THE PAMPA NEWS

PAMPA, TEXAS

May 24, 1995

50c DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Good Evening!AREA

PAMPA — With the final bell announcing the end of another school year, children will go to parks, swimming pools, movies and many may be playing in or near streets.

Trooper L.B. Snider of the Texas Department of Public Safety wants to remind motorists to help take care of children this summer.

"There will be a lot of kids on bicycles this summer. Kids should remember the rules of the roadway and should also remember to abide by them. Above all, they should remember vehicles are a lot larger than they are and when competing for a space in the roadway, a 3,000 pound vehicle will always win," Snider said.

CANADIAN — The American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts in Canadian will hold their annual joint Memorial Day service Monday at 11 a.m. at the Canadian cemetery.

A roll call of all deceased military officers from Hemphill County dating back to the Civil War will be read, followed by a 21-gun salute.

Former Canadian Baptist minister Dinzal Leonard, a World War II veteran, will speak at the service, a tradition since Memorial Day was established. A wreath will be laid in memory of the county's soldiers, and "Taps" will be played.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A car bomb exploded today in suburban Istanbul, injuring three people. Another car bomb in the Kurdish region injured the son of a politician, Turkish news reports said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attacks.

The bomb in Sefakoy, an Istanbul suburb near the airport, blew up in front of a building housing the offices of the ruling True Path Party, the Peoples' Republican Party and the opposition Nationalist Action Party, the Anatolia news agency said. One of the three injured passers-by was in serious condition.

The attack in the southeastern city of Diyarbakir in Turkey's Kurdish region injured the son of a local representative of the fundamentalist Welfare Party.

Attacks have been staged in Turkey's big cities for years by several guerrilla organizations. The outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party has been fighting since 1984 for autonomy in the Kurdish southeast. More than 15,000 people have been killed in the separatist fighting.

ALANYA, Turkey (AP) — A gang abducted and raped three Dutch women, then slit their throats, authorities reported today. Two of the women survived.

The attack took place Monday night, 10 miles north of the Mediterranean resort of Alanya, the Dutch Embassy in Ankara said.

Police arrested three suspects. One confessed to the rapes and murder, and also said that he and his two accomplices had raped and killed a Georgian woman on Sunday in Alanya.

A Dutch Embassy official, speaking on condition of anonymity, identified the Dutch women as Marijke Van Dijke, Hanneke Adrichem and Susan Kranenburg, all from Hilversum.

City to issue bonds to pay legal judgment

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

City commissioners last night committed Pampa to issuing bonds to pay for an August 1994 judgment rendered in a whistle blowers' lawsuit brought by a pair of former police officers.

Commissioners approved a resolution for the issuance of $336,027 worth of bonds to raise money necessary to pay off David Wilkinson and Nick Fortner, their attorneys' fees and court costs.

In February, the men received down-payments of $10,000 and $7,500, respectively, against the judgments and attorneys' fees which total $327,550, plus 7.34 percent interest on the unpaid balances. Court costs total $8,477.30.

Wilkinson and Fortner, both former city of Pampa police officers, sued the city, first in state and later in federal court, alleging they were terminated in May 1992 in retaliation for reporting alleged wrongdoing in the police department. City officials maintain the pair were discharged because an internal investigation showed the officers had committed "conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline."

When the February down-payment was made, commissioners said the remainder would be paid on or before Nov. 1.

City Attorney Don Lane said today another resolution can be expected at a future meeting to authorize the city to include costs of issuance and accrued interest in the bond issue.

City commissioners also ratified another bond issue to raise $1 million for the purpose of reimbursing city coffers for money expended in closure of the old landfill and construction of a new one.

The city is under no obligation to sell the bonds, said City Manager Bob Eskridge; however, by passing the resolution, the commission enforces a mechanism to repay the city for expenses.

In other matters, the final landfill permit has not been granted by Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission and a meeting is planned within the next 30 to 60 days among customer cities to discuss tipping fees for the new facility, Eskridge said.

In other unanimous action, commissioners voted to join the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority's Roberts County ground water project. The resolution provides Pampa participate at 3.6 percent rather than its usual 7.163 percent in CRMWA projects.

Pampa's participation in the project, which aims to improve quality and quantity of water for CRMWA's member cities by importing Roberts County water, will provide about 400 million gallons a year for the city, Eskridge said.

The addition of the well water to Lake Meredith water will bring the city's water into compliance with Environmental Protection Agency standards for salinity.

Fog and drizzle cover Panhandle

From Staff and AP Reports

Fog and a light drizzle blanketed the Texas Panhandle today while early morning showers brought moisture without the violent storms which crossed the area earlier this week.

Wheeler County Extension Agent Don King reported about a half inch of rain early this morning.

"It was a lot better than Monday," he said of the storm that crossed the county earlier in the week and spawned tornadoes and dropped baseball-sized hail.

Jody Bradford, Carson County Extension agent, reported fog today around Panhandle. He said most of the showers Tuesday were in the eastern part of the county from White Deer to Kingsmill.

County officials in Canadian said today that they had received reports of a half to three-quarters of an inch of rain across Hemphill County. A light mist continued to fall in Canadian through the early morning.

Roberts County authorities said they received about two-tenths of an inch of rain overnight.

Pampa reported one-tenth inch of moisture through 6 a.m. today from the mist and light drizzle falling during the night. Intermittent drizzle and light showers continued through this morning.

The National Weather Service reported drizzle and fog across the Panhandle at 6 a.m. today. It was 44 degrees in Dalhart, 53 in Childress and 42 in Amarillo.

Forecasts call for a 40 percent chance of rain today with temperatures in the 60s. Thunderstorms are expected to return to the panhandle Thursday with afternoon highs reaching into the 70s.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms, including some that may reach severe levels, are expected across most areas of Texas tonight and Thursday.

A high wind warning was in effect for North Texas today in the wake of strong thunderstorms that roared across the area late Tuesday.

In West Texas, there is a chance of severe thunderstorms through tonight from the Big Country to the Edwards Plateau. The rest of West Texas also can expect to have some showers and thunderstorms, but forecasts called for partly cloudy skies.

The greatest chance of showers and thunderstorms in North Texas will be in central and western areas tonight and over most of the area on Thursday.

In South Texas, scattered showers and thunderstorms will continue through tonight.

Elsewhere, thunderstorms whipped northeastern Missouri and southern Illinois again this morning while the Northeast awoke to cloudy skies in anticipation of scattered showers late in the day.

Areas from Kansas City to Kirksville, Mo., expected 1-3 inches of rain today, as much as 5 inches in some places.

Class of '95 readies for graduation

Weather permitting, this year's Pampa High School graduation ceremony will be held at Harvester Stadium, according to Principal John Kendall.

Friday's ceremony, scheduled to begin at 8 p.m., has been relocated to the football field because of "hot, overcrowded" conditions at past graduations, says Kendall.

"The kids wanted to have it outside," Kendall said.

In the past, the ceremony has been held at McNeely Field House and will be held there in case of rain. If the weather looks bad, a decision will be made by 5 p.m. Friday whether or not to move the ceremony inside.

If all goes as planned, graduates will march down the 50-yard line and be seated on the track. A staging area will be set up on the hash marks, Kendall says parents and audience members are asked to sit on the west side of the stadium.

If it rains, the ceremony will be moved to the gymnasium, and each graduate will be allotted eight tickets.

People holding tickets will be allowed in until 7:30 p.m. and the general public will be let in after that.

Tickets will not be needed if the graduation does take place at the stadium.

At the ceremony, valedictorian Jennifer Mays and salutatorian Richard Williams will be honored, along with 20 other graduates in the top 10 percent of the class.

In all, 215 seniors will receive diplomas at the ceremony.

Mays, Williams and class president Marissa Grabato will speak at the ceremony. Tracy Bruton, Shanda Winton and Mays will sing vocal solos, and the high school band and choir will also perform.

Clowning for the kids

Clowning around with students of Travis Elementary School is Gerry Ingram of the Women of the Moose. She and others of the Women of the Moose Clown Club — Jo Ann Franklin, Jean Bennett and Nancy Dennis — provided fun and festivities to Travis students. The students had to improve their accelerated reading scores and the students achieved their goal. In lieu of any fee for their service, the school will be making a donation in the name of the Women of the Moose Clown Club to Lovett Library.

Prosecutors prepare assault charge against White House intruder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors prepared assault and firearms charges today against a late-night intruder who scaled a White House fence and raced toward the presidential mansion with an unloaded pistol before officers shot him.

Leland William Modjeski, 37, was stopped not far from where President Clinton had stepped from his limousine just a half hour earlier. A Secret Service agent was wounded as he scuffled with Modjeski, apparently by the same shot that brought down the gunman.

The Secret Service said the Clintons were never in danger, and police don't believe Modjeski intended to kill the president.

"At this time, there is nothing to indicate it was an attempted assassination," said Susan Lloyd, spokeswoman for the FBI.

Other police officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they were examining the theory that Modjeski was depressed and wanted to get himself hurt. The theory is based on preliminary interviews with acquaintances and the fact that Modjeski brought an unloaded gun into a confrontation with the president's massive security team. Officials stressed they had not settled on a motive for the incident.

Modjeski, of suburban Falls Church, Va., was recuperating from surgery at George Washington University Hospital where he remained under guard this morning. He and the agent were expected to remain hospitalized for a few days.

Prosecutors were planning to charge Modjeski with two felony counts of forcibly assaulting a federal officer and interstate transportation of a firearm with intent to commit a felony, said Kevin Ohlson, a spokesman for U.S. Attorney Eric Holder. Each charge carries a penalty of up to 10 years in prison.

A federal magistrate has scheduled a hearing at 1:45 p.m.

Jokingly calling it "just another day at the White House," Clinton shrugged off the incident, according to his press secretary, Mike McCurry.

"We were never in any danger," Clinton told McCurry. "The service did a great job."

Officials said they had no immediate indication of motivation but McCurry raised the possibility that all the recent attention to White House security might prompt people to attempt "foolish things."

Factory orders plunge 4 percent in WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for big-ticket durable goods plunged 4 percent in April, the third straight decline and the biggest drop in more than three years.

Today's surprising decrease, far larger than most analysts expected, is further evidence of an economic slowdown as consumers scale back purchases of interest-sensitive items expected to last at least three years.

The Commerce Department said that the steep decline — the biggest since a 5.4 percent decrease in December 1991 — was led by a 9.3 percent drop in transportation orders as demand for new cars dwindled.

The Federal Reserve left rates unchanged Tuesday amid mounting data showing that economic growth is easing. The central bank has doubled its benchmark short-term interest rate, from 3 percent to 6 percent, but has left the rate unchanged now for nearly four months.

Orders for durable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $156.5 billion, down $6.5 billion from March. Still, new orders are 10 percent higher than the same period a year ago.

Durable goods orders fell 0.2 percent in March — revised downward from a previously estimated 0.6 percent gain. In February, orders fell 0.7 percent after climbing for three straight months.

Durable goods include such items as cars, computers and appliances that often suffer a drop in sales as interest rates climb. They are particularly sensitive to interest-rate changes because they often are purchased on credit.

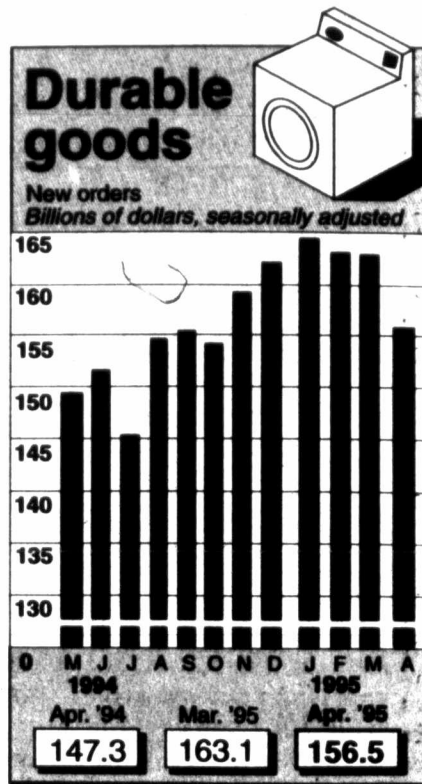

Consumer spending has slowed dramatically from last year's peak. And even business investment in factories and equipment tailed off in April, as orders fell 4.2 percent for the first decline since December.

A drop in aircraft demand also contributed to the fall-off in highly volatile transportation goods in April, the Commerce Department said. Excluding transportation, durable goods orders fell 2.3 percent after gaining 0.7 percent in March.

Orders for defense equipment fell 24.6 percent in April. Excluding military goods, orders were down 3 percent last month after slipping 0.4 percent in March.

Demand for the big-ticket goods also is a key barometer of manufacturing plans, with decreased orders often leading to production cuts and layoffs.

Orders for non-defense capital goods excluding aircraft fell 4.9 percent in April after rising 3.8 percent the previous month. These orders often are a barometer of business plans to expand and modernize. Unfilled orders fell 0.4 percent last month, after a 0.3 percent increase.

The orders backlog is considered a measure of whether current facilities and manpower are able to keep up with demand. Declines can point to smaller production lines and fewer jobs.

Shipments in April fell 2.1 percent, the first decline in six months.

Counsel named to investigate Cisneros

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former federal and state prosecutor was named independent counsel today to investigate whether Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros committed a crime by misleading the FBI about payments to his former mistress.

David M. Barrett, 58, was appointed by a special three-judge court acting at the request of Attorney General Janet Reno under the independent counsel law that governs criminal investigations of high-ranking executive branch officials.

"Information provided by Secretary Cisneros concerning his payments to (Linda) Medlar was false," Reno told a special court when she asked for the appointment March 14. The court gave no indication why the appointment took longer than past cases, but people familiar with the case have said a number of lawyers who were approached took themselves out of consideration because they did legal work involving Cisneros' department.

The court gave Barrett exactly the jurisdiction Reno requested: to see if Cisneros committed any federal felony "by making false statements with respect to his past payments to Linda Medlar to the FBI during the course of his background investigation or conspiring with others to do so." Barrett is now in private practice here with the small firm of Barrett & Schuler, which, in addition to a general practice, also does housing and urban development law.

In 1981, the Reagan administration briefly considered naming him U.S. attorney here. Barrett had headed the Reagan transition team at the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A 1959 graduate of Notre Dame, Barrett received a law degree from Georgetown University in 1965. He served three years in the Navy.

Cisneros has denied he committed any crime and has vowed to remain in office during the investigation. Barrett will be the third independent counsel investigating top Clinton administration officials; Reno has sought appointment of a fourth to look into the personal finances of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown.

Kenneth Starr is looking at the president's financial and political affairs as governor of Arkansas, and Donald Smaltz is examining former Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy's acceptance of gifts from businesses regulated by his department.

During the FBI background check before his nomination, Cisneros acknowledged his affair with Medlar and that he had been paying her. "However, he also stated to the FBI that he had paid her no more than $2,500 at a time and no more than $10,000 a year," Reno wrote.

"In fact, he paid her more than $2,500 at various times, and his total annual payments to her were between $42,000 and $60,000," Reno wrote. She added that Cisneros gave his statement to the FBI soon after he made a payment "substantially larger than $2,500."

The payments began in 1990 and ended in 1993. She now says they totaled more than $200,000; a figure he now does not dispute, citing poor records. Medlar sued Cisneros for $256,000, claiming he promised to pay her $4,000 a month until her teen-age daughter graduated from college. She settled with Cisneros last Friday for $49,000. She agreed to refrain from further public comment about her claims.

Arena bill sent back to House committee

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to allow tax dollars to be used for building professional sports facilities has struck out in the Texas House.

The bill had been scheduled for debate Tuesday but was sent back to committee on a procedural tactic employed by a legislator who said the measure amounted to corporate welfare.

The action may have killed the bill for the legislative session, which ends Monday. However, supporters said they weren't ready to give up yet. "This is the clutch Capitol," said Gary Bradley, part owner of the Houston Rockets, which has been lobbying for the bill along with other professional sports franchises in Texas.

Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, the bill's author, said he would continue working to try to get the bill passed. "It's not dead yet," he said.

The measure has been approved by the Senate but still requires House passage.

The bill would allow cities to create sports enterprise zones with governing authorities empowered to construct or renovate 10 sports facility projects.

The authorities would be eligible for rebates of certain state and local taxes for up to 30 years.

The bill has been backed by the NFL's Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers; the NBA's Dallas Mavericks, Houston Rockets and San Antonio Spurs; and the NHL's Dallas Stars.

Bush makes first official visit to Mexico

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Economic development, not drought, is the theme of a conference that will bring together President Ernesto Zedillo, Texas Gov. George W. Bush and the governors of four bone-dry Mexican states.

"It's really a signal that Texas wants to work closely with Mexican leaders to try to foster as good of ties as we possibly can so that if opportunities arise we can collectively take advantage of them," Bush said.

"And if there are problems we can work them out," he added. "A big problem is exactly what the region is facing with a persistent drought and dangerously low water reserves. Bush spokesman Ray Sullivan said the water issue is not on the agenda of the conference in Matamoros but "that doesn't mean it won't come up."

The 6th Cuatro Caminos International Conference, beginning today, is designed to strengthen economic links among Texas and the four states on its southern border.

"We are looking specifically for developing more suppliers from the Mexican side and the (Rio Grande) Valley for the maquiladora industry," Matamoros Mayor Tomas Yarrington Rubalcava said.

Maquiladoras are the mostly U.S.-owned assembly plants that enjoy tax advantages and cheap labor in Mexico. The majority of maquiladoras are along the 2,000-mile border.

The conference is expected to draw business leaders from both countries and members of Zedillo's cabinet. Zedillo is scheduled to inaugurate the event this afternoon at the city's convention center.

The governors of four states hard hit by drought are scheduled to attend: Manuel Cavazos Lerma of Tamaulipas, Rogelio Montemayor Seguy of Coahuila, Francisco Barrio Terrazas of Chihuahua and Socrates Rizzo Garcia of Nuevo Leon.

Bush has opposed Mexico's request for a 26 billion gallon loan of Texas' Rio Grande water reserves to help Mexican farmers along the border, saying it would lead to irrigation cutbacks that would cause huge agricultural losses in Texas.

The U.S. State Department recently rejected Mexico's request.

Mexico has used up all but about 3 percent of its reserves in Falcon Lake and Amistad Reservoir, two shared reservoirs on the Rio Grande. Texas still has about half its reserves left, believed to be enough to last through the end of the year.

"Before we loan water to Mexico, I believe that Texas farmers and ranchers must sign off on the agreement because it's their property," Bush said.

Texas House approves grand jury secrecy bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation aimed at tightening the secrecy of grand jury proceedings has been tentatively approved by the Texas House.

The bill by Rep. Robert Talton, R-Pasadena, would prohibit the disclosure of information about grand jury proceedings and make it illegal for the media to report such information.

The measure, which already has passed the Senate, was tentatively approved in the House Tuesday. It still faces a final House vote.

Under current law, it is illegal for any grand juror, bailiff or witness to divulge anything that transpires within a grand jury hearing.

Talton's bill would make it illegal for anyone, including prosecutors, to disclose grand jury information. Offenders would be subject to a fine of up to $500 and imprisonment of up to 30 days.

Supporters say the bill is needed to maintain the integrity of grand jury proceedings.

They cite the grand jury investigation of Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison in 1993. The Dallas Observer printed a story about the case last year based on excerpts of grand jury testimony obtained by a reporter after visiting Democratic Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's office.

Earle has denied ever releasing grand jury information on the case.

Mrs. Hutchison had been indicted on charges that she used her former office as state treasurer for personal and political gain. She later was acquitted after Earle refused to proceed with the case.

Opponents contend the bill would impede the news media from reporting on grand jury information and restrict the public's access to government information. They say penalties should focus on those who illegally reveal the information.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Group health care could be the answer

As the administration and Congress stew over how to rein in runaway spending on Medicare, the government's health insurance program for the elderly, the free market quietly has been proposing a solution. It's managed care.

That term, misappropriated by government in recent years through its assorted proposals to reform health care, actually refers to a trend by private insurers toward group health plans. Such plans save costs by directing members to specific doctors and hospitals that agree to maintain comparatively low costs. This approach has come increasingly to dominate the private health industry (some 60 percent of it) through employers that offer the group plans to their workers.

So, why not the elderly as well? Indeed, so-called health maintenance organizations (HMOs), the principal kind of managed health care, already have been making inroads among elderly Medicare beneficiaries. Health plans accredited by Medicare can collect monthly checks equaling about 95 percent of what Medicare otherwise would spend on the average beneficiary when adjusted for a given region of the country. That saves the federal government money while allowing health plans to make money by spending their Medicare receipts more efficiently than the government can. The former Medicare beneficiaries, meanwhile, get better options.

Managed care plans have been pitching their assorted benefits to seniors and are winning converts. So far, 3.3 million of Medicare's 37 million beneficiaries have made the switch.

Of course, that's still a minority and observers of the trend say its most formidable obstacle may be apprehension among seniors about leaving the faithful if foundering Medicare system. Notably, seniors, like many other Americans accustomed to traditional "fee-for-service" arrangements with doctors of their own choice, don't like being restricted to designated providers.

Make no mistake, the situation is critical. Medicare, which has paid most medical costs for the nation's elderly for 30 years, is in serious trouble. Its costs are now more than $150 billion a year and climb 10.5 percent annually, a rate well ahead of inflation and a major drain on the deficit.

And Medicare burdens not only taxpayers, but also its beneficiaries and health care providers. Assorted services covered by HMOs don't get Medicare reimbursement, and doctors are increasingly reluctant to take on new Medicare-covered seniors as patients because reimbursements are too low.

Ideally, no government funding should be involved in health care at all, but at least incrementally, moving Medicare funding to private management is an important and overdue step. Congress is even tinkering with incentives to abet that trend and encourage more seniors to choose private care.

Such efforts can't come too soon.

THE CHAIN GANG LOOK

Analysis minus facts equals bias

In 1907, the historian Henry Brooks Adams wrote that "practical politics consists in ignoring facts." The same can be said of network "news analysis" today. Much of what many Americans learn about political issues comes from these three-to-five minute examinations of the news. For better or worse, they help shape the political landscape.

Usually, it's for worse.

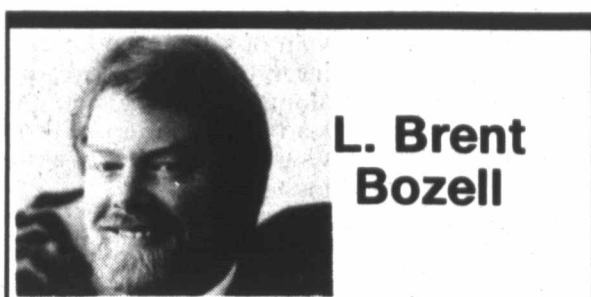

Example: How did the 1980s, a decade in which the rate of growth in charitable giving was 55 percent higher than in the previous 25 years, when private philanthropy in the United States was the highest in the history of man, become the "decade of greed"? Because network news-analysis segments focused early and often on the greed theme and it stuck.

CBS This Morning co-host Harry Smith used his regular Friday analysis - "The Record of Who We Are" - to skewer the 1980s. He opined that "the greedy, gaudy '80s are fading fast. In a few years, when we look back, we shouldn't be surprised to find nothing there."

NBC's Keith Morrison, in a Nightly News analysis, told America that the decade was "one of the biggest, most avaricious displays of ostentation in 100 years." NBC's Faith Daniels echoed Morrison: "The '80s were the decade of greed - the era of too-easy credit, hostile takeovers, corporate raids and merger mania." The slander of the 1980s was repeated often enough to become part of the historical vernacular.

How did the American health-care system, the best and most efficient in the world, come to be seen as being in crisis last year? Because network news-analysis segments trumpeted the perception of emergency.

ABC's Beth Nissen, in a World News Tonight analysis, told Americans that "without reform, only the richest will be protected from a debilitating new kind of disease - a virulent strain of worry about their health care, their security - worry that is becoming epidemic."

Her ABC colleague, Dr. Tim Johnson, in another World News Tonight analysis, said health-care professionals were behind the Clinton plan's "emphasis on universal access" because without it, "they're going to let some people just die in the streets." And, according to NBC's Roger O'Neil, the fact that a man who was sick could not get care at home was "a classic example of what Clinton called a badly broken health-care system."

The result of such analyses? Polls showed that while large majorities were happy with their own health care, they were convinced that large majorities of others were not: a delicious contradiction.

Now, those who give us network news analysis are turning their guns on Republican budget proposals. Although GOP budget rescissions have thus far been a paltry $17 billion - or less than 2 percent of the budget - network reporters are howling in pain.

John Leonard, who does analysis for Sunday Morning on CBS, compared GOP budget cutters to "a slash-and-burn Khmer Rouge." ABC's Jack Smith told viewers to "watch for welfare reform - with the poor, who need help most, getting less.

Your local symphony orchestra and educational TV - both may become history if the GOP eliminates funding for the arts. And, orphanages."

CBS Reporter Randall Pinkston, in an Evening News analysis, said that "advocates worry that if Republicans make good on their threatened budget cuts, whatever safety net exists for America's needy won't exist anymore." Over at NBC, Kenley Jones said the same advocates "are worried that cutbacks in federal food programs will bring more hungry people to their door but without the money to feed them." And this was how NBC's Tom Brokaw promoted an upcoming analysis story: "When NBC Nightly News continues: In Washington, if they cut food stamps, who doesn't eat?"

The result of such analyses? According to a CBS News/News Times poll last month, 47 percent of Americans are disappointed with the House GOP's first 100 days. Only 39 percent are pleased, even though the House GOP did almost everything promised if given control of Congress.

After last fall's elections, politicians from Gingrich to Clinton to Gephardt couldn't rush fast enough to meet the public demand for tax cuts. Six months later, polls show constant media criticism of tax cuts has taken its toll. The same poll showed half the public doesn't believe taxes and the deficit can be cut at the same time and more than half say cutting the deficit is more important - precisely the theme of network news analyses.

In their unguarded moments, reporters admit that the purpose of news-analysis segments is less to report the news than to steer it. ABC's Carole Simpson, on CNBC's Equal Time, said, "We do take a position. I think people really want you to help direct their thinking on some issues." It's not hard to predict how the news media will direct our thinking during the upcoming budget debate.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, May 24, the 144th day of 1995. There are 221 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 24, 1844, Samuel F.B. Morse transmitted the message, "What hath God wrought!" from Washington to Baltimore as he formally opened America's first telegraph line.

On this date:
In 1830, the first passenger railroad in the United States began service between Baltimore and Elliott's Mills, Md.

In 1935, the first major league baseball game played at night took place at Cincinnati's Crosley Field as the Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1.

In 1958, United Press International was formed through a merger of the United Press and the International News Service.

Clinton's speech totally misses lessons of VE day

Thank God the VE Day ceremonies are past. The outpouring of mushyheadedness about the "contribution" of the old Soviet Union to winning World War II was becoming nauseating.

President Clinton, who is constantly regaling us with reports about how long he has studied certain matters and how hard he has worked, demonstrated in Moscow that modern history is not his strong suit.

In his Moscow speech, the president recalled the meeting of U.S. and Soviet troops at the Elbe River in Germany. "They exchanged photographs of wives, children, loved ones whose freedom they had defended, whose future they would secure..."

"I say to you, President Yeltsin, and to all the people of Russian and the other republics of the former Soviet Union, the Cold War obscured our ability to fully appreciate what your people had suffered, and how your extraordinary courage helped to hasten the victory we all celebrate today."

All of the president's just quoted words are wrong or off key.

Let's begin with the notion that Russian soldiers in World War II were fighting for "freedom." Hardly. So brutal was the Stalin regime (in almost every respect the moral equal of Hitler's) that many Russians at first welcomed the invading Germans as liberators. The figure of 20 million Soviet losses in World War II was recalled often last week. What was not mentioned was that an additional 20 million Russians (and other nationalities) were murdered by Stalin himself during his long and bloody autocracy.

Mona Charen

Indeed, Stalin made the start of World War II possible by signing the NonAggression Pact with Hitler in August 1939. Two weeks after Hitler invaded Poland, Stalin invaded Poland too, from the other direction. The two invaders were the greatest monsters of the 20th century. Hitler's foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, after a visit to the Kremlin, described his Soviet allies well, saying, "It felt like being ... among my Nazi friends."

In the period after the signing of the Hitler/Stalin pact until Hitler invaded Russia in 1941, communist parties the world over (including the CPUSA) overnight reversed their anti-Nazi stance and warmly embraced peace with Germany. The Soviet Union cheerfully supplied the Hitler war machine with a million tons of grain, 900,000 tons of oil, iron ore, manganese and cotton.

Hitler had never intended the pact to be anything other than a stopgap. Not so Stalin. As Paul Johnson notes dryly in Modern Times, the man who trusted no one chose to trust Hitler. Despite numerous warnings both from his own spies and from the United States and Britain that Hitler was planning to attack Russia, Stalin refused to believe it or to take precautions.

When Operation Barbarossa was unleashed in June 1941, Stalin's orders to Russian troops forbade them to return fire. Stalin then suffered some sort of nervous collapse and was not heard from for two weeks.

Ordinary Russian soldiers were trapped between two jaws. In front of them were the murderous and fanatical Nazis. Behind them were the SMERSH ("death to spies") forces of Stalin, with orders to shoot anyone who attempted to retreat at any time. Even becoming a prisoner of war was considered by Stalin to be an act of treason. More than 2 million Soviet prisoners of war were shot or sent to the Gulag at war's end, and their families were subject to long prison terms as well (see Martin Malia, The Soviet Tragedy).

President Clinton urges that the Cold War "obscured our ability to appreciate what your people had suffered." Nonsense. The Cold War was fought, and in part was worth fighting, exactly because we understood so well what suffering had been visited upon the Russian people by the two totalitarianisms of which they were victims. Yes, the ordinary Russian soldier helped to defeat Hitler. But the Second World War, the worst war in human history, might have been avoided but for the treachery and evil of Joseph Stalin. What Stalin had tried to obtain through a bargain with Hitler ("influence" throughout Eastern Europe) he later took by force and subversion. That was what the Cold War was about.

The fashion industry receives a long overdue dose of reality

The fashion tacks at a recent New York City show weren't as confident as they had been in years past. The tone was somber, chastened. Gone were the predictions that American women would soon be stumbling around on spike heels, or draping themselves in waif-like wraps, or skipping about in babydoll dresses.

Instead, the new fall lines had neutral colors, discreet hemlines and subtle shapes. Though the heels were still quite high, they had been brought down a peg or two.

In short, they were the kind of clothes American women might actually want to wear.

Naturally, the fashion people hated it. "American creativity is at its low point," sneered jewelry designer Robert Lee Morris to the Bergen (N.J.) Record. "This is about being commercial."

Well, imagine that. A commercial fashion show. One that caters to what women actually want to wear, rather than trying to dictate a lot of silly styles that they don't want to wear. No wonder the designers are miffed.

Because for years, designers could tell women what to wear. During World War II, for example, women became accustomed to the comfort of knee-length skirts, low heels and slacks as they took over the jobs left behind by the G.I.s. When the men came back, the fashion industry faced the herculean task of convincing women to shed such functional clothes for high heels and dresses with long skirts and small waists (read: girdles). Despite initial resistance, the fashion industry prevailed.

But those days are over. Today, most women have better things to do than fret over this year's hemlines. They have businesses to run, advanced degrees to obtain, kids to feed.

"Across the women's apparel industry, a stunning reality - that millions of women have lost interest in buying clothes - is starting to sink in," reports the Wall Street Journal.

It's starting to sink in after a three year slump in retail sales of women's clothing. With the closing of many chain stores. With the decline in advertisements in the fashion press. And with the scores of slip dresses and neon miniskirts languishing on store racks.

Meanwhile, business is strong at discounters like Kmart, where women who previously wouldn't consider buying clothes at a discount chain are snapping up everything from dress shoes to blue jeans.

Other factors have contributed to the slump. The fact that the population is aging means that more women already have the clothes they need. And the increased number of workplaces with casual dress codes means that many employees don't need separate wardrobes for work and play.

What's astonishing is that the fashion industry has been so slow to adjust to the changing tides. Just this winter, Paris designers decided we were going to return to the '50s, and tried to bring back those long skirts and spike heels. Retailers pushed slimming undergarments called "body shapers" (read: girdles). And fashion magazines like Vogue hyped stilettos.

The stilettos are the most fascinating fiasco. What were they thinking? They obviously have no common sense and they couldn't possibly have done any market research. Otherwise they would have seen the surveys, like one conducted by EDK Forecast, that say four out of five women are "totally uninterested" in wearing spikes.

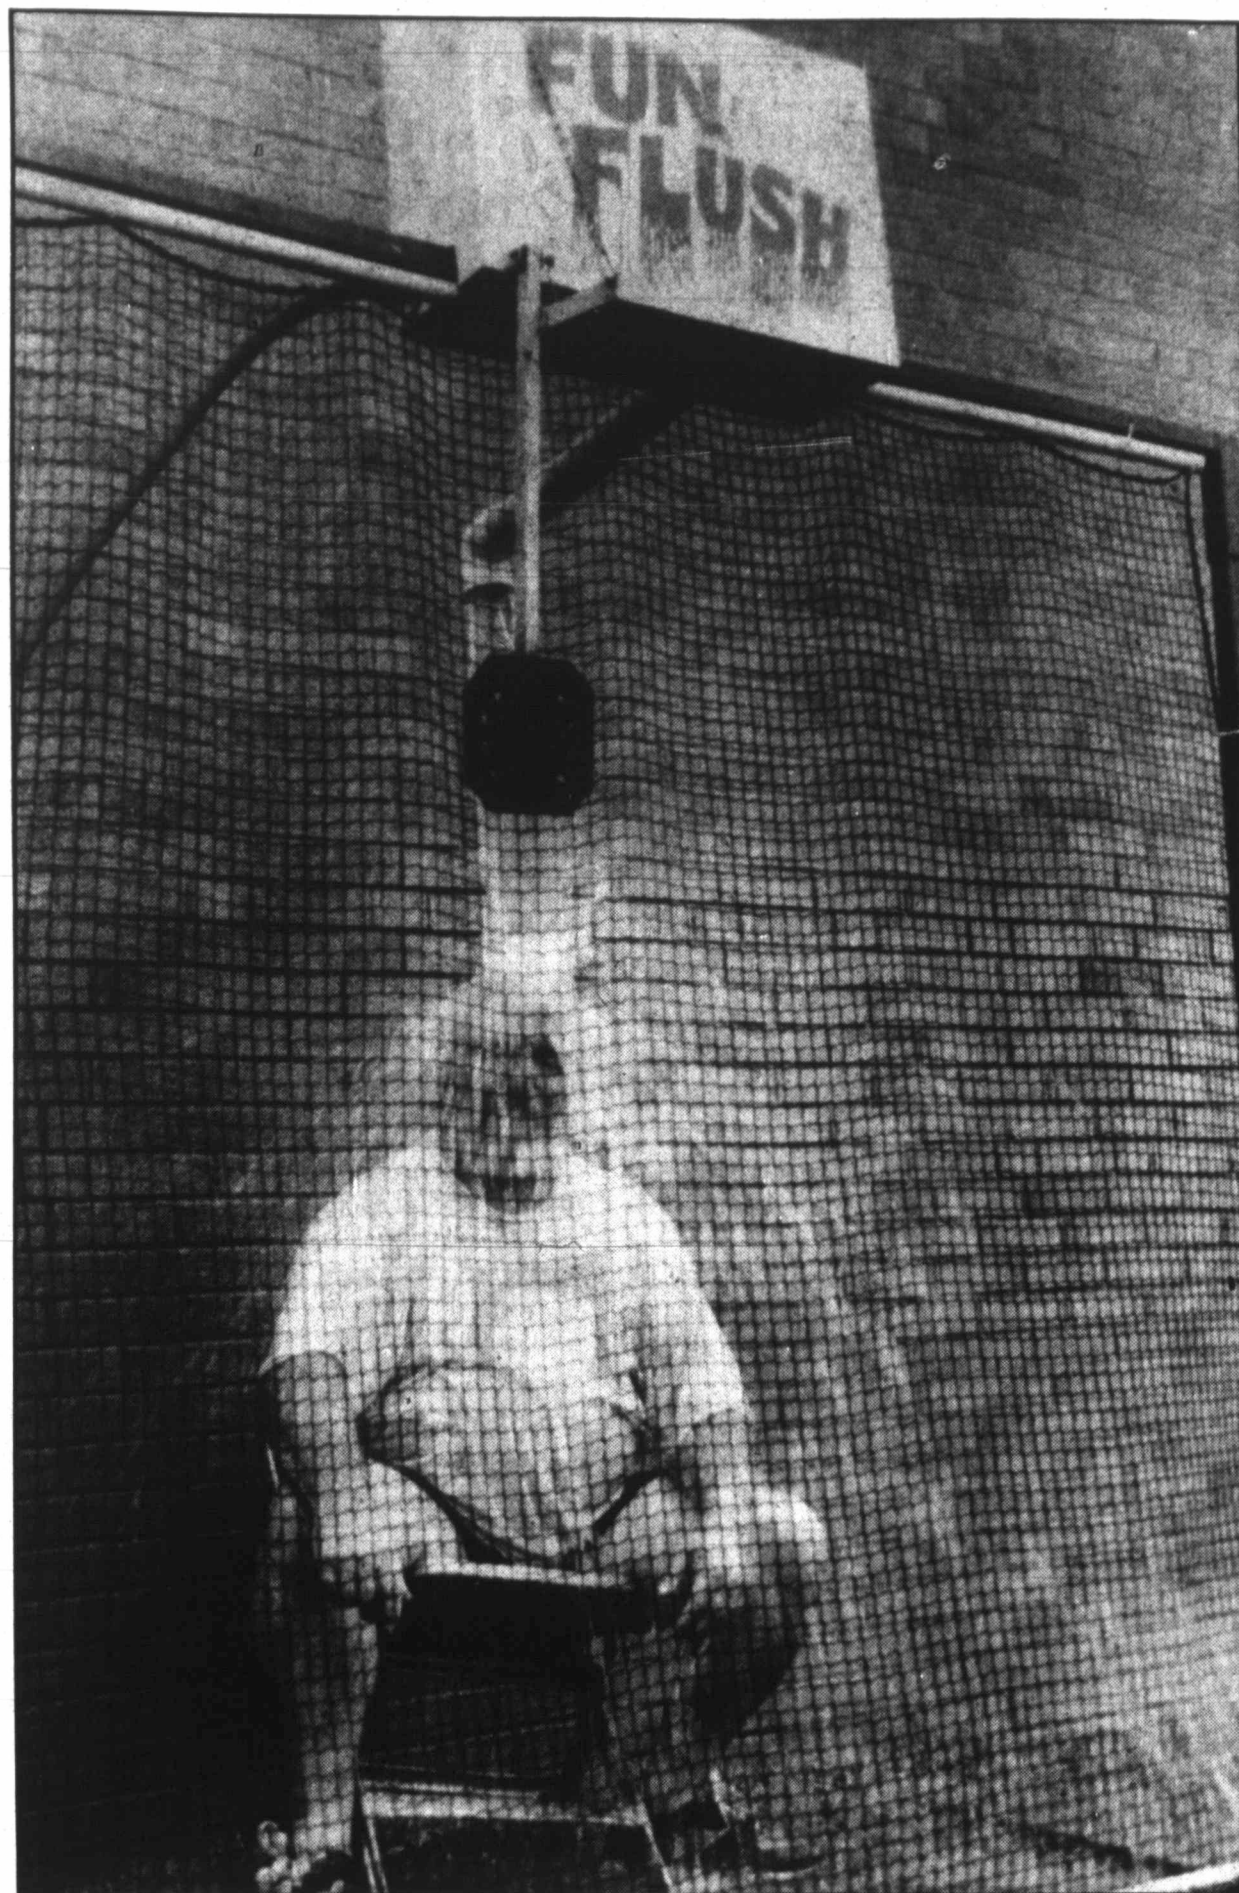

"The designers don't have a clue about lifestyle," says retail analyst Alan Millstein, who does not believe we will see any real changes in the fashion industry. "They don't design clothes to accommodate women. They design clothes to create hype for their names." Millstein says that these days the big money for designers comes not from selling clothes, but from putting their names on non-apparel items like perfume, sheets and even chocolate bars.

Still, there are glimmers of hope. Besides the aforementioned fall preview, another fashion reporter was amazed to find that the buzz word at New York's recent shows was "wearability."

Unfortunately, the great "wearable" clothes turned out to be leather jumpsuits, skirts made out of race-car flags and "spring coats that are reminiscent of the terry-cloth bathrobes you steal from hotels."

Well, there's always next season. Until then, look for the blue light specials.

Doug Rapstine, principal of Travis Elementary School, got a little flushed yesterday afternoon as students and some faculty lined up to see if they could cool him off even though the weather was slightly on the chilly side. Women of the Moose provided the students with a little end-of-the-school-year fun since Travis students improved their accelerated reading scores.

New beef product looks promising

A new beef product could generate million of pounds of incremental sales of beef. A research project funded by Texas producers results in a new beef appetizer that could generate 67 million pounds in incremental movement of beef tonnage through U.S. restaurants without robbing market share for other beef products. Texas Tech University's meat science department, with assistance from the school's restaurant, hotel and institutional management curriculum, developed the new appetizer called Texas Sizzlers. It is grilled beef sirloin steak, marinated in salsa picante. Served on a skewer with fresh jicama, it is served with sauces for dipping, according to Molly Mead with the Texas Beef Council.

"New products benefit beef producers by creating a demand for beef that had not been there before," said Anne Anderson, TBC executive vice president. "We estimate that this single new beef product will create new demand for one million fed cattle a year. Plans are to have the new appetizer in restaurants across Texas by the fall.

Paramedics Are Legally Bound To Conclude What They Begin

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to the letter from the woman who wrote you saying she was angry because the paramedics refused to stop trying to revive her husband, who ultimately died from his heart attack. (She had called 911 when she discovered him.)

I am an emergency medical technician and CPR instructor, and I can sympathize with her feelings. But she should know that once a call is made to 911, the responding team of emergency medical technicians and/or paramedics is legally bound to follow a certain set of procedures called "protocol." This protocol dictates that cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), once started, cannot be terminated unless one of the following occurs:

1. A physician authorizes the cessation of CPR.
2. A valid form stating that the patient is not to be resuscitated is presented. It is called a DNR ("Do Not Resuscitate") order.
3. The response team is too exhausted to continue and without means to transport the patient to the hospital.
4. The patient recovers.

This is set forth in both emergency medical technician training manuals and the American Heart Association Instructor's Handbook. If this protocol is not followed, all responders can be held liable for "abandonment" (having begun and then having stopped treatment).

In a home emergency situation,

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

a living will is not enough. My advice to those in similar situations is to obtain a legally valid "Do Not Resuscitate" order from their physician. This form must be presented to the 911 response team if the family of the patient does not wish the team to carry out its professional duties and obligations.

PROTOCOL-BOUND, READING, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Another wedding question: My brother-in-law is getting married in six weeks. On the response card I wrote, "Three guests will attend: my husband, myself and our 9-month-old daughter."

My brother-in-law called my husband and in a roundabout way told us that he didn't want to offend anyone, but children were not allowed.

Well, that started a big family feud, and now my mother-in-law refuses to attend the wedding. Abby, I regard our daughter as part of the family — not just another child.

I understand my brother-in-law's desire to avoid offending friends by making his niece an exception, but isn't blood thicker than water?

OFFENDED IN FLORIDA

DEAR OFFENDED: Yes, blood is thicker than water, but I hope none must be shed in order to prove the point.

The bridal couple has the right to exclude children — especially one who is 9 months old and could become restless, cry and disrupt the ceremony.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "If you want your children to turn out well, spend twice as much time with them, and half as much money?"

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: I did, about 25 years ago — and it's still true.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064-0447. (Postage is included.)

to add emphasis and impact to your words today, speak in a straightforward manner. Listeners will respect you more if you don't beat about the bush.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In tough competitive developments today, use whatever ethical edge you have at your disposal. If you restrain yourself, you might come in second.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An old friend who now resides in a distant place is eager to know how you are doing. Just because he/she is out of sight, doesn't mean they can't be on your mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An authority figure might test you today with an insignificant assignment to see if you're worthy of handling something larger. The ball is in your court.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Ask a friendly neighbor to pick up your mail and newspapers if you plan on going out of town this weekend. Do not tempt intruders by advertising that you're gone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Focus your mental efforts and energies on your financial affairs today. Your business acumen is at a high point and you could make both dimes and dollars.

Fort Elliott, which drew a bidistrict bye, has a 13-2 record. Windthorst is 11-5-1.

"I understand Windthorst has a pretty good pitcher and pretty good left and right-handed batters," said Cougars' coach Curtis Smith.

Jake Swigart (7-1) will start on the mound for the Cougars, who won their third straight district title this season.

"Jake will do a good job of pitching for us," said Smith. "We just don't want to make a lot of errors behind him."

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman is again opening his wallet to help the underprivileged, this time building an ultra-modern playroom for children at a local hospital.

The Troy Aikman Foundation on Tuesday announced the donation of $250,000 to build the room at Children's Medical Center of Dallas, the only local hospital that handles many diseases and disorders with patients 18 and under.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — NFL owners were focusing on two related Los Angeles problems as they convened for the second of their two days of meetings. One was keeping the Raiders in Los Angeles and the other was arranging for a new stadium in Southern California.

On their first day of meetings Tuesday, the owners put off discussions on such issues as instant replay and an expanded playoff format.

Instead, they promised to try to make a proposal paving the way for construction of a $200 million stadium at Hollywood Park to house the Raiders.

Owners also raised the possibility of putting a second team in Los Angeles by 1998, which would also share the new stadium. Reportly the existing teams considered for a move are the Cleveland Browns and the Cincinnati Bengals.

"I think we'll have something to present in the morning (to the owners)," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "Everyone recognizes that is a unique ... market."

"Hopefully, we can get something done."

But Cleveland Browns Art Modell warned against offering Super Bowls as part of stadium deals.

"We have to avoid precedent setting and a sense of favoritism at all costs," Modell said. "The vote (today) should be quite revealing. Hey, I'm still trying to get indoor plumbing at Cleveland Stadium."

Orlando bounces back against Indiana

By WENDY E. LANE AP Basketball Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Orlando coach Brian Hill called his first timeout 2:03 into the game. The score at the time: Pacers 10, Magic 0.

To say the Magic started slow would be an understatement. Before the game was eight minutes old, Indiana had an 18-point lead.

"It was a wake-up call," Orlando point guard Anfernee Hardaway said. "We were sitting there in disbelief, as if it were not happening. I'm sure they were on an emotional high."

But once again, the Magic showed how far they have come since the Pacers swept them last year in the first round of the playoffs. Led by Shaquille O'Neal's 32 points, a career playoff high, Orlando took Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals, 105-101 Tuesday night.

The five days of rest the Magic got after eliminating the Chicago Bulls seemed to be working against them early. Reggie Miller burned Nick Anderson for 17 first-quarter points, and the Pacers were controlling the boards.

"It was a matter of us making shots and picking the intensity up defensively," said Hardaway, who had 20 points and 14 assists. "They made their run, and we were able to make ours."

The Magic's 22-4 run came after they fell behind 23-5 and was sparked by 11 straight points by Dennis Scott, who hit three 3-pointers in a row. The rest of the game was O'Neal's.

After not scoring a point in the first quarter and picking up two fouls, O'Neal went to work, scoring 12 in each of the next two periods. He hit 11 of 16 shots, had 11 rebounds and went 10-for-12 from the foul line.

All five Magic starters ended up in double figures.

"I think we got too much rest, riding the Sea-Doos, chilling out, so we came out flat," O'Neal said. "Once we got our fire, we wore them down."

Indiana center Rik Smits, who averaged more than 22 points against New York in the conference semifinals, was no match for O'Neal and got into foul trouble early in the third quarter. Smits finished with 17 points, including a 3-pointer — the first of his career — with 46.1 seconds left that cut Orlando's lead to 103-98.

Indiana, down by 12 with four minutes remaining, had a chance to pull closer, but Derrick McKey turned the ball over with about 14 seconds left, and Indiana was forced to foul down the stretch. Byron Scott hit a 3-pointer with five-tenths of a second remaining for the final score.

Dennis Scott finished with 19 points, Anderson had all of his 16 in the second half, and Horace Grant added 15 points and 12 rebounds.

Game 2 is Thursday night at the Orlando Arena.

The burst of energy the Pacers started with quickly evaporated, the result, coach Larry Brown said, of the draining seven-game conference semifinal series with New York that ended Sunday.

"I don't think we matched their intensity, and we made too many mistakes," Brown said.

Firefighters dampen Dyers comeback

PAMPA — The Pampa Firefighters Association was one of the winners during Opening Day Ceremonies at Optimist Park.

The Firefighters defeated Dyers, 8-6, in Major Bambino action.

After three and a half scoreless innings, Dyers got the scoring started in the bottom half of the fourth as Thomas Long led off with a triple. With Jake Woodruff at the plate, Long came home on a wild pitch. Woodruff then hit a home run over the centerfield fence for a 2-0 Dyers lead.

The Firefighters scored all eight of their runs in the fifth inning as Willi Griffen started things off with a walk and advanced to second on an errant pickoff attempt. Chris Crow singled, scoring Griffen. Dustin Harper doubled, scoring Crow.

Casey Brookshire doubled as Harper came into score. Brookshire moved to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a wild pitch. Charlie Craig, Kevin Schaub and Michael Cornelison drew walks to load the bases.

Craig scored on an error on a ball hit by Jered Snelgrooes. Johnny

OPTIMIST ROUNDUP

Cortez then singled, scoring Schaub and Cornelison, while Snelgrooes advanced to third. Snelgrooes scored the last run of the inning on a wild pitch.

Dyers came back with four runs in the bottom of the fifth. With one out, Dustin Scarbrough singled to start the rally. The Firefighters then got the second out of the inning on a fine catch of a foul ball by their catcher, Cornelison. Adam Rogers of Dyers then singled and Long homered to score three runs. Woodruff followed with his second home run of the game to end the scoring.

Brookshire was the winning pitcher. Schaub relieved Brookshire in the fifth and stopped the Dyers rally. Harper pitched a scoreless sixth inning for the Firefighters.

Colby Hale pitched five scoreless innings for Dyers and Rogers also pitched.

The Firefighters record is now 1-2-1 and Dyers stands at 1-3.

The Firefighters face Dunlap at 8 p.m. Thursday and Dyers meets the Operating Company at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Reds down Astros, 10-5

CINCINNATI (AP) — Houston Astros manager Terry Collins doesn't have an explanation for it. Neither, really, does Darryl Kile.

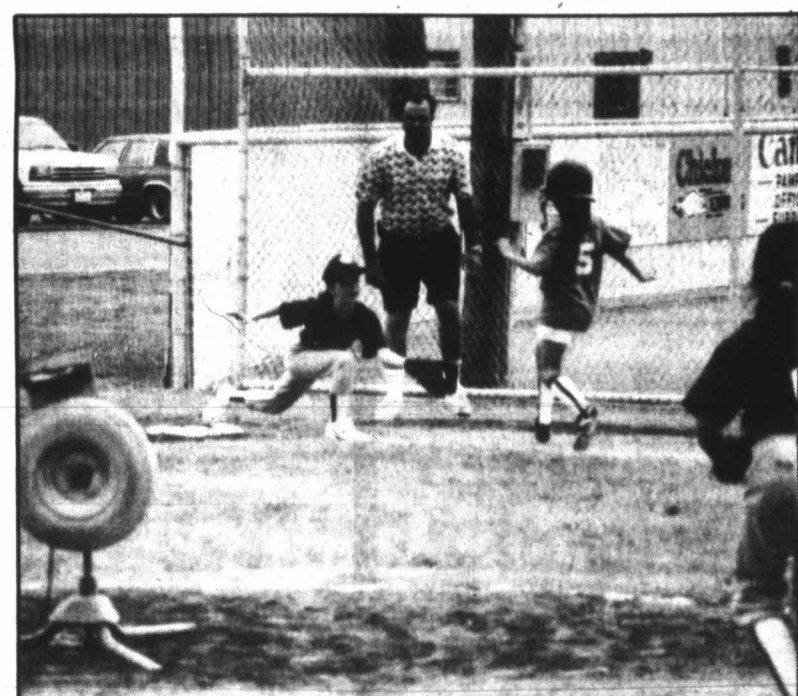

There are times when Kile can put his pitches exactly where he wants them. Then there are times when they scrape the dirt, thud off batters and zoom to the backstop.

Tuesday night was one of those ugly times that Kile knows all too well — a lot of scraping, thudding and zooming.

Kile gave up seven walks, hit two batters and threw two wild pitches to help the Cincinnati Reds pull away for a 10-5 victory over the Houston Astros. No matter what he did, Kile (1-3) just couldn't throw a strike when he needed one.

"Sometimes I don't let myself do it," he said. "I think I start speeding things up. I start working faster and faster and faster. There's a fine line between working fast and working too fast."

De Ferran making debut in Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It is with a touch of shock and sadness that Gil de Ferran will be one of six rookies starting Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

De Ferran, one of five Brazilians in the 33-car field, is thinking about countryman Emerson Fittipaldi this week. There is a Fittipaldi in the race, but it's Christian Fittipaldi, nephew of the two-time Indy 500 champion.

Emerson, a member of the elite Penske team that has dominated the sport for almost two decades, was bumped from the starting field in the closing minutes of Sunday's final day of qualifying. The other member of the Penske team, two-time champion Al Unser Jr., never even made it into the starting field. He is the first defending champion to fail to qualify for the race.

"It was a big shock that he's not in the race," de Ferran said of Fittipaldi. "And an Indy 500 without an Unser, it just goes to show how difficult this race is. Qualifying is a very difficult procedure. And it's a real sad moment for me that Emerson is not in the race."

De Ferran, 27, is making his debut on the Indy-car circuit this year and he said Fittipaldi has been an inspiration to him.

"I have always been a great fan of him since I was a kid."

Another driver from Brazil, Andre Ribeiro, was honored Tuesday during the traditional "Fastest Rookie" luncheon. He received $5,000 for qualifying at 226.495 mph in a field averaging 226.912.

"Even though this is my first start at Indy, I know the key to success is to be relaxed, get as much rest as possible and not try to win the race on the first lap," Ribeiro said.

He's been listening to a lot of advise this month, from veteran drivers who compete with him and members of the Tasman Motorsports team that has been working on the Honda-powered Reynard he qualified.

"Everybody here has been very friendly, rookie drivers and the experienced ones."

Whitewater grand jury hears testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whitewater prosecutors are assembling evidence before a federal grand jury about White House resistance to an investigation of Vincent Foster's death, sources familiar with the proceedings say.

U.S. Park Police detective Pete Markland testified for an hour about how White House lawyers rebuffed his efforts to search Foster's White House office in the days after the deputy White House counsel's body was found in a Northern Virginia park on July 20, 1993, the sources said.

Also testifying was a Secret Service inspector, Dennis Martin, who was with Markland at the White House as the Park Police detective tried to investigate Foster's death.

Prosecutors are trying to determine whether a box of documents was removed from Foster's office the morning after his death, according to the sources, who are outside the prosecutor's office. They spoke only on condition of anonymity.

While waiting for permission to conduct a search of Foster's office, Markland interviewed a White House aide whom a Secret Service officer had spotted carrying a box of documents off the West Wing's second floor the morning of July 21, little more than 12 hours after Foster's death. Foster's office was on the second floor.

Markland has said the White House aide, Craig Livingstone, told him the documents did not come from Foster's office.

Whitewater prosecutors have been unable to determine where the box came from, where it was taken or what was in it, according to the sources.

Livingstone said recently through his lawyer that he removed no box of documents from the White House that day.

When Markland and his partner in the investigation, Capt. Charles Hume, were allowed to enter Foster's White House office two days after his death, they were not allowed to examine Foster's papers.

The White House says police investigators weren't allowed immediate access to the papers in Foster's office because some of them were classified and others were privileged documents pertaining to the presidency.

Mass grave may signal epidemic's end

KIKWIT, Zaire (AP) — Dressed in heavy rubber boots, gloves, masks and goggles, Red Cross workers dumped bodies wrapped in white plastic bags into a mass grave. A bulldozer pushed dirt over Ebola's latest victims.

An international relief effort was too late to save them, but the ghoulish funeral procession represented a small victory for attempts to stop bodies of the dead from spreading the lethal virus to the living.

Hundreds of onlookers watched as an orange truck collected bodies left outside mud huts, winding along a narrow dirt road to the old, overgrown graveyard of this stricken city on the savanna.

It was a sign that an education campaign had convinced

Zairians to accept mass burials for Ebola victims, abandoning traditions of washing and preparing loved ones for burial — a practice that can spread the virus.

In another promising sign, doctors said that instead of trying to care for the sick at home, Kikwit residents were calling the Red Cross to pick them up.

Another Italian nun who cared for Ebola victims at Kikwit General Hospital died, raising the death toll to 102. The disease, spread by intimate contact with its victims, has no treatment or cure. Researchers don't even know where the virus comes from.

A hygiene campaign in Kikwit seemed to be working.

"I am just taking care of myself," said Eric Nzundu, a 24-year-old university student. "I know how to preserve myself. Don't be in contact with those who are suffering. Don't touch them. Be far from them."

Doctors said such precautions appear to have halted the spread of the disease.

"Today we are fairly sure nobody is getting infected, or that very few are getting infected," said Dr. David Heymann of the World Health Organization.

There were few reminders of the virus Tuesday on Kikwit's streets. Women sold bread and fruit in the shade of date palms. Young men lounged outside tiny shops and beer stands lining the main dirt road through the city.

Airline makes offer, pilots' union rejects

HOUSTON (AP) — Pilots union officials say the latest contract offer from Continental Airlines falls short of what will be needed to hammer out a new contract.

The airline sent a 17-page letter to all of its 3,800 pilots outlining its latest contract offer. It includes what the carrier calls "compensation improvements" worth $200 million over the next six years, the Houston Chronicle reported.

The Houston-based airline just emerged from its second stint in bankruptcy in April 1993. Negotiations with the Independent Association of Continental Pilots have been ongoing for more than a year.

In the letter, the company told pilots it wanted to spell out its latest proposal "so that you can judge for yourself whether it is a fair and reasonable proposal."

The company says its latest counterproposal gives pilots base pay increases of up to 38 percent over the next five years, a signing bonus averaging $1,750 for captains upon signing, an improved profit-sharing package and numerous work-rule concessions.

Union officials said the offer doesn't solve their main problem with Continental — pay disparity with other lines.

"The company's base wage increase they propose in July '96 is woefully inadequate, insulting and clearly unacceptable," said Bill Borrelli, a vice president of the union and a member of the union's negotiating committee.

The pilots organized their one-shop union over the industry-wide Air Line Pilots Association in July 1993.

Continental hasn't had a contract with its pilots since 1983, when former company chief executive officer Frank Lorenzo declared bankruptcy and rescinded union deals.

Base compensation pay appears to be the primary issue at hand. The union wants a 26 percent increase for all pilots over three years starting in 1996.

Continental's senior vice president of operations said in the letter that the union's proposed "32-month contract was totally unaffordable, increasing pilot costs by almost $1 billion over the next six years."

Complex must pay $8.1 million

HOUSTON (AP) — An apartment complex where a school-teacher was murdered after it fired its security guards to save money has been assessed $8.1 million in damages and related costs by a jury.

Champions Woods Apartments and its management company were punished after being found grossly negligent in providing basic levels of protection for tenant Karen Gail Crawford, 25.

"The message from this verdict is very clear," said Crawford attorney Arthur M. "Mac" Glover. "If you are going to provide people here with a place to live, you are going to also provide them with a place reasonably secure."

Glover and Michael D. Miller filed the lawsuit on behalf of the victim's parents, Mary and Charles Crawford.

Karen Crawford was picking up her mail April 7, 1993, when serial rapist Charles Daniel Thacker grabbed her and attempted to rape her before strangling her. Thacker, 26, is on death row for the killing.

No security guard was on the property because the force that had been there more than five years was eliminated in an attempt to boost profits. Glover said.
