SKELLYTOWN - A bomb taken from a Skellytown home was successfully dismantled by Amarillo Police Department bomb squad officers near midnight Friday, according to press release from the Carson County Sheriff's Office.

Carson County Sheriff's Office deputies were called to Skellytown about 7:46 p.m. Friday on reports of a bomb inside a residence. Officers evacuated the area around the house and called Amarillo Police Department bomb squad for bomb disposal. Those officers arrived about 11:20 p.m. and safely removed the device, according to the press release.

The bomb was taken to an open area and rendered inoperable by the officers.

Initial investigations show the device had explosive capability. Investigation will continue by Carson County Sheriff's Office, Texas Rangers and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

On standby in case of accidental detonation were Skellytown Volunteer Fire Department and Emergency Medical Service.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A landslide in a remote corner of northeastern Afghanistan buried a small village, killing at least 350 people and injuring 69 others, Radio Kabul reported Saturday.

The landslide apparently occurred about a week ago, but authorities in the Afghan capital of Kabul, about 600 miles away, were not notified until Friday, the report said.

Rescue teams were trying to dig bodies from beneath the rubble in the Pamir mountain range. At least 11 people were still missing, said the broadcast, monitored in neighboring Pakistan.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Revealing clothing has been outlawed at Rio's municipal courthouse because of one jurist's prudence.

For years, it was common to see women at the courthouse wearing shorts, tube tops or T-shirts cut above the waist and below the breasts.

On Friday, Judge Helena Belc Klausner cracked down. No more uncovered tummies, thighs or shoulders will be permitted in the tribunal. Klausner also banished the miniskirt, which she said had gotten too mini for comfort.

It was a matter of decency, she said.

All-day summit to offer chance to combat crime

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Pampa residents can find out how to take a stand against lawlessness at an all-day crime summit set for 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 8, at M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center.

Crime prevention and awareness, domestic violence, gangs, and personal and property security issues will be addressed at "Taking a Stand," an all-day information and exhibition fair sponsored by the Gray County Extension Program Council of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The point is to try to help prevent crime in your own little spot," said Extension agent Donna Brauchi of the come-and-go event.

The idea for a crime summit was born during the five-year planning process done in the spring of 1994, when local residents, under the auspices of the Extension Program Council, identified locally important issues, Brauchi said.

Speakers and topics include:
9 a.m. - Personal safety, by Sgt. Katie Gerhardt, Pampa Police Department;

9:30 a.m. - Drugs and alcohol and their impact on crime, by Claudia Stuart of Texans War on Drugs;

10:30 a.m. - Gangs, by Officer Gustavo Vaquera, Texas Department of Criminal Justice;

11:30 a.m. - Drug Free Youth in Texas, by Leslie Koetting of Pampa Independent School District;

1 p.m. Crime Stoppers;

1:30 p.m. - Fraud prevention,

by Ron McLaurin of the Texas Attorney General's Office;
2:30 p.m. - Prison early release program, by Mike Jeffers, teacher at the Rufe Jordan Unit;

3:30 p.m. - Neighborhood Watch and home security, by Floyd McMinn, crime prevention coordinator, and Cpl. Connie Brown, Pampa Police Department.

At the noon hour, teens will be treated to pizza and soft drinks courtesy Mr. Gatti's, and Chicken Express will give away food coupons as young people learn about taking a stand against violence. A PPD representative will discuss protection against violence at school, and Sona Alexander of Tralee Crisis Center will discuss date rape and family violence. A drawing for a $100 discount on security equipment at Hall's Auto Sound will be held.

For adults, from noon to 1 p.m., Dr. Jerry Lane, Clarendon College, will speak on inhalants and raising drug free children.

For children, from noon to 1 p.m., Brown will talk about bicycle safety, tips for staying home alone and dealing with strangers.

Gray County Sheriff's Office and PPD officers will Ident-A-Kid children all day. McGruff the Crime Dog will be on hand.

Drug dogs Dirk and Czar, of PPD and GCISO respectively, will be at the crime summit with their handlers.

Exhibit space continues to be available for items related to personal, home and auto security, said Brauchi.

"Taking a Stand" is co-sponsored by Tralee Crisis Center and Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group.

Richard Smith of Shamrock, left, director of the Old Route 66 Association, is hoisted high above Interstate 40's Exit 37 to Vega on Friday to unveil the new Route 66 signs that will mark the road's history across the Texas Panhandle. With him for the unveiling of the sign is an unidentified Texas Department of Transportation worker.

TxDOT unveils new signs marking historic Route 66 across Panhandle

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

VEGA — A Shamrock man ripped the paper covering off the new Route 66 sign at Exit 37 to mark the historic road's tracks across the Texas Panhandle.

About 60 people, including Texas Department of Transportation workers, Old Route 66 Association members and news media, gathered under leaden skies Friday morning for the unveiling of the new sign, one of more than 80 that are to be erected along the route of historical highway in the Panhandle.

The ceremonies included remarks by Leon Wood, a Pampa native and now the TxDOT Transportation Operations Manager for the Amarillo District; Delbert Trew of Alanreed, who oversees the Old Route 66 Museum in McLean; and George Rook of Landergin, president of the Old Route 66 Association of Texas.

It's been almost 10 years since transportation officials voted to eliminate the U.S. 66 highway designation, said Tonya Detten, information officer with the Amarillo District of the Texas Department of Transportation. Since then, the original signs that marked U.S. 66 have become collectors' items and the "Old Route" has become a tourist attraction from Chicago to Los Angeles.

Route 66 fan clubs have sprung up all over the U.S. and all over the world. Now, in Texas, travelers should have no trouble at all finding the Mother Road, Detten said.

"Vega is the midway point between Chicago and L.A.," Rook said. "That's why we call it the heart of the mother road."

The initial 2,488 mile U.S. Route 66 was designated in 1926 by a joint committee of state highway officials and the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, then a part of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It was part of an initial network of 96,626 miles, the first such designation of interstate routes and the first time routes were uniformly signed from state to state.

In 1985, the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials approved requests from six states (Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas) to eliminate the U.S. highway designation.

"Some states and cities continued to mark the highway as 'Old Route 66' or 'Historic Route 66,'" Wood said. "But, until now, official U.S. 66 signs were a thing of the past in Texas."

"No other highway stirs up so many memories and emotions," Detten said. "With fan clubs in Japan, Finland, Switzerland and other countries, the old route truly represents America. The new signs will make it easier for tourists to find that piece of Americana."

Pampa man finds long search ended when daughter calls him on telephone

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Over the years, Frank Rigney of Pampa had often wondered whatever happened to his first daughter. In the past several years, he had begun to look for her, wanting to know where she was and how she was doing.

Then, on the evening of March 7, about 6:30 p.m., he answered the telephone in his house and a voice on the other end was asking if he was Frank Rigney and if he knew a woman named Joyce Ruggles.

He answered yes to both questions, then the woman told him she was his daughter Debbie.

"I told her, 'Well, let me get a chair and sit down here,'" Rigney said, adding that his wife Connie, who was listening, was thinking he was having a heart attack.

Rigney said he was just so excited the search had ended that he was overcome.

Rigney was in Abilene last weekend for a joyous reunion with his daughter, Debbie Becker, whom he had only seen once before, when she was about eight months old.

Becker is now 34, with three children.

As she told The Abilene

Reporter-News for an article published in the March 25 edition, Becker didn't find out she was adopted until she was 10 years old. In the 14 years since, she has continued a search to locate her biological parents.

"I love my mother. She was a very good mother," Becker told the newspaper. "But I have a lot of medical problems and three children and I wanted to know what I was passing on. And, I just naturally wanted to know where I came from."

Rigney said his daughter was born in Wichita Falls on Sept. 7, 1960. He was living in Ohio at the time his daughter was born, and he did not make it back to Texas to see his daughter until she was eight months old.

But when he arrived, state welfare authorities were in the process of taking Debbie away from her mother. Shortly after he had seen his daughter, the only child he had with his first wife, Joyce Ruggles, the state succeeded in taking her.

Rigney said Debbie was placed in a children's home in Wichita Falls for six months. She was then released to her mother's care, but then about six months later she was taken away again and returned to the children's home, where she stayed for about a year and a half before being adopted.

Rigney said he never signed any papers allowing his daughter to be adopted, and neither did her mother. Later, all he could learn was that his daughter had been adopted by a couple in Abilene.

Over the years, Rigney has been married three times, and has had four sons and two other daughters. He said he has always told his other children that he had another daughter, and hoped someday to find her.

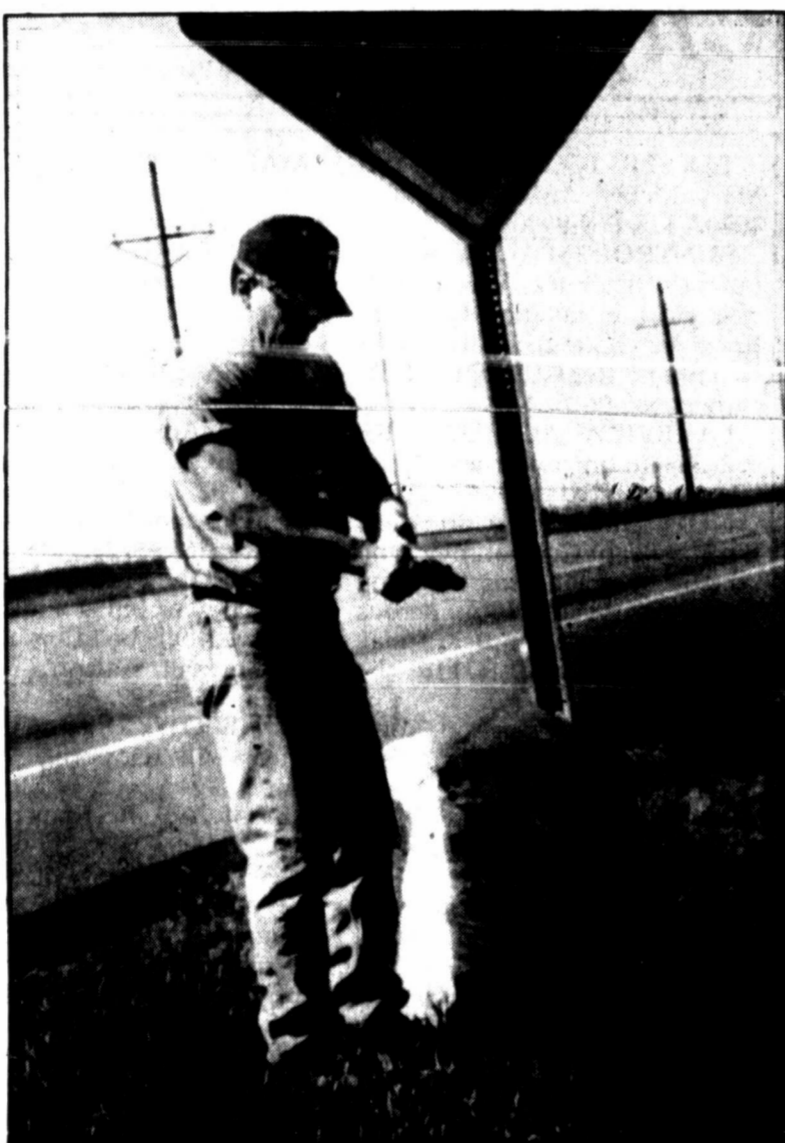

Several years ago, he tried searching official records to learn about his missing daughter. "But the adoption people pretty well shut the door in my face," he said. The only thing anyone would tell him was that she had been adopted in Abilene.

After Becker learned she had been adopted, she began a search to find her biological parents. All the documents she had been able to obtain concerning her adoption had all the names and case numbers cut out. Her adoptive father had destroyed any records he had.

After her adoptive father died, her adoptive mother was willing to help her, but she didn't have much information, either.

April Fool's dessert dish: Nacho-cheese ice cream

By DAVID GERMAIN Associated Press Writer
FREDONIA, N.Y. (AP) - When Scott Aldrich's ice cream parlor offers customers vanilla ice cream blended with cheese nachos, it means only one thing: April Fool's Day.
 This is the 12th year that Aldrich's Beef and Ice Cream Parlor has celebrated the day for practical jokes by offering customers the chance to eat food concoctions that would turn the stomachs of most gourmets.
 Aldrich has made eating bowls of his vile concoctions an annual rite of spring. This year, he whipped up 25 gallons of his nacho surprise, enough to give free samples today to about 700 people.
 The unheavenly hash commingles tangy salsa with bland vanilla ice cream, which is streaked with an orange that resembles sherbet but has the taste and consistency of CheezWhiz.
 Aldrich said the cheese actually blended well with the ice cream - after all, they're both dairy products - and the nachos added a tasty crunch. But the salsa, with its spicy bits of tomato and onion, was another matter.
 "I really thought it tasted pretty good till I got to the salsa," Aldrich said. "The cheese came out pretty smooth and tasted all right. But when you hit the salsa, it put it right over into the category of April Fool's."
 Aldrich has been on a Mexican sundae kick the past two years. Last year, his April Fool's flavor was chili vanilla, both vegetarian-style and with ground beef.
 The vegetarian version tasted OK, but the kind with greasy chunks of meat mixed into the ice cream - well, enough said.
 The featured flavors in previous years have included chocolate spaghetti, bacon-and-egg ice cream, vanilla with black and green olives and - gag - sauerkraut with vanilla.
 Aldrich's inaugural mixture 12 years ago was the grossest: vanilla ice cream with beef gravy, which congealed into a sort of brown lard in the ice cream.
 "The first was definitely the worst," he said.

Did you remember to turn your clocks forward today?

WASHINGTON (AP) — America will shed some light on its evenings starting today. That's right. It's time once again to switch to Daylight Saving Time.

That means moving the clock ahead one hour. You remember, "spring forward."

The change means later sunsets, so people can enjoy working on gardens or outdoor projects, playing sports, having barbecues or just idly relaxing outside.

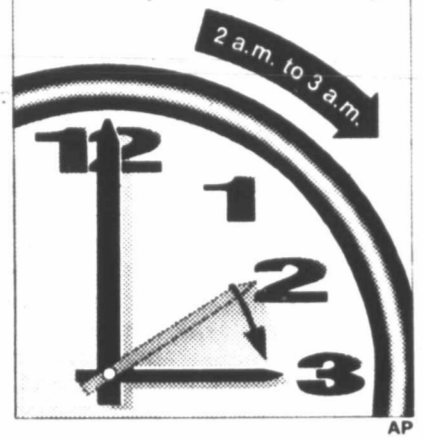

And safety officials are reminding Americans that changing the clocks is also a good reminder to change the batteries in smoke detectors, making sure that these safety devices are always working.

The law does allow some areas to exempt themselves from daylight time, and it isn't observed in Arizona, Hawaii, part of Indiana, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands or American Samoa.

Spring forward

Daylight-saving time begins: remember to set your clock forward one hour Sunday morning.

Daughter

"She kept pestering" the adoption agency and state agencies, Rigney said, trying to get more information. All she was told, however, was that her father's name was Frank and her mother's name was Joyce; no last names were provided.

Becker also tried getting help from outside sources, such as the television show Unsolved Mysteries. But she did not have much information to provide.

When Becker was talking with a woman in a court office, the woman, carrying papers in her hand that had the names of her parents on it, would not let her look at the papers. But as the woman turned away to put the papers up, she muttered that the father's last name was Rigney.

With only that bit of information, Becker began to call all the Rigneys she could locate in the Abilene area and beyond. She contacted a man in Dallas who had been doing genealogy work on Rigneys, and he sent her a copy of all the names he had. On Page 15 of the lists, there was a Frank Rigney living in Pampa.

Rigney said Becker debated over a day whether to call. There was no Frank Rigney listed in the Pampa telephone directory, but there was a Tina Rigney listed. Finally, she decided to make the call.

And her father answered. His telephone was listed under another daughter's name.

As Becker told The Reporter-News, "At one point I was told he was deceased. So I expected to find out where, how and when he died. I got a lot more than I expected."

Rigney said Becker told him that even when she had been told he was deceased, she wanted to keep up the search, if nothing else to find out where the grave was. But she really had never resigned herself to accepting that he was dead.

"She did a lot of work [in locating Rigney]... it wasn't by chance that she found me," Rigney said.

In addition to locating her father, Becker also has found four half-brothers, two half-sisters, and 11 nieces and nephews.

"And I found out I've got three more lovely grandchildren," Rigney said.

Now that Rigney and Becker have located each other, they also want to continue the search to locate Joyce Ruggles. So far, all they have found out is that she married a James Morgan and moved away, but no one knows where they went.

In the meantime, plans are under way for a big family reunion, perhaps sometime in June, Rigney said.

"The rest of my children can't wait to meet her. They're really excited," he said.

As Rigney told The Reporter-News, "After 34 years of looking and wondering where my daughter was, I thank the Lord for bringing us together. It's wonderful to finally put my arms around my daughter."

Rigney said one thing the whole experience has convinced him is that the state needs to change its laws to make the adoption records open to children when they become adults. If adopted people, after becoming adults, want to locate their biological parents, the records should be available to them, he said.

Then perhaps such searches as theirs wouldn't take 14 years or longer to come to an end.

Iraq may free Americans soon

BAGHDAD (AP) — A senior Iraqi official indicated Saturday that two Americans jailed for illegally entering the country could be freed soon.

"We think in the coming few days this problem should be solved," Hassab al-Qubaidi, a representative of the foreign relations department of the Iraqi parliament, told Associated Press Television in Baghdad.

The two prisoners — David Daliberti, 41, of Jacksonville, Fla., and William Barloon, 39, of New Hampton, Iowa — were sentenced last weekend to eight-year terms for illegal crossing into Iraq on March 13.

U.S. officials maintain they went over the border accidentally and have been working to secure their release through the Polish Embassy, which handles American interests in Baghdad in the absence of direct U.S.-Iraqi diplomatic relations.

Al-Oubaidi said he did not think the imprisonment of the two men would lead to a deterioration in U.S.-Iraqi relations.

Approval expected for pesticide-producing plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corn, cotton and potatoes that have been genetically modified to produce their own pesticides are moving closer to the marketplace.

In a decision announced last week, the Environmental Protection Agency allowed developers of the crops to plant them in order to build up commercial quantities of seed.

The next step is to allow public sale and use. The agency is expected to give such approval soon to a potato that can kill the Colorado potato beetle, a common pest.

For all three crops, scientists have transferred genetic information from the bacillus thuringiensis, or B.t., bacterium to the plants. The B.t. bacteria naturally produce an insecticide. Organic farmers and others who want to rely less on synthetic pesticides already apply the bacteria to plant leaves.

"The agency believes that plant pesticides can offer an opportunity to reduce the use of conventional pesticides and generally result in less risk to public health and the environment," EPA said in a statement.

Monsanto Co. of St. Louis developed the potato and cotton seeds. The corn seeds were developed jointly by Ciba Geigy Corp. of Greensboro, N.C., and Mycogen Plant Sciences of San Diego, Calif.

The cotton was engineered to resist cotton bollworm, tobacco budworm and pink bollworm. The corn was engineered to resist the European corn borer and other moth-like insects.

The registrations will allow production of seed potatoes on 1,186 acres in Colorado, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin; cotton on 36,850 acres in Texas, California, Puerto Rico, Arizona, Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina; and corn on 9,725 acres in Florida, Hawaii, Iowa, Illinois, Texas, California, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Puerto Rico.

The Union of Concerned Scientists, which is critical of the government's biotechnology policy, said the agency is rushing its decision "in deference to industry requests."

The group says the broader use of the naturally occurring pesticides will encourage the development of insects that can resist them.

"The greater harm will be to organic farmers who will lose a very valuable tool once the B.t. crops render the natural spray ineffective," said Margaret Mellon, a scientist and lawyer with the group.

Crime of the Week

Pampa Gray County Crime Stoppers needs your help in solving a pickup burglary from early March.

On March 5, a 1990 Dodge Ram 50 pickup was burglarized to the tune of $850 when thieves took a Kenwood AM/FM cassette car stereo, a Kenwood auto alarm and bug deflector shield. The theft occurred in the 1000 block of Huff Road.

Anonymous tipsters may leave information with Crime Stoppers by calling 669-2222.

Crimes Stoppers wants any information which leads to the arrest and indictment of the persons or persons responsible for this crime or any other felony crime of narcotics trafficking. Callers are eligible to collect awards of up to $1,000 cash.

THE SECURITY OF THE BELIEVER

"Wherefore, brethren, give the more diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never stumble: for thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1:10-11) Beginning with verse five of this chapter, Peter had given the seven things those brethren were to add to their faith. And so, if they did these things they would never stumble.

We understand that Peter was speaking of falling from the grace of God and thus to be eternally lost. It is possible for the child of God to so secure his soul by doing God's will that he will be eternally saved (Matt. 7:21). It is also possible for a child of God to so sin as to fall from the grace of God and be eternally lost as Peter so plainly implied. The apostle Paul warned the Corinthian brethren about falling from the grace of God (1 Cor. 10:12). He was even concerned about himself (1 Cor. 9:27). He warned the Galatian brethren about an angel, an apostle or any man preaching any gospel other than the one he preached. If they did, according to Paul, the anathema of God rested upon them (Gal. 1:8-9). Certainly, with God's curse upon them, they would not still be in His grace.

To the church at Ephesus, Jesus instructed John to warn them of their sin. In Rev. 2:4-5, Jesus said, "But I have this against thee, that thou didst leave thy first love. Remember therefore whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the first works; or else I come to thee, and will move thy candlestick out of its place, except thou repent." Those brethren were admonished to remember from whence they had fallen. The "whence" had to be the grace of God. Thus, like Simon who had fallen from the grace of God, they were to repent and pray God's forgiveness lest they be eternally lost.

The believer secures his soul by always doing the will of God. This would include repenting of his sins when he sins, confessing his sins and praying God's forgiveness (1 Jn. 1:7-10, acts 8:20-24). But, most assuredly, a child of God can so sin as to be eternally lost.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

GOP reluctance not good policy

Some Republicans seem to have become so accustomed to being a minority party that they haven't yet adjusted to being in the majority in Congress - or is it that they have a hankering to be a minority again? If that's what they want, waffling on tax cuts could be their ticket for a return to political oblivion.

First Sen. Robert Packwood, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, returns from a bipartisan senatorial retreat all bubbly over a newfound determination not to cut taxes until big-time progress is made on reducing the deficit. Then 102 House Republicans come up with the bright idea that a $500-per-child tax credit promised in the Contract with America be allowed only for those with incomes of $95,000 or less rather than for those with incomes of $200,000 or less?

Why this aversion to tax cutting for the largest possible number of people? Have even the 35 House Republican freshmen who signed onto the "bash-the-rich" notion been in Washington too long already? Don't they realize that if class-warfare rhetoric worked, they wouldn't be a majority now; the Democrats still would be?

Here's the bottom line, folks. Most Americans support most of the items in the GOP contract in a general way, hoping that reorganization and reform will reduce the burden of government somewhat, or make government slightly less irrational. But many of those issues are abstract. Whatever the responses to various carefully-worded poll questions might suggest, Americans will lose patience with the Republicans if they don't get some sort of concrete relief they can feel - as in a smaller tax bite from Uncle Sam.

The notion that a tax cut is irresponsible unless it is first paid for with spending cuts is superficially attractive and not necessarily a bad idea. But it relies on the sort of static analysis that has been repeatedly discredited.

Reducing tax rates affects peoples' behavior, stimulating a significant percentage of them to engage in more productive economic activity, often enough leading to more tax revenue than before. This has happened repeatedly, for example, when the capital-gains tax rate has been reduced. It's not a theory. The numbers - from 1978 and 1981 (when the capital-gains tax rate was increased and revenue declined) - bear it out.

The more fundamental issue is that the money doesn't rightfully belong to the government, it belongs to the people who earned it. Americans are overtaxed, and relief is overdue. They shouldn't have to wait until the government gets more responsible about the deficit to have their taxes reduced.

This is not to suggest that spending reduction and deficit reduction aren't important. They are, and the more we get of both the better. But tax reduction shouldn't have to wait until the politicians do the right thing on spending. If Republicans don't understand this, they won't be in the majority for long.

Where spending should be cut

Walter Williams

Republicans have a chance to rise above political expediency and become a party of principle. They are absolutely right in pushing for welfare reform. Welfare and liberal visions of the War on Poverty haven't simply been failures. They've made whole classes of Americans indolent, dependent and immune to the traditional cure for poverty - a growing economy. But how about other welfare recipients?

This year, Congress plans to hand out $431 million to IBM, Hewlett-Packard and Eastman Kodak to develop new computer storage systems. Over the last decade, Congress has given wine maker Ernest & Julio Gallo $15.9 million for overseas advertisement. Sunkist latched on to the same handout agenda for $66.9 million, and Clinton friend Tyson Foods got $9.9 million.

According to a story in Reason magazine (March 1995), Congress has given General Motors, Ford and Chrysler $250 million to develop better cars. In order to promote corporate equality of opportunity to raid taxpayer pockets, $587 million is going to AT&T, Rockwell International and Xerox to support their flat-panel research. The Export-Import Bank and the Overseas Private Investment Corp. give out close to $1 billion in credit loans, loan guarantees and grants to U.S. businesses trying to sell overseas. The recent bailout money for Mexico is essentially a handout to American banks stupid enough to toss good money after bad at the Mexican government.

There is neither moral nor constitutional justification for government handouts to corporate welfare queens. Moreover, there's no public support for these handouts. So if Republicans moved to eliminate them, they wouldn't face irate voters. However, they would face an outraged corporate lobbyist community that make large contributions to their campaign coffers. But we should press Republicans on this question: How can you possibly talk about slamming the handout door on a poor, lazy, good-for-nothing welfare recipient while at the same time sponsoring handouts for members of America's Fortune 500?

The Washington based Heritage Foundation has come up with 40 independent federal agencies ripe for the cutting block at a savings of $2 billion a year. Included among them are: the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (PBS), the Legal Services Corp., the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Other independent agencies you've never heard of, but your paycheck has, that should be eliminated are: the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation, the Appalachian Regional Commission, the Commission on National Community Service and the State Justice Institute.

Liberals protest, asking: How can PBS and the educational programs it airs exist without handouts? As for their existence argument, Bell Atlantic recently offered to buy PBS outright. Programming such as The Arts and Entertainment Network, The Learning Channel, The Discovery Channel and National Empowerment Television gives lie to claims that educational/cultural shows require taxpayer subsidies. The people at PBS simply want the luxury of reduced accountability and the right to live at the expense of taxpayers.

Congress can cut much more spending and enhance productivity by selling government albatrosses such as the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Power Marketing Administration, Amtrak and billions of dollars' worth of government real estate holdings. The U.S. Postal Service ought to privatized simply by giving all of its assets to its employees.

Republicans would be on far greater moral, persuasive and principled footing if their version of welfare reform included government corporate handouts. Contrary to Labor Secretary Robert Reich's claim, allowing corporations to keep more of their earnings through tax cuts is not corporate welfare. Giveaways are.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Sunday, April 2, the 92nd day of 1995. There are 273 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 2, 1792, Congress passed the Coinage Act, which authorized establishment of the U.S. Mint.

On this date:
In 1513, Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de Leon landed in Florida.
In 1834, Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, the sculptor who created the Statue of Liberty, was born in Colmar, France.

In 1860, the first Italian Parliament met at Turin.

In 1865, Confederate President Jefferson Davis and most of his Cabinet fled the Confederate capital of Richmond, Va.

In 1872, Samuel F.B. Morse, developer of the electric telegraph, died in New York.

In 1917, President Wilson asked Congress to declare war against Germany, saying, "The world must be made safe for democracy."

Politicians and American principles

Charley Reese

As I watched Rep. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) glare at the television cameras over a display of breakfast cereals while he complained about their manufacturers, I tried to imagine Daniel Webster, James Madison, Henry Clay or John Adams in a similar situation. I couldn't do it. Great American political figures have debated great issues like war and peace, slavery and emancipation, Western expansion, massive public works projects - but the price of breakfast cereal? No.

On the same day Schumer was performing, the Secretary of Transportation announced a big public relations program to remind people to watch out for trains when they cross the tracks.

Again, I tried to imagine past Cabinet officers announcing a federally subsidized public relations campaign to remind people to do what their parents and kindergarten teachers have told them - for example, watch out for trains on railroad tracks. Again, I couldn't imagine it.

Both cases are examples of the trivialization of government that is produced by men who presumably are ignorant of American history and the principles of American government, not to mention being devoid of common sense.

But it is a serious problem because it confuses people as to the true nature of government. Government is not the wipe-your-nose, change-your-diaper, fix-your-problems nanny one would think from listening to these fools talk.

No, government is an exceedingly dangerous instrument. George Washington, one of the wisest of men, defined it properly when he said, "Government is not reason, it is not eloquence - it is force! Like fire, it is a dangerous servant and a fearful master; never for a moment should it be left to irresponsible action."

Dangerous and fearful - quite a different characterization than the warm, snugly, I-feel-your-pain heifer-dust description routinely served up by modern politicians. George Washington, though, is 100 percent correct.

Our century has been the century of government butchers. Governments in the past 95 years have slaughtered more millions than all the tyrants in human history. Governments have wreaked death, pain and suffering on a scale beyond the comprehension of a Genghis Khan or an Attila the Hun.

Right now in the United States the one institution that can legally deprive you of liberty, confiscate your property, impoverish your family, pry into your private affairs, invade your home and kill you is the government. Government can be a servant, but like Washington said, even at best it is a dangerous servant.

All around us we have examples of the tragic consequences of government being left to "irresponsible action": Children (among others) burned to death in Waco, Texas, because of a bungled attempt to serve a search warrant; cruel loss of jobs because of trade policies; innocents murdered by men who should have been kept behind bars but were released instead; the erosion of our currency; the accumulation of massive public debt; the creation of massive trade deficits; the strangulation of business by regulation. You can make a long list of the miseries inflicted on the American people by the irresponsible actions of government.

To be a true political conservative is not to lack compassion but simply to recognize the awful danger of government power; to be extremely wary of using government for anything but the most essential tasks; and, even then, to carefully limit its power. To be a true political conservative is to be constantly watchful for irresponsible actions; to keep in mind that government is not benign or compassionate or reasonable but a pure, institutionalized force.

The horror of the Holocaust was not a product of the malice of a few Nazis. It was the product of modern government bureaucracies which, once set in motion, efficiently do on a massive scale whatever - good or evil - they are instructed to do.

Suicide is being led by the wrong faction

R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr.

What makes the rising incidence of suicide in this country so objectionable is that it is being led by the wrong people: teenagers. My young friends, you have not seen enough life to undertake this particularly irreversible endeavor. Stick around, life gets amusing. The Americans who should be considering happy dispatch are those who have done so much to discredit the public life of the nation. Scores populate the Clinton administration. Scores more are in the media. Yet, suicide is best committed over questions of honor and repute. In American public life, at least here in Washington and in our cultural capital, New York, honor matters not at all and repute is a question of one's "image." A public-relations guru can be hired and one's good name restored - or at least made interesting and fit for an appearance on Larry King Live.

Consider the sudden appointment of an independent counsel to look into the question of whether Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros deceived the FBI about payments made to his former mistress. What is such a person doing at the highest levels of American public life anyway? And is our legal system encouraging such odious payments? If it is, and I think it is, we are being returned to the moral condition of 18th century Sicily - and not by plague or famine but by trial lawyers.

Apparently, the incoming Clinton administration knew all about Cisneros' ethical problems and appointed him anyway. Well, what about Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown? We all await word from the Justice Department as to whether he will be the target of an independent counsel owing to his past business dealings with one Noland Hill. Again, the question is whether he filed false or misleading financial reports. And what about Patsy Thomasson? She holds a critical position in the White House, but before she entered Washington's circles of influence, she was a top aide back in Arkansas to convicted drug dispenser Dan Lasater.

The Clinton administration came to office promising, in typical Clintonian rodomontade, the highest ethical standards in American history. The above mentioned characters all passed muster with the Clinton transition team that vetted them. When the team, led by the Hon. Warren Christopher, encountered damaging reviews from the FBI, its ethics experts turned to such moral paragons as Webb Hubbell. Time and again, Hubbell favored proceeding with the boss's nominee. Hubbell currently awaits sentencing on charges of defrauding the government and former clients back in Arkansas. He is in the delicate position of plea bargaining, as are, or will be, many other Clinton backers and appointees.

But let us not place the blame on the woebegone figure of Hubbell. Late last month, I pointed to eleven Clinton administration officials who face sentencing, indictment, grand juries or the probes of independent counsels. Some have resigned; more will. Right now, two Clinton cabinet members are awaiting word as to whether they will face independent counsels. One former cabinet member is under investigation from an appointed independent counsel. And now, Cisneros' day has come. This moral contagion that afflicts the government goes beyond individual character lapses or faulty judgments. It is a matter of cultural values. The incoming congeries of 1960s liberals around the Clintons live by a double standard, stringent for those Americans engaged in commerce or calling themselves conservative and lax for those who pay lip service to race politics.

What blinds them to the chances they have taken with the law is a colossal arrogance. They simply do not see how they could be capable of stupidity or corruption. Their Noble Causes are too irrefragable. One sees this arrogance not only among the liberals in government but also among many liberals in the media. The other day, Rick Bragg, reporting on Page One of The New York Times about George Wallace's putative repentance for his years as a racist and segregationist, made this stupendously false statement: "But (Wallace's) old words and views echo today on the lips of conservative politicians and others." There is no truth to that statement, but the bigot swept on: Civil-rights marchers hear "modern-day leaders blame blacks, because of crime and welfare, for what is wrong with America." There is no truth to that statement either, but Bragg and his editors ran it anyway. Only the very arrogant would flaunt such corrupt values.

Letters to the editor

Cost was worth it

To the editor:
I'd like to address this to the taxpayers of Gray County.
I would like to express my gratitude for paying my way to testify against Henry Watkins Skinner during the punishment phase of the trial. John Mann, Jeanne Roper, Tracey Jennings, Bill McMinn, his staff and all of the law enforcement agents that represented the state acted in a most professional and courteous manner; no one could have represented Gray County better.

I was subpoenaed by the state to testify in the Henry Watkins Skinner trial. I flew to Fort Worth on Sunday, March 19, and I was to testify March 20. The district attorney's investigator met me at Love Field Sunday afternoon, and took me directly to the Clarion Motel, where the district attorney and his staff, along with witnesses for the state, were staying. The motel was sufficient, but certainly it was nothing fancy.

I had to stay two nights, as my testimony continued through Tuesday, March 21. I ate all but one meal at the motel, as did the district attorney and his staff. On Tuesday at lunch we walked to a shopping mall that was close to the Tarrant County Courthouse and ate at a salad/sandwich shop.

On the evening of my arrival, I went to a room that was used as an office for the district attorney and his assistant. Both interviewed me, and there were others waiting to be interviewed when I left their makeshift office at approximately 9 p.m. on Sunday. One lady was told to meet with the district attorney at 7:30 a.m. on Monday for an interview. After the first day in court, there was another witness that had arrived, and he was interviewed Monday night.

The prosecutor and his staff worked all the time I was there, whether it was a weekday or the weekend. I know this trial cost a lot, and I just wanted the citizens of Gray County to know that, in my opinion, the district attorney and his staff are to be commended on a job well done, and I know for a fact that they worked at keeping their costs down.

This was a costly trial, but please note that this was money well spent. Mr. Skinner cost the taxpayers thousands of dollars over a period of years passing in and out of our justice system. His medical, dental, food and housing bills were provided for him while he sat in jail and educated himself toward becoming a paralegal. This enabled him to work his way toward his ultimate goal — getting away with murder.

Mr. Mann needed only a small portion of the truth from Skinner's victims to prove to a jury of strangers that he was guilty of capital murder. Mann did an outstanding job. A sincere thanks to John Mann for allowing me to testify.

Mr. Skinner burglarized many homes and terrorized many lives. My life will never be the same. I thank God and Gray County that justice was served, and that after seven years of living in fear, I fear Hank Skinner no more.

Thanks for the vote

To the editor:
This letter is written in grateful appreciation to four P.I.S.D. School Board members who chose to take a stand against the tide and send a message to Austin and the TEA that our district expects good quality materials for our teachers to use, and not materials that they must sift through in order to pick out the few good things.

Board members James Frugé, Pat Kennedy, Jim Baker and Chris Perez are to be commended for their commitment to obtaining quality materials for our teachers to use in teaching our children. These board members voted not to accept the Glencoe health textbook. My sincere thanks to each of you and to the teachers who continue to try to teach even though they do not always have adequate materials offered to them by the state.

I feel compelled to say that this was never an issue of trust in my mind. It is the fact that I am sincere in my efforts to force the TEA to provide you with good materials with which to do your job.

Grateful for GED

To the editor:
I would like to take this time to express my thanks and gratitude of the Windham School System at the Jordan Unit at Pampa. I am an inmate and I am over 40 years of age. Now with the help and assistance of Mr. Ferguson, Mr. Ringo and most of all, Mrs. Thomas, I have received my G.E.D. I am convinced that without the encouragement and determination of Mrs. Thomas, I would never have stuck with it to receive my G.E.D.

I would also like to thank Mr. G. Sims and Mr. Mike Frazier for their assistance with the Windham Vocational School.

My special thanks go to all these people who have helped me improve my life.

Economy grows at booming 5.1 percent rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at a booming annual rate of 5.1 percent in the fourth quarter last year, a pace that private economists estimate has slowed dramatically in the first three months of 1995.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that the surprisingly robust fourth-quarter increase in gross domestic product — the fastest quarterly growth since the end of 1993 — helped push the economy to its strongest year in a decade.

Financial markets plunged in early trading. But analysts said the tailspin was due more to the falling U.S. dollar than the GDP report. The Dow Jones industrial average was off nearly 34 points by mid-morning.

Analysts said the fourth quarter GDP surge has only minimal bearing on the current state of the economy.

"The basic message is that the economy went out of 1994 with a whoosh," said economist Robert Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "That is of course behind us. The economy seems to have slid out of the fast lane as soon as the page was turned, with a rather dramatic downshifting."

In another report, the Commerce Department said orders to U.S. factories fell 0.2 percent in February, the first decline in four months.

The pace of growth was even over the last 14 months is having a pronounced impact that will slow expansion to about half the pace of the last quarter of 1994.

GDP increased 4.1 percent for all of last year. The last time growth was more rapid was in 1984 when the economy surged 6.2 percent during the final year of President Reagan's first term in office.

The economy increased 3.1 percent in 1993.

Despite the potent fourth-quarter expansion, inflation remained well under control.

One measure of inflation tied to GDP was revised upward slightly to show a gain of 2.6 percent, instead of a previous 2.5 percent estimate for the October-December quarter. The same index rose 3.5 percent in the third quarter.

The Federal Reserve would like to see the economy growing about 2.5 percent.

The Fed has doubled a benchmark short-term interest rate, from 3 percent to 6 percent, since February 1994. The last boost was on Feb. 1.

The Commerce Department also reported Friday that after-tax corporate profits of U.S. corporations rose 2.5 percent in the fourth quarter, unchanged from the third quarter. Profits jumped 7.3 percent in the third quarter.

more rapid than the government reported a month ago when it estimated that GDP, which measures the output of all goods and services produced in the United States, surged 4.6 percent in the last three months of 1994.

Friday's revised figures were attributed largely to increased sales of aircraft and heavy-duty trucks and higher net exports. The export figure was adjusted because imports were revised downward by $2.4 billion, the Commerce Department said.

The revisions caught analysts by surprise. Most had predicted that the rate of growth would be unchanged from the earlier estimate.

Minding your own Business

Learning to delegate

The best leader is the one who has sense enough to pick good men to do what he wants done, and the self-restraint to keep from meddling with them while they do it.

- Theodore Roosevelt

A friend once told me that nothing is impossible provided you don't have to do it yourself. This may be true, but sometimes it's hard to find other folks just to do the possible.

Over the years, I've worked with many highly motivated business owners and managers. I've only met a few who would admit they were very good at delegating. More often than not, these highly competent and very self-confident people have difficulty in giving authority to others.

That is exactly what delegation is: Empowering others to do certain tasks or accomplish specific results. While it is difficult to do, there are definite advantages in learning how to delegate effectively.

Benefits of delegating

One of the key benefits of delegation is that it frees up more time for you. As the delegator, you can use this time to plan, think or do other work.

Another advantage is that a team can accomplish more work than you can produce alone. The total output now equals what you - the delegator - can manage, not just what you can do by yourself.

Better, happier employees is another benefit. When you spread responsibility, co-workers are more likely to feel as if they are part of your team. They also have opportunities to build skills, develop creative solutions and gain knowledge.

Finally, delegation can improve communication between you and your employees. Good delegation will improve dialogue and keep open direct lines of communication.

How to delegate

Though it is easier to write about than do, delegation includes three basic steps. First, you must know the person to whom you are delegating the task or work.

When you know their strengths, weaknesses, skills and experience, you can pass responsibilities that will be appropriate. You should also take personality types into consideration.

Second, you should be specific in determining the tasks and making assignments. Frequently, workers botch or mishandle tasks because the instructions were unclear. Some workers may be quite comfortable with minimal instructions, while others require very detailed directions. In most cases, it is best to err on the side of too much information rather than too little.

Finally, monitor progress and results. Praise positive progress and achievement. Gently coach and redirect efforts that are not in keeping with the desired outcome.

I want to add a few thoughts just for you beginning delegators. Please be patient. You must expect some mistakes and problems. We learned our skills by doing. In doing, we made our share of mistakes. We still do. Prepare yourself for some setbacks. It takes time to develop needed skills.

Though it is difficult, don't jump in and do the work just because you can do it better or faster. Coach your employees gently. Go over the routine again, then turn them loose. Gradually, they will grow and become more confident as they build skills and gain knowledge.

Don't make the mistake of believing there is only one way to do any task. Allow your employees the flexibility to do the work their own way. Stay focused on the end result. You may find there is a better, faster and more effective way to accomplish the work.

Finally, ask members of your team questions like: "How can we improve this operation next time?" "Did we learn anything new?" "What would you suggest we do differently?" Then listen and learn.

Developing good delegation skills is a win-win situation. Start turning loose some responsibility today.

Holly Hoganson shows her certificate for completing a workshop toward her neuromuscular therapy certification.

Hoganson attends workshop on neuromuscular therapy

Holly Hoganson, a massage therapist at Therassage Bodywork Professionals in Pampa, recently completed a workshop in neuromuscular therapy.

Hoganson, a 1994 graduate of the Austin School of Massage Therapy, attended an 18-hour advanced training workshop for neuromuscular therapy in Lubbock on March 17-19 as part of her post graduate training. The workshop is one of a four-part series in the neuromuscular therapy certification program, which consists of a total of an additional 300 hours.

Her training in Lubbock focused on low back pain and spinal biomechanics. She learned hands-on techniques to alleviate chronic low back pain. Some of the techniques involve myofascial release, trigger point technique, range of motion, stretching, structural release and re-education of the muscles.

Neuromuscular therapy is a specialized practice of massage therapy which focuses on pain relief and injury rehabilitation.

Having a different goal than that of the standard relaxation massage, neuromuscular therapy, or injury rehabilitation therapy, deals with the assessing of the client, finding the cause of the pain and then addressing the problem with the modalities needed. This approach gives the client a much quicker result to alleviate the pain, Hoganson said.

After graduating from the Austin School of Massage, Hoganson completed a 300-hour course study in Swedish massage and received her license to practice massage therapy in February 1995.

Tax break planned for chipmakers by Austin, Travis County officials

AUSTIN (AP) - In an effort to expand Central Texas' growing high-tech industry, Austin and Travis County officials have unveiled a proposal that would give computer chipmakers a tax break if they locate to the area.

The plan comes as Chamber of Commerce officials say five semiconductor companies are considering Austin as a site for a plant.

"If we can get (companies) here and tax them fully, I'd just as soon have it that way. But we can't," said Travis County Judge Bill Aleshire.

The proposal must be approved by the Austin City Council and the Travis County Commissioners Court.

Under the plan, companies could receive a property tax break if it invests at least $250,000 in capital for every job it creates. The tax abatement would be for 40 percent of the value of the plant for 10 years.

The companies could get an additional 10 to 15 percent exemption by hiring Austin-area workers from a proposed job-training program.

Companies looking to expand already existing plants also could qualify for a tax break.

Reynolds Recycling reports Texans recycled 35 million lbs. of aluminum

AMARILLO - Texans recycled more than 35 million pounds of aluminum with Reynolds Recycling Company last year, contributing more than $9.8 million in new money to the state economy.

"Since aluminum recycling generates cash from something that would otherwise be thrown away, we refer to it as 'new money' for the local economy," said Charles Rayford, Reynolds recycling center manager. "Aluminum continues to hold the highest value of any commonly recycled material, and people are attracted to aluminum recycling because it provides more money for their recycling effort."

The total pounds recycled includes more than 971 million aluminum beverage cans and 2.8 million pounds of non-can aluminum.

Reynolds recycles all types of aluminum products such as siding, gutters, auto parts, door frames and lawn chairs, in addition to aluminum beverage cans. The company is now encouraging consumers to recycle their foil products as well.

Popular Tejano singer Selena killed in Corpus Christi motel on Friday

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — She had it made. With adoring fans, a supportive family, a sexy stage act, a distinctly emotional voice and a Grammy on her shelf before her 23rd birthday, Selena was THE star of the emerging Tejano music scene.

As she prepared her first release in English, industry watchers pegged Selena as the Mexican-American singer who would crash into mainstream pop and, just maybe, international superstardom.

How it all ended at a budget motel with gunshots — allegedly fired by the founder of her fan club — is a tragedy that people who knew her cannot believe and children who idolized her cannot fathom.

"That's the problem with young people. They trust too much," said Selena's father and manager, Abraham Quintanilla. "They just think that there's no bad people out there who can hurt them."

Quintanilla said he had recovered some paperwork in the past few days proving "beyond a shadow of a doubt" that Yolanda Saldivar, a 34-year-old who also ran the San Antonio boutique in Selena's growing music and retail empire, was skimming money from the fan club she founded.

"The reason Selena was at the hotel room was to terminate her (Ms. Saldivar's) employment, and we believe that's the motive for the shooting," said Ken Bung, assistant police chief.

Selena was shot once in the back with a .38-caliber revolver as she was leaving Room 158, severing a main artery. The 23-year-old star fled to the lobby but died at a hospital an hour later.

"I never thought it would get to this extreme," said Quintanilla, speaking softly and slowly outside his home Saturday morning. "I kind of felt that she was obsessed with Selena. When we presented her with all the proof that she was embezzling money, she just lost it, I guess."

"I guess she felt that she was cornered." Police said Ms. Saldivar locked herself in a red pickup in the parking lot and held a SWAT team at bay for nine hours by holding a gun to her head and threatening to kill herself.

With TV crews and hundreds of Selena fans looking on, a sobbing Saldivar finally edged away from the truck and, in tiny steps, surrendered herself to police late Friday.

Police charged her with murder and Municipal Court Judge Charles Vanaman set bond Saturday morning at $100,000, according to Lt. Mike McKenzie at the Nueces County Jail.

Selena Quintanilla Perez, 23, straddled two cultures. Like many Mexican-Americans growing up in Texas, she understood Spanish but spoke mainly English.

Simmering in that cultural niche is Tejano music — a mixture of Mexican ranchera and German polka, with pop, country and Caribbean influences thrown in.

Although largely unknown to the mainstream U.S. market, Selena's passionate soprano and spotless image carried her band

Selena y Los Dinos to the top of Tejano.

"Selena Live!" earned her a 1993 Grammy for best Mexican-American album and Amor Prohibido (Forbidden Love) earned a 1994 Grammy nomination and sold more than 400,000 in the United States alone.

She took female-entertainer of the year, female vocalist of the year, best record of the year, best album and best Tejano crossover at the recent Tejano Music Awards.

"To see a Tejano artist go to that height was beyond anybody's expectations," said Carlos Lopez, owner of a bilingual Corpus Christi radio station that grew largely parallel to Selena's career.

"She was a role model for children," Lopez said. "She was the one who really opened the door for many other musicians to be accepted."

Tagged often as a Latina Madonna, Selena wore skimpy black outfits and strutted suggestively on stage. But friends describe her as deeply family-oriented. Her father — a member of the original Los Dinos band decades ago — cast protective discipline over his sons and daughters, friends say.

Selena married her guitarist, Chris Perez, and sang songs written by her brother and bassist, Abraham Quintanilla III. Her sister Suzette played drums.

Randy Caballero, a 27-year-old keyboardist who toured with La Mafia in the late 1980s when Selena opened for the Houston-based Tejano group, said Selena took her success in stride.

"Selena was just the nicest person that you'd ever want to meet," Caballero said. But he added that she was driven and methodical about crossing over into a wider audience.

Tejano star Selena, left, watches as Yolanda Saldivar speaks to crowd at a post Tejano Music Awards party in San Antonio in 1994. Saldivar is accused of shooting Selena to death in a Corpus Christi motel room on Friday.

Corn producers object to loosening of fuel standards

From Staff and AP reports

DIMITT — The Texas Corn Producers want a bill dealing with the state's use of alternative fuel amended to include ethanol. The House has tentatively approved a bill that environmental activists contend would undermine a state program requiring the use of alternative fuels to help reduce pollution. The measure, approved with a voice vote on Wednesday, was passed in the Senate earlier this month. It faces final House approval before it can go to Gov. George W. Bush for consideration. At issue is the Texas Alternative Fuels Program, which requires certain state agencies, local mass transit authorities and school districts to convert specified percentages of their fleet vehicles to run on natural gas or other approved alternative fuels.

"We feel an amendment needs to be made to include ethanol," Lois Wales, with the Panhandle-based corn producers board, said Friday. The program includes time periods by which the entities must convert their fleets. The plan affects about 100 school districts, state agencies with more than 15 vehicles and the cities of Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Austin, El Paso, Fort Worth, Corpus Christi, Laredo and Port Arthur. The bill by Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, would eliminate the list of approved alternative fuels and allow any fuels to be used that meet federal clean air standards. Stiles said that would include vehicles that run on reformulated gas and low-sulphur diesel. "We don't feel low-sulphur diesel should be included," Wales said. "We really think the oil industry is playing games again."

The bill also would extend the time periods for compliance. Stiles said the measure would provide greater flexibility to the entities involved in the program while saving them money. But opponents of the bill said reformulated-gas and diesel fuels do not go as far in helping reduce pollution as natural gas and other alternative fuels. "The idea of having diesel on a list of alternative fuels is patently absurd," said Ken Kramer, state director of the Sierra Club. "Diesel is certainly not a cleaner-burning fuel." Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, unsuccessfully tried to kill the bill with an amendment that would have deleted all of the new standards. "Why should taxpayers of this state subsidize the purchase and operation of vehicles that spew out this deadly diesel exhaust into the air?" Ms. Thompson said.

"If we're going to be serious about the environment, why are we doing this? We're going to be diverting back to a very polluted system," she said. "Texas is one of the most polluted states, and we need to get on with cleaning it up," Wales said. Stiles said the bill also would help cities that have exceeded federal environmental standards more quickly meet requirements to reduce pollution. Those areas are Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, Beaumont-Port Arthur and El Paso. However, Kramer said the bill actually would hinder those cities' efforts, particularly because required vehicle emissions tests in those areas already have been put on hold. "You're cutting out another prong in the effort to try to reduce emissions in those non-attainment areas, especially with vehicle emissions testing up in the air," he said.

Students at various local schools were given instruction on good oral hygiene as part of Pampa Altrusa International Inc.'s toothbrushing project. A dental hygienist spoke to the children, and later the students went to the restrooms to brush their teeth. The school nurse later checked them for cavities. Man convicted in deadly mail bombings case

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A man who believed his relationship with his girlfriend was threatened by her family was convicted of killing three of her relatives and two bystanders with mail bombs. After 31 1/2 weeks of testimony, a federal jury took just three hours on Friday to convict Michael Stevens of 16 charges, including sending explosives with intent to kill. The jury recommended Stevens receive life in prison without parole when he is sentenced June 16. "It's not the same as bringing them back. That's what I wish we really could do," Brenda Chevere's half-sister, Lucille Kemp, said after the verdict. Prosecutors said Stevens, who stood trial in 1987 for running a coupon advertising scam, plotted at least six months in 1993 "to pull off his greatest scam" — wipe out Chevere's relatives and lay the blame on an alcoholic lackey, Earl Figley. Stevens, 54, believed Chevere's family was trying to break up their relationship, and was afraid

Chevere would vanish with their 2-year-old son, prosecutors said. Six shrapnel-encased booby-trap bombs were delivered by mail, private courier and taxi to Chevere's relatives on the evening of Dec. 28, 1993. Four exploded. Chevere's mother, sister, and stepfather were killed within an hour of each other in Rochester and the Buffalo region. Two bystanders were killed, and three other people were injured, two seriously. Kemp was spared when a wire attached to a detonator snapped.

State GOP commends Alan Keyes

AUSTIN (AP) — Christian conservatives in the state sent a message Saturday to Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, that their support for his presidential bid was insecure at best. Stressing a conservative social platform during the State Republican Executive Committee's quarterly meeting, the religious right of the party pushed through a resolution commending the "message of values and character" of newly announced Republican presidential candidate Alan Keyes.

The resolution came on the heels of Keyes' Friday night speech to the group, during which the Baltimore radio talk show host spoke against abortion and welfare and for a school voucher system and tax cuts. Keyes, the first black candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in modern times, was assistant secretary of state in the Reagan administration. "This is a great victory for Alan Keyes to come out of the Texas Republican Party, Phil Gramm's home state, with such a strong resolution," said Bob Johnson, a state parliamentarian for the party. "Gramm really can see this as an extremely credible threat because his base of support is being captured now by this long-shot candidate," Johnson said. He added that Keyes is truer than Gramm to the Republican platform, which in part blames the disintegration of families for the growing problems with crime, education, welfare and child neglect. Gramm has a strong anti-abortion voting record in the U.S. Senate, but he recently announced that he would not endorse a constitutional amendment banning abortions if he were elected president in 1996. The announcement angered many Christian conservatives. Originally, Johnson and his supporters wanted the committee to vote on a resolution fully endorsing Keyes as the Republican Party's presidential nominee, but Johnson admitted that was "premature." Committee Chairman Tom Pauken acknowledged that Keyes was expressing important issues in his campaign, but he said Texas Republicans still prefer Gramm as their candidate for the nation's highest elected office.

United Way issues report on agency fund distribution

With the 1994 Pampa United Way fund-raising drive exceeding its $300,000 campaign goal, the Budget Allocations Committee met recently to divide the money up among the 16 local and area service agencies and organizations. Pampa Meals on Wheels, $19,000, 6 percent; Pampa Sheltered Workshop, $14,550, 5 percent; Pastoral Counseling Center, $3,000, 1 percent; The Salvation Army, $30,000, 10 percent; Southside Senior Citizens Center, $11,000, 4 percent; Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority, $8,000, 3 percent; Girl Scouts, Texas Plains Council, $20,000, 7 percent; and Tralee Crisis Center, $21,000, 7 percent. In addition, United Way of America will receive $2,264, 0.75 percent, and United Way of Texas, $1,000, 0.33 percent. Uncollectable pledges total approximately $14,000, or 0.5 percent, and campaign expenses total $32,915, or 11 percent. Totals of the approved distributions are $296,029, or approximately 100 percent of the funds. Serving as Pampa United Way Board members for 1994 were Bob Eskridge, Rey Cardenas, Jack Bailey, Curt Beck, Jim Anderson, Jack McCavit, David Cory, Porter Briggs, Kim Hill, Joe Kyle Reeve, Jeff Andrews, Bob Marx, Bill O'Brien, Randy Watson and Marilyn McClure. Serving as 1994 officers were Jeff Andrews, president; Joe Kyle Reeve, vice president; and David Cory, secretary-treasurer.

An entry fee of $25 is required. A player must be at least 13 years old to play.

BASEBALL

ARLINGTON (AP) — Regardless of who wins replacement baseball games, Texas Rangers president Tom Schieffer has been satisfied ever since he saw the look on the players' faces when they arrived at The Ballpark in Arlington.

"It was very touching. This means a lot to them," he said. "They have given as much as anyone" in the strike.

"I hope they get the chance to play," Schieffer said.

They did Friday night in a 3-2 loss to the Houston Astros, who were completing their exhibition season. The replacement Rangers beat the Chicago Cubs 6-5 after 12 innings Saturday.

"I tip my hat to them," Astros general manager Bob Watson said of the replacements. "They've been working hard trying to get ready for a season. It's tough for them to be in the middle of all this."

Life was also uncertain for major leaguers, even after announcing an end to their strike Friday. A federal judge in New York ruled against the owners after nearly eight months of no baseball and then replacement baseball.

HOUSTON (AP) — The replacement Houston Astros returned to the Astrodome for a workout on Saturday — possibly for the last time.

They were to play an exhibition game at the University of Houston today, the day major league owners decide whether they'll start the season with replacements. However, that game has been canceled.

The Astros are scheduled to open the season in the Astrodome on Tuesday against the San Francisco Giants.

But today could be a tough day for the replacements.

"I'll make adjustments but it's got to be frustrating for these kids to be only a day away from opening the major league season and then have it pulled away," Astros manager Terry Collins said.

Collins won't think about anything past Sunday.

"Until we know it's over we're going to go on just as if nothing has changed," Collins said. "If Bob (general manager Watson) calls and tells me something different, we'll act accordingly."

TENNIS

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-seeded Jason Stoltenberg lasted one more day than expected, but he couldn't make that two.

After making an amazing quarterfinal comeback Friday night, rallying from a 5-love deficit in the third against unseeded Grant Doyle, Stoltenberg had used up his second chances.

On Saturday, he fought off two match points, but this time got no help from his opponent as third-seeded Richard Fromberg drilled a backhand winner to take the semifinal match, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) at the River Oaks International Saturday.

Fromberg will face unseeded Mikael Tillstrom in Sunday's final. Tillstrom upset No. 2 seed Karel Novacek, 6-3, 6-3.

Fromberg took a 5-2 lead in the tiebreak before Stoltenberg mounted his comeback. Fromberg had two serves at match point, but double-faulted the first and drilled a volley into the net on the second to make it 6-5. He finally converted with a winner on Stoltenberg's serve.

"I nearly stuffed up the tiebreak," he said. "But it was nice to hit a winner on the last shot. I didn't feel I was returning his serve too well. I was struggling on my return and he was hitting a lot of balls close to the line."

Tillstrom, who knocked off Jimmy Connors in the quarterfinals with his overpowering serve, continued the trend. Despite facing a solid serve returner in Novacek, Tillstrom lost only 13 points on his serve in the two-set match. His unusual serve where he catches the ball early, then drills it low across the net, impressed Novacek, as did his ball placement.

"If he serves aces, there's not much you can do," Novacek said. "A lot of them were right on the line and that speeds up the ball a lot. There were also some bad bounces."

GOLF

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Davis Love III — fueled by two eagles and three birdies — made a third-round move Saturday at the Freeport McMoran Classic in hopes of winning a trip to The Masters.

Despite a bogey on the 14th hole Saturday, Love was in the clubhouse with a one-stroke lead in the rain-delayed tournament. He was 13-under-par after a 66.

"I got my confidence going with my putter and didn't worry about it," he said. "I wished we could have kept going. I was hitting it real good."

Steve Jones was a shot back when play was called because of darkness. Jones is coming back after being sidelined for almost three years with injuries, including ligament damage to two fingers in his right hand that forces him to use a reverse, overlap grip.

OSU comes up short against UCLA

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — UCLA's history and mystique meant nothing to Oklahoma State.

For all their storied past and vaunted speed, the big-city Bruins struggled mightily before scoring the last 12 points of the game to beat the Cowboys from little Stillwater, Okla., 74-61 Saturday and reach the NCAA championship game.

UCLA won 10 national titles from 1964 to 1975 during the coaching reign of John Wooden, but that seemed to mean precious little to Oklahoma State, playing in its first Final Four since 1951.

With 7-footer Bryant "Big Country" Reeves scoring 25 points and hauling down nine rebounds, the Cowboys threatened to win this game until UCLA went on its closing run.

UCLA, led by Tyus Edney's 21 points, Charles O'Bannon's 19 and Ed O'Bannon's 15, led only 64-61 when Oklahoma State's Randy Rutherford threw up an airball on a 3-point attempt with 1:53 left.

The Bruins, who had trailed by three points early in the second half and had seen an eight-point lead virtually vanish after that, finally had the breathing room they needed.

They scored the next 10 points on free throws to produce the final score.

If UCLA didn't control Reeves it at least contained him, limiting his damage to just seven points and four rebounds in the second half.

Reeves, a 292-pounder who shattered a backboard in practice Friday, threw his weight around underneath the boards against UCLA as he scored 18 points and grabbed six rebounds in the 37-37 first half.

Reeves scored the Cowboys' last six points of the half and was perfect from the free-throw line in eight attempts. His rebounding led Oklahoma State to a 19-8 advantage on the boards in the half.

UCLA sought to run from the start and succeeded in setting the tempo early, building a 20-11 lead in the first 6 1/2 minutes after an 11-0 run. That burst featured two high-arching 3-pointers by Ed O'Bannon, a three-point play by him, and a steal he made that led to a spinning, backward layup by Edney.

Ed O'Bannon wound up leading UCLA in the half with 11 points and four steals, while Edney scored 10 and handed out five assists.

Yet just as the Bruins seemed in control, Oklahoma

State methodically worked its way back, not so much slowing the ball down as working it inside repeatedly to Reeves. The Bruins bounced off "Big Country," and he pumped in short jumpers and free throws to cut UCLA's lead to 24-23.

The Bruins, who had seven steals in the first half and scored 16 points after turnovers, then went on another quick 7-0 tear for a 31-23 lead. But a pair of 3-pointers by Andre Owens and Terry Collins, plus the muscle of Reeves, sent the Cowboys into the second half with a tie and a real sense they could beat the No. 1 team.

Harvester third sacker Rene Armendariz digs a throw out of the dirt as Hereford's Ronald Torres slides safely into third base after a wild pitch. The Harvesters won, 1-0.

Harvesters nip Hereford, 1-0

PAMPA — Runs were hard to come by when Pampa and Hereford hooked up in a District 1-4A baseball clash Saturday at Harvester Field.

Fortunately, the only run scored was by Pampa as the Harvesters slipped by the Whitefaces, 1-0.

Pampa improved to 2-1 in the district standings and evened its overall record at 6-6. Hereford is 1-2 in district and 4-10 for the season.

Pampa junior Todd Finney bettered Hereford sophomore Eric Ambold in a classic pitching matchup that was highlighted by sparkling defensive plays from both teams. Both pitchers went the distance with Finney allowing just one hit in picking up his fourth win against just one loss.

The lone run came in the first inning when Luke Long led off with a single and came home two outs later when Bryan Martindale's groundball was misplayed by second baseman Armando Zambrano.

The Harvesters committed just one error, their first in the three district games, and senior catcher Hank Gindorf threw out three Hereford baserunners. Both teams turned a double play with Pampa's twin-killing ending the game in the seventh when Wade McPherson grounded back to Finney with a runner on first with one out.

"We're playing great defense and we're getting great pitching. We're hitting the ball, but I'd like to see more timely hitting. We left runners on second three times and a runner on third once. We need to get some clutch hits," said Pampa coach Dennis Doughty.

Pampa had seven hits off Ambold, who struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

Long had two hits in three times at bat while Gindorf had the game's only extra-base hit, a double in the sixth inning. Ross Watkins, Jamison Hancock, Rene Armendariz and Finney had one hit each.

The Harvesters travel to Borger to take on the Bulldogs at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. Borger lost to Dumas, 4-3, Saturday.

PAMPA — Pampa slipped by Hereford, 5-4, in a junior varsity game Saturday.

Blaine Northcutt was the winning pitcher while Ryan Schumacher picked up the save.

Duane King led Pampa's offense with two hits.

Coach Rod Davis said Augie Larsen and Clint Curtis ran the bases well for the Shockers. Ryan Davis had an outstanding game at catcher, Davis added.

Arkansas defeats North Carolina

SEATTLE (AP) — Another close finish, and Arkansas has a chance at another national championship.

The Razorbacks, who had won their first four games in the NCAA tournament by a total of 15 points, beat North Carolina 75-68 Saturday and will have a chance to repeat only after surviving a last-minute scare that saw their lead cut to one point.

UCLA is the only team that could prevent Arkansas from joining Duke as the only repeat champions in the last 22 years. The Bruins, a team that made repeating an art form with seven straight ending in 1973, beat Oklahoma State 74-61 to advance to Monday night's final.

Arkansas got back in the title game behind a great second half by Coriiss Williamson, some great defense that held North Carolina to one field goal in the last 15:10 and a buzzer-beating 55-foot heave at halftime by Dwight Stewart.

Williamson, the MVP of last year's Final Four when the Razorbacks won their first title, was 9-for-12 from the field in the second half when he scored all but two of his 21 points.

North Carolina was 6-for-34 from the field in the second half and went 12:38 without a field goal at one stretch as the Razorbacks opened a 69-58 lead with 3:35 left. The Tar Heels weren't done.

Donald Williams, the Final Four MVP two years ago when North Carolina won it all, hit a 3-pointer to break the long dry spell and bring the Tar Heels within 69-63. Stewart had trouble connecting from closer in, missing consecutive front ends of 1-and-1s and North Carolina was able to close within 69-68 with 47 seconds left on three free throws and a dunk by Jerry Stackhouse.

Arkansas, which survived wild finishes in its first three tournament games, including two overtimes, got two free throws from Clint McDaniel with 27 seconds left. Williams missed a 3-pointer with nine seconds to play and McDaniel's two free throws with 7.5 seconds left and Williamson's layup at the buzzer accounted for the final margin.

North Carolina was making its 10th Final Four appearance under coach Dean Smith, and the Tar Heels have a 5-5 record in the semifinals. The 1993 title was his second, the other coming in 1982 on freshman Michael Jordan's famous jumper.

Lady Harvesters track team hit hard by injuries

BORGER — The Pampa Lady Harvesters, slowed by injuries, finished fourth in the Borger Relays Saturday.

Just plain bad luck also struck the Lady Harvesters when senior standout Mechelle Abbott was disqualified in the 300 hurdles when she hit the first hurdle. Abbott was unbeaten in three meets going into the Borger Relays.

Borger collected 124 points to win the relays, followed by Canyon with 113 points for second place. Sanford-Fritch was third with 109 points and Pampa fourth with 91.

Huskies, Lady Vols advance to women's basketball finals

By RON LESKO
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Too tall for Stanford on Saturday, No. 1 Connecticut gave the women's Final Four its marquee matchup: a championship-game rematch with No. 3 Tennessee.

Kara Wolters, the Huskies' 6-foot-7 center, dominated down low on her way to 31 points and nine rebounds, working flawlessly with 6-4 national player of the year Rebecca Lobo in an 87-60 victory over fourth-ranked Stanford.

The Huskies (34-0) advanced to their first-ever NCAA title game and will try to repeat their 77-66 January victory over then-No. 1 Tennessee, which also used a strong inside game to beat Georgia 73-51 in Saturday's first semifinal.

Scoring from 3-point range as well as in traffic, Lobo had 17 points and nine rebounds as Connecticut moved within one victory of just the second perfect season since the women's NCAA tournament began in 1982.

If the Huskies can beat the Lady Vols, they will join the 1986 Texas team as the only unbeaten women's NCAA champions.

Jamelle Elliott added to Connecticut's front line power, equaling her season high with 21 points.

But as awesome as the Huskies were inside, they were even better on defense. Connecticut held opponents to 31.4 percent shooting this season, the best in the nation, and was even better in the first half on its way to a 24-point halftime lead.

Stanford (30-3) shot just 22 percent in the first half and 31 percent for the game. Stanford's leading scorer, sophomore Kate Starbird, was scoreless until only 10 minutes remained in the game. She finished with just two points, 14 below her average.

Kristin Folk and Anita Kaplan led Stanford, one of the youngest teams in America, with 12 points apiece.

The 27-point defeat was the worst tournament loss for Stanford since its first-ever appearance, an 82-48 loss to Maryland in 1982. But with a roster that includes 11 freshmen and sophomores, Stanford has the potential to continue its impressive string of NCAA tournament performances.

Stuffing the ball into the heart of Stanford's zone defense from the start, the Huskies forced the ball to Lobo and Wolters. Stanford was powerless to stop it and never got its offense on track.

Wolters had nine points in the first 4:24. The Cardinal, meanwhile, scored just four points in the first 5:46 and were shut out in the last 5:27 of the half.

Wolters and Lobo stamped their mark on the game late in the first half.

Wolters, the tallest player in the Final Four, zipped an over-the-shoulder pass from the foul line to Lobo cutting for the basket. Her reverse layup pushed the lead to 20 for the first time, and Stanford didn't get closer than 17.

Knicks stop Mavericks' streak

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks have six games remaining at Madison Square Garden this season, and coach Pat Riley doesn't plan on losing any of them.

Keyed by Derek Harper, who had 17 points and six assists against the team with which he spent 10 seasons, the Knicks beat Dallas 101-90 on Friday night and stopped the Mavericks' six-game winning streak.

Riley spoke of his team's remaining 12-game schedule, and what the Knicks have to do to position themselves for the playoffs.

"It's simple ... win everything left at home and do a decent job on the road," he said. "I feel certain that we can do that and get the position we need, at least until the Eastern Conference finals."

New York is 1 1/2 games ahead of Indiana and four in front of Charlotte.

Dallas, which won just 13 games last season, is positioned for its own playoff run. The Mavericks are 2 1/2 games behind Denver and two behind Sacramento for the eighth and final berth in the Western Conference.

"People thought I was crazy at the start of the season when I said we'd win 35 games and be in contention for the playoffs," said rookie Jason Kidd, who scored 17 points and has been a big part in the Mavericks' 31-38 record.

"We've had a great turnaround and are 18 games better than last season. Both goals are in sight."

The Knicks made seven of eight 3-point attempts in the third quarter — while making only four of 15 from inside the arc — in taking a 77-58 lead.

Patrick Ewing had 18 points, 16 in the first half, to lead the Knicks, and reserve Hubert Davis chipped in with 14 points.

Davis' 3-pointer with 8:48 to play gave New York an 85-62 lead, its largest of the game.

"We had a lot of opportunities to shoot the ball because they were backing off and guarding our inside guys. It wasn't designed for us to take so many 3s, but when open shots present themselves you have to take them," Harper said.

Despite the loss, Dallas has won nine of its last 11 games.

"I said we'd either win a close one or get blown out by 20," Dallas coach Dick Motta said. "The Knicks were just a buzz-saw."

Tyson slips into Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It didn't take Mike Tyson long to return to the site of some of his greatest triumphs.

Tyson slipped into Las Vegas on Friday aboard a hotel-casino's private jet, his first trip outside Ohio since being released from an Indiana prison a week ago.

Tyson arrived aboard the MGM Grand hotel-casino's jet at a charter airport Friday afternoon and taken to the resort by a hotel limousine.

Tyson stayed at the hotel about an hour before leaving in a three-limousine convoy. He was accompanied by his promoter, Don King, who refused to answer any questions.

Security guards shoed off a reporter and a photographer as King, Tyson and Tyson's manager, John Home, climbed into a limousine and drove off to an undisclosed location.

Earlier, Tyson was greeted at the resort by Larry Woolf, MGM president and chief operating officer. Hotel officials declined comment, other than confirming that Tyson was staying at the resort.

The former heavyweight champion announced Thursday he had signed a six-figure deal with the hotel and also inked a pact with Showtime, which will show his fights and feature his commentary on other fights.

Test your knowledge of child abuse by asking yourself these few questions

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month, but the problem is year round. Preventing child abuse before it occurs is the only answer to stopping this community problem.

The best way to help parents or children in abusive situations is to know the facts. How much do you really know about child abuse? Here are some questions and answers that provide some insight:

Q: Many abused and neglected children become abusive and neglectful parents themselves. True or False?

A: True. Frequently, parents treat their child as they were treated themselves. Abuse and neglect tend to occur in successive generations as a result of a lack of parental role models and the absence of parenting skills and knowledge.

Q: Perpetrators who sexually abuse children are generally of low intelligence. True or False?

A: False. According to Goldman and Wheeler (1986), few abusers have inferior intelligence. In fact, most perpetrators often have average or above average intelligence quotients.

Q: In families with more than one child, only one youngster is likely to be the target of abuse. True or False?

A: True. Often a child who is perceived to be "special," "hard to manage," or "different," such as a handicapped child is singled out for abuse. The most vulnerable child in a family is generally the victim. However, many children are abused for no apparent reason.

Q: Sexual abuse and exploitation are generally a problem in lower income and social status groups. True or False?

A: False. This is a common misconception. Sexual abuse can occur in families of all social and economic levels.

Q: Professionals must produce hard evidence or data before contacting child protective services agencies. True or False?

A: Certain professionals such as teachers, health care professionals, and psychologists are required by law to report suspicions of abuse and neglect. State reporting laws usually contain language such as "reason to believe" or "reasonably suspects" that abuse and neglect may have occurred. Information is held in confidence and reporters according to statute, are immune from civil or criminal liability if they acted in good faith.

Q: Emotional abuse is the easiest form of abuse to detect. True or False?

A: False. Identifying a victim of emotional abuse is very difficult. Treatment is difficult because the abuse is subtle and cumulative. The effects of emotional abuse may not be apparent for several years. Behavior is often the best indicator of emotional maltreatment.

Child abuse will only be solved when individuals and the community realize that everyone has a role to play in preventing abuse. The ideas and information that follow can be used to help stop the cycle of abuse.

Help yourself as a parent by doing the following:

1. When you feel you are at the end of your rope, ask a neighbor to watch your child for half an hour.

2. To help reduce sibling rivalry, give each child your undivided attention for a few minutes each day.

3. Trade phone numbers with another parent. When you feel the need to talk to someone right away, give them a call.

4. Hugs, hugs, hugs. Give your children hugs and let them know that you think they are special and that you love them completely.

Other adults can help parents who have problems by:

1. Calling a parent and telling them something wonderful that their child has done.

2. Making a dinner salad or even dinner for the frazzled parent next door.

3. Taking the neighbor's child for a half-hour walk or trip to the playground.

4. Providing crayons or small games in your shop or business to entertain children.

For more information on how you can help prevent child abuse, call your Gray County Extension Office.

Food For Thought by

Danny Bainum

Smoked salmon and dill-flecked creme fraiche are a classic go-together. On bagels, of course - and even better served on chef Wolfgang Puck's giant potato pancake. Sprinkle with chives.

Once green beans are steamed or boiled 5 minutes, then drained and cooled, they're ready to be "improved" with olive oil or butter and garlic, basil and parsley and a couple of chopped anchovies.

Or serve them as salad, tossed with sauteed onion and walnuts and 1/2-inch-wide strips of radicchio in a mustard vinaigrette.

Leftover whipped cream? Don't throw it away. Spoon little mounds onto a baking sheet lined with waxed paper and freeze. When the mounds are firm, store in a plastic bag for an anytime treat.

You'll love yakitori chicken marinated in a teriyaki sauce of 1/4 cup each soy sauce and brown sugar, 1/2 tsp. ground ginger, 2 cloves of pressed garlic and 2 tsp. apricot jam. Alternate chicken with inch-long pieces of green onion on skewers and broil.

You'll love everything we serve at

Quick fix in the Kitchen

CHICAGO (AP) — Whole-kitchen renovation may be out of your budget reach, but replacing some key fixtures can give the room a boost, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

"Updating fixtures can be done relatively inexpensively and can do wonders for refreshing your decor," says David L. Weiner, executive director of the industry group.

Elizabeth Sutton, product manager for Kohler, says even just changing the color of an older sink can make a difference. "In our market tests, homeowners who have been given a new sink in a contemporary color have said that just changing the sink can freshen up the whole look of a kitchen."

A category called gourmet sinks offers other options, according to the bureau. They come in a variety of sizes, depths and finishes, and many have built-in drainboards, large bowls and restaurant-quality stainless steel. Some sinks feature two bowls of different depths — a 10-inch-deep bowl to accommodate large pots and a smaller 7-inch-deep bowl, for example.

"The most popular upgrade for kitchen sinks is moving to a deeper sink with more usable space," says Mike Lyons, group product manager for Eljer.

Just changing the faucet is another way to upgrade the equipment. New variations include gooseneck faucets for washing large items; pull-out spouts; and faucets in polished brass or with color coatings.

Then there are accessories, like cutting boards, wire rinse baskets and colanders designed for particular sink models. "An easy item to buy, accessories enhance the usability of a work station and can easily spruce up any sink," says Sutton.

Couple won't ratify mother's declaration of independence

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother, at 87, has many health problems. She complains constantly and frequently runs to the neighbors, begging them to let her spend the night. After frantic phone calls from the neighbors, my husband and his sister confer with their mother and offer suggestions as to her long-term care. But they give up after she insists that:

1. She can take care of herself.
2. She will not allow any stranger to stay in her home with her for fear he or she will rob her.
3. She flatly refuses to move in with her daughter because of the potential loss of her freedom, and...
4. She is not ready for a nursing home.

This leaves us reacting to emergencies from a distance (we live in another state), which is expensive and creates turmoil. My husband is disabled due to a serious heart condition, and the anxiety created by these events is taking its toll.

Abby, how do we convince this selfish woman she needs help and her neighbors should not be burdened continuously — and also that these repeated emergencies indicate that she must cooperate in the planning of her long-term care?

When faced by similar situations with my parents, I made plans for their care and implemented them in spite of their objections. But my husband and his sister are afraid to act against their mother's wishes, so we continue living with a sword over our heads. Is there a solution?

CONCERNED DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DAUGHTER-IN-LAW: Self-sufficient people do not run to the neighbors begging to spend the night. But from your description, your mother-in-law may not be so incompetent that she should be excluded from decisions that affect her.

Her choices are not limited to either a live-in companion or a nursing home. Facilities exist that offer only as much assistance as seniors need. And many communities (and private agencies) provide caregivers and case managers who visit the home, make assessments and provide referrals.

The local area agency on aging in your mother-in-law's place of residence is aware of community resources. Sectarian and non-sectarian family agencies can also provide help. And finally, the Department of Family Services in your own community has support groups for adult children who must deal with this very common problem. I urge your husband and his sister to get involved in one, because they are not alone.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the inspirational poem "It Couldn't Be Done" by Edgar A. Guest. Perhaps you might not have the sequel to that poem:

"They told him, by golly, it couldn't be done.

"With a smile, he started right to it.

"And he tackled the job that couldn't be done,

"And by golly, he couldn't do it."

Horoscope

Your Birthday

Monday, April 3, 1995

In the year ahead, you might experience two major improvements from your efforts to rearrange your life. The net results should be comforting.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you might have some rather clever and profitable ideas that should be utilized. However, be very careful to actually give commensurate value for what you offer. Major changes are ahead for Aries in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and a SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your material prospects look hopeful today, but your gains aren't apt to come through speculative endeavors. Try to adhere to a conservative format.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Associates will admire you more today if you show them you have the courage of your convictions. You must not endorse one thing and then go do another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful not to judge the motives of others before they have a chance to prove themselves today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Instead of just talking about certain things today, you're likely to back up your words with actions. This is commendable, but your measures might be ineffective.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friends will enjoy having you around today and you'll take pleasure in their company. However, be extremely careful not to wear out your welcome.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Stick to your original game plan today because, with time, your ideas might get worse instead of better. Hanging on to your first thoughts could rectify this.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In a situation where you have a vested interest, rely upon yourself today instead of upon the others involved, especially if something major needs changing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to be unduly influenced by your companions today if their standards aren't in accord with yours. Be your own person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you fail to keep pace with your duties and responsibilities today, there is a good chance you might have to contend with a logjam before the day is over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If your budget is a bit tight at this time, it might be wise to avoid extravagant friends. They might induce you to spend your money on something you shouldn't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can finalize an important arrangement to your satisfaction today if you exercise patience and determination. Know what you want and stick to your terms.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE SANCTITY OF THE PRIESTHOOD

BY MOSAIC LAW, THE ISRAELITES WERE COMPELLED TO PROTECT THE PRIESTHOOD FROM BODILY HARM AT ALL TIMES AND UNDER EVERY CIRCUMSTANCE BECAUSE THEIR OFFICE WAS SACRED. THIS BECAME A STRICT TRADITION. IT WAS SOMETHING NEVER TO BE QUESTIONED. ALL ACCEPTED IT AS AN UNBREAKABLE COMMAND. GENERATION AFTER GENERATION OBEYING THE INSTRUCTION. AFTER SO MANY YEARS OF BEING OBEYANT TO THIS LAW, IMAGINE THE CONSTERNATION, THEN, OF SAUL'S ISRAELITE SOLDIERS WHEN HE ORDERED THEM TO KILL THE PRIESTS BECAUSE THEY HAD HELPED DAVID ESCAPE FROM SAUL'S MURDEROUS INTENT. (1 SAM. 22:16,17)

HOW CAN WE SLAY THE ANOINTED PRIESTS OF THE LORD?!

HOW CAN WE SMITE THE PRIESTS OF THE LORD ALMIGHTY? WILL WE NOT THEN BE DESTROYED ALSO?!

... SAUL'S SOLDIERS CAN NOT TURN AGAINST THE PRIESTS OF THE LORD—THEY KNOW THAT IT WOULD MEAN THEIR OWN UNTIMELY END TO DO SO!

THE ISRAELITE SOLDIERS WERE ADAMANT! THEY WOULD NOT KILL THE PRIESTS AND SAUL WAS FORCED TO GET AN EDOMITE TO DO THE FOUL DEED! (1 SAM. 22:16)

Michael Crawford, who gained international fame as the lead in the musical 'The Phantom of the Opera,' checks himself in mirrors before a rehearsal for 'EFX,' a review prepared for Las Vegas.

After London, Broadway and L.A., Crawford now tackles Las Vegas

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Michael Crawford took only a moment to ponder the question.

After captivating London, Broadway and Los Angeles as the Phantom, why turn to Las Vegas for a new vehicle and venue?

"You couldn't do something as spectacular as this in New York," Crawford said, toying with a bowl of soup in an Italian restaurant, down a corridor from the $27 million, 1,700-seat Grand Theater at the $1 billion MGM Grand Hotel and Casino. "It's not possible. The finances are such that it wouldn't be possible. The same in London."

'People come here to be entertained. That's what, if you're an entertainer, you've been put on earth to do.'
— Crawford

Crawford, who gained international fame as the lead in The Phantom of the Opera, is in the final days of rehearsal for EFX, a $40 million sight-and-sound extravaganza built to showcase his talents.

The initials are show business jargon for special effects — and EFX takes that to the max with a surrealistic journey through time and space.

"I believe that going into the theater is like walking into a temple of dreams," Crawford said. "This is our temple of dreams."

Crawford is nursing a sore shoulder strained in one of the many stunts he does.

A 16-hour day that started with a visit to the doctor's office will end after an approaching 2 1/2-hour dress rehearsal, followed by cast and crew meetings.

The long-awaited production is expected to open to the public within a few days, possibly on a schedule of one show a night until remaining kinks are worked out. It would then go to the planned two shows a night.

EFX casts Crawford as five different characters. He starts and ends as "The Effects Master," and takes the audience through the world of magic with Camelot's Merlin, the world of laughter with circus impresario P.T. Barnum, the spirit world with Harry Houdini and the world of time with H.G. Wells.

"In Las Vegas there is so much money available," Crawford said of the MGM's multimillion-dollar investment. "If they're going to give some money to the arts, give it to me. I really want to play with it."

"It's still gambling," he said, his comments punctuated by an infectious laugh. "One just tries to shorten the odds."

"I can't believe we're here. I can't believe this is happening in my life. It is very flattering to be asked to front a show as big as this. And the audience that is available here is a performer's dream. People come here to be entertained. That's what, if you're an entertainer, you've been put on earth to do."

Larry Wolf, chairman of MGM Grand Hotel Inc., and Richard Sturm, senior vice president of marketing-entertainment for the hotel, pursued Crawford, who had made such a smash with the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical in London, New York and Los Angeles.

"EFX was written with Michael in mind," said Sturm.

The show was scheduled to open earlier this year, but has been pushed back several times because of its complex nature.

How complex?
— More than 100 computers are used to control the sets and illusions.

— Crawford sings, dances and clowns his way through the 100-minute production, but also draws hazardous duty such as opening and closing on a flying saucer darting 30-40 feet above the stage in banks of fog, or sliding on a wire from the ceiling of the three-story theater to the stage below.

— A fire-breathing dinosaur and a winged dragon 100-feet-wide engage in a fiery battle.

— A giant spaceship rumbles on the scene, shaking the theater and covering most of a stage that is two-thirds the size of a football field (196-feet-wide x 115-deep).

— Crawford replays some of the illusions that made Houdini famous as the world's greatest escape artist, including a dangerous water chamber number which still is being perfected.

Managed Medicaid: Disabled and their advocates are wary

By DENISE GAMINO
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — Last year, twin brothers known as "the Bubbas" were left without a voice when managed health care came into their young lives.

Four-year-old twins Cody and Dallas Sauseda from Victoria are autistic, and talking does not come naturally to them.

Last summer, when their father's employer switched to a managed health care plan, Cody and Dallas could say no more than a few words. The boys needed intensive, speech therapy, but the new health plan consistently denied the services.

The boys' parents found that they also lost their voice for a time after enrolling in the new health plan. For months, no one listened to pleas by Suzanne and Johnny Sauseda as they fought for speech therapy.

The Sausedas eventually prevailed, but the problems and obstacles they faced in the private, managed health care system are the types of barriers that concern people with disabilities and low incomes and their advocates as the Texas Legislature considers a managed care system for Medicaid recipients.

Poor people would be phased into managed care plans under a comprehensive package of Medicaid reform legislation passed by the Texas Senate last week. Similar legislation has been filed in the House.

The Sausedas could not understand why speech therapy was being denied because the Aetna managed care plan included a speech therapist, and the boys' pediatrician had prescribed the therapy. The family was blocked time and again, even though the plan's informational booklet stated that such services would be covered for disabled children.

'There's always going to be times when things are not going to go real smoothly. I had to fight like hell to get what I got for them.'

"Sometimes I was so angry it hurt," said Johnny Sauseda. "You feel helplessness. There's nothing you can do to help your child."

After months of phone calls, sleepless nights and headache, the Sausedas prevailed. Aetna officials in Delaware acknowledged that the Sausedas were correct. The plan does cover speech therapy, and Cody and Dallas began twice-weekly sessions at a local hospital.

Within six weeks, the boys' speech improved. Grunts became words, and words became sentences.

"These boys are starting to speaking," said Johnny Sauseda.

Cody, whose autism is less severe than his brother's, has "also learned his name, which was a major breakthrough for us," Johnny Sauseda said. "I still get chills. He came up to me one day, and he said, 'My name is Cody.' His eyes lit up. He knew his name was Cody, and he was telling everyone."

The Sausedas say that there are many benefits to managed care — chiefly lower costs and less paper work — but that safeguards are necessary to ensure that Medicaid recipients receive the care they need.

Consumer and disability rights advocates support managed care for Medicaid recipients — if the legislation contains proper safeguards.

A coalition of 14 nonprofit groups successfully lobbied senators to include a bill of rights for all Medicaid recipients that guarantees timely access to services and tells how to obtain services and file complaints.

The groups also wanted the Senate to include a statewide toll-free help line to assist Medicaid recipients who experience problems with managed care, such as denial of permission to see a specialist. But the hot line is not specified in a bill. Instead, lawmakers made their legislative intent clear during hearings, advocates said.

The Texas HMO Association does not believe such a hot line would be needed.

"All HMOs have 800 numbers and extensive member service departments," said Dr. Donald Gessler, president of PCA Health Plans of Texas and head of the HMO association. "We probably have 70 people in that department. We get somewhere around 5,000 to 6,000 phone calls a day."

Consumer and disability advocates, however, say a separate hot line for Medicaid recipients is an essential protection.

"Our hope is the consumer protections would be further strengthened in the House," said Nancy Epstein, director of the Disability Policy Consortium.

Lisa McGiffert, senior policy analyst for Consumers Union, said Texans "need to ensure that those who the Medicaid program is designed to help are not forgotten."

The Sausedas agree. "There's always going to be times when things are not going to go real smoothly," Johnny Sauseda said. "I had to fight like hell to get what I got for them."

Minden Bog case reveals value of peat

By JENNIFER LOVEN
Associated Press Writer

MINDEN CITY, Mich. (AP) — The Minden Bog is a huge, deep field of soggy moss, grasses and woody plants in Michigan's Thumb region. It's dotted with scruffy, hardy shrubs and patches of birch trees bent by the fierce wind.

It hardly seems a setting to inspire impassioned emotions. But a proposal by a company to mine the bog for its peat has created a rare alliance of environmentalists and farmers, scientists and hunters. They call Minden Bog a crucial and irreplaceable part of the environment.

"It's like a weird beauty you have to appreciate," said Don Kulish. He and his two brothers own 40 acres next to the bog. They grew up exploring it for blueberries and hunting in the adjacent state game area.

Texas-based Michigan Peat Co. wants to mine peat from 2,819 acres of the bog — about 4 1/2 square miles — over the next 40 years. The company admits to having harvested peat from more than 850 acres of the wetland since the 1950s.

Michigan Peat's application for a permit that would retroactively approve its mining operations and allow the expansion is pending before the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

The company's proposal is the largest wetland permit application ever in Michigan. Besides the state, the federal Environmental Protection Agency also is involved in reviewing the proposal.

"It's precedent-setting," said Robert Zbicak, the DNR's Bay City district supervisor. "It has ramifications for peat mining operations all over" the country.

The debate about Minden Bog has emphasized the value of peat bogs, a kind of wetland that takes thousands of years and a glacial climate to form.

"To say we're going to destroy that in 40 years is a travesty of massive proportions," said Carol Misseldine, executive director of the Michigan Environmental Council, a 22-group coalition. "They are critically important."

Bogs are habitats for hundreds of species that can exist only in their highly acidic and nutrient-poor conditions. For example, carnivorous plants like the sundew and Venus-fly trap reside solely in some peat bogs.

"In the United States, they are one of the few large landscapes we have left that are completely natural," said Don Saber-Langendoen, the Midwest regional ecologist for The Nature Conservancy.

Bogs also act as sponges that play an important role in preventing erosion, controlling floods and maintaining groundwater levels, while keeping toxic heavy metals out of water supplies.

"We have lost a lot of them," said Jill Bubier, a wetland biologist at McGill University in Montreal. "We're screwing them up like we've screwed up the rainforests."

Experts said the Minden Bog — about 20 miles southeast of Bad Axe — is the largest peat bog left in the southern half of Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

"It's a relic of southern Michigan that was all once like this," said local environmentalist Fred Fuller.

The DNR says Michigan Peat's project would destroy more than half of what remains of the bog.

The Yellow Rose of Texas, a B-25 Mitchell bomber, sits on the tarmac during the plane's birthday party last Sunday at Stinson Field in San Antonio.

CAF's B-25 'Yellow Rose' turns 52

By DON DRIVER
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The B-25 Mitchell bomber was a pile of junk rotting in a San Marcos field when the Confederate Air Force found it nearly 20 years ago and went to work.

The spotlessly renovated aircraft — now a veteran of countless air shows and rechristened "The Yellow Rose" — was the center of attention last Sunday as CAF members gathered at Stinson Municipal Airport to throw the gal a 52nd birthday party.

"It's better than when it rolled off the assembly line in 1943 in Kansas City," said CAF Col. Wade Castellanos, the crew chief and flight mechanic. "It gets into your blood to hear those radial engines roar to life."

More than 100 people gathered in Hangar No. 7 on a drizzly afternoon to fete the World War II-vintage aircraft that has become a part of their lives.

"We're all married, but we all have a mistress — and The Yellow Rose is it," summed up CAF Col. Vern Dockendorf, 62, a retired insurance broker and commander of the San Antonio-based Yellow Rose Squadron.

As 1940s-era music crooned in the background, CAF members and visitors swarmed around Rose to sip punch and munch on birthday cake.

The aircraft, with a smiling cowgirl painted on its nose, is annually flown to about 20 air shows across the nation in the CAF's mission of historic preservation.

"Our purpose is to maintain the airplane so people can see it and understand what happened from 1941 to 1945," Dockendorf said. "It was probably one of America's darkest hours and one of its finest hours at the same time."

The squadron is in the process of acquiring a second B-25 that currently is in Midland.

"The Devil Dog," as that CAF aircraft is known, is scheduled to arrive later this year, as part of the squadron's plan to build a museum in San Antonio featuring six to eight World War II-era aircraft.

Rose's birthday also was a chance for the CAF squadron to seek donations to help preserve its rare aircraft — and fix the hangar's leaky roof.

"You see them in the movies but, seeing a B-25 up close and personal, it's a pretty awesome piece of machinery," said Col. Bruce Sentz, vice commander of the 37th Training Wing at Lackland Air Force Base, who dropped by to view the bomber.

"It's a well-maintained airplane," the F-4 fighter pilot said. "It's neat to see one that's still operational."

There were around 10,000 B-25s made during the war, but only 37 are known to still exist worldwide — and not all of them are in flying condition, Castellanos said.

Rose never saw combat, but was used in the United States to train pilots, navigators and bombardiers.

"We've completely altered the exterior to represent a B-25 that did see combat in North Africa in 1943," said Castellanos, 34, an aircraft mechanic at a flight school in Georgetown. "But it wasn't named the Yellow Rose — we added that."

Rose was named for the heroine of Texas Independence and the nose art, typical of World War II aircraft, depicts a cowgirl wearing a cowboy hat, boots and little else but a smile.

"This is more tame than the original nose art," Castellanos said.

The squadron does have a cutout black bikini that's taped onto the painting upon request, he said.

The aircraft was discovered in 1976 and purchased for $12,500, recalled CAF Col. Jack Skipper, 74, a retired airline pilot who flew B-26 bombers during World War II.

"It was a piece of junk sitting in a field in San Marcos going to rot," he recalled. "None of the tires were usable and the nose wheel had a pickup truck tire on it."

"All the instruments were gone, the engines hadn't been run in about six years, the left wing tip was missing and one of the floorboards under the pilot's seat was so thin you could see down to the bombardier's position."

It took five years of work and about $250,000 to renovate the aircraft. Rose has been on display and flying to air shows ever since.

The twin-engine B-25 bomber usually had a crew of seven and a range of about 1,500 miles. B-25s were used in the famous Doolittle Raid to bomb Tokyo in 1942.

Mexicans bidding adios to costly imported goods

By BILL CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Graduate student Orson Calderon savored his last Big Mac attack last week, saying an imminent 50 percent increase in the national sales tax would crimp his budget.

"I can't afford McDonald's any longer," said Calderon, 24, who finds the 20-peso ($2.90) price of a sandwich-drink-and-fry combo less appealing now than when it cost about 16 pesos. A couple of tacos and a soft drink from a street stand costs 8 pesos.

The NAFTA free trade treaty helped open Mexico to a flood of American and US-style consumer goods. But the peso's recent slide against the dollar has made imported goods — from fast food to American CDs — too costly for many Mexicans to enjoy.

The peso, worth 29 cents before the Dec. 20 devaluation, is worth about 14 cents now, so some prices have nearly doubled on imports. Overall, inflation is expected to rise 40 percent in 1995. The minimum wage in Mexico is 16.30 pesos a day ($2.40).

"There's no way I can buy CDs like before. Everyone I know is cutting way back," said Alfonso Martinez, 19, a student whose last purchase, a Bon Jovi album, came before the peso's Dec. 20 plummet.

Since Mexico began chopping its tariffs and opening its markets, imports from gin to blue jeans have been flooding in. Even frozen tacos are imported from the USA as Mexican sought almost all things "gringo," or foreign.

NAFTA, short for North American Free Trade Agreement, accelerated this trend by creating a trade zone with Canada and the United States.

But in opening its markets, Mexico racked up a $28-billion trade and services deficit in 1994 — the imbalance between what it imports and exports. That was a major factor in the peso's slide.

With the devaluation, imported goods have become more expensive and the trend toward imports has been rapidly reversed.

As a result of the economic crisis, prices of public transport, electricity, gasoline and all but a handful of basic foods have risen.

On Saturday, the general sales tax rose from 10 percent to 15 percent.

On one front, the devaluation seems to be working. For the first time in more than four years, Mexico showed a trade surplus — $452 million — in February.

U.S. Ambassador James Jones urges Mexicans not to blame NAFTA for their country's economic woes.

"I think you have to separate NAFTA and free trade from Mexico's currency problems and its trade deficit," he told The Associated Press. "The first year of NAFTA was a win-win-win situation for the U.S., Canada and Mexico."

But on the streets, many Mexicans are still doubtful.

"What good is (free trade) if we Mexicans don't have the money to buy all these expensive imported goods? Our economy has gone down the drain and now we're just trying not to go hungry," said Pinedo Robles, a 64-year-old retiree.

Raquel Sancen, a 25-year-old fashion model, was window-shopping in the Zona Rosa tourist district but her maroon shopping bag with gold braids was empty.

"If my modeling agency didn't give me clothes to wear, I don't know what I would do," said Sancen, who now buys only at an outdoor market called Tepito.

At Jeans & Jackets, an importer of fashionable clothing, a sign reads: "Our imported merchandise has not been repriced" and another "30 percent discounts."

But saleswoman Remedios Dominguez, said sales to Mexicans had dropped off considerably. "People have got to eat and I guess they're spending on the basics," said Dominguez.

Even affluent Mexicans say they are cutting back.

Dr. Rolando Armienta, pushing a cart inside a gleaming Homemart warehouse, said he could ill afford the American bath fixtures and other imports, such as oak cabinets.

"Some things are still within reach. But some things have shot up so far they're out of my range," said Armienta.

Vicente Perez, a spokesman for Homemart, a Mexican company that sells American hardware and other imported goods, said business was down but there was "enough to survive."

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

WHEAT - (BULL)

OUTLOOK: We're back to the old "buy the rumor, sell the fact" phase of market price action. The rumor? The Chinese are coming. The talk in trading circles lately is that this very important wheat customer, in fact now the most important, will be in soon for large quantities of subsidized US wheat.

Commercial interests say they know nothing. My experience has been this is the best environment in which to buy wheat futures. Once the sales start to actually occur, that's the time to sell.

Bullish action would also be consistent with the seasonal tendency we noted last week. This is a time of year when wheat prices stabilize and rise. The trend generally continues until mid-May when the market will start to break anticipating the winter wheat harvest. A more bullish posture at this time appears warranted.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: Farmers who are willing to speculate on price were advised last week to purchase the May 350 call options when May finally closed over $3.52. This is a way to temporarily reown old crop wheat with limited down-side risk. You should have been able to purchase these for about 8¢/bushel. We have not sold new crop yet.

Traders: We've been looking to buy May Chicago wheat futures, but only when we saw a sign the trend had turned back up. Our method, which worked well over the past few weeks (in that it kept us out of trouble) was to purchase on a stop above the market at $3.53. This price was hit last week, so we now own the wheat at this price. Risk 10¢/bu. for an objective of $3.77.

CORN - (BULL)

OUTLOOK: The USDA was to release the important 1995 Prospective Plantings Report on March 31. As this is being written we do not yet have the numbers. The trade is looking for the corn acreage to be reduced by 6 or 7 percent versus last year. However, note this; in 6 of the past 6 years actual acreage has been proven to be even lower than this report first indicated.

Bottom line: with the lower acres, good demand, and only what I'd call normal supplies in spite of a record crop last year, optimal growing weather will be more important this year than most. The corn market should be "set up" for what we call weather scare rallies during this growing season.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: You sold your cash corn when the basis was strong last December, saved storage and interest, and took a modest profit in call options a few weeks ago. Those of you who wish to regain ownership in the options market have been advised to buy the July $2.50 corn calls at about 7¢/bushel.

Traders: We own July corn under $2.46. Risk to the contract lows of $2.32 and hold tight into the "weather scare" season.

CATTLE - (BEAR)

OUTLOOK: It appears most cattle feeders, as well as futures traders, were more concerned with price weakness in the June to summer months than closer in. This was evidenced by the greater than $7/cwt. premium April futures held to the June as little as two weeks ago.

The latest Cattle on Feed Report, which indicated placements into feedlots up a whopping 19 percent, also supported this notion. We've been hearing a lot about tight supplies, current feedlot conditions, and packers being short-bought, but as I indicated last week the market action doesn't support this talk.

The major concern should have been centered on the nearby, as April lost over $2/cwt. in relation to the June. I now think there are just more cattle out there, animals which are ready now to go to market, than the published numbers indicate. The psychology appears quite negative now, and no doubt we're getting closer to a bottom, but the bottom comes when it comes. For now, we'll leave the bear in the box until the market tells us it wants to head back up!

STRATEGY: Hedgers: You are 100 percent hedged in April futures with an average price of 74. While others are suffering, the futures market has offset potential losses in the cash market. This strategy has resulted in locking in good margins for most cattle feeders, and this is the textbook way a hedge is supposed to work.

For June protection we also own the 68 puts, purchased for less than $2. If you're a "selective" hedger, and April closes for two days over 7000 [Note: This is $2.75 lower than last week] look to take futures profits. All "true hedgers" stand pat until you sell your cattle.

Cow/calf operators: The feeder market has been in a free-fall and appears undervalued at this time. Nevertheless, those who feel they need some downside protection at this point in time can look to buy the April and May $66 put options should the April futures again close under $67.

Traders: Last week we advised to go short the Aprils above 72; however, by the time you received the column the market had already fallen away from this price. Stand aside.

Convenience foods demand grows in Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Growing consumer demand for convenience foods in Japan is creating many opportunities for U.S. exporters willing to adjust their products to meet the needs and tastes of Japanese processors and consumers.

The trend toward more easy-to-prepare foods in Japan is continuing upward as more women enter the work force, more families buy microwaves and toaster ovens and more single people live alone, U.S. trade experts say.

And these foods are decidedly Japanese in style.

The fastest growing dishes prepared by microwave are made with frozen rice products. These include rice pilaf and rice balls that are called onigiri, according to the March issue of USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service's publication AgExporter.

For the toaster oven segment, the most popular dishes are fried foods like frozen croquettes, which are fried dumplings made from potatoes; breaded cutlets made from vegetables; and pork, chicken or hamburger patties.

"Japanese convenience food manufacturers are constantly looking for high-quality, competitively priced products to supply this burgeoning market," the article said. "Semi-processed products are in particular demand because imports counter Japan's high labor, energy and material costs."

In addition, the strong Japanese yen also is sending Japanese manufacturers overseas.

Some of the convenience foods Japanese manufacturers are seeking are frozen mashed potato balls used to make croquettes; frozen pre-cut vegetables for rice pilaf; frozen, shredded and sauteed onions; and frozen hamburger patties, the trade experts said.

But the article says that to be successful supplying the Japanese market, U.S. suppliers must be willing to adapt their products.

Mexico's drought dwindles water reserves

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) - Even if they get plenty of rain this year, farmers in the Rio Grande Valley could still be affected by a drought that is scorching the fields of north-central Mexico.

That's because the drought in the Chihuahua state has reduced international water reserves at Falcon Lake and Amistad Reservoir downstream on the Rio Grande.

"It looks pretty bad right now," said John Hinojosa IV, the Rio Grande water master for the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission.

Hinojosa said the reservoirs have dropped to their lowest combined levels since 1986: Amistad to 33 feet below and Falcon to 26 feet below conservation levels.

"And they are both expected to continue dropping," Hinojosa said.

"It's just like any natural cycle - you have highs and lows," said Cruz Ito, an engineer with the International Boundary and Water Commission. Rains and inflows finally replenished the reservoirs in 1986, Ito said.

This year, however, the problem appears more serious because unlike during the past dry cycle, Mexican reserves on the Rio Conchas and Rio San Juan are at dangerously low levels.

That means Mexican farmers will depend more heavily on the Rio Grande. But Hinojosa said Mexico's yearly allocation from the international reserves is estimated to run out by May unless the dry spell ends.

Farmers drawing from U.S. reserves could face the same predicament early next year unless significant rainfall occurs somewhere between Chihuahua and the Texas Panhandle in the next seven months, Hinojosa said.

Now is the worst time for dwindling reserves because farmers on both sides of the border are entering their heavy irrigation season, he said.

Hinojosa is urging farmers to conserve precious supplies.

"Conservation is something that you do to prevent yourself from running out. It's not something you do after you've run out," he said. "And I'm having a hard time convincing some people of that."

The Rio Grande is the sole source of irrigation for Texas' Rio Grande Valley, where cotton, sorghum, citrus, sugar cane, vegetable and other crops constitute a major portion of the economy.

"There's not much you can do about it. It's just everybody is hoping that the rains will come," said Bill Weeks of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association. "We need the rains up the river in Mexico, New Mexico and West Texas."

High school students find rewards serving in Texas State Guard

By TERESA COX
Plainview Daily Herald

PLAINVIEW (AP) — The days of the Alamo may be long gone, but the same tradition of the Texas militia that fought the battle is still alive and well.

"We're essentially the same army as the Alamo gang," said Capt. James Ferguson, company commander of a Texas State Guard military police unit based in Plainview and teacher with the on-campus suspension program (S.O.S.) at Plainview High School.

But although the Alamo fighters might not have been very lucky in the end, today's TSG is serving a vital purpose for Texas. Basically structured as a military police unit, unit calls on members to provide traffic, crowd and riot control, as well as general law enforcement when needed around the state.

Guard members are volunteers; the only pay they receive is in the event they are called upon by the governor. Last year, the State Guard — composed of 2,700 people — logged in over 44,000 man hours and saved the state of Texas over $400,000.

Ferguson says those figures are something to be proud of. TSG members served their communities and allowed state money to go to better use.

"We are a citizens' army, here to defend the safety of the people of Texas," Ferguson said.

Like any other branch of military service, the TSG provides an opportunity for adults to serve their state. But Ferguson and other TSG officials are also billing the organization as an opportunity for high school students and at-risk kids to excel.

"Kids are always complaining about there being nothing to do," Ferguson says. "I'd like to see them do things that teach them responsibility, duty and discipline."

Ferguson said that students can enlist at age 17 with a parent's permission and at age 18 without parent permission. The local unit currently has three 17-year-olds it is grooming toward adulthood.

Among these is Charlotte Summers, 17, a student at Plainview High School and new enlistee. Summers said she heard about the TSG through Ferguson and another teacher while in S.O.S. at school.

"My family cannot afford to send me to college," Summers said. "I was wanting to go into the Army after high school, to do something for myself."

She says that the State Guard sounded like a good idea for her to learn military skills before enlisting in the armed forces and keep her busy while in high school. She feels like this would be a worthwhile program for teenagers, especially kids that need discipline.

Paul Jackson, 17, another recent enlistee from PHS, agrees with Summers' assessment of the program's worth.

"The Guard is good for kids," he says. "It helps you grow up, teaches you how to respect people, to listen, to protect yourself, to relate to others and have more patience."

Jackson also plans to join either the Army or the Navy after high school. He believes he is learning important skills as a Guard member that will prepare him further for military service in the future. While the Guard drills are serious, he says, they are also fun and more relaxed than regular military.

Public Notice

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR WASTE DISCHARGE PERMIT RE-NEWAL
CITY OF LEFORS, P.O. Box 183, Lefors, Texas 79054-0183 has applied to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (Commission) for renewal of Permit No. 10411-01 which authorizes a discharge of treated domestic wastewater effluent at a volume not to exceed an average flow of 100,000 gallons per day. The wastewater treatment facilities are approximately 1,300 feet south of State Highway 273 south of the City of Lefors in Gray County, Texas. The effluent is discharged into a drainage ditch, thence to the North Fork Red River in segment No. 0224 of the Red River Basin.

In accordance with the Texas Surface Water Quality Standards, the Commission staff must determine the existing uses of the receiving water in the area of the proposed discharge and whether the proposed discharge will cause significant degradation to any high quality waters in the area. The unclassified receiving waters of the drainage ditch have no significant aquatic life uses. The designated uses for Segment No. 0224 are high aquatic life uses and contact recreation. The effluent limitations in the draft permit will maintain and protect the existing instream uses. All determinations are preliminary and subject to additional review and revision.

The Executive Director of the Commission has prepared a draft permit which, if approved, will enforce more stringent effluent limitations in order to meet existing applicable rules and regulations. It is proposed that the expiration date of the renewed permit be specified as midnight, five years after date of Commission approval. Legal Authority: Section 26.028 of the Texas Water Code and 30 TAC Chapter 305 of the Rules of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

This application is subject to a Commission resolution adopted August 18, 1993, which directs the Commission's Executive Director to act on behalf of the Commission and issue final approval of certain permit matters. The Executive Director will issue this permit unless one or more persons file written protests and/or a request for a hearing within 30 days after publication of this notice.

If you wish to request a public hearing, you must submit your request in writing. You must state: (1) your name, mailing address and daytime phone number; (2) the permit number of other recognizable reference to this application; (3) the state "I" request a public hearing; (4) a brief description of how you or the persons you represent, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application; (5) a description of the location of your property relative to the applicant's operations; and (6) your proposed adjustment to the application permit which would satisfy your concerns and cause you to withdraw your request for hearing. If one or more protests and/or requests for hearing are filed, the Executive Director will not issue the permit and will forward the application to the Office of Hearings Examiners where a hearing may be held. Commission public hearings are evidentiary legal proceedings similar to civil court non-jury trials. Although general comments from the public may be submitted either in writing prior to the hearing, or orally at the start of the hearing, the law requires that the Commission's decision about whether to approve or deny the application be based on evidence and testimony submitted during the public hearing, presented under oath and subject to cross-examination by the other parties. Public comments are not evidence and cannot be the basis for the Commission's ultimate decision. In the event a hearing is held, the Office of Hearings Examiners will submit a recommendation to the Commission for final decision. If no protests or requests for hearing are filed, the Executive Director will sign the permit 30 days after publication of this notice or thereafter. If you wish to appeal a permit issued by the Executive Director, you may do so by filing a written Motion for Reconsideration with the Chief Clerk of the Commission no later than 20 days after the date the Executive Director signs the permit. Requests for a public hearing on this application should be submitted in writing to Chief
