PAMPA, TEXAS

April 10, 1995

50¢ DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Good Evening!AREA

PAMPA - City commissioners plan to meet in work session at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday in the third floor conference room for a review of the land-fill rate study and street improvement project schedule report. The regular meeting begins at 6 p.m. in city commission chambers.

The panel will review bids for delinquent tax properties; consider an interagency agreement for child abuse investigation services with The Bridge, Amarillo; and consider a resolution supporting the proposed extension of Interstate 27 through Pampa.

Commissioners also will consider reappointment of Rey Cardenas, Jay Holmes and Rodney Springer to the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board; appointments to the M.K. Brown Memorial Advisory Board; appointment of one person to the board of directors for the Pampa Housing Finance Corp.; and reappointment of H.J. Johnson and Milo Carlo to the Panhandle Elderly Apartment Corp. board of directors.

PANHANDLE - Carson County commissioners are to meet at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Carson County Courthouse.

Agenda items include consideration of right of way and easements; indigent care; roads, labor and machinery; report on 911 system; a resolution concerning a used oil collection facility; the personnel policy book; and discussion about the White Deer ambulance service.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The jackpot was worth $18 million.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 9, 17, 27, 31, 36 and 50.

There were 192 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,548. There were 10,687 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $100. And there were 206,414 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $28 million.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate today passed legislation that would allow for the suspension of state driver's and professional licenses of people delinquent in paying child support.

The bills by Sen. Chris Harris, R-Arlington, passed without objection and go to the House for consideration.

Similar provisions were passed in the House today as part of a sweeping welfare reform bill. That bill would give the attorney general's office the authority to suspend professional, occupational, motor vehicle, hunting or fishing licenses of dead-beat parents.

The Senate bill doesn't call for the suspension of hunting and fishing licenses.

Harris said his legislation is meant to give officials another tool in enforcing child support orders.

Amarillo prosecutor kills himself

AMARILLO (AP) — A Panhandle prosecutor shot himself to death while Amarillo police tried to talk him out of it, authorities say.

District Attorney Danny E. Hill, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound at the home of his children and former wife Sunday night, according to Justice of the Peace Haven Dysart.

Dysart said Hill was visiting his former wife and their children when Terry Hill made a 911 call to police, saying her former husband was threatening to kill himself.

Officers said they saw Hill through a window of the home. He was holding a gun to his chest, they reported.

"They were talking to Danny," Dysart said. "They were at the door, and there was some discussion between them. Then he shot himself."

Police have not determined why Hill took his life or whether alcohol was involved, Dysart said.

Hill, 46, suffered one gunshot wound to the chest from a handgun, Dysart said. An autopsy scheduled for this morning in Lubbock should provide further information, he added.

Hill, who was divorced recently, had gone to his former wife's home earlier in the evening, officials said.

Officers at the scene were visibly shaken, Dysart said.

"Very rarely do you go to a scene where you know somebody," Dysart said. "This is hard on the police officers. It's hard on everybody that knew him, whether they liked him or not. Danny was a hell of a district attorney for a long time."

In recent years, Hill was elected president of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association and state prosecutor of the year. In addition, he was elected to the board of the National District Attorneys Association in 1991.

In February, Hill pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of driving while intoxicated, which alleged he drove a vehicle while impaired because of the use of a prescription drug.

The charge stemmed from a hit-and-run accident that damaged a car but did not injure anyone.

Hill, who was elected 47th District attorney in 1980, was being investigated by Potter County Attorney Sonya Letson, who was considering filing a civil suit to have him removed from office.

Under Texas law, an elected official can be removed for any of five reasons: intoxication by alcohol on or off the job; incompetency; official misconduct; a problem with an elected official's posted bond; and conviction of a felony or misdemeanor involving official misconduct.

Hill acknowledged in February that he was an alcoholic but said at the time he had abstained from drinking for more than two months and had attended an alcohol-treatment center in Minnesota for about 25 days late last year.

In addition to his post as district attorney, Hill was elected in 1976 to the Texas Legislature and served in the Texas House from 1976-1980.

Wilson Elementary School teacher Debbie Weaver, left, poses with her ten-year-old heroic student Anabell Cruz and Anabell's two-year-old brother Jesse. Weaver said she was proud of Anabell for using the Heimlich maneuver in ousting a piece of hard candy that Jesse was choking on.

Young Pampa girl to be honored for heroics in saving brother's life

Monday, March 20, 1995 is one day that ten-year-old Anabell Cruz and her family are not going to forget. That is the day Anabell successfully performed the Heimlich maneuver on her two-year-old brother Jesse, who had a piece of hard candy lodged in his throat.

"We were at the store, my mom wanted tortillas," said the shy, soft-spoken Wilson Elementary School student.

"My little brother Jesse wanted a candy and my sister got it for him," she said. "I think it was jaw breakers — and when we got to the car, he started choking."

Anabell said she ran back to the store to find someone to help but she couldn't find anyone.

"Nobody could help me because they were too busy," she said. So she went back to the car. When Anabell saw that her mother was scared, she decided to try the Heimlich maneuver.

The maneuver involves grabbing the choking victim from behind, pressing with a fist in an upwards direction towards the diaphragm, allowing the expelling air to dislodge the object.

Her effort was successful and she was able to oust the piece of candy Jesse had lodged in his throat.

The ambulance service which was called out to the scene checked Jesse over and he was fine.

Anabell learned how to do the Heimlich maneuver from Red Cross personnel who were at Wilson Elementary School last October to teach the kids about first aid.

"They do this once a year," said her teacher, Debbie Weaver.

It was after returning from spring break that Anabell told her teacher about the incident.

"I was pretty surprised," said Weaver, who was excited to know that one of her students had learned what had been taught.

"I was proud of Anabell."

Weaver said it was on a Tuesday when Anabell told her and on Thursday when Anabell got up and told her fellow classmates about the experience.

"They all think she's lucky because she's a hero," Weaver said. Weaver called the Red Cross here in Pampa about what their training had done.

"This is the first time it's ever been useful," said Weaver, since it has been taught in the school.

Weaver hopes this incident will encourage other teachers and parents to see the value of knowing cardiopulmonary resuscitation and the Heimlich maneuver.

For her heroic effort in saving her brother, the Local Emergency Planning Committee is giving an award to Anabell. The award will be presented to her at their meeting at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at the Lovett Memorial Library.

Pampa couple injured in vehicle rollover

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

A Pampa man is in stable condition today after a one-vehicle rollover shortly after midnight Sunday sent both him and his wife to the hospital.

Gale Richard (Buddy) Lowrey, 56, HCR 3, is listed in stable condition today in Northwest Texas Hospital. His wife, Billie M. Lowrey, 57, was treated and released from Coronado Hospital after their 1994 Ford pickup rolled twice on FM 749 about 12:45 a.m. Sunday.

According to a Department of Public Safety spokesman, the Ford was southbound 10.8 miles south of Pampa when Mr. Lowrey traveled off the roadway to the right and over corrected to the left, crossing both lanes. The pickup then went into a broadside skid into the ditch and rolled twice through a fence, coming to rest in a field.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowrey were rushed to Coronado by American Medical Transport.

A 7:10 a.m. accident today on

Price Road continues under DPS investigation.

According to preliminary information, a 1995 Peterbilt towing a tank trailer was in collision with a 1989 Chevrolet pickup driven by Johnny Orville Whinery and owned by Leonard Hudson Drilling of Pampa. The 18-wheeler was driven by Myrl Dean Mann, 1021 S. Wells, and is owned by Mission Petroleum of Houston. Mann is reported uninjured.

At press time, Whinery was being treated at Coronado Hospital.

White House wants 'unsparing' probe of CIA-Guatemala ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House insisted today that an investigation of alleged CIA links to murders in Guatemala be "unsparing in uncovering all relevant facts."

President Clinton wants to know if there was any U.S. involvement "directly or indirectly" in the slayings, according to a memorandum from National Security Adviser Anthony Lake to the head of an investigatory panel.

At issue are allegations that the CIA had a Guatemalan colonel on its payroll who was involved in the killing of an American citizen and a guerilla leader married to an American woman.

Clinton on March 30 ordered a government-wide review of the matter by the Intelligence Oversight Board.

Today, the White House released a memorandum by Lake to Anthony S. Harrington, chairman of the oversight panel, specifying which questions the president wants answered by the inquiry.

"Because a healthy and vigorous intelligence capability is a critical element of our national power and influence, the president has directed that the IOB be unsparing in uncovering all relevant facts as well as make clear where allegations regarding these events are unfounded," Lake told Harrington.

Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., a member of the House intelligence committee, has charged that the CIA engaged in an obstruction of justice for years by withholding key details about the two slayings: the 1990 death of an American citizen, Michael Devine, in Guatemala; and the 1992 murder of leftist rebel Efrain Bamaca Velasquez, the husband of American lawyer Jennifer Harbury.

The questions that Clinton wants the oversight panel to answer, Lake's memorandum said, include:

— Whether any U.S. government employes or intelligence assets were directly or indirectly involved in these incidents.

— What information did the government obtain about these incidents and when, and "when, to whom and in what manner was this information disseminated?"

— What information was provided to the families of Devine and Velasquez and "was this information accurate?"

Harbury has alleged that the government withheld information about his death.

The White House also told the oversight panel to review other possible cases, including "facts surrounding the torture, disappearance or death of any U.S. citizens in Guatemala since 1984."

It said it wanted an investigation of the torture of Sister Diana Ortiz in 1989, the death of Griffith Davis in 1985 and the death of Nicholas Blake in 1985.

Clinton also wants to know whether past relationships were "consistent with presidential directives," Lake said.

And, the national security adviser said, the president wants to know if information received from intelligence operations there was worth it and if there are benefits to "continuing specific relationships."

"The board should identify for the president any 'lessons learned' in the course of its review," the Lake memo said.

Salvation Army begins annual fund raising for summer camp

Pack your trunk, grab your fishing pole and hop on the bus. It is summer camp time for 59 children enrolled in youth programs of The Salvation Army Church, according to Lt. Tony Housley.

It will cost $158 a week, or $9,322, for the children to attend Camp Hoblitzelle in Midlothian. Girls ages 7 through 18 will attend camp June 12-19, boys ages 7 through 18 will attend June 26-July 3, and youth members of the church will attend June 19-26.

"We hope each young person coming home from camp will be better prepared to face the challenges life will afford them and become productive citizens of our community,"

Lt. Housley said. An Empty Trunk Fund has been established to accept contributions to the camp effort.

Contributions may be made to The Salvation Army, Box 1458, Pampa, TX 79066. Mark checks for summer camp.

Bhutto demands 'the planes or our money'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan's prime minister said today her country has always honored its "Contract with America," and the United States should either deliver on its promise to sell fighter jets or refund $1.4 billion.

"I will say it to the president tomorrow, as I said it to Congress last week, we have honored our contract with America, we want America to honor its contract with us," Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said in a speech at Johns Hopkins University's Washington campus.

Bhutto's speech confirmed that a major topic of her meeting Tuesday with Clinton at the White House would be the U.S. law freezing economic aid and military supplies for Pakistan because of U.S. concerns that Pakistan was acquiring nuclear weapons.

Referring to the Republican "Contract with America" that dominated the first three months of the 104th Congress, Bhutto said Pakistan "did not waver in our 'Contract with America'" during nearly a half century of Cold War.

She cited U.S. pilot Francis Gary Powers' takeoff from a Pakistani air base in his ill-fated 1960 U-2 surveillance mission over the Soviet Union and finally Pakistan's support of the long anti-Soviet struggle in neighboring Afghanistan.

This strained Pakistani finances and society to the limit, she said, but it "drained the Soviet Union of its will to suppress, its will to repress, its will to occupy and ultimately its will to exist."

Bhutto made clear her government would prefer delivery of the 28 U.S.-built F-16 fighter jets to a refund of its $1.4 billion investment. She said Pakistan had sought planes made by American workers and "I would prefer to have a relationship between our workers and your workers."

The United States blocked sale of the jets and impounded the money under a 1990 federal law prohibiting the sending of military equipment or economic aid to Pakistan unless the president certifies that Pakistan is not seeking to make atomic weapons.

President Bush stopped issuing the annual certifications late in his administration, based on intelligence information and statements of Pakistani officials that the South Asian country had acquired the know-how to make a nuclear bomb, although it hadn't actually produced any.

Clinton has voiced readiness to review the policy. Changing the law, known as the Pressler Amendment, could be a long process, however, because its author, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., opposes repeal and the Republicans now control Congress.

Voicing desire to revive a long friendship with the United States, Bhutto's government has suggested alternatives such as a financial refund or shipment of impounded spare parts for older F-16s and military gear already in Pakistan.

New casualties of old war: Kids killing kids

FORT WORTH (AP) — The impact of the deadly combination of kids and guns is being felt nationwide.

Teresa Garcia, 17, was fatally shot in the back at the fast-food restaurant where she worked, allegedly by a 15-year-old ex-boyfriend upset that she began dating someone else.

Jesus Gonzales, who was certified to stand trial as an adult on a murder charge, told police he didn't want to shoot Miss Garcia last December. But, "Teresa knew this would make me very mad and would hurt my feelings and brought me to do what I did," he said.

Last year, 19 children and youths were killed in Tarrant County because someone squeezed the trigger of a gun.

The county's battlefield also includes statistics showing that between October 1993 and the end of 1994, shootings sent 114 youths to JPS Hospital. And in Fort Worth alone during the past two years, 51 youngsters were named as suspects in homicides. During the same period, 32 juveniles were fatally shot.

Youths have been killing each other at an alarming rate, and Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry said he is still shocked by the cases that cross his desk detailing serious youth crimes.

"We've just stopped calling them kids around here," Curry is quoted as saying in Sunday's editions of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, which conducted a five-month study of the effect of guns on society's younger members. "I think kids with guns is one of the biggest problems we've got in this community and in the country."

Since the mid-80s, authorities nationwide began to see a marked increase in gun-related juvenile crime. It appeared to peak in the early 1990s and then leveled out. Now, it appears to have eased somewhat.

Fort Worth police last week reported a 22 percent drop in gang-related crimes for the first three months of the year, though they cautioned that crime usually peaks during the summer.

Louise McIntosh, a critical-care nurse in John Peter Smith Hospital's intensive-care unit, says casualties in the emergency rooms are getting younger and are coming in more often than a decade ago.

"Ten years ago we were seeing 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds," Ms. McIntosh said. "Now, we're getting 13-, 14- and 15-year-olds. We're still getting the older ones, but the young are overtaking them."

The attitude is also different, said Dr. Charles Webber Jr., vice chairman of JPS's surgery department and president of the Tarrant County Hospital District.

"They're not lying there going, 'Oh, please, save my life!'" Webber said. They say, "Well, I'm going to get (their attacker) when I get out."

Many of the nation's school-age children fear for their safety because they know how easy it is to get a gun.

According to a 1993 Harris Poll, some kids reported that they could get a gun within an hour or at least within a day. One in 10 teens had been shot at or had fired a gun at someone, the survey said.

"How'd I get a gun when I was 13? Easy," said Lamont Lewis, a convicted murderer from Dallas who now resides at Giddings State Home and School. When he was 14, he and a friend killed another teen during a botched drug deal.

"Anybody step in my way, you know what I'm saying, I'd gun them down," he said. He paused and added: "Now I realize how much pain and hurt I brought into people's families."

Terri Moore, Tarrant County's chief prosecutor of gang crimes, said the problem is the people who sell guns to minors. She said they must be stopped.

"I think if there are adults doing out deadly weapons to children, then, yes, they ought to be slam-dunked and held up and made an example of," she said.

Quebec independence movement out of steam

TORONTO (AP) — The independence movement in Quebec has run out of steam.

After six months in power in the French-speaking province, Quebec's separatist government has failed to convince most people they would be better off in an independent country.

Premier Jacques Parizeau, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, which won the provincial election in September, acknowledged as much when he announced last week he was delaying a promised referendum on independence at least until the fall. He said he needed to explain his program better.

Lucien Bouchard, head of the Bloc Quebecois which represents sovereignty advocates in the federal Parliament, told a party convention over the weekend that maybe a total break with Canada isn't what people want after all, and that perhaps there should be some very concrete ties with Ottawa.

A few months ago, that would have been political heresy.

But polls consistently give the separatists only 40 percent of the vote — just as in 1980, when a referendum on independence in the French-speaking province failed 60 percent to 40 percent.

"If the federalists think we are going to give them a losing referendum, they are going to wait a long time," Bouchard told the party faithful.

"Obviously the population doesn't like, doesn't accept, the full scope of the project as it is," he said.

During last fall's election campaign, Parizeau promised the referendum campaign would start in eight to 10 months. That period already has been stretched. But he insisted to reporters Sunday that "the referendum on sovereignty will take place in 1995."

The Quebecois, he said, still have an "appetite for information" about what separation would mean.

Bouchard seemed to suggest that Quebec should perhaps opt for a form of sovereignty that included strong institutional links with Canada.

"Quebecois are hesitating to take the final step," Bouchard said. "The sovereignty project must quickly make a turn that will bring it closer to Quebecois and that will open a credible avenue to new relations between Quebec and Canada that will answer their legitimate concerns."

Those concerns include a widespread feeling of second-class citizenship, and fears their French language and culture will wither away in predominantly anglophone Canada.

Quebec-Canada relations might resemble the links among countries in the European Union, particularly the economic ties, Bouchard said.

Parizeau, on the other hand, always has favored a clean cut with Canada. Then, he has argued, Quebec could negotiate economic deals from a position of independence.

Gustavo Iruegas, right, chief negotiator for the Mexican government, visits with members of the Zapatista National Liberation Army after signing an agreement for future peace talks on Sunday night.

Rebels, Mexican government agree to begin formal talks later this month

SAN MIGUEL EJIDO, Mexico (AP) — The government and peasant-backed rebels agreed early today to meet again next week in a new attempt to end southern Mexico's lingering rebellion.

The two sides will meet April 20 in the town of Larrainzar, a rebel stronghold in the Chiapas highlands. They will continue their discussion of the rules for formal peace negotiations.

Negotiators met for 13 hours Sunday and early today in this village of 500 people, 55 miles east of the colonial mountain community of San Cristobal. It was the first time the government and the Zapatistas had met in a formal setting in more than a year.

Although there has been no fighting in more than a year, the failure to end the 16-month-old rebellion in the southern state of Chiapas has fueled worries about instability in Mexico in the midst of its economic crisis.

The choice of Larrainzar as a site for more talks was a win for the government.

The Zapatistas had wanted the peace talks to be in Mexico City, saying it is more neutral and that there are still too many soldiers and paramilitary groups in Chiapas.

The Zapatistas have long had a presence in Larrainzar and rebel military leader Subcomandante Marcos is believed to have spent much time there.

Marcos has not been seen publicly since President Ernesto Zedillo announced arrest warrants for him and other rebel leaders on Feb. 9. He did not attend the talks in San Miguel Sunday and it was unknown if he would attend the April 20 meeting.

The arrest warrants will continue to be suspended as part of the government effort to promote the peace process.

The Zapatistas led a Jan. 1, 1994, uprising to demand better conditions for Indian peasants in Chiapas, Mexico's poorest state. Twelve days of fighting ended with a cease-fire after at least 145 people were killed.

The last formal talks were in February 1994 in San Cristobal de las Casas, a major town in Chiapas. Subsequent talks stalled, and the Zapatistas broke off contacts in October claiming the government was planning a military offensive.

EPA 'inside agitator' seen by some as a hero

DALLAS (AP) — The assistant to the director of the Environmental Protection Agency's hazardous site control division is taking on a new fight: Sewage sludge that he says is poisoning Texas.

During the 24 years since he joined the agency at its inception, Hugh B. Kaufman has taken on companies, politicians and even fellow EPA officials.

Nobody is safe from the 52-year-old EPA engineer's dogged determination to rectify the issues that bother him — not even administrator Carol Browner.

What bothers Kaufman now is an agreement that has allowed a New York company to spread sewage sludge on an arid ranch land in far West Texas since 1992.

Kaufman's involvement has resulted in lawsuits between Kaufman and the company, feuding between Kaufman and his EPA superiors, and demands by Kaufman that Ms. Browner and other EPA leaders be investigated for obstructing justice.

Kaufman decided to begin examining the sludge operation, Merco Joint Venture, last spring after he was approached by Hudspeth County Attorney Tom Chellis and a Sierra Blanca environmental activist.

Since then, he has amassed enough material on Merco to fill a large suitcase.

"The people of Texas are being poisoned," he said of the operation on a nationally televised news program.

Critics and admirers alike say Kaufman's role in a two-decade career at EPA has been that of an inside agitator.

"Even my enemies will tell you I'm like getting chewing gum on the bottom of your shoe. I won't let go," Kaufman said.

He's worn that description well since setting his sights on Sierra Blanca, a small town 100 miles east of El Paso.

Kaufman alleges that Merco received an illegal permit to disperse the sewage in Texas. He says it's a health hazard, has violated New York contracting laws and has ties to organized crime.

Merco officials say his charges are groundless. The company also has filed a federal libel lawsuit against him. Kaufman has countersued, contending he can prove his claims.

Meanwhile, Kaufman has sent an eight-page memo to U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno demanding an independent prosecutor to investigate his EPA superiors, including Ms. Browner. Justice Department officials have said the request is being reviewed.

Bottled message received by an island boy

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — Amy Takeuchi didn't expect much to come of her letter. After all, she put it in a glass bottle and dropped it in the Pacific Ocean.

Although the note didn't travel fast, it traveled far.

Nearly three years later, Amy got a reply from a 7-year-old boy in Micronesia in the Western Pacific Ocean. The nation of 607 islands is about 6,000 miles from Dana Point, southwest of Los Angeles, where Amy tossed her bottled message into the surf.

"I was surprised," the 12-year-old said. "I thought no one was ever going to find it, or if someone did, it would only be in Dana Point."

Amy's new pen pal is Loyola Mallamai, whose airmail letter was postmarked March 17.

"Greetings from the island of Mogmog," Loyola wrote with the help of his mother, Jacinta. "I found your letter, which drifted from California or Chino to the island of Song, last weekend."

"I went with my daddy net fishing around the small island, and I found your letter," the first-grader wrote.

Loyola also wrote about his siblings and included a picture of himself sitting in his room next to a portable stereo.

"He's a cute little guy," said Amy's mother, Linda.

Last month, a 14-year-old New Jersey girl joined five of her friends in attaching their names to a note that was bottled and heaved into the Atlantic Ocean off Cape Hatteras, N.C. She received a reply from an 11-year-old boy in northwest France.

The Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Woods Hole, Mass., said Hatteras is one of the few places where the 4,000-mile warm-water Gulf Stream current comes within a few yards of the coast.

Grandview-Hopkins ISD trustees to have board meeting Tuesday

GRANDVIEW-HOPKINS — Trustees of the Grandview-Hopkins Independent School District will meet in regular session at 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 11, in the Grandview-Hopkins School cafeteria.

Items on the agenda include acceptance of a resignation from a board member and consideration of filling a vacancy on the board.

Other items for consideration include approval of the 1995-1996 school calendar, a waiver for staff development and participation in the Texas School Improvement Initiative.

Board members also will review the auxiliary employees pay scale, discuss eligibility policies for foundation scholarships, adopt an integrated pest management policy statement, appoint an integrated pest management coordinator and approve bills.

In his report to the board, Superintendent Norman W. Baxter will discuss matters regarding the Lone Star Investment Pool report, a new bus driver and school finances.

In an executive session, board members will consider a Texas Employment Commission hearing and school board legal responsibilities.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Lunch subsidy is not needed

Both sides in the food fight over the federal school lunch program claim they want to spend more. Republicans argue their block grant approach would actually deliver more money for school lunches, while Democrats charge that heartless GOP budget cuts would condemn millions of school children to daily hunger.

Missing in the debate has been the fundamental question of whether the government, and in particular the federal government, should even be in the business of cooking lunch for school kids.

At the risk of sounding quaint, providing lunch for school children should be the responsibility of their parents - not the government. Just as we expect parents to provide their children with shoes, a winter overcoat and bath soap, so we can rightly expect them to provide for their children's lunch while at school.

Millions of American parents, rich, poor and middle class, have been doing just that since the days of the one-room school house. Parents can make sure their children are fed during the school day by paying the school directly to provide it, by giving their kids lunch money or by packing a sack lunch each morning before their child leaves the house.

Defenders of the status quo federal program argue that too many American families are too poor to provide lunch for their children. This surely applies to a tiny fraction of families that are truly destitute. But for the vast majority of American families, providing a school lunch for their children can fit easily within the family's budget without a government subsidy.

If parents neglect to provide for their children's school lunches, it is most likely because of their own lack of responsibility, not a lack of money. It is not because of poor parents, but because of poor parenting.

As in so many other areas of life, government intervention in the school lunch led citizens to their traditional responsibilities. Millions of American families have grown dependent on the federal government to act as the chief cook and bottle washer for their children during the school day, forgetting that that responsibility ultimately rests not on taxpayers but on parents.

The Republican effort in Congress to save money and decentralize the school lunch program has been criticized for going too far. But given the misplaced sense of responsibility for providing school lunches, the most deserved criticism is that the effort has not gone far enough.

It's time for a GOP rebuttal

William Rusher

The Republican Party is having the daylight kicked out of it by the Democrats and the liberal media, and it's high time it realized this and started doing something about it.

It's all very well for the GOP to point with pride to the progress that has already been made under its "Contract With America," and that it's undeniably true that building a reputation as "the party that keeps its promises" will be money in the bank in years to come. But the battle for current public opinion has been, to date, an unmitigated disaster for the Republicans, and they must shoulder a large part of the blame themselves.

It's true, of course, that it's the Democrats and their waterboys in the media who have been doing the lying about the consequences of various measures proposed in the contract. But the Republicans knew - or at least ought to have known - that this sort of thing was coming, and planned their defense (or, better yet, their counter-attack). Instead, they have let the Democrats have weeks of free media time to pound them mercilessly about "starving America's children to provide further tax cuts for the rich" and similar bushwah. As a result, they are beginning to look like Max Schmeling after Joe Louis got through with him.

In a column written just three weeks after last November's elections, I noted the uproar among Democrats and in the media over Newt Gingrich's unfortunate choice of the word "orphanages" to describe his proposed destination for the children of unmarried and unqualified teenage mothers. There were good answers to the uproar, but they wouldn't avail unless somebody whom the media would be forced to quote came forward with them.

Accordingly, I proposed "a permanent, full-time Truth Squad," designated by the Republican Party to answer Democratic and media charges fast, accurately and officially.

Subsequently, I was told by Republican officials that they didn't want to waste time on defense, answering Democratic and liberal attacks. They wanted to keep on putting the truth before the American people, and let that speak for them.

Superficially, that sounded like a wise, even statesmanlike, response. I began to think that perhaps they were right, and that I had been mistaken. Then came the proposal to close down the federal school-lunch program and turn the money over to the states to administer. As I remarked in a column earlier this month, the Democratic reaction plumbed depths I hadn't previously suspected even American politics of being capable of. President Clinton himself accused the Republicans of targeting children to pay for tax cuts for the rich.

The barrage on this subject has gone on for several weeks now, and shows no sign of abating. Why should it, when the Democrats are reaping such rich rewards from it? Public opinion polls suggest that many voters are beginning to fear that the GOP is going too far and cutting too much.

Slowly and belatedly, Republican leaders are beginning to crank up a response to the Democratic onslaught. High-ranking Republican officials like Gingrich, who were spared "wasting their time" on such defensive tactics, are ceding whatever television time they can get, to tell voters that poor and middle-class children will actually see more money spent on their lunches than is spent at present.

But why couldn't that powerful and perfectly true point have been made, in a press conference, by a ranking spokesman of the congressional leadership or the Republican Party, on the day the Democrats first launched their charge - and been repeated thereafter, day by day, every time the lie was recycled?

The Lord helps those who help themselves. It's time the Republicans learned to get their guard up and keep it up.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, April 10, the 100th day of 1995. There are 265 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 10, 1912, the luxury liner RMS Titanic set sail from Southampton, England, on its ill-fated maiden voyage. (On the night of April 14, the ship struck an iceberg in the North Atlantic and sank. About 1,500 people died.)

On this date:
In 1847, American newspaperman Joseph Pulitzer was born in Mako, Hungary.

In 1866, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was incorporated.

In 1925, the novel "The Great Gatsby," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, was first published by Scribner's of New York.

In 1932, German president Paul Von Hindenburg was re-elected, with Adolf Hitler coming in second.

Welfare reform: Fighting the good fight

Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala was first out of the blocks, telling me weeks ago that she thought the Republican ideas for welfare reform were "mean." Marian Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund, chimed in at a Capitol Hill rally over the weekend that the proposals were "unfair."

Republicans understandably bristle at such rhetoric, but the Democrats are sincere. They really believe that it is a kindness to hand able-bodied people checks, demanding nothing in return. They call the current system - which keeps millions of people in a permanent state of listless dependency and dooms hundreds of thousands of children to languish in foster care - compassionate. Of the families now on welfare, 65 percent will still be on the rolls in eight years. The average length of stay on welfare is 13 years.

If that is compassion, then what we need is some tough-mindedness.

Nor should Republicans shrink from making an explicit pro-child argument for their reforms. The whole point of welfare reform is to ensure that fewer and fewer children will have to grow up in the arid, stultifying culture of dependency that liberal compassion has created. As Rep. Clay Shaw (R-Fla.), chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the bill, told me, "We are satisfied to have our compassion judged by how many people we remove from the welfare rolls."

The Republican welfare reform proposal would take aim at the heart of the welfare problem - the single woman who becomes welfare dependent upon conceiving an out-of-wedlock child. The bill would deny benefits to girls under the age of 18 who have illegitimate children. It would also withhold any increased benefits to a woman who conceives another child while she is on welfare. Working Americans cannot expect a raise if they get pregnant; neither should welfare recipients.

Mona Charen

The bill would also cut off benefits after two years if recipients decline to work.

Democrats indignantly insist that women don't become pregnant to get welfare. Denying them benefits, they argue, is mean-spirited. But the experience of the state of New Jersey, which instituted the no-extra-cash-for-a-new-baby rule two years ago, is that the number of new babies born to welfare mothers has declined. Women may not conceive children exclusively to receive extra payments from the government, but the lack of those extra payments will certainly give them pause if they are contemplating having babies they cannot support. The government check has been, in pop psychology argot, the "enabler" for irresponsible conduct.

The stepchild of the current welfare system is the scandalous child welfare bureaucracy. The massive increase in illegitimate childbearing that the welfare system has subsidized has spawned a devastating explosion in the number of abused and neglected children. Social services nationwide are overburdened by the caseload. But they are also burdened by liberal thinking.

Most child-welfare agencies in the United States (as well as the Clinton administration) are either formally or informally committed to the philosophy of "family preservation," which holds that a child is always best off with his biological parents. Accordingly, even children who have been severely abused and/or neglected by their parents - even children whose bones have been broken and skin burned - are returned to their "families" after some well intentioned "intervention" from a social worker.

The Republican reform proposal recognizes "family preservation" for the folly that it is. The biological family is not always the best place for the child. It is a far greater kindness to place that child with loving adoptive parents than to give his abusive mother a dozen second chances.

The Republican reform calls for the creation of citizen review panels to monitor the states' handling of abuse and neglect cases. That provision is likely to be overlooked in all the shouting about unwed pregnancy, but it has the potential to save the lives of thousands of miserable children. I would gladly serve on such a panel and bet that no state would lack for volunteers.

If the Republicans failed to pass every other provision of the Contract With America but succeeded in passing this, the 1994 elections would be more than justified.

What defenders of the welfare arts programs say

Budget-cutters on Capitol Hill are eying the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the National Endowment for the Arts. A House subcommittee has already recommended CPB funding be reduced 15 percent in fiscal year 1996 and 30 percent in '97, while a minuscule $5 million cut has been recommended for the NEA. It's panic time for these agencies' defenders in the entertainment media, who are becoming increasingly vocal, promoting a dubious idea of artistic freedom: the "right" to taxpayer money. They label anyone disagreeing with them as not just wrong but barbaric, even dictatorial.

Singer/actress/director/gadfly Barbra Streisand extolled federal arts funding and insinuated darkly about those who oppose it in a Feb. 3 speech at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government. "Maybe it's not about balancing the budget," Streisand suggested. "Maybe it's about shutting the minds and mouths of artists who might have something thought provoking to say."

The diva went on: "To deny artists ... free expression and free thought or, worse, to force us to conform to some rigid notion of 'mainstream American values' is to weaken the very foundation of our democracy."

Why does anyone take this lady seriously? To suggest this debate has nothing to do with balancing the budget but is instead a plot by conservatives to undermine democracy is the stuff of La-La Land conspiracy theories. The NEA's $165 million budget represents less than 2 percent of the $9 billion contributed to the arts every year through the private sector, a figure that represents the greatest private philanthropic investment in the arts in the history of man. Even Harvard can see that art is not threatened by a cutoff of federal dollars.

Streisand is not alone. Her The Way We Were co-star, Robert Redford, also believes a dastardly cabal is at work, telling USA Today on Jan. 24 that "it's pretty clear we're always going to be fighting this battle. There's always going to be some conservative group that is threatened by freedom, by free ideas and by free expression in general."

Actor Christopher ("Superman") Reeve is somewhat more pragmatic. An outspoken liberal, he would like expanded NEA funding but knows that isn't realistic. Reeve told a Senate subcommittee on Feb. 23 that he favors privatizing the NEA over several years via a matching-funds process. On the other hand, Reeve continues to promote, as he did on John McLaughlin's One on One show Feb. 25 and 26, the canard that the Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano NEA grants were accidents, that the agency would never knowingly countenance such filth. Not so, corrected his One on One adversary, former National Endowment for the Humanities chief Lynne Cheney: the NEA knew precisely what it was doing.

Some journalists covering entertainment and the arts are equally hyperbolic in their defense of cultural subsidies. In what may wind up being the overreaction of the year, John Leonard, TV critic for CBS's Sunday Morning, compared budget-consious Republicans to murderous dictators on the Jan. 8 broadcast: "From the pronouncements out of Washington, you'd think the new Congress were a slash-and-burn Khmer Rouge, determined to rid Phnom Penh of every member of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, every painter who ever got a dime out of the National Endowment for the Arts ... and other inconvenient co-dependents."

Likewise, Washington Post TV critic Tom Shales and his Jan. 25 review of Bill Clinton's State of the Union speech. Clinton spoke for what seemed like a day and a half, but, Shales griped, he still didn't find time to plug welfare for millionaire Moppets: "Too bad he didn't say a word or two on behalf of public broadcasting, currently under attack by a crowd of power-drunk crackpots in Congress who want to exterminate it. Kermit the Frog will wind up in the kitchen of a French restaurant if they get their way."

While Shales saw frog a la carte, Los Angeles Times arts critic Christopher Knight, on Jan. 8, saw a different plot - this one against diversity: "Republicans want the NEA gone because of its record of success. A chief accomplishment of public arts support has been that the American cultural landscape today is far more diverse than it ever was before the 1965 birth of the National Endowment for the Arts, when the private funding so dear to (Newt) Gingrich was art's sole engine."

Defenders of artistic welfare are clearly running out of gas. They cannot defend the economics of federal subsidies (the country can no longer afford it). They cannot defend the value of these multi-billion-dollar bureaucracies (the arts and cultural/educational programming is flourishing through the private sector). And they don't dare raise the most basic question: Since when was it the role of the federal government to control the arts?

John Robert Henry, born 1858 in North Carolina, came to Colorado City, Texas, in January, 1883. In the spring he rode horseback to Wheeler County where his first job was hauling rock to build a wall around a livery stable east of Huselby Hotel. He helped build Red Deer Dam and worked on several ranches, including the Diamond F and the Z-Z. In 1889 he bought sheep and went in business for himself near Laketon.

Mary Walter Brown, daughter of A. J. Jasper, was a widow with a small daughter, Gertrude LaNora Brown. In 1889 she came from Tarrant County to the Laketon area with her father and two brothers because she thought that the men must have someone to keep house for them.

At first Mary, a former teacher, hated the cowboys and did not hesitate to say so. A friend bet her gray horse that Mary would marry one of the cowboys within a year. Mary won the horse but she soon married John Henry on April 9, 1890.

When Mary was asked how she happened to break down and marry John Henry, she answered, "Oh, I don't know. He was the wittiest piece of humanity I ever met. I watched his best friends and decided that no better people ever lived than the early settlers."

After the Henrys lived near the Laketon area for several years, they moved, house and all, to Miami where John helped to organize the First State Bank of Miami. They moved back to the Laketon area, rebuilt, and then moved to McLean before coming to Pampa in 1909.

When Gray County was organized in 1902, the Henrys were living in the Laketon area. J. R. Henry was the election judge and his home was the voting place for Precinct 1. Mary helped to organize the first Baptist church and Sunday school in the county while the Henrys lived at Laketon.

In 1908 Henry bought part of Section 781 Block 3, I&GM-Survey from the White Deer Land Company. (In 1935 he sold this land to the City of Pampa for Recreation Park). In addition to farming his land, Henry was a director and vice-president of the First National Bank in Pampa.

The Henrys lived in a large three-story house built on their farm. Later the city limits were extended to include the house that had the address 905 (or 911) East Beryl.

On January 20, 1942, a fire started in a bedroom on the second floor of the house, and the entire third floor, part of the second floor and the roof were destroyed before firemen could get the blaze under control. The fire did not reach the first floor, but there was water damage.

After the fire the J. R. Henrys moved to 121 North Wynne where he died on December 1, 1943, and she died on January 17, 1946.

Mrs. Henry had wanted the property at 905 East Beryl to be used in some way in the work of local Baptists, and it was sold to the Reverend E. G. Barrett who hoped to establish a Baptist orphanage. After it was determined that an orphanage was not possible, the Rev. Barrett gave the house and land to the First Baptist Church whose membership funded the Barrett Baptist Chapel. The first afternoon services were held on April 4, 1954, in the former home of J. R. and Mary Henry.

Gertrude LaNora Brown, daughter of Mary Henry, married Lawrence C. McMurtry (an uncle of author Larry McMurtry). Gertrude was one of Pampa's first dance teachers and owned the first studio in Pampa.

Clinton Henry, son of J. R. and Mary Henry, married Fannie Fern Pope, daughter of Dave Pope and Mary Olive White. Clinton was bookkeeper and assistant manager of the J A Ranch when T. D. Hobart was manager. Later Clinton ranched near Red Deer Creek.

Jack Henry was an orphan reared by J. R. and Mary Henry and regarded as their son.

Elderhostel gets younger

BOSTON (AP) — In a bow to changing retirement demographics, Elderhostel has lowered its age limit from 60 to 55.

Early retirement, semi-retirement and corporate downsizing were cited by the Boston-based organization in changing its age policy last fall. "Meeting the educational needs of retirees — not just adults over 60 — is what Elderhostel's mission is all about," says Bill Berkeley, the non-profit's president.

Elderhostel coordinates programs that offer educational opportunities combined with budget travel for older people.

One such program offers 15-day Antarctic expeditions aboard the Akademik Sergey Vavilov, an ice-rated research vessel owned by the Russian Academy of Sciences. The program provides in-depth studies of history and politics of the region and exploration of flora, fauna and marine biology of the Antarctic Peninsula. The program, staffed with a faculty of scientists and naturalists, is arranged in cooperation with Marine Expeditions, a group leasing the Russian ship. * For information about programs or catalogs, contact Elderhostel at 75 Federal St., Boston, Mass. 02110-1941, (617) 426-7788. Free catalogs cover U.S.-Canada, international destinations, and service programs in collaboration with established non-profit organizations; writers should specify if they want to receive all catalogs or any combination. Please note: response phone numbers at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, publicized last fall, are for Elderhostel programs in that region.

Wisconsin summer fun

The doings at Wisconsin Dells this summer include hot air ballooning, bungee jumping, and and-scads of amusement parks.

Taking a ride on one of the Elusive Dream Balloons, you can enjoy aerial views of the Wisconsin River and its sandstone bluffs at sunset or sunrise. And for the more adventurous, there is Air Boingo Bungee Jump, which its promoters say has conducted more than a million safe jumps for people of all ages.

Crazy King Ludwig's Adventure Park opens in May, with a faux historic European castle surrounded by fun rides; Noah's Ark Waterpark has added the "Black Thunder" waterslides designed for double tube riders, gliding through dark tunnels and winding curves into a large pool of water. Big Chief Go Kart World introduces the Cyclops Coaster, a breathtaking high-speed wooden rollercoaster.

For more information call the Wisconsin Dells Visitor & Convention Bureau at (608) 254-8088.

Interesting things to note...

* A cyclone is a storm with strong winds rotating about a moving center of low atmospheric pressure. The word sometimes is used in the United States to mean tornado and in the Indian Ocean area to mean hurricane.

Man helping lost girl could have found himself sued

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I stopped in a convenience store to pick up some snacks. Inside the store, a little girl — crying and apparently lost — grabbed my trousers and said, "Daddy!" I looked around the store and didn't see anyone who looked daddy-like, so I picked her up, put her on my shoulder and told her we would find her daddy. I took her to the checkout stand, where the assistant manager picked up his microphone and announced that he had found a little girl named "Adrienne" whose daddy was lost. Adrienne's mother showed up and took the little girl away.

When I got home and told my wife (a retired schoolteacher) about it, she told me I never should have touched the child; I could have been sued, jailed, or both.

Who was wrong? The grandfather who rescued a crying child, or the "mother" who left her crying between the canned peaches and the bread shelf? I know that men have as much concern for children as women, and sometimes more. But I guess the law says we should just leave the little ones to cry, if we are not "mommies."

DON RANDELL,
SQUAW VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR DON: Since all of your contact with the child took place in a well-lit market in the presence of customers, clerks and management, your actions should not have been suspect.

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

However, it's a sad commentary that any male who tries to comfort a lost child while trying to locate her daddy risks potential legal liability. But given today's atrocities that make headlines, it seems to be a reality of the '90s. Pity!

DEAR ABBY: This is baffling. On dozens of occasions, I have given my sister a gift, carefully chosen and beautifully wrapped, but on receiving it, she says something like, "Oh ... you really shouldn't have." Then a few days later, she gives it back to me and absolutely insists that I take it.

Is this passive-aggressive behavior? Or am I a lousy shopper? What should I do with a collection of rejected gifts? They include clothes, jewelry, decorative objects, brandy, etc. And what should I do in the future?

SISTER SUE

DEAR (SWEET) SUE: Your sister is obviously very insensitive. Stop giving her "things." Give her a check, a gift certificate, or make a contribution to her favorite charity. Or simply give her a card.

You may do whatever you wish with the collection of gifts, including giving them to someone you know will appreciate them.

DEAR ABBY: I wish to respond to the widow who encountered a nurse commenting on her husband's critical condition in front of him as he lay in a coma.

I'm a nurse, and we are taught to go is hearing. That nurse was out of line, and obviously very insensitive. However, in defense of all nurses, she is the rare exception.

A CARING RN IN PHOENIX

Horoscope

Tuesday, April 11, 1995

In the year ahead, you might have a very important involvement that brings you before the public in some manner. This can be a constructive development if you keep working on your image.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Objectives that are significant to you might have only a nominal appeal to your companions today. You shouldn't let them pressure you into altering your goals. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a possibility that you might leave too much up to chance today. If you fail to control your destiny, other factors might do so for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Usually, you're the type of person who tries to help others. Today, however, you might pretend to be unavailable to someone who needs you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An old issue that previously generated friction between you and a pal might surface again today. Try to treat it more tactfully this time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This might not be a good day for going on a shopping spree. You might not be able to assess the true worth of products.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Disagreements between you and your mate should be resolved privately today. Avoid bringing in-laws or friends into the picture with their destructive comments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you don't have anything nice to say about others today, keep your comments to yourself.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JEANNE: Happy Birthday, my dearest firstborn!

What you say will be both distorted and recorded.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Actions motivated by spite or revenge could backfire today and leave you worse off than you were before.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Upon occasion, your better judgment sometimes deserts you and you're inclined to reward the wrong people. This could be one of those days.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today there's a strong chance that you might spend too much time on goals that won't gratify you once you achieve them. Double check your targets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends might find you difficult to understand today due to your reluctance to express what is disturbing you. This is no time to nurture secrets.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It will be important today to screen your associates carefully. Avoid being closely identified with someone who is always stirring up trouble.

On Saturday, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner was re-elected to the governing board of the U.S. Olympic Foundation.

HOCKEY

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Kirk Muller, acquired by the New York Islanders on Wednesday, finally reported to his new team Sunday.

The left wing was part of a trade that brought Mathieu Schneider and Craig Darby to New York for Pierre Turgeon and Vladimir Malakhov.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dallas Stars defenseman Kevin Hatcher made the most of his offensive opportunities against the St. Louis Blues.

He gave Dallas a 2-0 lead midway through the second period with a low slap shot from the right point and added the game-winner on a seemingly harmless shot with 3:30 remaining in the Stars' 3-2 victory Sunday.

"That's exactly what you're hoping for there," Hatcher said of his winning goal that somehow slid through Jon Casey's pads from a bad angle.

"You have to pick your spots. I'm not going to go every time. If it's there, I'll try to jump up into the play."

Hatcher's offensive effort helped overcome the loss of high-scoring Mike Modano, who went down last week with a season-ending ankle injury.

"I don't think you can expect 50 out of me," Hatcher joked. "Really, there wasn't anything special about either of my goals. I just put the puck toward the net. They didn't come on any set plays."

In addition to Hatcher, the Stars also got a nice assist from fellow defenseman Paul Cavallini on the game's first goal by Brent Gilchrist.

"We have a big, mobile defense that can control the balance of a game," Stars coach Bob Gainey said. "Right now, they're like a group of forwards."

Gainey, a defensive specialist during his playing days with Montreal, said his team's emphasis will have to be on the defensive end. That act played well on the road, as the Stars went 3-0-1 despite scoring only 11 goals.

"You'd like to see a few more goals, but we had two goals on 10 shots," Gainey said. "That's pretty good production. We've played like that the last five or six games. We haven't really been outworked."

Adam Creighton scored twice for St. Louis and Brett Hull added an assist to extend his league-leading point streak to nine games.

Gilchrist opened the scoring at 1:53 of the second period and Hatcher then beat Blues starter Curtis Joseph at 11:36. St. Louis tied it later in the period when Creighton scored twice in a 72-second span.

"We got off to a slow start and we were waiting to see what would happen," Creighton said. "We let them get off to a two-goal lead and you can't let that happen."

The loss snapped St. Louis' unbeaten streak at seven games, and marked only the second time in 11 games that the Blues have lost at home.

"We weren't prepared mentally to compete on a consistent basis today against a team that desperate," Blues coach Mike Keenan said. "We weren't motivated by the opportunity to climb in the standings."

GOLF

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — So, Tiger Woods, you've just played in your first Masters at age 19. What are you going to do now? Go to Disney World?

Sorry, there's no time for that kind of revelry. Not when he had to make a 9 a.m. history class today.

"The only thing that will be really tough is I missed the first week of spring quarter being here," said the Stanford freshman, who completed his first Masters Sunday with his third even-par round and a respectable 5-over 293 total. "I have to catch up in the next few days."

Woods had the lowest score of any amateur in the tournament. Of course, that was never in doubt since he was the only amateur who even made the cut.

Crenshaw captures Masters title

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw won — with help from Harvey.

Just as he has all his life. "It was like someone put his hand on my shoulder and guided me through," Ben Crenshaw said Sunday after his one-stroke victory in the Masters.

It was a tribute to his life-long friend, teacher and mentor, the late Harvey Penick, who died a week ago — one week after giving Crenshaw one last lesson — at the age of 90 in Austin, Texas.

"Harvey was the 15th club in my bag today," Crenshaw said.

All his emotions broke through his carefully crafted composure when he holed the final putt, a little 18-inch-er.

He didn't straighten from his putting crouch. He dropped the putter. His white cap fell to the green. Bending from the waist, he clasped both hands to his face and, before a huge gallery around the 18th green and a national television audience, he wept. Unashamedly.

When his caddy, Carl Jackson, put a tentative hand on his shoulder, Ben straightened, hugged the caddy and walked off the green, tears streaming down his face, to sign his card and slip into a second green jacket.

In all the storied history of this tournament and this place — both of which Crenshaw loves so well — there may not have been a more poignant, emotional moment.

"I just let go," Crenshaw said after becoming only the second American in eight years to win this title. "I couldn't hold it any longer. All day long the galleries were giving me ovation after ovation. I was fighting to keep my composure."

"I don't know how I got through the day. I really don't. I'll never know."

There was so much going on in his mind, Crenshaw said. In there were the thoughts of Penick, who first put the 5-year-old Crenshaw's hands on a golf club. There was the struggle to turn back the world's greatest players in one of golf's great dramas. And there was the haunting thought that this was his last, best chance.

"At 43, you don't know how many more chances you'll have," he said.

He gave himself the chance with a third-round 66 that gave him a share of the lead, then nailed the victory with tournament-turning putts on the 16th and 17th greens.

Those birdies gave him a two-shot lead with one hole to go and the freedom to play the last hole conservatively. He missed the green short left — away from the trouble — and made the bogey-5 that won it.

"It was fate. I believe in fate. I was just a lot luckier than anyone else this week," he said after his closing 4-under-par 68 produced a 274, the third lowest winning score in Masters history.

"Obviously the best golf I've played in a long time," Crenshaw said.

His close friend, Davis Love III — "Davis is like family," Crenshaw said — chased him to the title he first won in 1984.

Love, who had a saga of his own, making his way into the Masters field only with a victory in New Orleans last week, was second with a 66 and a 275 total.

Rangers' Nixon fights off drug addiction during strike

DALLAS (AP) — For many big leaguers, the players strike was a financial hardship. For Otis Nixon, the Texas Rangers' new center fielder, it was a threat to his life.

The months of strike-imposed idleness left Nixon alone with a drug addiction that place his life and career in the balance.

Nixon is a recovering addict twice suspended by major league baseball for violating its drug policy and after-care program. With the strike came the loss of the day-to-day structure of his professional life, as well as the support of his team.

"My foundation is what helps me. If you don't have a foundation in your life and things don't go well, that's when things can happen," he told The Dallas Morning News for its Monday editions. "The foundation is the key. If you're not set up good, it's not going to work."

Nixon relied on himself, becoming more actively involved with his family, his community and in the electronics business he owns in Atlanta. He stayed clean.

Others lost their way in an unstructured setting. Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets violated his after-care program during the strike and was suspended. Darryl Strawberry of San Francisco violated his after-care program during the strike and was suspended.

The New York Yankees gave Steve Howe, also on an after-care program, a job in the ticket office to restore the lost structure.

"I don't like to see anybody have to go through it," Nixon said of Gooden and Strawberry.

Spurs continue winning streak

By BETH HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — David Robinson computes the numbers in his head, then smiles at the way they add up.

According to his brand of math, the San Antonio Spurs' 15-game winning streak is far from over.

"We've got eight more games left in the regular season and 15 in the playoffs," he said, assuming the Spurs would reach the final and win their first NBA championship. "If we finish this season with a 38-game winning streak, that would be pretty nice."

Already the league's hottest and best team with a 56-18 mark, San Antonio beat the Los Angeles Lakers 101-87 on Sunday night for its club-record 26th road win.

The victory ended a four-game West Coast trip for the Spurs, leaving Robinson to reflect on how much has changed since they went 7-9 in the first month of the season.

"We've certainly had our share of dealing with losing. Now we have to learn how to deal with winning and it's coming," he said. "I like this group and I like what we're building here. I'm excited. I think the playoffs will be fun for us."

Robinson had 26 points, 18 rebounds and seven blocks and Vinny Del Negro scored 14 of his 22 points in the first quarter when the Spurs took the lead for good.

Robinson scored only 9 points in the first half, but he regained his shooting touch and scored the Spurs' final 6 points of the third quarter to give them an 82-65 lead heading into the fourth.

The Lakers briefly rallied in hopes of continuing their seven-game home winning streak. They cut their deficit to 92-84 on Cedric Ceballos' put-back of a 3-point attempt by Eddie Jones with 3:28 remaining.

Ceballos later had the ball on a breakaway, but fumbled it away as Del Negro grabbed it and threw the ball downcourt. Another time, Ceballos fought for an inside basket only to have Robinson take it away.

"Once we got down, they're such a good team at executing and finding open spots, penetrating the ball to the basket, that it was kind of hard for us to get ourselves out of the hole," said Ceballos, who had 26 points and 10 rebounds.

Sedale Threatt sank a 3-pointer to pull the Lakers to 95-87 with 56 seconds remaining, but they ran out of time.

"The Spurs showed why they're the No. 1 team in the league right now. They really took it to us on our home court," Lakers coach Del Harris said. "David Robinson is a guy that should be making all the commercials as far as I'm concerned. This guy is a tremendous player. He is the MVP in my mind — hands down."

The Spurs have been without controversy since Dennis Rodman went on the injured list March 20, and it shows in their 12-0 record without him.

"We're focused in practice, we know what we want to get accomplished, we get a lot done in a short period of time," Robinson said. "We have a group of unselfish guys who are concerned about winning games. That's what it takes to do what we're doing."

However, Robinson conceded that the Spurs will need Rodman's rebounding in the playoffs. He was absent Sunday night because of a separated right shoulder, but coach Bob Hill said he would return to practice Tuesday.

"We need Dennis, he's a key part of our team," Robinson said, "but the truth of the matter is, it's a team and one player does not make a team. Obviously, we can fill that gap."

Terry Cummings and J.R. Reid continue to fill the void created by Rodman. Cummings had 8 points and nine rebounds as a starter, while Reid added 13 points in a reserve role.

San Antonio won the season series against the Lakers 3-1 after sweeping them 4-0 last season. It's the first time the Spurs have won consecutive series against Los Angeles since 1982-83 and 1983-84.

Document shows Oak Ridge uranium workers were research targets

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Workers at a uranium processing plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., were targeted in the late 1940s as research subjects in an effort to learn more about the effects of radiation on the body, a recently declassified document suggests.

The document, found among boxes of secret papers, outlined an elaborate plan to study the workers through medical tests and, when possible, collecting tissue samples, including bones, extracted teeth and other body parts.

Although details remain sketchy, the document suggests the researchers' interest was foremost in research about radiation health effects as opposed to gathering health data to provide worker protection, one investigator said.

"There is an opportunity," the researchers argued in detailing the proposed studies in a 1949 memo, "to secure the type of medical information required ... to interpret, in terms of human experience, the toxicological findings of small animal research."

The Oak Ridge document was found among hundreds of boxes of classified papers in a storage vault at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory by investigators from the president's Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments.

The panel, which for a year has been examining the government's use of humans in radiation experiments during the decades of the Cold War, is expected to discuss the document and other issues at two days of meetings this week.

Some of the Oak Ridge workers were involved in electromagnetic separation of uranium at increasingly high concentrations, according to the document. Others were mechanics and technicians participating in programs referred to only by their code names — "Sunflower" and "Daffodil" — with no further explanation.

Most of the research data were to be sent to the University of Rochester School of Medicine, which in the 1940s and early 1950s conducted much of the research into radiation effects on humans.

Some of the plan called for collecting hard and soft tissue samples and extracted teeth, and upon a worker's death, collecting bones and body parts so they could be closely examined for radiation effects.

"This will involve making arrangements with various hospitals and dental clinics in the (Oak Ridge) vicinity so that when these employees have an appendix removed these tissue samples will be available for analysis," the memo said.

"Furthermore, arrangements should be made to secure samples of ... rib, sternum, vertebra and femur ... when such an opportunity is presented," it added.

While the memo, written by a scientist at Oak Ridge, said the research plan had been thoroughly discussed and given wide support, it's not certain to what extent the proposal was implemented. Investigators believe it was pursued at least to some degree.

"It's unclear what these workers were told, whether these (health study) plans were shared with them, and whether they were ever told about their exposure," says a staff summary prepared for the presidential advisory panel.

Another part of the proposed research effort outlined a proposal to track uranium intake and absorption by closely monitoring "one or two subjects" working on the electromagnetic separation project. The memo said that despite precautions, it was known some uranium was taken in by the workers.

To determine how much uranium the workers actually were breathing, a "dummy respirator" — set to run at the same rate as the workers' breathing level — was set up alongside the workers and examined daily. They also underwent regular examinations.

Palestinian police arrest activists after attacks by suicide bombers

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Under pressure to crack down on Islamic militants following suicide attacks that killed six Israelis, Palestinian police arrested 112 activists today. A special court sentenced an activist to 15 years in prison for recruiting suicide bombers.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat created the military court two months ago as a sign of his intent to curb militant violence, but no trials had been held until this session.

The court identified the activist as Samir Ali Al-Jedi, who Palestinian police said belonged to the Islamic Jihad group that carried out the first bombing Sunday near the Kfar Darom settlement that killed six Israeli soldiers and wounded 34 people.

The bomber, Khaled Khatib, drove an explosives-laden car into a commuter bus in the Gaza Strip.

Hamas and Islamic Jihad activists swore today to continue their war against Israel. Sunday's casualties from both bombings brought to 64 the number of Israelis killed in attacks claimed by Hamas and Islamic Jihad since October. The two groups hope to doom the September 1993 Israel-PLO autonomy accord.

"Let Arafat know that we will not give up and his arrests will not terrorize us!" one militant shouted at a wake held for the Islamic Jihad bomber.

Supporters fired rounds of automatic gunfire into the air to salute the 24-year-old suicide-bomber.

The convicted activist, Al-Jedi, 25, had been detained last month after Palestinian police received a tip that he had recruited two teenagers to carry out suicide bombings in Israel.

His all-night trial took place as Palestinian security forces arrested 112 members of Islamic Jihad and Hamas, which claimed responsibility for the second attack Sunday near the Netzarim settlement.

Eleven people, including two young girls, were wounded in that attack, which occurred two hours after the Kfar Darom bombing.

Three of the injured were Americans, said White House spokesman Mike McCurry. The U.S. Embassy would not release their names today.

One American was identified by her mother as Alisa M. Flatow, a Brandeis University student.

Today's arrests followed demands by Israeli Cabinet ministers and military leaders that Arafat clamp down on extremists opposed to the Israel-PLO peace process.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres urged Arafat to arrest Muslim clergy who convince youths to commit suicide.

"It is clear that these youths who committed suicide were incited by religious men," he said today.

"In the end those who commit suicide are also victims — victims of stupidity and temptation. ... Those who tempt them to murder ... have to be brought to justice and tried."

In previous attacks, Arafat rounded up militants only to let them go shortly afterward without charging them. Today's arrests involved political leaders and academics who support Islamic Jihad and Hamas.

Among those arrested was Hamas spokesman Imad Falouji, who was charged with possessing dangerous documents.

Hamas leaders said the arrests and sentencing would only increase tensions between the extremists and Arafat's Palestinian Authority.

The bombings led to calls by Israeli right-wingers for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to halt talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization on extending Palestinian autonomy from the Gaza and Jericho to the rest of the West Bank.

The chief Israeli delegate, Yoel Singer, said today that Israel is going ahead with negotiations with the PLO because suspending the talks would give a "prize" to bombers.

Singer made the statement as he arrived in Cairo for negotiations on proposed elections for a council to govern Palestinian autonomous zones in the Gaza and West Bank.

Thousands of American schools do things right, Carnegie study says

By SALLY STREFF BUZBEE
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In San Antonio, teachers at Jackson-Keller Elementary host "Doughnuts for Dads" and "Muffins for Moms" parties on Saturdays in nearby apartment buildings, luring busy parents to talk about school.

At Dann C. Byck Elementary in Louisville, Ky., a parents' group mails child-care pamphlets to the families of new neighborhood babies, then lends out books, toys and games as the babies grow.

And at Jackson Elementary School in Everett, Wash., students monitor the water quality of a nearby polluted creek, learning biology and chemistry while also prompting the city to install a new storm drain.

These are among the thousands of American schools that do things right each day, a new study from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching says. And it's time for other schools to learn from them.

"We don't need another model project," foundation President Ernest L. Boyer said last week. "The examples are out there. We just need to replicate them."

The study from the Princeton, N.J., group echoes the thinking of a government-sponsored education reform summit last week in Washington, during which educators proposed moving from "a decade of research and development" to action on reform.

The Carnegie study says elementary schools should be the focus of that action because they are "less rigid" and more open to creative ideas.

It says good schools must do four things:

- Agree on and teach children a core of math, science and language, and then test to measure results. "You can't expect a nation to continue putting in billions of dollars unless you have some way to measure results," Boyer said.
- Create a sense of community, stressing discipline and caring to children while reaching out to parents and local business. "An effective school absolutely has to have parents as full partners," Boyer said.
- Provide health, counseling and other services to children, and find a way to provide resources such as books, maps, plants, computers and phone lines.
- Teach children ethics along with academics. Schools are often hesitant to do this because of ideological controversies and the nation's constitutional separation of church and state, Boyer noted.

"But the result is we're leaving students confused about what behavior and conduct is expected," Boyer said. "And sadly, the vacuum is being filled with negative signals."

Although public schools can't teach religion, they can teach about religion's powerful influence throughout history, he notes.

As an example, he pointed to a coalition of 275 schools in the St. Louis, Mo., area that worked with parents to come up with a set of ethics to teach students. It included "honesty, responsibility, cooperation and commitment."

Although it found many good things, the Carnegie study also pinpointed severe school problems — lack of money, heavy teacher workloads and societal problems like drug addiction, poverty and abuse.

But the most crucial problem is "the loss of confidence in this country, not just in school reform, but in the very idea of public education," Boyer said.

Teachers overwhelmingly believe schools would improve if parents were more involved, according to the study's polling, Boyer noted.

And parents routinely say they want to be more involved. But they often are confused or unsure how to do that, and even feel rebuffed.

Copies of the study, titled "The Basic School: A Community for Learning," are available for $10 from California Princeton Fulfillment Services, 1-800-777-4726 or 1-609-883-1759.

Study backs possible cause of syndrome

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mysterious illnesses afflicting Gulf War veterans may be caused by a chemical cocktail of anti-nerve gas pills and insecticides given to soldiers during the war, researchers say.

Researchers exposed chickens to the same combination of chemicals that soldiers were given, then compared their blood to samples taken from about a dozen Gulf War veterans. In every case, the chickens suffered nervous system damage like that suffered by veterans.

No undisputed link has been established between the combination of chemicals and the ailments unofficially known as Gulf War syndrome, but that's where the preliminary findings point, said Mohamed Abou-Donia, deputy director of Duke University Medical Center's toxicology program.

"I'm confident we have more than a hypothesis," he said. "We have very solid data to demonstrate we have a plausible scenario of what could have happened in the Gulf War."

The $150,000 study, funded by longtime veteran supporter Ross Perot, has not been peer-reviewed or published. And another toxicologist said the Duke team's research will be hard to prove.

"It's a kind of scenario that is fairly easy to construct but difficult to prove," said Ernest Hodgson, head of the toxicology department at North Carolina State University. He isn't involved in the study.

"Chemicals do interact, and there are cases where the toxicity of two chemicals is far greater than when given separately. ... So it's credible, but that's a long way from proof," Hodgson said.

Of the 697,000 troops who served in the war, about 6 percent — some 43,000 — still complain of muscle pain, memory loss and respiratory and heart problems, according to the Pentagon. Of the 43,000, the symptoms of all but 15 percent can be attributed to known illnesses, but doctors haven't been able to make clear diagnoses in about one of every six cases.

Last June, Department of Agriculture scientist James Moss announced similar results in his study of whether the combination of chemicals commonly used by the military during the war could be the cause of Gulf War syndrome.

Moss, experimenting with insects, said he found that a bug repellent is 10 times more deadly on cockroaches when combined with a drug that protects against nerve gas, adding that it wasn't possible to say the same would be true for humans.

Abou-Donia said the next step is understanding how it happens.

One possible reason some veterans got sick and others didn't is that each person's ability to deal with toxic chemicals varies. Also, some veterans may have been exposed to higher doses of chemicals, Abou-Donia said.

Border patrol concerned about train robberies

EL PASO (AP) — Dozens of bandits stopped a freight train in the shadow of Mount Cristo Rey, near the junction of the Texas, New Mexico and Mexico border. Like a scene out of an old western movie, proceeded to rob it.

Instead of gold, these modern-day train robbers got TVs and jackets.

"There's a whole drama that unfolds right in the belly of the metropolitan area of El Paso and most people don't even understand or realize it," Border Patrol Chief Sylvestre Reyes told the El Paso Times.

Officials with the Southern Pacific Railroad say that 700 incidents were reported in the area along that border last year.

On Friday, the thieves grabbed the goods, then exchanged fire with authorities during their escape attempt.

The mountainous terrain and numerous hiding places created an ideal spot near Sunland Park on the U.S. side of the border for the train robbery.

But at least 12 people were taken into custody on the Mexican side of the border.

Although the suspects won't be extradited, Reyes said U.S. and Mexican authorities will work together so the men are charged with the crime, even though it happened in U.S. territory.

The problem area, where the Border Patrol has proposed building a 1.3-mile "fence" to keep out intruders, is between Anapra in Mexico and Sunland Park.

Last year's incidents range from shooting attempts to burglary and robbery. Six hundred burglaries were reported, but the figure is misleading because railroad officials count each boxcar entered as a burglary.

"We've had, last year seven different times, shots fired in the Anapra area," said Lt. Dale Bray, district commander of the Southern Pacific Railroad Police. "What we're seeing here is an escalation over the years."
