mad at each other. ... One of the fellows went and got a gun and came back and started shooting," Flemins said.

Witness statements given to police indicate Wilbon allegedly shot Kelley following the dispute on the basketball court. Brown allegedly left and returned to the area with a gun, upset over the shooting of Kelley.

Gunfire then erupted around the intersection of Huff Road and Crawford. A 14-year-old female not involved in the dispute was shot in the arm while she was inside her home in the 1000 block of Huff Road.

Brown allegedly committed the injury to the juvenile female and allegedly fired at three people during the fray, Flemins said.

Wilbon, who allegedly committed the homicide, turned himself into police at the scene.

Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield and Texas Ranger Gary Henderson arrested Brown after a foot chase. Flemins said the two officers arrived as backup when witnesses pointed out Brown, who still had a gun. Brown then fled the scene with Stubblefield and Henderson giving chase.

"These are two separate shootings," Flemins said. "This was not a drug-related situation. It was two boys who got into a heated argument in a basketball game. So it's an isolated incident, and it's not connected with anything that has occurred down there."

"We had a tremendous amount of witnesses come forth and give affidavits," Flemins said.

Police confiscated two 9 mm. semi-automatic hand guns. Flemins said police did not know how many rounds were fired but some houses had bullet holes in them.

Police gathered evidence from three residences, the park's basketball court and a vehicle near the park.

Flemins said he expected District Attorney John Mann to present evidence to a grand jury panel previously scheduled to convene today. Both suspects would then be arraigned before 31st District Judge M. Kent Sims. A spokesman for the 31st District Court said the arraignment hearings would likely take place in two to three days.

Mann was unavailable for comment.

Services for Mr. Kelley, a 1988 graduate of Pampa High School, will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the First Church of God in Christ Church in Carthage, Texas, where he was born.

He is survived by his parents, two sisters, two brothers, his common-law wife, a son, two daughters and a step-daughter.

County commission names Corplan developer for juvenile girls' boot camp

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

County commissioners today named Corplan as the developer of the proposed Gray County girls' boot camp and set conditions for a board to be named to oversee the selling of bonds to finance it.

Members will be named later for the Panhandle Regional Juvenile Justice Development Board, commissioners decided. That board will likely only be active in the planning and building stages of the proposed boot camp.

County Judge Richard Peet announced at the special meeting of the commissioners court that the Pampa Economic Development Corp. has agreed to provide 20 acres, but a location of that land has yet to be decided.

In related business, Gray County Juvenile Officer Albert Nichols said that he had received "very favorable" response from surveys he had sent to police chiefs and county judges statewide.

Peet, saying he was prompted by this initial interest, put boot camp discussion on this morning's agenda so no "other county or community could jump out ahead with it."

Discussion centered on concerns about the type of juveniles allowed into the facility.

Nichols assured the commissioners that the Juvenile Board would set policies with the developer to try to prevent "hardcore" juveniles or potential problems with the facility.

PEDC director Jack Ippel told commissioners that the county would not be financially responsible for the boot camp and that "everything accrued will be of benefit to Gray County," citing potential benefits to the school system, the hospital and to the overall economic status of the county.

"This is an opportunity that doesn't come along too often," Ippel said.

Peet said that the money and savings are important, but more important are "the lives we will impact."

"I would rather see us impacting lives between grades six through nine than later as we potentially witnessed yesterday," Peet said.

Peet referred to the shooting death of Sanford La Craig Kelley at Prairie Village Park Wednesday afternoon.

Commissioners also discussed options about setting out a specific site in the county that citizens can set off skyrockets with sticks and missile fireworks.

If weather conditions are dry, the commission court could be required by law to either designate such a site or ban those types of fireworks all together.

By the June 15 meeting, Peet expects to have information about umbrella special-event insurance that could possibly cover any land set aside for fireworks.

Peet also hopes to have names of area farmers who would be willing to allow the county to possibly lease their land for the day.

In other action, the commissioners court agreed to pay for materials to repaint the bull barn. The local 4-H will paint the facility as a community service project.

Also, the commission court heard a presentation by Seleta Chance, director of the Celebration of Lights organization about the organization's plans for Christmas decorations.

Pampa's First National merges with Boatmen's

The First National Bank in Pampa merged with Boatmen's First National Bank of Amarillo today, according to Don Powell, chairman and chief executive officer of Boatmen's First.

Don Babcock will continue as president and chief executive officer of the Pampa bank.

"The only change our customers will see is more service, more convenience and more products," Babcock said.

Babcock also pointed out that customers involved in farming and ranching now have access to the state's largest agricultural lender. Loan decisions will still be made at home, he added.

Trust services also will be improved and expanded in Pampa with the merger, Babcock said, and customers will, for the first time, have access to retail investment services including mutual funds, annuities and stocks.

Powell welcomed the First National Staff, customers and shareholders into the Boatmen's First fold by praising the leadership role First National in Pampa has played in the Pampa community. Boatmen's First will build on those successes and set even higher goals for the bank and its customers while building value for shareholders, he said.

"We believe it's important that bank customers are able to own a piece of their bank to participate in its success, and now Boatmen's First customers in Pampa will have that opportunity," Powell said.

As of April 30, 1995, First National Bank in Pampa had total assets of $163 million and deposits of $132 million. The combined banks have total assets of $1.5 billion and total deposits of more than $1 billion.

Capital - a key indicator of a bank's financial stability, Powell said - totals approximately $142 million for the combined banks.

When data processing operations are merged at the end of the year, customers in Pampa may conduct banking business at any of the locations in Amarillo, Canyon, Childress, Dalhart, Dumas, Vega and Pampa. Customers also have access to 32 ATMs and Boatmen's mobile banking center, Bob the Bankwagon.

Boatmen's First National Bank of Amarillo is affiliated with Boatmen's Bancshares Inc. of St. Louis, Mo., a growing regional network of banks and financial institutions with assets of $32 billion.

A correction in Wednesday's paper incorrectly listed the Pampa High School Class of 1995 as having a reunion on June 30 and July 1. It should have read the Class of 1955.

PEP agency setting up oil collection sites

The Panhandle Environmental Partnership is setting up a network of used oil collection sites in the top 26 counties of the Texas Panhandle.

The Partnership is a program of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC) and the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission (TNRCC), which made the program possible with a grant of almost $300,000.

The Partnership is opening the sites in cooperation with the region's local governments, giving "do-it-yourselfers" convenient locations to dump used motor oil.

Dumping used oil in unauthorized places is illegal. Oil can seep into soil and contaminate underground supplies of water, thus endangering the health of thousands of area residents who depend on underground water for drinking and agriculture.

While some area residents already have access to used oil recycling centers, others do not. Until now, many residents in smaller communities have had to carry used oil to distant or inconvenient recycling stations.

"Rural residents are no less environmentally conscious than urban dwellers, but recycling has been slow in coming to many rural communities because of the high cost of implementing programs," said Gary Pitner, PRPC executive director. "But through cooperative efforts, we can offer rural communities the same convenient oil-recycling facilities found in larger areas."

The recycling stations consist of one, 465-gallon fiberglass tank that sits inside a small fenced area. "Do-it-yourselfers" can pour oil directly into the tank and deposit used oil filters in a nearby container.

Borger-based CEG Industries will collect the oil and filters when containers are full. CEG will then deliver the waste oil to the Phillips 66 Co. refinery in Borger, where it will be re-refined and recycled back into petroleum products. All this is free-of-charge to residents.

The network will consist of more than 100 stations in the 26-county area, all within easy access of almost every Panhandle community. In some towns, the Partnership is setting up stations at community recycling centers.

The hours the stations will be available will be set by local governments and posted at the sites.

To hear more about the network, area residents with touch tone service are encouraged to call 800 SAVE OIL, a toll-free number that accesses a 24-hour, computer-assisted hotline. Residents with rotary service should call that number between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For more information on the Panhandle Environmental Partnership, contact John Kiehl at (806) 372-3381.

Official predicts more arrests in bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) - A top-ranking Justice Department official said today there might be more arrests in the Oklahoma City bombing case and expressed confidence that authorities will apprehend everyone involved.

Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick also raised the possibility that John Doe No. 2, the subject of three FBI sketches and a nationwide manhunt, may not have been an active participant in the April 19 bombing that killed 168 people at the Alfred P. Murrah federal building.

"We have plenty of leads. I would not foreclose the possibility of additional defendants at some time in the future," Gorelick told a news conference. "But I would not predict when that might be or with any certainty whether that will occur."

"I'm confident that at the end of the ... (case) we will have everyone who participated in this event," said Gorelick, the No. 2 official at the department.

Only Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, two former Army buddies, have been charged in the case. Another Army buddy, Michael Fortier, who associated with McVeigh in Arizona in recent years, and McVeigh's sister, Jennifer, also have been questioned but not charged.

Fortier has told authorities he and McVeigh traveled from Arizona to Oklahoma City before the blast. Fortier said he helped scout the building as a potential bombing target, according to a senior federal official in Washington.

A second federal official said this week that prosecutors want more information from Fortier before they offer him a deal.

This source said authorities believe they have enough evidence to charge Fortier in connection with the bombing.

"He was involved and they've got some evidence on him. He was involved in the test explosions. There's enough there to say that he is a serious candidate, a second-tier conspirator," the second official said.

Gorelick would not discuss whether any negotiations were under way in the Oklahoma City case, but said that plea bargains with conspirators to gain evidence were a necessary and useful part of federal criminal law enforcement so long as the conspirators agreed to plead guilty to charges appropriate to their conduct.

Four tickets match all six numbers in $55 million jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) - Four tickets have matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot is worth $55 million.

The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 1, 18, 21, 29, 38, 50. Two of the tickets were sold in Dallas, one in Big Spring and one in Brenham.

There were 499 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,298. There were 24,341 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $96. And there were 438,534 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $4 million.

Bosnian Serbs seize United Nations official

By AIDA CERKEZ
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Defiant Bosnian Serbs seized a U.N. civilian official, increasing the number of U.N. personnel held hostage since NATO airstrikes, and heavy fighting was reported today around two U.N.-protected enclaves.

Bosnian Serb police seized the civilian U.N. employee from Sweden in the northern rebel stronghold of Banja Luka on Wednesday, a U.N. spokesman said today. It's the first time the Serbs have detained a U.N. civilian employee since they began taking hostages last week.

The U.N. official handled civilian issues in Banja Luka, a hotbed of Bosnian Serb nationalism. Three U.N. military observers, stationed at the Banja Luka airport, have been restricted to the base for days, said the U.N. spokesman, Chris Guinness.

The Serbs began grabbing U.N. peacekeepers after NATO warplanes attacked Serb ammunition bunkers Thursday and Friday outside Pale, the Bosnian Serbs' headquarters nine miles east of the capital, Sarajevo.

U.N. officials say about 370 peacekeepers are being detained or surrounded by the rebels throughout Bosnia.

Efforts to free the hostages have been stymied by the intensity of bad blood between the Bosnian Serbs and U.N. officials. The Bosnian Serbs believe the United Nations is biased against them.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher today dismissed a Bosnian Serb overture for international talks on U.N. hostages, saying the Serbs' proposal appeared to be inviting concessions on the part of the allies.

"We are not prepared to go into talks on that basis," Christopher said at a news conference in Lisbon, Portugal.

The U.S. rejection came a day after a significant policy shift: The Clinton administration said Wednesday that it was now prepared to send U.S. ground troops to help reposition U.N. peacekeepers.

American troops must be allowed to carry out their mission and use force to defend themselves, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. John Shalikashvili, said Wednesday.

The United States also sent an envoy back to Belgrade to try to persuade the Bosnian Serbs' former patron, President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, to recognize Bosnia and break off remaining links to the Serb nationalist movement he inflamed there.

The Serbs offered "urgent talks" Wednesday to an old proposal: They will release the U.N. personnel in exchange for promises of no more NATO airstrikes.

Serbs also demanded that all six U.N. "safe areas," which comprise most of government-held territory, be demilitarized and the United Nations ensure that illicit weapons shipments to the Bosnian government end.

The offer for talks came after Serbs refused to let a Red Cross delegation see the captives. Relatively little is known of their conditions.

On a mountain road leading into Sarajevo, Bosnian Serbs shot at two British armored vehicles today but there were no casualties or damage, said Maj. Guy Vinet, another U.N. spokesman.

U.N. officials today said Serbs and Bosnian government forces were battling for control of all but one of the nine U.N. observation posts vacated in the Gorazde area by retreating or kidnapped peacekeepers.

Some 350 shells hit the area, wounding at least 13 civilians, said spokeswoman Maj. Myriam Sochacki. The building housing U.N. military observers was hit by seven rounds late Wednesday, but there were no casualties.

Peacekeepers held hostage in Bosnia

The Bosnian Serbs have detained 370 U.N. peacekeepers in response to NATO air raids and refused to allow the Red Cross access to the hostages.

Investigators look into crash of Air Force jet

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Chunks of chromate-green metal littered the parking lot where Air Force investigators today continued picking through clues to a training jet's fiery crash.

Two people were killed and about 20 hurt Wednesday morning when a T-38 from Sheppard Air Force Base crashed into an apartment complex. The two pilots ejected and suffered minor scrapes, officials said.

Just two or three minutes after takeoff, the twin-engine aircraft hit the Amber Falls Crossing apartments and engulfed one brick building in flames.

The impact shook the neighborhood's schools and homes, witnesses said. They described a ball of fire and billowing smoke.

"I thought it looked like a bomb dropped," said nearby tenant Linda Thornton. "There was so much smoke you couldn't see the building."

Police spokesman Melvin Joynes identified the dead as Joseph Robert Wolfe, 77, and Edelmira Corbett Wolfe, 83, of Wichita Falls. They were outside the complex, knocking on doors for a local Jehovah's Witness church.

Wolfe died on the sidewalk when three cars in front of him exploded. His wife burned to death near the couple's car.

Most of the injured suffered smoke inhalation and bruises.

The base said the airplane had developed some sort of mechanical problem that caused the pilots to parachute into a softball complex.

Witnesses said the plane, trailing smoke and dropping in pieces, just missed two schools and a day-care center.

The unnamed pilots were assigned to the 80th Flying Training Wing, based about four miles away, at Sheppard.

Lt. Col. Mike Laughlin, a base spokesman, said both pilots are part of a Euro-NATO Joint Jet Pilot training program. The instructor was from the Royal Netherlands Air Force; the student was American, Laughlin said. No further details were given about them.

"The pilots are extremely distressed about what happened," said Air Force Col. Bill Orcutt, the crash investigation commander. "But from what we know, it was a mechanical problem. There was nothing they could do."

Orcutt and others discounted some witness reports that the T-38 twin-seater clipped the wing of another plane mid-air.

"It was not possible," said Sgt. John Bisio, an Air Force spokesman. "We have confirmed there was only one Air Force plane in the air at the time."

Debris was scattered over about two blocks.

A large hunk of fuselage rested among the hulls of several burned-out vehicles. Windows were blown out of the charred and splintered apartment building, directly in front of a grassy playground.

Neighbors stood across the street Wednesday and marveled that the destruction wasn't worse at the busy complex.

Barbara Harrell said the fire burned everything in her mother's apartment. But there was one bright side: Her mother wasn't home when the plane hit at about 10 a.m.

"She would've been in bed or up drinking coffee," Ms. Harrell said. "It makes you feel relief."

Sheppard officials said this was the base's first crash since 1991, when two pilots hit a flock of birds and went down. Both were killed.

Officials expect this investigation to take several months.

Col. Bill Orcutt, the crash investigation commander, said the T-38 was the first from Sheppard to crash since 1991. That plane went down on the air base after striking birds, he said.

Kentucky man executed

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — As thunder boomed and lightning crackled outside the execution chamber early today, a double murderer expressed love for his family and gratitude to his attorneys.

"And to my brothers on death row who died and are still there, y'all hang in there," said Fletcher Thomas Mann.

Minutes later, he became the ninth inmate executed by injection in Texas this year. His mother and two sisters sobbed quietly a few feet away.

Mann, 34, was convicted of the September 1980 shooting death of Christopher Lee Bates, 22, at a Dallas apartment. Barbara Hoppe, also 22, was raped, stabbed and strangled. Another man, Robert Matzig, was shot and left for dead, but survived.

Police said Mann and an accomplice, Martin Verbrugge, broke into the apartment where the three were watching a football game in search of money and cocaine. Verbrugge was convicted of attempted murder and received a life sentence.

At Mann's trial, a witness who was jailed with the Kentucky native said Mann bragged about the killings and expressed admiration for cult murderer Charles Manson. Defense attorneys called no witnesses.

The jury took one hour to convict Mann and two to sentence him to death.

The U.S. Supreme Court rejected arguments that Mann's 13 years on death row amounted to cruel and unusual punishment. Gov. George W. Bush refused to delay the execution for 30 days so Mann's family could attend the high school graduation Wednesday of a relative in Kentucky.

Bush signs juvenile justice system reform bill

ARLINGTON (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush credits his mother, Barbara Bush, with many of the elements he made sure went into the overhaul of the Texas juvenile justice system.

"I was raised by a pretty strict mother, and she taught me that discipline and love go hand in hand," Bush said after signing the bill Wednesday during a ceremony at the Arlington YMCA.

"We've got children ... breaking the law over and over and over again and nothing's happening. The prior system reinforced bad behavior."

In signing the bill, Bush fulfilled a campaign pledge to get tough on violent youths.

"All of us can be proud of saying we heard the request of Texans. We listened to Texas and we have delivered ... tough love," Bush said. "Inherent in this bill is the fact that we love our children.

But ... our children must understand that there are consequences both good and bad, for different kinds of behavior."

Bush said the new law will help restore public confidence in the criminal justice system by combating the rising number of teen-agers committing crimes.

The juvenile crime rate in Texas has almost quadrupled since 1987. In 1993, more than 77,000 youths were arrested.

"This bill is good for Texas. It's good for our future," he said. "It will make Texas a safer place."

Rep. Toby Goodman, R-Arlington, who helped write the measure, called it "the best piece of legislation on juvenile law in the United States of America."

"It has intervention in it, it has prevention in it, it has diversion in it and it has rehabilitation in it," Goodman said. "And it gets tough on the kids we need to get tough with."

Sen. Chris Harris, R-Arlington, who also helped write the bill, said he is particularly pleased with the portions of the bill calling for early intervention with young offenders.

He said the average juvenile in the past has committed 15 to 17 felonies before the juvenile system really went into action.

The law stiffens penalties and sets maximum and minimum sentences for serious crimes at from two years to 40 years. The current average stay at juvenile facilities is about eight months.

Under the new law, the number of detention beds for youths will increase from 2,500 to 6,300 over the next four years. The proposed 1996-97 budget, awaiting Bush's signature, includes a $218 million increase on juvenile justice programs to help fund the expansion.

The law expands from five to 12 the crime categories under which violent teens are eligible to be sent to the adult prison system. Those categories include murder, aggravated assault, certain drug offenses and sex crimes.

It also lowers the age at which a juvenile can be tried as an adult from 15 to 14 and the age at which juveniles are eligible for transfer to adult prisons from 18 to 16.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Law will permit outrageous fees

Normally, reports that open records legislation is proceeding through the Texas Legislature would be good news.

That's partially true for HB 1718, an open records bill by Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, that would - among many points - require uniform charges for public records or information. Guidelines by the General Services Commission would govern what public agencies could charge for copies of public records.

By setting such standards, it would ensure that governments wishing to restrict distribution of public records could not charge exorbitant rates that would deter those seeking the information.

But along the way, Rep. Ron Lewis, D-Mauriceville, tacked on an amendment that would enable local governments such as schools, counties and cities to determine their own charges for public information. That amendment, if allowed to become law, would have gutted the legislation at every level except state government.

On the final vote in the House, Turner persuaded fellow lawmakers to cap the local government charges at 50 percent more than the rate state agencies could charge.

While that obviously is better than the way Lewis wanted it, it is not a good compromise. Simply put, the whole idea of allowing local governments extra leeway in the records charges is objectionable.

The only case we see that legitimately could be made is that what a person is required to pay for a public record should reflect the actual reproduction cost. And, the cost of a copy should be the same or within pennies, no matter if it is made on a "state" or a "city" copier.

Beyond this, the only variance that should be allowed would be in the case of requests for an extraordinary amount of records that would take office workers away from their normal duties for hours or days. In such cases, the person requesting the record should have to pay for that time at the same rate that the clerk involved is being paid.

None of this, incidentally, should be allowed to get in the way of actual access to a record. Many times those asking for access do not need copies; they just need to see what is "on record" and nothing should be allowed to stand in the way of being able to do so without delay.

At any rate, the amendment allowing local governments to levy charges that exceed the maximum for state agencies doesn't serve anyone except various levels of government bureaucracy that would be able to generate extra revenue and make it harder for the public to determine what's going on.

The legislation, in its amended form and under study by the Senate, sets double standards and confuses the whole issue... which supposedly is to allow better public access to open records. Uniform and fair charges should be determined and enforced at every level of government, if for no other reason than to prevent abuse of office by those officials who don't like, or can't stand, public scrutiny.

Berry's World

"I won't sell you any fertilizer. How about some OATS?"

Stephen Chapman

Young people these days are a gullible lot, judging from a recent poll. Among Americans aged 18 to 34, 46 percent believe that UFOs are real. But there are some fairy tales even they can't swallow: Only 28 percent expect Social Security to be around when they retire. So I guess any Generation X-er who meets up with space aliens will open the conversation by asking, "How's your retirement plan?"

It's bound to be better than what young people can look forward to on this patch of the Earth. Social Security, like most pyramid schemes, proved to be a windfall for the people who got in early and a swindle for those who came late.

In 1980, the average retiree could expect to get back all the money she had paid in over her working life, with interest, in just three years. By 1993, the payback period was 10 years. By the time today's young workers are ready to punch out for the last time, they will have to survive another 18 years just to recoup their "investment."

Social Security has two major problems, neither of which politicians want to acknowledge. The first is that it's too stingy. Future retirees will get a much worse deal than their predecessors and a much worse deal than they could get from private investments.

The second, however, is that it's too generous. The benefits the system will have to pay in the next century will require a huge increase in taxes.

Given current trends, a bipartisan commission reported last year, entitlement programs (of which Social Security is the largest), combined with interest on the national debt, will consume every nickel the federal government collects in taxes - leaving nothing for defense, education, law enforcement, national parks or anything else. Because the number of people collecting retirement benefits is going to rise much faster than the number of people working, the system will go broke by 2030 unless taxes rise dramatically.

Taking excessive amounts of money from workers and converting them into measly benefits for retirees - it's the sort of trick that only the government could manage.

Republicans in Congress, like the administration, have refused to address the issue, because they fear the wrath of Grandma. But young people have realized that the sign in the dentist's office - "Ignore your teeth and they'll go away" has a parallel in Social Security. If the system's flaws aren't fixed soon, they won't be fixable later.

Trouble is, lightening the future tax load requires trimming benefits in one way or another. And that would mean giving future retirees an even worse deal than they're going to get anyway. Correcting one problem makes the other worse.

But there is a way out of the box. Sens. Bob Kerrey, a Nebraska Democrat who chaired the entitlement commission, and Alan Simpson, a Wyoming Republican, have introduced a bill that would improve the prospects of future retirees without punishing today's workers. As Kerrey said, it's a "tax cut with the purpose of ending our future."

The central idea is this - it would allow workers to take up to 2 percentage points of their Social Security taxes and put them into a private retirement account. In exchange, they'd have to accept lower Social Security benefits when they retire. But the higher return they could expect on the money they invest themselves would make it a winning trade.

Like any plan to assure the solvency of the trust fund, this one demands an increase in the retirement age, as well as some tinkering with cost-of-living adjustments. The more important part, though, is encouraging workers to do what Social Security only pretends to do: invest money in real assets to pay for retirement.

That would have several benefits. It would give today's workers more money when they grow old: Funds put into a broad portfolio of stocks, for example, have consistently yielded a return of nearly 7 percent over the long run - while contributions to Social Security provide a return of less than 2 percent. It would also boost our declining savings rate.

Eventually, it might allow us to move toward an entirely private pension system, with workers required to put a portion of their earnings into retirement accounts instead of paying Social Security taxes. Chile did just that in 1981, generating an exceptionally high savings rate and giving workers an average real return of 14 percent per year.

Under the Kerrey-Simpson plan, or under full privatization, workers would be better off in their working years and better off in their retirement years. That's an improvement on the status quo, which overburdens Americans when they work and short changes them when they stop.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, June 1, the 152nd day of 1995. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 1, 1813, the U.S. Navy gained its motto as the mortally wounded commander of the U.S. frigate Chesapeake, Capt. James Lawrence, was heard to say, "Don't give up the ship" during a losing battle with a British frigate.

On this date:
In 1792, Kentucky became the 15th state of the union.

In 1796, Tennessee became the 16th state.

In 1801, Mormon leader Brigham Young was born in Whitingham, Vt.

In 1888, California got its first seismographs as three of the devices were installed at the Lick Observatory.

In 1926, actress Marilyn Monroe was born in Los Angeles.

In 1943, a civilian flight from Lisbon to London was shot down by the Germans during World War II, killing all aboard, including actor Leslie Howard.

NRA's fundraising letter provides yet another red herring

Charley Reese

The National Rifle Association is in hot water for the melodramatic language it used in a fundraising letter. That's no surprise. The NRA has lots of enemies in Washington and in the news media, itching for an excuse to bash the organization that wholeheartedly supports the Second Amendment.

In fact, though, fundraising letters from most organizations use melodramatic language, exaggeration and the sky-is-falling scenarios. Professionals in the fundraising business have determined that the only way you can pry money out of people these days is to scare them.

A fundraiser for Democratic congressional candidates, for example, described House Speaker Newt Gingrich as "one of the most dangerous political figures of our lifetimes." Ha. You won't find a more Establishment guy than Gingrich.

What the NRA should have said, of course, is that some federal agents have acted like thugs in some instances, but apparently no one thinks you can raise money by describing problems correctly.

Hence, the word from all organizations wanting money is not only that the world is a terrible place, but it will immediately become like hell and Armageddon - unless, of course, you send them a check, in which case, they will fix it, and the planet will once again be hunky-dory-peachy-creamy.

Don't we all wish a $25 check could do such wonders? Instead, all it gets us is a new place in the fundraising database and a zillion more computer-written letters describing the soon-to-be end of all we hold dear, whether that's the environment, Democrats in office, the spotted owl or the right to keep a six-shooter.

That most public discourse is conducted these days in screams and shouts is largely money-driven. Organizations scream and shout to raise money; bureaucrats scream and shout to save their jobs; special interest groups scream and shout to defend their favorite federal gold mines; and lawyers scream and shout to get their clients off or rewarded, depending on whether it's a criminal or civil matter.

Many of us, I think, are tired of loud voices. I routinely toss fundraising letters, including those from the NRA. Some organizations do nothing but fundraise.

It's beginning to look as if we cannot discuss any public matter without resorting to demagoguery. In its letter, the NRA implied that all federal agents misbehave; the government, in its response, implied that no federal agents misbehave. Both propositions are false. The NRA finally apologized for the language in the letter, but (a) it shouldn't have been there in the first place, and (b) the apology should have come sooner.

It is a fact that in some cases, some Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents have raided the wrong places, shot innocent people and acted in a boorish manner. Rep. John Dingell, a liberal Democrat from Michigan, once called its agents "jack-booted American fascists."

It is also a fact that the majority of ATF activities are carried out without incident. I have heard people in the gun business speak well of the ATF agents they know. The truth is generally found to be in a neglected spot between extreme partisan claims.

But the journalist-politician instigated flap over this fundraising letter is a red herring. This is an NRA public relations blunder, not a national problem. It hurts only the NRA.

The NRA is a long way from the top five lobbying organizations in political clout. And it is pro-government, pro-Constitution and pro-law enforcement. What it and most Americans oppose is the Clinton administration's double standards (local cops prosecuted for popping with a nightstick, feds exonerated for killing with sniper rifles.)

In the meantime, real issues like immigration, foreign aid, botched foreign policy, government corruption, budget cutting and stupid trade policies are ignored. It's an old trick: Focus public attention on nonsense, not on the real issues.

How the system, even on an international scale, lets women down

Sara Eckel

Several years ago, while traveling in Spain, I met a young Brazilian woman at a youth hostel. Elaine and I became what author Douglas Coupland calls "Eurofriends." We were travel buddies, whose friendships were formed as quickly and effortlessly as they dissolved.

Although Elaine's life seemed vastly different from mine - she was a teacher in a one-room schoolhouse; I was a struggling writer working odd jobs in New York City and London - the cultural differences between us seemed minimal. In many ways she seemed as American as any of my friends back home. She was outspoken and stylish, good at reading maps and eager to debate politics. Any image I had of the timid Latina, one who walks behind her man and speaks only when spoken to, was completely defied by Elaine.

But a trip to seaside brought out our differences. We were hiking along the Basque region's jagged coast when Elaine announced that we had to go back, that there was a policeman nearby.

I was confused. Were we doing anything illegal? Were we trespassing?

No, she explained. In Brazil a policeman just couldn't be trusted, and a woman (or two women) alone in his presence wasn't safe.

It was jarring to scurry away from a policeman, the way I would a criminal or a crazy person. But once we were back on the train, discussing American bands and TV shows, I put the incident out of mind.

But recently my memories of Elaine have come back.

It started with all the O.J. hype, the only positive result of which is that, for about 12 nanoseconds, the media swiveled its spotlight to that dark, unswept corner of American life, domestic violence.

Then there was the far less publicized, but perhaps even more disturbing, case of Kenneth Peacock, who was sentenced to a mere 18 months for killing his wife after he found her in bed with another man.

The judge said that he felt obligated to impose prison time "only because I must do it to make the system honest."

Our "honest" system is only slightly less barbaric than Brazil's, where men can feel free to kill a cheating spouse without the nuisance of such a token response.

Up until this decade, this was accomplished through the "honor clause," a nervy bit of wording that got 80 percent of all murderous husbands who used it off the hook, according to Americas Watch, a human rights organization. The argument was that if a man killed an adulterous wife, he was acting in self-defense. He was defending his honor.

This clause was stricken in 1991, but it has essentially been replaced with the insanity defense. So long as the murderer checks himself into a psychiatric hospital after the killing, he can plead that the victim's adulterous behavior drove him past the brink. Over the years, Brazilian men have bludgeoned, stabbed and set fire to their wives, and then walked away scot-free.

Though this is arguably the most vile, there are other women's rights abuses to Brazil's shame:

- Politicians frequently buy women's votes in exchange for sterilization, reports Ms. magazine. This radical form of birth control, which is illegal in Brazil, is sought by women because more conventional methods of family planning are so difficult to obtain. In fact, sterilization is the most prevalent form of birth control in the poorer, northeastern regions of the country.

- The Demillus Co., an underwear manufacturer, was caught strip searching its female employees at closing time. Roseane Reis, a legal counsel for the Rio state women's council, told U.S. News and World Report that the practice is common throughout Brazil.

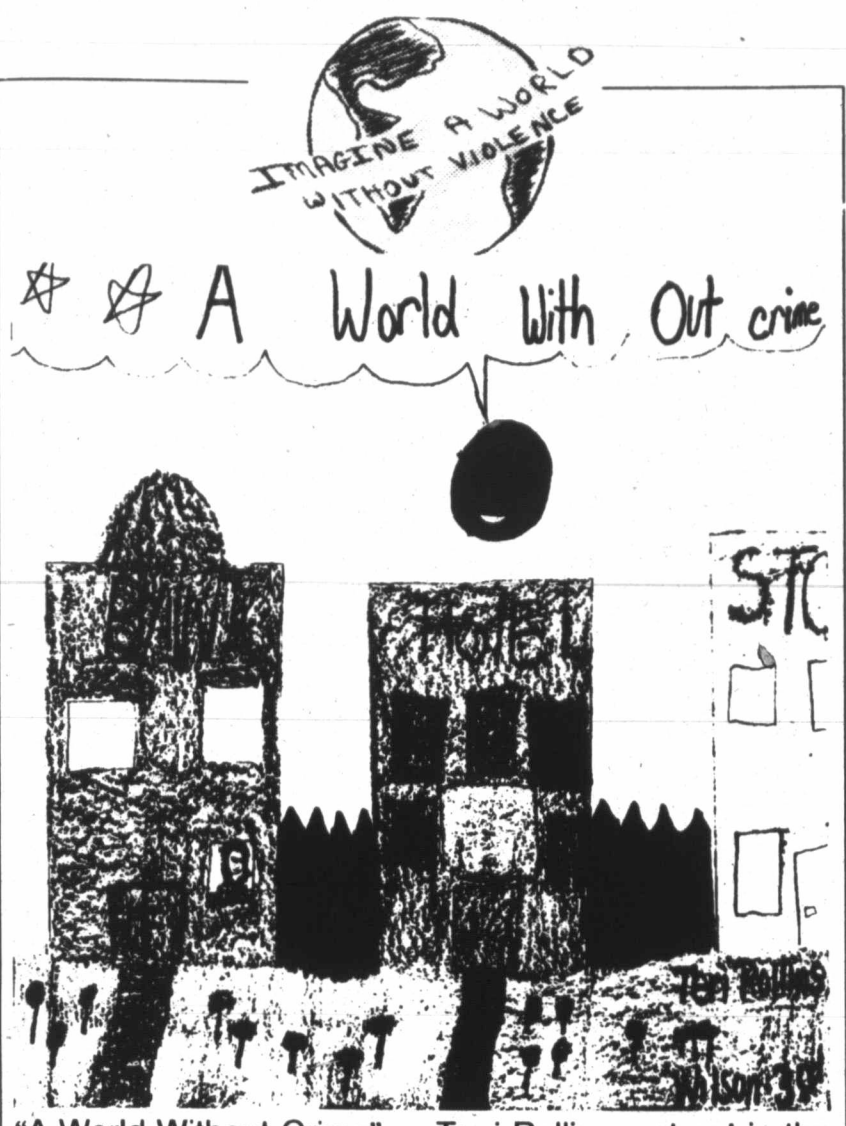

- The London-based Manchester Guardian reported on an organization that auctioned young girls to the highest bidder. The victims, who were sometimes as young as 9, were "recruited" in the poorer areas of the country and told they would be given well-paying work in the country's goldmining settlements. The girls were then sold as virgin prostitutes. Police corruption was cited in the case.

Women's rights activists in Brazil have seen some progress recently. Last November, Brazilians in some of the country's most male-dominated regions elected women to represent them. Feminist efforts also brought about a number of women's police stations, which are staffed entirely by female officers who focus on sexual assault and domestic violence.

Hopefully, these stations are enabling women like Elaine to have some faith in the law, or at least keep them from running scared each time they see a uniform. But since I lost touch with Elaine, I can't say for sure. Now, when I see such reports, I think of my former travel buddy, and I wonder if she's all right.

Greening businesses

By GARRY MITCHELL Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Bouquets in parking lot islands and shrubs that fringe curbs leading into industrial parks are the kind of roadside attractions that nursery owners enjoy.

The greening of commercial districts has boosted sales in the resilient nursery business in Alabama and elsewhere. But these areas weren't always so appealing to the eye.

Mike Wilson, a vice president and project manager for White-Spinner Construction in Mobile, says commercial builders have taken a 180-degree turn and now include extensive landscaping in their projects.

Landscaping once got only a small portion of the construction budget, but now some builders are forced to comply with new city and county ordinances that require more plants, Wilson says.

That's welcome news for the 375 nurseries in Alabama, 130 of them with five or more acres. The trend also has spawned more jobs for landscape and irrigation crews who must care for the expensive arrangements.

"The use of flowers has continued to increase rather dramatically all across the South.

The business world has found out that improving their image makes them money," says Ron Shumack, associate dean of agriculture at Auburn University.

Nationwide, floral sales have improved because stores like Kmart and WalMart have expanded their greenery departments, says Dennis Kirven, executive director of the Ohio Florist Association, which has 3,600 members, mostly from outside Ohio.

Wife Ignores Ghosts of Past To Focus on Happy Present

DEAR ABBY: I felt compelled to write after reading the letter in your column from the woman who had been married a year and found a box of old pictures of her husband and a woman in his past. I think your advice was right on target, Abby!

I got married a year ago to a wonderful, loving man. It was a second marriage for both of us.

While making room to combine two households into his existing home, I ran across a box containing pictures, letters and cards from a woman from his past. I, too, was surprised. But I rationalized that they were long forgotten, so I left them where I found them. A few months later, my husband discreetly discarded them without comment.

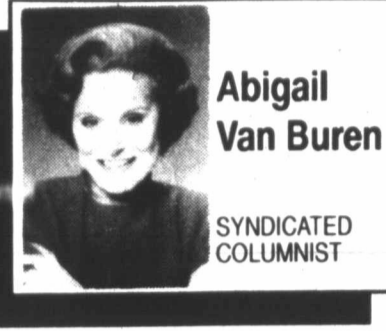

I thank my lucky stars that he had the experience he did, because if he hadn't he might not have fallen in love with me.

I can't be jealous or hurt over what he did before he met me. There are a few mementos of his past in our home that I will not touch.

I believe my husband is entitled to cherish these memories, just as I am entitled to silently cherish some memories from my own past.

SECURE IN WISCONSIN

DEAR SECURE: You are a very wise woman. And your husband is a lucky man. May it ever be thus.

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: I never dreamed I would be writing to you, but after reading about the wife who found pictures of her husband and an old girlfriend, here I am.

About 15 years ago, my husband owned up to an affair with another woman. He begged me to forgive him and I did; since then, everything has been going smoothly — until recently.

I was looking through his billfold for something else and saw a picture of a woman I had never seen. I am sure she is the woman he had been seeing back then. I doubt that he has seen her since, but I wonder why he's still carrying her picture in his billfold.

Should I confront him about the picture, or just forget about it?
WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Don't "confront" him. Casually mention seeing the picture without being angry, hurt or accusatory. And if he doesn't remove it from his wallet, tear it up and casually toss it in the garbage can, I'd be surprised!

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, I asked the mother of my son's new friend if he was her middle child. She replied, "We have six children, Karen, Wayne, Chris, Beth, Jeff, and Mary, who died in a hiking accident a few years ago." Although I was momentarily speechless, I was touched by the way she handled my question. It opened up our conversation and our understanding of each other.

I think the mother who wrote asking whether to count her son who had recently died could use this approach. It might help her, and it would also help people she meets. They may either offer their sympathy and move on to another topic, or encourage her to talk about her son. Ignoring his existence would be far more painful than talking about him.

KATE O'NEILL, PENNINGTON, N.J.

DEAR KATE: Your letter echoes what hundreds of mothers have expressed in their letter to me. Thank you for writing.

Horoscope

Friday, June 2, 1995

Conditions that affect your work or career might shift in unusual directions in the year ahead. If you're alert and minding the store, it can be manipulated to your advantage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Legal documents with complicated clauses should be read carefully today. Do not sign any papers about which you're dubious. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Keep your guard up today to prevent being drawn into a development initiated by someone else. You could be held accountable for some of the losses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Independence is an admirable quality, but don't flaunt it today in situations that require teamwork and cooperation. Shape your interests to the needs at hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There are times when it is advantageous to experiment with shortcuts, but this won't be one of those days. Stick to tested, proven procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Pay special attention to social graces today in activities with friends. A loss of respect is possible if you're thoughtless when dealing with pals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Resist managing the affairs of one who looks to you for guidance today. Your good intentions might hinder rather than help this individual.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Just because a person is knowledgeable in a specific area, doesn't qualify him/her as an expert in everything. Accept advice with discernment today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Although you're not apt to be careless with your resources or possessions today, someone in whom you place your trust might be.

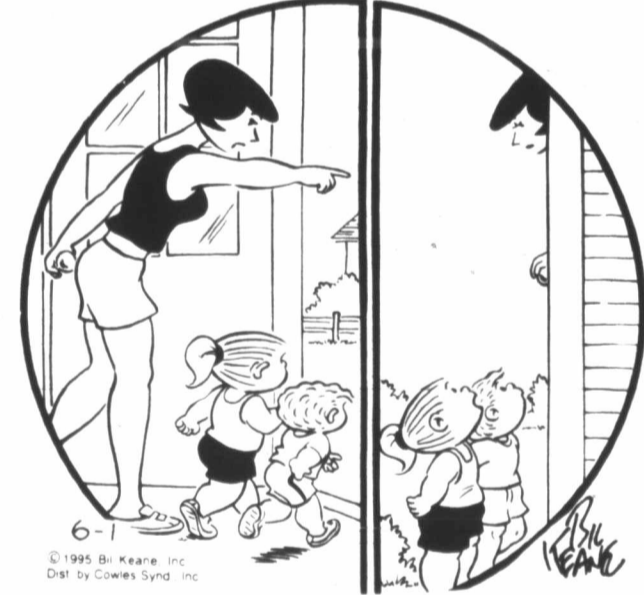

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to depend too much upon others in this present cycle. Allies you think are firmly behind you might suddenly switch allegiance.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to help others today, but also remain conscious of the complexities of the burdens you assume. They might prove beyond your capabilities.

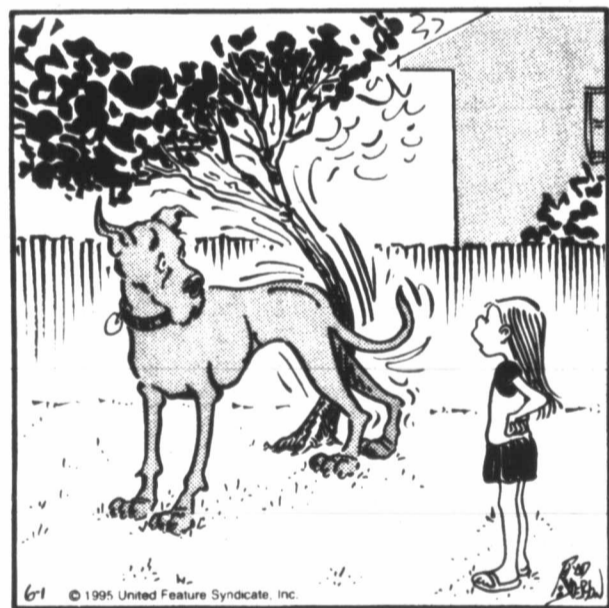

ARIES (March 21-April 19) One of your closest friends, who has a history of crossing swords with you, might be difficult to deal with again today. Do not let matters get out of hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Objectives you establish for yourself today might elude you if the methods you employ to achieve them are complicated and untested. Be consistent, practical and traditional.

BRISCOE — Fort Elliott meets Loraine at 1 p.m. Friday in Plainview in a Class 1A regional final baseball game.

Fort Elliott has a 15-2 record while Loraine is 18-5. The game will be played at Jaycee Park.

"I understand Loraine has three or four good pitchers and they've got four or five guys who are pretty good hitters," said Fort Elliott assistant coach Brad Logan.

DALLAS (AP) — Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle has been undergoing treatment for a stomach ailment since Sunday.

Mantle, 63, was resting at Baylor University Medical Center, hospital officials said. His son, David Mantle, told The Dallas Morning News that the former New York Yankees star was expected to return home today.

FOOTBALL

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — A judge fined former Michigan coach Gary Moeller for a drunken escapade and confrontation with police that cost him his job.

District Judge Bryan Levy's sentence included a $200 fine, $200 in court costs and a $9 sentencing fee. The charges carried a possible 90-day sentence.

Police reports said Moeller became drunk and abusive April 28 in a Southfield restaurant, harassed restaurant workers and other customers, then attacked officers trying to send him home in a cab. He pleaded no contest May 8 to disorderly conduct and assault and battery.

MIAMI (AP) — In the wake of reports that officials allowed players to compete despite positive tests for drugs, the University of Miami ordered a review of all athletic department policies.

In ordering the review, president Edward T. Foote II said there is no reason to believe there are any more embarrassing policies. Athletic director Paul Dee already is investigating the drug-testing policy.

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Hugh Douglas, the New York Jets' second first-round draft choice, signed a four-year contract for $4 million.

Douglas, a defensive end from Central State in Ohio, agreed to a deal that includes a $1.7 million signing bonus. He was selected 16th overall, seven spots after the Jets took Penn State tight end Kyle Brady.

TRACK AND FIELD

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Cal's Balazs Kiss, the world leader in the hammer throw, broke the meet record three times in winning his third consecutive NCAA title.

Kiss, 23, of Hungary, finished the best series of his career with a winning throw of 261 feet, 3 inches and became the Trojans' 100th NCAA individual champion, the most by any university in the meet's history.

Rice's Kareem Streete-Thompson, the 1995 world leader in the long jump at 28-1, completed a sweep of the indoor and outdoor titles, winning at 27-2. UCLA's John Godina, the collegiate leader in the discus and fourth in the world this year at 213-0, won his second straight title at 202-4.

Magic just one win away from NBA finals

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The young, resilient Orlando Magic raised their arms in triumph. The disappointed Indiana Pacers left with heads bowed, promising to return.

Welcome to the Eastern Conference finals, where the home court makes a difference and no fourth-quarter lead has been big enough to discourage the visiting team.

"Every game's been close," Indiana's Rik Smits said. "I think we're very even."

So even that neither team has been able to win on the other's floor. The Magic lead the best-of-7 series 3-2, but finishing the Pacers in Game 6 at Indianapolis will not be easy Friday night.

Indiana has beaten Orlando eight consecutive times at Market Square Arena, including four times this season. The Magic, however, are brimming with confidence after Wednesday night's 108-106 victory in the pivotal fifth game.

"They handled us pretty easily up there during the season. But we've closed the gap a little bit in the two playoff games," the Magic's Brian Shaw said. "We had opportunities to win both of them, so we're getting closer and closer. We wrapped up our first two series on the road, so we know we can do it again."

Shaquille O'Neal had 35 points and 13 rebounds to pace Orlando, but problems at the foul line almost cost the Magic the game. The Pacers trimmed a 14-point deficit to 106-103 before Mark Jackson's 3-point attempt with six seconds left bounced off the front of the rim.

Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway assured the victory with two free throws with 3.6 seconds remaining.

"We made a lot of silly mistakes down the stretch," said O'Neal, who dominated Smits after being slowed by foul trouble in Games 3 and 4 — both Indiana victories.

"The last two games I didn't play that much. I had a lot of energy," the NBA scoring champion added after going 13-for-21 from the field and 9-for-19 from the foul line.

To force a seventh game in Orlando on Sunday, the Pacers will have to find a way to contain O'Neal.

In the three games he's avoided foul problems, he's averaged 35 points, and the Magic have won each time. He played just 30 minutes in Games 3 and 4 and scored a total of 34 points in the two games.

"It's gonna go down to the wire," Indiana's Reggie Miller said. "Both teams keep throwing jabs, and the other team is throwing counterjabs. We're fairly close. Each game is so pivotal. It's a two-game series. We can't lose and they've got two chances to win one."

Nick Anderson scored 19 points for the Magic, and Shaw came off the bench to make a trio of 3-pointers and finish with 15.

Rik Smits, whose buzzer-beater made him the hero of Game 4, was the center in foul trouble this time. He fouled out with 3:44 remaining and scored 20 points. Miller and Derrick McKey led the Pacers with 21 points apiece, and Jackson had 19.

Despite Indiana's failure to win at Orlando Arena during the series, Jackson remained confident.

"There's no need to worry, no need to be concerned," he said. "We're still going to win this thing, and we'll be back in Orlando."

Indiana trailed 104-90 with 4:21 remaining, but scored 10 straight points, capped by Jackson's 3-pointer with 1:05 left.

Hardaway's free throw with 30 seconds to play made it 105-100, but as the Pacers have shown throughout the playoffs, they don't go down easy.

O'Neal, who missed four free throws during Indiana's spurt, grabbed the rebound of Jackson's miss with 22 seconds left. After two timeouts, Hardaway went to the line, but made only one, and McKey fired in a 3-pointer with 16 seconds left to make it 106-103.

Shaw bricked two free throws before Jackson, hesitating behind the arc and apparently looking for Miller, missed a 3-pointer. Hardaway got the rebound, then finally hit two free throws together. Miller sank a 3-pointer at the buzzer.

"We were down 14 and had a 3-pointer to tie it, so I'm pretty proud of our team," Pacers coach Larry Brown said. "I'm proud he (Jackson) took that shot. I don't know what other shot we were going to get in that situation."

Kyle Cambern of Knowles rounds first base after hitting a single against Chase in a 9-10 year-old baseball game Thursday at Optimist Park. Knowles won, 12-6.

Glo-Valve claims sole possession of first in Bambino NL standings

PAMPA — Clutch hitting and fielding by Matt Driscoll and a strong pitching effort by Shawn Strate allowed Glo-Valve to come from behind to defeat Dunlap Industrial, 8-2, Wednesday.

The win gives Glo-Valve Service sole possession of first place in the Optimist Major Bambino National League.

Strate allowed no earned runs, three hits, struck out eight and walked four to notch his fourth win against one loss.

Josh Baker and Antonio Estrada pitched for Dunlap. Baker allowed one earned run, three hits, struck out 12 and walked six in five innings. Estrada allowed no earned runs, no hits, no walks and hit one batter in the inning he pitched. He struck out one.

Driscoll had two hits, including a double, two RBIs and scored a run to lead Glo-Valve offensively. Baker had two hits, a walk and one RBI for a perfect evening at the plate for Dunlap.

Tice led off the first inning with a walk and scored on three passed balls. Driscoll and Isiah Manzanares collected hits, but were stranded as Baker struck out three in the first inning.

In the third inning, three Glo-Valve errors and a single by Baker allowed Dunlap to take the lead with two unearned runs.

Glo-Valve rallied in the fifth inning to score five times on only one hit. Aaron Willis was safe on an error and he was forced at second by Tice. Kyle Keith and Strate walked to load the bases. A ringing double by Driscoll plated Tice and Keith and Strate stopped at third. Strate scored moments later on an infield popup by Manzanares, which Strate turned into a sacrifice fly. Driscoll took third on the throw to the plate. Nathanael Hill walked and then Hill and Driscoll executed a double steal. Hill headed to third when the shortstop's throw got by the catcher and scored on an overthrow of third.

The winners scored twice in the sixth inning. Tanner Dyer was safe on an error and he went to second on an infield out and to third on a wild pitch. Tice was hit by a pitched ball and allowed to go to second. Dyer scored on an infield out hit by Keith. A throwing error allowed Tice to come sliding home for his third run of the game.

Glo-Valve first baseman Driscoll was the defensive player of the game with four putouts and three assists.

Glo-Valve raised its season record to 5-1, good for sole possession of first place in the National League. Dunlap dropped to third at 3-2. Hoechst Celanese, behind strong relief pitching from Adam Jones in the nightcap, came from behind to beat Curtis Well Service, 14-7, and moved into second place at 3-1-1. Curtis evened its record at 3-3. Cabot Corporation is in fifth place at 1-3.

Magazine selects Pampa's Young for pre-season all-state cage team

PAMPA — Pampa guard Rayford Young has been named as a pre-season all-state selection by Bob Springer's Texas Basketball Magazine.

Young has been Pampa's leading scorer the last two seasons. As a junior this past season, the 5-11 Young averaged 21.5 points and six assists a game. Young is a three-year starter for the Harvesters.

The basketball magazine will on the news stands this fall.

Pampa head coach Robert Hale said this was the first time was one his players has been named as a pre-season all-stater. Cedrick Wilbon and Dwight Nickelberry were named the all-state team at the end of the season, but were not pre-season picks.

Coy Laury, Pampa's leading rebounder (9.5 rebounds per game), last year enters his senior season as a strong choice for pre-season all-state honors also.

"Coy has a good chance of making pre-season all-state. We haven't been contacted by all the magazines yet," said Hale.

Laury, a 6-1 center-forward, averaged 18.9 points this past season.

Young and Laury helped lead the Harvesters to a 26-8 record and their seventh straight district title in 1994-95. The Harvesters advanced to the regional semifinals.

College World Series begins Friday

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Kyle Peterson is coming home to Nebraska and bringing eighth-ranked Stanford with him to the College World Series.

Stanford captured the last of eight berths Tuesday for the nine-day NCAA Division I baseball championship series that begins Friday in Omaha. Peterson helped Stanford to win the spot by striking out 11 and pitching all the way in a 6-5 victory over Texas Tech in the NCAA Midwest I regional.

"I kind of thought about it ever since I was little — about going to the series," Peterson said after the game.

The 6-foot-3 right-hander from Elkhorn has a 2.96 ERA and 13-1 record this season. He was named most outstanding player of the regional tournament.

It will be Stanford's first CWS appearance since 1990, when it finished third in the series. Since 1953, Stanford has made eight trips to the CWS and won back-to-back championships in 1987-88.

Stanford (39-23) will face top-seeded Cal State-Fullerton (53-9) on Saturday. Second seed Florida State will play seventh-seeded Oklahoma (42-14) in the opening game of the tournament Friday, followed later that day by third-seeded Miami against sixth-seeded Southern Cal (45-19). Fourth-seeded Clemson will face fifth-seeded Tennessee in the final pairing.

The pairings were one of two scenarios outlined by NCAA officials before Stanford played Texas Tech in a final game in the rain-plagued regional tournament. Baseball committee chairman Ron Maestri said the pairing committee felt it knew enough about the possible participants to go ahead with pairing scenarios before the final qualifying games were played.

The two Florida teams will be making their 14th CWS appearance and second straight visit. Florida State has yet to win a baseball championship, while the Hurricanes will be after a third title. Miami won in 1982 and 1985.

Florida State coach Mike Martin thinks he's bringing his best club yet to the series. The Seminoles took four of six from Miami during the season.

"Our intent is to win the national championship," Martin said after the Atlantic I regional play. "Anything short of that will not be acceptable."

Starting pitchers for Florida State (52-14) — left-handers Charlie Cruz and David Yocum and right-hander Jonathon Johnson — combined for a 31-6 record and a 2.84 earned run average. All three are strikeout pitchers, averaging one per inning.

Cruz, Yocum and Florida State's top offensive players — first baseman Doug Mientkiewicz who hit .362 during the season and second baseman Mickey Lopez with a .304 season average and 50 RBIs — are all from Miami high schools.

Miami (46-15) brings one of the country's top closers to the series in right-hander Jay Tessmer who picked up four saves in the Atlantic II regional to boost his season total to 19. Tessmer fanned two hitters in a perfect ninth inning in Monday's 5-2 regional title game to save the win for sophomore lefty J.D. Arteaga, 10-2.

"This is the reason I came to Miami," said Miami coach Jim Morris, who took over the Hurricanes two years ago after building a successful program at Georgia Tech.

Tennessee hasn't been to the College World Series since 1951, but the Volunteers know what to expect. Tennessee (52-14) will face Clemson (54-12) for the third time this season.

"I like the matchup," said Tennessee coach Rod Delmonico. "We know a lot about their personnel. We have seen them play and, of course, we've played them six times in the last two years."

The most recent outings didn't go Tennessee's way. "Well, they beat us twice over at their place. We had two leads and let them get by," said Delmonico recalling the two losses, 6-4 and 7-6 in 10 innings, in early March. He said the Vols will be ready to play "not only because we are in Omaha, but you know it's a little payback time."

Pitcher John Darlington went so far as to say that Clemson "will be a little afraid of us. I think we are going to go in with the right attitude."

Rangers drop Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — After Ivan Rodriguez's two ninth-inning errors let Kansas City beat Texas for a second time on Tuesday night, Rangers manager Johnny Oates had a bold prediction.

"I've seen many times when a team loses the first two games of a series and has to face the other team's ace in the third game, but things don't turn out the way everybody expects," he said. "I think that's what will happen Wednesday night."

And it did. But in a fashion that was even more uplifting than Oates dared hope.

Kevin Appier, bidding to become the major leagues' first seven-game winner, took a 2-1 lead into the eighth but gave up a two-out single to Jeff Frye and walked Will Clark and Mickey Tettletow.

Then who should come to the plate but Rodriguez, a man in need of atonement. The three-time All-Star catcher looked bad on a couple of pitches, then lashed a 3-1 delivery down the left-field line for a three-run double that lifted the Rangers to a 4-2 victory and snapped Kansas City's six-game winning streak.

"I feel so happy," Rodriguez said. "Yesterday I felt down. But now I'm the hero of the game."

"That's a big hit for him," said Oates, who merely smiled when reminded of his prediction.

"Actually, I said it with more hope than conviction. I'm glad I was right."

A Letter To Our Readers.

THE PAMPA NEWS

To Our Loyal Readers:

Beginning next month, The Pampa News will be asking you for 25 cents more a week. We don't like to do it, but we must increase our monthly subscription by a quarter a week to cover the rapidly rising costs of the paper we print The Pampa News on each day.

We want to give you a chance to delay that minor price increase by making a special offer, good for the next 30 days. If you would like to renew your subscription for a minimum of three months, and a maximum of six months, at the current rate of $6.00 a month, we would be only too happy to accommodate you. July 1 and after, however, we will not be able to extend that offer.

We have been trying to hold off any kind of price increase, even if only 25 cents a week, because we know times can be tight and every penny counts. We have been absorbing huge cost increases in paper for the past several months and we have received notice of an additional increase in September.

We have expanded the size of our editorial staff to assure increased coverage of the local and area news. We also have purchased additional state of the art equipment to make The Pampa News the best newspaper possible.

So if you want to keep on top of what is happening in our community with the best local news report and the best shopping information for Pampa, keep trying Pampa first, and keep reading The Pampa News.

After all is said and done, we're still your neighborhood newspaper.

Sincerely

Wayland Thomas
