Argentines Mourn Death Of Old President Peron

Buenos Aires (UPI)—President Maria Estela (Isabel) Peron, dressed entirely in black, drove through the chilly streets of Buenos Aires today past thousands of silent onlookers to the Buenos Aires Cathedral for a funeral Mass for her husband, Juan D. Peron.

Mrs. Peron, 43, her blonde hair swept back severely, rode in a black limousine directly behind the hearse carrying the remains of the controversial general who influenced the life of Argentina for three decades before his death Monday of a heart attack.

The somber drive from the Olivos presidential residence where the 78-year-old Peron died to the Cathedral marked the start of two days of state mourning in this divided nation. The body was to be taken later to the National Congress to lie in state before the state funeral on Wednesday.

Before dawn thousands of Argentines, the "shirtless ones" of the working class who gave Peron almost unlimited power during the 1940s and 50s, lined the route of the funeral cortege. The eight deep crowd that stretched the 10 blocks from the Olivos to the cathedral was almost absolutely silent.

The only sounds came from the crackling of small fires built to keep warm in the southern hemisphere winter, and the chirping of waking birds.

Woman Loses Faith In People After Attack

CHICAGO (UPI)—Help, someone call the police! Judy Widmer shrieked, blood gushing from her head.

In a state of terror, she was pedaling her bicycle through crowded Lincoln Park in close pursuit of a man who had just chain-whipped her.

But the joggers, bicyclists and pedestrians in the park only stopped, stared and continued about their business.

Miss Widmer, 25, a law clerk in the Illinois Appellate Court, figured it was okay to ride her bicycle home from work through the park. But Friday, a man with a "superviolent look" lunged into her path in an underpass and swung at her with a 36-inch chain.

"He threw it at me like a whip and it wrapped around my head four times," Miss Widmer said. "The lock hit my ear. I thought I was dead. I was a little woozy for a couple of seconds but my bicycle kept going and I didn't lose my balance."

The man grabbed the bike but Miss Widmer pulled away. He started to run.

"I'm sort of a strange person," Miss Widmer said. "My first reaction was, 'If this man comes after me again, he's going to kill me.' Then I thought, 'What's going to prevent him from going after somebody else?' I was mad as hell. He hurt me. I have this pugilistic streak in me that said, 'Go after him.'"

She chased the man past a woman reading a newspaper on a park bench, guards taking down a flag at the Academy of Sciences and a bus stopped at an intersection.

"For God's sake, won't somebody help me?" she cried.

The suspect turned up an alley after running well over a mile and suddenly, the two were alone again.

Just then Tom McNamara, 30, and another man rounded the corner and came to the rescue. The suspect, a 20-year-old who later was charged with aggravated battery, succumbed.

But Miss Widmer had lost some of her faith in people.

"It was the most frustrating feeling I've ever had in my life," she said. "People looked up at me like, 'What's this crazy woman doing?'"

Group Hears Witnesses For Impeachment Inquiry

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The man who last July revealed that President Nixon had been taping White House conversations was the first witness scheduled before the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry today.

And as the Supreme Court considers arguments on Nixon's right to withhold some of those tapes from prosecutors and defense attorneys, a federal jury listens to the cross-examination of a former Nixon aide who testified Monday that John D. Ehrlichman removed from White House files three documents relating to the Ellsberg break-in.

Federal Aviation Administration director Alexander P. Butterfield, a former Nixon aide who told the Senate Watergate Committee last year about the taping, was expected to tell the House committee about White House staff operations.

One Democratic member said Butterfield would confirm that Nixon's former staff chief, H.R. Haldeman acted only with Nixon's authority and knowledge.

Link Activities If the committee were to recommend impeachment on grounds Nixon was part of an illegal conspiracy, it would be necessary to link Haldeman's activities with Nixon's.

At the Ellsberg trial, at which Ehrlichman and three others are charged with conspiracy in the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office, David R. Young was to undergo defense questions about his testimony Monday.

Group Hears Witnesses For Impeachment Inquiry

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Prosecution witness Young, former codirector of the White House plumbers unit, said Ehrlichman removed three memos in order to keep them from becoming public and authorized a "cover operation" at the doctor's office. Young, however, made copies of memos.

He also testified that Ehrlichman told him President Nixon knew of the effort to discredit Ellsberg, who leaked the classified Pentagon Papers, and that he considered the case one of national security.

Monday, the Supreme Court took written briefs on the question of a federal grand jury's right to name the President an unindicted coconspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski argued that the grand jury had the right to name Nixon and that "in light of the apparent thrust of the evidence... the naming of the President at some stage prior to (the September cover-up trial of six men) was virtually inevitable."

White House lawyers said a sitting President cannot be indicted, or even named without being indicted. Their argument was that Jaworski asked the grand jury to make such a finding so he could ask the trial court to admit a wide range of evidence against the defendants.

Planning Gets Underway On Bicentennial Activities

Planning for Gray County's observance of the nation's 200th birthday in 1976 got off to an enthusiastic start yesterday as the Gray County Bicentennial Committee met in its first official session Monday noon in Furr's Cafeteria.

The committee is made up of all members of the Gray County Historical Survey Committee and others who have been appointed to special bicentennial projects.

Mrs. Clotilde Thompson is general chairman. New members include the mayors of Pampa, McLean and Lefors. County commissioners serve as ex-officio members.

Yesterday's luncheon meeting was geared chiefly to reports on orders for commemorative medallion coins now on sale and available for delivery next month.

Key Fancher reported that since the announcement of order-taking a couple of weeks ago, approximately $500 worth of the coins have been ordered. Forms for getting the coins are available to the Chamber of Commerce office, both Pampa banks, the White Deer Land Museum, the City Hall in Lefors and the McLean bank.

Various kinds of coins are available at a cost all the way from $2.50 for a single up to $100 for a set of four gold medallions.

Introduced at yesterday's meeting were Richard Thompson, winner of the Gray County medal design contest, and Mrs. Jan Ragsdale, winner of the Panhandle area amateur design contest.

Injured Youth Still 'Critical'

A Pampa boy remains in critical condition at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo today as a result of an accident here Sunday afternoon.

A spokesman at the intensive care unit of NWT Hospital said this morning that eight-year-old Danny Glen Downs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winford Downs, 525 Jean, was still in critical condition and that he had not regained consciousness.

He was admitted following an accident in which he reportedly rode his bicycle through a stop sign and into the path of an automobile.

The boy suffered a broken leg and serious head injuries.

A community-wide drive on behalf of the boy and his family is now being organized in Pampa, with details expected by Wednesday.

Maheu Wins 1st Round In Suit For Defamation

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Robert A. Maheu, former righthand man to Howard Hughes, won the first round of his $17.5 million defamation suit against the billionaire Monday when a federal jury ruled in Maheu's favor.

Maheu, who headed Hughes' vast Nevada gambling empire until his summary firing in 1970, waited until the fourwoman, two-man jury had left the courtroom before his eyes brimmed with tears and he turned to kiss his wife.

"Naturally, I am very happy at the verdict," Maheu told newsmen. "I certainly do feel it is a vindication."

Maheu sued Hughes over the billionaire's public statement in a telephonic news conference 1972 that Maheu was "a dishonest son of a bitch and he stole me blind."

The same jury will return Oct. 8 to hear evidence and arguments on what amount of the $17.5 million Maheu should receive as damages.

Also still to be resolved is a $4.5 million counterclaim brought against Maheu by Summa Corp., the Hughes holding company and defendant in Maheu's suit.

Jury foreman Mrs. Iona Sharp, a Gardena, Calif., elementary school teacher, brought in the verdict following four months of trial and four days of deliberation.

Today's developments, however, did not appear to rule out the possibility that a nuclear test agreement and one limiting defensive antiballistic missile batteries might be signed before the summit concludes Wednesday.

Good Progress U.S. officials said earlier that working groups had made "good progress" on those issues.

Unofficial Soviet sources said the 16-man Politburo, ruling body of the Soviet Communist party, had met in emergency session Monday night to hear Brezhnev's Replicas of the county and city designs were on display along with a lead medallion actual size reproduction.

Mrs. Thompson said Gray County has been designated as having one of the top bicentennial programs under way in the nation and the State of Texas is No. 1 in the U.S. for getting its bicentennial planning off to an early start.

The bicentennial committee chairman also announced an auction of medallion "firsts" is scheduled in the lobby of the M.K. Brown Auditorium Monday July 15.

At that time she said 30 of the four, three and two sets of low-number coins will be auctioned to the highest bidders.

The Pampa Fine Arts Association also will have an art exhibit in the auditorium lobby during the afternoon and evening.

Nixon, Brezhnev Meeting Behind Schedule Today

MOSCOW (UPI)—President Nixon and Leonid I. Brezhnev began meeting more than five hours behind schedule today, their talks delayed while aides tried and failed to work out a nuclear test accord.

"There will be no signing today," White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters just before the Kremlin meeting began.

Soviet sources had insisted all day that Nixon and Brezhnev, the Communist party general secretary, would sign an agreement to restrict underground nuclear tests. They said only technical details remained to be worked out when the day began.

Ziegler gave no explanation, but his statement indicated there still were snags to overcome.

He said Nixon conferred all afternoon with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, and also met with Gen. Alexander M. Haig, White House chief of staff, and Ziegler.

Ziegler said Kissinger had been working with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, and Anatoly F. Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to Washington, preparatory to the Nixon-Brezhnev talks.

Today's developments, however, did not appear to rule out the possibility that a nuclear test agreement and one limiting defensive antiballistic missile batteries might be signed before the summit concludes Wednesday.

Good Progress U.S. officials said earlier that working groups had made "good progress" on those issues.

Unofficial Soviet sources said the 16-man Politburo, ruling body of the Soviet Communist party, had met in emergency session Monday night to hear Brezhnev's report on the results of the summit so far. That report could not be confirmed.

Nixon returned to Moscow Monday night after a weekend on the Black Sea and a trip to Minsk, where he limped noticeably on Monday as a result of the phlebitis in his left leg.

He leaned on Mrs. Pat Nixon's arm for support when he stepped off a plane in Moscow Monday night.

Ziegler said Nixon was "feeling fine—he's in good shape," despite the inflammation of veins in the leg. The President's doctors said he had not complained about the ailment.

Nixon and Brezhnev have today and part of Wednesday left to make what progress they can on the central issue of limiting the nuclear arms race.

"Sense of Understanding" They have already, according to Soviet sources, reached a "sense of understanding" on what progress they want made by the end of the year at the stalled U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation talks in Geneva.

And Ziegler said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, in their own separate talks, have made "good progress" on some weapons issues—specifically the limiting of defensive missiles and the limiting or banning of underground nuclear tests.

In Washington, an informed State Department source said it appears the two leaders will be able to agree on a partial ban on underground tests before winding up their talks.

On Monday, Nixon drove in a motorcade through the rolling plains and thick forests east of Minsk to pay a somber visit to Khatyn, a town whose residents were massacred by the Nazis in 1943 and which now contains a memorial. Nixon left a handwritten message there, hoping for "a world of peace for the children and grandchildren" of the victims.

Minsk is the capital of the Byelorussia, whose president, Fyodor A. Suganov, told Nixon two million of that region's people died in World War II. Nixon's visit was on the 30th anniversary of the liberation from Nazi occupation.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Rodney's law professor states an axiom about female psychology. They crave poetry and gallantry in the moonlight but virile mastery in the boudoir! Note how the Women's Libbers on True Magazine's poll concurred! Send for the booklet below!

CASE A-674: Rodney B., aged 22, is a law student.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "you frequently say that women subconsciously crave to be dominated by men, at least in the boudoir."

"One of our law professors handles many divorce cases."

"And he claims that it is rare for any woman to go through with the divorce proceedings based on charges of physical cruelty!"

"He says such women renege at the last minute, for they apparently relish a black eye or some black and blue marks."

"But the women who are ignored by their mates (mental cruelty) are the ones who go through with their divorce."

"Surely women as a rule don't relish being beaten, do they?"

FEMALE PSYCHOLOGY
No, women don't want to be brutally beaten, except in some rare cases of extreme masochistic wives.

But they do crave a dominant male who runs the show, at least in their boudoir.

In fact, many wives even admit to an extra thrill if their mates are moderately forceful and rough.

Some report they require a wee bit of physical pain in order to reach an orgasm in marital union.

"Dr. Crane," one such wife confessed, "I never can fully enjoy sex with my husband until he turns me over his knees and spansks me sharply."

On a poll of career women, made by True Magazine, 65% of those potential Women's Libbers admitted they preferred a man who would "take charge."

But they also wanted a husband who, though strong, would not rob them of their independence and personality.

They wished to retain their own identity, but still claimed they preferred a strong mate who would take charge.

At the same time, 60% of them didn't consider such former little courtesies as important, like having a man open a door or light her cigarette for her.

Indeed, some of those career women felt such gallantry was a form of male chauvinism!

Despite their public disclaimer, women still prefer to have their male companions show these evidences of etiquette, at least when they are out in public and other wives are looking on!

Husbands, please remember that after the courtship and honeymoon, it isn't necessary to open the auto's right front door for your wife — except in public view!

But at least do so when you are "on parade" before her female friends! Ideal husbands are those who are gallant on occasion and also happy to let their wives run all the rooms in the house — except the boudoir.

That is the male sanctum sanctorum, unless you wish someday to find your wife has been stolen by a Don Juan.

Remember, the man who rules the boudoir, holds the woman's allegiance.

All the modern juvenility spouted by Women's Libbers to the contrary, is malarky! So send for my booklet "Sex Differences Between Husband and Wife," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Melrose, Indiana 47804. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Evolution essentially is an adaptation to environmental changes.

When our progenitors left the sea, they developed lungs in place of gills. When they left the trees, they lost their prehensile tails. And so on.

The greatest evolutionary force in the world today is tourism.

Although the human tourist (homo mobilis) is relatively a newcomer as anthropological time is measured, the species already has begun to evolve.

In adapting to tourism, mankind is gradually undergoing certain anatomical alterations. Seeking an insight into what forms these mutations eventually might take, I spent some time recently with Dr. Percival Gadding, the noted anthropologist and tour guide director.

Ingrown Cameras?
"We cannot predict with exactitude when evolutionary modifications will occur," Gadding said.

"But at some point human males will have cameras growing out of their chests."

"Inevitably, the cameras that dangle from the necks of male tourists will become ingrown as part of the torso. Nature works that way."

"I said, 'Nature knows best. Do you foresee any other major evolutionary transformations?'"

"Sightseers commonly are called 'rubbernecks.' This comes from looking up at tall buildings. Therefore, one might expect the human neck to develop a backward tilt. But no."

"Studies done by the Von Trekker Wayfaring Institute demonstrate that the primary need of sightseers is some means of seeing over the heads of other sightseers."

"Consequently, we anticipate that the human neck will evolve along the lines of the gooseneck lamp. That way it can be elevated as well as tilted."

That Makes Sense
"It makes sense," I said.

"What else does evolution have in store for us?"

"Elongation of the pedal digits," Gadding replied.

"In trying to see over the heads of other sightseers, tourists are constantly on tiptoes.

"This steady upward straining is making toes longer. Children born today will have toes a quarter-inch longer on the average than their stubby-toed parents."

"In time, human toes will be six to eight inches long. That development, combined with the gooseneck effect, will permit even short sightseers to see over the crowd."

I found Gadding's projections wonderfully reassuring. For, thanks to evolution, the human race will survive tourism as surely as it has endured famines, plagues and trombone solos.

Frankly, the way the tourist season has been going here this year, I was beginning to have some doubts about that.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

Build your very own sailboat using scrap lumber and other recycled materials.

For the hull you'll need a 20-inch piece of 2 X 4-inch pine board. Lay out the shape of the boat as illustrated and carefully cut out the form on a band saw. Drill four 1/4-inch holes as shown for the mast, two joining dowel rods and the rudder shaft. Plane or sand down the bow sides equally to streamline your vessel and shape the underside of the stern with a carefully executed band saw cut.

Make the cabin and keel out of 3/4-inch pine board to the dimensions illustrated and join both units to the hull at the same time with two 2-1/2 X 1/4-inch dowels... matching those holes already drilled in the hull. Make sure the centerboard is both perpendicular to the hull and parallel with the ship's sides.

Next, position and glue the mast on the deck and slide the rudder shaft through the hole in the stern. Finish the rudder assembly.

While you're busy in the shipyard have mom make the sail from a scrap of lightweight sewing fabric or an old sheet... bright colors are best!

Connect the boom to the mast with two small screw eyes and a bit of string. Drill holes and fasten two bolts with several heavy washers to the base of the keel for ballast... hang the sailcloth and head for the water.

Take along several extra washers in case the ballast is too light and use monofilament fishing line tied to the rudder shaft to return your craft to port.

Chronic Alcoholism Comes In Early, Late Stages

This article is part of a series on "The Progression of Alcoholism" produced by the Alcoholism Council of San Fernando Valley, Calif. The stories are made available locally by the Texas Panhandle Community Action Corporation.

This become evident. About this time come the first confinements to hospitals for the relief of obvious alcoholic ailments.

The problem drinker's dismal condition usually becomes drastically aggravated by a rough and prolonged drinking bout.

Confronts Reality
If the progress is patient rather than acute, the alcoholic need not be smug. The more subtle and persistent complications will surely come in later stages.

In the hospital, there will be no booze. The victim cannot run from himself and circumstances by the simple act of guzzling.

Whether he likes it or not, he confronts reality and chances are this makes him uncomfortable.

He must face up without his friendly crutch of liquor. There's no place to hide. Naturally, he becomes increasingly jittery and feels a great need.

Once free from the hospital, he is not likely ever to forget he was denied alcohol and received sedation only on doctor's orders. Perhaps the stay was long enough to put him in better physical condition than he has been for years.

He may even come to believe he now can control his drinking. But a few drinks will prove him wrong. He's back in the old rut. And once resumed drinking, he feels liquor can free him from reality quite easily.

Two fears have followed his hospitalization: — That he again will be deprived of alcohol. — That alcohol itself can let him down — that it will fail to provide the satisfaction and relief he must have.

The first fear sends him to storing and hoarding liquor in secret caches so he'll never be caught short. The second fear may haunt him all his drinking life because there is nothing he ever can do about it.

A further frustration comes because alcohol decreases the sex drive. This serves only to make him hostile toward his wife. He puts the blame on her. He is sure it is not his fault. Nothing will convince him that his wife hasn't collected an array of lovers. Self-pity increases. "Alcoholic jealousy" arises.

He Smuggles Supply
Suspicion, fear, resentment, frustration and remorse become so intermingled in the alcoholic's experience that his need for liquor is increased. He can no longer wait until he gets home to have that drink. He sneaks them throughout the day.

When circumstances prevent him running out to a bar, he smuggles bottles in with his lunch or stashes them in various coat pockets, and desk drawers. Yet there are times when he winds up short of the needed drink.

At last, he gets that proper head start by fortifying himself the first thing each morning. It is the necessary eye-opener to "set himself" up for a long, tedious day.

It is a short step to the late chronic stage now, the end of the line for many. Yet even here, recovery can be a telephone call away. W.R. Ellard, Alcohol Counselor, can be reached at 689-6111.

The Alex Brown Electric Co., founded in Walnut Grove, Calif., in the late 1800s, is considered one of the smallest utilities in the state, serving only 330 customers.

Dubious Compliment

The word "statement" is a popularly honored term in our language. The schoolboy vision of a great brain pondering dispassionately the weighty matters of state probably has lured more individuals into vote-huckstering and electioneering than the prospect of loot. Statesmanship is an emeritus level of politics, a fumigated degree to which the practitioner hopes to raise in order to avoid smelling like a politician.

The appeal of the title "statesman," we mean to say, is illusory. Someone once defined a "journalist" as an unemployed newspaperman. Along that line, a statesman could be described as a politician who was defeated so long ago that nobody remembers the bad things he did. To verify a faint suspicion, that the designation "statesman" was not historically an unmitigated approbation, we consulted the dictionary of dictionaries, the 13-volume Oxford. Our search was partially successful. For instance, we found that in 1602 a playwright, one W. Watson, used the term in this unfavorable light: "A gentlewoman, saide to a secular priest, if you become statesmen, and have dealings with the Lords of the Council, then I haue done with you."

John Dryden in 1681 had one of his drama characters speaking thusly: "He, in the course of one revolving Moon, Was Chymist, Fidler, Statesman, and Buffoon." In 1839, dramatist-poet

Lord Edward Lytton had a character saying, "Where the lion's skin fell short, he eked it out with the fox! A great statesman."

In 1174, poet Oliver Goldsmith minted a phrase of short duration, "Too nice for a statesman, too proud for a wit." Earlier, in the "Deserted Village," he had used the same word in a spoofing manner. "Where village statesmen talked with looks profound, And news much older than their ale went round."

We think these usages build a case that "statesman" is not an unqualified compliment. Of course, there have been flattering uses, too. In his eulogy of the Duke of Wellington, Napoleon's conqueror, Alfred Tennyson declaimed, "The statesman-warrior, moderate, resolute." As a few know, Tennyson was a bootlicker of political power, his rendition of King Arthur epics being the glorification of an elite ruling class and from such occultism our generation inherited the Camelot theme. Among the favorable mentions is the word "stateswoman" that refers to a woman who fakes part in the conduct of public affairs. One of Disraeli's fiction pieces refers to "Lady Firebrace, a great stateswoman."

Our war with the word is that its employment as a compliment serves to glorify the state. Whatever adds to the state subtracts from the individual. By definition, therefore, a statesman is the adversary of freedom.

Expensive 'Savings'

Congress is trying to figure out some way to give the little guy a tax break. Rep. James Burk, D-Mass., came up with the idea of a seven percent investment tax credit for home gardening tools and equipment.

The credit would encourage more home gardening and help bring down food costs, Burk claimed.

The proposal is receiving serious consideration from the House Ways and Means Committee. If it is accepted by the other Congressmen, approved by the Senate and avoids veto by the President, you can expect to save $7 provided you buy $100 worth of garden tools in calendar year. The Ways and Means Committee has 25 members, each of whom draws a salary of $42,500 a year, or a total of $1,062,500 a year. The committee has a staff of 25 persons, total remuneration unknown.

In addition to the committee staff, each Congressman has his own staff. Each Congressman along with staff aides and committee aides occupy office space and require office furniture. The law makers have allowances in the thousands of dollars for travel and other expenses.

Are you sure you can afford the $7 investment tax credit?

OUTRIDER

Secret Diplomacy Disquieting

By GARRY WILLS
Dr. Kissinger seems blessed in his enemies. Paul Nitze objected to an obscure point left in the Tirst SALT treaty, saying the treaty had been sloppily drawn up — but then he admitted that Dr. Kissinger had clarified the point in a later agreement.

Senator Jackson got the Nitze objection exactly backwards. He took the later clarification as the Kissinger mistake, confusing the correction with the error. In his rush to brand any deal with Russia a kind of sellout, Senator Jackson begins to sound like the old Nixon, back the days when he was attacking Democrats for the Yalta conference or darkly hinting that President Kennedy made some secret deal to get the missiles out of Cuba.

But if Senator Jackson got the story wrong this time, one reason for this is the Nixon-Kissinger penchant for secrecy. They love the secret invasion, the secret bombing, the secret trips, the secret accord, the secret deal. This lays them open to suspicion that other nations are being told more than our own people — which turns out to be the case in this instance. Dr. Kissinger told the Russians more about our plans to save our Poseidon submarines than the President was willing to tell the electorate.

All this reflects a weird view of the American Constitution. When objections were raised to the secret bombing in Cambodia, the administration answered that it was perfectly all right to bomb there, since we had informed the Cambodian authorities and they did not mind. Prince Sihanouk, however denies this story, and there is no way to verify it precisely because it was such a secret undertaking.

Yet even if the White House story is true, it does not meet the fundamental objections. The President's task is not to get permission from other countries before he engages in acts of war, but to get permission from the proper authorities in this country. The Constitution gives Congress alone the right to make war, and it says that all treaties must be made with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Raoul Berger, in his magisterial recent book "Executive Privilege," has demonstrated that eighteenth-century usage gave the term "treaties" a very wide application and that the framers of the Constitution meant it to cover every kind of agreement with a foreign power. He quotes Alexander Hamilton: "From the best opportunity of knowing the fact, I aver, that it was understood by all to be the intent of the provision to give that power of advice and consent) to the most ample latitude — to render it competent to all stipulations which the exigencies of national affairs might require; competence to the making of treaties of alliance, treaties of commerce, treaties of peace, and every other species of convention usual among nations."

George Washington, who presided over the Constitutional Convention, knew what that document required of him as President. When he made this country's first treaties — with Indian tribes — he personally took the proposed terms into the Senate and discussed their provisions with that body's members.

Perhaps some particularly sensitive negotiations must be made an exception to the Constitutional rule. If so, the President should make a case for such exceptions. Instead of that, he has adopted as his rule of general conduct that he need not adhere to the Constitution in this regard. He makes war or peace as he sees fit, in consultation with every country on earth except his own.

That is the disquieting aspect in the Kissinger diplomacy. If the case for SALT agreement is good enough to be convincing for the Russians, it should be good enough to enlist the support of the United States Senate. And if it cannot enlist that support, then it is not validly made United States policy.

INSIDE LABOR

Blacks Want Piece Of Action

By VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON — As construction wage rates zoom, black tempers sizzle. Black workers, skilled and unskilled, and their leaders, in and out of politics, on and off the industrial front, are demanding that part of the "action" go to minorities immediately.

And it won't be long before they lash out at the big labor federations. It's a matter of days now before the verbal bombardment is launched against the building and construction trades unions. Already black picket lines chop the broken walks in front of multi-million dollar projects. Some of these lines are strung by tiny local bands — such as in New York City. Some of the attacks will be heaved by the influential Congressional Black Caucus, chaired by Rep. Charlie Rangel.

Some blows will be struck by the NAACP's white labor secretary, the 50-year-old, machine-gun-tongued Herb Hill. He has a 77-page study accusing the government of wasting some $50 million on black and other minority manpower training for workers who rarely get placed. Further, Hill charges that most of the money has gone to the AFL-CIO itself and its building and construction trades affiliates.

There's no doubt that even today, with the labor movement in a political death struggle with President Nixon, tens of millions of dollars are flowing from the Labor Department to the unions. Last February, for example, the Department awarded a $4.7 million manpower training contract to the AFL-CIO's Human Resources Development Institute.

And early this month the Department handed the National Ironworkers and Employers Training Program — one of Herb Hill's betes noires — a $2.5 million contract to train minority men and women in an on-the-job operation. Such funds have poured into unions for years in huge amounts for training all the way from New York's Harlem to Alaska's Anchorage where some 50 Aleut Indians, Eskimos and blacks will be recruited by construction unions.

Herb Hill says it's all been a waste — or most of it. He says he can prove it with his huge document. Labor leaders call it nonsense. They have records of their own. Point is, says one black leader, how many minority workers has Project Outreach reached?

As for Congressman Rangel, he's hard put to put first things first among his own priorities. He's on the Judiciary Committee. Obviously he wants to get rid of Dick Nixon first. Then comes the big construction unions.

"I'm going to program action," says he. "We (the Black Caucus) may have to call them in."

Undoubtedly Hill and his colleagues will sound off long before before this — at their national convention for which they've now gathered in New Orleans.

There will be many angry voices. Many black opinions. But it is certain they agree on one issue: they want a black quota system. They want city, state and federal building and construction contractors to be forced to hire black and other minorities for a set number of man-hours on each job.

There's a lot of "in" jargon among the "manpower" specialists in and out of government. You know, matters such as "goals, good faith hiring, affirmative action, Part One and Part Two of Executive Order 11246 (issued by Lyndon Johnson), voluntarism, hometown plans, imposed plans, etc."

To the blacks it adds up to — not enough high rated jobs. They say voluntary action has failed. They charge the government has, with all its mumbo-jumbo, failed. They assert that the Office of Federal Contract Compliance has not succeeded in forcing contractors to hire blacks.

So they simply want federally imposed hiring quotas "in the place of all the talk and directives."

It's too vast a field to know whether they're right. Or where they may be wrong. And where does one place a young, untrained, black worker in a highly skilled trade? Or should he be hired and learn on the job as an added cost of construction? How does one know whether the scores of millions of dollars which have poured into unions have been skillfully used by the skilled trades?

And just how much money has been appropriated directly or indirectly for such training? No one actually knows, or is willing to tell and inquiring newsmen. Certainly the total is far more than $50 million.

While this inner turmoil is about to boil over onto the nation's hot city streets, building and construction pay rates continue to skyrocket while the minorities look on, openly envious.

So there's lots of action. And the blacks want part of it. Or they'll hit the bricks, the Congress and the big unions.

There's nothing right about America that the anti-Americans aren't doing their damndest to change.

WATCH ON WASHINGTON

Colson Could Be Key To Dean's Credibility

By C. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — If former White House special counsel Charles Colson's religious conversion is sincere, he could become the most devastating witness against the on-going White House drive to discredit John W. Dean III.

The 42-year-old Colson could be the key to explaining efforts by many more White House lawyers and public relations spokesmen to discredit and destroy the credibility of Dean, who is a chief witness concerning the Watergate burglary and subsequent cover-up.

In pleading guilty to a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice, Colson told the court recently that he was moved by a desire to "help fulfill a larger purpose."

"I pray it will serve the ultimate ends of justice — both personal justice in that I am accepting responsibility for my own crime and social justice in that this plea may have some impact in deterring others from interfering with any individual's right to a fair trial," Colson said.

"As to the specific offense charge, the President on numerous occasions urged me to disseminate damaging information about Daniel Ellsberg, including information about Ellsberg's attorney and others with whom Ellsberg was in close contact," Colson told the court.

After U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell imposed a sentence of 10 1/2 years and a $5,000 fine, Colson reiterated his desire to "tell the truth" and to make amends for his earlier disregard for the rights of Ellsberg and others by doing "the Lord's will and the court's will."

"I can work for the Lord in prison or out of prison and that's how I want to spend my life," Colson declared.

If the former White House aide follows through on this pledge, he will be obliged to tell the full story of his contacts with President Nixon, H.R. (Bob) Haldeman, John W. Ehrlichman and others in the cleverly orchestrated attack on John Dean that started in late April, 1973.

That was a week after President Nixon and his top aides learned Dean had talked to the Watergate prosecutors about receiving immunity from prosecution in return for testimony on White House involvement in the burglary and bugging at Watergate as well as the subsequent cover-up.

Although Colson left the White House in March, 1973, he retained a close relationship with the President and the White House. Senate Watergate Committee staff members and friends of Dean believe Colson was the spearhead of the verbal attacks on Dean.

Colson's story to various reporters was that Dean had been put in charge of the investigation by President Nixon. The young lawyer had used that investigating post to hide his own deep involvement from the President, White House Chief of Staff Haldeman, White House Special Assistant Ehrlichman, Colson and others.

Colson indicated he was suspicious that Dean and former attorney general John Mitchell might be pulling President Nixon and others into a criminal obstruction-of-justice, and that he warned Mr. Nixon of this possibility in December, 1972, and in February, 1973.

severely damage U.S. foreign policy. If the "national security" classification meant anything, Dr. Ellsberg's action justified federal prosecution to demonstrate that it was a grave matter and would not be taken lightly. But, Colson now agrees that Dr. Ellsberg's right to a fair trial and right to counsel should not have been disregarded in the White House directed effort to destroy and discredit him.

If the conscientiously applies the same standard, Colson must ask himself what distinctions there are between the attempts to smear John Dean and attempts to smear Dr. Ellsberg.

If there are many differences, it would seem that John Dean should have a preferred position. Dean did not leak classified "national security" documents to a newspaper.

He went to the U.S. attorney's office as he properly should have to tell the grand jury his story on alleged federal crimes involving the Nixon White House and the Nixon re-election committee.

Only as it became apparent that Dean's testimony might implicate President Nixon and his top aides did he become subject to the series of attacks by Colson, Mr. Nixon, Ziegler, Buzhardt, and more recently by Mr. Nixon's Special Counsel James St. Clair.

As White House spokesmen charged Dean with "perjury," he was defended by Senator Sam Ervin (Dem., N. Car.), Senate Select Watergate Committee Counsel Sam Dash and Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski as "truthful" and "well corroborated."

Finally, orders from U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica and Judge Gesell stopped these out-of-court attacks on Dean in the pre-trial period.

It is a crime to spread false information about a witness in a criminal proceedings in a manner that would interfere with a fair trial.

If Colson, the former White House tough guy, now opens up fully on what he knows about the continuing conspiracy to obstruct justice it could mean real trouble for many White House officials who have been untainted up to this point.

H.L. Hunt Writes

WILL REGULATORS EVER LEARN?

Still another "energy emergency" bill to "roll back" oil prices to the level before last year's shortages came before the House of Representatives recently and failed to pass by only 16 votes. This shows the difficulty of penetrating statist prejudices with economic realities, no matter how obvious.

The dihard regulators simply will not face the truth that to "roll back" prices on an increasingly scarce commodity just guarantees that it will become even scarcer. Time and again, and at vast trouble and frustration to our citizen consumers, government has tried to stop price rises by bureaucratic decree, only to create shortages. The wave of shortages during the past two years, from meat to paper to petroleum, has been primarily due to this governmental interference.

Inflation is a very serious problem, but it will never, ever be solved by laws against price increases. Inflation occurs because government creates money to pay for its deficit spending and to take the place of the gold which no longer back our dollar. As long as this inflation is continued, prices must rise. If they are not allowed to rise, shortages will result. But the regulators never seem to learn.

Still, it is good news that the House of Representatives did vote down this foolish bill, even by a narrow margin. By doing so they prevented a new gasoline shortage with the dreaded long waiting lines for fill-ups. If a person cannot make a profit in production and sale, he will stop producing and selling. It's as simple as that.

Dear Abby

Doctor doesn't care but boyfriend's kept away

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the most horrifying article in the Wall Street Journal headlined: "Painful Puzzle Viral V.D. Is Contagious and Doesn't Go Away." Then it described the horrors of Herpes 2, a genital-area virus which manifests itself in painful lesions, akin to facial "cold sores."

The article stated that Herpes 2 is approaching gonorrhea as the next most prevalent venereal disease, is highly contagious, can be contracted by males, results in infant mortality and cervical cancer and, once contracted, can never be cured and will recur sporadically!

Abby, I am a woman who has suffered from Herpes 2 since 1967, and never once has my physician evinced the least concern over it. He prescribed only symptomatic relief remedies and vitamin C, and said, "Let it run its course."

Since my boyfriend saw the article, he's been treating me like I have leprosy.

Please consult with your experts and let us thousands of Herpes sufferers know if the medical world concurs with this article's evaluation. SIGN ME, HERPES HANNAH

DEAR HANNAH: While the article is undeniably alarming, it does not necessarily follow that all the facts concerning Herpes 2 apply to you. If your doctor is not investigating the new developments in the study of Herpes 2, find one who is, and make an appointment for two examinations [one for you and one for your boyfriend]. And don't hesitate to ask the doctor any and all questions concerning this disease.

DEAR ABBY: A wife wrote to say she had found a pair of nylon panties in her husband's pickup truck, and you jumped to the conclusion that some gal friend had left them there.

You overlooked something, Abby. Those panties could have been her husband's!

There are lots of men who like the feel of smooth, soft undies next to their bodies. And don't get the idea that they aren't all men because they are. I know. I've been on the police force for 16 years, and before that I was with the U. S. Marines, and I'm one of those men. I'm also a husband and father of six.

So, Dear Abby, did you ever consider the possibility that there was no lady in the picture?

WEAR PANTIES [WHEN I GET THE CHANCE]

DEAR WEARS: No, I didn't. But you wouldn't believe the number of your "brothers" who wrote to suggest it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Can't Believe It" In Kenosha: It's true. Maria Echeverria, wife of Mexico's president, announced that 35,000 pawa tickets worth $800,000 were being redeemed from national pawnshops, at no cost to the women who held them, as a government gift for Mother's Day. So thousands of Mexican women get their sewing machines, blenders and other household appliances out of hock free of charge. Oy, yi, yi!

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3

Your birthday today: Sets you at or near the bottom of a long upward slope, figuratively speaking. There's nowhere to go but toward the better, every step of the way enjoyable and worth the struggle. The only laziness you can get away with is in the sharing of what leisure time you have with others of like interests. Today's natives have tremendous vigor, sometimes harshly expressed.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Nothing works like well-set plans, terms agreed on ahead of time. Be alert for a moment of revelation—a glimpse into deeper mysteries of the soul.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Bring family and related enterprises into more effective liaison. Difficulty arises from assuming everybody is free and ready to go—check up early!

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Keep personal expenditures to a minimum. Your budget was valid to begin with, stick with it! Share responsibility and work, make sure everybody concerned notices.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Almost anything can get you a quibble or resistance today—you needn't push it on into arguments! Your patience with delay wins you lasting respect.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: There's more to do than you thought. Plunge right in without complaint. Leave room for people in a hurry to get past—you're more likely to succeed.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Family arrangements require attention, discussion, planning. Impulse leads you into arbitrary positions from which it's not easy to retreat.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Both people and machines deserve your utmost care and caution. Mild sports, a brief round of competitive games can do wonders for your spirits!

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: For all the hullabaloo about opportunity, growth, prosperity, it's not a day for new investments or major purchases. Let well enough alone.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Nothing comes easy for the moment. You may as well lay aside all but the unavoidable routine chores, do some troubleshooting. Let people talk.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: In pushing on and on, you may overdo something. Take a good break, think on the real real situation. Then revise your schedule, and thoroughly.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Everybody is ready to tell you what to do and how to do it. Seek the middle way; tact on one hand, determination to pursue your own choices on the other.

GARDEN MUMS can be a lifesaver for the garden that needs a summer pick up. Gardeners who shop for mums such as these Masterpiece varieties by Yoder Brothers, of Barberton, Ohio, will find them in flower to provide instant color in the flower bed.

Mums Turn Out To Be The Flower For All Seasons

Garden chrysanthemums are those rare birds of the horticultural world which, thanks to decades of research, are the true year-around flower. If your garden is looking less perfect this summer than you had hoped, or if for any reason, you are planting late, let mums save the day.

Clothing And The Energy Problem

COLLEGE STATION — The continuing energy problem will bring shortages to the fabric and apparel industry, according to one expert.

She's Margaret Ann Vanderpoorten, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"The total effect isn't predictable yet, but consumers should be prepared to take some steps to ease the strain," she said. "Make sure each item in the wardrobe is worn. This may mean wearing a garment that was more fashionable last year than this year."

"Be a conservative consumer. Avoid buying items you don't really need. Clothing bought on impulse is often a poor choice. Recycle whenever possible. Update garments for another year of wear or make them over for other members of the family," she suggested.

MEASLES

No woman should become pregnant unless she is sure she has had rubella, "German measles," or has been effectively immunized against it, Dr. Barbara Sears, health education specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System said.

FURNITURE

New Federal Trade Commission guides require furniture constructed with veneer to disclose that fact on the furniture itself, or on a tag affixed to the furniture, according to Anna Marie Gottschalk, housing and home furnishings specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

INCOMES

Families must earn increasingly greater incomes to offset inflated prices and taxes, one expert reported this week. A family of four needs a 1974 income of $10,750 to equal the purchasing power of $5000 in 1949. Mrs. Doris Myers, home management specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System said. These figures do not allow for increased state and local taxes, she added.

garden will give you a summer and fall garden to be envied. The Masterpiece collection of garden mums, a recent introduction to the home gardener by Yoder Brothers of Barberton, Ohio, are particularly adaptable. They will "pick up where they left off" at the garden center and make themselves totally at home in your yard, even when planted during the summer months. Summer planting of mums has been the additional advantage of allowing the plants to become strongly established before winter.

By the time you are summer shopping for Masterpiece garden mums they will probably have been pinched once and are already displaying the typical short, compact and bushy growth characteristic of the entire Masterpiece group. By late July or August some growers may have early shaded varieties of Masterpiece mums available. These have been shaded in the greenhouse several weeks earlier than normal. If you want to enjoy Masterpiece mums even sooner in your yard, perhaps as the background for an early fall garden party, ask for these specially "developed Masterpiece plants.

When buying early shaded or regular garden mums for immediate transplanting, it's good idea to water them thoroughly so the roots come out of the pot undisturbed in a good ball of soil. For each plant dig a hole one inch deeper and wider than the root ball. Firm the roots in by pushing the soil toward the stem.

Water again thoroughly and fertilize with one tablespoon of dry 5-10-5 or 4-12-4 fertilizer per plant. Masterpiece mums adapt readily from pots to the garden bed. With care they will change environments without hesitation in their normal growth sequence. The happy result for you will be a gallery of color within a few weeks. From mid-September to frost Masterpiece garden mums glow with the special beauty of fall coloring and provide many bouquets for indoor arrangement.

Non-Stick Finishes On Kitchenware

COLLEGE STATION — Non-stick finish on cookware and appliances is one modern kitchen miracle—but it takes more than magic to keep it this way, according to one authority.

She's Lillian Cochran, home management specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"For the two basic types of non-stick coating available—heavy duty and regular—there are individual and general care techniques," the specialist said. "Smooth-edged spoons or spatulas may be used on heavy duty types, but knives, forks or rotary beaters can scratch the finish," Miss Cochran said. Only rubber, wooden or plastic utensils should be used on the regular finishes," she added.

Before using kitchenware with either heavy duty or regular finish, wash it in sudsy water to remove dust or manufacturing oils.

"Then condition the cooking surface by lightly rubbing it with cooking oil on a paper towel or waxed paper," she said.

Repeat this occasionally to maintain the non-stick finish. "After every use, the pan or appliance should be cleaned with hot, sudsy water. A plastic pad is best for cleaning the surface to remove any residue that might settle into the porous finish. Residue can damage non-stick properties. The specialist noted other care techniques.

Improper cleaning could result in a grease build-up, lessening the effectiveness of the non-stick quality. Use a commercial cleaner to treat the stains, then recondition the finish with oil," Miss Cochran said.

To remove the spotty white film from accumulated minerals, soak a soft cloth in lemon juice or vinegar and rub the finish. Then wash and recondition the appliance or cookware.

Science Today

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — A world authority on leprosy says, "The disease is escaping from us."

Paul W. Brand, consultant to the Leprosy Mission, blames what he calls a worsening situation in containment of the sickness on oversimplified programs and unjustified optimism in official circles.

There have, he said, during the recent Centenary Celebrations of the Leprosy Mission, been notable advances in prevention and treatment. But with at least 15 million known cases in the world, of which only a small minority are even within range of treatment, it is still a major health and social problem.

Prof. Brand, who is director of rehabilitation at the U.S. Government Leprosy Center at Carville, La., gave the sermon which marked the centenary at services in St. Paul's Cathedral. He praised the pioneers of 1874 who went to the villages of India to offer solace because they had little else to give leprosy sufferers.

This was the case for many years, he said, and "there are still hundreds of thousands of crippled men and women with leprosy in the world who have come too late for medicine, who are already crippled, already blind and no amount of tablets will renew their physical life."

The doctor of today is in happier situation.

"We have more resources and it is wonderful to be able to go to the villages and to know that we can halt this disease before it cripples, so most of our people do not wait any longer for the patient to come to us," Brand said.

"We get out into the village, bringing the news that it is possible for the disease to be healed before it gets a grip upon them."

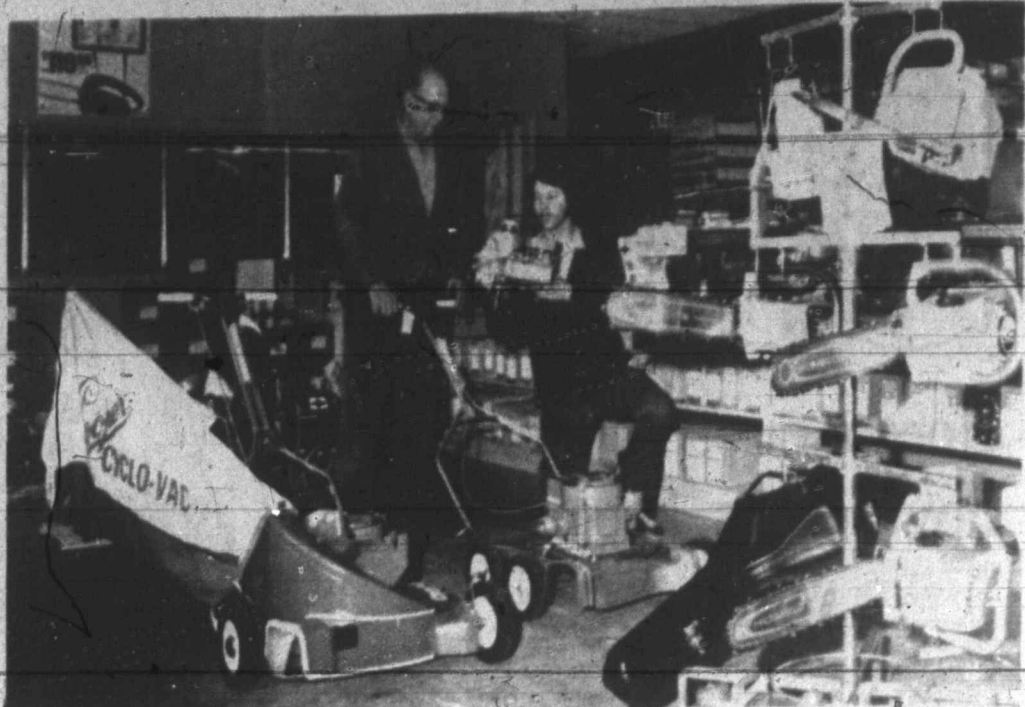

But the picture is darkening because of, among other things, the discovery that a number of victims have developed resistance to DDS, the main antileprosy drug. This has been identified at a number of centers including Carville.

The Leprosy Mission says the 45 million leprosy sufferers are spread widely through Africa, Asia and Latin America with smaller numbers in Europe and North America. It is estimated only about three million are under treatment.

The disease is most often discovered in young adults, and in twice as many men as women. Leprosy is not hereditary and it takes close and prolonged contact with infected persons for a period of years to contract the disease.

Modern technology has brought many advancements to mankind by providing various types of electric and motorized equipment for use.

The frustration can be shortlived, however, if he will stick the mower in his car trunk and bring it down to Radcliff Electric Co., where lawn mower repair service is unequalled anywhere in the Top O' Texas area.

NO-ROACH kills roaches and ants without odor or mess. Simply brush-on.

No-Roach Is Easy To Use, Stays Effective For Months

When you buy an insecticide, you want something to do the job and will continue doing the job for months — easy to use, and not something that will merely kill one bug by drowning it and smell up your whole house. Your best bet is Johnston's No-Roach brush-on.

No-Roach is an insecticide that is easy to use, has no insecticide odor, no powder or dust or mess, and stays effective for months.

No-Roach is effective against all crawling insects including cockroaches, ants, spiders and silverfish.

The colorless, odorless coating can be applied where needed. It dries quickly to form an invisible barrier that stays effective for months. It can be brushed in cabinets, on baseboards, door sills, window frames, wherever there are roaches and ants.

Johnston's No-Roach is a compound that quietly, very discreetly works night and day infecting every insect that crawls across its path with a deadly poison that lingers long enough for the carriers to get back to the nests and infect the unborn eggs. And No-Roach does this without any attention from the housewife, not even any tell-tale odor to give away the secret. No-Roach is simply brushed on to the desired surface.

Johnston's No-Roach is available at Ideal, Furr's, Piggly Wiggly and all food stores. It is distributed by Affiliated and Kimbell.

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

Mention a case of childhood poisoning and one generally thinks of a host of potentially lethal household substances which the child could have imbibed, not knowing the dangers involved.

But officials at the State Health Department are quick to emphasize that the dangers of poisoning are not restricted to items within the home. Potential sources of poison thrive in backyards and gardens all across Texas. The little known sources of these poisons—common garden-variety plants.

Most plants are harmless. Many are poisonous under certain conditions. A few are poisonous under nearly all conditions. More than 700 species of plants in the United States are known to have caused death or illness. Each year, about 12,000 children in this country chew or swallow potentially poisonous plants.

The poisonous nature of a plant is caused by the presence of one or more kinds of substances: There are some substances which are themselves toxic to animals; for example, is the toxic principle in poison hemlock.

Other substances are initially harmless but may decompose to form toxic products soon after being eaten—an example is glucoside, a sugar produced in wild cherry which changes to form the highly toxic prussic acid.

Some substances are formed by the action of micro-organisms on plants: a fungus on moldy hay forms decomposition products, some of which may be toxic. Still other substances are absorbed directly from the soil and stored in harmful quantities in the tissues of certain plants; selenium, for example, may be found in some species of locoweeds, or potassium nitrate may be present in oats.

To the average person, the term "poisonous plant" suggests one that poisons upon contact, causing a mild or severe dermatitis or skin irritation. Texas certainly has its fair share of the plants known to be capable of causing such irritations, say State Health Department officials. Possibly the most familiar are the leaves, bark and fruit of poison ivy and poison oak.

But did you know that hairy leaves of the cultivated primrose are also causes of dermatitis? Lily bulbs and stalks, stinging nettles and vanilla beans likewise have toxic qualities, and are capable of producing severe skin irritations.

Most poisonous plants are harmful only when they are eaten. In the case of nitrate-containing plants, the nitrate content is reduced to the toxic substance. This substance then enters the blood stream and changes the red pigment of the blood in such a way that it is incapable of transporting oxygen to body tissues. The result is suffocation.

Poisonous mushrooms, mostly toadstools, cause more than 100 fatalities in this country each year. Daffodil bulbs, larkspur seeds, lily of the valley flowers, and jasmine berries are all harmful if eaten. So, too, are the leaves of the poinsettia and oleander bush, and all parts of buttercups, rhododendrons, and laurels.

In some plants, only particular parts are toxic. A classic example is the rhubarb which has a perfectly edible stalk, but contains a deadly poison in the leaf.

Contact poisoning can be prevented best by learning to recognize the plants and avoiding them. Of course, it is always prudent to wear protective clothing such as leggings and gloves when venturing into areas where poison plants are known to flourish.

If you are exposed to a poisonous plant, immediately wash the contact area with laundry soap and water to remove toxic resins. Measures can also be taken to prevent the accidental eating of plants. Keep children away from plants and teach them not to chew plant stems or to put plant parts, such as berries or bulbs, in their mouths.

If your child does eat a plant, and you are uncertain whether it is poisonous, immediately call a doctor. He, in turn, will contact one of the 21 Poison Control Centers near you for emergency medical and antidote information.

Take your child to the Emergency Room of the nearest hospital, and if possible, bring a piece of the suspected plant with you so it can be analyzed for possible toxic substances.

Household Hints

United Press International
To prepare corn for freezing, blanch ears first in boiling water for four minutes. Place ears in ice water for same length of time before you cut kernels from cob and package them. The blancher should contain enough water so that it does not stop boiling when the vegetable is added.

Celery does not freeze well. Expansion of water in its cells breaks and destroys the cell walls and makes the vegetable soft when defrosted.

To prepare berries for freezing, swish them gently in lots of ice cold water. Lift them out, pat dry and freeze in a single layer on shallow trays. When they are solid, transfer them to an airtight container.

All meat and poultry that has been cut on a band saw should be washed and dried before packaging for freezing.

Use a lint-free towel to wipe the edges of canning jars before sealing, and keep turning the towel to avoid redepositing food particles that could prevent a safe seal. Do not use cleansing tissues or other lint paper.

Unless the gauge on your pressure canner is a weighted one, have it checked at the beginning of the canning season. If it is off more than four points, get a replacement.

If your pressure canner has a lid of the locking type, fasten opposite locks simultaneously so the lid is held in place evenly.

When you prepare cucumbers for pickling, remove blossoms before washing the vegetables. The blossoms, which become transparent when wet, can break down cell walls in the cucumbers and spoil them.

STUDY ON SMOKING
NEW YORK (UPI) — Scare commercials threatening smokers with death sooner or later apparently have little impact on more educated persons, according to a study made by Alan A. Berman of the American University in Washington, D. C. The magazine Psychology Today reported that Berman had five questionnaires—ministered to 300 students (average age, 22) in an effort to determine their smoking habits and attitudes toward death. Berman found the more educated smoked more often than those with less schooling and rationalized their habit as an act of defiance.

Texas Income Falling Behind

By BILL HOBBY
Lieutenant Governor

Although Texas continues to rank at the top of all states in the location of new industries, we continue to fall behind in average per capita income compared to the nation.

In 1972, Texans had a per capita income which was more than $500 below the national average.

Increasing the income of our people must be one of the most important goals of this state. To achieve this we must create more and better paying jobs, either through the attraction of still more new industry or the expansion of existing industry.

During 1974-75, the State of Texas will spend only 6.5 cents per capita on its industrial development programs. The national average is 25 cents.

A study commissioned by the Texas Industrial Commission has shown that other states have a competitive advantage because of their ability to provide start-up training programs for new or expanding industry.

Industry is understandably reluctant to assume the full burden for completely retraining a basically agricultural labor force, such as ours, in the skills required for mass production. Other states are assisting their industries to overcome this problem.

Texas has outstanding occupational-technical training capability in our 44 junior colleges, the four campuses of the Texas State Technical Institute and many of the independent school districts.

The Texas Industrial Commission, in December of 1971, established cooperative agreements through the Texas Education Agency to coordinate the start-up industrial training capabilities of these

With limited funds and staff, this program has created 4,900 new job opportunities. An economic impact analysis of only eight new industries and three expanded industries shows a total of 3,987 new jobs created and a return on the investment of $612,976 in local and $373,741 in state taxes.

Texas must develop a start-up training program that is truly competitive with other states. We should be able to say to industry, "Come to Texas. While you are building or equipping your plant, we will train the workers so that, when you open your doors, you can start in the black." At the same time, we would be providing steady, good paying jobs for our people.

A proposed training program for Texas has been developed. Under this program, each individual start-up training program would terminate when the plant's staffing needs are met. Because of such short-term, highly specialized training, the cost, per trainee, would be much less than the usual cost of vocational training.

The state's investment would bring a healthy rate of return. Fifteen thousand trainees would produce 15,000 new jobs and a total of $2,070,000 in new state taxes each year. At this rate, each trainee would pay back his investment in training in 15 months and then produce an 80 per cent return on the investment each year, just in new state taxes.

It is proposed that the industrial training program be jointly undertaken by the Texas Education Agency, Texas Industrial Commission, the state's junior colleges, technical institutes and independent school districts.

Based on experience in other areas where effective start-up training programs are operated, it can be predicted that manufacturing employment growth rate in Texas can be increased by between 1.25 per cent to 3.75 per cent above the normal growth rate, depending upon the extent of the effort.

Faithful Untroubled

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—An elder in the Jehovah's Witness' Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society's world headquarters at New York told a district convention Sunday that the failure of such institutions as the United Nations and orthodox Christianity to bring an end to world strife should not trouble the faithful.

Joel Adams told the 10,000 Jehovah's Witnesses at the concluding session of the four-day meeting that the United Nations' efforts will fail and "Christendom's" efforts will fail, but "the purpose of our Loving Creator is succeeding."

The efforts of the world's Christian churches in solving world problems have been singularly unsuccessful, Adams said. "Christendom makes the claim that she is the body of Christ, but how could such a thing ever be?" Adams said.

"For after more than 16 centuries of operation, she has ingloriously failed to attain such Christian unity. She is split a thousand ways by religious sects, all teaching different, conflicting doctrines. Christendom's religion has proved to be one of the most divisive forces in human experience. On this account, her record has been a gory one, stinking with human blood."

...it tells you how

How would you like to grow a vegetable, a tea, a healing herb, livestock feed, a compost activator and a soil conditioner... all in the form of a single plant? "You can," says Nancy Bubel, "if that plant is comfrey."

Nancy, who lives on a small "organic homestead" in Pennsylvania, really gets ecstatic about this hearty perennial member of the borage family. "Comfrey," she says, "can be eaten as a vegetable either snipped fine and tossed into a raw salad or sautéed lightly in oil with onions and peppers. It's rich in calcium, potassium, phosphorus and vitamins A and C. It also contains as much as 33% protein!"

The Bubel family likes to dry comfrey leaves in the sun, too... then crumble them half-and-half into an enamel kettle with dried mint. "Steep the mixture in hot water for five minutes and sweeten it with honey, if you like. It makes a comforting drink on raw days during the winter."

Comfrey is an exceptional feed for goats, rabbits, pigs, chickens, cows, sheep, geese and other farm livestock, and its roots—which reach 8 to 10 feet into the ground—break up heavy clay and aerate the soil as they grow. Organic gardeners report that cuttings of the plant, when added to a compost pile, will dramatically speed up the digestion of other materials in the heap.

Perhaps most interesting of all is the fact that comfrey contains allantoin, a substance known to aid granulation and cell formation. "Let the leaves mush up in warm water," says Nancy, "squeeze out the excess liquid and wrap several handfuls of the hot, softened foliage in a clean cloth. Then apply the pad to swellings, inflammations, cuts and sores. The poultice really works!"

For more information about growing and using comfrey, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 192, COMFREY!

TV In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—In a city where back slappers abound with "How-are-ya" and "Let's-get-together-for-a-drink," film maker Carl Foreman is refreshingly frank about working in television. He'd rather be in the movie business.

"I'm not at all crazy about television," said Foreman, "but I have to learn it because it is the way the film industry is going. You'll be seeing more and more people learning about the box because film production is slowing down."

Foreman is the executive consultant for the NBC series "Born Free," a television version of George and Joy Adamson's best-selling story of Elsa, the lioness, and her adventures in Africa.

Foreman previously adapted "Born Free" and its bestselling sequel "Living Free" to the screen. The television series is his first major attempt at what he calls "the box."

"There's a terrifying sameness in television," Foreman said. "You get the same characters and the same sort of plots despite the changes in the show. A lot of the writers in television complain they have to write down to the audiences."

Although Foreman is, perhaps, best known for producing the film the "Guns of Navarone," he has had a considerable success as a screen writer and has been nominated for six Academy Awards for his work in movies. Among the films he has produced or written are: "The Bridge on the River Kwai," "The Victors," and "High Noon."

Despite his achievements in film, Foreman is not completely comfortable with his switch to television. "I spent all my life trying to learn the film business and now I have to learn the TV business. I'm just an amateur. Every day someone tells me I'm doing something wrong. I've got a lot to learn. But don't get me wrong. I love TV."

NBC's "Born Free" is being shot on location in Kenya and Foreman said that filming in Africa has presented several problems. One of them is getting enough black actors for each program, especially from Kenya.

Texas occupies about 1 per cent of the total water and land area of the United States, less than half the size of the largest state, Alaska.

UPI Business Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Are you thinking about retirement, maybe even earlier than the normal 65?

The New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants offers some tips on benefits and options open to persons in such a frame of mind.

Early retirement is advantageous up to age 77. That's when benefits received by the person who retires at 65 start pulling ahead of those paid to age-62 retirees. Conversely, if you work beyond 65 your ultimate Social Security benefits will increase one point each additional year up to seven per cent at 72. At that age you can collect full Social Security benefits even if you go on working.

Many retirees work part-time to supplement income. If you work regularly throughout the year, you draw full Social Security payments before age 72 only if your annual earnings are $2,400 or less. For every dollar above that the benefits are reduced by 50 cents.

free up to the point where what you paid into the plan has been returned to you.

Extra $750 Exemption
Elderly persons who aren't eligible for Social Security or get very little have a tax credit of 15 per cent of "retirement incomes." It covers such income sources as dividends, interest, pensions and annuities and some rents.

In computing income taxes, persons 65 or over get an extra $750 exemption. They can take a third exemption if they are blind in the legal definition of the word.

If you're nearing 65 and plan to sell your home and not buy another, it might be wise to wait until after your 65th birthday. If you are over 65 and have lived in the house for five of the last eight years, you don't have to pay tax on profits realized on the first $20,000 of the "adjusted" sales price. That's the amount paid by the buyer minus fix-up and selling costs.

Many states give tax breaks to older citizens. The most common involve property tax concessions and deductions or credits on state income taxes. State tax departments can advise you.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The "old house" is coming into its own. The country colonials, roomy "gingerbread" Victorians, the city brownstones are being snapped up by buyers intent on the charm and value of the past.

Old houses have both — charm and value—says R.A. Clem Labine, editor of the Old House Journal, but they also have pitfalls. They demand know-how. "They really should be declared an endangered and dangerous species."

For every old house that is being well cared for, Labine says, there are 20 that are being allowed to deteriorate, or being mutilated in the name of remodeling, to say nothing of the lovely old houses that are being razed in the march of "progress."

But not every old house is a worthy prospect for the would-be restorer. "An old house," warns Labine, "can be a money-gobbling trap for the unwary."

Labine's publication features old house restorations and practical advice on ways to restore, decorate and maintain houses built prior to 1914.

How to determine whether that romantic 1870 Victorian, with its spacious rooms, high ceilings, marvelous original woodwork, perfect location and wonderful-old trees and plantings, is a good buy?

It calls for a thorough professional inspection of the mechanical systems buried beneath the romantic exterior, warns Labine. "It's these mundane details that go unchecked in that enthusiastic first flush of old-house fever that can spell the difference between success and disaster."

Labine says the Old House Journal has catalogued the most common — and costly — ailments of old houses. "While the checklist doesn't take the place of evaluation by a licensed engineer, it will help to eliminate those houses that are beyond your means to repair," he says.

Traps
The five points most overlooked:

WIRING—Unless it has been rewired recently, an old house invariably is underpowered. A house today needs a minimum of 100 amps of 3-wire 240-volt service. Check the entrance box in the cellar. Only two or three circuits (fuses) are a tip of inadequate electrical capacity. To modernize an inadequate electrical system will cost $500 to $1,000 or more.

ROT AND TERMITE DAMAGE—Starting in the cellar, use an ice pick to probe sills and ends of joists. Any sponginess is cause for concern.

HEATING PLANT—An old house is likely to have a coal furnace that has been converted to gas or oil, a prime source of trouble. Look for a nameplate (absence of one is a sign of poor quality) to check for a date stamp. If a boiler is approaching 25 years or older, expect to spend $1,500 replacing it before too long.

PLUMBING—Check hot and cold water pipes in the cellar with a magnet. If the magnet sticks, it's galvanized iron pipe and won't last too long. Inspect main waste pipes for signs of leaks or patches. On top floor, turn on all faucets and flush toilet. If pressure drops markedly, either the house isn't being supplied with adequate pressure or pipes are constricted with scale.

WATER DAMAGE—Keep an eye on outside walls and ceilings (especially the top floor) for stains that are telltale signs of water damage. Leaks can be coming from holes in the roof, leaky gutters or walls or faulty plumbing. Water damage should be traced to its source. It could mean a $25 pipe repair—or a $2,500 new roof.

its charm — and then proceed to eradicate that charm by thoughtless alterations, "remuddling" rather than remodeling or restoration.

Victorian houses built after 1860 are particularly vulnerable to character-destroying modernizations, he said, because they are not old enough to be considered antiques.

If you own an old house — or are thinking of buying one — Labine suggests:

When in doubt, restore as much of the original as possible. The architect and builder had a specific plan in mind. Unless you have a similarly clear plan, you are best off fixing up the original rather than remodeling a piece at a time.

Don't remove detail. Ornamental woodwork and plaster give a house much of its character. It also represents craftsmanship that is irreplaceable today.

It's not hard to restore such detail, but virtually impossible to replace once it is gone.

Don't try to make the house seem older than it really is. Some Victorian houses are given "instant antiquing" by tacking on colonial details, usually with unhappy results.

Windows have a surprisingly great effect on the appearance of a house. A picture window punched through the wall of an old house can completely unbalance the design.

Kitchens and bathrooms are rarely adequate in old houses, but these are not areas for restoration. Here the prime objective is to create a modern facility that functions well. Only the decor need be suitable to your "old house."

A Different Story
Working intermittently can be a different story. Benefits then are decreased only when the monthly earning exceeds $200. It is possible to earn much more than $2,400 for work performed during part of the year and still receive full benefits for periods in which earnings do not exceed $200 per month.

If husband and wife both qualify for Social Security benefits both can work past 65 and earn up to $2,400 each without losing benefits. To do this, however, they must file for Social Security benefits separately.

Retirees would know about areas of tax exempt income. They include Social Security benefits, Railroad Retirement pensions, a portion of receipts from annuities or insurance converted to annuities, life insurance proceeds and many veterans' benefits.

If you and your employer contributed to a pension or annuity plan, the benefits you receive may be tax-

SAFETY IN NUMBERS
WASHINGTON (UPI)—A vegetarian diet can be adequate nutritionally if it includes a variety of plant foods and certain nutrients, says the National Research Council's committee on nutritional misinformation.

In a four-page report, the committee said judicious mixing of lower-quality plant protein foods can provide about the same nutritional value as high-quality animal protein foods.

Milk and eggs should be added, especially for preschool children, to provide enough calcium, iron, riboflavin and vitamin B12. The committee also said fortified soybean milk or a vitamin B12 supplement is necessary for total vegetarians.

Why should our son have a newspaper route?

The living is good. Plenty of money, nice home, nice furnishings, another salary raise in sight; we've never had it so good. Why should our son manage a newspaper route?

Most any educator or businessman will tell you why in three simple words: it builds character.

Oftentimes the youngster who grows up in comfortable circumstances and who gets his weekly "handout" from dad never realizes the value of money or the efforts required to make it and manage it, until he's on his own. By then attitudes and habits are difficult to reverse.

But the newspaperboy quickly learns valuable lessons that stick. While making money on a newspaper route is important, the experience of getting-the-job-done-no-matter-what is more important. When through route management, responsibility and self-confidence are acquired at this early age, a newspaperboy has an advantage over other youngsters that no amount of money can buy.

If you're still wondering whether your son would benefit from newspaper route management, ask a community businessman or civic leader, or better still, phone our Circulation Department.

Varicose Veins And Stripping

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife has a bad recurrent ulcer on her ankle. She also has varicose veins. The doctor told her to put ointment on it and "strap it up."

She also has been told she needs to have her veins "stripped" by surgery. She is supposed to keep off her feet but she doesn't do it.

What does "stripping" veins in her legs mean, and what does it involve? Are her veins responsible for her unhealable recurrent ulcer on her ankle? Is such an operation serious?

I don't know why, but for some reason it seems almost impossible to get across to people the idea that "ulcers that won't heal" on the lower legs are almost without exception the result of impaired circulation — and except in the elderly, varicose veins are the most frequent cause of this impaired circulation.

The point is this: valves in some veins of the legs can fail, and instead of the blood being raised through those veins, it stagnates there, the veins swell and become "varicose," and the net result is a reduction in circulation through the legs.

If these varicose veins are removed (stripped), then other veins, deeper in the legs, are forced to take over the job, and circulation improves. The congestion caused by that more or less stagnant blood in the varicose veins is relieved.

"Stripping" a varicose vein involves a small incision at the top and the bottom of the vein, after which the vein is drawn out lengthwise, and only very small scars remain afterward.

Your wife, it seems is determined not to take any of the good advice offered to her — the most important advice being to have the veins stripped — removed. Good advice is no help if she doesn't take it.

If you are still puzzled as to just how the faulty valves cause varicose veins, and what needs to be done, I suggest you send 25 cents and a long stamped, self-addressed, envelope for a copy of my booklet, "How to Deal with Varicose Veins."

Doctors have a suspicion that most women have the veins stripped to improve appearance, but actually there are impelling health reasons, aside from appearance, for having it done.

(Men, of course, can have varicose veins, too, but to them appearance isn't as much of a factor.)

Dear Dr. Thosteson: On hot nights when my husband perspires the sheets and pillow cases have a yellow tinge in the morning, even if he has taken a bath before going to bed. He is 68, has had a physical and is in good health. What could cause this?

Colored sweat is a rare but not unknown phenomenon. It usually is related to some bacteria or fungus on the skin, or can be caused by metal dust to which someone has been exposed.

Frequent bathing is about all I can suggest, but using an antiseptic soap may be the answer if bacteria are involved.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have osteoporosis. I noticed your reference that fluorides are helpful. My doctor does not seem to know about it. Could you tell me what fluorides are?

Fluorides have been used to combat osteoporosis; how much success you can expect is subject to dispute, but osteoporosis admittedly is difficult to treat.

With all the discussion about fluoridation of water in the last decade (with sodium fluoride) I find it difficult to believe that your doctor is not familiar with what fluorides are.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with this or other rectal problems, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, for a copy of his booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Elliott, Jennifer Still Engaged

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — The badinage was very bouncy at Joe's Pier 52 the other morning as Elliott Gould and his beautiful fiancée Jennifer O'Neill had supper together proving that despite knockers and skeptics, their 3-weeks engagement is still intact.

From under a costly French straw hat, Donald Sutherland, Gould's co-star in "Gypsies," explained to Jennifer how TV star Mike Douglas fell into a Groucho Marx trap when they were on his show.

Modes Mike told Groucho he'd had such delay, "I thought you didn't like me." Retorted Groucho: "I DON'T like you!" (But proved in 50 ways that he does.)

Barbra Streisand, Gould's ex-ex, who told me years ago that he would be a great actor, couldn't make it to the spectacular opening of the new 1600-seat Loew's Astor Plaza theater showing her film, "For Pete's Sake."

However, I saw half a dozen female impersonators of Barbra wagging their wagons around.

Barbra's mother Diana Kind and brother Sheldon Streisand shrugged off the impersonators.

Robert Preston Tisch was saluted by the city for opening this Times Sq. movie cathedral after almost two years delay. They shouldn't give them plaques but purple hearts.

Father Bob Perrella ("The Show Biz Priest") flew to LA to baptize Frank Sinatra's graddr.

Bumper sticker: "Drive Carefully — Stick Around for the Impeachment!"

Millionaires Marianne Reynolds and husband Lee Neyers split.

Barbara Walters says women should tell their age. She's 42 and happy to admit it. So was I when I was 42.

Remember these? "She was only a taxi driver's daughter but you auto meet her." (By Sussman) ... Henny Youngman told Joey Adams, "I looked high and low for you but I didn't look low enough" ... I just got a threatening letter from Columbus signed John Smith (backward!). It said, "Earl, keep Ohio beautiful. Stay in New York."

Lady Bird's ex-press secretary Liz Carpenter checked into the Aspen Institute for Humanistic

Studies. "To think and shrink," "to think Plato and feel starvation."

Fan letter about fans: "The Beautiful People's faces are so coated an enameled, one would have to dig under creams and oils to find true skins. There aren't more than two real beauties in 100 Beautiful People."

Men are such heels — a gal broke up with her doctor beau. He asked her, says Mary Ragaway, for the ring back and billed her for 32 house calls ... Ever occur to you that some moulders of public opinion have become muddlers of public opinion?

Harry Hershfield laughs about ill health. He refuses to go to the Actors Home saying "I don't want to reminisce my life away over there, I want to reminisce it away right here." Harry adds, "I'd collapse, but I'm too weak."

Another fan letter: (that's all I get): "You refer to Ohio as Middle West. The middle of continental U.S. is Smith Co., Kan., 800 miles west of Ohio. You've been taken in by misconceptions of other ignorant New Yorker's." (Clitnon E. Bernard, Farmington, Ark.)

Ruth Warrick goes on tour with "Irene" in September with a leave of absence from her "All My Children" soap opera! "Debbie Reynolds, Patsy Kelly and I are determined to stay with the show till the investors are paid back" ... If Charles Revson ties up with Lee Radziwill, his social status will shoot up like Onassis.

"He's already got the yacht!"

THE MIDNIGHT EARL ... The "Miss Universe" crowned in Manila next month will visit a Philippine Island and a new house will be built on it ... Veteran publicist Ivan Black, who helped make Cafe Society Uptown and Downtown famous, and changed Sema Motel to Zero, went to the 50th reunion of his Harvard class and returned with septicemia which put him in St. Elizabeth's hospital. He was a classmate of Bobby Jones, Corliss Lamont and Ogden Nash.

SHOW BIZ QUIZ: Who played Mr. and Mrs. Sol Hurok in the film "Tonight We Sing"? Ans: yesterday's: The Ritz Bros. real last name was Joachim.

Under Twenty

By JEANNE HARRISON
If we think that things in the world are changing so fast — it can even apply to our ten top of Platter Patter. Week after week they struggle up the ladder — some make it — some don't. But there is so much pushing and shoving that once a number reaches the top, they are knocked right off again. Here we go for this week.

TOP FIVE ALBUMS
1. "Sundown" - Gordon Lightfoot
2. "Band On The Run" - Paul McCartney
3. "The Sting" - Movie Soundtrack
4. "Shinin' On" - Grand Funk
5. "Bachman-Turner Overdrive II" - Bachman-Turner Overdrive

TOP TEN SINGLES
1. "Sundown" - Gordon Lightfoot
2. "Billy, Don't Be A Hero" - Bo Donaldson
3. "Be Thankful For What You Got" - William DeVaughn
4. "Rock The Boat" - Huey Copé
5. "You Make Me Feel Brand New" - Stylistics
6. "If You Love Me Let Me Know" - Olivia Newton-John
7. "Haven't Got Time For The Pain" - Carly Simon
8. "Hollywood Swinging" - Kool and The Gang
9. "Rock Your Baby" - George McCrae

Bad news for record buyers. Prices are scheduled to increase by almost 30 per cent, from an average of $1.00 per single to about $1.29. This follows a previous long-play increase due to the price of almost everything.

Platter Patter's tip of the week: If you dig a specific single just wait around a little while and you'll get it in the long-play version where you can often find a good deal, on the price of an album.
