IN SYRIA, ISRAEL

Cheering Crowds Greet Exchange Of Prisoners

Wildly cheering crowds of relatives and friends in both Damascus and Tel Aviv crashed police barriers today to welcome home the last prisoners of war exchanged under the Israel-Syria troop separation pact.

condition and strode off the plane unassisted. Two of the Syrian prisoners returned to Damascus earlier in the morning had to be helped aboard the chartered Swissair 747 jumbo jet taking them to Damascus.

was nothing. They kept us in one big cell with one latrine.

The release cleared the way for withdrawing troops and weapons from the Golan Heights and the establishment of a buffer zone patrolled by U.N. forces.

In Damascus, Syrian officials took Israeli prisoners on a tour of the old sector of the capital before sending them home.

In Damascus, 500 police used water hoses to disperse a chaotic mob of 20,000 spectators who surged around one of the two Red Cross-chartered jumbo jets bringing back 382 POWs from Tel Aviv.

'IT GETS HAIRY' Government May Have Quietly Gone Bankrupt

Witnesses said it took police 45 minutes to clear a passage for buses to drive to the plane steps and take the returning prisoners aboard.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government may have quietly gone bankrupt this week.

But no one expects it to go out of business. The Strategic Air Command will stay on guard, the Secret Service will protect the President, members of Congress will drone on in floor debate and the Agriculture Department will issue pecan reports.

While Syrian police were still trying to disperse the crowds, the second plane landed and parked at a remote spot on the airfield. Police got the returned prisoners aboard buses and army trucks before the crowd could approach it.

The U.S. Treasury probably reached the legal debt ceiling of $475.7 billion last Saturday and depleted its cash balance Wednesday.

If the federal government has gone temporarily bankrupt, a series of steps will be taken by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon. These will include orders to halt sales of Series E and H savings bonds, Treasury bills and other securities. In order to raise money, the Treasury would then call on the Export-Import Bank to repay its loans from the United States.

The Syrians and other Arab POWs were taken to an undisclosed reception area to avoid further crowd confusion.

No one knows officially yet because the government reports what it has spent about six days after the money is gone. But the Treasury Department said Wednesday the debt had risen to $475.6 billion and cash on hand had shrunk to $7.5 billion last Friday.

The whole problem stems from a prolonged congressional consideration of the administration's proposal to raise the debt ceiling to $495 billion.

In Tel Aviv, the 56 returning Israeli soldiers were greeted by about 800 relatives and friends who shouted their names, banged cymbals and danced as they filed off the plane at Ben Gurion International Airport.

When the debt ceiling, imposed by Congress, is reached the government can't borrow any more money.

The subpoena, issued last Friday, was due today in connection with the Ellsberg break-in conspiracy trial scheduled to start June 17. The subpoena sought "any and all" documents relating to Daniel Ellsberg and his leak of the Pentagon Papers.

Some families broke through the police barricades and mobbed their returning sons as they got off the plane.

Others, both major and independent, said their allocations were sufficient, even for Sunday operations.

St. Clair said Ehrlichman had not made clear that the items were relevant nor had he showed that the subpoena was "not intended as a general fishing expedition."

WIDE PRICE VARIANCE

Local Gasoline Situation Still Remains Uncertain

The gasoline situation around Pampa — that is, the availability and price per gallon, seems to be about what it has been for the past few weeks — uncertain.

Some filling-station operators said they were still experiencing difficulty in getting adequate supplies "since the government stepped in."

"Due to the broad nature of the items sought by the subpoena in the short time frame it is not possible to identify or locate the items to the extent that they may exist," he said.

The uncertainty is on a day-to-day basis and is shared by the motorist and the service station operator.

Prices ranged from 49.9 to the mid-fifties for regular. Premium gas is selling for prices in the upper fifties to a bit over 60 cents.

St. Clair said if Ehrlichman particularizes his request for "specific, identifiable items that are relevant and material," the White House would examine them "to determine whether their disclosure would be consistent with the public interest."

This News reporter, between 8 p.m. and 9 p.m. last night, cruised a two-mile stretch of Highway 60, stopping at every filling station, jotting down pump prices and talking with operators of those stations which were open.

As for predictions, well, very few motorists or operators feel confident.

A earlier subpoena issued May 22 sought all of Ehrlichman's White House files. In an attempt to work out a compromise on this subpoena, the White House, special prosecutor Leon Jaworski and Ehrlichman's lawyers agreed to let Ehrlichman conduct a search of his old files to particularize what he believed he needed for his defense.

Most stations were closed, and most had not yet reverted to the former practice of posting a large sign stating prices. You just have to pull up alongside the

In any case, those who predict a fast return to the "good old days" of gas wars, free dishes, and fast windshield-cleaning are a minority.

The action approving the application of the Gray County Bicentennial Committee was taken during a recent meeting in Austin of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission.

White House Seeking More Specific Subpoena Requests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House moved today to quash a subpoena by John D. Ehrlichman for his files on grounds it was too broad.

In motions filed in U.S. District Court by White House lawyers James D. St. Clair and J. Fred Buzhardt Jr., the White House seemed to leave open the possibility that at least some of the files of the former presidential aide might be produced.

The subpoena, issued last Friday, was due today in connection with the Ellsberg break-in conspiracy trial scheduled to start June 17. The subpoena sought "any and all" documents relating to Daniel Ellsberg and his leak of the Pentagon Papers.

St. Clair said Ehrlichman had not made clear that the items were relevant nor had he showed that the subpoena was "not intended as a general fishing expedition."

Fielding had been treating Daniel Ellsberg, who had leaked the Pentagon Papers on the origins of the Vietnam War to reporters a few weeks earlier. Former White House aides Charles W. Colson and Egil Krogh Jr. have pleaded guilty to crimes connected with the Ellsberg break-in.

The newspapers cited unnamed sources as the basis for their reports.

"Due to the broad nature of the items sought by the subpoena in the short time frame it is not possible to identify or locate the items to the extent that they may exist," he said.

The Post and Star-News said the jurors actually wanted to indict the President, but named him as an unindicted co-conspirator instead after Jaworski told them there was some question whether the names of the seven persons indicted, including top former presidential advisers H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and John N. Mitchell, were revealed March 1. No names of co-conspirators were disclosed.

St. Clair said Ehrlichman particularizes his request for "specific, identifiable items that are relevant and material," the White House would examine them "to determine whether their disclosure would be consistent with the public interest."

A earlier subpoena issued May 22 sought all of Ehrlichman's White House files. In an attempt to work out a compromise on this subpoena, the White House, special prosecutor Leon Jaworski and Ehrlichman's lawyers agreed to let Ehrlichman conduct a search of his old files to particularize what he believed he needed for his defense.

He was arrested May 29 by Deputy Sheriff James R. Shelton and Constable J.D. Fish of McLean.

Ehrlichman returned to the White House Wednesday to begin checking his files.

The former No. 2 aide to President Nixon was given access to all his files. Buzhardt told a reporter, Ehrlichman's lawyers were given access to documents after White House lawyers screened them. Buzhardt said.

Two other men, William E. Roberson, Amarillo, and Ray White, no permanent address, are in custody at Amarillo. A fourth man is being sought.

Ehrlichman is the last remaining major figure connected with the White House special investigative "plumbers" facing charges. He will go on trial June 17 for allegedly conspiring to violate the citizen's rights of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, Beverly Hills psychoanalyst, whose office was burglarized in 1971.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal grand jury voted last-February to name President Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate coverup, it was disclosed today.

they had power to indict a President.

The President's impeachment lawyer, James D. St. Clair, told reporters he was informed of the development three or four weeks ago by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

As an unindicted co-conspirator, Nixon would not face criminal penalties.

St. Clair made the comment after the Washington Post and the Washington Star-News said the grand jury named—but did not indict—the President and others in a sealed indictment returned March 1 against seven former White House and Nixon campaign aides.

St. Clair said today, "The President said they just don't have all the evidence and they are wrong." Interviewed as he arrived for a closed session of the Judiciary Committee, St. Clair said:

St. Clair made the comment after the Washington Post and the Washington Star-News said the grand jury named—but did not indict—the President and others in a sealed indictment returned March 1 against seven former White House and Nixon campaign aides.

"I don't think the evidence supports it. It wouldn't be the first time a grand jury was wrong—and it has no legal effect."

The Los Angeles Times, which first reported the grand jury wanted to name Nixon, said Jaworski persuaded the jurors not to mention the President even as an unindicted co-conspirator.

St. Clair added that the President is "very confident that the true facts will come out and that he will be exonerated."

St. Clair said when Nixon was told that the grand jury wanted to name him, the President said, "They just don't have the evidence and they are wrong."

The Washington newspapers said Nixon was named in sealed documents turned over to Federal District Judge John J. Sirica, but said the House Judiciary Committee was not told of the co-conspirator listing.

Asked about the reports, St. Clair said when Nixon was told that the grand jury wanted to name him, the President said, "They just don't have the evidence and they are wrong."

The Post said the grand jury's findings were relayed to attorneys for the defendants May 6 at a closed session with Jaworski and Sirica. The judge was said to have ordered those present to maintain secrecy.

The names of the seven persons indicted, including top former presidential advisers H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and John N. Mitchell, were revealed March 1. No names of co-conspirators were disclosed.

Later, the grand jury turned over voluminous material it used in its investigation, including any evidence relating to Nixon, to the House Judiciary Committee for its impeachment inquiry.

Theft And Burglary Ring Ended By Three Arrests

A theft and burglary ring which has been operating for several months in Gray and at least four other counties is thought to have been broken by the recent arrest of three men.

Gray County Sheriff R.H. (Rufe) Jordan said today one person believed to be a key man in the ring, Paul E. McCulley, 33, of McLean and Amarillo, is in custody in the Gray County jail in lieu of bonds totaling $15,000.

mostly from rural areas, of thefts, which date back to February, include Carson, Dallam, Collingsworth and Donley.

He was arrested May 29 by Deputy Sheriff James R. Shelton and Constable J.D. Fish of McLean.

Involved, Jordan said, were copper wire taken from various Panhandle locations; tools and diesel oil taken from the Rock Island Railroad near McLean; furniture and merchandise from a farm residence near Wellington; burglary of a rural residence 25 miles east of Pampa; and theft of a pistol, shotgun and rifle from a pickup truck parked at the Howardrick Restaurant and Lounge.

Jordan said the breaking up of the ring was the result of close cooperation of men in his department along with sheriffs and other law-enforcement personnel throughout this area.

Two other men, William E. Roberson, Amarillo, and Ray White, no permanent address, are in custody at Amarillo. A fourth man is being sought.

Also included in the list of thefts and burglaries are oil field equipment from a lease south of Pampa, and a variety of objects from a farm nine miles east of Pampa.

He added that some of the stolen goods had been recovered, but that probably half of it had been sold to "fences" in Amarillo and other locations.

SCIENTIST HOPES

Freshwater Shrimp Could Aid Cancer

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—Cancer researchers are searching the lakes and streams of the Texas Hill Country for rare foot-long, freshwater shrimp they say could aid in the development of a cancer preventative.

long claw to tail, and weighs about 20 ounces. It resembles a lobster, but the researcher learned it was a species of fresh-water prawn, or shrimp.

The shrimp was found in the Guadalupe River above Lake McQueeney, and James Ludecke of Seguin since has set out traps in hope of catching several specimens for Rommel's research. Also, James Langlais is attempting to catch some of the big freshwater shrimp using New England lobster traps near his marina at Lake McQueeney, and Melvin Dreiss of Boerne will make a try in Cibolo Creek.

Rommel said although the oversize shrimp are rare, they are not totally uncommon.

"Nearly every marina and bait house from the hill country to the coast knows about them, or has a preserved specimen on display," he said.

Rommel theorized that hill country shrimp originally made their way to the Gulf of Mexico to spawn in brackish water. Younger, smaller specimens are caught along the coast.

But the many dams now on the fresh water systems prevent shrimp that are far upstream from ever reaching the coast.

Rommel said he does not know if the shrimp's relatively enormous size is the result of a long and unhampered life, or whether the size is common to all adults of the species.

The freshwater shrimp has symmetrical claws like crayfish, while New England salt-water lobsters have asymmetrical claws. For that reason, Rommel believes the Texas specimen may be higher on the evolutionary scale.

He said he hopes the live river shrimp will be trapped or caught by fishermen and brought to his laboratory.

At the laboratory, the scientist will install the living specimens in aquariums or in privately owned lakes to see if they can be grown, bred and produce healthy offspring for research.

Rommel said the elusive shrimp may one day yield an answer to the puzzling questions about man's natural defenses and immunities against disease.

STILL UNDECIDED Convention Delegates Study Proposals On Legal Lottery

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Constitutional Convention delegates have decided they do not want to close the door completely on operation of legal lotteries in Texas.

But they haven't yet decided just how far that door should remain open.

Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, is proposing an amendment to the general provisions article of the new constitution that would generally ban lotteries and parimutuel betting, but would permit bingos by churches and nonprofit charitable organizations under certain conditions.

The present constitution bans all lotteries, including bingos, but some churches have winked at that provision and gone ahead with the fundraising bingos despite the prohibition.

Rep. Neil Caldwell, D-Alvin, says Green's proposal is a good approach to the gambling controversy, which has drawn strong pressure from Baptists and backers of legalized horse race gambling.

"It lends a legitimacy to the hypocrisy that exists in the state today," Caldwell said. "This is allowing something we've had in Texas for so long that some people have become dependent upon it."

A motion to table Green's amendment failed on a 79-79 vote Wednesday, leaving the question before the convention today.

Delegates Wednesday rejected a proposal by Sen. Jim Wallace, D-Houston, that would have prohibited all lotteries and parimutuel betting, including the bingos.

"This is an outright, on the table prohibition on lottery enterprises," Wallace told the convention. "It prohibits the raffles on deer rifles by the Lions Club, it prohibits bingo by the churches, and it prohibits parimutuel betting."

Earlier Wednesday, the convention had finally approved a section of the constitution dealing with branch banking after twice defeating attempts to place limits on the size of bank holding companies in Texas.

Rep. John Wilson, D-La Grange, who tried unsuccessfully to limit future acquisitions and mergers of the Texas holding companies, won his attempt to maintain and strengthen a ban against foreign banks opening branches in Texas.

NEARLY 100 TREATED Ammonia Cloud Covers Roman Catholic School

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—Nearly 100 children were treated at hospitals Wednesday after an ammonia cloud enveloped their Roman Catholic school.

The white cloud was released when a crane ripped a two-inch refrigeration pipe at the nearby P. Ballantine & Sons brewery which was undergoing demolition.

At least 98 youngsters from St. Aloysius School, which includes the first through eighth grades, were treated at hospitals for nausea or running eyes and noses. There were no serious injuries, officials said.

Rock Star Sly Marries Wife In Madison Square

NEW YORK (UPI)—First came the slinky dancing girls waving big palm branches. Then came a bishop in flowing robes. And finally, Sly, leader of the rock group "Sly and the Family Stone," danced onto the stage and married the mother of his young son. The 23,000 whistle-blowing, aisle-dancing, hand-clapping, tambourine banging fans at Madison Square Garden went wild. The preacher, Bishop B.R. Stewart of the Church of Christ and God in San Francisco, asked, "Do you take this woman, Kathy Silva, to be your lawful wedded wife?"

Sly responded, "I do," and the entire stadium roared.

Women Fainted

But before it was all over, 13 persons were arrested on trespass charges, six women fainted, and fistfights broke out through the stadium.

Despite the antics, Sly's mother, Gracie Stewart, a big woman with a trombone-like voice, stood in the spotlight and told the crowd, "This is a solemn ceremony."

She then introduced her 12-year-old niece Lisa Davis to "sing a small song for Sly," and into the blazing lights came a skinny girl who threw back her head and belted out an old spiritual.

"I don't know about tomorrow, I only live for today. But I don't worry about the future for I know what my Jesus says."

During the song, the audience got as quiet as it was going to get that night.

Afterward, the beat of a rock tune began and grew louder and louder.

Egyptian Honor Guard

Suddenly from backstage 11 long lovely ladies, all dressed in slinky black gowns with silver bangles on their arms stepped solemnly onto the stage waving big fan palms like an Egyptian honor guard.

Members of Sly's group, dressed in sparkling gold and black waltzed onto the stage and finally, finally Sly himself, danced out of the shadows in his floor-length sequined cape and took the hand of his 20-year-old bride, who was dressed in a shimmering silver and gold gown.

Sly then took off his sunglasses, smiled wickedly at his fans and slipped a ring on the finger of his Hawaiian-born bride.

Sly, 31, said the marriage was "the only fair thing to do, for myself, for everybody else." The couple have a 9-month old son Sylvester Jr.

TO SLOW INFLATION

Americans Reach For Credit Cards

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Americans reached for credit cards instead of cash twice as fast in April in efforts to stave off the effects of inflation, according to the Federal Reserve Board.

Consumers also slowed down repayments of credit in April, the Federal Reserve said.

Rising credit and slower payments are apparently results of the shrinking buying power of the dollar and the fear that prices haven't peaked yet.

"Price increases are apparently putting the squeeze on consumers," a government economist said. "The same amount of money is not going as far."

Pam Rose, a Washington school teacher, said she borrowed $1,700 to buy a new car, even though she could have repaired her old one. "Why wait; it'll just be higher next week or next month, anyway," Mrs. Rose said.

The Federal Reserve reported Wednesday that consumer credit jumped $1.5 billion in April, more than double the average increases in January, February and March.

"Nearly one-half of the total growth in installment debt was in credit for other consumer goods and another one-third in personal loans," the Federal Reserve said.

The "other consumer goods" category consists of clothing, household appliances, recreation equipment and small and medium priced items paid for in installments. Americans asked for $356 million in credit extensions in April and slowed down repayments by $180 million.

Ron Palmer Loses Out In Spelling Bee

Misspelling "parlous" in the final round of yesterday's competition, Ron Palmer, the region spelling champion from Pampa, was eliminated Wednesday in the national spelling bee.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Palmer, 2332 N. Sumner, Ron, 14, said he had never seen the word until Wednesday. He spelled the word, which means perilous, "parlis."

Twenty-five finalists remained in the contest after eight rounds of competition. It took 522 words to eliminate all but 25 of the 80 original competitors.

During the rounds of spelling, Palmer correctly spelled "nineteen," "tableau," "persevere," "labyrinth," "resuscitate," "quagmire" and "spleen." He placed 41st in the field of 80.

Three Texas youngsters remain in the contest for today. They are Kristi York, 13, for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram; Jonathan Leach, 12, from the El Paso Herald-Post; and Camelia Jan Pratt, 13, representing the Houston Chronicle.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer, Suzy, Frances, Nancy, Tim and Ron will return approximately June 12 from the bee.

Sponsored by the Amarillo Globe-News and West Texas State University, Palmer is the 26th Panhandle student to participate in a national contest.

Tough Codes, Morality Prepare Students Well

By PAT McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — What happens to young men and women who go to a university that has a tough dress code, an honor system, won't tolerate promiscuous acts, and insists students get by without coffee, tea, alcohol or smoking? They're well prepared for life.

Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, has been proving that training since it was founded in 1875 as Brigham Young Academy. President Brigham Young, head of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at that time, told Headmaster Karl G. Maeser: "I want you to remember that you ought not to teach even the alphabet or the multiplication tables without the spirit of God."

The private school with 25,000 students is the largest church-related university in the nation. In an interview, Dr. Dallin H. Oaks, BYU president, said students — young people — want guidance and a spiritual base for life.

Honored at the salutatory position was Joe Sherrod, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sherrod, with a 92.6 average.

As a senior, Brown has been a football team captain and was named to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram's second All-State team. He was also named by the faculty as All-Round Best Boy and won a position on the All-District One Act Play Cast.

Through his high school career he has lettered in basketball, football and track and this year qualified to attend regional competition in discus. He has also participated in band, annual staff and Spanish Club.

Sherrod served as president of the FBLA, was elected Most Spirited, FHA Beau and student council representative. He holds letters for football and basketball participation and served as a grid-iron captain.

He has also been active in FFA, band, annual staff and Spanish Club and was recognized by the faculty for outstanding leadership. In University Interscholastic League literary competition, he attained the state Class A championship in prose competition.

This fall Brown will attend McMurry College in Abilene while Sherrod plans to enter West Texas State University in Canyon.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ted Koppel pulls a short drag from a cigarette and blows a thin trail of smoke through a darkened screening room on Manhattan's Upper West Side.

The cigarette is British. Perhaps it is his regular brand, or perhaps it is one of the affectations of his job. Koppel is ABC's diplomatic correspondent. And he has just returned from the Middle East where he followed Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on his peace missions to the Israel and the Arab world. He is one of the "Boys on the Shuttle."

He is preparing a documentary on the life of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to be aired June 14. "Kissinger could be one of the one or two greatest secretaries of state," Koppel said, "if he doesn't get dragged down by Watergate."

Watergate Problem In recent months Kissinger's reputation has been threatened by the release of White House transcripts indicating he ordered the phones of his subordinates tapped. Kissinger has denied this during congressional testimony. Koppel seemed a bit perplexed about this matter, but was assuring Kissinger was a man of integrity.

"There are times he keeps things from us and there are times he is misleading," Koppel said. "But he doesn't lie to us."

Koppel also emphasized that integrity was the cornerstone of diplomacy, especially in the Middle East where Kissinger has secured troop disengagements between Israel and Syria and Israel and Egypt.

"You have to make a deal that both sides want to keep," Koppel said, "if one side wakes up one day and realizes they were sold out, he's finished."

Even at a film editing session, one expects a diplomatic correspondent to come armed with a three piece suit and attache case. Koppel wore blue jeans.

Koppel is enthusiastic about his documentary. It will cover recent events — the Middle East shuttles, Vietnam peace talks, his marriage. And it will touch upon the past, especially his early days as a Jewish youth in Nazi Germany.

A Major Target "I think the real key to Kissinger was the Nazi era," Koppel said. "Never again would he put his faith in any single man or institution. He is a believer in the process of history."

Koppel said that traveling

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Some bulls clinging to the vain hope that somehow the psychological level of 800 will contain this bear market," says the Dines Letter. But it points out that several major indexes hit new lows last week and declines continue to outnumber advances with new lows beating out new highs.

"Daylight is starting to show through the long night of the bear market," according to Reynolds Securities Inc. Last week the Dow Jones Industrial average dipped below 800 on an intraday basis but held above the February and December lows, the firm says. Although new lows were set by the broader-based weighted averages, the senior Dow Industrials often outperform them when a base is near, it continues. "We believe that the market is in a major bottom area with the 750 to 780 level representing the downside liability," the firm adds.

"If the end of the business recession is imminent, it should soon be reflected in the performance of the stock market relative to the real economy," says Manufacturers Hanover Trust. The bank says over the past 25 years stock prices made gains relative to industrial production at least two months before the business recession ended. "It would be most unusual for the recession to have ended without the stock market first improving relative to real output," it adds. "Although the depressing effect of inflation on equity prices this time around could have this effect."

BIRD CONTROL
CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Oregon State University zoologist Dr. John A. Wiens is heading a research program to develop methods of preserving and managing beneficial bird populations, and controlling those considered damaging pests.

The project has produced a computer simulation model to analyze and estimate changes in bird population density and energy demands of bird populations. The computer model also is being used to estimate fish consumption by seabirds along the Oregon coast.

Federal Housing Blasted

Updating Prof. Martin Anderson's devastating critique of urban renewal and federal housing, "The Federal Bulldozer," the American Conservative Union (ACU) recently released a critical analysis of federal housing policy by Michigan State University economist Richard Craswell. Entitled "The Failure of Federal Housing," the study blasts government housing programs as "exorbitantly expensive, grossly ineffective, and generally counter-productive."

ACU, with 70,000 members, is distributing the study in an effort to promote market place alternatives to continuing government intervention in the housing field. For a copy, write to ACU Education and Research Institute, 422 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003. Price 50 cents.

The study points out that the government programs enacted since 1945 have been a long-run net disaster. They have:

1. Encouraged economic corruption in the granting of government subsidies.
2. Decreased the net supply of housing units available.
3. Increased the extent of the dependence of the populace on government economic assistance.

"The cost of the federally-renewed housing," Craswell maintains, "has risen all out of proportion to the ability to pay of those whom it is intended to benefit. At the same time, over-regulation has discouraged private enterprise from even further investment."

Citing further information that private industry has supplied over 95 percent of the net increase in "standard" housing units in the twenty years from 1950 to 1970, at substantially lower costs than centralized federal programs, Craswell bluntly calls for a "negative program toward urban renewal." It "makes little sense," he suggests, "to urge 'positive action' if every step the government takes can only make the problem worse."

Quoting ACU chairman, M. Stanton Evans, senior editor of the Indianapolis News, the author called the plethora of government programs, from urban renewal to public housing and rent supplements, a "Federal tragicomedy," adding that "Federal housing projects are an object lesson in the need for diminished government intervention in our economy."

At every step, Craswell charges and documents, the government has worked to destroy the housing of the poor, discourage its construction, double its rent, inflate the price of housing—in general, and discourage innovation. "Yet people still retain the image of greedy slumlords keeping the poor in hovels from sheer spite, while kindly but under-financed government officials struggle to ease the poor's plight." As a result of this popular misconception, the study maintains, "at each new crisis government regulation is extended and the market is curtailed further. It is not an exaggeration to say that, until this belief is dispelled, the urban problems will never be solved."

Doctor Thomas Matthew, a New York City neurosurgeon acting as a representative from a Harlem neighborhood to an Urban Renewal board, also quoted in the Craswell study, when asked what the city could do to help his neighborhood, minced no words. "Get out of the way," he exploded, "and let us try something."

"For the sake of our cities," the author of THE FAILURE OF FEDERAL HOUSING concludes, "it is long past time government got out of the way. It is time for a negative program toward urban renewal."

A TALE OF A V.P.

INSIDE LABOR Auto Union Gears Up For '76

DETROIT — Never let it be said American labor isn't a growth industry. It should go public. Just look at the United Auto Workers (independent), hand-carved by the late "redhead" Walter Reuther. Just three years ago it was practically bankrupt. Its national headquarters here was hocked to the Teamsters for $25 million. It was borrowing millions elsewhere to pay for its $200 million auto strike.

Today its strike fund is almost $90 million.

The UAW repaid the Teamsters, plus $4.5 million interest. It's worth scores of millions in cash and real estate. It has withstood the energy crunch shockwaves. It is running a massive convention which will feature the Farm Workers' leader Cesar Chavez — to whose union the UAW now is contributing over $500,000 annually.

Its contracts provide most of its members with everything from free dental care to psychiatric treatments. It has fabulous regular cost-of-living increases. Its record-making pension agreements (eventually reaching $700 monthly) won $93.7 million in 1973 for Ford retirees and $85 million for same from Chrysler. General Motors' figures are astronomical. In all, retired auto workers have received some $2 billion from the auto makers since the 1949-1950 period.

Having survived the nightly traumas of the oil shortage and layoffs, auto union leaders now are surefooted and secure. Thousands of their members will be recalled after the remodeling of the small cars, which will knock many of the imports right back across the oceans.

Sop the auto union's 24th constitutional convention (in Los Angeles) will decide to continue to stay independent. The union has changed its collective mind. It is no longer expected to begin merger negotiations with the AFL-CIO. That's a sharp switch in secret diplomacy.

There's the usual internal bickering, maneuvering for positions, to succeed president Leonard Woodcock, but that comes naturally in any cabinet. But basically this union has no problems. Money, as reported above, comes pouring in annually from dues checkoffs by the tens of millions — and a good deal of it goes into hundreds of political operations known as Community Action Programs.

Which leads to a development observed by insiders and ignored by the public, though it will be responsible for national headlines. There's a firm belief among scientists that 1976 will occur regardless of persistent, contrary rumors in Washington.

For the UAW this means three things: the union will have to fight for a new massive contract with the auto industry. There will also be a presidential election, whether or not Dick Nixon is impeached and convicted. And lanky, bespeckled, low-keyed, low-boiling, low-point UAW president Woodcock's term will be up, and under the present constitution he would have to retire at the next convention since he will have reached the age of 65.

At such a moment, the UAW sanhedrin doesn't want its most talented chief maneuvering against each other for the prestigious and politically powerful national presidency. It should be recalled that Sen. George McGovern at the last minute found himself choosing between Woodcock and Tom Eagleton — as a vice presidential running mate.

So the word from deep inside is that the convention will keep Woodcock in office simply by resolving to convene in three years instead of the traditional two. The would throw Woodcock's post open in May or June 1977.

So, the auto union leadership could offer a common front against the auto companies, against the Republicans, and against the traditionalists and conservatives at the 1976 national Democratic nominating convention.

Who knows? Woodcock may yet be selected as a vice presidential nominee. Who knows? He may yet be nominated to run with George McGovern.

Thus the union's leadership would be free to maneuver as a team if it doesn't merge with the AFL-CIO, a good deal of which may yet wind up supporting Jerry Ford, Nelson Rockefeller or some other moderate Republican if the McGovern forces end up controlling the midterm and '76 national Democratic conventions.

There will be other developments at the convention which pique the interest of insiders — such as Msgr. George Higgins, spiritual mentor and protector of the United Farm Workers, offering his report on activities of the UAW Public Review Board. Father Higgins is its chairman.

But why should they? What explains the gold rush of 1974? For rush there is. It has caused gold to bid up, in European markets, to the region of $175 an ounce. Silver was $5.76 an ounce as of May 16.

There are two components of demand for gold and silver, the industrial and the monetary. Both metals are used in industry, and both were once widely used as money materials. Silver is a useful commodity, particularly in the photographic industry, but gold has few uses. Of the 1,300 to 1,400 tons of gold mined yearly, industry absorbs only about 1,000 tons.

Some coins contain silver. To keep any coin in circulation, the mint must make it of material which, as a commodity, is worth considerably less than the face value of the coin, else the coins will be sold as commodity and no longer be available as money. Hence, as the commodity value of the coin material rises, less of it is used in each coin, some cheaper material being substituted. Copper now becoming too valuable to use in cents, that coin will soon probably be substituted. Copper now becoming too valuable to use in cents, that coin will soon probably be made of other material. No one should buy silver for other than its industrial value — unless he just wants to look at it.

The same holds for gold. Not an ounce of gold has been incorporated in circulated coins of the United States, or any other developed nation, for many years. What, then becomes of that one-fourth of yearly production of gold which is not taken by industry?

Presumably it is being bought and hoarded by the gold speculators. Not that they think the industrial demand for gold will increase greatly. Rather they evidently believe that gold money will stage a comeback, if not in coined form, then in bullion which "backs up" credit money.

But to serve as "backing" for paper money, a material must be exchangeable at fixed rates for that paper. And gold is not thus

Speaking Of Speculation: Is Gold A Good Buy?

By OSCAR W. COOLEY
Assoc. Prof. of Economics
Ohio Northern Univ.

Men speculate in all sorts of things. A firm in New York boasts that it paid $24,000 for a block of four airmail stamps. What distinguishes these stamps from others is that the airplane pictured thereon is upside down.

In 1720, the South Sea Company was floated in London to trade with Spanish America, mainly in slaves. Its shares sold for 128 in January, 1000 in July, and 124 in December of the same year. Ruined in the speculative mania of the "South Sea Bubble," some committed suicide.

About the same time in France, John Law's "Mississippi Scheme," involving speculation in land of the lower Mississippi valley, lured a host of Frenchmen to their fall and led to Law's banishment and death in poverty.

But of all speculative binges in history, Holland's "tulip mania" of the 1630's takes the prize. According to my Webster's Dictionary, 5,500 forins (about $12,000) was paid for a single tulip bulb of the species, "Semper Augustus." Twelve acres of building lots in the city of Harlem were offered for another such bulb.

He who bought into this market could at least feast his eyes on beautiful blooms. Further, he could look forward to his investments reproducing themselves.

Gold and silver, objects of much eager speculation around the world today, also are pretty to look at — but shy about multiplying.

Supposedly experts are writing books and holding seminars in which they predict dire depression, if not worse, and urge people to save themselves by putting their money into "solid values" such as gold and silver bullion. Americans cannot legally own gold, but the yellow metal is avidly traded in Canada, Europe and the Orient, and U.S. citizens can get in the act by buying shares in gold mining companies. Silver they can buy to their heart's content.

But why should they? What explains the gold rush of 1974? For rush there is. It has caused gold to bid up, in European markets, to the region of $175 an ounce. Silver was $5.76 an ounce as of May 16.

H. L. Hunt Writes TRUTH ABOUT U.S. BUSINESS

The truth about U.S. business today is almost never heard amid the clamor from ideologues bent on its destruction and from honestly confused or mistaken people who have never had an opportunity to learn the facts because they are not mentioned on the TV networks.

For instance, public opinion samplings show that the median estimate of most people for the annual profit of manufacturing companies is 28 percent. The correct figure for after tax profits on sales is less than 4 percent. In some very important businesses such as food chain stores, the annual profit is only about one percent.

Manufacturing profits are so low that U.S. businesses are increasingly unable to buy the new machine tools needed to keep up with foreign competitors. The general profit level in the United States is lower than in any other country not ruled by a socialist government, with the result that 62 percent of our metal-forming power tools are more than 10 years old and therefore increasingly obsolete.

So generous have U.S. corporations been in paying wages that about 90 percent of all divisible corporate income goes to employees, which means that about 90 percent of the price of most manufactured items goes to pay labor costs. Only eight percent of U.S. capital is re-invested, as compared, for instance, with 27 percent in Japan.

The shortages which beset so many of our people have occurred precisely in those products most tightly controlled by government. The cure to the problems caused by socialism is not more socialism but more freedom.

Communists don't do business, they give you the business, and since their business is Communism what they give you is Communism.

THE CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE George Wallace's Problem

By WILLIAM RUSHER

There are growing indications that Governor George Wallace is not necessarily in the Democratic party's pocket for 1976. And if the feisty Alabama does decide to run for president on a third-party ticket, as he did in 1968, he could spoil the plans of a lot of Democrats to dance till dawn at the Inaugural Ball in January 1977.

A recent Gallup Poll reported that the percentage of Americans identifying themselves as "conservative" is the highest in the entire 38-year history of the Poll (38 per cent conservative to 26 per cent liberal, or 59 per cent to 41 per cent with the "undecideds" forced to choose). Unless this is simply inaccurate, or changes radically between now and 1976, it will present a major problem for the Democratic party in that year.

In the first place, the Democratic leadership in Congress is likely to have trouble, in 1975 and 1976, restraining its majorities in both Houses. These majorities, which are almost sure to be large, will be intent on passing legislation on welfare, education, defense, etc. that will be far out of skew with the real sentiments of the American people. The Republicans can be counted upon to make the most of this, and it will be a powerful ready-made issue for their 1976 presidential candidate, whoever he may be.

Naturally the sort of legislation that tends to get passed by Democrats out on a spree has exactly the kind of left-liberal slant which will annoy the sizable pro-Wallace minority in the party. The chances are, therefore, that when the Democrats convene to pick their presidential candidate in the summer of 1976, they will be deeply divided. There will be liberals who approve the Democratic record in Congress and want more of the same, and Wallaceites who are discontented with it and want precisely the opposite.

The conventional wisdom, in the face of this acknowledged problem, is that Senator Ted Kennedy is a human umbrella under which the various conflicting factions within the Democratic party can all group themselves in reasonable comfort. And certainly Kennedy has impressive support among such disparate blocs as organized labor, radical-chic intellectuals, blue-collar and hardhat types generally, and the Catholic "ethnic" vote. Above all, while no Kennedy is or ever was a leftist in any serious sense, the family has historically been willing to give the Democratic party's muscular left wing a gratifying portion of what it demands. The resulting broad appeal across the Democratic spectrum is what makes Ted Kennedy the almost prohibitive favorite to be the Democratic presidential nominee in 1976, regardless of Chappaquiddick and other inconvenient minutiae.

But this leaves George Wallace still to be reckoned with. He is now largely shorn of his former image as the archetypal Southern racist (the actually crowned black Homecoming Queen recently at the University of Alabama, where he had once stood in the doorway and vowed "segregation forever"), and he is widely admired for his courageous comeback from the near-fatal 1972 assassination attempt. Wallace commands the support of a nationwide bloc of voters whose support may well be crucial to Democratic hopes in 1976.

That, you may be sure, is why Senator Kennedy called on Wallace so obsequiously at the Governor's mansion in Montgomery last July, and why realistic Democratic politicians are wondering, these days, whether a Kennedy-Wallace ticket could conceivably be put together in 1976.

The answer to the latter question, however, is probably not. Wallace for vice president is almost certainly something liberal Democrats could never bring themselves to swallow, and a leftist third party would probably be the immediate consequence of trying to force them to swallow it.

The Kitchen Almanac

For a really different taste, baste chicken or turkey with the juice from any canned fruit... When making a cake, have eggs and liquid ingredients at room temperature.

To frost cupcakes in a hurry, simply dip the top of each cupcake into soft frosting and twist... Keep a large salt shaker filled with flour. It comes in handy when flouring a board for rolling out dough, coating chicken, making gravy, etc.

Baked potato toppings: (a) crumbled bacon in melted butter; (b) French onion dip; (c) shredded cheese or freshly ground pepper atop sour cream.

America's favorite dessert is fruit pie — with ice cream second. A combination of the two — pie a la mode — is third... Sprinkle buttered noodles with poppy seed.

Know The Cooking Lingo
Coddle: Simmer gently in liquid for a short time.

Creative Hot Water Cookery: Cooking with a Hot-water Dispenser. (The unusual appliance by KitchenAid dispenses hot water preheated up to 190°.) In addition, for use with many convenience foods — hot cereals, gravies and hot beverages — the versatile dispenser is also handy for such tasks as thawing, warming, melting and blanching. Instant hot water saves the cook the time and trouble of always having to "put the teakettle on."

Canape: A French term for a tiny piece of fried or toasted bread topped or spread with appetizers.

Julienne: To cut food into match-like strips.

Cut an oatmeal box in half and cover it with contact paper. You'll have a tiny wastebasket for kitchen use.

Note: You may want to clip this feature and keep these worthwhile tips in your own "kitchen file."

ADRIAN STEAK AND RICE — Saucy round steak strips... perfectly served over rice.

Texas Peach Omelet Good Way To Use Eggs

AUSTIN — Now while eggs are cheap and plentiful, it is a good time to use them frequently. According to Agriculture Commissioner John C. White, "Wholesale egg prices have dropped 30 cents a dozen since January. They probably will remain low until July when egg laying drops off because of the hot weather."

One way to use eggs is by mastering the technique of a good omelet. Omelets can be served for breakfast, brunch or dinner — plain or filled in an infinite variety of ways from cheddar cheese to creamed seafood.

The first important step in preparation is a well-seasoned eight-inch pan, large enough to accommodate a three-egg omelet for one. Omelets should be prepared separately and served immediately. Never wash the pan. Simply oil it well with a paper towel after each use.

Texas Department of Agriculture home economists have concocted a Texas Peach Omelet for fine summer eating. It uses three eggs per serving, and fills them with sweet, juicy Texas peaches that are just coming on the market. Sour cream tops off the dish, a fine offering for guests or for a light family supper.

TEXAS PEACH OMELET
3 eggs
3 Tbsp. water
3/4 tsp. salt
one-third cup skinned, sliced peaches (dip peaches in lemon juice or sprinkle with ascorbic acid to prevent discoloration)

2 Tbsp. butter
1 Tbsp. sugar
4 Tbsp. sour cream
1/4 tsp. cinnamon

Prepare basic omelet by mixing eggs, water and salt until well-blended but not frothy. Over moderate heat, melt butter until it foams and subsides. Coat bottom and sides of pan. Now add eggs with a circular motion stir eggs three to five seconds while shaking pan with free hand. Continue cooking until eggs are set but moist and shiny. Spread with peaches. Tilt pan forward and fold omelet in half. Slide onto over-proof serving dish. Top with sour cream. Combine sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle over sour cream. Slip under broiler to set cream and glaze sugar. Garnish with peach slices. Yield: 1 serving.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS
United Press International
Teacups, custard cups and muffin tins make good substitutes for individual salad molds.

Once for ounce, wheat germ contains more than twice as much protein as whole fresh eggs and more than twice the iron in beef steak or raisins.

Two pounds of fresh broccoli will make about six half cup servings.
To prevent flareups and excess smoke on your charcoal grill, tilt it slightly. Drippings then will drain to one side, away from the firebed.

Shish kebab and vegetables such as mushrooms, eggplant, slices, onions, zucchini, squash, tomatoes and green peppers will grill better over charcoal if you use separate skewers for the meat and vegetables. Otherwise, some of the food will be overdone before the rest is cooked.

...a hearty meal in just 25 minutes!

Adrian Steak And Rice

Nobody wants to spend more time (or money) than necessary in the kitchen. Unfortunately, low-budget meals often require longer preparation time. But not this recipe!

Adrian Steak and Rice is designed for the busy, dollar-conscious homemaker. By cutting a steak into thin strips it not only cooks faster, but also looks like lots more. A hearty meal, it serves six people generously.

While the round steak strips are browning all you have to do is slice a couple of onions and mince a clove of garlic. The rest of the ingredients can be measured in the pan and while they're simmering, put on the rice.

Saucy and well-seasoned, this dish is perfectly served over rice. Individual rice grains add a texture contrast. And because rice has no definite flavor of its own, it takes on the richness of the topping, stretching the flavor and the servings. At five cents a serving, rice is one of today's best budget stretchers.

ADRIAN STEAK AND RICE
1 1/2 pounds boneless round steak, cut in thin strips
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
One-third cup dry red wine
1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes
1/2 cup beef broth
2 medium onions, sliced
1 bay leaf
1/2 teaspoon each basil and thyme
3 cups hot cooked rice
Season steak with garlic, salt, and pepper. Brown meat in oil. Add remaining ingredients, except rice. Bring to a boil, cover, reduce the heat, and simmer 25 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving provides:
358 calories
3 meat exchanges
1 bread exchange
1/2 fat exchange
1/2 B vegetable exchange

NUTRIENT EQUIVALENTS

It helps, when planning good nutrition, to know which foods belong in each of the four food groups. They are grouped together, after all, because nutritionists know that the foods in each group offer a rather similar array of nutrients, thus they are largely interchangeable.

But not all foods in a group are nutritionally equal — especially if you compare them at the same weights or quantities. For this reason, you need to know what size serving of one food can be substituted for another.

An Example

To give you an example, let's discuss the calcium in milk. Milk is known especially for its calcium, its protein, vitamin A and riboflavin as well as a host of other essential nutrients. But can you substitute equal amounts of dairy foods, one for another, and come out with the same amount of calcium? Here are answers in terms of portions of dairy foods and some other foods that will offer the same amount of calcium. Nutritionists call these calcium equivalents.

Amount of Milk	Calcium Equivalents
1 cup = 1 cup buttermilk
= 1 cup skim milk
= 1 cup yogurt

Amount of Protein	Protein Equivalents of 3 oz. lean meat, cooked
6 slices (6 ounces) bologna
4 1/2 links (4 1/2 ounces) pork sausage
3 eggs
3 slices (3 ounces) cheddar-type cheese
3 frankfurters (packed 8 per pound)
1 1/2 cup cooked dried beans, dried peas or lentils
1 1/2 cup chili con carne with beans
3/4 cup cottage cheese
1/2 cup peanuts
6 T peanut butter
3/4 cheese pizza (14 inch)

Turn Leftover Beef Into Flavor-Packed Texas-Style Sandwich

Round up cooked beef leftovers and prepare wild western sandwiches in a jiffy. They're perfect partner-pleasers and will whet the appetite of the family's fussiest young broncobuster. These hot and hearty sandwiches are something for them to really dig their spurs into after a hard day of roamin' the range.

Beef slices simmered in a spicy tomato sauce with beans cook down to a zesty barbecue filling to go between bun halves. It's a great way to utilize leftover beef, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock & Meat Board.

Texas Joe Barbucues

- 1 pound cooked beef, thinly sliced
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons cooking fat
- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- 1 can (15 1/2 ounces) red or kidney beans
- 8 hamburger buns

Cook onion and garlic in cooking fat in frying-pan until lightly browned. Add tomato sauce, mustard, vinegar, chili powder, salt, pepper and hot-pepper sauce, stirring to combine. Stir in beef and beans, including liquid, and cook slowly, uncovered, 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve on hamburger buns. Yield: 4 cups.

Q. What is the name of this cut of meat?

A. Beef Round Steak

Q. Where does it come from? How is it identified?

A. Round steak is cut from the beef round (leg) and can be identified by the round bone it contains. Frequently, however, this bone is removed and the steak is separated into the muscles of which it is composed by cutting along natural seams. The top round (labeled A) is generally considered the most tender of the beef round cuts. Bottom round steak (B) is the boneless bottom muscle. The eye of the round (C), the smallest-muscle, is left attached to the bottom round or separated from it at the natural seam.

Q. How is it prepared?

A. Most often by braising on surface unit or in oven. Thick round steaks, when marinated, can be broiled to rare or medium and should be carved in thin slices across the grain. Thin steaks from the top round or eye can be pan-broiled or panfried.

El Progresso Club Officers Installed At Spring Luncheon

Members of the El Progresso Club met in the home of Mrs. Glen Dawkins, May 14 for a spring luncheon, and installation of officers. The tables were laid with lace clothes, and mixed spring flower arrangements centered each table. Mrs. Ralph Palmer gave the invocation. After the luncheon, a business session was held, with Mrs. O.K. Gaylor, president, presiding. The group was led in the women's collect by Mrs. J.G. Morrison. Mrs. Palmer called the roll, and read the minutes of the last meeting, which were approved. The scrapbook for the club's golden anniversary year was on display. Mrs. Gaylor, outgoing president, installed the officers for the coming year, presenting each one with a token, representing the office they were to hold, and the gavel to the new president, Mrs. Roy McMillen. Officers installed were: Mrs. Roy McMillen, president; vice president, Mrs. Ralph Palmer, secretary; Mrs. Max Presnell, treasurer; Mrs. M. A. Keagy, parliamentarian; Mrs. O.K. Gaylor, and reporters, Mrs. Richard Bray and Mrs. Glen Dawkins. Mrs. Roy McMillen presented Mrs. Gaylor with a gift, a token from the club, expressing their appreciation for a wonderful year. In closing, Mrs. Gaylor presented each member with a gold key chain, with her zodiac sign. This was the closing meeting for the summer, resuming their meetings in September. Those attending were Mmes. D.V. Burton, J.F. Curtis, Glen Dawkins, O.K. Gaylor, R.A. Keagy, Chas. Lanehart, Kermit Lawson, J.F. Malone, Roy McMillan, J.G. Morrison, Ralph Palmer Tom Perkins, Max Presnell, Glenn Radcliff, Bruce Riehart, Quentin Williams, Hugh Peoples, George Newberry and a guest Avae Bell. Hostesses were Mmes. Dawkins, Perkins, Lawson, J.F. Malone, and Bruce Riehart.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JUNE 7
Your birthday today: Your own inner drive determines what direction you take this year. Whatever you've been doing must be reorganized to eliminate or scale down overelaborate projects. Relationships are in for revision, some crucial moments. In the past century, today's natives were usually quiet, well-meaning people; in this century they have more energy, harder ambitions.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Everybody in sight has his two cents worth to put in. You and your ventures are thoroughly discussed. You're apt to be poorly advised. Do your own thinking.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Distant people are favorably disposed, but it's your job to reach them. Keeping up with competitors, following advice intended for those of larger means may generate problems.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Nobody sees anything in the same light you do. Be ready to alter plans on short notice to save investment. Chances are you've overestimated something.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Nothing near at hand works smoothly. Distant matters aren't likely any better but you're not so involved. Money presents complexities.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Optimism carries quite a push, but there's some contrary pressure on the way. Consolidate your progress while you can. People in established positions tend to be firm.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Business expansion isn't necessarily inevitable or favorable. Overbuying is the mood of the day. Be wary of taking a added responsibility. Give thought to your health.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Impulsive moves can upset many deals. You'll do better to troubleshoot what you have rather than seek exchanges for new. Property values shift abruptly. Keep current.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Gather your resolve, ask for the place in the world you feel you've earned, beginning with local, personal conditions. There's no reason you can't be heard and answered.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Any move you make seems inaccurate or beside the point. Money spent on yourself and your home should be held rigidly within budget figures—no impulse purchases!

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Routine requests encounter excuses, delays, denial. Draw a line on how much you will do at your work. You'll be proud of your tact and patience with those you cherish.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Speculative bubbles burst all around soon. Wait, have resources ready to buy in at reasonable rates. Pick up the pieces then. For now, be conservative, mind your own business.

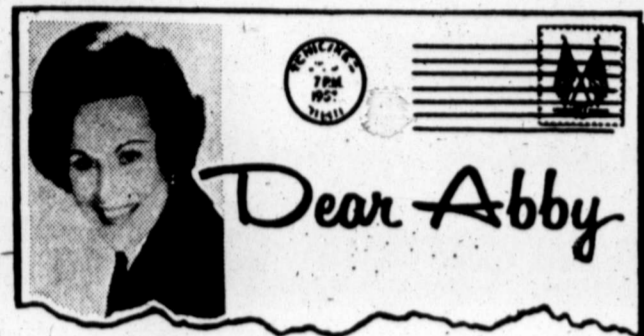

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Friends and family continue to distract you from business, career concerns. Optimism is great, sustain it with prayer—avoid carelessness.

MENS SHIRTS

Solids — including surface interest and tone — on — tones — currently make up 66 percent of the menswear shirt market. Their revised popularity provides consumers with the most versatility and coordination for dollars spent — important in today's economic condition, says Mrs. Becky Culp, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Dear Abby

Ignorance is a state of meaning

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the socially active university professor with a Ph.D. who wasn't sure of what R.S.V.P. meant until he saw it in your column: You replied "Ignorance is simply the absence of knowledge which is no crime. We are all ignorant, only on different subjects."

Abby, ignorance is "not knowing something we should know." Nescience is "not knowing something one would have no reasonable expectation of knowing."

Your not knowing the distinction between "ignorance" and "nescience" is nescience on your part. The professor's not knowing the meaning of R.S.V.P. is ignorance on his part.

P.J.R.: WORD FREAK

DEAR FREAK: Since words are my tools, I felt ignorant not knowing the meaning of the word "nescience." Then I polled three newspaper editors, two lawyers, a psychiatrist, the heads of the English department in three of our leading universities, a world famous novelist, a United States Supreme Court Justice, and an expert who writes a syndicated column on words, and not ONE of them had ever heard of the word "nescience." So, now I feel more nescient than ignorant.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old girl, and my problem involves my psychiatrist. I trusted him completely and told him things I never in a million years would tell my mother, because he led me to believe that everything I told him would be held in the strictest of confidence.

Can you imagine how I felt when I overheard my mother telling a relative on the phone some of the things I had told my psychiatrist? I can't tell you how this upset me!

In high school I stayed away from counselors, teachers, shrinks, etc., in order to avoid this.

When I saw my psychiatrist, I asked him why he did this to me. At first he denied it, then he said that my mother had become "concerned" about me, so he told her everything. Abby, I thought I could trust him, and he betrayed me!

What is the law concerning a doctor's keeping information confidential? He said he had a right to talk to my mother without my permission. Did he? I am not a minor.

UPSET

DEAR UPSET: Your doctor has committed a breach of ethics, and you would be perfectly justified in reporting him to the Ethics Committee of your local county medical society and/or psychiatric society. I suggest you do just that.

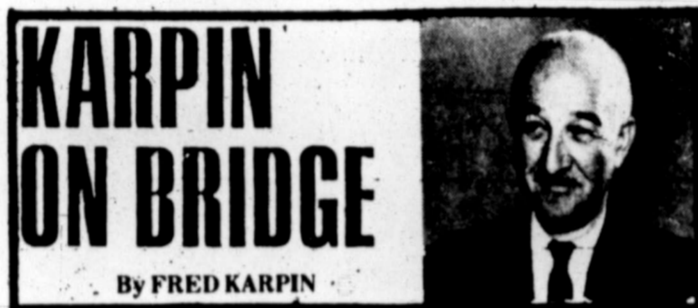

DEAR ABBY: How can I get a reply from a place of business when I write them requesting specific information? I wrote to these people three times—and even then I was ignored. I didn't ask for any special favors; I inquired about buying something they sell. What is the matter with people these days? Please tell me how to get an answer out of them.

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: To insure a reply — and usually a prompt one, enclose a stamped, addressed envelope. If you are ignored, give up. They probably don't need the business, and they certainly don't deserve it.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212 for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

Since the early 1950's, there has been much expert controversy on the question of which card to lead in partner's suit when one possesses three low cards in his suit, as, for example, the 8-5-2. There are those who advocate the lead of the highest, and there are those who are convinced that the lowest is the better lead. At times, the lead of the highest will turn out to be the best lead. At other times, the lead of the lowest will be the winning lead.

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

West's opening lead of the heart nine was covered by dummy's ten and East's queen. To this trick South followed suit with the three-spot!

If one were to look at all four hands, it would become obvious that all East had to do at trick two was to lead a low heart, forcing South to take his ace, and simultaneously establishing East's heart suit. But East had a serious guessing problem, since he didn't know whether partner's original lead was from a doubleton 9-x or from a tripleton 9-x-x. If West had started with the doubleton 9-x, then South had been dealt the tripleton A-x-x. And if East, at trick two, returned a low heart, South would play low from his own hand, and dummy's jack would win the trick (from West's lead of the nine, South knew that East held both the king and queen of hearts).

After much thought, East, at trick two, decided to play it safe by leading a diamond. West's bid suit. South followed with the queen and West took his ace. Declarer now had his contracted-for nine tricks: one spade, one heart, one diamond, and six clubs.

It should be pointed out that if South had taken his heart ace at trick one, he would have gone down, for when West later obtained the lead via the diamond ace, he would have returned another heart. Dummy's J-4 would now be entrapped by East's K-8-7-2; and East would have made four heart tricks.

Dear Consumer

Working Women Deserve Credit

By Virginia Knauer

Special Assistant to the President and Director
Office of Consumer Affairs
Department of Health, Education and Welfare

If you're a working woman who needs—or wants—credit, your chances are a lot better today than they were five years ago.

More and more banks and other lending institutions are saying yes when women apply for loans and credit cards. More and more stores are accepting applications from women who want charge accounts in their own names, not their husbands'.

These are new developments. They result largely from publicity given to the 1972 hearings of the National Commission on Consumer Finance. Those hearings made it clear that often women are turned down for credit only because they are women. Witnesses gave many examples of how lenders and stores discriminate against women.

A widow, for instance, could not open charge accounts in her own name—but could get accounts in her dead husband's name. When a young professional woman married, her bank credit card was cancelled, and the balance from her account was transferred to a new account in her husband's name. A 40-year-old divorced woman with a full-time job needed her retired father to co-sign so she could get a mortgage loan.

But things are beginning to change. Now some stores and savings institutions are judging women credit applicants by the same standards used for men: a steady income, prompt payment of bills, a regular savings record, cautious use of credit.

I hope you noticed that I said "cautious use of credit." This is very important. Never borrow more than you can repay comfortably, on a regular monthly basis. Never open more charge accounts than you can handle. Don't ever let yourself get in over your head when it comes to credit. You would be in trouble if you were ever turned down for credit on the grounds that your credit standing is bad.

Keep that in mind as you consider these suggestions:
• Open a savings account and a checking account in your own name. Married women often neglect this.
• When you are turned down for a store charge account, don't take "no" for an answer.

Talk with the store's credit manager and, if necessary, the vice president in charge of finance. Often credit clerks follow old rules, even after stores adopted new credit policies that ban discrimination against women.

If you are ever refused credit, find out why. Whenever you apply for credit, a report on your credit standing is prepared, usually by a credit reporting company. Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, you have the right to learn the name and address of the credit reporting company that put together your report. Contact that company; they must tell you what information went into your report. If any data is inaccurate or false, the law sets up ways for you to remedy the situation. Learn your rights by getting Consumer Bulletin No. 7 from Federal Trade Commission, Legal and Public Records, Washington, D.C. 20590. It's free.

• Keep trying, and learn more about credit in your community.

If one store or bank refuses you, try others. The shop across the street may be happy to get the account of a dependable woman customer. The bank down the block may okay you for the same credit card that another bank refused you.

Also, find out whether women's organizations in your town are working on the problem of getting credit for women. Many are, and you can learn about them by sending an inquiry to Women's Equity Action League, 799 National Press Building, Washington, D.C. 20004.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The U.S. Department of Labor, reporting on a 1972 survey of working women, noted:

Of the 3.7 million working wives with children under age six, 1.5 million, or 39 per cent, had husbands whose incomes were less than $7000.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—A reader writes, "As a result of Henry Kissinger's diplomatic triumph in the Middle East some columnists are comparing him to Talleyrand."

From your own understanding of history would you say this is a valid analogy?"

Dear Reader: It depends on which Talleyrand the columnists are referring to.

There used to be a Sam Talleyrand who ran a haberdashery in Perth Amboy, but Kissinger has nothing in common with him. Nothing at all.

Sam Talleyrand didn't have a diplomatic bone in his body.

Then there was a Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord, a French statesman during the reign of Napoleon. Although he was a fine diplomat, I wouldn't compare him with Kissinger either.

For one thing, he had a different accent.

Not Sally Rand In all likelihood, the columnists who are making this comparison have Talleyrand confused with Sally Rand.

There are numerous similarities between a Secretary of State and a fan dancer. But why bring that up now that Kissinger is married?

Instead, let us look ahead to Kissinger's next peace negotiations, which will be the greatest challenge of his career. And, if successful, his crowning achievement.

The assignment: To stop the tug-of-war over the Watergate tapes.

It will be a rigorous mission requiring, perhaps, several weeks of shuttling back and forth between the White House and the Capitol.

And the parties involved in the dispute are far more suspicious of each other, more bellicose, intractable and partisan than the Syrians and Israelis.

Stop Subpoenas
Nevertheless, the consensus is that Kissinger just might bring it off.

Everyone agrees the necessary first step will be to persuade the House Judiciary Committee to stop firing subpoenas at President Nixon.

As long as the subpoena bombardment, including occasional volleys from Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, continues, no truce can possibly be arranged.

Once there is a cease fire, the problem will be to persuade Nixon to pull back from the stone wall he has been occupying since the impeachment movement began.

The final settlement possibly will take the form of plea bargaining. Nixon could plead guilty to using obscene language and Congress would amend the articles of impeachment to include three years on probation.

Sally Rand herself couldn't strike a better compromise.

Maxwell Taylor Recalls Paratroopers D-Day Invasion Of Germany

By WARREN L. NELSON/WASHINGTON (UPI) — For Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, D-Day began as he stood in a damp Normandy pasture, staring at and being stared at in return by French cows.

"I jumped with a stick of about 11 men but I fell into one field," Taylor recalled in a recent interview. It was 1 a.m., June 6, 1944, and Taylor and his men were the start of the massive allied D-Day invasion.

United Press International
If we ever lose rock 'n' roll to the likes of Barry White ("Never Gonna Give You Up") or Terry Jacks ("Seasons In The Sun"), I plan to put a bumper sticker on my car. It will read, "Don't Blame Me—I Voted For The New York Dolls."

The Dolls' second album, "Too Much, Too Soon" (Mercury SRM 4-4004), fulfills all the sleazy promise of the first. The Dolls' first album was raw, dripping power and little else; even so, it was the best debut album of 1973. "Too Much" shows that the Dolls can control themselves enough to give their records a bit of variety.

Though it's likely that the Dolls will gain their first legitimate popularity with the novelty tunes (like their new single, "Stranded In The Jungle") that show them at their facetious best, my personal favorites are the tight rockers.

Best track on the new album — and about the best thing the Dolls have yet recorded — is the last tune, "Human Being": rabid guitar riffs alternating with David Johansen's "what's it to ya" voice and some fine saxophone lead (unfortunately, the sax player isn't identified on the jacket). "Babylon" and "Puss n' Boots" are also solid rockers.

The Dolls are following a time-proven rock pattern: come up with an image and a sound that is certain to turn off more people over the age of 25 and all people over the age of 40, and you can gain near-instant acceptance by those under 20. So they dress in patent leather, pedal pushers and see-through blouses, they priss about on stage with a pursed-lips self-parody and play so loud hearing aids are turned down for miles around.

In reviewing their first album, I said they were — like so many previous New York bands — too far ahead of their time. Despite the incredible amount of media coverage they have gotten, the kids just aren't ready for them. I'm not yet prepared to admit I was wrong, but "Too Much Too Soon" is certainly a step in the right direction for the New York Dolls.

About a dozen times a year or so, some beneficent record company sees fit to bestow upon us an album of old, sometimes unreleased material from its back files of tapes. Most of them are reject tracks from 60's rock bands that have long since passed their musical prime or have ceased to exist.

Nearly all of these LPs try to pass themselves off as a historical record of incalculable value to collectors or die-hard fans — and nearly all of them are complete turkeys. So it was with minimal hope that I tore the cellophane from "Early Flight" (Grunt CYL 1-0437), a collection of early Jefferson Airplane tracks never before released on an album.

Fortunately, "Early Flight" is the rare exception to the rule. It is a carefully selected, well-packaged set with fine liner notes from Airplane manager Bill Thompson. Most of the tunes come from the mid-60's, pre-"Volunteers" days when Marty Balin's influences dominated the Airplane's music. The oldest tracks are from late 1965 and include the band's original female singer, Signe Anderson, instead of Grace Slick.

But no more need be said. This is a nostalgic, provoking album, for Airplane fans only. If you qualify, it's not to be missed.

Taylor was commander of the 101st Airborne Division. He had jumped with his men and ended up in a typical Normandy field, divided from all the neighboring fields by high hedges.

"There was a group of cows in the field munching their cud and obviously wondering who this guy was. I presented a very undignified picture."

"You had to buckle yourself real tightly into those old parachutes. When I landed, I couldn't get the snaps unbuckled. I pulled my knife out of my boots. I had my pistol in one hand, my cricket in the other, so I'd put the pistol down and pick it up and put it down again as I tried to cut myself out of the chute."

Pop, Pop, Pop
The cricket was one of Taylor's innovations. During paratroop drops in Sicily his men had been badly scattered. He anticipated that the dispersion amid the Normandy hedgerows would create havoc, and he wanted his troops to have a distinctive noisemaker to identify themselves. An aide came up with a simple children's toy, a metal cricket.

"To this day the old veterans will come up to me and go pop, pop in my ear with their crickets," Taylor said. "They still have them."

"I crept along the hedgerow looking for a gate. Just as I found it I heard a stir on the other side. I drew my pistol and got all set. Then I heard the click. That was the most pleasant sound I ever heard in the entire war."

"We literally fell on each other's shoulders. He was looking tough — like I hoped he would."

Taylor later rose to four-star rank, commanded all American troops in the Korean war; became Army chief of staff under President Eisenhower; chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under President Kennedy; and ambassador to South Vietnam, under President Johnson. In the last two posts he joined in a number of controversial decisions deepening U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Stories Improve
Taylor, at 72 a little stooped and hard of hearing, still is vigorous. As he thinks back 30 years to D-Day he smiles. "My memory is not good anymore, but my stories are better."

Although Taylor was a major contributor to the history of paratroop warfare, he is no diehard proponent. "It's the last way you want to get to the ground. I never jumped except when I had to. The day of the paratrooper is long past."

He said airborne troops provided mobility, and helicopters now ensure mobility with fewer dangers.

The Army recently announced the last paratroop unit in the 101st Airborne would be replaced by helicopters. The 82nd Airborne, only other such division, still has paratroopers. The "real value" of his paratroops, Taylor said, was shock.

Elite Force
The Germans thought we were everywhere. It shook them up and confused them. That was proved again in the Battle of the Bulge, the only time the Germans used paratroops against Americans. It scared the hell out of our people. There were rumors of Germans all the way back to Paris."

The paratroopers were elite volunteers. The Normandy experience gave them added confidence.

"My lads were swaggering. 'Those krauts are nothing, they'd say. They were ready to take on all comers — especially I regret to say, the MPs from other units who didn't wear paratroop boots.'"

Taylor still talks of his men as "lads," although the youngest are pushing 50.

The men of the 101st Airborne had donned warpaint and sported outlandish haircuts, presumably to impress the enemy they soon would meet. Eisenhower came to visit the men on the eve of departure and remarked to Taylor that they might not scare the Germans, but they sure frightened Ike.

"I never had to worry about getting them to go forward, my task was to keep up with them. When they were encircled at Bastogne in the Battle of the Bulge, their first reaction was pity for the enemy — 'They've got us surrounded, the poor bastards.' Normandy taught me the quality of these men I was privileged to command."

Wooden Spikes
Taylor recalled worrying about wooden poles which began to sprout amid the French fields a few weeks before the invasion

— clearly a German effort to hamper an airborne invasion.

Taylor assumed the Germans had a systematic plan, and believed the pattern of the poles would give him a clue to the enemy's precise military mind. But Taylor's long hours of study failed to uncover any pattern.

After his jump, Taylor asked the first farmer he found why poles had been placed in one field but not another. The farmer said, "The Germans told us to pole all our fields by June 15. My cow never liked the west field so I poled that first." Taylor said it was unreasonable to expect him "to anticipate the French cow factor in German planning."

Troubled With Bouts Of 'Gas'

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D. Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been troubled with bouts of "gas" in the lower abdominal region. I find I am relieved by eliminating some foods from my diet but it is just guessing and trial and error.

Could you please advise specifically what foods are responsible for producing gas? —E.S.

You are falling victim to a commonly held but incorrect idea that there are certain foods which are "gassy" and others which are not.

Some folks are sensitive to certain foods, other folks eat exactly the same foods with impunity. Think of it in terms of allergy — some people are miserable from hay fever; others may not have any trouble with ragweed but are sensitive to certain flowers, trees, dog or cat danders, or whatever.

Same way with foods. It isn't that there's anything inherently "gassy" about anything you eat. It's a question of which ones cause a reaction in YOUR intestine. Sorry not to be able to would deal with this problem? —Mrs. C.

I have some doubt whether there is anything you can do yourself to relieve the discomfort, but I'll tell you what I most certainly would do if I had that trouble.

The numbness implies some interference with a nerve track, or perhaps more than one of them. Hence I would go to a neurologist and let him pinpoint the source of the trouble.

For a rather common situation, your husband may have some arthritis in the neck spine, or for some other reason developed a change in the shape of one or more of the vertebrae in the upper spinal column.

It is not unusual for changes in bones to be so minute as not to cause trouble when standing up — but a shift in their position when lying down can exert pressure, perhaps very slight, on nerves where they emerge from the spinal cord.

If that proves to be the case, brief, regular periods of spinal traction may produce enough separation to relieve the slight pressure. Again, the trouble may become more severe and require some more elaborate treatment by an orthopedist.

But in any event, the first thing you need is diagnosis and a neurologist is the specialist who is trained for that sort of diagnostic work.

What are ulcers? How should they be treated? What can you do to help rid yourself of ulcers and stay rid of them? For answers, read Dr. Thosteson's helpful booklet, "How To Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep Them Healed."

For your copy write to him, Dr. G.C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

'Why Cry Over Spilt Money?'

By EARL WILSON NEW YORK — "Why cry over spilt money?" says Adela Holzer who's lost maybe half a million, on producing Broadway shows, but finally has a winner.

"I'd rather lose it on Broadway than throwing it in the stock market where you don't have as good a gamble."

Mrs. Holzer's 40, Spanish, happily married to her third husband, and a self-made woman by her own words. She's dynamic, studious, the devoted mother of two teenagers, and she insists that most women don't do enough with their own lives.

"I think I'm the only producer who puts up my own money in a play as a major investor." Mrs. Holzer told me at lunch at SeaFare of the Aegean ... hesitating to inject that there are a couple of exceptions. (One is another woman.)

"The idea that everybody loses money investing in shows is wrong," she said. "I was the biggest investor in 'Hair,' 'Sleuth,' and 'Dude.' That last one was a big loser. Personally it cost me $200,000 or maybe 300. My husband also lost."

"Brainchild" lost too. It closed out of town. But it is not finished yet. We are redoing it and bringing it back." Her husband, Peter Holzer, a shipping magnate, stays in the background.

"We are not going to worry about money," she says. Mrs. Holzer had an unsatisfactory marriage in Spain and got out of it. She has been a typist, secretary, writer, operator of a hospital supply house in Dallas, importer and exporter — and she has an MA and Ph.D.

"I am also in the oil business," she said. "Nobody else would believe there is oil where we have hit it. It is not too far away."

"What would you say you are worth?" "I would say we consider ourselves a little bit over being comfortable," she answered, "but who cares about money?"

Princess Grace and Ranier invited us to the opening of the new Monte Carlo Sporting Club and Casino in Monaco next month. Yes, they have a whole new beautiful entertainment complex there on the edge of the Mediterranean where they will play the biggest names.

Joe Franklin was ribbed hilariously at Jimmy's and one reason cited for his not having a summer replacement was that he's afraid to have anybody replace him even in the summer. Elderly "Mrs. Miller," asked by Joey Adams to say what young Joe had done for her, replied, "He's been a father to me."

We went to the Pointer Sisters' opening at the Waldorf Empire Room and found they sang many songs in a very lively manner and wish to report that our B.W. kept saying, "That girl's another Pearl Bailey." Which one was she talking about? All four of them.

One of the B-way's most beloved personalities, Abe Cohen, theatrical manager and advance man, is dead at 76. Wonderful little laughing Abe was nicknamed "Franchot Cohen" ... Earl Wilson Jr. and Mary Austin were married by Surrogate Samuel De Falco and the event was loudly celebrated later at Maxwell's Plum.

While Omar Sharif was busy filming "Funny Lady," his suite in a plush H'wood hotel was burglarized ... Shirley MacLaine was signed to play her first cafe onenigher — at the Concord Hotel, over Labor Day weekend ... Huntington Hartford and his young bride Elaine, took time out from honeymooning to attend the opening of the new Nirvana discotheque.

Show Biz Quiz: Who were the first Oscar winners? Ans. to yesterday's, Edward G. Robinson played Dr. Ehrlich, Gary Cooper was Dr. Wassell.

Secret Stuff: A major B-way show with a good weekly gross has such big expenses that the authors were asked to take a cut in their royalty payments ... The Betty Hutton "love-in" (at the Riverboat, June 24) is growing; celebrities expected to attend include Carol Channing, Ethel Merman, George Jessel — with Joey Adams hosting. (Proceeds go to St. Anthony's Rectory, where Betty's a cook.)

Tony Bennett'll host a half dozen syndicated TV specials (to be titled "Tony Bennett's 'This Is Music'"). I'D RATHER BE LIGHT Today's Best Laugh: Jackie Mason paid tribute to a famed B-way songwriter: "He has the wisdom of the great composers of old — and also some of their music."

Wish I'd Said That: Maybe the Russians, who say we're warlike, have merely been reading what the Republicans and Democrats have been saying about each other. Remembered Quote: "Just about the only advantage we can see to being poor, honest and hard-working is that nobody envies you."

Under Twenty

By DIANE O'BRIEN In a brochure produced by the American Optometric Association it states, "Your chance of living a longer life will go up the longer you stay off cigarettes."

This quote from the brochure, "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," may be the most meaningful for young people starting to copy a dangerous habit from so many of their elders. However, there's more. Smoking can definitely be harmful to your eyes.

Nicotine and carbon monoxide, two of the most harmful ingredients in cigarette smoke, are the main culprits in reducing night vision, a recent study by the U.S. Department of Health has shown.

Both can be involved in cutting down the oxygen supply to the eyes, a factor which can interfere with adaptation to light in the dark. This can be particularly harmful when driving at night.

Other studies have shown that some smokers tend to have a narrower field of view. This is a hazard to drivers who must be able to see "out of the corner of the eye" to prevent accidents involving vehicles or persons approaching from the side of the road. If you are not a smoker you know that cigarette smoke is perhaps the most common complaint of nonsmokers. Oddly enough, smokers say it annoys them, too!

In a Surgeon General's report, about 70 percent of those queried mentioned this irritation. It can be particularly uncomfortable for people suffering from allergies and for wearers of contact lenses.

Heavy smokers, therefore, may be limiting their ability to see as well as they could, according to the new pamphlet, "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," published by the American Optometric Association.

Vision is one of your most precious possessions. If you're thinking of smoking or have already started, why not pick up the tune instead of the cigarette?

If you want a copy of the pamphlet, it's available by sending a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to the Public Information Division, American Optometric Association, 7000 Chippewa Street, St. Louis, Missouri 63119.

Track Meet Set For July 6

By PAUL SIMS
Track athletes from elementary school age to senior high (boys and girls) should consider participating in the West Texas AAU Junior Olympics Track and Field Meet set for July 6 at Borger. Tracksters have only until July 2 to send in their entries.

The Junior Olympics is sanctioned by the West Texas Amateur Athletic Union Association and is sponsored by the Borger Chamber of Commerce. It is the largest meet of its kind in the area. The Junior Olympics Program is nationally sponsored by the Chevrolet Motor Division.

The national program is designed to encourage age-level competition with boys and girls up to 18 years of age. A year ago, over 16,000,000 competed in some phase of the AAU Junior Olympics Program.

The Borger meet will be a one-day affair at Bulldog Stadium. Preliminaries in running events and finals in field events will start at 9:30 and 10 a.m. respectively on July 6.

AAU rules will govern the meet. Those rules include competitors entering only one age division for individual events and relays and entering a total of only three events, including relays and field events. Girls in the Intermediate and Senior divisions may compete in two races of 440 yards or longer. The third event of the three allowed must be a field event.

Divisions will be Bantam, nine and under, Midget,

10-11; Junior, 12-13; Intermediate, 14-15, and Senior, 16-17.

In the preliminaries, the six best times in each running event will be eligible for the finals, which will be held around 2 p.m.

In the finals, medals will be awarded to the first three places in each event. Also, first place in each event of the Intermediate and Senior divisions will qualify for the Region IX AAU Championships to be held July 20 at Borger. Winners at that meet will qualify for the National Championships Aug. 9-12 at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

The ages of boys and girls on May 1, 1974, determine divisions. Each contestant must currently be registered with the AAU and the registration number must be shown on the entry form. Parent or guardian is asked to sign the entry form.

Forms can be obtained from the Borger Chamber of Commerce. AAU registration forms can be received from the Borger Chamber of Commerce, Box 911, Borger, 79007, or from Dick Walker, Box 2000, Lubbock, 79457.

Entry fee for the meet is 50 cents.

Tenace Smacks Grand Slam As Oakland Belts Detroit 9-1

United Press International
Crowds always did have a way of turning on Gene Tenace.

An obscure second-string catcher with the Oakland A's in 1972, Tenace rose to the occasion in the World Series when he batted .348, hit four homers and knocked in nine runs.

It's the same in 1974 when Tenace is the A's regular first baseman and probably in the $70,000 salary class. He likes to see those people in the stands — and unfortunately for the Detroit Tigers Wednesday night, Gene doesn't see too many of them in Oakland.

"We're entertainers and when you see a big crowd it makes you want to do your best," said Tenace after hitting the third grand slam homer of his career in the A's 9-1 victory over the Tigers. "I hate to keep ripping the Oakland fans but there we play to 3,000 and here we play to big crowds."

All The Fans
"I like to hit in the Detroit park. It's got a nice back-ground, nice atmosphere and it's nice to come here and see all the fans."

The crowd of 18,341 saw Tenace hit his grand slam off reliever Dave Lemanzky, boosting the A's margin to 8-1 in the fifth inning. Deron Johnson also homered in the seventh as Vida Blue gained his fifth win with the eighth and ninth inning relief help of Roland Fingers and Darold Knowles.

Cleveland edged Texas 9-3, Baltimore defeated Kansas City 5-4, Boston topped Minnesota 5-3, California edged Milwaukee 6-5 and Chicago scored a 7-6 15-inning triumph over New York in other American League games.

National League scores were St. Louis 4 San Francisco 1, Philadelphia 4 Atlanta 2, Montreal 8 Houston 3, San Diego 4 Chicago 3 and Los Angeles 3 Pittsburgh 2.

Blue allowed four hits, including Willie Horton's 13th homer, before retiring with a groin ailment after the seventh inning and raised his record to 5-5. Joe Coleman suffered his fifth straight loss and is now 6-6.

Indians 9 Rangers 3
Oscar Gamble and Dave Duncan hit three-run homers in a seven-run sixth-inning outburst which paced Bob Johnson to his third win. Charlie Spikes, George Hendrick and Frank Duffy also homered for the Indians while Jim Spencer connected for the Rangers.

There were no incidents in the Cleveland park where riotous fans caused Tuesday night's game to be forfeited to the Rangers.

Orioles 5 Royals 4
Mark Belanger's two-out double climaxed a three-run ninth inning rally which enabled the Orioles to beat the Royals. Doug Bird yielded the game-winning hit after the Orioles tied the score on three walks, Brooks Robinson's single and Elrod Hendricks' sacrifice fly. Bob Reynolds, who shut out the Royals in the last two innings, won his fourth game. Jim Wohlford homered for Kansas City.

Red Sox 5 Twins 3
Luis Tiant allowed 10 hits but went the distance for his fifth straight victory and seventh of the season behind an 11-hit Boston attack which included Tommy Harper's second homer of the year.

Run-scoring singles by Rico Petrocelli and Carlton Fisk gave the Red Sox a 2-1 lead in the fourth inning and they never trailed thereafter. Dave Goltz suffered the loss.

Angels 6 Brewers 5
Joe Lahoud's two-run homer in the ninth lifted the Angels to their win in a rain-delayed game which took 4 1/2 hours to play. Lee Stanton opened the Angels' ninth with a single and Lahoud connected for his homer off Eduardo Rodriguez with two out. Skip Lockwood was the winner.

White Sox 7 Yankees 6
Jorge Orta doubled home Dick Allen, who opened the 15th inning with a single, giving the White Sox Terry Forster his third win for seven innings of five-hit, one-run pitching. The Yankees tied the four hour, 10-minute game in the ninth when Bobby Murcer singled home Elliott Maddox. Cecil Upshaw lost his third straight game for the Yankees.

Today's Sports Parade

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jim Fregosi, the Texas Rangers' veteran, was right there in the middle of the whole thing Tuesday night in Cleveland.

He says he's sure it'll never happen again.

How sure, I asked him? Positive, he said.

Jim Fregosi has been around awhile. He's been around the majors alone 14 years. He's an especially sharp observer and a good thinker, but in this case I have to disagree with him.

He's talking about the future after what happened Tuesday night at Cleveland's Municipal Stadium where a substantial portion of the 25,134 fans on hand for a 10-cent beer night promotion got a little sloppy, spilled out on the field and converted it into a madhouse.

Happen Again
I think what took place in Cleveland the other night not only can happen again, but will happen again.

Maybe not necessarily in the same place and in the same way, but somewhere along the circuit, and in some related way.

Why?
For any number of reasons, but basically for the best one I know — plain, old-fashioned human nature.

Billy Martin, the Rangers' manager, says he never has seen anything like what happened the other night before in all his years in baseball, but that's because he hasn't been around long enough.

In the very ballpark he made his reputation, Yankee Stadium, I saw a terrible full-scale riot develop simply because some people were being rained on in the open bleachers there. One person was trampled to death. That was in Babe Ruth's time.

People don't change much down through the years.

Riots at sports events have been going on a long time.

South America is considered the mother country for them. Maybe you still remember how hundreds of fans were killed during a riot at a soccer game in Lima, Peru, more than 10 years ago. The one was so bad, many of the dead were carried out of the stadium by their friends.

Psychologists claim many of the riots frequently result from the fact that fans have a way of identifying with the athletes. The fans begin thinking of themselves as actually being these athletes they're watching and then look around for some other fan to compete against.

Generally, these feelings come out in the form of competitive hostility wherein Fan A throws a punch at Fan B. Before you know it there's a fight, and with thousands of others around, if the fight gets out of hand, it can easily grow into something very close to a riot. Add some beer, and you've got more trouble yet.

So Positive
But let's listen to Jim Fregosi and what makes him so positive there'll never be a repetition of Tuesday night's trouble.

"A number of things created what happened and I don't think these same things will ever again come to a point in exactly the way they did this time," he says. "Number one was the fight we had with the Cleveland players in Texas. It was built up by the media to draw people to the ballpark."

(Objection: When you can't blame anyone else, blame the media. It's convenient and seldom fights back. Often when the media does nothing more than report, it is accused of exacerbating. But this is Jim Fregosi talking, so let's allow him to continue.)

"The second reason it won't happen again was because this was beer night, and I don't think there'll be another one, and the third reason has to do with the closeness of the game. We were ahead 5-3 in the bottom of the ninth and they tied the score."

STARTS TODAY Top Players Among IVB Golf Entrants

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Three golfers who have won some of the "really big ones" and one tour "rabbit" who had his first thrill of victory only last week were in the field today for the start of the $150,000 IVB Golf Classic.

The 147 golfers in the tournament at the nearby Whitemarsh Valley Country Club included U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, British Open champ Tom Weiskopf and Masters winner Gary Player.

And another who hopes to be fighting for the $30,000 first prize in the 72 hole tourney is Bob Menne, the little-known pro who got his first win after five years on the tour last week.

Menne picked up $50,000 with his sudden death playoff victory over Jerry Heard who is also playing here, and jumped from 115th on the tour money winning list to 20th.

The happy Menne said, "I'm not stopping where I am. It was a big break for me and I'm going to take advantage of it. I have all the confidence in the world now and it feels like a million dollars."

Menne has a long way to go to catch Miller, the top 1974 winner so far, who has $194,506 as a result of five tournament wins this year.

"I'm making a lot of birdies and I'm rarin' to go," said Miller, who will defend his Open title next week at Winged Foot in Mamaroneck, N.Y.

Both Miller and Weiskopf, the defending champion here, like the par 72, 6,708-yard Whitemarsh Valley course, with its tight fairways similar to Winged Foot.

Weiskopf, bothered early in the year by an injured thumb, has not duplicated his streak of last year when he won five of eight consecutive starts, including the British Open, and collected over $245,000 for 1973.

His best finish this year was a tie for second behind Player in the Masters and he has picked up a little over $53,000 in money winnings.

Rangers Pick Lanier Hurler Tommy Boggs

AUSTIN (UPI) — Tommy Boggs is going to Florida next week but he hopes to be back in his hometown of Texas in the next year or two.

Boggs, the top choice of the Texas Rangers in Wednesday's summer baseball draft, was told by the team it would probably take him two to three years to make the parent club.

"I hope I can make it sooner," Boggs said. "I'm anxious to start playing. I'm just going to do my best."

Team president Dr. Bobby Brown visited Boggs Sunday and told him he would be the second man picked in the draft. As soon as the pick was official, Boggs signed a contract with Ranger scout Harry Strong.

The 6-2, 201-pound right-hander who had a 0.73 earned run average at Lanier High School in Austin, Tex., this season, is the second pitcher in a row chosen by the Rangers in the summer draft. Last year the Rangers, who had the first pick, selected David Clyde of Houston who has been with the Rangers since.

"Boggs isn't as refined as Clyde," a team spokesman said. "It's not every kid who can step right into the major leagues right away. But Boggs may throw harder than Clyde."

Boggs will go to Sarasota for the Rookie League next week. He said he was asked not to disclose the terms of his contract but said "I'm happy with it."

Almon First Baseball Draft Choice In Free Agent Round

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Almon likes the way the San Diego Padres operate.

It's sort of like going to work for your old man — you start at the top and work your way down.

Almon, a 21-year-old shortstop from Brown University, was the first choice in Wednesday's free agent draft and said he would be willing to follow in the footsteps of his predecessors with the Padres and start out in the major leagues.

"I'd like to start out in the majors," Almon said from his Warwick, R.I. home. "But maybe it would be better to play the summer in the minor leagues and maybe come up to the big club in September and spend a month there."

Jumped Directly
The Padres' past two No. 1 picks in the summer draft, Dave Roberts and Dave Winfield, have jumped directly from college ball to the majors.

But San Diego probably will abandon that precedent and send Almon to a farm club for experience. The Padres have been after Almon since they drafted him out of high school and the college junior indicated he would sign with San Diego as long as the money offer is right.

Asked what constitutes the right price, Almon said, "I don't know, but I'm not going to cheat myself."

The second pick in the baseball draft, high school pitcher Tommy Boggs, also has a tough act to follow.

After lassoing the Lone Star phenom last year, the Texas Rangers picked the Austin native as their first pick and he immediately signed a contract. Again, though, Boggs is not expected to debut in the major leagues.

The general consensus is Boggs has as much potential as Clyde but, as a Ranger spokesman said, "Boggs isn't as refined as Clyde."

The biggest gamble in the first-round was taken by Kansas City, which selected outfielder Willie Wilson. The Summit, N.J., high schooler possesses extraordinary athletic abilities but, in other sports as well as baseball. So the Royals must convince Wilson, an All-America running back, to forego a football scholarship at Maryland for baseball. But the challenge is not a new one to the Royals.

The word at the draft Wednesday was that Wilson probably would stick with football but a Royal spokesman said one of the team's scouts had talked informally with him and indicated the chances of signing Wilson were "about 50-50."

Also selected in the first round was South Carolina shortstop Eddie Ford, the son of New York Yankees' pitching coach and Hall of Famer Whitey Ford, taken by Boston.

UCLA Favored To Take Track

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The record seems almost unattainable, but in the words of UCLA track coach Jim Bush, "You never know."

The string of UCLA basketball championships has stopped at seven but the Bruins still have their track supremacy going. Bush and his club will try to make it four NCAA titles in a row beginning today in the 53rd annual track and field championships.

"I don't think there is any way I could ever match Coach (John) Wooden's seven basketball championships in a row," Bush said on the eve of the first big qualifying day at the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium. "But it could happen. We are going to do our very best to win our fourth straight."

Qualifying was set today in all but two events following Wednesday night's finale in the decathlon.

Ronald Bachman of Brigham Young won the decathlon with a meet record 7,874 points.

"I was just happy to complete the last two days," Bachman said after defeating last year's runnerup, Roger George of Fresno State, by only 35 points. "I've lost three pounds during the last two days. I'm getting ready to eat a big meal and rest. I haven't had a good meal the last two days."

Bush's Bruins are in quest of their fourth straight title against such competition as Tennessee, Brigham Young, and Texas-El Paso and although it is obvious which team Bush is pulling for, he also has a second favorite.

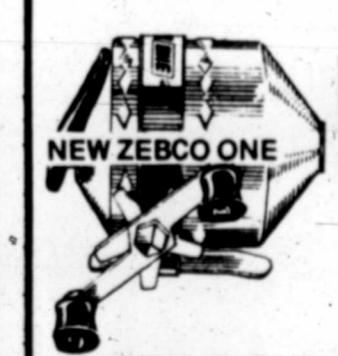

"If we lose I hope it's Tennessee that beats us because the coach (Stan Huntman) is a good friend of mine," Bush said.

That is somewhat surprising since Texas-El Paso Coach Ted Banks once participated on the UCLA team.

Remodeling an old house is a great recycling idea... but does involve a good many unusual and dirty jobs, such as boring holes in the ceiling for additional wiring, pipes, etc. You can make that particular task a lot more pleasant by rolling up a stiff cardboard funnel and fastening it to the drill bit with a wire guide at the dirt-catcher's top and a rubber band at its bottom. It's a simple idea... but just the ticket for keeping plaster, dust and debris out of your eyes and hair.

Inventors Need Patents To Avoid 'Idea Thefts'

By ARCH BOOTH
Chamber of Commerce National President
WASHINGTON — Patents are supposed to encourage invention by guaranteeing to the inventor the exclusive right to profit from his idea for a certain period of time — 17 years in the U.S.

Without exclusivity, there would be a tendency for potential producers to hang back and wait for someone else to prove whether a market exists.

Finally, there's morality to consider. Inventions are a form of property. Is it really "in the public interest" to declare theft in the public interest?

WORRY CLINIC

Naomi's sexual dilemma is widespread. Both California and New York have almost a 30% divorce rate. Which means the couples confused "mating" with the idealism of a true love type of "marriage." Discuss this case and send for the booklet below.

Alas, mating is comparable to a restaurant banquet, where the physical senses are surfeited but you don't feel enamored of the chef or cook.

Sexual union is supposed to be the culmination of a true love affair, instead of a one-night orgy.

Justice Denied
Both of these arguments are patently ridiculous.

Sex Sophistry
No, that's merely sexual sophistry — lustful and rationalization.

And how would struggling young businesses with new products or services to offer survive in competition with the established giants?

And how would struggling young businesses with new products or services to offer survive in competition with the established giants?

And it dissipates the idealistic aspects of true love, so that many young people now think "mating" is synonymous with "marriage."

And how would struggling young businesses with new products or services to offer survive in competition with the established giants?

New Mexico Negotiating For Elk Ranch

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI)—The State Game and Fish Department is negotiating for a 28,000 acre ranch in northern New Mexico which could provide some of the finest elk country in the region. The department says the land also has potential for development of trout fishing along the Little Chama River. "Our primary interest is that this is a prime elk habitat area for both summer and winter," Game Management Chief Wall Snyder said. "It would be a wildlife management area, but there is also a potential for fishing in impounded areas." Starts at Chama The State Game Commission recently directed the department staff to begin negotiating for the Sergeant Ranch property, part of the Tierra Amarilla Grant. Snyder said the property starts at the city limits of Chama and spreads north and west toward the Colorado border. About 8,000 acres of the property is in Colorado. Purchasing the land would be a "very complicated process," Snyder said. The property is owned by four individuals, each of whom has a different idea about compensation. Snyder said two want some money and land in exchange, while the others want only money, but probably different amounts. Snyder said a "ballpark figure" for the property is about $5 million. "The sellers have indicated no asking price," he said. "The purchase would be based on the appraisal value." Snyder said another problem involved in the purchase is the time element. He said an organization known as the "Nature Conservancy" may be able to help. New York was the first state in the Union to officially proclaim Thanksgiving Day as a holiday, in 1830.
