Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA - Kentucky Street, from Sumner west to Price Road, is scheduled to be closed beginning Wednesday. One lane at a time will be open to allow local traffic access to homes and businesses, according to Richard Morris, director of public works for the city.

Lime for stabilization is to be placed on Duncan this week and on Cuyler next week. After the lime is worked and allowed to "cure," local traffic will be allowed to drive on the streets, Morris said.

Construction on Kentucky Street is beginning ahead of schedule because the contractor has an extra crew with equipment available, he said.

Construction on Duncan is four days behind schedule, with three days lost to weather and one day due to site clean up, he said. Cuyler Street construction is three days behind for the same reasons, Morris explained.

There were some equipment problems during the early days of work, he said.

"There's little things that's happened. It's operating just fine now," Morris said.

Addition of lime to the subgrade is intended to minimize the expansion and contraction of the soil due to moisture and drying cycles, he said. The goal is to reduce cracking of the street surface and base failure, Morris explained.

LONDON (AP) — Police raided 1,500 homes and arrested more than 900 people today in what London's chief called one of the largest anti-crime crackdowns ever in Britain.

The sweep involved about 5,000 police officers throughout England and Wales.

"What we are trying to show today is that there is no hiding place for the burglar," Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir Paul Condon told a news conference at Scotland Yard.

The police chief said officers seized a trove of stolen property, "everything from firearms through to garden gnomes," the elfish figurines that many Britons use as outdoor decorations.

FBI agents capture two in manhunt

By SALLY STREFF BUZBEE
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Heavily armed FBI agents on a nationwide manhunt for "John Doe 2" captured two men at a Missouri motel at daybreak today after their car was spotted in the parking lot.

Gary Allen Land and Robert Jacks were arrested without incident as material witnesses in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Asked if the heavyset, square-jawed Land could be "John Doe 2," the second suspect in the nation's worst domestic terrorist attack, FBI spokesman Dan Vogel said: "We don't know that. We have not determined whether he is or not."

Some of Land's movements appear to have paralleled those of Timothy McVeigh, the first suspect arrested in the attack.

FBI captured the two men after evacuating other guests at the motel, staking out the place overnight and phoning their room at daybreak. The men walked out and surrendered.

In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno refused to say if Jacks and Land were suspects in the bombing or if either was believed to be John Doe 2.

They were expected to appear before a federal magistrate later in the day.

A federal grand jury was believed to be meeting on McVeigh's case in Oklahoma City. Authorities refused to confirm that it was meeting or to say where.

The death toll in the April 19 blast stood at 139, including 15 children. At least 40 people were still missing.

The Missouri Highway Patrol had been alerted by the FBI to watch for a white 1981

Thunderbird with an Arizona license plate around Joplin. Sgt. Rick Baird spotted the vehicle at the Kel Lake Motel in nearby Carthage about 9 p.m. Monday and questioned the two men, said Highway Patrol Sgt. Archie Dunn.

The FBI surrounded the eight-unit, one-story brick motel and moved the guests out of two other units, said Gene Jackson, son of the motel's owners.

Lee Snyder was delivering newspapers across the street from the Kel Lake Motel about 5:30 a.m. when he noticed a swarm of state and federal officers surrounding the motel.

He said there were "dozens" of officers with riot gear, automatic weapons and shotguns. He watched as officers placed a call from the motel office, then watched two men walk out.

"As the door opened, I could hear one of the officers yell, 'Put your hands in the air! If you make a move, we'll blow you away.' Those were his exact words," Snyder said.

The men gave up without a struggle, said Snyder, who saw no weapons on the pair.

Jackson said his mother noticed nothing unusual when Land and Jacks registered under their own names.

The car sought in the FBI bulletin was registered in Arizona to Land. Land and Jacks stayed for five months at a motel in Kingman, Ariz. — a town frequented by McVeigh.

The New York Times reported today that men believed to be Land and Jacks also checked into a motel in Perry, Okla., the town where McVeigh was being held on a traffic violation, the day after the bombing. The paper said they checked back out that same day.

Clinton says Cuban refugees may migrate to United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an abrupt about face, the Clinton administration said today thousands of Cuban refugees held at Guantanamo Bay will be allowed to migrate to the United States.

Announcing the agreement with Cuba, Attorney General Janet Reno called the policy "another important step toward regularizing migration procedures with Cuba."

Hoping to discourage more Cubans from leaving their homeland, Reno warned that Cubans trying to reach the United States by boats and rafts will be returned to Havana.

"Cubans must know, the only way of coming to the United States is applying in Cuba," she told reporters at the White House.

About 21,200 refugees are being held at Guantanamo. Most of them are expected to be admitted to the United States, administration officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The new policy generated mixed feelings in the Cuban-American community, an important constituency in the politically key state of Florida. The repatriation of Cubans at sea to their homeland would be a sharp change in administration policy.

Lourdes Quirch, coordinator of the ad hoc committee of Operation Angel that works to get Cubans in Guantanamo to the United States, said he was pleased that most Cubans at Guantanamo will be free, but said it's wrong to "turn back those who leave Cuba."

Jose Basulto, head of Brothers to the Rescue, a Cuban exile group in Miami that makes flights to search for rafters in the Florida Straits, said bringing the Cubans at Guantanamo to the United States is "actually the sweetening of the pie." On plans to close U.S. borders to new refugees, he said, "that part is disgraceful."

Two-year investigation leads to drug arrests in Wheeler County

WHEELER - A two-year drug investigation culminated with the arrest of two men and a woman on narcotics charges, Wheeler County Sheriff Jimmy Adams said today.

Free on $25,000 bond each are Manuel Mendoza and Kenneth Lovell, both of Wheeler, who were arrested at 6 p.m. Saturday at a feed yard five miles west of Wheeler on Texas 152. Just over half an ounce of suspected cocaine with a street value of $2,000 divided into quarter t's and eight balls, was found in Mendoza's pickup and on his person, said Adams.

Beneath the Texas Panhandle sky, television personality Barry Corbin, in the black hat and leather leggings, discusses a scene with producer Christine Lesiak as soundman Susan Thompson, left, and cameraman Terry Hatch check angles and sound levels for closing sequence of a PBS documentary on The Great Plains. Corbin, best known for his portrayal of Maurice Menefield in the television series Northern Exposure, hosts the documentary which will be aired in the fall.

'Northern Exposure' star in Panhandle for PBS documentary, Goodnight play

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

WAYSIDE — Television star Barry Corbin was in the Texas Panhandle this week putting the finishing touches on a documentary for the Public Broadcasting System and discussing a new project concerning a play about Panhandle pioneer Charles Goodnight.

Corbin, who plays former astronaut Maurice Menefield in the television series Northern Exposure, was horseback Monday on the JE Ranch near Wayside as the crew from KUON-TV, a PBS station in Lincoln, Neb., completed shooting of a documentary on The Great Plains. Corbin, born in Lamesa and reared in Lubbock, hosts the production.

The crew has been working on the production, which covers the expanse of the plains from south of Lubbock to the Canadian border, since last spring, according to writer and producer Christine Lesiak.

"We've been editing since Christmas," Lesiak said.

The one-hour documentary is scheduled to air in Nebraska in the fall before it is made available to other PBS stations.

Andy Wilkinson, a Lubbock musician, recording artist and descendent of Charles Goodnight helped with the portion of the documentary dealing with the southern plains, Lesiak said. The program includes clips of area cowboys Frank Winter of Dalhart and J.B. Allen of Whiteface.

Lesiak said the taping of Allen on his front porch one evening earlier this year includes a poem written by Wilkinson and used in his production of Charles Goodnight, which debuted in Palo Duro Canyon last September and played to a sold-out crowd in Lubbock in April.

"J.B. said more in 20 minutes than most of the people we interviewed said in two hours," Lesiak said.

Corbin will be seen in the documentary riding his champion cutting horse Smitty and delivering his lines across a barbed wire fence and leaning against an Aeromotor windmill complete with bawling cattle and howling West Texas wind in the back-ground.

Between takes, Corbin put his big bay quarter horse through his paces with the drought stricken cows and calves in the pasture on the rim of Palo Duro Canyon.

"It's fun when there's nobody making you do it," he grinned, standing in the pasture eating strawberry cake provided by friends he stayed with in Canyon this week.

In addition to the documentary being shot on the JE, part of the original JA Ranch established by Goodnight in 1876, Corbin and Wilkinson are involved in developing a one-man play in which Corbin would play the Panhandle pioneer.

"He's a very experienced actor," Wilkinson said. "He's also a playwright. He wrote a play called Throckmorton, Texas which is has proven to be quite popular. He's a lot deeper literary than the person he plays on Northern Exposure would indicate. He been on Broadway and done Shakespeare."

Wilkinson said that Corbin called him last summer after reading about Wilkinson's last album, which deals with Goodnight, in the Texas Tech Ex-Students magazine.

"Barry called me up on the phone about a one-man show," Wilkinson said. "He said, 'I'm not stepping on your toes, am I?' I told him, 'No, but I would like to write it.'"

Wilkinson said it would give him a chance to deal with all the things he didn't have room to deal with on his album.

"We're looking into the possibility of a play," Corbin said. "Andy's written a first draft of the first scene."

Corbin said he was excited about the Goodnight project.

"I believe Charles Goodnight is the prototype of people that made this country," Corbin said. "We're losing those people with their values, and we need to hang on to them."

"Barry's perfect for the part," Wilkinson said of Corbin. "He's got the look, the sound, and most importantly, he's got the spirit."

No suspected narcotics were confiscated today, Adams said. Mendoza's 1980's model pickup truck and an undisclosed sum of cash were confiscated, he said.

The investigation began about two years ago, said the sheriff.

"We really started developing this thing in October or November and it culminated the 29th of April," he said.

Participating in the investigation and arrest were the Wheeler County Sheriff's Office, Roberts County Sheriffs Office, Shamrock Police Department and Texas Cattle Raisers Association.

Manhunt

A motel manager in Vinita, Okla., said two men believed to be Land and Jacks checked into his motel April 19, the afternoon of the bombing. Tom Crafton, manager of Deward and Pauline's motel in Vinita, said the men checked back in later April 20 and stayed at least until the evening of April 24.
 Crafton, who said he couldn't remember the names of the men, said FBI agents came by car and helicopter Saturday night, took their registration records and examined the room where they stayed.
 Vinita is 180 miles northeast of Oklahoma City on Interstate 44; Carthage is 60 miles to the north-east of there, also on the interstate.
 Convinced there was almost no chance someone was still alive in the wreckage of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, rescue workers turned to machinery to search for bodies. A huge backhoe mounted on tracks like a bulldozer was used to lift debris from inside the ruins and set it down outside, where it will be searched by hand.
 Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen said he told families that "there are some people we probably won't find."
 On Monday, the FBI released a revised sketch of the suspect known as John Doe 2, believed to be the man who was with McVeigh on April 17 in Junction City, Kan., when McVeigh allegedly rented the truck that carried the bomb.
 The sketch shows him in profile, appearing stocky and wearing a baseball cap. He is very tan and muscular and may be a weightlifter, said FBI agent Weldon Kennedy.

A group of Pampa Shriners prepare meat for the upcoming Pampa Shrine Spring Bar-B-Que, scheduled Sunday at the Sportsman's Club on South Barnes.

Shriners schedule Spring Bar-B-Que

The Pampa Shrine Club will host its annual Spring Bar-B-Que from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday at the Top O' Texas Sportsman Club on South Barnes.

Proceeds from the annual event are used for the transportation costs to and from the Shrine Hospitals.

Tickets are available for $6 for adults and $3 for children 6-12 years, with children 5 and under eating free.

Since 1922, Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children have served children in North America. These hospitals provide outstanding care to children who have orthopaedic problems or who have been severely burned. Both inpatient and outpatient care are given to children from infancy to the 18th birthday regardless of race, religion or relationship to a Shriner.

There is no charge for any care or services provided by a Shrine

Hospital. Admission is based on medical and financial need, with all services paid for by the Shriners. To date, no tax money or federal assistance has been given to the Shriners Hospitals.

Contributions can be made at any time to the Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children Endowment Fund. All donations and requests not restricted by the donor become part of the endowment fund, with only the income from the fund being used to operate Shriners Hospitals.

Nineteen of the 22 Shriners Hospitals are orthopaedic units. Located throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico, they continue to provide the personalized, professional care for which Shriners Hospitals have been known since 1922. The first Shrine Hospital opened in 1922 in Shreveport, La.

The average length of stay in the orthopaedic hospital is now

8.5 days, with the average length of stay at the Shriners Burns Institute 9.3 days. In 1994, there were 18,694 admissions to the 19 orthopaedic hospitals and 2,293 admissions to the three burns institutes, with 211, 069 outpatient and outreach clinic visits at the 22 hospitals.

The Shriners offer an outreach clinic at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo every three months, with the next clinic to be held in May. If more information is needed, contact Gene Gates in Pampa.

Officers of the Pampa Shrine Club for the current year include R.C. Grider, president; Franklin Bliss and James Lewis, vice presidents; and Don Harrison, secretary-treasurer.

The Pampa Shrine Club caters and serves meals throughout the year for groups from 25 to 500, for family reunions as well as for businesses.

House passes concealed gun bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation that would allow Texans to carry concealed handguns has won tentative House approval after lawmakers narrowly adopted a proposal to allow citizens to vote on the issue.

The vote, which would take place in November, would have no effect on the bill should it become law. But Sen. Jerry Patterson, author of the gun bill, was quick to condemn it.

"It is a deceitful attempt to put us in court and challenge the constitutionality of the bill, even if it's nonbinding," Patterson, R-Pasadena, said Monday after the vote.

Patterson said he would seek to remove the referendum once the bill reaches a House-Senate conference committee. If he fails, he said he would kill the entire bill.

"We will have no bill that has a referendum in it," he said.

Supporters of the referendum, approved on a 74-70 vote, said they believe Texans should have the chance to vote on such an important issue.

"There's absolutely nothing wrong with letting the people send us a message about whether or not we should have concealed weapons in this state," said Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston.

"If you believe in the people in your district ... then why don't you believe in them enough to allow them the right to vote on this decision?" Turner said.

Rep. Ron Wilson, House sponsor of the gun bill, said voters already decided the question in November when they elected Republican Gov. George W. Bush over incumbent Democrat Ann Richards.

Richards two years ago vetoed a bill that would have allowed Texans to vote on the issue. Bush has said he would sign a concealed handgun bill.

"I don't know where y'all were Nov. 8, 1994, but there was a referendum on this issue," said Wilson, D-Houston. "The people have spoken. Let us go ahead and put the issue to rest."

After an eight-hour debate, the overall bill won tentative House approval on a 98-40 vote. It faces another vote of the House before heading to conference committee to work out differences between the House and Senate versions.

The measure would allow eligible Texans who are at least 21 years old to obtain permits to carry concealed handguns. Applicants would have to undergo training and pass a proficiency exam. A four-year permit would cost $140.

The House version is stricter than the Senate bill in that it requires applicants to undergo 15 to 30 hours of training. The Senate bill, which passed in March, requires 10 to 15 hours.

The House bill includes additional restrictions on who would be eligible for a permit and where permit holders could carry guns, and increases the amount of time for which a license could be suspended.

It also would allow the Department of Public Safety to require a licensee to undergo drug testing if there's reason to believe the individual is using drugs. Licensees would have to pay for the tests and would lose their permits if they fail.

Texas is one of less than a dozen states that prohibit carrying concealed guns in most circumstances, but bills to change that are pending in most of those states.

Arkansas' governor signed into law a permit bill on Feb. 23, and Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating has pledged to sign a concealed handgun bill there.

One amendment to the House gun bill was approved in response to the April 19 federal building bombing in Oklahoma City.

The amendment by Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, prohibits permits for people who are members or contribute to an organization that intends to inflict injury on a person, organization, government entity or law enforcement agency, including destruction of a building or other structure.

If the gun bill is approved here, Texans could begin carrying concealed handguns in January.

FCC set to auction new phone licenses soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — After being derailed earlier this year, a special government auction providing minorities with an opportunity to acquire new mobile phone licenses is back on track.

The Federal Communications Commission said Monday it will auction about 1,000 licenses covering cities and metro areas on Aug. 2.

The new date was announced hours after a federal appeals court lifted a stay that had blocked the agency from proceeding with the auction, originally scheduled for June.

The court lifted the stay after a Mississippi-based telephone company withdrew a legal challenge to the FCC's auction policies.

The auction is the first since Congress last month repealed a 17-year-old communications tax break that was designed to bolster minority ownership of the airwaves.

The tax certificate allowed companies selling cable, broadcast or the new mobile phone businesses to minorities or women to defer paying federal taxes on their gains if the seller reinvested the money in communications properties.

Telephone Electronics Corp., based in Jackson, Miss., was responsible for derailing the auction.

In March, the company won a court ruling that blocked the FCC from proceeding until its challenge of the commission's policies was resolved.

The company had challenged the FCC policy that it was too big to participate in the auction. It also challenged the FCC's race and gender policy distinctions, saying they constituted reverse discrimination.

Last month, the company decided to withdraw its lawsuit after making a deal to get into the new mobile phone business.

Following Congress' instructions, the FCC set up the special auction in which only minorities, women and small businesses may participate. Some critics objected to the auction as being unnecessary.

Capital trials cost burdens East Texas county

LONGVIEW (AP) — As prosecutors consider whether to seek the death sentence in the Rusk County slayings of five people abducted from a chicken restaurant, county residents are considering the financial cost.

According to a survey of rural East Texas counties by the Longview News-Journal, the cost of high-profile prosecutions often leads to higher taxes.

If the death penalty is sought during James Earl Mankins Jr.'s trial, higher taxes are almost certain, the News-Journal reported in recent editions.

In 1987, Upshur County sought the death penalty for itinerant killer Jerry Animal McFadden in the 1986 murder of a teenager. Despite the use of a special prosecutor, the trial cost the county almost $500,000, Upshur County Treasurer Myra Harris said.

Only a small percentage of the expenses were reimbursed by the state to help pay a special prosecutor, according to Upshur officials. The financial result was one of the region's highest county tax rates: 53 cents per $100 valuation, county officials said.

"When you get (major) trials with a little ol' tax rate, you have to raise the tax rate or deny justice," said Gaddis Lindsey, Upshur County commissioner. "It had a tremendous impact and it's never over with when the trial's over with. It goes on with the appeals."

Morris County completed a death penalty case in January that cost $200,000-$240,000, according to officials. When county commissioners tried to raise taxes last summer to pay for trial costs, taxpayers revolted and voted for a tax rollback, which put the county even further into debt.

In early March, commissioners voted to cut funding to fire and ambulance services in the county. "It's still ugly," said Charles Sanders, Morris County auditor. "It has put us in a tremendous bind. There are a lot of problems because of this whole deal."

Financial complications can have a chilling effect on justice, according to Lindsey. Justice already is not being done in some counties, Lindsey said. They're plea bargaining and dropping charges down.

Marion District Attorney Jim Finstrom cited Morris County's finances as the reason he wouldn't seek the death penalty in the recent capital murder trial of Frank Jones. He and William Jones were charged with killing two people in 1994. Finstrom sought a life sentence for Jones.

Bill makes jalapeno state pepper

AUSTIN (AP) — Another burning issue is on its way to the governor.

A resolution declaring the jalapeno the official pepper of Texas passed the Senate on a voice vote Monday. It has already won House approval, and Gov. George W. Bush plans to sign it, according to Bush spokesman Ray Sullivan.

Texas leads the nation in production and consumption of the jalapeno, according to the resolution, which praises the pepper as a "culinary, economic and medical blessing" to the state.

"This is the hottest issue we will take up this session," said one of the measure's co-sponsors, Sen. Eddie Lucio. "You can dice it, you can slice it, you can blend it or you can stuff it, or simply chew on it whole, as I do."

Opinion

State's inflexible home equity laws

Much has been made of the sanctity of home through history. The home as a castle, a haven and a place of escape has been the subject of literature, music and personal lore.

But thanks to a rather heavy-handed and outdated law, Texans don't really have the full privileges that should belong to a homeowner.

Under current state law, people cannot borrow money against the equity they have in their own home.

The restriction was undoubtedly well-meant when it was implemented, but it was based on the faulty reasoning that government has a duty to forcibly protect the public from its own "foolishness."

Much of the justification for the most inflexible home-equity lending laws in the nation is based on the assumption that homeowners, especially older people, would take out second loans on their house, be unable to make payments and therefore would lose a home they'd paid a lifetime to own. Perhaps that might happen in some cases, but that's no reason to have an unbending law on the books that keeps every homeowner from borrowing against his or her equity. Individuals have to be responsible for their own actions and not get too far in debt.

After all, today's world is credit-based. Nearly everyone can obtain a credit card at some point in their lives. That's not to say they won't pile up a mountain of debt and lose their credit privileges. But at least they get the opportunity to be trustworthy ... or foolish.

Homeowners earn the right to have their credit privileges by making regular payments on their houses.

So anyone casting about for a second loan on a home looks to be a good risk, despite what "safeguards" government has tried to install. (In most use the word "safeguards" really means robbing Americans of what is supposed to be constitutionally guaranteed ... the RIGHT to control one's own affairs.)

But the good sense of allowing home-equity loans goes beyond mere personal impact. The money that would be generated by legislation (Senate Bill 301 is pending in the Texas Legislature and would give voters a chance to change the law) runs into the millions of dollars. A University of Texas study estimates that changes in home lending laws could create more than 190,000 jobs not only in banking, but in associated endeavors.

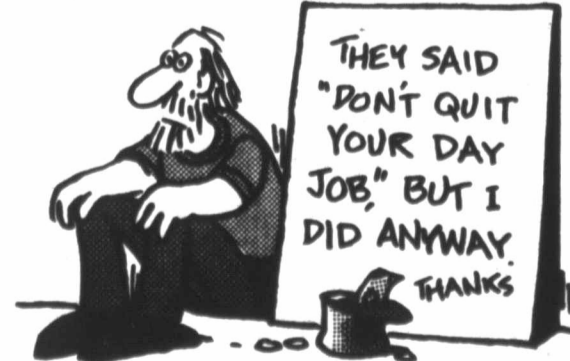

Many of the protections of the Homestead Act, which prohibits second mortgages, would remain in place under SB 301. But it would wipe out the most restrictive provision that prevents a homeowner from exercising his or her own discretion in what could be the biggest investment of an entire life.

A home cannot be a haven until the person who owns it is free and clear not of debt, but of unwarranted governmental intrusion.

Quotas for women in sports

Stephen Chapman

Defenders of affirmative action complain that the debate always focuses on race rather than on sex. While preferences that help blacks and other racial minorities are controversial, they insist, preferences that help white women are not - meaning that Americans really aren't offended by the idea of affirmative action. The supporters should hope Americans don't get a good look at the way that idea was recently translated into policy by a federal judge.

For years, Brown University has been a model of progressive thinking. It abolished D's and F's in response to student demands in 1969 and has gained fame (or notoriety) for its relaxed academic requirements. Once all-male, it now has a student body that is 51 percent female.

After the 1972 passage of Title IX, which outlawed sex discrimination by colleges and universities getting federal aid, Brown leapt to show its good will. Between 1972 and 1978, it added women's teams in tennis, basketball, crew, field hockey, gymnastics, squash, swimming, volleyball, cross country, lacrosse, soccer, softball and outdoor track.

Today, the university funds 13 varsity sports for women and 12 for men. Brown women engage in varsity sports at nearly three times the average rate for American colleges.

But that, a U.S. district court said last month, is not enough to comply with Title IX. When a shortage of money forced the school to drop women's volleyball and gymnastics from varsity to club sports - as it also did with men's water polo and golf - it broke the law by failing to provide enough opportunities for women to compete.

The judge was not impressed by Brown's exceptional record. Nor was Arthur Bryant of Trial Lawyers for Public Justice, which filed the lawsuit. The university takes the view, he said afterward, that "if Brown is in violation, so is everybody. We agree with that." You heard right: Every institution of higher learning in America is guilty of sex discrimination.

What is Brown's chief crime? Simple: It fields athletic teams that do not precisely mirror the student body. Though women outnumber men on campus, they make up about 40 percent of the varsity athletes. The simplest way for the university to obey the law, advised Judge Raymond Pettine, is to arrange things so that women make up 51 percent of the participants.

That could be done not by adding teams for women but by dropping teams for men - which would do absolutely nothing for women. Adopt a quota, and you're home free.

The possibility dismissed by the judge and Title IX militants is that the numbers reflect differing tastes. No one thinks that discrimination explains why fewer men than women participate in ballet or drama. But the assumption is that if fewer women than men play varsity sports, only unfairness can account for the gap.

In fact, for better or worse, young women are generally less interested in sports than young men. Despite the expansion of girls' athletics in recent decades, high school boys are 64 percent more likely to play organized sports than girls.

Fitness activities and pickup games are also less popular among teenage females than males.

Of girls who apply to Brown, only about 43 percent express an interest in athletics. In the university's intramural sports, which have no numerical limits on participation, eight times as many males take part as females. Several women's varsity teams at Brown have vacant slots, while the men's are over subscribed.

Plenty of young females are devoted to athletics, and the expansion of options for them over the past generation has been a thoroughly commendable change. But the chief goal should be assuring a chance for those who want to play - not enforcing quotas in participation rates.

If men are more inclined to these pursuits than women, there is nothing wrong with an imbalance in numbers - just as there is nothing wrong with an excess of women in the English department or a glut of men in engineering. What has taken place at Brown is plainly the result of women and men making different choices of their own free will.

The judge and the law take for granted that America's colleges are run by reactionary males who will address the needs of women only if they have a hammer hanging over their heads. In fact, there are powerful ideological pressures in academe to assure that females are treated at least as well as men - not to mention business pressures to avoid alienating a huge pool of applicants.

The court's decision is based on the fallacy that the surest proof of fair treatment is statistical parity. This is the kind of thinking that has doomed racial preferences with the American people, who know that equal treatment doesn't necessarily produce equal results. Title IX has enjoyed public acceptance because it is seen as a way to assure opportunity. Once it becomes a machine for dictating outcomes, its days are numbered.

BABY BOOMERang

The CIA's involvement in Guatemala

Charley Reese

The only kind of news the poor old Central Intelligence Agency makes is bad news. CIA officers say that's because - and it's probably true - they can't talk about their successes, but someone will always spill the beans about their failures or mishaps.

In this case, some anonymous soul in another agency claims that the CIA not only knew that one of its paid guys in Guatemala ordered the snuffing of an American and a Guatemalan married to an American, but that they tried to cover up the evidence of their knowledge. The CIA says it's not true.

I'm inclined to believe the CIA. For one thing, the CIA is a lot more lawabiding than most folks think. For another, I'm always suspicious of anonymous letters sent to Democratic congressmen with a penchant for holding press conferences. For still a third, the CIA is a lot less efficient and like James Bond than most people think. It's more than possible - it's likely - that someone being paid for information could do something without the CIA knowing about it.

Leftists, who are inclined in that direction anyway, tend to become terminal conspiracy nut cases when the CIA is involved in anything and sometimes when it is not but they think it is. Thus they like to imagine that if the CIA is involved at all in Guatemala, then it is running the whole country - telling the president what to do, training the army, directing death squads, etc., etc., a la cheap movies and today's equivalent of the dime novel.

The reality is far different. In the first place, the idea that foreign leaders, especially Latin Americans who tend to be nationalistic in addition to whatever else they believe, will turn their countries over to Americans is a fantasy of screenwriters who (1) have never spent much time in Latin America and (2) know even less about intelligence operations.

It might put matters in perspective to look at the CIA as it is in reality rather than as it is portrayed in fiction. Unless it's been changed recently, the CIA bureaucracy is under the National Security Council. The director of Central Intelligence reports to the national security advisor, who reports to the president. The CIA is not the only intelligence operation in the federal government. There are about 30, and they are not under the control of the CIA. The term "CIA agent" is frequently misused. The CIA people are intelligence officers; the foreigners they recruit are agents or spies.

Typically in a small country there might be three intelligence officers, including the station chief, and they would receive their orders from Washington. They might try to recruit some locals as agents to gather information. These agents may or may not be paid, but even if they are, they are paid for the information they track down. They are not fulltime employees, and they are certainly not under any kind of day-to-day supervision.

Despite the fictional image of guns, bombs and narrow escapes, the CIA's main function remains the collection of information. Even during the Cold War, paramilitary operations were few, and today they are probably nonexistent.

Often, when the CIA was assigned to provide training to, say, Afghan resistance fighters, it would sub the work out to the military but retain its main function as the supplier of money.

To return to the situation with Guatemala, if the CIA had an arrangement with the colonel in question for information, that was all it was. These agents are not numskulls. They know that the CIA is using them. They are using the CIA for their own purposes, and the CIA knows that. The CIA is interested in verifying the information it receives; it is not interested in shadowing its agents all day long, which would, of course, lead to exposure. And it darn sure doesn't run other people's governments.

The CIA is a government bureaucracy, and it makes mistakes. But if you're looking for rogue elephants or law-breakers, historically the best hunting ground has always been Capitol Hill and the White House.

It is gut-check time for burned-out journalists

Joseph Spear

One of the extracurricular things I sometimes do, for which I receive no compensation save satisfaction, is volunteer myself as a sounding board for troubled journalists.

I got a call from one on a recent rainy night, a young regional reporter who hacks out a living covering Washington for three or four papers in northern California and one in southern Oregon. To protect his identity, I will call him PENCIL.

"I think I want to come in," PENCIL said.

"Come in? What do you mean, come in? You shouldn't be out in this weather, anyway."

"That's not what I mean," he said. "I've been beat to hell and I'm worn out. I want to come in. You know, like the spy who comes in from the cold. I want to confess my transgressions, pray for a pardon, and maybe go into the meatpacking business."

"What brought this on?"

"I guess it's the whole Limbaugh, Gingrich thing. The Bloated One lambastes the 'liberal media' day in and day out. They'll never be your friends," he tells conservatives, as if anybody of a sound mind would want to be friends with that sourpuss. The Paramount Leader tells everybody we're sick, cynical, nitpicking socialists and despicable demagogues.

"What, these jerks can't remember the Gennifer Flowers story? Paula Jones? They can't recall that six months ago we were already talking about the Democrats wanting to dump Bill? They forget about New York Post columnist Jack Newfield saying Clinton is a lead weight around the Democrats' ankles?"

"So that's the right wing. Then comes the Clinton crowd. The damn liberal media never gives him a break he says.

"Liberal media.' What a hoot. Look, the truth is, I don't know what I am and I don't care. I don't know if I am Democrat or Republican, liberal or conservative. All I know is, I work my butt off trying to get at the truth. I get paid one-fourth what the people I'm writing about make, one-tenth if I'm writing about lobbyists. I make one one hundredth what the real media elite make, those TV ding-a-lings, and all I get is grief."

I said nothing. When PENCIL broke the silence, his voice was quavering. "And now there's the Huffington thing."

"Huffington? As in Michael, the nincompoop who spent, what, $28 million of his own money trying to buy a Senate seat in California? The one they called an empty suit?"

"As in Arianna, his wife."

"The New Age author who flirted with est and the Movement of Spiritual Inner Awareness? That Arianna?"

"That's her. She thinks she and Michael got a raw deal from the media and she is now shopping around a television show she calls Beat the Press. She's planning a segment on what the press failed to ask the president about each week another on success stories the media failed to report each week. And she's going to give a 'pullet surprise,' a rubber chicken, to the reporter who does the stupidest story of the week."

"And get this: She's got a co-host, Camille Paglia, the way-out left-wing academic and author who champions drug legalization, pornography and paganism. Modern liberalism is mush, she says, and the media elite keep serving it up."

"Think about it. We're going to get slammed if we don't buss Newt's glutei, stomped if we don't tout porn and drugs."

Again he fell silent. "What if we told the real truth," he suddenly shouted. "What if we referred to the Huffingtons as The Cipher and The Airhead? Huh? How would they like that?"

"You're depressed, aren't you?"

"Yes, I am very depressed. I want to come in." "Young man," I said, "you need to reread your contract, that part about pointing out the bull and letting the rancid tomatoes, rotten eggs and other things of a highly organic nature fall where they may. We survived Richard Nixon, and you're worried about a damn rubber chicken? Suck it up, son."

The line was dead for about 15 seconds, then PENCIL took a deep breath. "Thanks," he said. "I needed that."

Terrified Haitians resort to killing petty thieves

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — He stole a bar of soap, a loaf of bread and a small bottle of shampoo. For that, a crowd frustrated by increasing crime in Haiti kicked, beat and stoned him to death.

"Summary execution is becoming a daily practice in the capital," wrote the newspaper Le Nouvelliste.

After years of brutal dictatorships, the U.S.-led multinational force that brought President Jean-Bertrand Aristide home from exile in October helped Haitians sleep in peace for a few months.

Now, once again, they fear for their lives.

In February, about 20 homicides were reported in Haiti. The U.N. civilian mission reported 52 in March and 20 in the first half of April.

Other crime is up as well. Last week, two gunmen attacked a medical clinic in broad daylight. Unable to find its director, they robbed patients in the waiting room before escaping on a motorbike.

Burglars frequently target stores in downtown Port-au-Prince, some of which are looted several times a month. The fledgling police force in training at nearby police precinct stations is unable to react quickly or effectively.

So street merchants and neighborhood vigilante committees are trying to fill the gap by defending themselves — and taking their own revenge.

In March, 45 of the 52 reported killings were committed by mobs demanding street justice. There were five such executions in the first half of April, then more after Easter. On four days last week, at least 10 alleged thieves were killed.

Traditionally, thieves are open game in Haiti, and one of the worst insults in Creole is "vole" — thief.

Still, street merchants in the Croix-des-Bossales neighborhood, where many thieves have been killed, are closing early to avoid reprisals.

Metal sculptor Jean-Gerard Merveille was sickened as he watched the mob kill the man who stole bread and soap, but said it was illustrative of the country's problems.

"Their ferocity expresses their hatred of their own miserable lives," he said.

Most Haitians are hungry or malnourished, and inflation is climbing. Most Haitians die before reaching 54 and more than one child in 100 dies before their fifth birthday.

Scientists narrow search for gene

NEW YORK (AP) — A large study of Irish families has found evidence of a possible schizophrenia gene and shown scientists where to look for it.

Past research has shown that genes play a major role in causing schizophrenia. But despite some promising leads, attempts to find them have not panned out.

Finding and studying schizophrenia genes would provide clues for better treatments and possibly prevention.

The new study drew on 186 Irish extended families in which at least two members had schizophrenia or a related disorder. The study included 1,271 family members with psychiatric evaluations and 992 members with genetic material available for study.

Researchers found evidence that a gene that makes people vulnerable to schizophrenia lies somewhere within a small portion of chromosome 6, one of the microscopic stringlike structures that carry human genes.

The gene may be promoting schizophrenia in one-quarter to one-half of the families in the study, said Scott Diehl, senior author of the report in the May issue of the journal Nature Genetics.

It's impossible to say what percentage of schizophrenia in general might be linked to the gene, said Diehl, a genetics expert at the National Institute of Dental Research in Bethesda, Md.

He reported the work with colleagues at the dental institute, the National Institute of Mental Health, the Perkin Elmer Corp. and Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

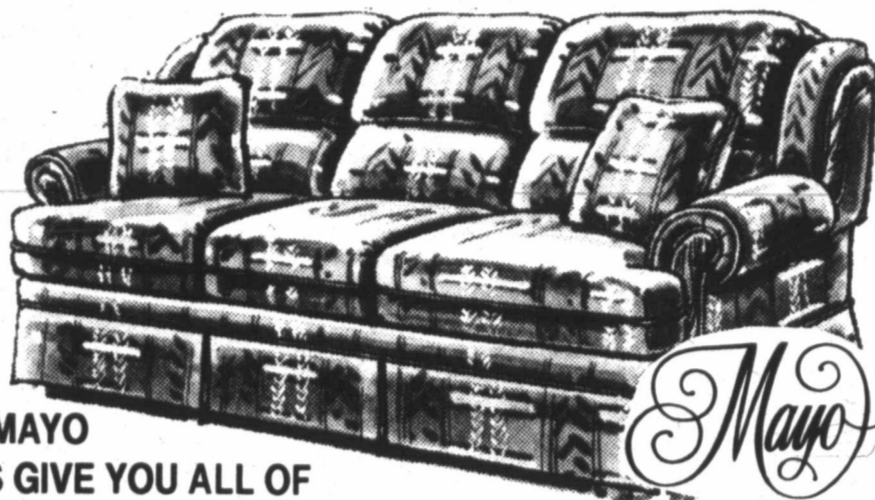

Kenneth Kidd, professor of genetics, psychiatry and biology at the Yale School of Medicine, cautioned that the new work does not prove that a schizophrenia gene lies within the chromosome segment.

But "it's a clue. It needs to be followed up," he said.

With a little help ...

Sofia Solano, right, Miss Amarillo Area 1995, gets scouting help from Brownie Trooper Chelsea Anderson, 6, during her program at the Mother-Daughter Tea Brownie Troop #238 had Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist Church fellowship hall. Solano was explaining her conflict resolution problem known as "Darby Makes a Difference." Darby, a little character she and her father created, teaches children how to use her "A-L-S" formula which stands for Acknowledge there is a problem, Listen to each other, and Solve the problem. This program, Solano said, is to help kids try to solve problems rationally without resorting to fighting. Solano is set to present her program to Pampa school children this month.

County attorney criticizes 'property rights' legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill aimed at protecting private property owners would help operators of sexually oriented businesses, according to a Harris County prosecutor.

Assistant Harris County Attorney Cathy Sisk said in a memo recently that operators of sexually-oriented businesses would be among countless business owners eligible to sue the state under the proposal.

The bill by Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, and Rep. Susan Combs, R-Austin, would give landowners the right to sue for damages if government action reduced property value by 20 percent or more.

Ms. Sisk wrote that under the bill, counties would be subject to lawsuits if ordinances or other regulations caused a drop in property value.

"Sexually-oriented business operators denied permits for particular parcels of property have complained that the location restrictions affect their property values," Ms. Sisk said. "The provisions of (the bill) would subject the county to liability."

Bivins said sexually-oriented businesses wouldn't be able to sue the government in most instances under his bill.

He said sexually-oriented businesses are regulated under health and safety laws and that his bill would prohibit counties from being sued for actions taken to protect public health and safety.

Tom Smith, state director of the consumer watchdog group Public Citizen, said, "This is a budget busting bill that protects the big polluters and the purveyors of porn and is going to cause average taxpayers' bills to go up."

Another O.J. Simpson juror dismissed; blood testimony next item slated for proceedings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The new O.J. Simpson juror reads self-improvement books, was portrayed as a racist by an ousted juror and once said Simpson was the only person with "a visible motive" to kill his ex-wife and her friend.

Juror No. 1427, a 28-year-old Hispanic woman, has been seen reading When I Say No, I Feel Guilty and The Six Pillars of Self-Esteem during breaks in testimony.

The real estate appraiser was taken from the alternate pool Monday to replace a 26-year-old black female flight attendant who told the judge last month, "I can't take it anymore." The flight attendant's complaints were partly responsible for the dismissal of three deputies guarding the sequestered jurors.

The alternate pool is now down to five people, with months of testimony to go and more potential trouble looming. A 38-year-old white woman has asked to be dismissed to care for her sick husband, and Superior Court Judge Lance Ito has noted that a 28-year-old black woman hasn't been paying attention.

It may have to take serious steps to keep a full jury and prevent a mistrial, legal analysts said.

"He will simply not allow jurors to leave for normally accepted purposes. The personal problems will have to be very extreme before he excuses them," said Loyola University law professor Stan Goldman.

If the alternate pool is depleted and the number of jurors falls below 12, both sides must agree to continue or a mistrial will be declared.

After the juror was replaced, the trial ground on with the testimony of police forensic chemist Gregory Matheson. He returns to the stand today, and is likely to reveal blood test results that prosecutors say link Simpson to murder.

Matheson, assistant director of the police crime lab, spent most of his first day on the stand defending criminalists Dennis Fung and Andrea Mazzola, who collected the evidence.

The defense tried to portray them as careless during cross-examination last month, but Matheson said that even the sloppiest collection techniques could yield usable forensic information.

Simpson's trial on charges of murdering Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman has been beset by jury problems, with seven members dismissed since sequestration began Jan. 11.

The replacement of the guards prompted a revolt by 13 panelists, who refused to hear testimony on April 21. They showed up wearing black and demanded a meeting with the judge.

The new juror is a college graduate with a bachelor's degree in business administration. She was singled out as a source of racial tension by dismissed panelist Jeanette Harris, who met with the judge after she was ousted.

Harris, who is black, said the woman was once given special use of the phone and, along with a white juror, hit a black male juror in the head while he was watching a movie. Another time, Harris said, the woman insisted that a window be opened in the jury van, as if "she literally couldn't breathe the same air" as an elderly black juror.

Study finds savings favor healthy workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Medical savings accounts would make winners out of healthy workers and losers out of those with steep medical bills, an independent study suggests.

Almost three-quarters of workers would come out ahead if their employers switched them from a standard, fee-for-service plan with a $200 deductible into a catastrophic coverage plan with a $1,500 deductible, and earmarked the savings for the workers' personal medical accounts, the American Academy of Actuaries said.

They would gain $449 on average from the new arrangement, the actuaries said in a study released today.

But 26 percent of workers would wind up stuck with more of their medical bills, losing $552 on average, the study found.

Older employees and pregnant women would be among the losers.

And there is a risk that as more healthy workers opt for the high deductible-and-catastrophic coverage plan, premiums would soar for those left behind in the sicker pool of people wanting to keep their low-deductible coverage, an academy work group concluded.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, are drafting legislation that would encourage more firms to try them. Several major health reform bills proposed last year included versions of medical savings accounts; the White House proposal did not.

The idea is to make consumers more cost-conscious purchasers of health care by giving them a direct stake in the first dollars they spend on medical bills. People will avoid unnecessary care if they feel they are spending their own money instead of their company's, advocates argue.

The actuaries calculated that the average annual premium now for an individual employee with a $200 deductible is $2,699 and the premium for a $1,500 deductible would be $1,996.

The employer could put the $703 savings into a medical savings account for the employee at no extra cost.

Most workers would come out ahead because they would run up far less than $703 in out-of-pocket medical expenses.

If an employer is not careful, "a destructive cost spiral can result" for those in the low-deductible plan, the study warned.

Judge rules new trial for death row inmate

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A convicted Mexican national who avoided execution a dozen times should get a new trial in the 1979 slaying of an El Paso taxi driver, a judge has recommended.

The recommendation came Monday from Visiting Judge Herb Marsh in the case of death row inmate Cesar Fierro, who has won a stay all 12 times his execution date has been set.

Fierro is accused of killing Nicholas Castanlon, but Marsh ruled there is a "strong likelihood" that Fierro's confession was coerced by El Paso police detective Al Medrano.

The recommendation will be sent to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

Appellate judges, who appointed Marsh to hear evidence in the case, will review the information then decide whether Fierro should get a new trial or if the original conviction should be upheld.

"It is not the conclusion of this court that the defendant should be released from these charges, but that he should be retried by another jury who will render a verdict based on all the evidence, both old and new, that has been developed at these hearings," Marsh wrote.

Lynn Salas, spokeswoman for the district attorney's office, said prosecutors plans to ask the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to uphold the original conviction.

A new trial would be difficult since the killing occurred 16 years ago, Medrano is dead and many of the officers who investigated the case are retired, Ms. Salas said.

Defense lawyers say they will push for a new trial.

"I think he (Marsh) has made the right decision," said Jean Terranova, who is with the Texas Resource Center in Houston.

Fierro, a Juarez native, maintains police forced him to confess by telling him his family was being held in the Juarez jail and would be released if he admitted to the slaying.

Retiree who wanted to travel hit the road without his wife

DEAR ABBY: I would be celebrating my 35th wedding anniversary in June, but my husband, Arnold, left me last year.

He retired and wanted an RV so we could travel.

He made up all sorts of lies and sold our home, pretending we would be on the road most of the time. He stuck me in a condo, and pulled money out of our savings and investments. Then he announced he wanted a separation "for a few months."

Just after Labor Day, he took off in the RV with another woman. I had gone to school with "Sheila" 30 years ago, and she always had a terrible reputation. This was not her first trip with male companions. I found out about her after they had gone — but Arnold was unaware that I knew about Sheila.

They toured the Northwest, and he made sure that I got mail from every state. It made me physically ill.

People shunned me, even though the shame was his. Those few who stood by me were extremely supportive, but no one can bear your pain for you — you must bear it alone.

To top it off, Arnold returned four months later with long hair and a handlebar mustache. (Sheila likes long hair and mustaches.) Abby, he had been a teacher who would reprimand students whose hair touched their collars!

I wish you would write something in your column about male menopause. The American family seems to be on the decline — and a lot of it seems to be attributed to male menopause.

BETRAYED BUT RECOVERING

DEAR BETRAYED: You have my sympathy. But your husband may be suffering less from a hormonal imbalance than a character deficiency. And I say it not because he left you, but because of the underhanded way he did it.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter's boyfriend is making me crazy. He comes to my house and acts like he lives here.

He opens the refrigerator and helps himself to whatever he wants. He drinks one soft drink after another and doesn't care if he is taking the last one.

I don't want to be an old grouch, but I'm tired of going to the kitchen expecting to find the tuna salad or lasagna I made and finding nothing but a dirty dish. Yesterday, I bought two dozen cookies and a gallon of ice cream. This evening, I opened the freezer and they were gone.

My daughter won't say anything to him about his nery behavior. She reads your column every day. Maybe if she sees this, it will sink in.

INDIANA MOM

DEAR MOM: Don't count on it. And don't feel guilty about asserting yourself. Tell your daughter that polite guests do not clean out their hostess's refrigerator on a daily basis, and if she doesn't tell her boyfriend how you feel — you will.

You could compromise by leaving something for the boyfriend in an agreed-upon location. That way you won't have to worry about being eaten out of house and home in your absence.

ATHLETIC SCHOLARSHIPS

OAKHURST, N.J. — Over 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes, according to Joe Tirrell of the National Sports Foundation.

"Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all-state to qualify. Much of this money goes unused," Tirrell said.

Tirrell said a new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information are available to students.

"It takes them step by step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship and includes college and conference listings," Tirrell added.

For information on how to get a collegiate athletic scholarship, send a self-addressed (business size) stamped envelope to the National Sports Foundation, 611A Willow Drive, P.O. Box 940, Oakhurst, N.J., 07755.

McGuire is Cowboys' long shot

By KEVIN LYONS
 Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — When Stephen McGuire looks around the Cowboys' clubhouse, he wonders what might have been.

Four lockers to his right is Russell Maryland, McGuire's roommate at the University of Miami. To McGuire's left, Kevin Williams, also a former teammate, is holding a conversation with Michael Irvin.

And there is McGuire. He scored 30 touchdowns in three seasons with Miami, including 10 as a redshirt freshman on the Hurricanes' 1989 team that won the national title.

Now, he shares a locker with tight end John Davis.

At 240 pounds, McGuire is about 25 pounds heavier than he was in college. And as one of 11 Cowboys running backs under contract during the minicamp that ended yesterday, McGuire is in a situation much different that he thought it would be.

But a torn knee ligament, such as the one McGuire suffered his junior year, can darken such dreams of glory. Now with his third National Football League team in three years, the 25-year-old McGuire realizes he is a long shot to make this club as a blocking fullback and special teams player.

"There's no doubt that the knee injury hurt my progress," said McGuire, rubbing the 10-inch-long scar on the inside of his left knee. "I look at some of the guys in this clubhouse, guys I knew in college, and I think that could be me. But I can't dwell on the past. I have to worry about how to help myself now. I just have to get in shape and try to make this football team."

Cowboys running backs coach Joe Brodsky, who was McGuire's position coach at Miami in 1988, said it will be tough for McGuire.

"He looks to be out of shape, and it is really hard for a guy like that to catch on with somebody," Brodsky said. "When all the rookies go home, he'll be here this week working out, and maybe he'll be in shape. But if he isn't, we're going to have to cut him."

Free-agent running back David Lang, whom the Cowboys signed last week, and second-round draft choice Sherman Williams are favored to win the backup jobs behind Emmitt Smith and Daryl Johnston, Cowboys coaches said.

That means McGuire is competing with guys such as Lincoln Coleman for a roster spot as a fifth running back.

This did not seem the likely fate for McGuire in 1988, when former Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson recruited him out of Brooklyn, N.Y.

After spending his freshman season at Miami on the scout team, McGuire made the starting lineup in two of the next three years. Running mostly from the one-back set, McGuire carried 379 times for 1,748 yards, an average of 4.6 yards per carry. He had a career-high 176 yards rushing against Florida State as a sophomore.

He says he was thinking about entering the NFL draft after his junior year, but that was before he suffered the knee injury against Boston College.

McGuire tried to play as a fifth-year senior in 1992, a move he now says was a mistake because he wasn't fully recovered. San Francisco cut him in camp in 1993. The Miami Dolphins waived McGuire in camp last year — and never resigned him despite losing both starting running backs to knee injuries.

"I thought they would give me a call, but they wanted to go with guys who had more experience," McGuire said. "That was frustrating because I thought I was doing a pretty good job."

"I'm healthy right now. The Cowboys want me to block, and I don't think I'll have a problem. I learned a lot working with Dolphins running back coach Tony Nathan last year. I think I can do some things catching the ball too."

Kentucky Derby hopeful Talkin Man reacts playfully to his groom, Clarence Francis, following his morning workout at Churchill Downs.

Talkin Man becomes one of Kentucky Derby favorites

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Trainer Roger Attfield hopes to see Talkin Man at his best Saturday at Churchill Downs, the site of the Canadian-bred colt's worst performance.

"He hasn't run his best race yet," Attfield said Monday. "Hopefully, it will be May 6."

Talkin Man, however, has run well enough in two starts this year to become the likely second betting choice in the Kentucky Derby behind the D. Wayne Lukas-trained entry of Serena's Song and Timber Country.

"In both of his races he had plenty left in his tank," Attfield said of the colt's 7-length victory in the one-mile Gotham on March 25 and his 7 3/4-length win in the 1 1/8-mile Wood Memorial on April 15.

"The Gotham was evidence of where he was (in terms of progress)," Attfield said.

Until then, it wasn't certain Talkin Man would be in the Kentucky Derby.

Talkin Man, voted Canada's champion 2-year-old, had won three straight stakes at Woodbine near Toronto when he showed up at Churchill Downs for the Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Nov. 5.

"We talked about the Derby last year before the Breeders' Cup," Attfield said. "But after what happened in the Breeders' Cup, we didn't know how he'd be as a 3-year-old."

Talkin Man finished 10th in the Juvenile, beaten 16 lengths by the winner, Timber Country. It turned out Talkin Man had a virus.

There's no doubt Talkin Man is fit for a bid to become the third Canadian-bred Derby winner. Northern Dancer won in 1964, and Sunny's Halo won in 1983.

"From all the reports I'm getting everybody in Canada is rooting for us," said Attfield, a native of England who has trained six Canadian horses of the year. "He's getting quite a bit of fan mail from there already."

Harvesters host Bulldogs in key district contest

PAMPA — The scenario is just about perfect for a Pampa-Borger sporting event.

The two teams meet at 4:30 today at Harvester Field with the winner likely securing a playoff spot.

Borger, the defending District 1-4A baseball champion, is in first place, but the Harvesters' are breathing right down the Bulldogs' necks. Borger has a 7-3 district mark and Pampa is a half-game behind at 6-3.

"If we win, we'll take over first place. If Borger wins, they'll stay in first," said Pampa head coach Dennis Doughty. "Anytime you play Borger it's a big game. When you're playing for first it's an even bigger game."

Borger blanked Dumas, 8-0, and Pampa beat Hereford, 6-3,

Saturday to set up the crucial game.

Borger defeated Pampa, 17-7, in an earlier district contest.

Doughty said junior righthander Todd Finney (7-1) will start on the mound today.

"With Finney pitching, we'll have as good a chance as anybody to beat them," added Doughty.

The Pampa junior varsity defeated Wellington varsity, 11-2, in baseball action Monday.

Duane King, Mike Valles and Ryan Schumacher led Pampa's hitting attack. King was also the winning pitcher.

Pampa won the second game against Wellington junior varsity, 22-2.

The Pampa JV's closed out the season with an 11-3 record.

Pampa soccer team ties for second place in Amarillo tourney

AMARILLO — The Pampa United boys soccer team tied for second place this past weekend at the Amarillo X Classic Tournament.

Pampa tied with two teams from Roswell, N.M. Mexico. Pampa won one game, 2-1, tied two others, and lost one.

"Our defense gave up only two goals during this four game tournament," said Pampa coach Miles Cook. "Our midfield seemed to control a great deal of the game and our strikers did a very good job of keeping the pressure on their defenses."

As usual, goal keeper Abel del Fierro had a fantastic performance, Cook said.

The Pampa team played in the U-19 open division and the competition was excellent, Cook added.

Pampa players participating in the tournament were juniors Ben Padgett, Sean Cook, Randal Odom, Matt Brown, Tim McCavit, Abel Del Fierro, Billy Thomas, Gabriel Jamarillo, Shawn Hurst, and seniors Eric Ritchey, Kyle Johnson, David Kludt, Joe Mendoza and former PHS standout players Jason Soukup and Tim McCavit.

"This was a good mix. They played well together," Cook said.

The tournament was hosted by the Amarillo Soccer Association.

Their next match will be in Lubbock during the weekend of May 29-30.

Rangers fall to Mariners

ARLINGTON (AP) — If all AL West teams fall apart against Seattle like the Texas Rangers do, the Mariners may finally win the division.

Seattle capitalized on five Texas errors Monday night for a 4-1 victory that was the Mariners' 12th in their last 13 games against the Rangers.

The loss was especially disappointing for Texas because it spoiled the delayed debut of manager Johnny Oates, who had left the team during spring training to care for his ill wife at their home in Virginia.

"You never want to play like that in a manager's first game, but you don't want to do that anytime," said Dean Palmer, who began the error parade with a bad throw in the second.

Pressure is on Rockets to win at The Summit, coach says

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich should be able to loosen his tie and relax.

The Rockets set an NBA record with 19 3-point baskets to beat Utah 140-126 in Game 2 of their first-round playoff series and they almost won the first game before falling 102-100 in the final two seconds.

Instead of being calmed by the road games, Tomjanovich thinks the Rockets have more pressure on them than ever, returning to The Summit for Game 3 on Wednesday night.

"I've talked about us being in a similar situation maybe three or four times during the season," Tomjanovich said. "We're home, we've gone out and done real good work on the road and we come back with a chance to get a good home string going and we haven't responded."

"We can't let that happen this time."

The Rockets have had trouble winning at home this season and the Jazz were among the best road teams in the NBA in the regular season.

The Rockets had a dominating 35-6 home record last season. This year they went 25-16.

The Rockets need no more reminders that the best-of-five series is far from over.

"Somebody has to win two games now," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said. "We have to keep that in perspective and really play well on the road."

The Jazz entered the playoffs with the second-best regular season record in the NBA and among the best road teams with a 27-14 record. At one stretch, the Jazz won 15 straight road games.

"I expect them to come out very strong and very determined and on a mission just like we came out up there," Tomjanovich said. "It's going to be a tough series. They've got great players who can execute under pressure."
