Kalmbach Gets Jail Sentence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Herbert W. Kalmbach is going to jail for at least six months even though he pleaded guilty for his part in the Watergate scandal and offered to help the prosecution.

The sentence Kalmbach received Monday from Judge John J. Sirica—between 6 months and 18 months in prison and a $10,000 fine—may indicate that the penalties for the men involved in the Watergate scandal are becoming harsher.

Another Watergate-related district court hearing comes today. Judge George L. Hart takes testimony on a request from Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski to give immunity to convicted burglar E. Howard Hunt and David Young, a member of the White House plumbers, in exchange for testimony at the next week's trial of presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman and four other men for the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Kalmbach, President Nixon's personal attorney and one of his top fund-raisers, entered a guilty plea in U.S. district court Feb. 25 to improperly organizing a 1970 campaign committee and offering a European ambassadorship to a big contributor.

"I want to say how deeply I am embarrassed and how much I regret standing here this afternoon," Kalmbach said Monday, his usually tanned face pale and lined. Sirica gave him two weeks to get his personal affairs in order before he goes to a federal prison.

Implicated Stans
Kalmbach has already testified for the prosecution, and a month ago implicated former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans in his crimes. He said in the spring of 1970, Stans gave Kalmbach $1.1 million in checks and told him to use them for a congressional campaign program. Kalmbach also testified that he "advised Mr. Stans from time to time" on the "commitment" of a European ambassadorship to Maryland politician J. Fife Symington—which he never got.

Kalmbach is one of 31 involved in the Watergate scandal who have pleaded guilty out of 45 who have been before the courts. Five were acquitted. Jaworski has said he would accept guilty pleas to lesser crimes in exchange for a promise to testify, a practice called plea bargaining.

Criticism of the practice grew as former Attorney General Richard D. Kleindienst received a suspended sentence, a month's unsupervised probation and a $100 fine in connection with the ITT case—and may not even face disbarment. Charles W. Colson, one of the top men in the White House who was indicted for a series of Watergate-related crimes, was allowed to plead guilty to a single count of obstruction of justice.

The critics argue that guilty pleas for these crimes which carry short sentences and disbarment may cripple a lawyer's professional future, but they also give the public an impression that such politically motivated crimes as these are considered less serious than, say, a burglary where money or jewels are stolen.

GOP MEMBERS SAY Evidence Doesn't Support Chance For Impeachment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The three or four Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee once considered probable votes in favor of impeachment are now wavering because, as one of them put it, the evidence so far "just isn't there."

"It's far too early to predict how this will come out—I'm not sure how I'm going to vote—but I'm disappointed," one of the key Republicans, said, asking not to be quoted by name. "The Democrats are blowing the case, as of now the evidence just isn't there."

He added there has been "some damaging evidence," but there are many gaps that have to be filled before he will make up his mind.

Another of the key Republicans agreed, adding: "The case is weak...it's not as strong as I thought it would be."

The Republicans' conclusions are important because the committee has already heard most of the evidence in the Watergate case itself, plus evidence in such key areas as the milk and ITT matters.

The committee hopes to complete closed door hearings this week, taking up the firing of Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox; Nixon's personal finances, including his income taxes; and his ordering of the secret Cambodia bombing.

While none of the Republicans has committed himself, for some months it has been conceded that the minority members most likely to vote for impeachment were Reps. Hamilton Fish of New York, William S. Cohen of Maine, Thomas Railsback of Illinois and Robert McClory of Illinois.

Critical Vote
Their votes are considered critical to the future of impeachment in the Congress.

One of them explained their role this way: "If there are three out of 17 Republican votes on the committee in favor of impeachment, that's enough to make it bipartisan.

Remember the Republicans on the committee are more conservative than the Democrats on the floor of the House.

"If there are three Republican votes in the committee, there will be 40 Republican votes in the House. If there is only one Republican, say, there will be very few in the House, and with the Southern Democrats moving over to our side, President Nixon will not be impeached."

Interviews with several Republicans on the committee, including some staunch Nixon defenders, gave this picture of the evidence so far—as they see it.

—"There is strong evidence that the administration's settlement of an antitrust suit against ITT was based on traditional Republican attitudes toward big business and was unrelated to the company's pledge of $400,000 to the GOP national convention.

"The evidence indicates that Nixon's 'primary motive' in raising milk price supports was pressure from Congress, not a milk producers' pledge of $2 million in campaign funds.

"Even most Democrats concede there is nothing impeachable in Nixon's ordering the secret bombing of Cambodia or his impoundment of funds authorized by Congress.

"Many of the political abuses carried out in Nixon's 1972 campaign were ordered by White House aides, but there is no evidence linking them to the President. As one Republican put it, "they've got something on everyone in the White House except Nixon."

AT BREAK-IN TRIAL Judge Grants Immunity Orders For 'Plumbers'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge, acting at the request of Watergate prosecutors, today granted two key members of the White House "plumbers" unit immunity from prosecution for their testimony at the forthcoming Ellsberg break-in trial.

The prospective witnesses, E. Howard Hunt Jr. and David R. Young, had been given immunity last year before appearing before grand juries, but had balked at testifying at the trial unless granted fresh assurance that their testimony would not be used against them.

U.S. District Judge George L. Hart signed the immunity orders at a two-minute court hearing.

Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski asked Hart to issue the orders, saying both Hunt and Young had submitted sworn affidavits saying they would take the Fifth Amendment when called to the stand unless given the protection against prosecution.

Both are expected to be key government witnesses at the trial of former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman and three other men accused of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, by breaking into his office Labor Day weekend, 1971 in search of Ellsberg's records.

The trial is scheduled to begin June 26.

Young was co-director and Hunt was a member of the "plumbers" unit set up by the White House in the summer of 1971 to investigate leaks of national security information following Ellsberg's disclosure of the Pentagon Papers.

Hunt, who pleaded guilty last year in the Watergate bugging and has spent nearly 11 months in jail, told reporters he is living in his family home in Potomac, Md., and two weeks ago finished his still untitled memoirs that will be published this fall. He was released Jan. 2 on bond pending appeal.

On Monday, Judge John J. Sirica sentenced Herbert W. Kalmbach to between six and 18 months in jail and a $10,000 fine for his part in the Watergate scandal.

Nixon Heads Home From Historic Trip

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — President Nixon ended his exhausting five-nation "journey for peace" today with a promise of economic and military aid to Jordan and an agreement to meet again in Washington with King Hussein in efforts to reach a permanent Mideast settlement.

Nixon took off for a rest stop at the Azores after signing a joint communique with Hussein, long America's best friend in the Arab world, that said the United States would continue to "play a strong role in maintaining Jordan's military strength."

The communique said Nixon invited Hussein to visit Washington, where he has been a frequent visitor in the past, "to hold further talks on the strategy of future efforts to achieve peace."

As in his previous stops in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Israel, Nixon stressed that his mission was designed to do whatever he could to bring a lasting peace to the troubled area. When he left the White House eight days ago, the President said he was embarking on a "journey for peace."

At a state dinner held in his honor by Hussein Monday night, Nixon said of his peace quest: "I cannot tell where it will end," but he added: "The important thing is that it has begun. You said earlier, your majesty, that this is the last stop."

"Let me tell you it is the last stop on this trip. But it is only the beginning of the journey for peace."

Hussein responded: "Tell your people that you go with the gratitude and confidence of the Arab people, and the blessing of all mankind."

In brief airport speeches today, Hussein praised Nixon's search for a just, honorable and durable peace in this part of the world and Nixon answered that he had found "enormous respect and affection for the United States" in his eight-day tour.

"I can say that, while the problems ahead are still enormous, while the steps we have taken are important, this is only the beginning of a much longer journey," Nixon said.

Both Nixon and his wife Pat showed the wear and tear of their trip. His last round of talks with Hussein today started an hour late apparently to allow Nixon more time to rest. He skipped a planned side trip outside Amman although the First Lady took in the sights.

"He's beat," said a presidential aide.

The Azores stop was to provide a break in the long trip back to Washington. Even so, Nixon arranged a meeting with new Portuguese President Antonio de Spinoza. Portugal owns the Azores.

Nixon will arrive back in Washington to a big welcome Wednesday afternoon but within a week he will back on his big jet plane on his way to Moscow for his third summit meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Security in Jordan was the heaviest of Nixon's trip. Jeeps armed with machine guns escorted his armored limousine. Trucks carrying soldiers roamed the city. Whole areas were blocked off when his motorcade drove by, and at least twice his limousine took back roads to avoid the crowds.

As in his other Arab stops, Nixon was reminded by Hussein of the concern over the Palestinian problem. This is presumably a topic to be discussed further during Hussein's visit to Washington.

Hussein stressed to the President that he wanted U.S. assistance in restoring Arab sovereignty over Jerusalem, recognition of the rights of the Palestinian people and withdrawal of Israeli forces from Arab lands.

"So long as Israel continues to occupy Arab territory," Hussein said, "there will neither be peace nor security in the Middle East."

Hussein said that once the occupied territory has been evacuated by Israel, only Palestinians could decide what its future should be. About half of Jordan's 3.2 million population are Palestinians.

"They can choose continued union with Jordan, a new form of federation or the creation of a separate state," the king said. "The choice is theirs and theirs alone, and whatever their choice it will enjoy our full acceptance and support."

Today's communique said Nixon agreed with Hussein that Jordan must keep its military strong if it is to have economic growth. "He promised, in cooperation with the Congress, to play a strong role in maintaining Jordan's military strength," it said.

The communique, which stressed cooperation in economic, trade, investment, scientific, social and cultural affairs, also mentioned Hussein's and Jordan's "support for the very significant diplomatic efforts which the United States has made help bring peace to the Middle East."

The delay in the start of the talks caused the President to miss a trip planned to the ruins of the ancient Roman town of Jerash, about 25 miles north of Amman.

Mrs. Nixon did visit the ruins and did some souvenir shopping. About 30 boys and girl scouts met her in the forum, surrounded by 74 columns, with a chant of "We welcome Mrs. Nixon."

The First Lady told reporters with her that she was encouraged by her husband's trip.

"He's talked to, the leaders and they don't want war," she said. "It's been a very good trip."

Crowds were friendly in Jordan but there was none of the wild outpouring that marked Nixon's visit to Egypt.

The talks at the king's white stone Basman Palace began an hour later than scheduled, apparently because Nixon was feeling the strain of his strenuous tour. Nixon was showing his fatigue and one aide said he was "beat."

Board Discussing Budget Proposals

An overview of the budget for the school year 1974-75 was discussed at a meeting last night of the board of directors of Pampa Independent School District. James Trusty, interim superintendent, said the budget session was one of several to be scheduled between now and the Aug. 12 public hearing on the matter.

The new budget lists $4,477,616 as proposed expenditures, with revenue estimated at $4,524,000.

Although this indicates a surplus of some $46,000 plus, this will be applied to deficits carried over for the past two years, Trusty said.

During last night's meeting a letter from the State Board of Control was read. It was a reminder that school officials could anticipate an increase in costs of new school buses, and longer delays in getting deliveries.

Of the 20 buses operated by the Pampa school system, at least half have clocked more than 100,000 miles, thus making the bus situation a possibly critical one for the coming years.

The regular July meeting of the board has been changed from July 8 to July 11 at 7:30 p.m.

That meeting will involve mostly routine matters, with further budget sessions to be announced.

Trusty was appointed interim superintendent following the resignation last week of Dr. James F. Malone.

The board last night, in executive session, discussed procedures and criteria to be followed in interviewing applicants for the position of superintendent.

Following the closed executive session, the board reconvened in open session, with board president Paul Simmons announcing that no definite decision had been reached, and that more information would be presented in the near future.

Light Vote Cast For City Race

A light vote was being cast in today's municipal election to pick a Ward 4 city commissioner.

Shortly before the noon hour 110 ballots had been cast city-wide at the City Hall voting place.

Voters were handed blank ballots because the election is a write-in affair.

Three candidates had announced they were seeking the post to fill the unexpired two-year term of Arthur J. Rohde, resigned.

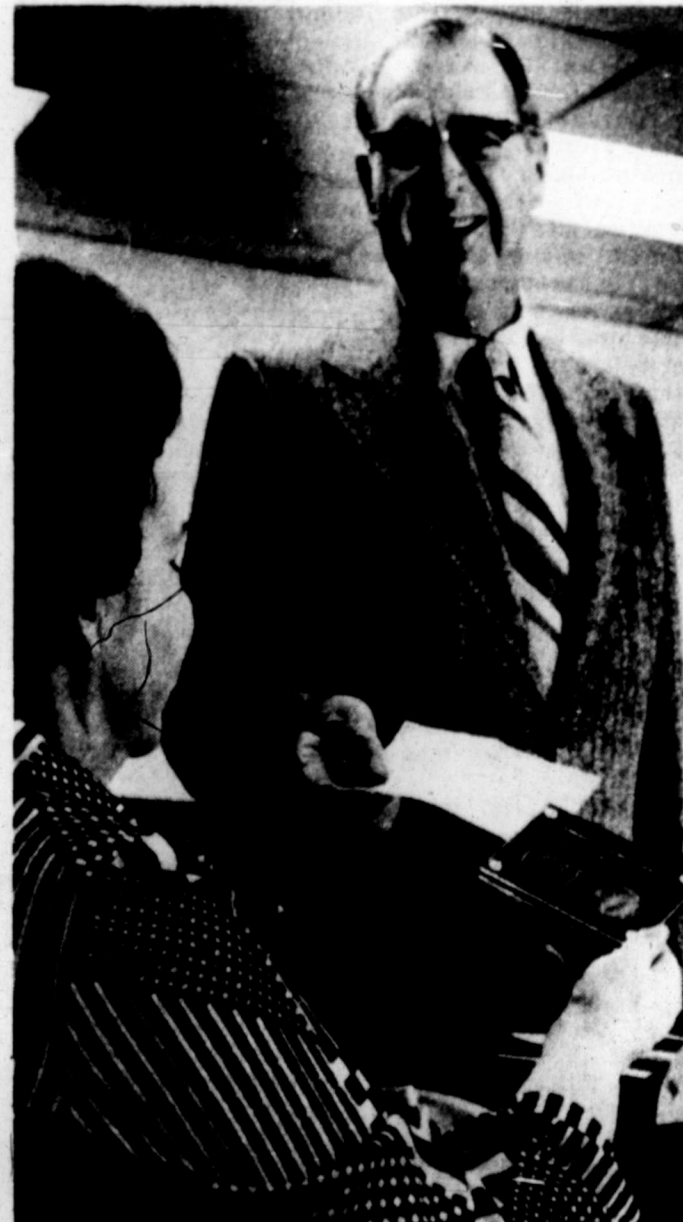

They were Kermit E. Rasco, 1009 Prairie Dr.; Linden Shepherd, 1224 S. Dwight, and A. C. Thompson, 1085 Varnon Dr.

The City Hall voting place will remain open until 7 p.m. today with registered voters in all four city wards eligible to cast ballots. Candidates were required to be Ward 4 residents.

Only 11 votes were recorded during the absentee balloting period which ended last Friday. Approximately 25 votes were registered during the first hour after the polls opened at 8 a.m. today.

The unexpired term to be filled in today's election will run until April of 1976.

Results of today's election were expected to be known soon after the balloting ends at 7 p.m.

Commemorative Medallion Coin Sales Starting

Gray County's Bicentennial commemorative medallion coin sale got off to a good start this week with orders coming in to the Chamber of Commerce office at a rapid pace.

The sale is being sponsored by the Gray County Bicentennial Committee to defray expenses of the county's observance of the nation's 200th birthday in 1976.

Overall plans for the celebration are extensive and include many phases of a historic observance, committee officials said.

Some of the projects planned are of a permanent type which will remain through the years to come as a tribute to the heritage of the county. Other projects will continue for the next two years and peak out in 1976 with a climactic July 4th celebration.

Coin orders are being taken at the Chamber of Commerce by Mrs. Lois Steward. Order blanks may also be picked up. Delivery date for the coins will be August.

The supply is being made in a limited edition of numbered and unnumbered coins. When the supply is exhausted, there will be no more of the 1974 series.

The coins come in sets of four, three, two and singles. All sets are numbered, and a portion of the singles are numbered.

The coins are of the highest quality. The gold coin is a 24-karat gold plated silver coin, and the silver coin is .999 fine silver.

Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Steward at the Chamber, 669-3241.

Wharf Blaze Destroys Cotton Bales And Rice

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — A wharf fire that roared through two huge warehouses destroying more than $6 million in cotton and rice, was brought under control before dawn today by more than 125 firefighters who battled the blaze for six hours.

O'Donohoe said the fire at 10 p.m. Monday apparently started from a burning bale set on the edge of the dock apart from the others. He said sparks from that bale were carried inside the two-block long warehouse housing 11,000 bales of cotton and the fire spread to an adjacent warehouse holding $1 million in rice.

Observers said the 37th Street Pier was ablaze in three minutes. "The fire traveled quite rapidly," O'Donohoe said. "It almost trapped the first men there laying fire lines before they could get out."

Daniel ruled that the home rule amendments were for clarification, and therefore could be adopted by simple majority votes rather than by the two-thirds needed to make substantive changes in the proposed new charter during debate on final passage.

The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Being ever grateful for free medical advice, I wish to thank the West Virginia Medical Journal for its recent examination of the news media.

during office hours. "I'm sorry, Dr. Bernstein's schedule is full for today."

The prognosis, alas, is unfavorable, but it only hurts when I laugh. The Journal said uncovering the Watergate scandals had produced "an orgy of self-adulation and self-inflation" on the part of the media.

"Look, this is an emergency. I've got a hot tip that won't keep long."

It makes one ponder the depths of news gatherers' need for appreciation and the emptiness of their callings," the Journal said. And it engenders clinical curiosity about mob psychology.

"One moment, please. I'll try to locate them..."

Well, the doctor knows best, I suppose. But while reading this analysis of the journalist psyche, I developed a nonclinical curiosity of my own.

"Burning Bush Country Club."

Specifically, I began wondering what might have happened in the Watergate case if the two investigative reporters who exposed many of the scandals had been trained as doctors.

"This is Dr. Bernstein's office. I'm trying to locate him for an emergency. Would you have him paged, please."

My guess is that the sources who were feeding them information never would have gotten past the answering service. But in event the call did come through:

"I'm sorry, Dr. Bernstein is already out on the course."

"Good morning, Washington Post." "Let me speak to Dr. Woodward please." "Dr. Woodward is in conference and cannot be disturbed."

"Too late for the first edition, the source finally makes contact with Dr. Woodward at his hunting lodge in the backwoods of Michigan."

Mountain Pine Beetles Are Creating Havoc

DENVER (UPI) — A small black insect only a fraction of an inch long is creating havoc in the ponderosa pine along Colorado's Eastern Slopes and the Black Hills area of South Dakota and Wyoming.

George Downing, branch chief for forest pest control in the U.S. Forest Service, estimates that more than one million trees have fallen victim to the mountain pine beetle in the past three years.

The Forest Service and forestry people from the infested states are taking all possible steps to halt the infestation, which Downing describes as the worst he has ever seen.

"I don't know how it would compare with some of the outbreaks they had 20 or 30 years ago, but it's as bad as anything I've seen in recent years," Downing said.

Bores Into Bark

"We've got probably a gross land area involved of maybe a million acres along the front range involved here," Downing said. "It extends all the way from Colorado Springs to the Wyoming border. It encompasses about two-thirds of the ponderosa pine along there.

"Up in the Black Hills, we're saying 440,000 infested trees this year there," he said. "At least that many and perhaps more. In the Black Hills, it's over a gross land area of more than a million acres also."

The beetle, only about three-sixteenths of an inch long, does its damage by flying on the tree bark, boring into the tree and planting its eggs between the bark and the sap.

When the eggs hatch, the tiny larvae then feast on the tree until they too become adults and move out to lay their eggs in other trees.

Conditions Ideal

"They attack kind of en masse all at one time," Downing said. "Usually the attacks are complete within a couple of days on a given tree. For all practical purposes, that tree is dead. But one of the things that fool a lot of people is that the trees, even after they've been attacked, will remain green for as long as a year."

Downing said conditions have been ideal for the beetles over the past three years.

The weather has been favorable for the beetle population, and trees have been allowed to grow in a dense condition over much of the area, making them more susceptible to attack.

"If nature were left to run its course, you would have periodic fires sweeping through the country, and this would knock the beetle population down," Douglas said. "Also, it would mean that you would get new stands of trees following the fires."

Better Managing Needed

"Of course, we wouldn't want that now. We manage by keeping fires under control. But at the same time, we have not been managing these areas the way we should to keep the beetles under control."

Downing said the Forest Service was trying to retrieve some value from the infested trees by having them logged.

"On the other hand, we're not always able to do that."

he said. "Many of the trees are more scattered or they're relatively inaccessible."

In the South Dakota-Wyoming area, the Forest Service has been harvesting by logging, hauling out the dead trees with helicopters and in some cases treating infested areas with chemicals.

"Along Colorado's Front Range, we have fewer opportunities to haul the trees out and log them," Downing said. "The main control work is by use of chemicals."

Thinning Desired

Downing said there were two methods for controlling the beetle before the infestation begins, including use of a chemical spray which still is being tested.

"And that would be a protective spray for high value trees, not the whole forest," he said. "That would be impractical and undesirable probably, too. But if you have high value trees, one approach is to spray them and we have two or three compounds that our researchers have been working on."

Downing said the other approach — and the one that most likely will be used over large areas — is to thin out the trees in dense forest stands.

"If you space the trees out, thin them, the trees then grow in a more vigorous condition and the beetles will not build up in those stands," he said. "The idea then is to get all of the forests under management as rapidly as possible. If you don't impose any kind of management out there, they just grow up and stagnate over the years."

Most U.S. mushrooms derive from a single mushroom cluster found in Downingtown, near Philadelphia, over 40 years ago, a variety known as "snowwhite." In the 1920's, 90 per cent of all U.S. mushrooms came from Chester County, which now supplies about 50 per cent of the nation's mushroom crop.

Trouble With Blisters On Feet

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our son is 15 and has recurring trouble with blisters on his feet, especially in warm weather.

All clinical tests for fungus, athlete's foot and possible infectious condition of the skin have been negative. And the blisters still come and go.

Since it seems the skin on his feet is supersensitive, can you suggest anything to help him?

—O.F.P.

One possibility, often overlooked, is a chemical dermatitis due to materials in the shoes. (Or socks — but washing usually removes anything troublesome from socks. You don't wash shoes.)

There are a host of potential offenders in shoes — glue, cement, rubber, dyes, synthetic materials, so many that I couldn't list them all.

In hot weather, when the feet perspire, moisture can leach more of the irritating substance from the shoes, besides which the moist skin is more vulnerable.

My suggestion is to consult a qualified shoe man because special shoes are available for people with this type of trouble.

In addition, pay scrupulous attention to keeping the feet clean and dry (foot powder to help keep them dry); change socks daily; never wear the same shoes to days in succession, and if possible let shoes dry longer than a day between wearings.

A podiatrist or dermatologist (skin specialist) might have other suggestions.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have angina pectoris, and when I take a nitroglycerin tablet it goes away. It is such a relief to be free of discomfort that I find myself reaching for the tablets with more frequency at the first twinges instead of waiting for the actual onset of pain.

How frequently can these be taken? Sometimes I take four or five a day. I also would like your booklet on angina and I enclose a stamped, self-addressed, envelope and 25 cents.

—Mrs. C.S.

I think the booklet will clear up your questions, but here's the answer anyway. You can take nitroglycerin as often as you need it; it won't harm you and it won't lose effect from repeated use. Your four or five a day is not by any means a large number.

However, here's something you might discuss with your doctor. Long-lasting nitro preparations are available which can be taken two or three times a day. The principal advantage is that you don't have to reach for the pill box as frequently.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 45 and for the last year have been bothered with blepharospasm or "eyelid twitching." Is there any help for this? It is hard to drive, read or watch TV. What about any new drugs, or maybe acupuncture?

—Mrs. A.H.

The causes that come first to mind are nerves, irritation of the eye as in conjunctivitis, or a refractive error (meaning you need glasses). Your eye doctor would be the one to make the diagnosis and prescribe treatment. I cannot recommend a drug to control the twitching without first knowing the underlying cause. I haven't heard of acupuncture in relation to this, either.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have read recently that dry wine is helpful for high blood pressure and diabetes. I would appreciate an answer.

—V.K.

While wine has its social values, and has had them over the centuries, it is not a treatment for either diabetes or blood pressure, and I suggest that you give up reading whatever source offered you that notion.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents. Copyright 1974 Field Enterprises, Inc.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Richard Harris—A Reformed Boy

by EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — Richard Harris, the Irish bad boy, who has reformed, was giving me a quiet interview with his beautiful bride of a few days, Ann Turkel of Scarsdale, in Joe's Pier 52 restaurant, when a man from Tiffany's arrived — with a package.

"Excuse us," said Harris, putting down his beer, which is all he drinks now. They went back near the kitchen. They returned with the bride's eyes sparkling but not nearly as much as her enormous butterfly-shaped diamond engagement ring.

"We did it all backwards," Harris smiled. "Had the honeymoon first, in the Bahamas in March. Got married in Beverly Hills Friday. Gave her the engagement ring now. They kept kissing. 'Yes, I said I'd never get married again but no other girl had everything and Ann did.'"

It was pleasant seeing Harris so chastened. There were few worse hell-raisers and so worse marriage haters. Five years ago he took some London drinking chums on a week-long spree... "a brideless honeymoon," celebrating his divorce from Elizabeth Rees-Williams, now Mrs. Rex Harrison.

Learning a year ago that Ann Turkel, well known as a model but little known as an actress, was cast in his film, "99 44-100 per cent Dead," he roared. "NO WAY. You're not going to wean your babies on me!"

Just like in the movies, they tested together, she was marvelous "and so I married her" — but not until he'd given her another test: a night out in N.Y. with Harris and drinking buddy Jason Robards, from midnight to 7 a.m.

"I don't drink," she said. "Next day they didn't know what happened. I told them. Harris smiled. 'But not one word of complaint!' He likes his women patient. 'I sold my beautiful bachelor pad in London and got two hours before the new tax laws went into effect. We'll live on Paradise Island, the Bahamas. I can't go back to England for a year.'"

But the happy reformer kept kissing the 2nd Mrs. Harris and she kept kissing him and he had another beer and didn't seem to mind. "THE MIDNIGHT EARL... Lisa Kirk, who plays Lottie in the new musical, "Mack and Mabel," was in Sardi's when Richard Quine (director of "The Happy Hooker") greeted her and said, "Where's Robert?" referring to her husband Bob Wells. Lisa answered, "He's in California and I'm here — but we're still together."

"That's why," said Quine. "That's why," said Quine. Somebody started a rumor the Johnny Carson split but they went off happily to the Las Vegas Sahara together... Jackie Onassis and son John (and Secret Service) saw "The Magic Show." Backstage John wondered how the tricks were done (and didn't get an answer)... Mickey Rooney told a straw hat audience. "The best advertising is word of mouth. If you're my friends, keep your — mouths shut" ... Frank Sinatra now at Caesars Palace added Australia to his next tour after Japan ... "Telly Savalas," commented somebody at a big "Blue Angel party for the Golden Earrings rock group, "has more girls around him than he has hair on his head!"

Church Woolery (Jo Ann Pflug's husband) and Sharalee Beard (Jerry Lucas' bride) got singing spots on the summer "Your Hit Parade" ... Sammy Davis Jr. and CBS sales geniuses were at 21 plotting something. Stanley Cox resigned as American N.Y. Hotel mgr. to become prez of the International Hospitality Mgmt. Co. operating four motels out of Cleveland.

Judith Lowry, the 83-year-old actress, said, "My granddaughter got married — I feel I'm getting old" ... MGM forecasts it'll recoup the entire cost of "That's Entertainment" from a single NY theater engagement along ... Barbra Streisand's boy friend Jon Peters' product her next album (after her "For Pete's Sake" premiere) ... Restaurateur Mike Melken bought Clark Gable's '41 Buick convertible for a mere $4,100.

Show Biz Quiz: What leading man has co-starred with both Mae West and

Grace Kelly? in Ans. to yesterday's: Dooley Wilson sang "As Time Goes By" in "Casablanca."

Peter Cook (of "Good Evening") rented a Connecticut home with swimming pool for the summer; his partner Dudley Moore'll stay in the city with the heat (and Tuesday Weld) ... At the Brasserie; Princess Maria Beatrice of Italy, and designer Jacques Bellini.

"I'D RATHER BE LIGHT TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: John Markus of London, Ohio, admits his town isn't a gourmet paradise: "The classiest restaurant we have is one that features a soup-of-the-month."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Some politicians are like old cars — too much exhaust, not enough horsepower.

—Art Moger, Boston.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Many a wife has turned an old rake into a lawn mower."

EARL'S PEARLS: When a certain comic is asked what he's doing these days, he answers casually that he's "involved with TV." What he means, explained a friend, is that he's watching it.

Herb Sherry was warned not to lead an annoying B'way character $20, "or you'll never see him or you $20 again." Sherry shrugged: "That's not a bad buy for $20."

That's earl, brother. All Rights Reserved.

Last week we made a big noise about the name "Bill." Well, not only has "Billy, Don't Be A Hero" moved up from seventh to fifth place, but also look at what's happened at the end of the list! "My Girl Bill" has moved up to place in the Top Ten.

But enough of common name-dropping. Here's the score:

- 3. "Sundown" Gordon Lightfoot
- 4. "The Streak" Ray Stevens
- 5. "Billy, Don't Be A Hero" Bo Donaldson
- 6. "Be Thankful For What You Got" William DeVaughn

- 2. "The Sting" - Movie Soundtrack
- 3. "Buddha and The Chocolate Box" - Cat Stevens
- 4. "Sundown" - Gordon Lightfoot
- 5. "Shinin' On" - Grand Funk

Among the many soundtrack albums hitting the market, there's a stand-out in "Three the Hard Way" by The Impressions. Great arrangements by Rich Tufo and fine performances by The Impressions. For a vocal treat, give a spin to Cleo Laine's "Day By Day." Bluesy and beautiful. Ian Thomas ("Painted Ladies") has pulled off a winner with his "Long Long Way" album. Also worth the spinning is Frank Zappa's "Apostrophe." (Distributed by Columbia Features, Inc.)
