Henley Gets Top Sentence

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Elmer Wayne Henley, sentenced to 99 years in prison for each of the six boys he killed, could be eligible for parole by the time he is 30-years-old.

Henley, 18, Houston, was sentenced Tuesday for his part in the worst mass murder in modern American history in which 27 boys were lured to the home of a bachelor electrician where they were tortured sexually and killed.

Henley was convicted Monday of killing six of the 27 victims and sentenced to 99-year terms Tuesday. Judge Preston Dial, who received the case on a change of venue, has yet to decide if the terms will run concurrently or consecutively.

"I'm just so happy," said Bettye Shirley, the mother of one of the victims, upon hearing the jury's sentence. "Thank the Lord. Thank the people. Thank the state. Thank anybody around."

The sentence was the harshest penalty possible under Texas law.

But the prosecuting attorney told the jury he regretted "you can not give the death penalty in this case."

Dial said he formally would sentence Henley Aug. 1 and would announce at that time whether the six sentences will run consecutively or concurrently.

But even if Dial sentences Henley to the maximum — 594 years in prison — Henley could be eligible for parole by the time he's 30. Under Texas law, felons are eligible for parole upon completion of one-third of their sentence or 20 years, whichever is less. In addition, prisoners are compensated for good behavior which, if Henley was a model prisoner, could make him eligible for parole after 12 years.

Defense attorney Will Gray said he would present his formal petition for a new trial during the Aug. 1 hearing.

Delegates Hunting Cause Of Rejection Of Charter

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Constitutional Convention delegates, searching for the cause of two previous rejections of the proposed charter, scheduled individual votes today on five separate proposals President Price Daniel Jr. contends are the problem areas.

The Submission and Transition Committee has also promised convention delegates it will offer either Thursday or Friday an alternative to the education article that has come under criticism since the convention began attempting to win the two-thirds approval needed to submit a constitution to the voters in November.

The basic constitution drafted by the convention during six months of debate will not be changed by the new education proposal, which if approved would be offered to voters as a second choice.

The votes today were on proposed amendments to the new constitution that would:

- Ban pari-mutuel horse racing in the state.
- Give counties limited home rule charter power.
- Fix legislative salaries at $8,750 per year.
- Give House members four-year terms.

Many delegates were pessimistic Tuesday about prospects for reaching a compromise that could get the needed two-thirds majority support before the closing hours of the convention.

"I really believe that if Moses came down off the mountain with the constitution written on a stone tablet it couldn't get 121 votes right now," said Rep. Ben Bynum, D-Amarillo.

Sen. Nelson Wolff, D-San Antonio, chairman of the Submission and Transition Committee which must draft any compromise adopted, said the votes today might give his panel an idea of which route to follow.

"We've found from talking to delegates that the problems surround the education article and the separate submissions," Wolff said. "We hope to get a reading on them this week, and have a package ready to go next week that can get final approval."

Daniel, who like Wolff opposes any change in the body of the new constitution, told reporters two earlier votes on the document showed 138 of the 181 delegates had supported it at one time or another, even though it had been rejected on votes of 81-94 and 86-91.

He contended 150 to 160 of the delegates will agree on a constitution before the convention automatically ends at midnight July 30.

Turkey Prepares To Invade Island

Troops, tanks and artillery massed on Turkey's southern beaches 50 miles from Cyprus today and an Istanbul newspaper said Turkey planned to invade the embattled island republic.

Cyprus' new military-backed regime moved to restore calm in the island republic and proclaimed friendship for Turkish Cypriots in an apparent bid to avert a military confrontation with Turkey.

Archbishop Makarios, deposed as president of Cyprus in a Greek-led military coup on Monday, flew to London today en route to the United Nations to make an impassioned plea for international aid.

"I am safe and sound and fighting for peace and unity in my country," Makarios said before boarding a British Royal Air Force jet for a flight to London, where he planned to meet with British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan.

In Istanbul, Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit met with the commanders of the army, navy and air force for urgent consultations, but no details of the talks were released. Ecevit charged Greece had violated Cyprus' independence.

Turkey's second largest newspaper, Gunaydin, proclaimed in a red, banner headline: "We are making an invasion of Cyprus."

Witnesses said a strike force of troops, tanks and artillery massed near sea transports on Turkey's southern beaches and reported an new armored division rolling from the city of Adana to the coast.

The Ankara government issued an ultimatum warning Turkey would act alone if British troops stationed on Cyprus refused to intervene in the crisis to insure the island remained independent of Greece.

Nicosia Radio broadcast assurances for Turkish Cypriots that the Greek-led national guard coup that installed newspaper publisher Nicos Sampson as president would not change their status.

"The Turkish Cypriots need not fear anything," Nicosia Radio said. "The change exclusively concerns the Greeks of Cyprus. We look on the Turks with sincere feelings of friendship."

The radio also said Zenon Rossides, Cypriot representative at the United Nations under Makarios, no longer represented Cyprus at the world body.

In a related development, diplomatic sources in Athens said the Greek ambassador to Turkey, Dimitrios Kosmadopoulos, resigned. No reason was given.

Sampson, the new Cypriot president, lifted the two-day-old curfew in Nicosia during the morning to allow essential workers to resume their jobs.

Nicosia Radio said the curfew was lifted from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. and appealed especially for milk and bread deliveries so that Cypriots could have basic food.

UPI Correspondent Andreas Hadjipapas, in a pooled dispatch from the island, reported more than 60 dead or wounded in two days of fighting following Monday's coup by the Greek-led Cypriot national guard.

The State Department said two Americans were wounded in the takeover, but the lives of the 6,000 U.S. citizens on Cyprus did not appear "in jeopardy."

The United States warned Greece and Turkey to avoid direct interference on Cyprus and said it favored independent status for the island republic, which has a Greek majority and Turkish minority population.

The Soviet Union warned Greece to halt "its intervention or force the uprising was an internal affair of Cyprus and pledged to keep out of the conflict."

The new Cyprus government, headed by publisher Nicos Sampson, avoided any mention of eventually uniting the island with Greece. Sampson has been a leader of Greek Cypriot militants supporting "enosis" — union with Greece.

In Ankara, a Foreign Office spokesman said Turkey would act alone if British troops stationed on Cyprus refused to intervene to safeguard independence for the island in the next 24 hours.

No Anthrax Cases Here

A spokesman at a Pampa animal clinic said this morning that, to the best of his knowledge, there had never been a reported case of anthrax in Gray County. "Of course," he said, "it could always happen, what with cattle being shipped in and out, and one of the bad things about the disease is this — the first symptom is death."

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said his office had not been alerted in any way regarding the epidemic of anthrax which is plaguing portions of Oklahoma and Texas.

A roadblock has isolated the cattle disease in one Texas county (Dallas), but infected cows have been reported in Oklahoma. Gov. David Hall has banned the importation of more Texas livestock.

Eight cows have reportedly died of anthrax, with five more suspected, the Oklahoma Board of Agriculture said.

Anthrax outbreaks have already killed more than 100 cattle in East Texas, where the disease is believed to have slipped across the border into Oklahoma.

CALLER REPORTS SLAYINGS

Did NZ Patrol Kill 6 Americans?

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — Did a New Zealand army patrol kill six American soldiers found torturing civilians in South Vietnam?

The New Zealand government promised a full inquiry Tuesday night after an emotional caller telephoned a report of the slayings to an Auckland radio station.

The obviously distressed man, his voice breaking, said he had wanted to get the story off his chest for two years, but would not identify himself unless granted immunity from prosecution.

The caller, in remarks broadcast live over a telephone talk show, said he was part of a four-man New Zealand patrol that found six American GIs "interrogating and torturing" civilians in South Vietnam.

"The civilians were bound and the Americans were hitting them with truncheons," he said. "It looked to us as if two of the civilians were already dead when we arrived."

He said the New Zealanders did not know what to do at first, but decided to intervene when the beatings kept on. Two New Zealanders approached while the others covered from a distance.

President Plans Fight To Finish

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon, having put thoughts of resigning behind him, plans a "fight to the finish" against impeachment in order to save the presidency, according to a book written by one of his strongest defenders.

Nixon also says that if the Watergate-related accusations against him were true, he would not remain in the White House "for a minute" and "nobody would have to ask me to resign."

The comments were made in the book "The Personal Nixon: Staying on the Summit," written by Rabbi Baruch Korff, head of the National Citizens Committee for Fairness to the Presidency.

Korff interviewed Nixon May 13 in the Oval Office and later got written responses to questions. He made the 123-page book public Tuesday after meeting with Nixon.

At a news conference, Korff said he had the impression that Nixon "agrees with me" that the caller said a GI pointed a gun at one of the advancing men, a New Zealander "shot and killed the American" and then "everybody just started shooting."

The caller said two Americans were killed, two wounded and two unharmed. He said the surviving GIs put down their arms, but the New Zealanders decided to cover up the incident by shooting and burying them in a deep hole.

"We never thought we'd get away with this...we kept it to ourselves...it's as if the whole thing never happened," the caller said.

Defense Minister Arthur Faulkner said the New Zealand government would investigate the report "with the utmost vigor."

(In Washington, Pentagon sources said a check of the records of the 300 American servicemen missing in South Vietnam failed to show six men missing on the same day in the same place under such circumstances.)

(The officials said, however, the bodies could have been recovered during the war, and the men declared dead as a result of a presumed ambush.)

United Press International King Hussein of Jordan held formal talks with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat in Alexandria today aimed at coordinating policies for the Middle East peace conference expected to resume in Geneva in October.

Press reports said the talks were expected to deal mainly with the possibility of a reconciliation between Jordan and the Palestinian guerrillas.

However the Palestinians indicated, there would be major difficulties. Falastin al Thawra, the official newspaper of the Palestine Liberation Organization

(PLO), accused Hussein of "collusion with imperialism and the Zionist enemy."

Tel Aviv dispatches said the Israeli cabinet is considering a new approach to King Hussein to work out an agreement on their common frontier along the Jordan River.

In an apparent leak from a government official at a background briefing for Israeli correspondents, Tel Aviv newspapers said talks on the Jordanian approach would begin at a cabinet meeting Sunday.

A proposal will be discussed to renew the attempt at dialogue with Hussein — and not only to create the impression that he is not being ignored."

Government sources denied press reports that Hussein went to Cairo with Israeli proposals on settling their frontier dispute.

"No Israeli proposal has been presented so far to Jordan," one source said.

Government sources in Cairo said a reconciliation between the guerrillas and Hussein was essential to a united Arab front at the Geneva peace talks.

The guerrilla newspaper said, however, "The greatest support the Arabs can extend to the guerrilla movement is not to talk about reconciliation."

Falastin Al Thawra said other Arab nations should "prevent the Jordanian regime from playing its role in the service of imperialism."

The newspaper called on Arab nations to force Hussein to abandon plans to form a federation with occupied West Bank if Israel abandons the region.

The guerrillas, bitter enemies of Hussein since his army drove them out of Jordan in 1971, want to set up an independent Palestinian state on the West Bank.

Hussein arrived in Egypt Tuesday for three days of talks.

Firing Of OEO Head Drawing Some Criticism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-N.Y., chairman of a House subcommittee on equal opportunity, is considering whether to investigate the White House firing of Alvin J. Arnett as director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Arnett's dismissal as head of the anti-poverty agency and President Nixon's nomination of Bert A. Gallegos, OEO general counsel, as his successor were announced Tuesday.

The White House acknowledged Arnett's dismissal was connected with his fight to keep OEO programs alive in the face of Nixon's intent to abolish the agency and not provide any funds for a major anti-poverty program.

Arnett told UPI he had no hangup on preserving OEO as an agency, but he readily admitted to lobbying governors and mayors for support in continuing programs such as Community Action in another federal agency.

Arnett takes credit for a major role in a lopsided 331-53 House vote on May 29 to create an autonomous division within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to carry on Community Action, which provides federal grants to public and private state and local agencies to carry out a variety of anti-poverty projects.

The administration is opposed to the House bill on grounds it should give the secretary of HEW control of running Community Action.

Hawkins said giving HEW that kind of control would result in a "token type program."

Labor Troubles Plaguing Nation

United Press International

The country's labor troubles continued today with National Guardsmen patrolling two Ohio institutions in a state employes pay dispute and strikes which grounded National Airlines and crippled the copper industry.

A spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said Tuesday, "For the week of July 15 we have 588 strikes involving 231,324 workers and 42 of those strikes involved units of 1,000 or more employes."

He said the figures substantially were higher than the same week in any preceding year back through 1959, the first year records were kept.

Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan ordered guardsmen Tuesday to the Lima State Hospital for the criminally insane minutes before a Ohio House-Senate committee reached agreement on a pay hike for state employes. Last Friday, guardsmen were ordered to the southern Ohio correctional facility in Lucasville.

Leaders of the four unions involved in the Ohio strike — which affects workers at prisons, mental hospitals, state liquor stores, highway department garages and other state facilities — surveyed members today for a reaction to the proposed pay hike.

While Ohio officials waited to see if the unions would be satisfied with the pay hike, National Airlines prepared for a long strike by machinists. The airlines placed 5,500 employes on furloughs as negotiations were recessed Tuesday at Naples, Fla., for two days. A federal mediator said negotiations would resume Thursday in Washington.

The layoff left only 900 supervisors on the payroll. The strike, which began Monday, grounded the company's domestic and transatlantic flights.

About 30,000 copper workers remained off the job at mines and smelters of five companies across the country. However, one-third of the strikers — employes of Kennecott Copper Corp., the nation's largest producer — were to return to their jobs Monday under a tentative agreement.

In Baltimore, policemen Tuesday approved the city's wage offer and an accompanying union promise to negotiate in behalf of officers who were fired during the strike. The wage offer provides for $1,300 to $2,500 increases July 1, 1975.

In Las Vegas, N.M., all but one of the city's 38 city police officers walked off the job Tuesday night in a wage dispute with the City Council. State patrol volunteers and state policemen were pressed into duty.

Elsewhere in the labor picture:

—Rhode Island Gov. Philip W. Noel fired about 50 guards who refused to report for the day shift at the state's adult correction institutions in Cranston. They balked at working after a fist fight Monday night between a guard and an inmate. Some guards returned to work despite a strike called by the Brotherhood of Correctional Officers.

—About 3,000 members of the United Mine Workers staged a wildcat strike at Cambridge, Ohio, to protest stringent strip mine legislation under consideration in Congress.

—In Oakland, Calif., 700 flight attendants and cockpit crews for Trans International Airlines remained off their jobs in a contract dispute. The airline operates charter flights.

Israel Tells Simon Of Need For Aid

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israeli leaders told Treasury Secretary William E. Simon today that Israel needs more than $2 billion a year in military and economic aid from the United States, government officials reported.

Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz told Simon that Israel's balance of payments deficit this year amounts to $3 billion, most of it due to defense spending during and since the October Middle East war, the officials said.

Simon met for an hour with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and then conferred with Rabinowitz in the second day of a three-day visit to Israel.

The Treasury secretary told newsmen upon arrival in Tel Aviv Tuesday night that the United States "will be helpful in every way that we can help with assistance that's been so characteristic of our relations."

"Now we stand on the threshold of a new era in these relations," he said.

Simon today also discussed with Commerce and Industry Minister Haim Bar Lev the possibility of increasing trade between the two countries, especially the lowering of import barriers to Israeli products in the United States, government officials said.

They also talked about ways the United States might help Israel increase its exports to the European Common Market countries and Israel's increasing reliance on imported energy.

Simon's visit to Israel was the second stop on a four-country Middle East tour to work out the details of economic issues discussed by Nixon during the President's recent trip to the region.

He wound up three days of talks in Egypt by signing economic assistance agreements for war reconstruction projects, including reopening of the Suez Canal. The next stops will be Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

Israel has asked for $1.5 billion a year in U.S. military aid over the next five years. Congress has earmarked $2.2 billion in military and economic assistance to Israel since last October's Middle East war.

Rabinowitz greeted Simon, saying the visit "illustrates the tangible unfolding of policies charted by President Nixon" and predicted the talks would "move speedily ahead in translating principles into reality."

During the Cairo visit, Finance Minister Abdel Aziz Hegazi called on the United States to give Egypt just as much American aid as Israel gets.

AFTER ELECTIONS

Western Canada Views Separation

OTTAWA (UPI) — A move to separate the prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba from the rest of Canada is alive and gaining ground after the recent Liberal election victory.

The last attempted separation of the western provinces was in the late 1800's, but the move to set up an independent Prairie State was quashed by police and its leader, Louis Riel, was hanged.

In recent years, the threat of separation has come from the French-speaking province of Quebec.

But now the focus has shifted westward and, according to former Conservative house leader J. D. Baldwin, "the situation is not unlike that of a tinder-dry forest which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

Baldwin, who represents a constituency in the oil rich province of Alberta, took aim at the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau which won reelection on the strength of support in central Canada but made little headway in the prairies.

The lopsided electoral map, he said, was an illustration of "weakening national bonds."

In an interview Tuesday, Baldwin said the separatist feeling at the grass roots was strong and "I've been around long enough to see what happens when you have the right kind of man to take advantage of the situation."

The man who has come closest to doing that is Jack Horner, another member of Parliament from Alberta, who last winter barely was headed off in his bid to break with the Conservative party and set up a western independent party.

Horner said Tuesday that "the underlying feeling is that Quebec and Ontario are the parents and the West are the children, and the children are grown up and want a share in how the shop is to be run."

Whether the decision hurts them or not, they want to feel they had a share in making the decision," he said he did not necessarily think western separation was in the cards and added "though I am not as strong a federalist as I was, I am still a Canadian."

Even Baldwin, who said recently that the West was now more likely to separate than Quebec ever was, said he does not support the move.

ON HMO REGULATION

State Insurance Board Ignoring Hill's Decision

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The State Insurance Board, under orders from chairman Joe Christie, apparently intends to ignore a ruling of Attorney General John Hill and continue its regulation of Health Maintenance Organizations.

Although an attorney general's opinion carries the force of law unless challenged in court or overturned by the legislature, Christie said Tuesday Hill's ruling giving the Texas Board of Medical Examiners authority over HMOs was based on "will-o'-wisp proposals" and not actual case histories.

Hill said last week the insurance board has no authority under Texas statutes to regulate HMOs.

But Christie issued a statement Tuesday that strongly suggested the board intends to ignore Hill's ruling. Christie could not be reached to amplify the statement.

"The attorney general's opinion dealt with a string of hypothetical case histories involving fanatized Health Maintenance Organizations (prepared health insurance plans)," Christie said.

Higher Prices Aid Exploration, Langdon Says

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Higher natural gas prices boosts exploration and future supplies of the fuel, the chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission said Tuesday.

"The commission is neither deaf nor blind to the rising cost of living," Jim C. Langdon said. "On the other hand it would not be in the public interest to hold rates so low as to drive utilities into bankruptcy."

"Unless prices are allowed to rise in an orderly fashion to reasonable rates, future adequate supplies will not be forthcoming at any price."

Langdon said low gas prices for many years discourage exploration for the fuel and increased its demand.

In order to meet President Nixon's goal of energy self sufficiency by 1980 Langdon suggested:

- An increase of 37 per cent in oil and gas production.
- A 176 per cent rise in coal production.
- Construction of 435 nuclear power plants of 1,000 megawatts capacity.
- Construction of 13 50,000-barrel per day oil-from-coal plants and 30 gas-from-coal plants of 250-million cubic feet capacity.

Pythians Install New Officers

Pampa Lodge No. 480 Knights of Pythias installed new officers for 1974-75 at Tuesday's evening meeting at the Pythian Hall.

David V. Harrah, White Deer, was installed as the new chancellor commander. Harrah, a member of Pampa Lodge five years, is a member of White Deer Fire Dept. and an employe of Cabot.

Other officers installed were Don Thompson, vice-chancellor; Leroy Slater, prelate; Gary B. Clark, master of works; B. B. Altman Jr., secretary; Jack Back, treasurer; John W. Carson Jr., financial secretary; Gary A. Duke, master at arms; Tommy Dawes, inner guard; and Steve Wade, outer guard.

Gary B. Clark, D.D.G.C., was installing officer assisted by Ray Barnard, G.P., and G.R. Fugate, G.M. at A.

Miss Wanetta Bayless, 900 Terry Road, furnished a musical and singing program.

Knight Carson was in charge of the program and served as master of ceremony. Knight Wilson S. Howell was in charge of refreshments served to some 45 members and guests.

SO FAR, ANYWAY

Grandmother Wins Impeachment Case

OODLAND HILLS, Tex. (UPI) — Nina F. Robbins, a grandmother who is mayor of a tiny Dallas County community, left her impeachment trial Tuesday night with her office intact.

"I'm still the mayor," she said after the four-hour ordeal, having stood the entire time in the small, crowded metal city hall building.

Mrs. Robbins was elected mayor of the community of less than 400 in 1973.

She was brought to trial on charges by Councilman George Gipson who said she mishandled the duties of mayor and interfered with the city secretary's work. During the trial Gipson also implied mishandling of city money.

He said the city received $464 in revenue sharing funds each quarter, which Mrs. Robbins deposited in the city's general fund, rather than in a separate account.

"I am going to ask for a complete audit of the book," Mrs. Robbins said. She said city records note each receipt and deposit of the funds.

"They will not accept the fact that I am executive officer and administrative officer and

CowBelles Give Girlstown Beef

Top O' Texas CowBelles will sell tickets for one-half of a beef that will be given away during the Texas State rodeo Aug. 3.

Profits will pay for the 1,000 pound steer that the chapter will donate to Girlstown.

The three facilities of Girlstown located at Berger, Whiteface, and Austin, have 170 girls and faculty. These three facilities can use 450 pounds of beef each week.

Glover Packing Company of Amarillo will kill the steer free of charge and Texas State Technical Institute will process the beef at no charge.

The steer was delivered to Glover Packing Co. this morning by Bill Gething, who ranches south of Laketon. The steer was picked up at Moody Farms.

"It's so terrible to stand and listen to someone and know that what they are saying is untrue and you can't defend yourself," she said.

Mrs. Robbins' attorney asked rebuttal questions as charges were made.

The trial lasted three hours and three of the five city councilmen retired for an hour of deliberation.

Gipson and Mayor Pro Tem James D. Cowan, who presided, abstained from voting.

The three voting councilmen failed to return a two-thirds majority favoring conviction, but the issue may be resurrected at any time.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY WITH A HAULING BUSINESS

By J. SHUTTLEWORTH

People everywhere have discards, garden trimmings and piles of trash that they'll pay to have hauled away," says Denny Huetter.

"If you're willing to do the work and provide a reasonable service at a fair price, you're almost sure to find yourself in steadily increasing demand as a free-lance trucker."

Denny knows what he's talking about: A couple of years ago he bought a used half-ton pickup and started operating a hauling business out of the city apartment in which he then lived.

"The enterprise," he says, "was successful right from the start and has solved my money hassles ever since."

Young Mr. Huetter also notes that his good fortune is certainly no fluke.

"Russell Danel — a friend of mine — and two of my brothers have now followed my example and established prosperous hauling operations of their own. If you're trying to get off the nine-to-five treadmill and found your own little independent business, then this may be just what you're looking for."

If you don't already have a truck, of course, you'll have to mount a search for one. Check the newspapers, ask your friends or walk the streets.

"There are a surprisingly large number of old pickups, vans and flatbeds around — still in really fine shape — for $300 or less," Denny says.

And when you're shopping for a vehicle, bear in mind that the business we're discussing is a real growth industry. I started with a half-ton pickup and, within months, was forced to trade up to a 20-year-old, three-quarter-ton flatbed that cost me $125. Think big.

Huetter advises that your next concern, once you have a vehicle, should be the construction of a generously proportioned carryall box. The one he built for his flatbed is six feet wide, five feet high and nine feet long.

It's perfectly all right to recycle old 2x4's and used plywood from the dump for this, but do make sure that each side of the box is solid enough to keep all parts of every load you haul securely with you.

And don't forget a cover for your truck!

"I once was stopped and fined $24 because mine was inadequate," Denny says.

"Now I make sure, with an particular cargo, that the heavy items go on last to help weight down any loose and light objects. I even use the very heaviest odds and ends to secure a selection of sleeping bags with which I completely cover each load."

Tune your truck, change its oil and make any necessary minor repairs. If the vehicle doesn't have extended side mirrors, get a set (so a full load won't cut off your vision to the rear).

Check your state's laws about running lights and make sure you have a red flag to tie on the end of anything that extends past the rear of your "workhorse." Then throw an old broom into the back of the truck, get a city map and you're ready to call the local newspaper and place your first ad.

Bear in mind that your newspaper advertisement will determine people's first impression of you. Make it short and to the point. If you're a veteran, say so. Denny's ad reads: "Young veteran will haul or ? Reasonable. Any time. 432-7590."

In winter he adds the words "any weather" and, he says, "My phone stays hot. The first day my ad appeared, three people responded and I promptly got three hauling jobs, for which I charged $14 apiece. Forty-two dollars my first day out! I'd just found my alternative!"

Huetter feels that the question mark in his listing hooks him an assortment of odd jobs, especially around Christmas when money is tight and regular hauling assignments are lean.

"I've set up Christmas trees, built fences and clotheslines and once jimmied open a second-story window for a woman who had locked herself out of her apartment."

When your phone jangles, grab a pencil and paper and take down the address and telephone number of the potential customer. Then drive out, take a look at the work to be done and give a free estimate.

"Eight times out of 10 I get the job at my price," says Denny, "and I usually score the rest by haggling a little with the customer."

Huetter averages $14 to $20 for every load he hauls. "By the way," Denny notes, "there are other ways to cash in with this business.

Anything can turn up in the refuse you handle. My lady and I have equipped our kitchen and carpeted our floors with other people's discards."

"We've sold other items at local auctions, flea markets and swap meets. Reusable stoves, refrigerators and furniture are given to the Salvation Army and we sell cardboard, newsprint and scrap metal to local salvage yards."

Well, it's obvious that Denny Huetter is pleased with his small business and the freedom it gives him. And, while hauling trash is definitely not for everyone, it certainly does seem worth recommending to any able-bodied young person who wants to be independent.

If you'd like more complete instructions for setting up and running a small hauling service, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to The Mother Earth News, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 194, "The Swagman!"

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST WASHINGTON (UPI) — Antifreeze may be in short supply this winter, and you and your Beau Brummell friends are to blame.

The problem is that ethylene glycol used in making antifreeze also is used in making polyester fabrics, such as the popular double-knits.

And right now the ethylene glycol industry finds it more profitable to channel available supplies into wearing apparel. Here's a quote that sums up the situation beautifully.

"It's really a consumer decision... The consumer decides whether he wants to wear the ethylene glycol on his back or pour it into his car radiator."

That quote, incidentally, did not come from Herbert Stein, President Nixon's economic adviser, who recently blamed inflation on the public's unwillingness to accept tax increases.

It came from a spokesman from a large chemical corporation, who explained that in opting for the higher profits in polyesters "the company is just responding to consumer demands."

It does no good to protest that you didn't know that buying a new blue double-knit blazer would cause your car to freeze up this winter.

TV In Review

By FRANK SWERTLOW NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Sinatra, whose most recent appearance on U.S. television was marked by a series of scuffles with newsmen in Australia, is expected to take a more low-keyed approach this fall when he performs on ABC-TV.

He'll just sing. But who knows what's in store for the audience — the performance will be live.

Sinatra, 56, who came out of self-imposed retirement this year, will perform Sunday, Oct. 13 from 9-10 p.m. in "Sinatra — The Main Event, Madison Square Garden."

Martin Starger, ABC-TV president who made the announcement, called Sinatra a "charismatic" performer. Since Sinatra returned to the stage this year he has made two nationwide concert tours. This fall's engagement at Madison Square Garden will mark the beginning of the third tour within 12 months.

Sinatra is currently on his first foreign tour in many years. He played a series of Japanese dates before flying to Australia last week.

While in Melbourne for a concert, Sinatra's bodyguards scuffled with newsmen and the singer issued a series of bitter comments about the press. The Australian press, however, is known for its aggressive pursuit of celebrities. Sinatra is known for his long standing feud with the press in the United States.

TV Notes: Rod Stewart, the British rock star, will appear on ABC-TV "Wide World in Concert." Friday, July 19, 11:30 p.m.

CBS has secured the services of two leading historians for its "Bicentennial Minutes." They are Prof. John C. Miller, of Stanford University; and Richard B. Morris, of Columbia University.

Johnny Mathis, Rosemary Clooney, Dick Haymes, Della Reese and Fabian join host Dennis James during the premier week of NBC's quiz show "Name that Tune," beginning Monday, July 29 at 10 a.m.

NBC has announced that the broadcasters for the All Star baseball game Tuesday night July 23 at 8:15 p.m. are: Curt Gowdy, Tony Kubek, Joe Garagiola, Tony Simpson and Maury Wills.

Successful Tax Resistance

Taxation raises the price that you pay for the things you buy.

This is well understood in the case of the sales tax because the store clerk plainly states the commodity price and then asks for six cents more. In other words, you are told two prices — one representing the cost of the item and the other the item cost plus the tax. The latter is what you pay. But suppose the extra six cents per dollar were not imposed at the time of sale, but instead was imposed previously at the time of manufacture? Would it then also be a part of the final price?

No doubt about it. Consider the whole production process from the time an ore is mined until the moment it is fashioned into an instrument to be deposited on a store shelf. Add a tax anywhere along that line and it will move down toward the customer as a part of the total price. Occasionally an article will sell below cost. When that happens, the difference either is spread out among other items that sell above cost or the manufacturer, middleman or storekeeper goes out of business. When a firm does go under, the customer is to that degree deprived of the advantages of competition, so the price goes up.

Property tax is a good illustration of a business cost that must be handed down. Here is a tax that is levied at every stage of production — on the mine, on the mill, on the freight yard, on the factory, warehouse and store. Can anyone suppose that the property tax is not added on the final bill that the buyer pays?

We cannot think of any business tax that is not transferred eventually to the customer. Perhaps one of our readers can think of a way to tax business without also taxing customers. We have tried to invent some such possibility, but can't. Furthermore we find that every business tax also amounts to a tax on jobs. Because business is where most people work. Although business taxes are eventually borne by the customer, the paperwork and extra financing involved restricts business operation.

Right now you hear of agitation for Congress to increase the tax on oil companies. One candidate boasted that he was the person "that oil companies fear most." What these people really advocate — when you get down to the practical effect — is for you to pay a higher-price for gasoline. Is that what you want?

Stickler For Detail

Katsuchi Motogi is (was) a prophet. He resides in Japan, and had a hard-core following of 2,000 persons. Among other things he predicted a severe earthquake would hit Osaka at 8 a.m. on June 17, 1974. However nothing happened, not even a shimmer. So, as a man of honor, Motogi withdrew a samurai sword from its scabbard and proceeded to attempt hara-kiri.

This grotesquely sincere deed prompted Alan Abelson, front-page commentator for Barron's National Business and Financial Weekly, to set up the Katsuchi Motogi Awards. First winners were Barron's panel of experts who in December 1972 forecast that the Dow would hit 1,200 in 1973. Also listed was a New York Bank economist who prophesied a 6 per cent prime rate by mid-1974. Third on the list was a college economist who in the 1960s predicted crude oil would drop to $1 per barrel by the early 1970s.

The Abelson prize, of course, was to be a samurai sword.

Actually Mr. Motogi wasn't too far off. The future probably does hold an earthquake for Osaka. The prophet's only error was that he violated the first law of prophecy. Almost anyone can predict the future and do it safely, provided he has the forethought to omit the precise time element. Prophecy if you must, but to avoid Mr. Abelson's Motogi Award, be content with foretelling "the future." Anything more definite could become a stickler.

THE CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Trends In Column Writing

By WILLIAM RUSHER
I have now been writing these columns for just three months short of a year, and I have found certain trends which are presumably here to stay.

I have tried to keep a reasonable balance among four general kinds of columns: straight politics, conservative principles, foreign affairs, and what might be called (I hope not too presumptuously) "think pieces" — philosophical disquisitions on various non-political subjects that interest me. It is tempting to run some dependably arresting topic — Watergate and the impeachment controversy, most notably — into the ground. But I have grimly insisted on believing that my readers, while glad to read occasional rational observations on that subject, are not so utterly obsessed with it as most of my colleagues who write from Washington.

Rather to my own surprise (for I had somehow imagined that I would do most of my writing in the evening, perhaps over an after-dinner brandy), it turns out that I write fastest and most lucidly early in the morning. Fortified by a good night's sleep, and fueled by those famous "thoughts while shaving," I can produce a column in half the time it would take later in the day.

Another favorite time is on airplane flights. I write a good many columns in planes, as I tear around the country on speaking engagements. A plane ride is very nearly the perfect environment for writing. There is nothing much else to do; there is usually a cool drink handy; above all, no blasted telephone will ring.

Of my readership, I know only as much as is revealed by the letters that slowly work their way to me, through local papers and the office of my syndicate. The volume of mail has grown steadily, and while I have tried hard to answer it all at least briefly, the time is plainly coming when some sort of form acknowledgement will be necessary. When that day comes, I may just preempt Mencken's famous formula: "Dear Sir (or Madam): You may be right."

On the evidence of the letters I have received thus far, there is a little bit of everything out there in Reader Land. There are, of course, many thoughtful readers who take the trouble to send in their comments. But the most willing to take up their pens (though not necessarily the most numerous) are the axe-grinders. If you ever want to find out who a lot of Americans have in for, try writing a column suggesting that the evidence of Richard Nixon's perfidy is less than overwhelming. This is particularly ironic in my case, since I have never been an enthusiast for Mr. Nixon and twice refused even to vote for him; but the merest lawyerly demurrer in his favor brings on a deluge of denunciations, all of them passionate and many of them scatological.

Other dependable performers include devotees of Women's Lib, veterans of the late Youth Revolution, racists (both white and black), and non-smokers. Not long ago, though a non-smoker myself, I wrote a piece suggesting that smokers are rightly restricted in the matter of where they can do their thing, but what we must resist, purely on libertarian grounds, what I consider a growing tendency to harass them into giving up smoking for their own good. This produced a heavy response, about equally divided between little old ladies who admitted that was exactly what they had in mind and little old ladies who claimed to be among the "thirty-five million" Americans actually "allergic" to cigarette smoke — a curious statistic which, in any case, merely suggests to me that people with freak illnesses have no business passing laws of general application.

The prize for obduracy, though, goes to the defenders of Social Security — old New Dealers who simply can't stand to hear the sad truth that FDR conned them into a ruthlessly regressive payroll tax by dressing it up as a "benefit." Show them that the same money, invested compulsorily in a legitimate insurance program, would have produced far greater benefits, and you will find yourself baying at the moon. As it was written long ago, "there are none so blind as those who will not see."

OUTRIDER

'Race Rears Its Ugly Head'

By GARRY WILLS

Recently I had the opportunity to spend several days on the campus of Northwestern University, talking with students and members of the faculty. One of the residential colleges at that University is set aside for people with a special interest in philosophy and ethics, and it conducts spirited sessions on a wide range of issues.

I was told that the topic which raised most heat, and led to the most violent arguments, was the DeFunis case — i.e., the Supreme Court appeal of a man who had been refused admission to law school, though he had the proper academic qualifications, because the law school involved was seeking a greater enrollment from minority groups.

One faculty member told me that the most heated protests at the treatment of Mr. DeFunis came from white affluent males with high IQ's. They felt their own admission to desirable graduate schools was being threatened, and their concern was understandable. Still, it must strike blacks as funny to hear such people talk about discrimination against them. The white and the affluent have begun life with advantages that were disproportionately rewarded for years, and still are. Some may argue that this prior discrimination does not justify "revers discrimination." They hold that academic performance, and not social goals, should be the norm of education.

That argument ignores the fact that focusing on academic excellence is itself a way of striving for a particular social goal; it is an act of discrimination. Perhaps it is, in most cases, a defensible act, or at least an understandable one; but it is by no means an obvious or inevitable one.

We are talking, here, of state-supported schools, those that depend either directly or indirectly on tax revenue. But that category is a very broad one now. Private schools can discriminate — e.g., can admit no one but women — so long as they are willing to forfeit government money; but fewer and fewer schools are able to manage this.

The justification for using forcibly collected tax money on the education of other people's children has always been political in the broad sense. We wanted to train an enlightened electorate, or raise our civilizational level, or have scientists and experts to defend or enrich our society. These are the kinds of social goal that government-supported education has always looked to. Better students are given better training, over a longer period, in a way that will give them better opportunities and rewards. It is assumed that they will make a social contribution that justifies the advantages given them by the government. Maybe so. But it could also be argued that the political aim of an enlightened electorate calls for more stress on the slow and disadvantaged than on the bright people who will learn things in any event. Should we stress a particular brilliance or a general improvement? The choice is a social and political one, and most theorists would like to combine support for both goals.

My point is that rewarding academic excellence is not the only or inevitable rationale for government-supported education. High academic qualifications do not earn one an automatic right to tax support from a graduate school. Schools that try to reward nothing but academic performance are discriminating just as surely as does "affirmative action," or as do HEW guidelines, or as does an open admissions policy like that in New York.

It is a just social goal at the moment to introduce more of those who have been excluded from the academy and the professions in the past. No one argues for doing this in a self-destructive way (e.g., by putting incompetent minority members in positions where they are bound to fail and thereby increase their own tragedy). But a white man with equal qualifications, or marginally better ones, may well be excluded by a specific school that has other social goals in mind than a person's score on the entrance exam. Many of those who complain about this development have been willing to see athletes be given special admission privileges "for the good of the school."

The cry in the DeFunis case has a new intensity because race has reared its ugly head. Favors formerly granted to a good fullback or to an old grad's son are bitterly withheld from a black or a Chicano. That tells us more than we wanted to know about our society, in its most "enlightened" bastions.

Castro Being Sounded Out On Detente Talks

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON — For a lame-duck with less than six months remaining in office, Sen. J. William Fulbright sure has vaulting ambitions.

They are nothing less than establishing detente with Communist dictator Castro.

Says Fulbright, "It's high time for a change in attitude towards Cuba."

That is what's really behind the carefully unpublicized trip there of Pat Holt, staff director of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which Fulbright is chairman.

Holt's instructions are to sound out Castro. Foreign Minister Raul Roa and other policymakers on possible detente discussions.

While there is no apparent record the Foreign Relations Committee formally authorized this extraordinary junket, there is little doubt it has the full backing of a bipartisan majority of the members.

With only a few exceptions, the 17 committeemen (10 Democrats, 7 Republicans) are strongly dovish, pro-detente and for large-scale foreign aid spending.

Illustrative of their attitude is Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., an ardent internationalist who, heartily echoing Fulbright, declares: "A change in U.S. policy towards Cuba is long overdue. I hope our government recognizes this reality and makes the necessary policy adjustment."

That is exactly what Fulbright is determined bent on bringing about in his remaining months in office.

His dispatch of Holt to the Kremlin's satellite Cuba, immediately on the heels of President Nixon's glorified detente summiting in Russia, is a major move toward that end.

Fulbright is an ardent devotee of detente — as are virtually all other Foreign Relations committeemen. They enthusiastically approve detente with the Soviets and Red China, and see no reason why the same policy shouldn't be applied to nearby Cuba.

Publicly, the administration vigorously insists there is no change in attitude towards Cuba; that there is absolutely no intention of doing anything about the 12-year-old political boycott and 10-year-old economic embargo against the dictatorial Castro regime.

Despite these outward assurances, there has been a series of significant events that directly counter them. Foremost among them are:

(1) The State Department's unannounced authorization of Holt's pulse-feeling trip to Cuba. This is the first time such official permission was granted. Obviously it was at the direct behest of Fulbright — backed by the high-powered Foreign Relations Committee, whose opinions and views carry great weight with the State Department.

(2) The Department's authorization early this year of the sale of Argentine subsidiaries of U.S. auto manufacturers of some 44,000 cars and trucks to Cuba — a $200 million transaction. At first, the administration ostensibly balked at this, but finally agreed "in the interest of cultivating improved relations with our Latin American neighbors."

The exceptional move was heartily approved by Fulbright and the overwhelming bipartisan majority of the Foreign Relations Committee. They thought it was great, and a departure long overdue. Again enthusiastically exclaimed Sen. McGee:

"A year ago I warned that the continued inflexible U.S. policy towards Cuba would very well end with the isolation of our country within the western hemisphere, rather than the original intent of isolating Cuba. The continued U.S. boycott of Cuba is ridiculous and should be ended. It doesn't make sense economically, politically, or any other way."

(3) Secretary Kissinger's bowing to the demands of South American foreign ministers for a vote by members of the Organization of American States to determine whether Cuba should be invited to participate in the next round of the "new hemisphere dialogue" initiated by the administration in 1973.

It's a foregone conclusion the Latin countries will heavily favor this. Mexico, Argentina, Panama and others already are vigorously pressing for Cuba's inclusion.

So are Fulbright and the Foreign Relations Committee. They warmly commended Kissinger's stand and urged him to follow it up with "other concrete demonstrations of U.S. good-will and cooperations."

Moat Question
No one is admitting it, of course, but there are good grounds to suspect that Sen. Fulbright's dispatch at this particular time of his staff director, Pat Holt, to Communist-ruled Cuba is no coincidence.

Also that there is more than just a casual understanding on this between him and Secretary Kissinger.

Not only are they warm personal friends, but they see closely eye-to-eye on important policy matters — particularly detente. Fulbright, like all other congressional doves and carping critics of new weapons development and spending, is a fervent detente.

They are for detenting all over the globe — regardless of ideology or other crucial considerations.

It's a safe conjecture that Kissinger was fully aware of Fulbright's surprise move. It's also obvious Kissinger did nothing to stop it, which he could have done if he really wanted to.

What happens next in this intriguing scenario remains to be seen.

Don't be surprised if detente with Castro suddenly looms up big on the horizon.

Portentous straw in the wind: last February, when Soviet Communist boss Brezhnev visited Cuba, he publicly advised Castro to follow the Kremlin's example and practice detente with the West. Interestingly, in Castro's hour-long harangue on this occasion, while castigating China, he never said a word about the U.S.

Keeping Cuba afloat economically is costing Russia more than $500 million a year.

Note: During Brezhnev's visit, Castro tried to wangle a nuclear power plant, but was turned down. All Brezhnev would promise was an adequate supply for Cuba's needs. The Castro regime is more than $5 billion in debt to Russia for arms, machinery and food supplies.

Where Is The Country We Used To Know?

In the America of yesterday, you paid your debts as quickly as possible, and went without things, to do it.

You disciplined your children—but disciplined yourself, first.

You spent less than you earned, and demanded your government to do the same.

You went to church, your children to Sunday School, you held daily prayers—and no court would have dared to interpose any law into your private religion.

You would have been horrified at (and quick to change) men in high places who made "deals."

You expected to prosper only by doing a better and better job.

You obeyed the law—but took active enough part in government to see that the laws were just.

You "walked softly but carried a big stick." And that was the character which brought this country victory in three wars in your lifetime, built it back from a shattering depression and fed and saved the civilized world.

Is there enough of it left, to do it again?

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING TONIGHT?"

Dear Abby

Call the cops about nude hippies next door?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We've lived in this nice family neighborhood for fifteen years. Last September, our next-door neighbors rented their house to a group of long-haired hippies. Several young men and women are living together there, and I'm sure they aren't married.

Abby, I don't have anything against hippies, but I am worried about my children. I've tried to give them a good moral upbringing. Just yesterday I caught my teen-age son peering through the fence that separates our backyards, and sure enough, one of the girls was sunbathing completely naked!

My husband and I can't agree on what to do. I say we should call the police to protect our children, who are at an impressionable age. My husband thinks we should leave well enough alone. What do you think?

MENLO PARK MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I vote with your husband. And tell your son to quite "peering" through the fence, or your neighbors might justifiably feel that their privacy is being violated, and THEY will call the police.

DEAR ABBY: I was chatting with my nephew in a very crowded and noisy room. (A cocktail party was in progress.) I had to ask him to please repeat nearly everything he said not only because of the noise, but this nephew has a bad habit of mumbling.

Finally, he shouted: "Dammit, Aunt -----, if you're deaf, why don't you get yourself a hearing aid?"

I am 77 and he is 36.

The following morning I went to my attorney's office and cut this nephew out of my will.

One hundred dollars to a charity of your choice, Abby, if you print this in the Los Angeles Times. My nephew never misses your column.

LOVING AUNT

DEAR AUNT. When they come around to collect for the Cancer Crusade, give them an extra hundred for me.

DEAR ABBY: It's 4:30 a.m. and I'm so mad I can't go back to sleep. It seems my brother-in-law, Joe, is making a habit of spending the night on our couch.

His reason for staying here is that he is too drunk to drive home. He totaled his pickup two months ago after one of his drinking sprees.

My husband thinks I'm selfish for not wanting Joe here. I disagree. I feel this house is half mine and I should be able to get up and go into the living room in the middle of the night without worrying about someone seeing me half nude. I'm eight months pregnant, so I get up a lot, and I don't like to put on my robe each time.

I think if Joe wants to get plastered he should make other sleeping arrangements. (Like a motel.) What should I do? Grin and bear it for my husband's sake? Or tell Joe how I feel? I'm afraid if Joe killed himself driving home, my husband would blame me.

HAD IT WITH JOE

DEAR HAD IT: If Joe comes to your house plastered, ask your husband to escort him home. Drunk drivers kill not only themselves—they kill innocent people.

Tips For Consumers

A sales representative comes to your home wanting to sell you a home fire detection system. You think it sounds like a good investment.

What's more, he's offering to install it "absolutely free" — in exchange for referrals. Does it sound like a racket? It probably is.

In such schemes, if other prospects you refer to the salesperson also purchase the system, you get yours "free." But it is more than likely that you will find yourself with no referrals and having to pay the full price of an over-priced system.

Another selling tactic to watch out for is the use of scare tactics to induce you to buy a detection system. A salesperson may look over your home and pronounce it a fire trap.

He may tell horror stories — even show you pictures of death and destruction — calculated to arouse parents to put in an expensive system to protect children from fire. Don't fall for these high-pressure schemes. Report them to the Better Business Bureau and your local authorities.

No home is completely safe from the threat of fire, careful though you may be. Investments such as fire detectors or fire extinguishers are obviously a good idea.

Let's Ask The Cook

By NAN WILEY

Dear Nan: It will soon be time for corn on the cob. Do you have a good recipe for fixing them on the grill? We've tried it several times but haven't been successful. We do enjoy your column.

—Linda Halloran Chardon, Ohio. Success depends on what you expect. There are numerous ways, some of which turn the kernels a toasted color, but the flavor is delicious.

You can husk the ears, brush with butter and wrap each ear in foil. Turn occasionally during grilling — it will take 10 to 15 minutes. Or just lay back the husks and remove the silk. Pull the husks up again and tie with fine wire at center and near the tip, covering the kernels as well as possible. Roast, turning 3 or 4 times so all surfaces are exposed to heat. When done, snip the wire and husk, using gloves or you'll have burned fingers for sure.

Another way is to open the ears just at one end and let about 2 tablespoons barbecue sauce run inside. Smooth back, tie and grill as above.

There is a steam method you might like better since it is nearest to in-the-kettle cooking. Pull husks back, remove silk, brush generously with butter. Replace husks and lay ears on the grill. Dip a clean burlap sack in warm water, wring out slightly and place over the ears so they steam. Let grill 5 minutes on one side, remove burlap, turn ears, recover with the sack, sprinkling it with more water. Grill 5 minutes more.

Friends of mine strip the ears down to 3 or 4 husks and soak in ice water 30 minutes or more. Drain well, place on grill 15 to 20 minutes; delicious with lots of melted butter and salt.

Your grill heat has to be just right for this next one, but it's marvelous when it works. Husk the corn, wrap in bacon and grill until bacon is crisp and exposed kernels are brown.

We are so wedded to our electric meat smoker we use that a lot more than the grill. On two racks, one above the other, we can do as many as 6 chickens at a time. Rubbed generously with the Greek seasoning I'm so fond of before placing on the racks, they are out of this world, the meat literally falling off the bone. I like Mexican corn slaw with them.

You'll need 2 cups golden whole grain corn, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 tablespoon diced onion, 1/2 cup grated carrot, 1 diced pimiento, 1 diced green pepper, 1 teaspoon celery seed, salt to taste and your favorite French dressing. Crisp the cabbage in ice water well ahead of time. Drain well, mix with everything else except dressing. Cover and chill well. When ready to serve, add just enough dressing to moisten.

Garden Looking Bleak? Mums Make Instant Color!

Take a look around your local garden center these days. The bursts of color you see among the trees and shrubs are flowering garden mums. These richly-hued plants with the dark green foliage can be transplanted from nursery tubs directly into your garden for colorful beauty this fall, and years of fall-flowering delight thereafter.

Among the newest and most vigorous of the garden mums is the Masterpiece collection of 12 different varieties developed by Yoder Brothers of Barberton, Ohio, one of the world's largest developers and suppliers of chrysanthemums to wholesale growers. This unusual group of chrysanthemums introduced to the gardening public in the spring of 1974 includes single daisy-like flowers in Stardom and Starlet; a button pompon in pure white is called Baby Tears; four pompons: Goldtone, Minnautumn, Penguin and Pixie Cushion; five in the larger-flowered decorative class: Classic, Cloud-9, Flaming Sun, Jackpot and Elegant Cushion. Colors are in the most popular garden mum shades of yellow, pink, bronze, white and red, ranging from lights to darks.

Now in full bloom in garden centers, pots, of Masterpiece mums can be planted directly into permanent beds or used temporarily, still containerized, on steps, porches and patios for a dramatic and colorful fall setting. They should be planted, however, in permanent position by the first frost. By that time blossoming will be nearly over and the plant should be cut down to within two inches of the soil surface. After the soil is frozen, apply a mulch of evergreen branches or dry leaves for insulation through the winter.

No further care is needed until spring when the mulch should be removed after frost danger is past. New growth will then be starting and normal chrysanthemum care can be started at that time.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Mark practiced the romantic sales technique outlined below. He started his cute coed classmate, who had previously considered him as unattractive as a Sphinx. Notice the good results. Women like articulate males!

CASE A-687: Mark T., aged 20, is the college man who thought his freckles made him unpopular with coeds.

"Mark," I warned him, "there is a big difference between mere Adonis 'beauty' vs. 'charm.'"

"And a coed will actually begin to think you are good looking if you educate her to lean upon you for ego inflation."

"For when you give her sincere compliments, she feels more important."

"And some of her resulting happiness then spills over, thus painting you in a more attractive way."

"So start with some of the cute coeds that sit beside you in class and use the 'Compliment Club' technique on them."

HOW TO WIN DATES

Although Mark had been rather reticent and a loner, we developed a campaign that he could put into immediate effect.

"Hello," he said, with a big grin as he sat down beside a cute coed in his next day's class.

Remember, a smile is a "sign language" (non-verbal) type of compliment that begins to inflate the other person's ego.

"Your presence is pleasing to me so I hope we can be good friends."

"Do you know why I consider this my lucky class?" Mark added.

The coed was a bit startled at Mark's easy conversational opening, for she had previously looked on him as a Sphinx.

So his simple query intrigued her interest and she regarded him curiously.

"No, why is this your lucky class?" she replied.

"Because the prof's seating chart put me beside such a cute coed who combines beauty with brains!"

She blushed in pleased confusion, but pertly replied:

"Sir, flattery will get you nowhere!"

Again Mark grinned and shook his head.

"It isn't flattery but merely an honest compliment that you well deserve."

"For didn't you get an 'A' on your midterm exam?"

"And your beauty doesn't even need cosmetics, for you'd be pretty even in a drenching rainstorm!"

She looked on Mark, wide-eyed, as she realized how she had previously misjudged him.

"Thank you, kind Sir," she smiled, "but you exaggerate terribly!"

Mark turned glum and shook his head.

"On the contrary," he grumbled half angrily, "you make an ugly guy like me look even worse."

"Maybe it would have been better if the prof had seated me beside a 'plain Jane' for then the contrast wouldn't be so evident!"

Remember, when you utter a compliment in a grudging or half angry manner, it disarms the recipient!

So the cute coed immediately protested that Mark was not ugly!

And this started their daily repartee before class, which led to a gay comradely feeling.

Within a couple of weeks, he invited her to attend a ball game and she accepted.

You can guess the rest, for as Mark made her feel more important, she looked forward eagerly to each new date, and began to regard him as so attractive she later accepted his engagement ring!

For beauty is largely an internal psychological judgment!

So send for "How to Improve Your Personality" with my "H-E-L-P" conversation formula, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, and become delat in repartee!

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Predictor believes the "long market slide is in its final stages, the next broad trend will be up as inflation begins to recede and interest rates decline. Don't give in to the gloom-and-doom reports," the firm says. "Now is the time to be buying and holding."

Standard & Poor's thinks "the more hopeful inflation-monetary developments that sparked last week's rally will bear close watching and their outcome will to a great extent determine the staying power of the upturn." The firm says, "in any case, some consolidation of the initial move would be normal."

The firm of Smart-Money of New Jersey believes a big bull market is coming and investors should start preparing for it now. "Now is the time to prepare your list and yourself for a rare opportunity to obtain equity in outstanding corporations for substantial capital gains."

Most elderly persons have raised their own families and have organized their lives into established routines," Jagger said. "Getting them to adapt to a life style which includes 110 children is extremely tough."

He said the objections of some neighborhood residents, who felt the village was nothing more than a home for unwed mothers, had been overcome once the operation of the village began.

"We have a strict set of rules which residents must follow," Jagger said. "And we think each resident's personal goals while he is here are more important than whether he or she has ever been married."

He said 20 per cent of the residents were attending college and most of the rest were taking vocational training while working part-time.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

... it tells you how

In his book, How to Be a Kid Again, Jim Baker brings back fond memories of old-time, no-cost fun when he writes about "whistle wings." As Jim correctly points out, a shrill whistle can be made by placing a wing from a maple seed between the tongue and the upper teeth and blowing.

The principle of the idea is much the same as that which makes a reed in a saxophone work. But, as Jim points out, some kids (and grown-ups!) never get the hang of it and produce only a juicy "sploot" ... instead of a fine whistle. If you're a kid—or want to be one again for a few minutes—give it a try.

Couple Wear Many Hats

DENVER (UPI) — Jay Jagger and his wife, Sandy, wear many hats.

As resident managers of Warren Village, Inc., the couple oversees a unique apartment complex for single parents which at present is home for 84 adults and 110 children.

They frequently are called on to serve as arbitrators, administrators, janitors, counselors, repairmen or confounders. And they love every minute of it.

"It's hectic and there aren't many days off," said Jagger. "But you certainly can't say there are many dull moments. And there is a certain sense of satisfaction involved."

The village opened in February as an experimental project designed to provide temporary housing for single parents to allow them and their children to adapt more readily to the one-parent life style.

Included in the $3 million proposal were a 96-unit apartment complex, including a learning center for children two and one-half to six years of age, and a community center offering medical, dental and mental health services to residents and elderly persons.

Although the project was conceived to house men and women alike, Jagger said only one of the current residents was male.

"Single men are quite welcome to stay here with their children," he said. "But the Federal Housing Administration, which provides rent subsidies, stipulates that a resident with three children can earn only $7,155 yearly and still be eligible. Most men earn more than that."

Under the original concept, seven of the apartments were to be set aside for older couples, who would provide some babysitting services and also give the children a "grandparent" image. So far, there have been no takers.

Most elderly persons have raised their own families and have organized their lives into established routines," Jagger said. "Getting them to adapt to a life style which includes 110 children is extremely tough."

He said the objections of some neighborhood residents, who felt the village was nothing more than a home for unwed mothers, had been overcome once the operation of the village began.

"We have a strict set of rules which residents must follow," Jagger said. "And we think each resident's personal goals while he is here are more important than whether he or she has ever been married."

He said 20 per cent of the residents were attending college and most of the rest were taking vocational training while working part-time.

Jagger said resident turnover had been "fairly high" at the village in spite of an estimate that residents would stay an average of three years.

"Two of the women went back to their husbands and several others became upset with the 'no-roommate' rule," he said.

"We are very tolerant and don't try to establish any pattern of habit for the residents. But when two adults, male or female, begin sharing the same apartment they become in effect, a two-parent family and are no longer eligible to live here."

Some residents also are upset that the learning center, scheduled to open last April, still isn't in operation because Service has not yet issued a charitable organization tax certificate.

"The learning center was my main reason for moving in," said Ellen Pond, 23. "If they knew there were going to be problems in opening the center, they should have told us before we moved in."

Peggy Heit, mother of a year-old son, was more explicit about her reasons for moving into the complex.

"My baby's father used to bother me a lot and I like my privacy," she said. "I know there's no way he can get in here so I plan to stay."

Its 1974 sales trail last year by 2.2 per cent, but that's nowhere near the industry average of just over 4 per cent.

Chapin expects to sell 400,000 cars this year — about the limit for its production facilities — and will have the room to build and sell 480,000 in 1975.

AMC was in the perfect spot for the shift to small cars. In 1973, small cars — those below standard size — accounted for 74 per cent of AMC sales while at GM the same type of cars accounted for 21 per cent of sales. Ford 38 per cent and Chrysler 44 per cent.

Now, Ford and GM are rushing into the 1975 market with new small cars.

DETROIT (UPI) —

Despite an impending battle for the small car market with its two largest competitors, the top executive of American Motors thinks his company will do well.

With predictions of a 1980 car market 80 per cent dominated by cars smaller than standard size, AMC Chairman Roy D. Chapin Jr. figures the smallest of the "Big Four" is in a good position.

"Our optimism lies in our approach to product design — our philosophy of difference," says Chapin. "We will find areas of uniqueness and develop products for them."

"We don't believe we'll have to lock horns directly with General Motors and Ford, despite their approaching emphasis on smaller cars," he says. "We aren't underestimating what they can do, but tomorrow's market shapes up as very much our kind of ball game."

In 1973, AMC captured 4.1 per cent of the domestic sales.

With the energy crisis that hit during the winter, Americans rushed to small cars and AMC's share of the market through June stood at 5.3 per cent of the domestic market, mainly because GM, Ford and Chrysler sales have slumped sharply.

Through most of the winter, AMC sales ran ahead of 1973, but parts shortages, distribution problems and generally lagging sales caught up with AMC.

and by Oldsmobile as the Starfire. Pontiac gets a regular version of the Vega that will be tagged the Astré.

AMC is ready to counter with the Pacer, a luxury small car that will debut early next year. Designed for a rotary engine, it will be offered with conventional engines until AMC can buy a rotary.

Chapin says AMC can maintain its identity in the small car market. He is confident of increasing AMC's market position because its cars will emphasize more than smallness and economy.

Customers, says Chapin, will want small cars that last longer and offer more room. And one reason automakers will be able to offer such cars is that they have become profitable.

Four years ago, AMC introduced the subcompact Gremlin with a price tag of $1,999. It now is the lowest-priced U.S. car at $2,481, but should go up another $200 when the 1975 models debut.

"We no longer price small cars so that they are in effect subsidized by margins on bigger cars, principally because we no longer are faced with unrealistic foreign car prices," Chapin says.

"American Motors has already demonstrated that small cars are profitable."

The Dogs of War, by Frederick Forsyth (Viking, $7.95)

As the author of two finely detailed, engrossing suspense novels, Forsyth almost succeeds on his third try. But not quite.

Somewhere toward the middle, the reader becomes smothered in the complexities of the central piece of action—the mounting of a coup d'état in a small African dictatorship.

This is a shame because the author musters an excellent cast of scoundrels, each etched into life with a carefully prepared dossier, and the story is shaped with engrossing thoroughness.

Sir James Manson, a ruthless English business tycoon, is informed that one of his geologists has discovered a mountain of valuable platinum in Africa. He decides that he must force a takeover of the country to assure exploitation of the find.

Hiring a band of mercenaries is his solution. Everything rolls along nicely as Manson and his underlings busily scheme, bribe and corrupt anyone in their path to riches.

In ironic contrast are the mercenaries, who really care little about money. Their leader, Cat Shannon, is a brave and intelligent killer who loves the intrigues and organizational demands of his job.

Like his fellow professionals, he finds his satisfactions in a way of life that demands the ultimate of a man, yet gives him independence and pride.

The book is at its strongest and most intriguing when examining the skills and motives of the mercenaries. Unfortunately, too much time is wasted on reporting the methods of transshipping a load of ammunition through Europe to Africa.

Breakheart Pass, by Alistair MacLean (Doubleday, $5.95). The expert British suspense writer wanders far afield to the American West of the 1970s and seem to lose some authenticity in the process. But all the elements are here for a rousing adventure tale—a desperate journey through hazardous weather, warring Indians, villains after gold, upstanding, resourceful heroes capable of coping with a cascade of emergencies.

Help I Am Being Held Prisoner, by Donald E. Westlake (Evans, $6.95). Westlake, whose genius for making crimes and criminals funny resulted in the heralded laughmaker, "The Hot Rock," is back among the lawbreakers again. His non-hero is an incorrigible practical joker whose peculiar sense of humor lands him in jail. The innocent young man—his only failing is playing jokes on people—suddenly finds himself being forced into a life of crime. Another deft kneelapper from a clever reportorial art and painting discusses the basic concepts of picture making in a fresh, practical manner that should help the beginner as well as the more experienced artist. The illustrative layout is beautifully organized.

When You Paint, by Ward Brackett (McGraw-Hill, $7.95). A veteran in the field of commercial and

Blood of My Blood, by Richard Gambino (Doubleday, $7.95). An educator of Italian extraction has written the first in-depth study of the least understood, most alienated of ethnic groups—the Italian-Americans. This is a milestone document in destroying the American "melting pot" myth, which Gambino believes should be replaced by creative ethnicity.

VA Will Prepare Vet Reps On University Campuses

The Veterans Administration has leased facilities at four colleges and universities for use in preparing more than 1,300 Vet Reps for new duties on college campuses in advance of the fall enrollment.

Training will be conducted by the VA July 8-19, at Kean College, Union, N.J.; West Georgia College, Carrollton, Ga.; Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland; and UCLA, Los Angeles.

The 57 Vet Reps assigned to the Waco VA Regional Office will attend training at West Georgia College.

The Vet Reps are the mainstay in an all-out program undertaken by the VA to ensure prompt delivery of GI Bill education assistance checks. Recruiting for the new Vet Reps has been under way since May 6, and is expected to be completed by the end of this month, a VA spokesman said.

New and improved procedures in troubleshooting paper processing between the veteran, the school and the VA regional office will be included in instruction provided at the four centralized training sites. Each training site will be staffed by VA central office and regional office personnel. Each class will consist of approximately 30 students who will attend 10 days of lectures and discussions. Vet Reps are scheduled to assume their new duties on campus by Aug. 1.

Emphasis in recruiting the Vet Reps has been placed on Vietnam era veterans, some drawn from the nearly 22,000 now employed by VA. Their vacancies will be filled by newcomers recruited from outside the agency.

Plans for the Vet Rep program were developed by a management team of VA and Office of Management and Budget officials in response to a Presidential directive.

New procedures include handling all applications for education benefits as requests for advance payment. The first two months' payments will be delivered when the veteran student enrolls.

Presence of a VA man on campus also will assist with the administrative work needed to ensure that subsequent checks are now delayed as a result of changes in address, academic courses or marital status.

VA annually delivers 13 million educational assistance checks, the vast majority of which are dispatched without delay. The Vet Rep program is aimed at earlier recognition and speedy resolution of situations which can result in delayed payments.

By J.R. YOUNG

Kenny O'Dell was complaining about L.A., making loud coughing noises, rubbing his eyes furiously, and generally enjoying himself at L.A.'s expense. Nothing was too serious. He had lived in L.A. before... before he made it.

"I don't know why anyone wants to live here," he laughed, pushing his thinning long hair back over his ears, onto the yoke of his custom-made cowboy shirt. "Man, I can hardly wait to get back to Nashville, where the living is clean."

But while he was in the smog-bound basin, he was making the best of it. He had rented a plush, four-room bungalow (with two TVs) at the exclusive Beverly Hills Hotel for the week, and almost hourly watched red uniformed bellboys carry iced pewter buckets of beer and shiny trays of spicy fried tortilla chips into his room to feed not only authorized visitors but his two full-time publicity agents and traveling companions.

He was definitely making the best of his stay. Not even Merle or Waylon or Tammy stay at the Beverly Hills Hotel when they're in town. But then, they haven't had the year Kenny O'Dell has had. This is, as Kenny admits with a petulant smile, "my year."

Kenny who? O'Dell. He's a songwriter. And he's in the bucks. Folks. Big bucks. He's the man who wrote "Behind Closed Doors," the song of the year on everybody's list, both in country and pop and right now he's just about the hottest writer in Nashville.

He's part of the newest Nashville Phenomena. The songwriter. That's what's hot today. Singers are a dime a dozen. But writers... ah, writers are rare.

With the elevation of the songwriter to the status of star proportions has become part two of the latest Nashville Phenomena.

Nashville Phenomena.

The New Breed singer-songwriter with the original being the Nashville New Breed rebel Kris Kristofferson. After Kris' astounding entrance onto Nashville, songs changed. They took a personal twist. Rock and roll was more evident.

Flashy, spangled Nudie suits were out. Realism was in. And it scared traditional Nashville to the core, because in Kris' wake came the success of singer-songwriters Billy Joe Shaver, David Allen Coe, the new Willie Nelson, the new Waylon Jennings, and a menagerie of rock stars coming into the Nashville scene (Leon Russell as Hank Wilson, Doug Sahm, and a host of others).

And now Kenny O'Dell. That's why he's in L.A. He's promoting his new album on Capricorn records.

"I haven't had a chance to analyze my position," he mused over another Coors. "I really don't know who the audience is out there anymore. I only know that it's changing. There's lots more kids listening to country music."

Leon's part of it. Kris started it. But it's more than that. It's cross-overs and marriages between rock, pop, and country. Some people don't even know the difference anymore. They just like what they're hearing.

Kenny O'Dell's rise hasn't been a quick one. He started writing songs when he was 13, but life really began when he first heard Elvis Presley. Like kids all over the country, he became a rock and roller. He headed up rock bands into his 20s and ended up working Las Vegas lounges.

In 1968, two songs he wrote hit the charts at the same time. "The Last Plane To London," by The Rose Garden, and "Beautiful People," by Bobby Vee.

Unfortunately, he sold both for next to nothing.

"Paranoia" set in right after that, trying to live up to have two chart singles, trying to see what made them successful. What the secret was. And I couldn't find any answers, outside the realization that I learned structure. After that, it became a matter of subject material."

The subject material, however, didn't materialize. Kenny, at the behest of good friend, Bobby Goldsboro, moved to Nashville to head up Bobby's publishing company.

Listened to unsolicited demos—and poor quality tapes all day—five days a week, however, "scrambled my brain and I had to quit before I went off the deep end." Kenny got back into songwriting and immediately the juices started flowing.

As for the album he has cut, he naturally has hopes, but he knows it's not an all or nothing at all proposition. It's not his whole career.

It's more like a showcase, something he feels he deserves. If it hits, that's great. But like the saying goes, singers are a dime a dozen. But writing talent... well, that's something else again.

The songwriter's singing album is like the icing on a very expensive cake. Kenny will be smiling no matter how it turns out. All the way to the bank.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH Pap Smear Tests For Cancer

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: My friend and I both had hysterectomies. I had cancer of the cervix and she did not.
My gynecologist said I must have a Pap smear at least once a year. Her family doctor told her, "Absolutely not, there is nothing left to take a Pap smear from."
Will you clear this up for us? Her doctor said she would only be wasting her money. Is this true?—H.V.
There are almost as many disputes about this as there are about "health foods."
But at least there's no argument about the value of the Pap smear for ordinary use.
The basis of the test is simply this: the cervix, or neck or opening of the uterus, is the second most frequent area in which women develop cancer.
So the late Dr. George Papanicolaou, recognizing that the cervix was readily available for medical examination, devised the Pap test.
A "smear" is taken from the cervix, and examined under a microscope; and cancer cells, if present, can be detected long before any other sign of cancer becomes apparent. It saves lives!
The arguments begin after the cervix has been removed (as in a hysterectomy). For the woman (such as you) who had cancer, the Pap test is decidedly a wise precaution. Fragments of tissue could have been left, and could contain malignant cells (cancer) and the Pap smear is designed to detect that.
As to your friend who did not have cancer, the Pap test is still of value. As part of a pelvic examination, it can provide information concerning other health factors — changes in hormonal level among them. It is not an expensive procedure; you asked my opinion, and my opinion is that it is not a waste of money.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: Your statement that "each beer contains about the same amount of alcohol as a shot glass of whisky" has been the subject of much controversy among our friends. We don't understand how. Please explain.—Mrs. G.C.
Tell your friends to get out a pencil and paper and figure it out for themselves. Take a one-ounce shot glass of whisky at, say, 86 proof. That "86 proof" means 43 percent alcohol. So the shot glass contains .42 of an ounce of alcohol.
Now take a 12-ounce bottle of beer. While the alcoholic content of different types of beer and ale will vary, 4 percent is a fair figure to use. At 4 percent, a 12-ounce bottle of beer will contain .48 of an ounce of alcohol.
Granted that not all beer bottles are the same capacity, and not all shot glasses are the same size, it works out to just about what I said.
To be sure, people don't usually down 12 ounces of beer as rapidly as they gulp a shot or a cocktail. Still, the alcohol is there, per drink, and explains how a person can become an alcoholic on beer.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor tells me I have a bladder infection, white blood cells in my urine. He is giving me sulfa tablets but has not told me what is causing the condition. Could you explain?—I.C.B.
Don't ask for the impossible. The only answer is that bacteria from some source began multiplying in the bladder. That's what an infection is — germs multiplying instead of being destroyed by the body's defenses. What caused it to happen is not always obvious.
Don't take chances with "kidney trouble" — it could be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys — Facts You Need to Know About Them." For a copy write to Dr. George C. Thosteson at Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT Earl Warren Was A Kindly Man

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — Earl Warren was such a kindly man. "Gee" was about as close as he got to being delectable.
It was Sunday night, June 27, 1948, that I first met him. Governor Warren of California had just been nominated for Vice President by the Republican convention in Philadelphia that had chosen Thomas E. Dewey to run for President.
"Governor Warren's at Toots Shor's having dinner," a friend, Bernie Kamber, told me when he found me at the Fred Allen radio show. "You might get a column from him."
I barged right in. "Would you like to pull up a chair?" the Governor said. He introduced me to his wife and daughters—Virginia, Nina and Dorothy.
"I told them that I didn't want to do any posing for pictures when we went to Calvary Baptist Church this evening," he said, "as I didn't think it was right. But gee, when we got there, there were about 15 photographers in the balcony!"
The Governor had found there were three things you can't avoid: death, taxes and photographers. Two detectives body-guarded him from a nearby table. They would take him back to the Hotel Pennsylvania where they were staying.
Nearly everybody thought Dewey would defeat President Harry S. Truman and that Warren would be the new Vice President. The Governor said his family wanted to see some shows.
"But I guess there are some shows it wouldn't look good for me to see," he said.
"Why do you call your daughter Nina a 'Honeybear'?" I asked him.
"She was so cuddly and cute and I thought one of the cutest things I ever saw was a honeybear," he said.
"He had some nice things to say about Toots, none of which he could prove," I wrote, then I congratulated him on saying that if elected he'd be a working Vice President.
"Gee," he said, coming out with his favorite expletive again. "I couldn't just sit up there and call balls and strikes on the Senate after the active life I've lived for 30 years."
He had a B&B (brandy and benedictine) after dinner, then the maitre d' said, "Would you have a drink on Mr. Shor?"
"Gee, no thanks. I wouldn't want any more," he said. And he and his family and the detectives went back to the hotel.
I saw him many times after that and he always had that same approachability. Gee, yes, he was a fine man.

Under Twenty

DEAR ASTRID
By ASTRID CARSON
Dear Astrid:
My boyfriend and I weren't as tight as we used to be. We decided on a new way of life. We decided to be free and yet see each other. He said if he came to my house and found someone here he would leave and come back.
Then, one of my friends came over and I explained the new arrangement. My boyfriend had said he would try to be by and would call about 6:30. I figured I could talk to this other boy before he came over and tell him when he called to come over.
I tried to reach him but couldn't so we went out and I got back a little after nine and my boyfriend was waiting. He called me all kinds of names and I explained I had tried every way to reach him. He left and told me to go back to the other guy.
He still won't believe me. I told him I loved him and was sorry, sorry for something I didn't even do. I've always tried to tell him the truth. He won't even call or come over.
Misbelieved
Dear Misbelieved:
What happened between you is just one of those awfully-unfortunate things that can happen. After all, he had said he was going to call you earlier and did not do it. You did everything to reach him and tell him that you were going out.
An arrangement like yours requires faith on both sides. If you have done everything to make him understand and he still refuses to believe you, your only choice is to find someone else.
Perhaps this will help him realize what he has lost. Next time you should be more clear on just what your relationship really is.
Dear Astrid:
I've been going with a boy for five months. We loved each other but three months after we started going together he started messing around with other girls. Finally I was fed up with him and told him off.
The week after he called me and asked if I was still angry. I said I was. We talked a while and he said he had to go but would call me sometime. It's been four weeks.
I want him back even after what he has done to me but I have too much respect to crawl back to him. I can't help still loving him. Do you think he still loves me and is just playing it cool? How can I get him back?
Feelin' Guilty
Dear Guilty:
There isn't any reason for you to feel guilty about your part in this affair. He's the one who ran out on you and you certainly had the right to tell him what you thought about it.
If you weren't over it when he called, you still had the right to tell him so. The chances are that he just isn't ready to settle down with one girl which accounts for his running around and not calling you in a month.
You're right not to crawl back to him under the circumstances and would be much better off finding someone who can play it straight with you. It could be, too, that when he's through running around, he'll want to come back. But don't wait for him.
Dear Astrid:
I love a girl very much but she is very popular with all the boys. There are always two or three around her and she has all the dates she wants. She's friendly and warm but says she doesn't want to get herself involved. How can I get her to become specially interested in me?
Trying
Dear Trying:
The only thing you can do is keep trying without appearing to try too hard. Accept her friendship and warmth on the level she wants to give them. When the day comes she's ready to get involved, you may be the one. Just don't press!

Fighting Erupts During Milwaukee Brewer Win

UPI Sports Writer
Boxing isn't dead. It's just been switched from the ring to the diamond.

There may not be many fights going on in the boxing rings around the country these days but they're breaking out all over on the baseball diamonds.

The latest fracas took place Tuesday night in Bloomington, Minn.

In one corner (actually on the mound) was Minnesota's Ray Corbin, a 6-foot-2, 205 pounder from Live Oak, Fla.

In the other corner (the batter's box) was Milwaukee's Bob Coluccio, a 5-11, 183 pounder from Centralia, Wash.

Corbin had another advantage besides the weight and height. He was throwing the baseball and he bounced it off Coluccio's head in the seventh inning. Coluccio went to the ground as teams milled on the field and several fights broke out. It took the umpires several minutes to restore order but none of the players was ejected.

Milwaukee still won 5-4, but Coluccio was taken to a hospital for an overnight stay and X-rays.

"It was a brushback pitch and nothing else, and it just plain got away," Corbin said. "I had my control. You know that since I struck out five and walked none in the three innings I worked. I know exactly where the ball was intended to go, and it was certainly not at Coluccio."

"He has been hitting us very well, and I simply was trying to move him off the plate. I certainly hope that he's not injured."

John Briggs had three hits, including a two-run homer, in the Milwaukee win.

In other AL games, New York blanked Texas, 2-0; California downed Cleveland, 11-2; Chicago blanked Detroit, 6-0; Oakland edged Baltimore, 4-3, and Kansas City downed Boston, 5-4.

In the National League, Pittsburgh beat Houston, 6-2; Chicago downed Atlanta, 7-2; Cincinnati beat St. Louis, 12-7; San Francisco downed New York, 9-4; San Diego edged Philadelphia, 5-4, and Montreal topped Los Angeles, 8-7.

White Sox 6, Tigers 0
Jim Kaat pitched a two-hitter to best Mickey Lolich and pace Chicago to over Detroit. Dick Allen hit his 23rd homer and drove in three runs to back Kaat.

Yanks 2, Rangers 0
Doc Medich pitched a five-hitter as New York downed Texas. Sandy Alomar and Bobby Murcer drove in third-inning runs with a sacrifice fly and a single to beat teen-ager David Clyde.

A's 4, Orioles 3
Oakland built up a 4-0 lead and survived a three-run eighth-inning to beat Baltimore. Rollie Fingers got his seventh save with a 2-3 inning stint that preserved Ken Holtzman's 10th triumph.

Angels 11, Indians 2
Frank Tanana, who hadn't won a game since May 25, pitched two-hit relief ball over the final six innings to pace California over Cleveland. Joe Lahoud drove in four runs with a pair of homers for California.

Royals 5, Red Sox 4
Al Cowens bounced a two-run single in the sixth inning to lift Kansas City past Boston. Steve Busby pitched a nine-hitter for his 13th win, while Bill Lee, who also allowed nine hits, suffered his eighth loss against 10 wins.

Where's Perryton? If You Don't Know Go Ask Margrove

The Boston (Mass.) of course) Globe recently did a story on Dudley Michael (Mike) Hargrove, the Texas Ranger rookie sensation, when the Rangers were in Boston for a series for the Red Sox.

The writer, Leigh Montville, called Hargrove "The Kid From Perryton." Seven times in the story Hargrove was spelled Margrove, which proves Montville had probably never heard of the "Perryton Kid." He probably never heard of Perryton either.

Berning Favorite In Open

LA GRANGE, Ill. (UPI) — Susie Maxwell Berning hasn't won a women's golf tournament this year.

Yet she ranks as one of the favorites for the 22nd National Women's Open championship beginning Thursday at La Grange Country Club, and she agrees that perhaps she should be listed in that category.

Reasonably she's a favorite because she's won the open for the last two years and is bidding to become the first player to win it three straight. Also she's bidding to become the third player ever to win the title four times, matching Mickey Wright and Betsy Rawls.

But more important is her attitude toward the 6,266 yard, par 72 golf course, and her ability to play it. One of her rival pros said, for instance, that she "couldn't get up for one golf tournament, like Susie Berning does for the open."

"I do better on a course like this than the ones we usually play," Mrs. Berning said. "If I had arrived here and didn't like the course, I don't think I could have gotten up. But I do like it."

Mrs. Berning doesn't believe the winner will have to break par for 72 holes. In fact, she was doubtful there would be many sub par rounds in the four days of competition.

Dizzy Dean Dies In Reno

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — As a pitcher for the famed Cardinals "Gas House Gang" of the 1930s, Dean played hard on and off baseball diamonds. He never made very much money in those Depression years and what he did make he spent as quickly as he could.

Life never really changed for Dizzy through the years. He never amassed any wealth although radio jobs and other employment always filled his pockets with money.

"Money doesn't mean a thing if you can't enjoy it," was one of his pet phrases of later years. "I've made some and I've lost some but I have no regrets."

Following his baseball career, he became a prominent sportscaster whose grammatical mistakes and folk sayings won him new fans. He was also the subject of a motion picture.

Dean lived in Wiggins, Miss., where the funeral and burial will be held.

The son of a cotton-picker whose family struggled about the Southwest in the early 1920's, he developed a strong arm by throwing clods at prairie dogs.

Amiable although incredibly vain, O' Diz was the soul of the St. Louis Cardinals' 1934 Gas House Gang and an advisor to anyone who would listen. He swaggered sitting down, once dangled a teammate out of 12th-story hotel window and liked to invade formal parties in the overalls of a house painter.

With it all, Dizzy was one of the greatest pitchers in baseball history before a freak accident in 1937 cut short his career. He was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., in 1953 and later unsuccessfully sought the governor's mansion in Jackson, Miss.

A 6-foot-4, 200-pound righthander, Dean entered organized baseball with the St. Joseph club of the Western League in 1930 and by the end of the season earned a trial with the parent Cardinal organization.

It was during the spring of 1932 that Dizzy began his own legend with contradictory stories of his birth and early life. Dean said he had two sets of given names, was born on Jan. 16, Aug. 22 and Feb. 22 and first ran into trouble with their self-styled training camp at a nearby high school.

A group of vets showed up at the field but were asked to leave by a maintenance man. The players were told the school superintendent was not in favor of the field being used as a strike headquarters and he complained that he was not informed of the makeshift training camp until he read it in the newspapers.

Also, players at the Bengals' training camp voted unanimously not to meet with Players Association representatives.

one major league pitcher — Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers in 1968 — has won 30 games since Dean did it in 1934.

He had a 28-12 record in 1935 and a 24-13 mark in 1936 to challenge Carl Hubbell of the Giants as the greatest pitcher of their day.

Paul, a sidarm pitcher who may have been faster than Dizzy, won 19 games again in 1935 but developed a sore arm that soon ended his career.

To his death, though, Dean remained a living symbol of the Gas House Gang and a baseball era that is gone with the Depression and the dingy little ball parks along railroad sidings.

Bucs Edge Astros

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates, long known for their hitting prowess, are starting to show they have some good pitchers.

Jim Rooker limited the Houston Astros to eight hits in a 6-2 victory Tuesday night. It was Rooker's eighth complete game of the season and his sixth victory against seven losses.

Dock Ellis, a right-hander, beat the Astros 3-1 Monday night on an eight-hitter. Pirate pitchers have completed 30 games this year, compared to 26 during the entire 1973 season.

The Astros had Rooker on the ropes in the early innings and almost knocked him out in the fourth when they loaded the bases with two out. But the hard-throwing lefty struck out Wilbur Howard to end the threat.

"It was easy going after the fourth inning when I struck out Howard," Rooker said. "If he gets a hit there, they score a couple of runs. And I was sure (Cesar) Cedeno was back there in the dugout someplace getting loose to bat for the pitcher."

Pittsburgh has won three games in a row, including the final one in the Cincinnati series when a fight broke out after pitcher Bruce Kison was hit in the ribs.

Pampa AL Loses

Canadian scored three runs in the first inning and held on to hand the Pampa Rebels a 7-4 loss Tuesday night in Pampa as the Pampa American Legion team closed out its season.

Roy Morris, who was relieved by Mike Fraser in the fourth, got the loss for Pampa while Tony Williams was the winning pitcher.

Hitters for Pampa were Tony Frogge, two for three; Dan Hood, three for four; Roy Morris, one for two, and Bobby Chance, two for four.

tips for consumers from your BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Your house can only be as sound as the roof above it. If your roof is relatively new and has developed a minor leak, it probably can be corrected easily.

Shingles that have become broken or have blown away can be replaced quickly. But an older roof with recurring problems may require professional attention.

If you begin a program of preventive care for your roof, you may be able to avoid expensive problems later. And this is especially important today because of a growing shortage of nails, flashing, insulation, asphalt felt and other materials commonly used in building and repairing roofs.

According to the National Roofing Contractors Association, someone could be going without a roof this year. Don't let it be you!

So, the first step in your preventive program is to be sure that your gutters and drains are clear of debris. Check for this especially in the fall, when leaves are likely to clog downspouts. This can cause roof flooding, which often contributes to the creation of weak spots.

Don't attempt to attach guide wires or antennas to your roof, unless you have had experience in this work. Let a roofing contractor do this, or consult with one for advice on anchoring such equipment.

In fact, unless you know your roof is built for it, never allow traffic on the roofing surface. Usually, a roof that is not flat is not for people.

Have Your Roof Inspected

It is most important to have your roof inspected from time to time. Many homeowners believe that their roofs are sound simply because there are no leaks. This can be a false — and sometimes dangerous — assumption.

Roofs should be inspected periodically by a competent, reliable roofing contractor. Factors determining the frequency of roof inspections are the age of the roof, how it is used (patio, antenna, etc.) and the weather conditions in your locale.

A recently built or reconstructed roof need not be inspected only every few years. However, the roof that is 10 years old or more requires an annual inspection.

A thorough roof inspection will show whether you need spot-patching, coating or re-roofing. If you believe you need re-roofing, the sooner you contact the roofer, the better.

The condition of your roof and its supports should be inspected for damage. If deck supports or the roof itself are warped, rotting or somehow structurally unsound, the old roofing should be removed to allow for structural repairs.

Extensive re-roofing is a big job. Anyone who tells you he can accomplish it with a minimum of effort, inconvenience or expense may be cheating you!

Roof Coatings

Once you've determined that there are no isolated leaks or extensive damage, coating may be called for. There are different types of coatings, all of which are effective if applied correctly and before the roof membrane (the watertight, uppermost layer) becomes weak through deterioration.

Roof coatings are protective preparations, in liquid or semi-liquid form. They are applied by roller, brush or spray apparatus. Unless you are experienced in this type of work, it is best to find a reliable roofing contractor for the job.

Not only is there danger in working on the roof, but the coating solutions must be applied exactly right or they will not be effective.

Roof coatings vary according to type of roof, climate, drainage, etc. Check with a roofing contractor to determine what is best for your roof.

The most commonly applied coatings are those of the asphalt-base type. These are available in three forms: emulsion, solvent and aluminum pigmented.

The emulsion type will not blister and is best for asphalt, composition and metal roofs with ample drainage. The solvent type of coating, extremely water resistant, is good for asphalt, asbestos, cement, metal and masonry roof surfaces.

The reflecting quality of the aluminum pigmented type tends to reduce the interior temperature of a building, and is best for asphalt, composition and metal roofs with adequate drainage.

Another type of roof coating is the alkyd-base colored aluminum type, effective on metal, composition, masonry and polyurethane foam roofs with good drainage. This coating is desirable for its decorative effect.

The final coating type is made with refined coal tar, for use on tar and gravel roofs. Very water resistant, it has a "self-sealing" quality at warm temperatures.

Remember, although these coatings are effective, they are no substitute for re-roofing. Don't be pressured by the "fly-by-night" operator who will charge you a ridiculously low price for a coating that he says will absolutely stop all your leaks.

Also be wary of any contractor who guarantees his work for more than two years — the guarantee period recognized by the National Roofing Contractors Association.

If any of your friends have recently had roofing work done, ask them who did the job and if it was satisfactory. Call the Better Business Bureau to check on his reliability.

Buyer's Billboard

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is pondering a question that is somewhat similar to a problem it confronted 10 years ago when poverty was the "hot" national issue.

The question in 1964 was: Do the poor need a special government agency to look after their interests? Congress answered by creating the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

The question now is whether consumers need their own federal agency. The House already has passed legislation that would set up a Consumer Protection Agency and the Senate is expected to debate the issue, with a differing bill, some time in July.

Because the proposed Consumer Protection Agency would, in effect, be a watchdog over other federal bureaucracies and intervene when it believed the interests of consumers were being jeopardized, it may not be easy to see the parallel with the OEO, which in its prime operated $1 billion worth of education, manpower, health and other social programs.

Activists Take Over

But those who followed the discussion of the Economic Opportunity Act 10 years ago recall that OEO was supposed to have been more than a big federal operating agency. It also was supposed to be an "Advocate for the Poor" within the federal establishment — prodding other agencies to remember the hitherto "invisible poor" when they planned and ran social programs.

It didn't turn out that way, partly because the original OEO was staffed with activists who wanted to do the job themselves and partly because bureaucracy resists all outside kibitzing, even from other government agencies. In short, the people who started OEO believed it would be easier for them to win the War on Poverty alone than try to get the rest of the government to help.

Which poses the similarity with the proposed Consumer Protection Agency. Its job — even with the power to demand records of other agencies to go to court to oppose their decisions — will be very difficult.

The fact that creation of the agency is strongly favored by Virginia Knauer, the President's consumer adviser, and opposed by Director Roy Ash of the Office of Management and Budget gives some idea of what lies ahead. Mrs. Knauer is well aware of what frustrations there are in store for anyone who goes into government with the mission of reforming the institution, and Ash probably can vividly imagine the meddling that will flow from the establishment of an agency that has nothing to do but poke into others' business.

Question Arises

Aside from the obvious irony of having to create a consumer protection agency to ride herd on other agencies which are supposed to be protecting consumers in the first place, the question Congress must answer is whether it will do any good.

The Senate Government Operations subcommittee majority which sent the bill to the floor says it will, arguing that an independent watchdog is needed because "no single federal agency can be expected to act adequately as both a decision maker and as a critic of its own decisions."

The minority, led by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., argues that the cure for overbearing government is not more government, decrying "a paranoid fear of businessmen and farmers, a patronizing attitude toward consumers and a paradoxical view of the role of government — if officials in existing agencies can be malleable, so can officials of the new agency."

We'll be happy to try to answer consumer questions or solve problems. While we can't promise to answer every letter, we'll do our best. Let us know care of Buyer's Billboard, UPI, 315 National Press Building, Washington DC 20004.

Business Today

BY LEONARD CURRY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gold's important role in the industrial world often is overlooked in the excitement over its speculative aspects.

Industrial uses of gold are many and inject billions of dollars into the economy through sales, mining and commercial products.

It is the best conductor of heat and cold and is used, for instance, to de-ice windshields of airliners.

Gold is used in the manufacture of spacecraft, radios and other advanced electronic equipment.

The metal also is used to fill teeth and, of course, for its most widely known historic purpose — crafting into jewelry.

Since gold is malleable, it usually is alloyed with another metal to increase durability. In this case, the gold is measured in carats based on 24 being pure or 1,000 fine. A ring of 18 carats is 75 per cent gold.

Because of gold's softness, it wore off in the pockets and on the hands of ancient and medieval men who used it for trading purposes. It now erodes when used industrially, thus the supply is dwindling. The Interior Department projects that gold reserves in the earth will last only to 1990.

Since recorded history, about 2.5 billion ounces of gold have been mined — with about half that amount coming in the past 30 years, largely from the rich fields of South Africa and to a lesser extent Russia.

The average annual production is about 20 million ounces, although it peaked at 40 million ounces in 1971. Except for gold used by governments to support currency and by hoarders to speculate, most of the metal is used in manufacturing.

Most Americans have been caught up in the headlines of the year-long rise in gold prices, says Thomas W. Wolfe, director of the Treasury Department's Office of Domestic Gold and Silver Operations.

He notes that between 1934 and 1970 gold was the only commodity in the world that lost value, from $35 an ounce to $34.70. That slippage has been more than offset in the past 36 months, partly as a result of the first dollar devaluation since 1933.

Because of the talk about gold, many Americans have been buying coins and even "panning" in Alaska and the Western states.

The Spincraft Manufacturing Co., which produces the sloped-side pans popular with prospectors since John Marshall found gold at Suter's Mill in 1848, is increasing production from 10,000 to 75,000 this year because of intensifying demand.

Alaska's Klondike and Yukon are experiencing a surge in prospecting although only a flash in comparison with the rush of 1898.

In Alaska, a prospector can "stake" a claim by paying the county clerk $10 and driving a stake into the ground near a stream. This action gives the prospector rights to all the placer gold he can pan in one year from 5,000 feet of stream.

In the contiguous states, primarily the West, a claim for alluvial mines can be made by performing $100 in "assessments" on the property each year. The Interior Department said there has been a significant increase in claims so far this year.

But the gold rush of 1974 is not to be compared with the California rush of '49 or north to Alaska in '98.

"There just isn't much gold left in the United States," says Wolfe.

In fact, there are only three working gold mines in the country. Homestake in Lead, S.D., is the biggest, extracting about 400,000 ounces each year. Cortez and Carlen in Nevada mine significantly less.

As the gold supply diminishes approaching the year 1990, there may come into being a new breed of alchemist — those fellows in the peaked hats who tried to transform lead into gold in the Middle Ages. But in the futuristic tableau, the alchemist would be trying to strain gold from seawater.

JAMES C. RICHARDSON

Man Named Outstanding

James Clarence Richardson, 800 N. Christy, engineering estimator, has been selected as one of five outstanding trainees for the 1973-74 term of the Southwestern Public Service Company's vocational training school.

Richardson scored a 97 percent grade, including a perfect attendance record, in 132 hours classroom credit in distribution, transmission and introduction to controls. His instructor was Gary Gibson.

Richardson will join the other four honorees for a trip within the next two months throughout the company's service area. The trip is designed so that the honorees can see how their work fits into the overall operation of the company.

Two hundred and forty-five students were enrolled in 17 courses during the term which just ended. They attended 9,541 hours of classroom instruction on their own time.

Serving Their Country

BILLY HEARRON

Army Sergeant Billy W. Hearron, son of Mrs. Jeanne Hearron, 1804 N. Dwight, is assigned to the 7th Air Defense Artillery in Germany. He is a hawk missile crewman in Battery C of the artillery's 3rd battalion in Bamberg. His father lives in Pacoima, Calif. and his wife, Beverly, lives in Oceanside, Calif.

S.A. LAUGHLIN

Navy Airman Recruit S.A. Laughlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Laughlin of 114 S. Faulkner, completed the Aviation Boatswain Mate School in Lakehurst, N.J. Aviation boatswain's mates operate and maintain equipment used in the launching and recovery of aircraft aboard ships and at air stations.

WESLEY S. MURRAY

Wesley Scott Murray, son of Mrs. Jo Vernon of 1209 Mary Ellen, enlisted on July 3 in the United States Air Force. Airman Murray is a 1974 graduate of Pampa High School. He has departed for Lackland Air Force Base to undergo six weeks of basic training and has selected the electronics aptitude area.

DONALD E. CURLEE

Donald Edward Curlee, husband of Mrs. Lillian Curlee, 416 N. Russell, enlisted July 9 in the United States Air Force. He will depart for Lackland Air Force Base for the next six weeks for basic military training. After completion of basic training, Airman Curlee will be assigned to Keesler Air Force Base, Biloxi, Miss. for technical training. Choosing the longer six-year enlistment, he plans to make the Air Force his career.

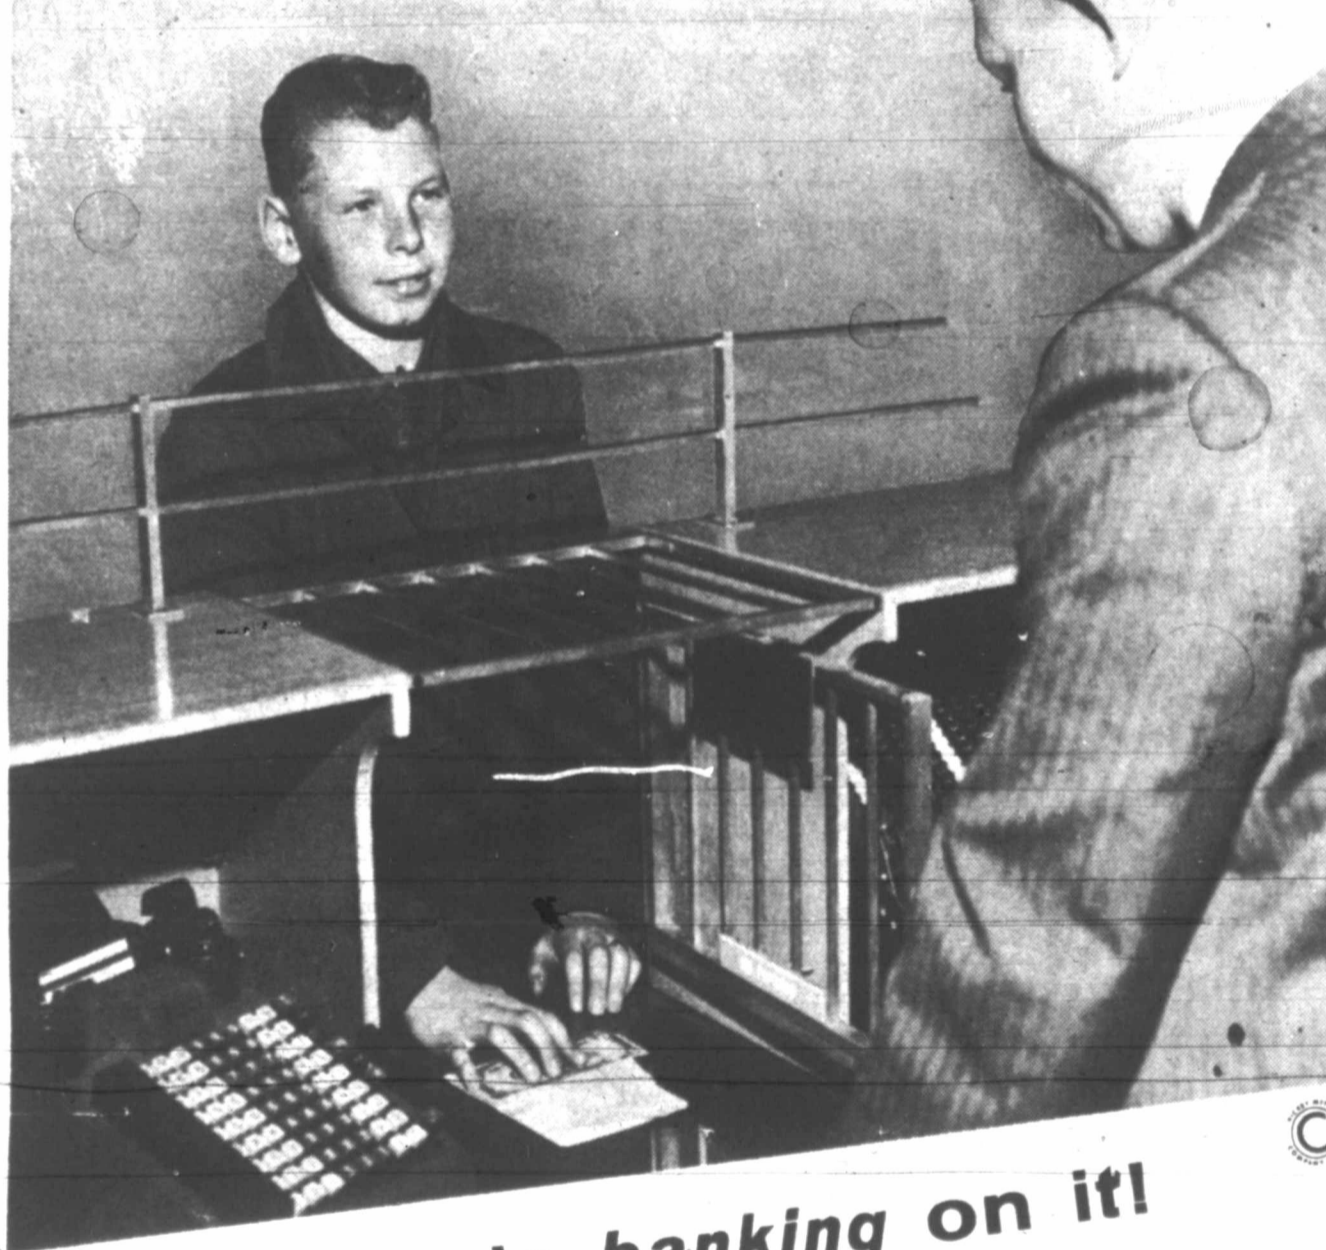

Centenarian Still Drinks

CHICAGO (UPI) — For his 103rd birthday party Monday Max Moskowitz got a half-gallon of straight Bourbon.

"It'll probably last him until about Saturday," said Al Mendelovitch, director of the nursing home where Moskowitz now lives. "He drinks between two and three fifths a week."

Moskowitz has been knocking people over for years. They called him "Kid McCoy," one of many boxers with that name almost three-quarters of a century ago during his career as a professional boxer.

He's not hoping for a college education...

he's banking on it!

Most newspaperboys are banking part of their savings for higher education.

Even if you can easily afford to send your boy to college, you might consider this—the boy who works and saves for part of his education is the boy who will get the most out of college.

He'll appreciate Pop and the checks from home more if he's already had a taste of earning money by working himself.

And while his route profits are important, this is only one of a number of reasons why so many of today's successful men encourage their boys to get the benefit of Newspaper Route experience—including service, salesmanship, collections and record keeping.

The final coating type is made with refined coal tar, for use on tar and gravel roofs. Very water resistant, it has a "self-sealing" quality at warm temperatures.

Remember, although these coatings are effective, they are no substitute for re-roofing. Don't be pressured by the "fly-by-night" operator who will charge you a ridiculously low price for a coating that he says will absolutely stop all your leaks.

Also be wary of any contractor who guarantees his work for more than two years — the guarantee period recognized by the National Roofing Contractors Association.

If any of your friends have recently had roofing work done, ask them who did the job and if it was satisfactory. Call the Better Business Bureau to check on his reliability.

Cartoon strip with dialogue: 'HOW DO YOU TELL THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A BIGMOUTH BASS AND A SMALLMOUTH?'

Social Security Q & A

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in the column or by mail.)

By H.L. WEATHERLY

Q. I retired a few months ago and started getting monthly social security checks. I plan to help a friend in his repair shop this spring. How will the job affect my social security payments and when should I report my earnings?

A. If your annual earnings exceed $2,400, $1 in benefits will be withheld for each $2 of earnings above $2,400. Regardless of total yearly earnings, no benefits will be withheld for any month you do not earn more than $200 in employment and do not do substantial work in your own business.

If you think you'll earn over $2,400 in 1974, you should report it to your nearest social security office as soon as you can. Then the social security administration can withhold your benefits during the period when you have income from your work.

If you delay reporting your earnings to social security, you could be overpaid and have to refund some benefits.

Q. I started receiving disability benefits in October 1972, but I haven't gotten my Medicare card yet. Why? What should I do?

A. A person must be entitled to disability benefits for 24 months before he is eligible for Medicare. You will be eligible in October, 1974. A Medicare card will be sent to you automatically at that time.

Pampa Native Will Return
