PAMPA, TEXAS

April 18, 1995

50¢ DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Good Evening!

AREA

BORGER — Phillips Petroleum is marking Earth Day with a chemical to help save the planet's ozone layer. Cyclopentane, produced at Phillips' Borger Complex, puts air in foam for such thing insulation applications as refrigerator walls. The chemical is being used to replace chlorofluorocarbons which are reported to be destroying the earth's ozone layer from dangerous ultraviolet rays.

Originally used to produce polystyrene cups and picnic plates, the chemical's production is being increased in Borger as the company finds new applications for it.

Floyd Holland, senior solvent specialist with Phillips, said tests are being conducted with the nation's largest and third largest manufacturer of building insulation and with the main refrigerator manufacturer in China.

PAMPA — Liniment in large doses will be the call for some hearty local residents when "Bob" Crosby brings his real live donkeys to town for a Donkey Basketball Show.

The event will be sponsored by the Pampa Lions Club at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 21, at the McNeely Field House.

Braving the game will be teams representing the Jordan Unit guards versus Pampa teachers in the first game and Munday employees versus Lions Club members in the second game.

Winners of the two games will meet head on in an eight-minute championship bout.

The Crosby Donkey Ball Co. from Chippewa Falls, Wis., will be providing the beasts of burden.

Tickets are available from Lions Club members or by calling Teresa Henson at 665-0356.

PAMPA — A medical fund for the late Tracy Hopson Jorde, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Nathan Hopson, has been established.

Mrs. Jorde died Sunday in Lubbock. Donations to the fund may be made at Citizens Bank and Trust.

NATIONAL

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dan Quayle has decided against running for governor of Indiana, his top aide said.

Anne Hathaway, executive director of the political action committee Issues '96, said the former vice president telephoned her Easter night and said neither he nor his wife Marilyn would be a candidate.

"He pulled out of the president's race to spend time with his family, and he felt the governor's race would take time" away from his family as well, Hathaway said in today's Indianapolis Star.

Quayle announced in early February that he would not run for president. In late March, he set a Memorial Day deadline for making up his mind about a gubernatorial run.

After spending Easter weekend with his wife, teenage daughter and two college-age sons, Quayle decided against entering another political campaign, Hathaway said.

Neither of the Quayles could be reached for comment.

Storms cause damage across state

From Staff and AP Reports

Perryton was enjoying sunny skies today after a storm moved through Ochiltree County Monday destroying buildings and fences and dropping more than half an inch of rain.

"The southwest part of the county got a lot of wind," Bobby Kile of the Ochiltree County Sheriff's Office said.

Kile said a trailer house and two barns were destroyed in Monday's storm and fences and high line wires were blown down. Wind gusts of 89 miles an hour were reported about noon Monday.

"We got 0.69 of an inch of rain," he said. To the south, Hemphill County officials said they received very little moisture Monday.

"We really didn't get any rain here in town," said Pam Trimble with the Hemphill County Sheriff's Office in Canadian. "It spinkled."

Hemphill County deputies reported some rain along the Hemphill-Lipscomb County line north of Canadian.

South of Pampa, Pam Dichsel said they failed to get any rain in Lefors.

Sam Pakan in southern Wheeler County said his rain gauge showed less than a tenth of an inch of moisture.

"We didn't receive any measurable rain," he said today.

Pampa reported a high Monday of 61 degrees and 0.13 of an inch of moisture, most from a brief mid-afternoon storm.

Forecasts call for sunny skies today and a return of storms Wednesday across the Texas Panhandle with a 30 percent chance of rain.

Fast-moving strong thunderstorms produced damaging winds that gusted at times to near hurricane force as they roared across North Texas during the night.

Other storms were reported in the Panhandle, South Central Texas and South Texas. The highest wind gust reported south of the Panhandle region was 78 mph shortly after 9 p.m. at the Laredo Airport.

There were no reports of injuries, but trees and power lines were downed, buildings suffered roof damage and torrential rain accompanying the storms forced numerous motorists to stop beside freeways and highways to wait for the storms to pass.

None of the storms stayed around long enough to produce significant flooding because they were moving so fast. Most were going between 50 mph and 60 mph. The activity began with some hail-producing storms in the Panhandle during the late afternoon and ended early today in northeast Texas along the Red River. Some activity in Southeast Texas continued into the pre-dawn hours.

Hail that measured almost an inch in diameter was reported in Randall, Potter and Carson counties in the Panhandle.

Several tornado watches and numerous severe thunderstorm warnings were posted as the storms moved northeastward across North Central and North Texas.

All of the watches and warnings had expired by 2:30 a.m.

At one time, a solid line of severe thunderstorms extended from Sherman to McKinney to Irving to Burleson to Gatesville, moving eastward at 45 mph. Power lines were downed and some trees were uprooted by those storms, authorities said.

Wheeler utilizes volunteer inmate labor

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS News Editor

WHEELER — Prisoners in Wheeler County jail can't get out of jail free, but with a new work program and good behavior, they can slash the length of time served by up to two-thirds.

While that's the good news for the incarcerated, it is also good for Wheeler County taxpayers whose agencies benefit by volunteer labor generated when inmates try to work off their sentences.

It's a win-win situation, said Sheriff Jimmy Adams.

Prisoners serving time for a misdemeanor conviction may earn up to three days credit for each day served if they participate in voluntary day work assignments outside the jail. The inmate must also behave well inside and outside of jail. Inmates chosen for the program are considered a low or medium flight risk, unlikely to assault anyone, have a tidy appearance and must be willing to work hard. They may also work off their fine at a rate of up to $150 per day.

No prisoner may be forced to participate, but those who refuse will serve their sentences day for day, Adams said.

Those held in jail on bond may also work in the program, he said.

Adams explained the law requires prisoner labor be supervised by licensed jailers, heretofore employed in the county jail and not available for outside assignments.

Fifteen city of Wheeler, and Wheeler, Childress and Sherman County employees, plus Adams and commissioner Tom Puryear attended a 40-hour jail school at the Wheeler County Volunteer Fire Department headquarters last week to earn jailer licenses. The class, taught by Randall County Sheriff's Office Sgt. Johnny Sluder, is part of the licensing requirement which also mandates a psychological test, chemical screening, physical examination and written test.

Puryear said three of his four Precinct 2 employees will be licensed as jailers upon completion of the requirements.

"It just happened," said Adams about the project. "They needed some manpower over at the courthouse. And we had some inmates. We knew what the law prescribed."

Inmates under the supervision of Gary Davis, the single Wheeler County licensed jailer employed outside the jail, are working along side contractor James Sabbe landscaping the lawn around the courthouse.

Puryear, who said he is in charge of renovation, said crews are pouring sidewalks, redoing the lawn, removing and replacing trees. Workers have moved the flagpole and added additional handicapped parking, a new sprinkler system, installed new sewer lines and buried all cable lines to the courthouse. Estimated cost of the project is $6,000 to $10,000, Puryear said.

Adams said when prisoners work outside the jail, they tend to have a better attitude.

"We've seen a real good work ethic so far - a little malingering, but generally good," he said.

Deputy teaches jail school

CANYON - Randall County's Sgt. Johnny Sluder teaches school.

Not just any ol' readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmatic school, mind you, but jail school where the topics include transportation of high risk prisoners, report writing and booking procedures.

Sluder, a 12-year veteran of the Randall County Sheriff's Office, travels across the Panhandle teaching what it takes to be a professional, licensed corrections officer through the Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy.

"There was a need to train corrections officers," Sluder said about his start five years ago as a trainer.

The 40-hour "jail school" is only the first step in the licensing procedure, which includes a written examination, physical, chemical screening and psychological test.

"It's a lot of fun when you get into it like I do. I supervise 28 jailers," he said.

He averages 10 jail schools each year. Some are during the day and some are at night.

Doing the job right is the most important issue in corrections, he said.

"If they lose their professionalism, they can't do anything," Sluder said.

Veterans leader wants McNamara to donate royalties from his book

WASHINGTON (AP) — The commander of the American Legion called publicly today for Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara to donate to veterans' causes royalties earned from his autobiographical "confessions" of error in Vietnam.

"If Secretary McNamara is sincere about atoning for sending Americans into a war he knew they couldn't win, then he shouldn't profit financially from this sad, tragic, late confession," said William M. Detweiler, leader of the 3.1-million member veterans' organization.

"The consequences of Secretary McNamara's failed judgment can be seen hobbling down the corridors of our nation's VA hospitals," Detweiler said in a statement.

"The Vietnam legacy lives today in homes still grappling with the consequences of Agent Orange and veterans still struggling with the demons of post traumatic stress disorder," he said.

McNamara's publisher, Times Books, said in a statement: "Mr. McNamara understands why the veterans have raised this issue. Any charitable contributions he intends to make from the proceeds of this book he would prefer to do privately."

McNamara's book has raised fresh controversies 20 years after the war ended including the question of why he waited so long to speak out.

His answer: If he spoke up, he would have aided the Communist forces in Hanoi.

"What should I have said?" he asked Monday with a touch of exasperation during an appearance Monday on PBS' MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour.

"What should I have said that would not have brought aid and comfort to the enemy? I was the secretary of defense!" he said.

Why didn't he resign? His answer: He does not believe in "principled resignations."

"I was a servant of our president. He appointed me. He was elected by the people," McNamara said. "My obligation to our people was to do what their elected representative wanted."

McNamara's book has drawn criticism from many involved in the war, including some who fought there. Some veterans and commentators said that once he became convinced that America could not win, he had a moral obligation to say so publicly.

Other critics said he should at least have spoken up during the four years the war continued after he left office. The war cost the lives of an estimated 3 million Vietnamese and 58,000 Americans.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., appearing on the same program but separately, was disdainful of McNamara's book.

"It's 25 years too late," he said, "and frankly we don't need it."

McCain, a former Navy pilot, was tortured during seven years as a prisoner of war. His view is that the way the war was pursued prevented an American victory.

If McNamara felt as he said he did, "he should have resigned at the time," McCain said. "I think the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who also knew this war was being conducted in a way that they knew there was no possibility of victory, should have resigned as well."

McLean residents ready for Springfest '95 events

MCLEAN — The spirit of Spring fires up in downtown McLean this coming weekend with a city-wide celebration.

Springfest '95 is scheduled to begin Friday and continue through Sunday. Featured activities include a bike-a-thon benefiting St. Jude's Research Hospital, roping demonstrations and an unprecedented "sheriff election."

The outcome of the election is to be announced Friday. The peace-keeping law officer's official duties will involve policing the area for beardless citizens or citizens wearing unsanctioned non-western apparel. Perpetrators will be arrested and thrown in jail unless the proper waiver form is handy for inspection.

Here is an agenda of scheduled events:

• Friday, Saturday and Sunday "Shop till ya drop" city-wide garage sale.

• 7 until 10 p.m. Friday - Welcome to McLean; Springfest sheriff election results; live country music.

• 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. Saturday - Golf scramble; craft and food booths; puppet shows and other children's activities; art exhibits; roping demonstrations; skits and drama; beard contest; Caliper Caper square dancers; live country music by Southern Star, Salt Fork Gang as well as other local talent.

• 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday - Gospel Music sing-a-long at an amphitheater set up especially for the occasion.

The McLean Springfest '95 is being sponsored by the McLean Chamber of Commerce and is being held in conjunction with The National Barbed Wire Show at the Devil's Rope Museum. McLean welcomes all who wish to attend.

Houston Post closes; Hearst Corp. buys assets

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Post, which began publishing in 1880, closed today and then Hearst Corp., owners of the rival Houston Chronicle, purchased its assets.

The transaction ends 94 years of competition between the papers and makes Houston the largest city in the nation to have only one daily metropolitan newspaper.

"While we all regret very much the loss of The Houston Post after 111 years of continuous dedication to the city of Houston and its residents, the recent unprecedented rise in the cost of newsprint has made it impossible to see viability for the city's second newspaper," William Dean Singleton, president and chief executive officer of Consolidated Newspapers Inc., parent company of The Post, said today.

Announcement of the transaction was made today by Singleton and Frank A. Bennack, Jr., president and chief executive officer of Hearst.

No financial terms were announced.

Air Force jet crashes near subdivision, 8 killed

ALEXANDER CITY, Ala. (AP) - Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Clark Fiester and his military assistant were among eight killed when an Air Force jet plunged into a patch of woods, jolting nearby homes.

The jet was traveling from Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland to Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio when it experienced "an in-flight emergency," Air Force officials said. The C-21 jet was attempting to land at the Alexander City Airport when it skipped near homes and crashed at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Other victims on the plane were Col. Jack Clark, Maj. Gen. Glenn A. Proffitt, II, who was director of plans and operations of the Air Education and Training Command at Randolph AFB; Maj. Hubert B. Fisher, who was assigned to the Pentagon; Capt. Paul Carey, an instructor pilot at Randolph, 1st Lt. Paul M. Bowers, the aircraft's commander, and retired Air Force Maj. James K. Horne, who lived in the San Antonio area.

Bait and tackle shop owner Jimmy Keel, who saw the plane up close as it roared over trees near his store, said the rumbling and vibrations made him think of an earthquake.

"It blew my glass doors open - they were rattling and the windows were shaking," Keel said.

He jumped off the porch as the plane headed for his store, then turned and saw the jet's pilot fighting to pull it up and away from the store.

State plans celebration marking rededication of Capitol building

AUSTIN (AP) — Four days of activities this week will celebrate the "rededication" of the Texas Capitol, 107 years after it first opened and 12 years after fire came close to destroying the historic building.

The State Preservation Board, which has overseen the $187 million project, is staging everything from a model-building contest to a parade to mark the occasion.

The massive project has been the most comprehensive restoration of any state capitol in the nation, said Dealey Decherd Herndon, executive director of the State Preservation Board.

"No other state has done an absolutely top-to-bottom, inside-and-outside restoration like we have," Ms. Herndon said. "We've still got a few little things left. But for all practical purposes, it's done."

The work included renovation of the interior and exterior of the Capitol and construction of a 620,000-square-foot underground annex.

The 1856-57 General Land Office Building, oldest surviving state office building in Texas, also was restored. It is located on a corner of the tree-covered Capitol grounds.

Workers demolished a maze of add-on walls, mezzanines and lowered ceilings, removed asbestos and lead paint, and rebuilt original doorways and spaces. New plumbing, electrical, mechanical and fire protection systems were installed.

The outside of the granite building and its metal dome were restored as well. The building was scaffolded, stonework cleaned, mortar replaced and windows repaired.

The work has spanned the administrations of four governors — Mark White, Bill Clements, Ann Richards and the current governor, George W. Bush.

Its necessity became clear on Feb. 6, 1983, when officials said a faulty television set sparked a near catastrophic fire. It smoldered for several hours in what then was the lieutenant governor's apartment, located behind the Senate chamber. It moved into the walls.

"The fire was just getting ahead of us quicker than we could get ahead of it," Acting Fire Chief Brady Pool said at the time. For nearly two hours he thought the building was doomed. "I wouldn't have bought no stock in it."

One person died, 11 firefighters and police officers were injured, three people were rescued and the building was saved.

White saw it all from the Capitol lawn. The following day, he said, "I think we should try to restore it to the dignity and the beauty that was there when it was originally built."

Later that year, lawmakers passed legislation to spend $6 million repairing the fire damage and to create the State Preservation Board.

In 1986, the century-old Goddess of Liberty statue atop the Capitol dome — which had become dangerously cracked — was removed and replaced.

Planning for full restoration began in 1988. The Preservation Board said it would "preserve our Texas heritage as symbolized by the Texas State Capitol" while still using the building for day-to-day government.

Construction work began the following year, when a 65-foot-deep hole was excavated north of the Capitol for the underground extension that opened in 1993.

Sections of the building were closed off and the offices relocated. During the 1993 Legislature, only the House met in the Capitol. The Senate convened six blocks away.

The Capitol reopened in October 1994, and when the 1995 Legislature convened on Jan. 10, the building was fully occupied.

Several areas are designated "historically significant spaces" and officials say they were considered most important for restoration to original condition.

Judge moves to bar abuse experts testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erik and Lyle Menendez may be barred from putting child-abuse experts on the stand to testify for them at their second murder trial.

In a preliminary ruling, Van Nuys Superior Court Judge Stanley M. Weisberg said Monday that defense attorneys "will not be able to put on the abuse expert evidence and will not be able to refer to it in opening statements" unless they resolve prosecutors' objections.

Weisberg said he would meet with attorneys Wednesday to plan a hearing on the issue. The trial is scheduled to begin June 12.

Prosecutors argue that a law allowing expert testimony in cases of women defendants who claim their actions were the result of being battered should not be applied to cases where defendants are claiming they were battered children.

Lyle Menendez, 27, and Erik Menendez, 24, are charged with first-degree murder in the Aug. 20, 1989, shotgun slayings of their millionaire parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez.

The brothers admitted in their first trial that they killed their parents but said they did so in fear for their lives after years of physical, emotional and sexual abuse. Prosecutors accused them of killing out of hatred and greed.

Rare Japanese ibis lays eggs

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese crested ibis on loan from China has laid three eggs after mating with the last known male of the species in Japan, raising hopes the birds will not become extinct.

It was the first time a Japanese crested ibis has been known to lay an egg in Japan since 1982, and the event led many Japanese newspapers and television news programs.

The male, Midori, is more than 20 years old — the equivalent of 80 human years. The ibis from China, Feng-feng, is 4.

The Japanese crested ibis, known for its white body and red face, once lived in vast colonies throughout the Japanese archipelago. But only two are known to exist in Japan today as a result of over-hunting and changes in their habitat.

The birds were observed mating on April 9, and then built a nest. Because of Midori's advanced age, it is possible the eggs were not fertilized.

Feng-feng laid her third egg early Monday at Sado Ibis Conservation Center in Niigata prefecture, about 170 miles northwest of Tokyo.

"We will watch her a few more days before we put the eggs in an artificial incubator," Yoshinori Kaneko of the center said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

O.J. trial taints judicial system

At the beginning, luminaries of the legal profession, from Los Angeles District Attorney Gil Garcetti to various private attorneys, expressed hope that the O.J. Simpson trial would be handled so as to reflect credit on and enhance the credibility of the American judicial system. The latest flap about yet another dismissed jury member suggests it hasn't turned out that way. All those directly concerned seem to have had that goal in mind. The direct participants have been reasonably scrupulous and conscientious. But maybe it was too tall an order.

Jeanette Harris, dismissed from the jury, has raised enough questions in media interviews to turn what already had overtones of unscripted soap opera into mass confusion.

Predicting a hung jury, she also noted that the sheriff's deputies who are supposed to monitor phone conversations and discussions don't always do so. She hinted that "there are racial problems and the deputies, some of them - not to badmouth the Sheriff's Department - but some of them are promoting it." Judge Ito has ordered an investigation into these and other suggestions about possible jury misconduct.

Perhaps these are simply the calculated remarks of somebody who didn't want to be excused from the jury and wanted to make a splash. Whether founded or not, however, they add to an impression many viewers are reluctantly coming to - that the trial has not so much reinforced confidence in the American judicial system as it has convinced people that the system is deeply flawed and could use some fixing.

Do trials have to take forever? If somebody is accused of a crime, does a chance at justice depend on the size of the person's pocketbook? Are people of different races, or people in different economic circumstances treated differently by a system whose ideal is impartiality?

To be fair, the O.J. Simpson trial is not a typical trial. It is unwise to use it alone to judge the judicial system. But some of the problems in that case do reflect more widespread problems that thoughtful people - including people in the system - have been wrestling with for years.

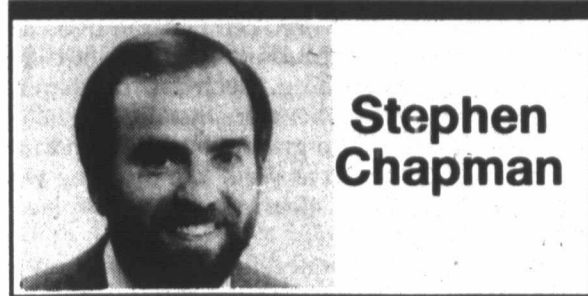

Lexis Counsel Connect, a computerized attorneys' information system in Washington, D.C., for example, recently sponsored an online seminar on ideas for unclogging courts and shortening trials developed by D.C. Superior Court Judge Curtis Von Kamm. These include time limits for each side's case, radical reductions in the number of exhibits permitted, allowing jurors to ask their own questions, open courtroom conferences of experts and a 45-minute time limit on summations.

Is it really possible to have a jury that is sequestered for a long time and required not to talk among themselves about the case? Are preemptory challenges - jurors dismissed without a reason required - by either side a good idea? Have we come to a situation where the main requirement to be a juror - to hold somebody else's life in your hands - is to demonstrate that you don't pay much attention to what's going on around you? These and other questions deserve intense discussion.

The most fascinating suggested reform comes from the Fully Informed Jury Association. This group contends that under common law and the American tradition until very recently, juries have the power and the right to judge not only the facts of the case, but to look critically at the law itself - to decide for themselves whether it's a good law or a bad one, or whether it should have been applied in this instance - and that juries should be informed of this power. That makes the jury the ultimate safeguard against bad laws and arbitrary enforcement and prosecution.

However the Simpson case comes out, legal reform will be a hot issue - as well it should be.

Are we sure of what we want?

Stephen Chapman

Immigrants are none too popular at the moment, and that goes double for the illegal variety. California's Proposition 187, denying assorted government benefits to unapproved foreigners, got slam-dunk approval from voters in November, and several other states are entertaining the same idea.

California Gov. Pete Wilson jumped aboard Proposition 187 in his 1994 reelection campaign and, judging from the noises emanating from Sacramento, thinks he can ride it all the way to 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. Pat Buchanan, however, had the issue first and will not let anyone be more vociferous than he in denouncing imported people who don't look like they would fit in at the Buchanan family reunion.

The Washington-based Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR), which wants to yank up every drawbridge, recently published an 80-page booklet called Ten Steps to Ending Illegal Immigration, which takes for granted that everyone agrees this phenomenon is a terrible scourge and needs to be halted - the only question being how.

Its recommendations are not on the gentle side. They include expanding the search powers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, denying automatic citizenship to children of illegal immigrants born on American soil, requiring everyone to carry a work eligibility card, putting more undocumented foreigners in jail while they await deportation and cracking down on job sites to find illegal workers and "put their employers out of business" - as well as a "general moratorium" to stop all legal immigration.

Now Americans are undoubtedly inclined to oppose illegal immigration, because, bless their souls, they are inclined to oppose anything that is against the law. That was the political beauty of Proposition 187 - it was supposed to punish only lawbreakers. But if Americans had to endure any personal inconvenience to address the problem - carrying a national ID card, paying higher taxes to expand enforcement or putting up with INS raids at the office or on the farm - they might decide the problem is not really that serious.

Much of the resentment of illegal immigrants, of course, stems from the dark suspicion that they come here and abuse us by lolling around on welfare and running up big bills at the nearest public health clinic. Hence the impulse, embodied in Proposition 187, to bar them from welfare, deny them routine free medical care and kick their kids out of the public schools. The theory is that we'd save money and they'd go home.

But the truth is that most illegal immigrants come for just the opposite reason - they want to work at any low-paying, backbreaking job they can find. That's why FAIR places such stress on making sure they don't get hired. As long as illegal immigrants can find some paid employment here, they will keep coming.

What most Americans don't appreciate is that immigrants, illegal as well as legal, are an indispensable part of the economy. Glenn Garvin reports in the April issue of Reason magazine that nearly a third of all the nation's full-time farm workers, for example, are here without the blessing of the INS.

What would we get if we sent them all packing? Not more jobs for Americans - few of whom are interested in picking lettuce under a blazing sun in some Godforsaken outpost of rural California but more jobs for machines.

Some produce can't be harvested mechanically, of course, but without cheap and hard-working immigrant laborers, most of it wouldn't get harvested at all. "I suppose there's some level of pay at which Americans would be willing to do that work," Dalton Yancey of the Florida Sugar Cane League told Reason. "The problem is you could fly fruit in from Chile cheaper."

As Zoe Baird can attest, illegal immigrants also abound in the field of domestic help. If they were all kept out and legal immigrants were sharply reduced in number, most of the jobs probably also wouldn't be filled. A lot of women would find it cheaper to quit their own jobs and stay home. Baird can afford help at any price, but the average factory worker or school teacher is not so lucky.

There are plenty of other jobs where undocumented workers can be found, doing useful tasks at bargain wages. If they were all deported tomorrow, there would be an awful lot of garages with no one to park cars, a lot of restaurants with no one to wash dishes or bus tables and a lot of lawns going unmowed. The effect would be much more noticeable and painful than if, say, Pat Buchanan quit working - which come to think of it, he has.

But all this may not dawn on Americans until they have already embraced stern action to keep out illegal immigrants. They may then recall H.L. Mencken's adage that democracy is the theory that the common people know what they want - and deserve to get it good and hard.

Let freedom ring, but only for some

Charley Reese

Stop illegal immigration. Stop providing services for illegal immigrants. Drastically cut legal immigration.

That should be high on the agenda of every American who wishes to preserve the United States as he has known it. If these three things are not done, the United States will be unrecognizable by the end of the century.

The Congress of the United States stupidly allows 900,000 legal immigrants into the country every year. That's one new major city per year. And that doesn't count the illegals and the refugees. Since 1970, immigration has accounted for 44.3 percent of the U.S. population increase.

Moreover, a majority of these people are not Europeans who would at least share our cultural and political traditions. They are largely from areas of the world where the tradition is far from democratic, where violence as a political means of persuasion is a common tool, where authoritarian rule rather than liberty has been the way of life and where collectivism rather than individualism has been the cultural standard.

When California citizens rallied to get Proposition 187, which bars public services to illegals, on the ballot and then passed it by an overwhelming majority, death threats against the Americans were common. Furthermore, the liberal elite with great financial resources fought the proposition tooth and nail and yet lost. The message of that is that the American people, if they will have the will and the courage, can reclaim their country.

Somewhere down the line, we must force Congress to take a hard look at the tax-exempt foundations, for these offspring of multinational corporations provide much of the funding for - in fact, in some cases, virtually create - the organizations which are fighting against American citizens.

The big contributor to all the anti-immigration reform outfits, which are constantly challenging American immigration laws and opposing all efforts to reform them, is the Ford Foundation.

A simple reform would do the trick. Foundations should be required to use their vast resources only to feed the hungry and provide medical care to the indigent; otherwise, they should lose the tax-exemption on their billions of dollars. It is outrageous to allow these foundations to be a major, behind-the-scenes player in political and social issues with tax-exempt dollars.

Americans are being brainwashed daily that the only virtue is tolerance. Ironically, the people who do the brainwashing are themselves intolerant of Americans, American culture and our historical European and Mediterranean roots.

But, in fact, cultural differences do make a difference. You should visit Tijuana and San Diego, El Paso and Juarez, and then ask yourself what accounts for the obvious and significant differences in these cities, which are geographically cheek to cheek?

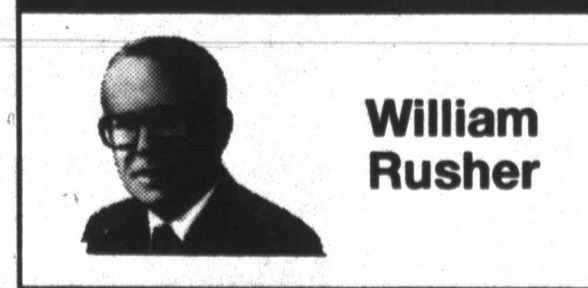

The answer is that Tijuana and Juarez are Mexican and San Diego and El Paso are American. There is, indeed, a huge difference between the Mexican culture and the American culture, and these differences have significant political, economic and social consequences. To cite just one example, you think America is violent? Mexico has a much higher homicide rate than the United States.

The idea expressed in the Declaration of Independence, that every person is born free with unalienable rights given to him by God, is a uniquely American concept with Anglo-Saxon roots.

If you asserted that concept in most countries of the world, the ruling elites would laugh in your face, and in many countries, not even the people believe it.

What makes America, America, is not geography. It is people and their cultural and historical roots. Change the people and you change the country. Time has run out. As in 1776, the conflict has begun. Preserve America or lose it. That's the one choice.

Republicans seem to lack 'the right man high'

William Rusher

Looked at from the overall strategic standpoint of the conservative movement, the prospects for 1996 are a frustrating affair.

Conservatism has come a long way since the 1950s, when it was the hobby of a small minority. In 1964, under the banner of Barry Goldwater, it seized control of the Republican Party. In 1980, under the leadership of Ronald Reagan, it captured the White House. In 1994, under the dynamic direction of Newt Gingrich, it ended the Democrats' 40-year rule over the House of Representatives. Surely, logic would suggest, 1996 ought to be the year when the conservative movement, represented politically by the Republican Party, at last gets it all together - the presidency, the House, and the Senate - and returns this country to the people, who founded it.

What's more, there are signs that the electorate is ready to cooperate. Nothing in politics is inevitable, but the mood displayed by the voters last November, the hapless performance of the incumbent Democratic president, and the dash and vigor of the Republican majorities in Congress, all suggest that the prospects for Republican victory in 1996, in both the presidential and congressional contests, are excellent.

Why, then, aren't conservatives walking around with what Mark Twain once called "the serene expression of a Christian holding four aces"? The trouble is that they do not have an obvious successor to Goldwater and Reagan running for the Republican presidential nomination.

A somewhat similar problem faced British army colonel John Hunt as he planned the 1953 expedition that staged the first successful ascent of Mt. Everest. The problem, as Hunt saw it, was to put "the right man high at the right time." As we now know, he succeeded brilliantly, installing Hillary and Tenzing over night in Camp IX, at 27,900 feet, on the southeast ridge that led up to the 29,028-foot summit. The next morning they climbed the rest of the way.

Many conservatives feel that, as far as 1996 is concerned, they simply don't have "the right man high at the right time."

There is, of course, no lack of avowed conservatives, or for that matter real conservatives, seeking the nomination. But all of them have their own special problems. Pat Buchanan and Bob Dornan, for example, are surely conservative enough for anybody's taste, but realistically neither has a chance of being nominated: Just as a matter of personal style, they scare too many people.

Lamar Alexander, on the other hand, is downright soothing, but he spent 30 years in Republican politics without ever identifying himself as a conservative. He underwent a Saul type conversion around last Nov. 9, and since then has been demanding that Washington be chopped up and distributed among the state capitals. But this strikes many conservatives as, if admittedly not a dollar short, still at least a day late.

Pete Wilson, newly on the scene, will undoubtedly proclaim himself a conservative too. But anyone tempted to believe him ought to consult some California conservative of their acquaintance before signing up.

Of the two major contenders, Bob Dole (who entered Republican politics before there was a conservative movement) cannot pretend to be a "movement conservative." But he has taken care not to offend the conservative movement beyond endurance, and his reward is that the movement probably wouldn't exercise against him the veto it could almost certainly impose on any candidate of whom it genuinely disapproved.

It is Phil Gramm, however, who will probably acquire the active support of most movement conservatives. His views are broadly identical to their own, yet he has largely avoided Buchanan's bad habit of polarizing voters. But can Gramm overtake Dole's impressive lead, especially in the northern primaries? That, as we wise old pundits like to say, remains to be seen.

Inmates release hostages, surrender to prison officials after 11 hour standoff

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Willie Gary, a convicted robber with long dreadlocks, was first to emerge from the barricaded prison cafeteria. He turned to the officers crouched around him with fingers on the triggers of their weapons and said, "Boo."

Then four other inmates came out, ending an 11-hour hostage standoff Monday that began when prisoners rebelling over new rules — including one requiring short hair — stabbed five guards in a series of fights.

Four of the guards were in serious condition with head, chest or back wounds. The fifth wasn't seriously hurt. The inmates who seized the hostages denied being involved in any stabbings at the medium-maximum security Broad River Correctional Institution.

"It comes down to the point where your soul is being taken, your dignity is being taken away, you've got nothing left," said one of the hostage-takers, Theodore Harrison, who is serving a life sentence for murder and armed robbery.

One hostage, a female corrections officer, was released earlier in the day. Jim Harvey, a regional prison administrator, got the inmates to release the other two prison workers after agreeing to let them talk to the media.

But first he had to persuade the inmates that they wouldn't be shot by the three dozen officers crouched along a wall outside the cafeteria.

"We're going to do what we said we're going to do," Harvey told them through the cafeteria doors. "They ain't going to shoot you if I'm with you."

About 10 minutes later, the hostages emerged from the cafeteria, shaken but unharmed. The inmates lay face down in the prison yard and surrendered, then were led in shackles to an empty hall for a five-minute interview with an Associated Press reporter, a photographer from The (Columbia) State and a cameraman from WYFF-TV of Greenville.

Including Gary, three of the inmates wore dreadlocks, a style of braids popularized by the Jamaican Rastafarian religion. One inmate wore a Mike Tyson T-shirt.

"What happened today, the new commissioner gave us an ultimatum," said Gary, who is serving 20 years for armed robbery.

Under rules imposed by new Corrections Director Michael Moore that take effect Wednesday, inmates can wear their hair no longer than the collar and must be clean-shaven except for small moustaches.

Some Muslim and Rastafarian inmates say cutting their hair would violate their religious beliefs. Harrison said his fellow inmates have been infuriated by the haircut rule, the elimination of work-release furloughs and promises from Gov. David Beasley to abolish parole and make prison time harder to serve.

Gary, 46, said prison officials should have expected violence in reaction to the new haircut order. "It is inhumane to deface a person," he said.

The policy also might be illegal, said Steve Bates, director of the state American Civil Liberties Union chapter, which has joined a court challenge of the haircut rule.

"The courts haven't resolved it yet," Bates said.

Moore, a former Texas prison administrator who took office in February, directed Harvey by walkie-talkie from his headquarters next to the prison. He wouldn't comment about the uprisings.

The other hostage-takers were identified as Kevin Smith, 29, serving 25 years for armed robbery; Roderick Folks, 20, serving 10 years for assault and battery with intent to kill; and Sheldon Crawford, 24, serving 30 years for manslaughter.

Learning Texas history

Looking like Texas hero Davy Crockett, Kevin Turner, above right, a fourth grader at Travis Elementary School, gets a few chuckles from a fellow student at the Mobile Museum of Texas which rolled into town last week. Visiting the Texas Experience Mobile Museum that rolled into town last week was Josh Natchigall, at right, a Travis Elementary School fourth grader who was able to try on a cowboy hat and chaps.

The mobile museum was directed towards fourth grade and seventh grade social science students who study Texas history. The Mobile Museums of Texas exhibit, headquartered in Spring, was brought to Pampa under the sponsorship of the White Deer Land Museum and the Panhandle Museum Resource Sharing Consortium. Seventh graders in Pampa Middle School social studies classes visited the museum Thursday morning as it was parked by the school. In the afternoon, fourth graders toured the museum as it was parked outside the White Deer Land Museum. The objective is to spark students' interest in Texas history.

Ex-employee charged with attempted murder

CARTHAGE, Texas (AP) — A former employee is expected to be charged with attempted murder today after allegedly shooting an executive at cup-making factory and holding another hostage for more than 10 hours.

Robert Bonner, 31, of Marshall, surrendered peacefully at about 10:30 p.m. Monday, 12 hours after police say the incident began with the shooting of Ernest McNeill, the personnel manager of Carthage Cup Co.

Bonner held Steve Indrelunas, director of manufacturing, hostage from about 10:30 a.m. until just before 9 p.m.

Neither Bonner nor his hostage appeared harmed.

McNeill, 56, of Carthage, was reported in stable condition at East Texas Medical Center after undergoing surgery for gunshot wounds to the leg and abdomen.

Carthage Police Chief Duane Baushke said Bonner was fired several months ago from his job as a forklift operator at the East Texas plant.

Carthage Cup, in this community about 150 miles east of Dallas, employs about 130 people making plastic cups, officials said.

Following the release of Indrelunas, Carthage police officer Carl Mizzola and an FBI agent began negotiations with Bonner.

Bonner was being held pending arraignment.

Baushke said he will be charged with attempted murder. Police are also considering charges of kidnapping and aggravated assault.

"I'm tickled to death no one else was hurt," Baushke said.

Department of Public Safety trooper Milton Hall said

Indrelunas, 37, was taken to a hospital for observation, but appeared fine.

"Other than being shaken up, as anyone would be in this situation, he's unharmed. Physically, he's OK," Hall said.

Baushke said Bonner came into the plant's administrative offices about 10:30 a.m. and asked for a meeting with McNeill and plant manager Brent Brooks.

Brooks was unavailable, so Indrelunas joined McNeill in the meeting with Bonner, Baushke said. Both McNeill and Indrelunas live in Carthage.

"During the meeting, a witness overheard McNeill say, 'You don't want to do that,' and two shots were fired," DPS spokeswoman Sherri Deatherage Green said.

McNeill was allowed to crawl out of the room after he was shot, Ms. Green said.

Brando daughter commits suicide

PAPEETE, French Polynesia (AP) — Cheyenne Brando, the troubled daughter of actor Marlon Brando, committed suicide after five years of depression and anguish over her boyfriend's death, family associates said. She was 25.

Ms. Brando hanged herself Sunday at her mother's home in Punaauia, 6 miles west of Papeete, the French Polynesian capital on the island of Tahiti.

Family associates, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Ms. Brando had been distraught since the killing of her boyfriend, Dag Drollet, in 1990 by her half-brother, Christian Brando. Doctors said she had tried to kill herself twice previously.

"I no longer want to live," Cheyenne Brando is quoted as saying in a recent biography of her father by Peter Manso. "I want to die because it isn't possible that (Drollet) is no longer here. ... Never will I find another like him."

Her body was moved to an aunt's home in the town of Faa. Only very close family members were able to view the body and pay their respects.

Ms. Brando's half-brother Miko Brando arrived in Papeete today, hours before local radio reports said a funeral was scheduled. Marlon Brando was not on the flight.

Key to healthy dining is eat in moderation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Go ahead and have a plate of fettuccine Alfredo, even though a consumer group calls it a "heart attack on a plate." The same goes for kung pao chicken or Mexican food, even a deli sandwich loaded with meat and mayonnaise. Just do it in moderation.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest shocked the sensitive palates of the American public with reports of the gobs of fat lurking in one popular restaurant meal after another.

But nutritionists say those who love to dine out shouldn't despair.

"There's nothing that they've come out and told us that we can't eat," Edith Hogan, spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association, said.

"At any weight, at any age, you can eat healthier," said Judith Stern, professor of nutrition and internal medicine at the University of California, Davis. "But you don't have to go to extremes."

In other words - moderation in all foods.

Roundly criticized for the way it presents information, CSPI says the surveys are meant to help educate diners about their menu selections, not browbeat them into abandoning their favorite restaurant meals.

"We're not saying that somebody should never eat fettuccine Alfredo or kung pao chicken or a tuna salad sandwich again," said executive director Michael Jacobson. "We're saying you should know that the nutritional content of the average fettuccine Alfredo is 1,500 calories and 97 grams of fat."

The government recommends a daily fat limit of 65 grams for adults.

Jayne Hurley, CSPI's senior nutritionist and study author, said that most people believe their diets are balanced, but that statistics showing that a growing proportion of adults are seriously overweight paint a very different picture.

Last July, the National Center for Health Statistics reported that the proportion of overweight adults had jumped to a third between 1980 and 1991, after holding steady at about a fourth of the adult population between 1960 and 1980.

Alan Forbes, former director of nutrition and food sciences at the Food and Drug Administration, said most adults know they should reduce dietary fat and eat more fresh fruits and vegetables. But he said they're not doing it, as the figures show, because they are "fed up with scare tactics" by groups like CSPI.

A recent study of menu diaries from 2,000 households by the United Fresh Fruit & Vegetable Association, representing the fresh produce industry, found that while 96 percent of consumers acknowledged the need to eat more fruits and vegetables, they were actually eating less produce than they thought. Survey results were released last February.

And a CSPI survey last October of 1,000 adults discovered that while 80 percent of those familiar with the group agreed that its surveys were a "valuable public service," less than half, or 43 percent, said the information made a difference in how they eat when dining out.

"The concepts that (CSPI raises) from time to time are not absurd," said Forbes, a member of the American Institute of Nutrition. "But they end up using scare tactics, creating fear rather than educating."

Court rejects GM rebate deal in pickup truck case

DETROIT (AP) - A court's rejection of a deal to give the owners of allegedly fire-prone General Motors Corp. pickups $1,000 coupons toward new GM trucks could reopen the thorny debate over whether the vehicles should be recalled.

In its ruling Monday, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia agreed with critics who branded the rebates a "sophisticated marketing program."

The appeals court said the coupons would be worthless to rental companies and "less wealthy" truck owners unable to purchase new GM trucks. The court also questioned the $9.5 million that plaintiffs' lawyers would have been paid.

"Additionally, the failure of this settlement to abate the lingering safety problem, despite the vociferousness of the arguments for some recall or retrofit... enhances our conviction that this settlement is inadequate," the ruling said.

The case involves "sidesaddle" fuel tanks on 5 million to 6 million Chevrolet and GMC C-K pickups built from 1973 to 1987. Last fall, Transportation Secretary Federico Pena said the trucks were prone to catch fire in a crash. He blamed the design, which places fuel tanks outside the frame rails, for 150 deaths.

GM denies that the design is unsafe.

The plaintiffs argued that the truck design and lawsuits over fiery accidents had reduced the value of their vehicles. The Philadelphia settlement combined 36 class-action lawsuits filed in all states but Texas, where a judge approved a separate settlement affecting 650,000 truck owners. That settlement is being appealed.

In December, GM averted a recall by reaching an agreement with the government to spend about $51 million on safety and research programs. U.S. District Judge William H. Yohn Jr. approved the settlement later that month.

Some industry analysts estimated a recall would have cost GM $1 billion. The 3rd Circuit said that Yohn overestimated the cost of the settlement - put at $1.9 billion to $2.8 billion at the time - because of a failure to consider all factors.

"We're delighted that the court threw out a bad decision that rewarded lawyers and did nothing for consumers," said Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety, which had appealed the settlement.

A General Motors Corp. spokesman said the company would have no comment until its lawyers were able to study the ruling.

The plaintiffs' lawyer, Diane

Nast, did not return a call for comment.

It was the second rejection in less than a month of a class-action settlement related to an auto safety issue.

In the other case, a federal judge in New Orleans rejected a settlement for owners of Ford Bronco IIs, saying the deal gave owners little more than safety information that Ford had to send them anyway. The proposal involved giving each owner a safety kit, flashlight and cellular telephone.

The GM case now returns to district court, where Ditlow said he and other critics of the trucks will continue to press for a recall.

Home schooling workshop scheduled

LUBBOCK — The Advanced Home Schooling Workshop featuring Gregg Harris from Gresham, Ore., and special guests Mike Bolinsky and Tim Lambert will be presented Friday evening and Saturday, April 21-22 at the Indiana Avenue Baptist Church, 8315 Indiana Avenue, in Lubbock.

The Friday sessions, from 7-10 p.m., are open to the public at no charge.

The tuition for the Saturday sessions will be $35 per couple, $25 per individual or $10 for grandparents (60 years or older) and students between the ages of 13 and 18 years.

Pastors (one per church) may attend free of charge.

Harris, a nationally recognized author and speaker, will appear on large screen video. Topics to be addressed by Harris include "Home School & the New World Order," "The Seasons of Life for Your Family," "How to Have an Orderly Home" and "Sunday Schools and Church Youth Groups."

On Saturday afternoon, Lambert, executive director of Texas Home School Coalition, will speak concerning "Home Schooling Laws in Texas."

He will be available to answer questions at the THSC booth in the exhibit hall throughout the workshop.

Bolinsky, who has been recognized as National Science Teacher of the Year, will present the following topics: "How Do You Spell Science? F-E-A-R," "How Important are the Four R's?" and "Is There a Solution? It's as Easy as H2O."

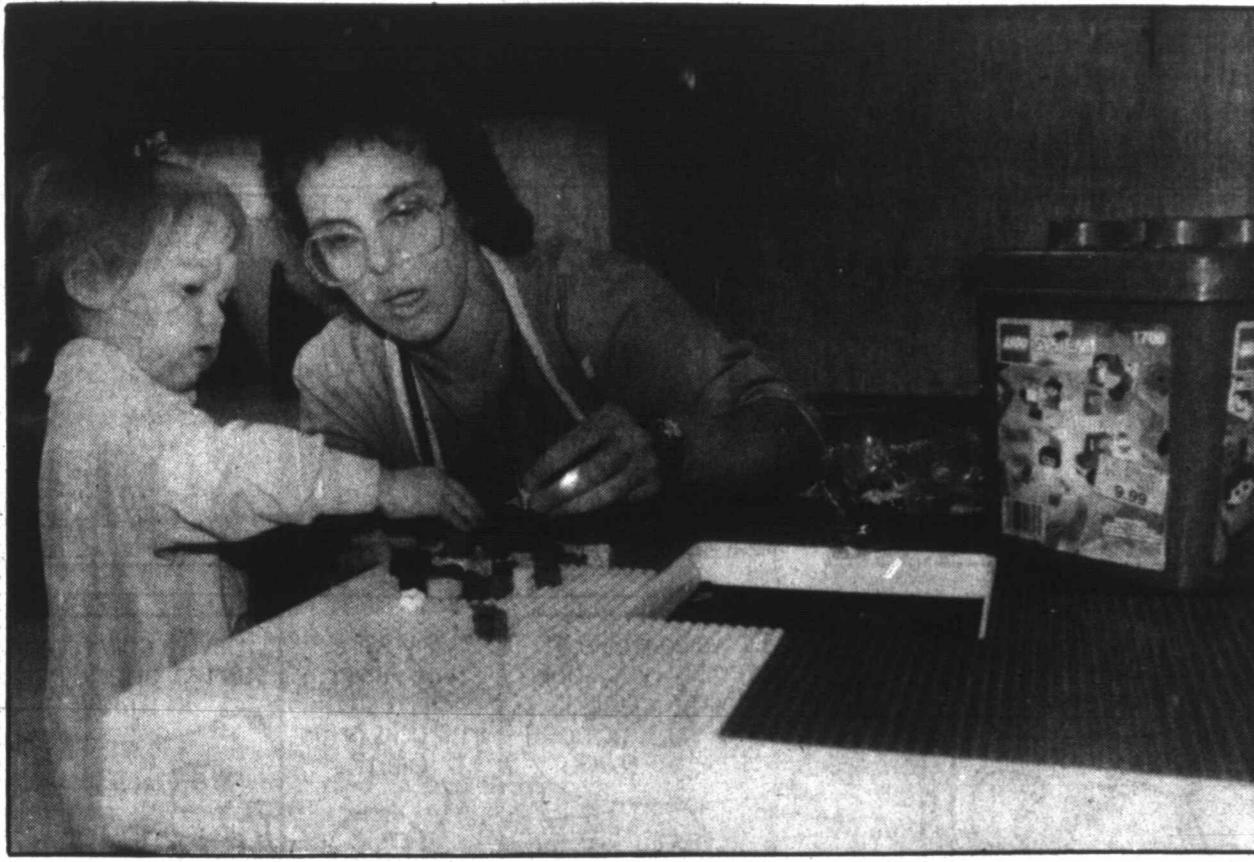

For more information or to request a registration form for this workshop, call Sandra Schuneman in Pampa, 665-8644, between the hours of noon and 9 p.m.

Middle school students were visiting Freedom Museum U.S.A. as a project. The young women counted 760 bricks. The number would be used in a math project. They also had to write a paper about what they did at the museum.

Hospice celebrates National Volunteer Week

PAMPA — Hospice of the Panhandle, a not-for-profit agency caring for the terminally ill, will join many organizations around the country in observing National Volunteer Week, April 23 - 29.

Hospice of the Panhandle will use this opportunity to recognize the contributions of its local volunteers, while encouraging all citizens to become involved as volunteers in their community.

Guided by the theme, "Volunteers — Changing the Future," Hospice of the Panhandle will extend a special "Thank You" to its volunteers through two awards breakfasts on Saturday, April 29.

Those volunteers living in Pampa and the surrounding area will be recognized at a breakfast scheduled for 9 a.m., April 29, at First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray, in Pampa. The Borger, Fritch, and Stinnett-area volunteers will be honored at a breakfast set for 9 a.m. that day at First Christian Church, 20 S. Bryan, in Borger.

Sherry McCavit, executive director of Hospice of the Panhandle, urges all area residents to renew their own commitments to improving the quality of life through volunteer service.

"Our volunteers make a significant impact on the kind of care we give our terminally ill patients and their families," McCavit said. "Our medical director, Dr. Wil Beck, volunteers 100 percent of her time spent caring for our patients. In addition, our patients are aided in numerous ways by the more than 120 volunteers throughout the nine counties of the Texas Panhandle we serve."

McCavit explained the Hospice of the Panhandle's volunteers work in many areas, helping with clerical work in the Pampa or Borger offices, visiting patients and families, delivering flowers and gifts to the patients, sitting with patients so that caregivers can have a few moments to themselves, and taking part in numerous special projects.

"I'm especially proud to announce that two of our faithful volunteers, Bob and Beth Karr of Pampa, have recently been chosen as the 1995 Texas Hospice Organization's Volunteers of the Year," McCavit added. "This prestigious honor couldn't be given to two more deserving people. This couple truly reflects the wonderful spirit of volunteerism."

National Volunteer Week was first observed in 1972 and is now recognized each year by a special message from the President.

Medical Foundation Improving Quality of Health Care

The Texas Medical Foundation (TMF), the Medicare peer review organization for the state of Texas, has embarked on an ambitious new project which could redefine the way health care is provided in the future.

The innovative project, called the Health Care Quality Improvement Program, reflects a major shift in focus in how health care is rendered throughout the nation.

In the past, Medicare's focus was to advocate quality health care for Medicare patients through review of their medical records, usually after the patient was discharged from the hospital. This review demonstrated that most Medicare patients generally receive quality health care.

The new focus will strengthen the medical community by educating hospitals and doctors of the best medical practices for treating specific illnesses. Through studies and analysis, the program is designed to bring medical practices which are considered acceptable to a higher level of quality.

For example, recent medical studies done on heart-related chest pain (angina), which accounts for 30,000 Medicare hospital admissions in Texas annually, show that giving angina patients aspirin within the first two hours after the onset of pain can decrease their chances of having a heart attack.

Although most hospitals and doctors already consider the use of aspirin part of the best practice for treating patients with angina, there is always interest in learning how to consistently include it in treatment plans.

Through its new quality improvement program, TMF can help hospitals and doctors identify opportunities such as these for improving their processes for delivering care in the treatment of specific medical conditions.

Information on TMF's cooperative projects has been provided to health care professionals, but Medicare recipients, or anyone else interested in the information, can request it by calling or writing TMF directly. TMF's free publication, called "Positive Prescription," will help keep Medicare recipients informed of these important new projects.

For a free copy of this and other helpful information, please write to: Texas Medical Foundation, 901 Mopac Expressway South, Suite 200, Austin, Texas 78746-5799.

The toll free numbers are 1-800-725-8315 or 1-800-725-8339.

Forgiveness and new friends help to ease pain of divorce

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Dying Inside in Missouri".

I was married for 28 years to a very successful professional man whom I dearly loved and trusted. Four years ago, he announced that he wanted his freedom so he could marry a client. I was devastated.

If I could talk to "Missouri," I would tell her not to listen to friends who say, "He did you a favor -- he was a jerk."

To heal, you must go through some pain -- not around it. You have a right to grieve, and the healing process cannot be rushed.

Don't take too seriously those who say, "There is somebody wonderful out there for you." Make up your mind to have as good a life as you can alone.

Exercise -- if you never have, start now. It's healthy for you physically and mentally.

Cultivate new women friends. They could save your sanity. (They did mine.) No one can understand as well as those who have been through it.

Forgive yourself for all the mistakes you've made; more important, try to understand why your husband did what he did. Work hard at trying to forgive him. The divorce will not ruin your life -- but anger and bitterness can.

BEEN THERE IN TUCSON

DEAR BEEN THERE: I was inundated with letters from

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

Divorced women encouraging "Dying Inside" to hang in there:

DEAR ABBY: Please pass this along to "Dying Inside in Missouri," whose husband left her for another woman:

I, too, was married for many years -- 21 -- when my husband decided to end our marriage because he had fallen in love with another woman. I also have two children, who are constant reminders of him.

My friends and family tried to tell me that time would heal the hurt, anger, and all that went with it. At the time, it was hard for me to understand.

Continue with your therapy and the divorce recovery group -- they both helped me.

Giving yourself time to heal is the key. It's like getting over a death; it is a death -- the death of your marriage. It's been three years, and time has made it easier to bear. I wish you the very best that life has to offer. Someday, you will look back on this time in your life and be amazed, as I am, at how well you did.

LIVING BETTER IN KENTUCKY

DEAR ABBY: Regarding unwanted mail: If you receive something in the mail that you did not order and do not want, don't open it -- simply write REFUSED on it and put it with your outgoing mail.

First- and second-class mail will then be returned to the sender. Third-class (or "junk") mail will be returned to the sender only if it is marked "Please Forward" or "Address Correction Requested."

If it doesn't have either of these messages on it, throw it away. This applies only to unopened mail; once you have opened something, you will have to pay the postage to return it.

Horoscope

Wednesday, April 19, 1995

Your social life and commercial involvements will probably improve in the year ahead. Friendships you make in both these areas should blend harmoniously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Just because you're a nice guy doesn't mean you'll get what you want today. The only reason you will is because you'll make a heck of a lot of sense and thereby convince others. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you might benefit from something of a secretive nature. Take care, however, not to identify the source of your information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In an involvement with someone today, it might appear as if an undeserving individual will reap the major benefits. Do not fret, though; you'll come out OK.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Keep your thoughts to yourself today when friends ask each other to choose sides on a controversial issue. Later, you'll be admired for having waited.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Taking a little flak and turning the other cheek is the most sensible policy today. After irate friends have calmed down, they'll wish they had acted like you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An outsider might create a problem for you today concerning your loyalties. Once you get your emotions under control, however, you'll know which flag to fly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you let reasoning overcome your hurt feelings today, you'll discover there is no real cause for anger. Your friend's motive will justify his/her behavior.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Instead of blaming others for your financial problems, concentrate on ways to add to your resources. Something remarkable might transpire today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It won't be what you have that will impress others today, so don't pretend to be something you're not. Your warmth and friendliness will attract others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might think nobody remembers what you've done for them, but you may be in for a big surprise when someone comes through for you in a big way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Day-dreaming and window wishing is for children. Your hopes and aspirations are based on reality and your objectives can be achieved today if you pay the price.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Ignore superficial individuals today. Persons with real depth are the ones with whom something productive and worthwhile can be achieved.

HIGH SCHOOL WRESTLING

ST LOUIS, Mo.— Pampa senior Corey Alfonsi won his first two matches at the Folkstyle National Wrestling Tournament being held in St. Louis, Mo.

Alfonsi won a 7-4 decision over Jake Stanell of Missouri in his first match. He pinned Colby Vahalcher of South Dakota in 3:55 in the second match.

Alfonsi compiled a 33-3 record as a senior. He closed his high school career at the state tournament where he was runnerup in the 160-pound class.

HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL

PAMPA — Pampa returns to District 1-4A action today, meeting Canyon at 4:30 p.m. today in Canyon.

The Harvesters defeated Canyon, 6-1, in the first game between the two teams.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — A new proposal from locked-out baseball umpires probably won't lead to a settlement that would have them back by opening day next week.

Umpires, who make from $60,000 to $175,000 per season, asked Monday for a 40 percent raise, down from 53 percent in their previous proposal and 60 percent in their initial plan.

"While he did make a new offer, it is not significantly enough lower to give me encouragement that we can make a deal in the near future," said Robert Kheel, the management lawyer who negotiates on behalf of both leagues. "Forty percent is not something we can make a deal around."

Last Thursday, owners offered a 10 percent increase, up from a cost-of-living increase in their previous proposal.

Umpires union head Richie Phillips called management's offer "shameful" and said it "exhibits a lack of respect for the umpires, their profession and their contribution to the game."

Owners, who locked out the regular umpires on Jan. 1, have been using replacement umpires during spring training and intend to use them during the regular season if there isn't an agreement.

Phillips said he hoped his latest proposal "would stimulate bargaining on their part."

"If they bargain in good faith, I think we can get a deal before opening day and have the regular umpires back," Phillips said.

PRO BASKETBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — Hakeem Olajuwon's field goal shooting must have been contagious.

Olajuwon made his first 11 shots over three quarters and finished with 30 points on Monday night as the Houston Rockets shot 57 percent from the field and beat the Los Angeles Clippers 121-111.

Olajuwon cooled off slightly in the fourth quarter and finished by hitting 14 of 18 shots. But he got plenty of sharpshooting help from Clyde Drexler and Kenny Smith. Drexler added 23 points, hitting 9 of 12 field goals and Smith scored 21 points that included 5-for-7 from 3-point range.

"Anytime you have Hakeem and Clyde, you can win," Clippers guard Pooh Richardson said. "They are the world champions. The can win it because they can win on the road. They're the team everyone will have to watch out for."

Olajuwon impressed Clippers coach Bill Fitch.

"He didn't touch it that much," Clippers coach Bill Fitch said. "Eighteen attempts is not that bad but his percentage is high. He made some shots that only he can make. It's a tough job, any night to defend him."

The victory pulled the Rockets, currently in the No. 6 playoff position, within one game of the No. 5 Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference.

"I don't care who we play, I just want to finish up on a positive note," Mario Ellie said.

The Rockets have won three games in a row since Olajuwon returned from an iron-deficiency anemia problem that forced him to miss eight games.

"We're moving the ball around and hitting the open man and the shots we were making were easy," Smith said. "Hopefully, this gives us a momentum builder going into the playoffs."

The Clippers, 4-35 on the road this season, trailed 98-88 going into the fourth quarter but they closed within 103-99 with 6:55 to go before the Rockets pulled away.

Houston built a 61-49 lead with 2:31 to go in the first half aided by 11 first-half points by Vernon Maxwell but the Clippers cut the deficit to 64-59 at halftime. Gary Grant made the last three baskets for Los Angeles.

"At halftime we thought we had a decent shot to win the game," Clippers guard Pooh Richardson said. "Houston was really shooting the ball well. The big fella (Olajuwon) prevailed at the end."

Olajuwon made certain it didn't happen.

"When Hakeem shoots the fadeaway, there is absolutely nothing I can do," said Charles Outlaw. "Nobody does what Hakeem does offensively. Nobody in the league has his offensive skills. That's why he is the MVP."

Terry Dehere led the Clippers with 23 points and Eric Plattowski scored 19.

Montana says farewell to football today

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Was Joe Montana the greatest quarterback in NFL history? Just ask Steve Young, the man who took his job on the San Francisco 49ers.

"He's the greatest I've ever seen," Young said on the eve of Montana's retirement announcement today. "It's a time of mixed emotions for all of us who played with him or watched him."

"It's a time for me to reflect on all those great moments when I was standing on the sidelines with my jaw open, staring at something impossible he'd just done. I'd be completely amazed by the way he could find an open man, or see a crack in the defense, or take the team on some last-minute drive. There was no one who could do that like him, time after time."

Young wasn't among the dozens of former teammates, friends, relatives and sponsors set to join Montana for his nationally televised farewell to fans outdoors in a downtown plaza. Former 49ers coach Bill Walsh was named master of ceremonies, and Ronnie Lott, Dwight Clark and Roger Craig were invited, along with executives of the 49ers and Kansas City Chiefs.

Young wasn't invited, but he hardly felt snubbed.

"I've had nothing but respect for Joe for years," Young said. "Our relationship was kind of like an older brother, younger brother thing. In the backyard, we'd be competing hard, bloodying our noses, fighting for dominance. Look, let's face it, we both wanted the same job. We both wanted to play. We're competitors. But when the games came, we were always pulling for each other and working with each other. In all the years we were teammates, we never had an argument or even a cross word between us."

Four NFL championships, three Super Bowl MVPs and an armful of records might be enough to qualify Montana as the best quarterback ever. For Young, Montana's legacy is broader.

"He taught me more than the nuts and bolts of football," Young said. "He taught me that you can go beyond your perceived capabilities and limits. You can go beyond what you and others think you can do. You can push yourself to another level."

Montana's comebacks from injuries — his medical chart is heavier than his football gear — and his escapes from seemingly lost situations gave him a larger-than-life image. In person, he has always been quiet and self-effacing, a rather average Joe in size and weight, strength and speed. He found words and emotions difficult to express. On Monday night, at dinner with his wife, agent and several aides to work out final details of the ceremony, Montana was nervous and typically quiet.

But when it came time to perform on the field, to win the big game with the big play, there was nobody cooler, nobody in greater command of himself and his teammates. Montana had a way of scanning the field for receivers that was unmatched, his head turning from sideline to sideline, clicking off his primary target, his secondary target, his third or fourth targets, and throwing with uncanny accuracy to the one who was open.

"I saw that and tried to emulate that," Young said. "But until I played a year or two regularly, I couldn't do that. That's why when I won the MVP in '92, and people were asking me if I'd reached the top of my game, I said, 'Not even close.' Watching Joe first hand, I saw the standards he set and what I would have to do to get there. It proved that not even an MVP trophy could fool you into thinking that you could be satisfied at that level."

Kenya's Cosmas Ndeti crosses the finish line to win the 99th running of the Boston Marathon.

Kenya runner wins third straight Boston Marathon

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Track Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A record-tying three consecutive victories at the Boston Marathon isn't enough for Cosmas Ndeti. The 25-year-old Kenyan wants more, a lot more.

"I'm going to come back next year and I'm going to win again," Ndeti said Monday after romping to a one-minute victory at 2 hours, 9 minutes, 22 seconds. "I want to see how many times I can win."

Uta Pippig of Germany has her own streak going. She won the women's division for the second straight year, marking the first time the male and female champion won in consecutive years.

Pippig and Ndeti both set course records last year. This time, they were not so fast. Pippig's time of 2:25:11 was decidedly slower than her mark of 2:21:45. But she still enjoyed a comfortable margin over Elana Meyer of South Africa, the runner-up at 2:26:51. Madina Biktagirova of Belarus was a distant third at 2:29:00.

Six of the top nine men to finish were Kenyans, and the top American finisher was Michael Whittlesey of Willimantic, Conn., who was 29th, less than three minutes faster than Pippig. The top American woman, Linda Somers of Oakland, Calif., was 11th.

Another victory would tie Ndeti with Bill Rodgers as the second-biggest winner in Boston Marathon history, behind Clarence DeMar, who won seven times between 1911-1930. Rodgers (1978-80) and DeMar (1922-24) are the only others besides Ndeti to win three times in a row.

Ndeti also would like to emulate the most famous runner in the 99-year history of the Boston Marathon, 87-year-old Johnny Kelley, the grand marshal of this year's race. Kelley started the Boston Marathon a remarkable 61 times and finished 58.

"I want to be like Johnny Kelley," Ndeti said. "I want to run as much as I can and win as many races as I can."

Of his three Boston victories, Ndeti said Monday's was his easiest. In 1993, he beat Kim Jae-Ryong of South Korea by 10 seconds. Last year, he finished three seconds ahead of Andres Espinosa of Mexico, as both went under the previous course record of 2:07:51 set by Rob de Castella of Australia in 1986.

Ndeti, who has developed a style of running the second half of the race faster than the first, again was relatively slow through the first 13.1 miles. But he was perfectly positioned in second place, not far behind countryman Barnabas Rotich. Ndeti soon realized he would win again.

"At 25 kilometers (15.5 miles), I looked around and I saw the Korean (Kim) and three or four other guys," Ndeti said. "But I felt strong."

Ndeti remained just off the pace until 18 miles. He then sped into the lead, yielded briefly to Kim at 20 miles, and then just as quickly regained first place.

Another Kenyan, Moses Tanui, the 1991 world champion at 10,000 meters, took up the chase and dogged Ndeti until about two miles remained. Then, Ndeti put in a decisive surge and left Tanui far back. Only the margin of victory was in doubt.

Ndeti and Pippig each received $75,000 from the record purse of $500,000 and were invited to run with President Clinton at the White House on Wednesday.

Williams threatened to have woman killed, report says

DALLAS (AP) — The attorney for the 17-year-old dancer accusing Erik Williams of sexual assault says the Dallas Cowboys' offensive lineman threatened to have her "blown away" and that "I have the money and power to do it."

Williams and a friend also threatened to throw the woman into the street in front of Williams' home, call police and accuse her of being a prostitute, attorney Charles Caperton told The Dallas Morning News in today's editions.

Caperton said his statements were quoted from his client's police affidavit and from confidential police documents.

Williams, who declined comment on his situation Monday, and a former college teammate at Central State of Ohio are accused of forcing the woman to perform sex acts on them and raping her early last Thursday.

Felony sexual assault charges against Williams and Roderick Carson of Madison, Wis., were filed Monday by Dallas police in Collin County, said Deputy Chief Pam Walt.

Jordan cools off Rice as Bulls top Heat

By The Associated Press

Glen Rice topped Michael Jordan. Two days later, Michael Jordan stopped Glen Rice.

Jordan had 31 points Monday night and held Rice to 12 on 6-for-18 shooting as the Chicago Bulls beat the Miami Heat 98-93 for their fourth straight victory.

On Saturday, Rice scored 56 points — one more than Jordan's NBA season-high — in a victory over Orlando.

"I wasn't going to leave him," said Jordan, a six-time NBA All-Defensive first team selection. "If he was going to get a shot off, I was going to be in his face."

"He's the energizing factor on our team. Rice is the guy who can put up the big numbers."

Not when Jordan is the man assigned to him. Rice was held scoreless for the first 28 1/2 minutes and hit only two of his first 11 shots.

"It was like a blanket," Rice said. "He didn't give me anything easy. It was one of the toughest nights I've had trying to get open."

The loss eliminated the Heat from the playoff picture for the fifth time in their seven seasons.

In other games Monday night it was Boston 98, New Jersey 96; Milwaukee 99, New York 93; Charlotte 101, Philadelphia 90; Orlando 111, Washington 100; Houston 121, Los Angeles Clippers 93.

his 14-game comeback, hit nine of 21 shots and made 13 of 16 free throws. He scored seven points in an 11-0 run that gave the Bulls a 70-60 lead late in the third quarter.

Miami, 1-21 against the Bulls with Jordan playing, led 93-90 with 2 1/2 minutes left, but Chicago closed the game with an 8-0 run.

"They're a team that doesn't have the experience we've," said Scottie Pippen, who had 17 points. "We know how to make the plays down the stretch."

After Jordan made two free throws with 40 seconds left, Khalid Reeves, who had a season-high 27 points for Miami, missed a drive in the lane with 24 seconds left. Chicago's Steve Kerr hit one of two free throws to make it 96-93 before Miami's Brad Lohaus missed a 3-point attempt, and Jordan hit two free throws to clinch the win.

Celtics 98, Nets 96

Boston needs one more win or a loss by Milwaukee to clinch the eighth and final Eastern Conference playoff berth. Dee Brown scored 18 points to lead six Celtics in double figures as they won for the eighth time in nine game despite being held scoreless the final 2:46. Armon Gilliam paced visiting New Jersey with 25 points and 14 rebounds.

Boston opened the fourth quarter with a 12-0 run for an 88-75 lead, but the Nets closed to 88-84 with 6:25 left. A dunk by Dominique Wilkins with 2:46 left put the Celtics on top 98-92, and they held on.

Bucks 99, Knicks 93

Vin Baker had 10 straight points in the fourth quarter and finished with 28 and 13 rebounds as visiting Milwaukee kept alive its slim playoff hopes.

Baker's last basket of his run, a short jumper, gave Milwaukee a 95-91 lead with 1:23 left.

Patrick Ewing had 14 points, two in the fourth quarter, for the Knicks.

Hornets 101, 76ers 90

Charlotte, missing starters Muggsy Bogues and David Wingate, moved within one game of idle Indiana in the race for first place in the Central Division as Greg Sutton scored 16 points and Larry Johnson 15, all in the second half.

Sharonne Wright had 22 points and Shawn Bradley 18 to lead Philadelphia.

Magic 111, Bullets 100

Orlando won its first Atlantic Division title and clinched homecourt advantage throughout the Eastern Conference playoffs with a victory over Washington.

Shaquille O'Neal had 34 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots and Anfernee Hardaway had three key baskets down the stretch and finished with 16 points and 12 assists for Orlando, which improved to 38-2 at home.

Chris Webber, Juwan Howard and George Muresan each had 21 points for the Bullets.

Rockets 121, Clippers 111

Hakeem Olajuwon hit his first 11 shots and finished with 30 points to lead the Rockets to their 18th consecutive victory over the Clippers at The Summit, a streak that stretches back to Nov. 6, 1986.

The win pulled the Rockets, currently in the No. 6 playoff position, within one game of the No. 5 Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference.

The Clippers, led by Terry Dehere's 23 points, trailed 98-88 going into the fourth quarter and pulled to 103-99 with 6:55 to go before the Rockets pulled away.

Trail Blazers 97, SuperSonics 93

The road victory clinched a playoff spot for Portland and dropped Seattle out of a first-place tie with Phoenix in the Pacific Division.

Rod Strickland's 15-foot jumper with 44 seconds to play broke a 93-93 tie, and Cliff Robinson added two free throws with 6.6 seconds left.

Strickland finished with 21 points, while Buck Williams had 11 rebounds to pass the 12,000 mark for his career. Detlef Schrempf led the Sonics with 25 points.

Rangers sign Billy Hatcher

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers didn't just sign Billy Hatcher for depth. They may need him on the opening day roster if Juan Gonzalez's back keeps acting up.

Gonzalez had been to the plate only four times this spring before having to return to Texas on Monday to be checked out by team doctors. Rangers general manager Doug Melvin said Gonzalez will not be going back to Florida.

Hatcher, meanwhile, was expected to arrive today at camp in Port Charlotte, Fla. He'll likely replace Shawn Hare in left field and may be the starter there — in place of Gonzalez — when the season begins April 26.

"Hatcher protects us," Melvin said. "I see a fit with him. He's a guy who can steal a base, can play all the outfield positions. I've just heard people rave about what kind of an individual he is."

Hatcher, 34, signed a minor-league contract Monday with Class AAA Oklahoma City. The 11-year veteran split last season between Boston and Philadelphia. He hit .245 with three homers and 31 RBIs in 87 games.

Gonzalez's cleanup spot in the lineup likely will go to newly acquired designated hitter Mickey Tettleton.

The back injury continues a stretch of problems for Gonzalez, who led the majors in homers in 1992 and 1993 then slumped to only 19 last year. He also hit .275 with 85 RBIs batting behind Will Clark and Jose Canseco.

Ever since signing a multimillion dollar contract before last season, Gonzalez has been dogged by injuries, attacks from fans for his poor performance and he's gone through publicized marital problems.

He showed up at camp with a new haircut and professing a new attitude.

Then Gonzalez fouled a ball off his left ankle Friday and was unavailable for a couple days.

On April 11, 1995, we went shopping at Homeland at 5800 Bell Street and at United at 45th and Bell, Amarillo, and compared identical items. The results are shown above. Savings shown here depend on purchase of these items, which are not a random sample and may include some promotional items. Prices may vary by store location and may have changed.

ITEMS AND PRICES EFFECTIVE AT ALL AMARILLO & PAMPA STORE LOCATIONS

ALBERTSONS
Some of these advertised items are subject to the weekly availability for sale at or below the advertised price in each Albertson's store, except as specifically noted in this ad.
DISCOUNT
We strive to have an honest pricing policy of advertised merchandise. If for any reason we are out of stock, a substitute will be found meeting you to buy the item at the advertised price or more as it becomes available.
