50c DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA — The Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross has planned CPR and first aid classes for this month.

On Monday, March 20, there will be an adult CPR class at 6:30 p.m. at the Red Cross office, 108 N. Russell. On Tuesday, March 21, a standard first aid course will be offered, also at 6:30 p.m.

On Monday, March 27, an infant and child CPR class will be given, starting at 6 p.m.

All courses cost $15 each, which includes course materials. Advance registration is required by calling the office at 669-7121.

HEREFORD — The Hereford Lions Club will hold an auction here this month.

Scheduled for Saturday morning, March 25, the Lions Club here will auction off items donated by local businesses for the annual fete. The auction will be at the Hereford Community Center, according to Carey Black, club president.

Money raised through the auction will go to the club's charitable activities in Hereford, around the Panhandle and through Lions Clubs International.

PAMPA — Jeff Andrews, currently serving as Ward 2 city commissioner, filed his candidacy for mayor on Friday, according to City Secretary Phyllis Jeffers.

Andrews brings the number of mayoral candidates to three, along with Terry Hembree and Norman Howard.

Deadline for filing candidacies in city and school elections is March 22.

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $ 28 million.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 11, 22, 33, 34, 39 and 41.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $40 million.

There were 236 tickets that matched five of six numbers for a $1,610 prize, while 13,603 tickets matched four of six for a $101 prize. There were 255,958 tickets that matched three of six numbers for a $3 prize.

KELLER (AP) — Voters have ousted the mayor and three of five city council members after a two-month controversy surrounding the firing of the city manager.

Mayor John Buchanan and council members Gerald Pratt, Darrell Chumley and Cathy Ferguson were voted out in a Saturday recall election that the ousted officials have said was part of an ongoing fight between rival political factions.

The majorities for ouster ranged from 66 percent for Chumley to 73 percent for Buchanan.

Randy Leake and John Conrad, the two council members who voted to retain City Manager Lyle Dresher, were not part of the recall effort.

The council will meet Tuesday to canvass the election results.

HOUSTON (AP) — A syphilis epidemic in Beaumont, where 664 cases were documented in 1994, four times the state's average, has federal health officials puzzled.

In Jefferson County, the numbers translated into 203 cases per 100,000 county residents. Last year, there were only 49 cases reported for every 100,000 Texans.

Another 29 cases were identified in January among county residents.

Thornberry says challenges still ahead

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Congressman Mac Thornberry is generally satisfied with progress achieved toward implementation of the Republicans' Contract With America so far, but he admits there are still a number of challenges lying ahead.

Speaking at a town hall meeting Sunday afternoon at the Pampa Community Building, Thornberry said, "I'm pleased with where we are so far."

He provided those attending the meeting a list of what has been achieved to date in the new Republican-controlled Congress and of what is yet to be done.

Among the accomplishments he cited were changes applying all laws to Congress through House rules, cutting the number of committees and subcommittees, limiting terms of committee chairmen to no more than three consecutive terms, banning proxy voting in committees and opening up almost all committee meetings to the public.

Other achievements in House votes toward implementing the Contract With America provisions are requiring a three-fifths majority to pass a tax increase and prohibit passage of a retroactive tax increase, requiring a budget to be based on "real" numbers; launching a comprehensive audit of House finances; and giving the president a line item veto.

Thornberry said other accomplishments include passing a tough crime bill that keeps criminals from getting off on technicalities, prohibiting placement of U.S. troops under United Nations and foreign commands, and requiring risk and cost assessments for new regulations affecting business. A freeze on implementing new government regulations has also been approved to allow for studies on their impacts.

"We've still got challenges to face," Thornberry said.

Some of these will include welfare reforms, income tax revisions, changes in foreign aid programs, eliminating some federal departments and agencies, making drastic cuts in federal spending, and getting a handle on immigration problems.

Another problem is the passage of a balanced budget amendment. The House passed an amendment, but the measure fell one vote short of the two-thirds majority needed to pass in the Senate.

Asked what the chances were for another vote on the amendment in the Senate, Thornberry said, "If one of the people who voted against it were to be put in the hospital, I'll bet it comes up real fast."

Responding to questions from the audience, Thornberry said there will probably be no action taken against Republican Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, who voted against the balanced budget amendment.

Thornberry said Hatfield has never been in favor of the amendment and has always campaigned against it. He was not expected to vote in favor of it and, in fact, had offered his resignation from the Senate to Majority Leader Sen. Bob Dole.

Thornberry said he was more concerned with those who had supported the amendment in campaigns last fall but then voted against it when it came to a vote.

Another issue receiving an initial setback has been the move to pass term limits, Thornberry said, noting that the vote had been delayed to give people more time to contact their representatives to let them know they want term limits passed.

One of the biggest frustrations coming from people is their reaction to the changing tax rates and tax codes, Thornberry said, adding that tax rate revisions will be one of the major issues ahead in Congress. There seems to be a lot of support for a flat tax rate and perhaps for a national sales tax, both of which will be discussed, he said.

The worst thing, though, is to have a national sales tax and not do away with the income tax and then see both keep going up, he said.

"If you allow people to keep more of their money, then they can spend more. That generates more economic activity" and thus leads to more tax income, as under the tax cuts implemented under President Reagan, Thornberry said.

Thornberry, who serves on the Committee on Resources, said efforts are under way to rewrite the Endangered Species Act. In regard to this, the committee is having hearings across the nation, bringing the issue more directly to the people affected by the act's regulations. Thornberry was to be in New Orleans today for one such hearing.

"I think there's an excellent chance for rewriting that law ... and put a lot more common sense in it," Thornberry said.

One of the aims should be to let the states have more responsibility on endangered species situations, adding that the states would have people more aware of what species seriously need protection and of what economic hardships would be involved, he said.

On other issues, Thornberry said the main desire of the Republicans is to take closer looks at all federal programs, deciding which ones can be eliminated or cut back and which federal functions can be returned to the states. One of the major aims is to return more functions back to the states, with more money spent at local levels and under more local control instead of under the federal bureaucracy.

Thornberry encouraged people to write or call his offices to express their opinions and concerns, adding that he wants to know how his constituents feel on the issues.

Congressman's visit

United States Congressman Mac Thornberry, right, meets with Ken Baxter, Shepard's Crook Nursing Agency assistant administrator, and several other members of the medical community during his pass through town Sunday. Meeting with him were Bill O'Brien, representing Coronado Hospital; Dr. R. Moss Hampton; Melba Marcum, Pampa Nursing Home administrator; Bill Hite, pharmacist of Heard and Jones Health Mart; Gray County Judge Richard Peet; Suzanne Wilkinson, Shepard's Crook Nursing Agency executive administrator; Mrs. Reed Echols, Good Samaritan Christian Services staffing coordinator; and Dr. Laxman Bhatia. In a private meeting, Thornberry listened as they voiced their concerns about problems in rural health care facing individuals in the Texas Panhandle as well as the nation. Most were concerned with the rising costs and regulations that hinder individuals, particularly the elderly from getting the medical attention they need. Thornberry also met with members of the Teenage Republicans Club.

Greenspan wants to change price index

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan stepped up his campaign today to get alterations to the government's main price gauge, which he said would save taxpayers $150 billion over five years.

Appearing before the Senate Finance Committee, Greenspan pushed his proposal to create a panel of experts who would have authority to make revisions in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index to more accurately reflect inflation pressures.

The CPI is used to make annual cost of living adjustments for millions of Americans receiving Social Security and other government benefits. But Greenspan has insisted that the CPI is fundamentally flawed and is overstating inflation.

Republican lawmakers have seized on Greenspan's criticism. House Speaker Newt Gingrich even went so far as to suggest eliminating the Labor Department agency that handles the CPI if it did not quickly make the necessary changes.

In his testimony today, Greenspan sought to defend the government number crunchers.

Labor Department statisticians "can work 24 hours a day and double their staff" and still be unable to adjust the CPI to account for real changes in the cost of living, he said.

"The replacement of a mechanical procedure by the informed judgment of experts would best ... insulate taxpayers and (federal) benefit recipients from the effects of changes in the cost of living," Greenspan said.

Greenspan earlier this year suggested that the index overstates inflation by between 0.5 and 1.5 percentage points.

While many Republicans have applauded the proposal as a way of reducing the budget deficit, Democrats have said the plan is merely a back-door way of trimming benefits by attempting to shift the political blame elsewhere.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics has said the evidence is unclear on how much the CPI may overstate inflation.

Katharine Abraham, who heads the bureau, said today, "Unfortunately, the state of the art in the area of price index construction has not advanced to the point where anyone knows how to construct true cost-of-living measures."

She said in prepared testimony, "Although many believe that the CPI is biased upward because quality improvements are not fully accounted for, there is little direct evidence to support this view."

Any upward bias in the CPI may be as small as 0.2 percent, she said, adding that the Bureau of Labor Statistics is now revamping the gauge to reflect the latest changes in Americans' spending habits.

Gramm: Overturning Roe vs. Wade not his presidential goal

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm, who is strongly opposed to abortion, says he would not push for a constitutional amendment to ban abortions if elected president next year.

Instead, the Texas Republican said Sunday on NBC's Meet the Press, he would work to see that no federal money is used to fund abortions, except in cases where the mother's life is in danger.

Gramm also said if necessary, he would filibuster the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster to be surgeon general. And, in defense of proposed GOP cuts in the capital gains tax, said he would offset those by eliminating some government tax breaks and subsidies for business.

"I don't believe there's a consensus in the country to amend the Constitution," Gramm said when asked if he would try to overturn the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion. "Nobody has offered the amendment, and I would not see that as part of my mandate in terms of amending the Constitution."

Gramm's statement was the latest to suggest that the fiscal conservative wants to stay clear of the abortion issue in his run for the 1996 Republican presidential nomination.

He has previously said that while he would want his running mate to share his philosophical views, abortion would not be a litmus test in choosing a vice presidential nominee.

Gramm said he supported GOP 1992 platform language that would ban abortions in cases of rape or incest, but added, "We're going to have to recognize that there are good Republicans who differ on the issue."

The practical public policy, he said, would be to oppose taxpayer funding unless the mother's life is in danger.

"I'm not going to sign a law that forces taxpayers who pay taxes — in many cases, against their will — to spend their money on something that they oppose as strongly as abortion on demand," he said.

The House is heading for a showdown on that issue as early as this week when it takes up a Republican budget-cutting plan that includes language that would let states decide whether Medicaid money can be used for abortions in cases of rape and incest.

Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., the co-chairwoman of the Congressional Women's Caucus, said Sunday she will offer an amendment to remove that language, which she said is aimed at impoverished women. Gramm, she said in response to his statements Sunday, "is an extremist who would use the presidency to take American women backwards and eliminate the right to choose."

Gramm also said he would filibuster the nomination of Foster to be surgeon general if it reaches the Senate floor but denied that his opposition stemmed primarily from Foster's record of performing abortions.

He said he was unhappy with both Foster's record as a doctor and his difficulty in recounting how many abortions he had performed. "This is a person who has trouble leveling, and there is one litmus test, and that is being honest," Gramm said.

Asked if a filibuster would constitute gridlock, Gramm said, "Gridlock is sometimes a good thing."

On the proposed reduction in the capital gains tax, which is under fire by Democrats, Gramm said he would pay for some of the lost revenue by abolishing or cutting business subsidies provided by the departments of Agriculture and Commerce and the Small Business Administration.

Postal Service outlines new rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mailing a post card would cost an extra penny — 21 cents — under a new rate proposal the Postal Service outlined today.

The package of pricing changes is aimed mostly at businesses. It's designed to speed delivery of the nation's mail by encouraging high-volume mailers to prepare their cards and letters in advance for machine sorting.

The cost of mailing a private letter, which increased to 32 cents in January, would be unchanged.

Postal officials said post cards were included in the reclassification plan because more of them are mailed by businesses than individuals.

The reclassification plan is designed to give discounts to mailers who take steps to make the post office's job easier, while raising rates for those that don't.

Large companies should be able to make the changes necessary to reap savings, while some small publications that go to a widely spread, specialized market may pay more.

Fires

The Pampa Fire Department reported the following call for the 40-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.
SATURDAY, March 11
 7:38 p.m. — Two units and three personnel responded to a medical assistance call at 1328 Terrace.

Shuttle telescope zooms in on moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Endeavour pointed its three ultraviolet telescopes toward Venus today to help scientists search for argon and helium, and the crew wished fellow astronaut Norman Thagard a "wonderful trip" aboard the Russian space station Mir.

The telescopes also have been studying Mars and Jupiter during Endeavour's latest mission.

Thagard, the first American to ride a Russian rocket, and two cosmonauts were set for launch toward Mir early Tuesday. They will return in June, when Atlantis makes the first-ever docking with the station.

"We won't get to see Norm, but we sure wish him well and wish him a wonderful trip on Mir," astronaut Tamara Jernigan said during an interview with cable television's C-SPAN.

The shuttle astronauts don't expect to see video of the historic launch until they return home on Friday but hope for a chance to speak with Thagard via radio once he arrives at the orbiting outpost on Thursday.

It turns out the most difficult target for Endeavour's ultraviolet telescopes isn't a quasar some 10 billion light years away, it's our very own moon.

One of the orbiting instruments snapped the first ultraviolet pictures of the moon Sunday, a feat similar to photographing a road sign while passing it in a speeding car.

Astronomer Randy Gladstone of the Southwest Research Institute said our nearest celestial neighbor was by far the toughest target of Endeavour's planned 15 1/2-day flight.

Endeavour's telescopes can zoom in on stars at the edge of the known universe with ease, but they struggle to focus on the moon — a mere 250,000 miles away — because it and the shuttle move so quickly around the Earth.

Accidents

The Pampa Police Department responded to the following traffic accidents in the 72-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today.

FRIDAY, March 10
 7:53 a.m. — A 1983 Cadillac driven by Ronald Gregory Cooper, 1211 Finley, collided with a 1992 Oldsmobile driven Dana Trusty Lewis, 2213 Evergreen, at the intersection of Wilhiston and Kentucky. Cooper was cited for failure to yield right of way and no proof of liability insurance.

SUNDAY, March 12
 Unknown time — Diana Tidwell, 1107 Finley, reported a hit and run in the driveway at 1107 Finley. Damage was reported to the passenger side of a 1989 Dodge.

4:50 p.m. — A car-pedestrian accident was reported in the 1400 block of North Hobart. Juanita Day was a pedestrian struck in the left leg by a car backing out of a parking place. She was taken to Coronado Hospital by private vehicle. The driver stopped but left without leaving required information.

9:15 p.m. — A 1989 Chevrolet pickup driven by Heather Nicole Garner, 700 E. 17th, collided with a 1985 Mercury Cougar driven by Ashlee Beth Bohannon, 1002 Somerville, in the 200 block of Gray. Garner was cited for following too closely.

Sheriff's Office

Gray County Sheriff's Office reported the following arrests in the 40-hour period that ended at 8 a.m. today.

SUNDAY, March 13
 Wade Michael Prendergast, 22, of Las Vegas, Nev., was arrested for violation of probation.

Willie James Ryan, 30, of Amarillo, was arrested by the Department of Public Safety for possession of marijuana under two ounces. He was released on bond.

Michael Anthony Moreno, 21, of 902 S. Wilcox, was transferred from the Pampa Police Department to the GCSO on a charge of violating a protective order. He was released on bond.

Michael Anthony Moreno, 21, of 902 S. Wilcox, again was transferred from the Pampa Police Department to the GCSO on a charge of violating a protective order.

Michael Seth Heiskell, 18, of 1928 N. Christy, was transferred from the Pampa Police Department to the GCSO on a charge of theft between $20 and $500. He was released on bond.

Correction

A story on Page 1 of Sunday's edition of The Pampa News incorrectly listed Jeff McCormick as filing to run for mayor. Actually, McCormick has filed for the Ward 1 city commission post. Jeff Andrews has filed as a candidate for mayor. We apologize for the error and any inconvenience it may have caused.

To make things even more difficult, the moon is so bright that it can throw off the telescopes' alignment system.

But Gladstone, with help from other scientists on the ground and the astrophysicists aboard Endeavour, was able to collect 12 images of the waxing moon.

He won't know how the 70-millimeter pictures turn out until after the shuttle crew return home, but he was optimistic.

"All our exposures went off as planned and we think we'll really get some good images," he said.

They would be the first ultraviolet photographs ever taken of the moon. Such pictures can't be made from Earth because the atmosphere screens ultraviolet light.

Apollo astronauts used spectroscopes to study sunlight reflecting off the moon's surface more than 20 years ago, but they didn't take pictures in the invisible far ultraviolet.

The images from this flight will be used to test a theory that the ultraviolet surface brightness of a celestial object without an atmosphere can reveal how long that object has been exposed to space.

Former Mexican president flees to United States

By ANITA SNOW
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has left Mexico following an increasingly bitter feud with his handpicked successor and his brother's arrest on murder charges.

No public explanation was given for Salinas' departure to the United States. The weekly news magazine Proceso said Sunday it was a "convenient exile."

Speculation that Salinas would leave Mexico has been rampant since President Ernesto Zedillo authorized the Feb. 28 arrest of Raul Salinas on charges of masterminding last year's murder of the No. 2 man in the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party.

The rift between Salinas and Zedillo has been growing since Salinas left office after six years on Dec. 1 and shattered the tradition of staying out of Mexican politics.

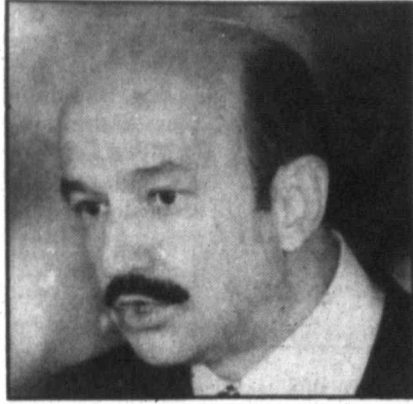

Salinas angrily and publicly blamed Zedillo earlier this month for the rapid fall of the peso and the country's ensuing woes. He fasted briefly to press his demand that authorities clear his name in connection with the March 1994 assassination of presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio.

Zedillo, who replaced Colosio, responded testily on several occasions. In a nationally televised speech Sunday night, he vowed to clean up Mexico's corrupt political system and insisted austerity measures were necessary.

"Nothing, and no one, will weaken my decision to head up construction of the kind of authentic, legal state that Mexicans deserve," Zedillo said in his speech.

"I will do that presiding over a government of laws, within the structure of a strengthened democracy. We are facing great political, social and economic challenges all at the same time," said Zedillo.

By authorizing the arrest of Salinas' elder brother, Zedillo broke another Mexican tradition that relatives of high-ranking officials are immune from prosecution.

Reforma newspaper of Mexico City said today that Salinas and Zedillo had not spoken since Dec. 24.

The Mexican media had speculated that the Harvard-educated Salinas would move to the United States, at least for the next few years. He has some work there, having been named to the board of directors of Dow Jones & Co. in January.

Salinas had been backed by the United States to head the new World Trade Organization, but withdrew from consideration March 1. Salinas in January was named to the board of directors of Dow Jones & Co.

Prosecutors say he has not been implicated in any crimes.

Salinas fasted briefly earlier this month to press his demand that authorities clear his name in connection with another assassination, the March 1994 killing of PRI presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio at a Tijuana campaign rally.

Gulf War vets say Deutch hid chemical weapons information

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Gulf War veterans said Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch, nominated Saturday to be the next CIA director, could be helping hide information about the use of chemical and biological weapons by Iraq during the 1990-91 war.

About 300 Gulf War vets attended a weekend conference here sponsored by the National Task Force of Desert Storms Veterans Group meant to pressure the government to do more studies of Gulf War Syndrome, an illness which some say was triggered by chemical and biological weapons.

The federal government has maintained that U.S. troops were not exposed to such agents.

"Deutch...has been in charge of managing that information," said Paul Sullivan, president of Gulf War Veterans of Georgia. "The Department of Defense is not releasing the information, so he is participating (in that) either by a failure to manage his subordinates or, by deliberate design, in a cover up."

Pentagon spokesman Navy Cmdr. Chuck

Franklin denied that there is a cover up. "There still are unanswered questions about what is causing the illnesses of Gulf War vets," he said. "We are continuing to look at this. We have not let up in our search. We are doing everything we can to get to bottom of the illnesses."

Sullivan released recently declassified Department of Defense documents he obtained through the federal Freedom of Information Act that mention exposures to such agents during the war.

Among the documents were Operation Desert Storm command log entries from January and March 1991.

A Jan. 20 entry says Czechoslovakian troops had detected chemical agents "flowing down from factory/storage (facility that had been) bombed in Iraq. Predictably, this has become/is going to become a problem."

Of the 697,000 troops who served in the war, about 6 percent — some 43,000 — have reported ailments including muscle pain, memory loss and respiratory and heart problems.

The symptoms of all but 15 percent can be attributed to known illnesses. Although there is no concrete evidence of a single, disease-causing agent among the rest, President Clinton has said he will devote $20 million to study the problem.

Another log entry dated Jan. 18 tracked a Iraqi Scud missile attack on the Israeli cities of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Nazareth.

"Israeli police confirmed nerve gas," the log states.

The log entries are particularly disturbing, he said, in light of a May 1994 Department of Defense memorandum sent to veterans that said: "There is no information, classified or unclassified, that indicates that chemical or biological weapons were used in the Persian Gulf."

The letter was signed by John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Defense Secretary William Perry.

"We have documents that confirm" the agents were present, Sullivan said. "The Department of Defense has only denials."

Auditors say A&M power plant may evolve into taxpayer boondoggle

DALLAS (AP) — State auditors say an unfinished power plant at Texas A&M University could evolve into a multi-million dollar boondoggle for taxpayers.

Senate Administration Committee Chairman Chris Harris, R-Arlington, said his "backbone started crawling" minutes into a recent hearing on the plant, which was supposed to be the largest capital project in A&M history.

Instead, a state auditor's report says the project was conducted largely in secret by a handful of individuals who, at times, violated state laws governing state contracts.

The project's cancellation has caused a stalemate between the school and Tenneco Power Generation Co. over the project's worth, who will pay for what has been built, and whether it should be completed.

State auditors said the project exemplifies the mismanagement of Texas A&M under the leadership of former regents chairman Ross Margraves, former president and chancellor William Mobley and vice president Robert Smith.

All have denied wrongdoing.

According to The Dallas Morning News, the Texas Rangers and FBI are investigating the background of the project and allegations that some A&M officials used their positions to steer contracts to friends or in some way benefited from A&M business.

Tenneco is seeking legislative approval to sue A&M over unpaid bills and an alleged breach of contract.

Among the allegations are charges by Tenneco Power, a subsidiary of Tenneco Gas of Houston, that A&M reneged on a contract to let Tenneco Power build, own and operate a plant to generate steam and electricity. The company said it had pumped $60 million into the project when new leadership at A&M canceled the project in June.

The scaled-down facility that was left behind does not generate electricity but cools and heats the west campus.

The university has offered to pay Tenneco $16 million for that facility, but Tenneco says it wants to finish the $120 million plant.

A&M officials said they curtailed the plant after questions were raised about its feasibility and consultants concluded that the project was "substantially flawed."

EVANGELIST RUBY TANNER

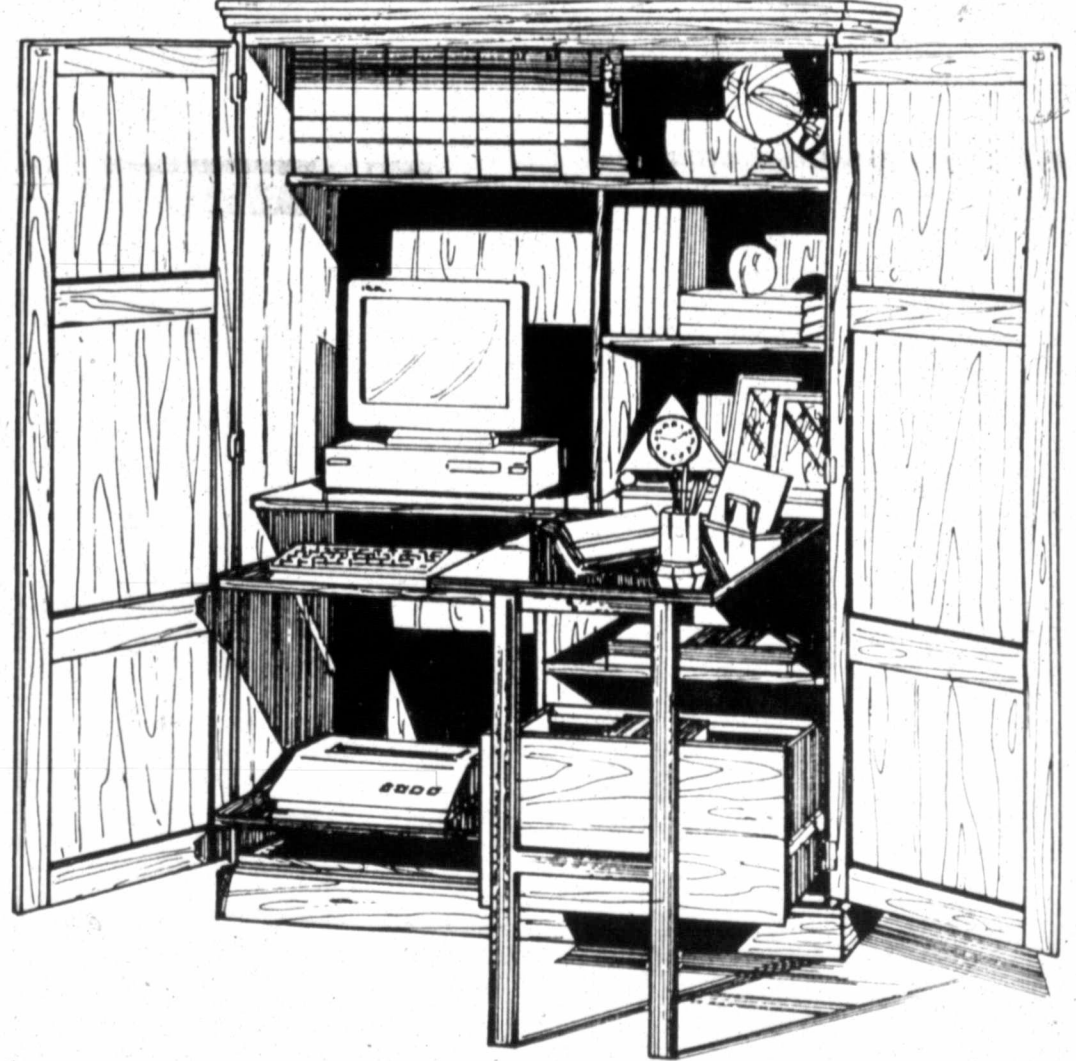

Revival services will continue Monday through Wednesday nights at 7:00 p.m. with the Rev. Ruby Tanner as the special speaker. Rev. Tanner is based in Oakland, California and travels nation-wide in revivals, city-wide crusades, and women's conferences. Sister Tanner recently ministered to a Pastor's and evangelists Conference in Tulsa, Oklahoma where people gathered from around the world to hear this dynamic preacher of God's Word. Pastor Ed Barker of Faith Christian, stated that the ministry of this evangelist is so powerful that Pastors are reporting that their churches are "forever changed." Faith Christian Center is a Foursquare Church located at 118 N. Cuyler St. in downtown Pampa, and has been ministering to the community since 1989. Pastor Barker and the ministry staff extends a warm and sincere welcome to the entire Pampa community to attend these services. Nursery will be provided.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

The federal assault upon U.S. business

Some day the U.S. government is going to have to stop assaulting successful businesses. Its latest target, Microsoft, the world's largest software company and a major reason the United States dominates the world computer industry.

The assault on Microsoft has been bipartisan. Antitrust allegations against the company were begun in the Republican Bush administration and have been pursued in the Democratic Clinton administration. The U.S. district judge in charge of the case, Stanley Sporkin, was a securities official in the Democratic Carter administration, then was appointed to the bench by the Republican Reagan administration.

Last year the Clinton administration worked out a deal with Microsoft in which the company would change home sales practices that allegedly hurt competitors. For example, Microsoft gave up agreements with equipment manufacturers in which a royalty was paid for every machine sold, even those not loaded with the Microsoft software. But last week Judge Sporkin threw out the deal. Microsoft and the Clinton administration Justice Department are appealing.

Because Judge Sporkin's reversal rate is a high 21 percent, there's a good chance he could be overturned. According to George Mason University Law Professor William Kovacic, "His opinion assumed a state of antitrust law that just doesn't exist." Even Anne Bingaman, the head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, complained that Judge Sporkin's "legal failings are legion."

The Clinton administration, indeed, would be advised to drop the persecution of Microsoft. For one thing, there is no such thing as a monopoly unless government itself imposes one. The computer industry is the least regulated of any in America, one reason it has risen to world domination. Microsoft began 20 years ago when Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates and his friend Paul Allen formed it in a dorm room. Hard work and free-wheeling competition - not "monopoly" practices - have catapulted the company into the kind of global success that ought to be celebrated, not persecuted.

As the late Murray Rothbard showed in several books, private-sector monopolies just cannot last. So long as the door to competition remains open, new firms will try to knock the king off the hill. That's obviously true with Microsoft. In operating systems, where Microsoft is most dominant, IBM offers OS/2 Warp and Apple offers System 7.5 - both strong competitors.

Moreover, a new generation of "Power" computers is coming on line, dominated by IBM and Apple, offering new configurations and operating systems. Whereas Microsoft's systems depend on older chips from Intel, the Power computers depend on newer designs from Motorola. So Microsoft's dominance today could be dissolved tomorrow.

How many times will government keep assaulting the best U.S. companies, even as foreign companies suffer from no such debility? Software is spreading across the world at a rapid rate. It costs almost nothing to send a stream of electrons containing software almost anywhere in the world. If Microsoft is crippled, the U.S. software lead could be destroyed, with tens of thousands of U.S. jobs lost.

The new U.S. Congress should act to repeal antitrust laws of all sorts. The Clinton administration should drop the case. And Microsoft should stonewall any actions for as long as it can. Come 1996, a new president well could be elected who may better appreciate a firm that is a world leader in technology and jobs creation.

It had been a dramatic day in court during the O.J. Simpson trial, the viewer wondering what was the dreadful penalty the prosecution was asking the judge to impose. It was clear that the defense had (check one):

- a) tried to hide vital evidence;
- b) forgotten it was sitting on vital evidence;
- c) got mixed up about which of the defense team was assigned to deliver the vital evidence to scrutiny by the prosecution.

What would the judge do? And what would the witness Rosa Lopez testify to? And would they come up with the mysterious Sylvia (who is she?), and if they did, what would she say?

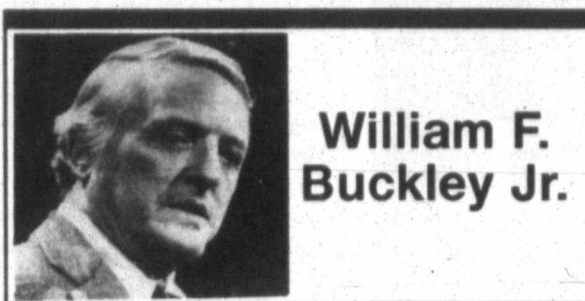

So time came for the wrap-up and the young but streetwise announcer on that channel said: "Golly, this has been quite a day. But of course the most important development is the entry of a new juror."

One sensed immediately that the young man did not know the awful freight carried by this passing judgment. Why would this - a new juror - be an important development? So one juror is excluded, for whatever reason, and a substitute is drawn in from the pool of standbys, who at this point number nine.

Why was that important? Who cares? Everyone, jurors and standbys, had heard the same evidence, so what if No. 10 goes out and No. 18 comes in?

The next day we learned, No. 10 was black, No. 18 white. On the strength of one more white juror, one less black, we have allegedly the most white juror, one less black, we have allegedly the most important development of the day, in the estimate of the professional court-watcher acting as host to the million-odd people listening in.

Well, yes, there were other factors: No. 10 is a middle-aged black of pronounced enthusiasms. One of them, it transpired, was for the San Francisco 49ers, which is the football team O.J. Simpson was last with, back when he played football.

And then when the jury went to the residence of the defendant, No. 10 showed great interest in the pictures adorning the house. The judge had said to them before they went in that they were to pay only perfunctory interest to the decorations, concentrating on those aspects of the dwelling to which their attention had been especially called. And then No. 10 had said something, though intended to be playful in character, to the effect that he bet there'd be a division within the jury when all the testimony had been taken in.

As for the substitute - No. 18 - it is a she, a mother of a 13-year-old, studious of disposition - indeed, the reporter for one paper ventured to say she might be the only juror who would know what DNA actually stands for. She had been heard to say she thought O.J. an amiable fellow, but when questioned on that judgment, the court satisfied itself that she intended to say nothing more than that O.J. was apparently an amiable person, smiling here and there, playing with the kids, tussling the hair of the dog. She didn't mean to say that she would continue to think O.J. amiable if it turned out that he had killed his wife and her companion.

But the offhand comment, that a change in jurors in this situation was a dramatic development, reminds us of the perilous aspect of race in this trial. Three months ago, the polls revealed that 72 percent of white people, based on the evidence that had been published, thought O.J. guilty, while roughly the same figure, polling the opinion of blacks, thought him innocent.

Professor Alan Dershowitz, in quite another context, opined on the following day that incriminating evidence based on science less than absolutely secure should be weighed differently if exonerating than if incriminating. Specifically, if DNA is 99.999 percent accurate and the DNA blood stains of a defendant don't match those of the killer exactly, the defendant should go free, since there is now a reasonable doubt that he is the killer. In other words, the 0.001 chance that in fact it is another man's blood should stand in the way of conviction.

We grant, then, that if any doubt attaches, it is to the conclusive benefit of the defendant.

But really, the announcer's casual judgment, spoken at this point in the proceedings, was saying something more: It seemed to take for granted that the probability is that the jury will divide on racial lines. That was what the announcer unconsciously deduced.

We have to hope that the extraordinary, harrowing experience those jurors are being subjected to will generate a transcending moral energy, sufficient to retrieve justice from the mess of the past few weeks.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, March 13, the 72nd day of 1995. There are 293 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On March 13, 1852, a familiar symbol of the United States, Uncle Sam, made his debut as a cartoon character in the New York Lantern.

On this date:

In 1781, the planet Uranus was discovered by Sir William Herschel.

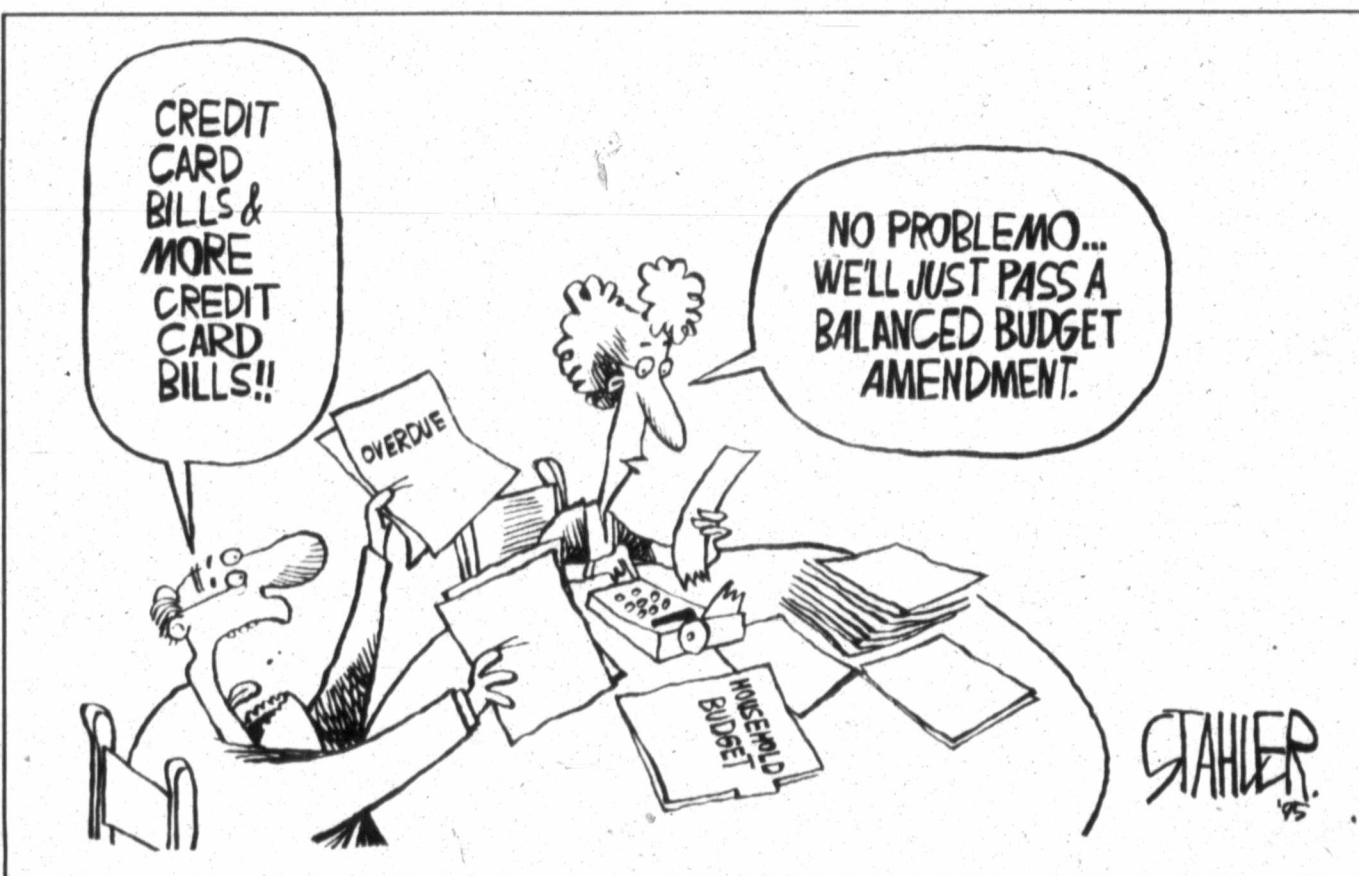

In 1868, the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson began in the U.S. Senate.

In 1884, Standard Time was adopted throughout the United States.

In 1901, the 23rd president of the United States, Benjamin Harrison, died in Indianapolis.

In 1906, American suffragist Susan B. Anthony died in Rochester, N.Y.

In 1925, a law went into effect in Tennessee prohibiting the teaching of evolution.

Mr. Perryman's prison prescription

Pitkin County Jail in Aspen, Colo., sounds like fun!

The jail has a library, a gymnasium, video cassettes for rent and grand views of Red Mountain.

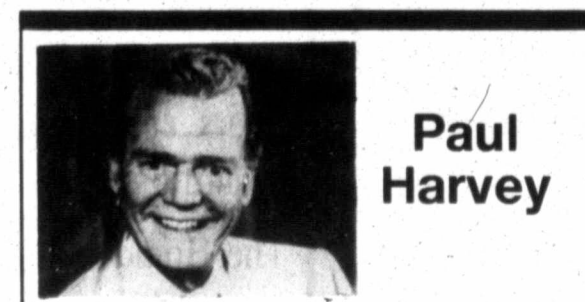

Former inmates are generous with praise. Dewi Sukarno, the widow of a onetime Indonesian dictator, did 24 days in Pitkin County Jail for assault, and she says she will treasure the memories of that visit for the rest of her life.

In many United States jails and prisons, most inmates are better off inside than out. If cons can enjoy a "life of luxury" in prison - compared to what they had outside - it is no wonder they keep coming back.

Last year, I related examples of prison administrators who are trying to cut back on jail-house amenities, but each then became a target for organized protests, so I stopped naming them.

During our quest for a confinement formula that's less than cruel and less than luxurious, I heard from Doug Perryman, a World War II vet, who gave his suggestions for reducing our overcrowded jails - at no cost to anybody.

His recommendations were greeted with an avalanche of applause. Perhaps a repetition of

Paul Harvey

Perryman's words would help strengthen the resolve of our new Congress.

Starting now in all prisons, there will be no television, no radio and no musical instruments.

Upon arriving, the prisoner is issued two coveralls, two sheets, one pillow case, socks, underclothing, shoes, handkerchiefs and an eight-hour shift in a two-bed cell. Using shifts, a two-person cell can sleep six people a day.

Each con does his own laundry, cleans his own cell, eats a sack lunch and makes his own bed. He works in the prison shops, in the kitchen or scrubbing floors.

Listen carefully to all of Perryman's prescription before you judge it.

The prisoner wears a GI haircut - whether he likes it or not. Any prisoner who makes trouble or refuses to work gets months added to his term.

Rights! The prisoner, upon arrival, is advised that his "rights" as a citizen have been forfeited. The only right he has is the right to breathe until his sentence is completed.

On work crews, prisoners collect trash, cut lawns and haul garbage. These crews would replace city workers, thus saving taxpayer money instead of enjoying taxpayer money.

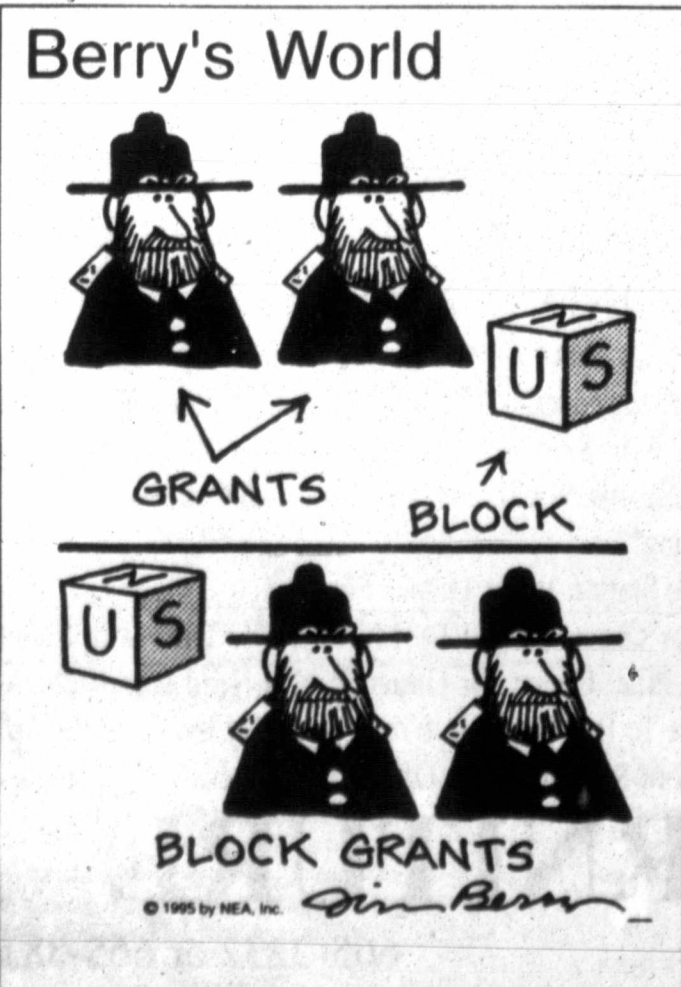

Cruel and unusual punishment? Well, Perryman remembers that he was in combat zones for 19 months during World War II - he and thousands of other United States GIs - and they lived and worked precisely as he is recommending that prisoners be required to live and work now.

If we really want to relieve overcrowding and recidivism prisons, this would do it. Any ex-con would be glad to take an honest job on the outside - any kind of job - rather than chance another hitch in the slammer.

Thought for today

"No one can be a great thinker who does not recognize that as a thinker it is his first duty to follow his intellect to whatever conclusions it may lead."

John Stuart Mill, British philosopher

The worst, dumbest decision in the history of Texas' highest court came down the other day. The court upheld, 5-4, the "Robin Hood" concept of school finance: Namely, you rob the "rich" districts and give the proceeds to the poor ones. The court ruled, in essence, that theft is fine, thanks.

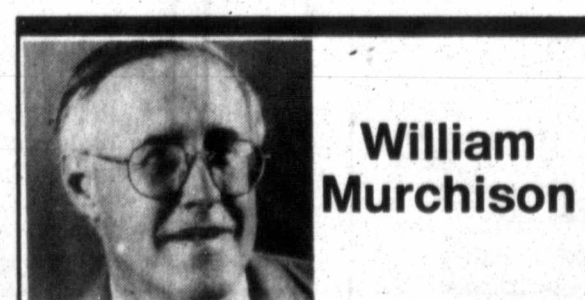

There have been poor excuses for school reform before. Texas' attempt is about as bad as can be imagined - and the court's upholding it compounds the felony. Aaaargh!

Texas, like a couple dozen other states, has been faced with judicial orders to redistribute tax monies and thus remodel its public school system.

Over and over, we have heard - chiefly from teachers unions and others with financial stakes in the outcome - the fervent injunction that the rich have too much money, and the poor too little. We have to have rough equality. Money (so we hear) is the linchpin of the education system - not parental involvement, not pupil motivation, just money, without which we can't possibly have an "efficient" system, as stipulated by the Texas Constitution.

After two failures, the Texas Legislature passed the latest version of Robin Hood, with rich or successful districts "sharing" their locally raised property taxes. For instance, the new state law obliges Highland Park, which lies in the middle of Dallas, to give to Laredo, in South Texas, more money ($27 million) than Highland Park spends on its own children!

This is fine and constitutional, said the Texas Supreme Court. Of course, it's anything but fine, and it's constitutional only by the narrowest of margins - a single judge's vote.

What are the implications, both as to law and to education? These, it seems to me, are three.

First, the upholding of Robin Hood reminds us that envy, which is central among the seven deadly sins, remains as potent as in medieval days. At any level of life, there's no getting beyond the argument of "he has more than I have." We might as well get used to it - if indeed we aren't already.

The argument has a peculiar poignancy in education. Where money becomes the standard, we look for ways to get more of it, instead of asking the question, what else do we need? The school districts in New Jersey that were seized by the state recently because of inadequate educational performance spent twice as much as districts in Texas. No reputable educational study of which I am aware says that spending buys performance.

Second, "states' rights" and 10th amendmentism - which Texans support as strongly as anyone else - don't necessarily mean states' wisdom. The Robin Hood law, like the Robin Hood decision, is immeasurably stupid - unyoked to reality. But it wasn't the federal courts that presented us with this expensive non-solution. The state of Texas thought this one up all by itself and now, having crawled into such a deep and preposterous hole, will have to find its own way out, unaided.

Third, the public education system is becoming one of those burdens at which the people are going to rebel. This may be the most important implication of all.

We could look back in 20 years time and say to ourselves, "What happened to the public schools? Where'd they go?" Where they probably went - if we should indeed find them missing some bright day - is into the discard.

For the poor, the state will continue to make provision. But the poor, luckily for them, will enjoy state vouchers, so they can go to this school or that one, commensurate with need.

As for the middle class, it will have decided, the way things are going, that the public schools aren't worth the trouble. They're too expensive and they don't put out a good enough product. The middle class won't even be patronizing the public schools - unless the public schools, through the disciplines of a system founded on choice instead of captivity, should start to improve.

Judges furrow their brows as nicely as you please, but when - as with Robin Hood - what they say doesn't agree with the common sense of most people, well, we're all in trouble. And so are the judges, I don't mind one bit adding.

Registering to vote is just a stamp away

DEAR ABBY: Recently a reader asked what was involved in registering to vote. (Your reader was not registered and was too embarrassed to admit it.)

Fortunately for that individual, and others who are in the same boat, voting has never been easier.

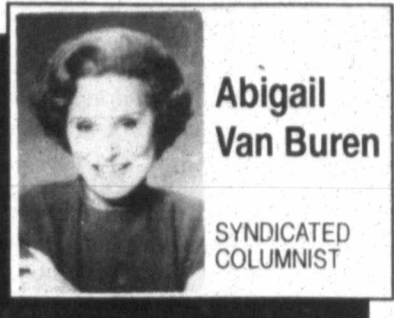

Based on a new federal law that took effect this year, citizens in virtually every state can now register by mail or in person at their local town hall. They can pick up mail-in voter registration cards at their local town hall, public libraries, motor vehicle offices and social service agencies in their state. Most states mail out voter registration cards with driver's license forms.

In all cases, simply fill out the voter registration form, sign it, mail it in, and once the local clerk or registrar approves the form, you're a voter! It's the first step to being a full participant in our democracy, and you can do it any time of year. When the next election occurs in your community, you can vote for the candidate of your choice.

The strength and vitality of our democracy depend on the participation of citizens, and the new law is already helping thousands of Americans to register, and exercise their right to vote.

Abby, please urge every one of your readers of legal age to vote!

MILES S. RAPOPORT,
SECRETARY OF STATE,
CONNECTICUT

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Thank you for informing the many interested (but unregistered) citizens. For my young readers who may not realize they are old enough to vote, the legal voting age is 18.

DEAR ABBY: I nearly spilled my coffee when my poem, "Middle Children," popped out at me from your column. It appeared originally in Good Housekeeping magazine in July 1960.

I am delighted to learn that it helped at least one "middle child" feel better about herself — though it's a bit hard to figure out how such a prominently displayed author's name could have vanished into the mists. Another lesson in humility, I guess!

My poetry still appears in national publications. And, Abby, you would do all of us poets and other writers a favor if you would caution your readers not to clip and pass printed material along to others without including the author's name, and the publication's as well, so proper credit can be given and permission to reprint can be obtained, if that is ever contemplated.

Meanwhile, I do appreciate your (and Ms. Williams') kindly comments about my poem. With that warm feeling, I really didn't need the coffee to wake up.

MARY MARGARET MILBRATH, FLOSSMOOR, ILL.

DEAR MARY MARGARET MILBRATH: That lovely poem was sent to me clearly stating that the author was unknown. Thank you for setting the record straight.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter has been dating a young man for about a year, and he has asked us for her hand in marriage. Last night he told our daughter that he is a philatelist.

Do you think we should consent to this marriage?

LINDA'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Why not? He has as much right to collect old stamps as you have to collect old jokes.

Horoscope

Tuesday, March 14, 1995

In the year ahead, it will be to your advantage to update your knowledge of your chosen field of endeavor. Big opportunities loom on the horizon, but you must qualify for what they offer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your mobility and independence will be important to you today, so steer clear of dominant personalities who might try to tell you how you allocate your time and resources. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.50 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not talk critically about a co-worker with another co-worker. He/she might pretend to agree with you, but actually take offense at what you say.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When supervising others today, take care not to lay down too many rules. If you do, there's a very good chance they might deliberately ignore them all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you try to impress others today by pretending to know all about something that you've never actually studied, you're liable to fall flat on your face.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is not a good day to talk to a pessimistic friend about something you're enthusiastically planning. This individual could plant seeds of doubt.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Exercise extreme caution today if you have to do business with strangers. Ask them to put their offer on paper, then read it very carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Although you are usually very thoughtful with others, you might be so anxious to make your points today that you won't let them voice their opinions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It would be wise today to temporarily set aside assignments that require an aptness for detail. You might not be equipped to deal with small factors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could do well in business involvements today, but you might not score too many points in your social life. Try to be equally attentive to both.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friends like and appreciate you for what you are, so there is no need to put on airs. Affectations could tarnish your image instead of enhancing it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might impulsively repeat an old mistake. Try counting to ten before reacting to any given situation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Acknowledge the favors that others do for you today. If you overlook someone, he/she won't be anxious to help you again in the future.

Police opened fire on demonstrators in Istanbul

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Police opened fire today on thousands of demonstrators during a protest over deadly attacks on a moderate Islamic group. At least three people were reported killed.

Galay Gun, a City Council member, said from the scene that police fired in an attempt to disperse the crowd when protesters took up iron bars and began marching.

She said three people were killed and at least eight others were wounded.

The protest march was called after gunmen killed one person and wounded 25 Sunday in attacks on four coffeehouses and one bakery aimed at a moderate Islamic group, the Alawites. The group has been at odds with the city government since Muslim fundamentalists won local elections last year.

Bill seeks to prohibit pumping iron in prisons

HOUSTON (AP) — Two state lawmakers think prison inmates shouldn't be buffed.

But iron-pumping inmates and some of the officials who work with them say Rep. Tom Ramsay and Sen. Jeff Wentworth are missing the point with their bills to remove prison weight rooms.

Gregg Johnson, a 179-pound convicted murderer who has become addicted to the weight room at the Eastham Unit during his 13 years in prison, can execute a squat lift with 660 pounds on his shoulders.

"We get a sense of discipline we never experienced before," he said.

"There are dozens of guys in here that are totally different people because of weightlifting. A lot of us have never put such an importance on anything. This has really given me new direction, a new foundation. The discipline reflects on a lot of things in my life," he said.

Johnson is a member of an Eastham Unit weightlifting team that holds the prison system championship. In prison, working with free weights is a privilege earned by good conduct.

Working with weights is about dedication, discipline and reward, not about bad guys getting stronger, said Mario Cotton, recreation supervisor and coach of the Eastham lifters.

Stacked on top of the recent banning of tobacco products in prison, removing weights would be like "putting gas on fire," Cotton said.

"The cigarettes are gone and they're wired," he said of ex-smokers.

"There is a psychological mind-set to being bulked up and I don't like that mind-set in a criminal," said Rep. Tom Ramsay, D-Mount Vernon, who's pushing legislation to ban inmate weightlifting.

"It is a process where they can build themselves into a strength situation where they could be dangerous, not just in prison but after they get out," he said.

Ramsay said he wants to cut out inmate fun. His bill also would ban TVs in prison.

Wentworth, R-San Antonio, said comments from his constituents prompted his bill, which is similar to Ramsay's. It would require the state to dispose of the equipment and use the proceeds for other recreational equipment, such as basketballs.

"I dare say that a lot of tax-paying citizens wish they had a little spare time so they could work out in a weight room," he told The Houston Post for an article in Sunday editions.

"There is enjoyment involved by prisoners both in the exercise of weightlifting and also in exhibiting themselves after they build their bodies into whatever they want them built into," he said. "They may be building themselves into a dangerous weapon, so to speak, after they acquire the strength and mind-set — this feeling they are bulletproof and can whip anybody."

But the lawmakers and some of their custodians disagree.

Patient dies following second error at hospital

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The same hospital where a surgeon amputated the wrong leg of a patient admits it made another mistake two weeks later that led to the death of a 77-year-old man.

Leo Alfonso died March 3 less than an hour after a respiratory technician at University Community Hospital mistakenly removed his ventilator, hospital officials said. The technician was supposed to have taken another patient off a ventilator, hospital spokesman John Andreas said Sunday.

On Sunday, hospital telephones jangled with calls from people worried about friends and family in the hospital's care, but no one insisted on transferring patients, said hospital spokesman Casey Ashline.

"Certainly it's disconcerting and extremely tragic," he said. "We've been here 26 years and we have an excellent reputation with no previous incidents like this."

Ed Towey, spokesman for the state Agency for Health Care Administration called the two incidents unusual.

"Oh dear. My, my, my," he said.

"These guys can't buy a break." Hospital administrators had asked the agency to review the hospital after a surgeon amputated the wrong foot of a diabetes patient on Feb. 20.

Willie King had gone to the hospital to have his gangrenous right foot removed, and awoke from surgery to find his left leg amputated below the knee.

The hospital said that mistake was due to a communications breakdown and announced March 1 it was instituting new surgical procedures to try to ensure that such an error wouldn't occur again.

Those procedures include marking "No" on a patient's good limb before surgery.

Do's and don'ts of ear cleaning

By Dr. J. THOMAS ROLAND JR.
For AP Special Features

Cleaning an ear.

It's such a simple act, yet it's one that tens of thousands of Americans perform incorrectly each day.

The improper hygiene typically involves the misuse of a cotton swab. Although the consequences are usually benign, occasional damage, including ear infections, can result.

So, if you are a habitual ear cleaner, learn the proper technique for cleaning — including how to use cotton swabs — and avoid damaging one of the most sensitive parts of your body.

Most people clean their ears with cotton swabs, perfect for wiping the outside portion of the ear, where wax naturally and slowly spirals out of the ear canal in a self-cleaning process.

However, many ear cleaners don't limit the use of the swab to wiping the outer ear. They insert the swabs into the ear canal and swirl the stick in an effort to catch wax. This is where a number of problems begin.

First, earwax should not be removed from inside the ear canal. Also known as cerumen, the wax is a glandular secretion that has antibacterial qualities which protect against infections.

An inserted swab disrupts the natural self-cleaning process; some wax is removed and other wax is pushed back into the ear canal. Portions of the ear canal will have little protective wax or too much, and either condition can increase the likelihood of infection in the canal.

The swab stick can also tear the skin lining of the ear canal. Ear canal skin is very thin and sensitive and rests on top of bone, the only place in the body where there is no other protective layer between skin and bone. So, if the skin breaks, this disrupted protection heightens the risk of infection.

Also, a swab which is deeply pushed into the ear canal can traumatize the eardrum, which is at the end of the canal and collects sound and transmits it to the middle and inner ear. Hearing damage and chronic infection can result.

The rule for ear cleaning is only clean the outer ear and the entry of the ear and never use objects other than a swab or washcloth for cleaning. Physicians see patients who have hurt their ears with bobby pins, keys, pencils and other long thin objects.

If your ear feels blocked, use a non-prescription wash kit or eardrops. With gentle water pressure, the loose stuff in your ear should come out. If blockage persists, see a doctor, who can use special tools and techniques to clean your ears.

BASEBALL

DUMAS — Borger scored three runs in the top of the seventh to defeat Pampa, 3-1, Saturday in the finals of the Dumas Tournament. Bryan Martindale's RBI hit in the third put Pampa on top, 1-0.

Hank Gindorf went the distance on the mound for the Harvesters, giving up six hits.

"Gindorf pitched a great game. We had some opportunities to score that we missed out on," said Pampa head coach Dennis Doughty. Gindorf, along with Todd Finney and Rene Armendariz, were named to the all-tournament team.

Pampa (3-2) hosts Tascosa (3-3) at 4 p.m. today at Harvester Field. The Harvesters meet Dalhart at 11 a.m. Thursday in the first round of the Canyon-Randall Classic.

PAMPA — The Pampa Optimists Boys Club is sponsoring a Mid-America's All Star Baseball School at Pampa on April 7-9.

Instructors will be the Oklahoma State Baseball School staff. Age limit is 8 to 18.

Check-in will be at 6 p.m. Friday, April 7, at the Pampa Optimists Boys Club, with the first session being from 7-9 p.m. the same day. Sessions on Saturday, April 8, will be from 9 a.m. to noon and 1-4 p.m. On Sunday, April 9, sessions will be from 1-3 p.m. and 3:30-5:30 p.m. Attendees may bring their own lunch or purchase at club facilities.

Registration fee includes a chance at a drawing for an Oklahoma State hat and Gary Ward's 125 drills videotape for each 10 students in attendance. A minimum of 25 students is needed for the school to be held. An advance deposit will be required. Applications may be picked up at Hoagies, Pampa Office Supply and Warner Horton.

For costs and other information, contact Jon Aven, 1-800-950-2267 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, or Mike Schale at 665-4007 after 6 p.m. or at 665-5555 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

PRO BASKETBALL

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael's mystery has everyone on edge. What's he going to do? Play basketball or not? And when's he going to let everyone in on his plans?

Michael Jordan surfaced this morning at the Bulls' practice center in north suburban Deerfield before the team began practice. There was no word on whether Jordan would participate today, though reports he would make an announcement about his future and end all the speculation.

"When Michael makes his decision, why can't we just all wait for him to make it?" Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf said in a phone interview from Arizona on Sunday. "He needs to be left alone so he can think. If he wants to consult with anybody, he can."

"I think he's going to weigh it out another week and probably come back and see us maybe Monday and Thursday when we have a couple of practices and then see how it goes from there," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said again Sunday on NBC.

Intriguing subplots dot NCAA field

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Norm Stewart has coached 84 more games than Bobby Knight — and lost them all.

Now, in one of those intriguing subplots that make the NCAA tournament one of the most delectable entries on the menu of sport, Stormin' Norman (659-318) and Indiana's most famous chair-thruster (659-234) will finally match coaching wits.

Missouri, No. 8 seed in the West Regional, meets Knight's ninth-seeded Hoosiers at Boise, Idaho, on Friday.

"We've never played, all these years," said Stewart, the dean of Big Eight coaches. "Bobby and I talked about it seven or eight years ago and I thought at one time we had it set. Something happened, and it just never came about."

Elsewhere, it seemed obvious that some schools have been listening to messages sent by the selection committee and some have not. Several mid-level conferences who normally whine about getting only their automatic entry did better this time.

Extra bids went to the West Coast, the Metro Atlantic and the Mid-America conferences, while left out in the cold were such traditional programs from big-time leagues as Georgia Tech (18-12) and Iowa (19-11).

"Some of these schools made an attempt to improve their schedule," said Bob Frederick, selection committee chairman.

Georgia Tech, in addition to its always-tough ACC slate, scheduled Western Carolina, East Carolina, Lafayette and Furman — not exactly a murderers' row.

"We've tried to encourage (schools) to improve their schedules," Frederick said. "There are some larger schools in some of the bigger conferences that don't necessarily do that, and have been hurt by it. But I think some of them got the message."

When action starts in first-round sites around the country Thursday and Friday, chances seem slight that a No. 16 seed will knock off a No. 1 seed for the first time since the bracket expanded to 64 teams in 1985.

Seeded No. 1 is UCLA in the West, Kansas in the Midwest, Kentucky in the Southeast and, in a bit of a surprise, Wake Forest in the East. Drawing UCLA (25-2), which enters the tourney ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press poll for the first time since John Wooden's last national championship season in 1975, is Florida International.

At 11-18, the Golden Panthers of the Trans America Conference have the worst record of any tournament team since 1961.

That was the same year Oregon, an at-large entry from the Pac-10, made its last tournament appearance. Besides Florida International, tournament first-timers include Mount St. Mary's, Colgate, Nicholls State and Gonzaga.

Anybody whose team got left out cannot accuse the committee of rushing things, Frederick declared.

"We had over 100 teams that were under consideration," said the committee head and director of athletics at Kansas. "During the course of the process, we took 63 secret ballots. We had 60 teams with 20 or more wins and 20 with 19 wins. We worked very hard. ..."

"As late as 10:30 last night we looked at an additional 24 teams and tried to subject them to the same scrutiny we subjected the others to. We wanted to make sure we didn't leave anybody out."

The 16 second-round winners will draw into regionals at Kansas City; Birmingham, Ala.; East Rutherford, N.J., and Oakland, Calif.

Pampa's Jeremy Nunn (left) placed in two individual events at the UIL Region I swim meet last weekend in Lubbock. Nunn was also a member of the boys' 200 medley and 400 freestyle relay teams which finished third and fifth respectively.

PHS boys place fifth in swim regionals

LUBBOCK — Out of 22 teams, Pampa finished a respectable fifth in the boys' division at the UIL Region I Swim Meet held last weekend at the Texas Tech Aquatic Center.

Individually, Pampa's Jakob Bullard placed the highest of any of the Pampa swimmers with a third-place medal in the 100 breaststroke and a time of 1:03.75.

Pampa's 200-medley relay team of Bobby Venal, Dakota Tefertiller, Jeremy Nunn and Jakob Bullard finished third with a time of 1:44.33.

"I believe that's the highest a Pampa team has ever placed in the 200-medley relay at regionals. I don't think a Pampa team has ever finished higher than fifth," said Pampa coach Cody Huckaby.

Jeremy Nunn finished fifth or better in two events. He was fifth in the 100 butterfly (55.80) and fourth in the 500 freestyle (4:56.33). Dakota Tefertiller was fourth in the 100 breaststroke with a time of 1:04.56.

Pampa's 400 freestyle relay team of Bobby Venal, Jeremy Nunn, Chris Nelson and Jakob Bullard was fifth in 3:31.51. Pampa finished tenth in the girls' division.

Pampa's 200 medley team of Janet Dancel, Shannon Schakel, Talitha Pope and Ashlee David placed fourth with a time of 2:00.74.

Ashlee David was fifth in the 50 freestyle with a time of 26.36. The 400 freestyle relay team of Talitha Pope, Janet Dancel, Peggy Williams and Ashlee David placed sixth with a time of 4:03.87. The 200 freestyle relay team, made up of the same group, was sixth at 1:49.41.

The winning times in each event at the eight regions advance to the state meet. The next eight fastest times also advance.

El Paso Eastwood won the boys' championship. Lubbock High was second, Midland High third, Amarillo High fourth, Pampa fifth and San Angelo Central sixth.

Midland Lee won the girls' division. Amarillo High was second, San Angelo Central third, Permian fourth, El Paso Eastwood fifth and Abilene Cooper sixth.

"They did a great job this season," said Huckaby of his Pampa teams. "We had seven school records broken, five for the boys and two for the girls."

Groom teams win own invitational meet

GROOM — The Groom High School boys and girls track teams each took the overall spots for the Groom Invitational Relays Track Meet held Saturday.

The Groom boys team scored 167 points in 16 events to gain first place overall, while the Groom girls garnered 174 points in 16 events for their first-place ranking.

The White Deer High School boys and girls teams each gained second place in the team finishes, the boys with 120 points and the girls with 151 points.

In the boys division, Booker was third with 119, Valley ranked fourth with 68, Trinity Fellowship took fifth with 41 and San Jacinto Christian was sixth with 33 points.

In the girls division, Booker gained third with 94, Valley was fourth with 54, San Jacinto Christian took fifth with 25 and Alamo Catholic was sixth with 4.

In the small high school division, Fort Elliott came in first in the boys division with 102 points and McLean took second place with 71 points in 14 events.

Other finishers in the boys division were Higgins, third with 66; Lefors, fourth, with 58; Channing, fifth, with 50; Silvertown, sixth, with 35; Hedley, seventh, with 29; and Hartley, eighth, with 27.

In the girls class of the small high school division, Hedley took first with 111 points in 15 events, while Higgins was second with 97. Fort Elliott placed third and McLean fourth, each with 85.

Channing was fifth with 53, Lefors sixth with 49 and Hartley seventh with 34 points.

Novacek agrees to sign again with Cowboys

IRVING (AP) — Tight end Jay Novacek has agreed to sign a three-year, $4.8 million contract with the Dallas Cowboys.

"Some paperwork needs to be done but he has orally agreed to terms," said Cowboys spokesman Brett Daniels.

The agreement with Novacek late Sunday helped ease the pain of the recent losses of wide receiver Alvin Harper to Tampa Bay and Mark Stepanoski to the Houston Oilers.

"This was a big priority for us," Coach

Barry Switzer said Sunday night. "Jay's the only tight end Troy (Aikman) has ever thrown to. When it's third-and-medium, it's critical to have Jay. He makes it happen."

A last-minute offer from Green Bay almost changed Novacek's mind, said agent Frank Bauer.

The offer from Green Bay amounted to $1.75 million a year, making its three-year package $450,000 greater than the Cowboys' eventual winning offer, Bauer said.

Youngs take first

The Top of Texas Bassmasters had their first tournament of 1995 on March 4-5 at Baylor-Childress Lakes. First place went to Mike and Anna Young (pictured above) with second place going to Joe Millican and Damon Admire. Anna Young won Big Bass and broke the 22-year old club record with a 9.17 catch. Joe Millican also broke the previous record at 8.56. "It was cold and windy, but worth the trip. Just ask Anna or Joe," said Bassmasters Club secretary Maxine Stauffacher. The next club meeting will be April 4 at 7:30 p.m. in Lovett Memorial Library, 111 N. Houston. Anyone interested in joining the club is welcome to attend. For more information concerning the meeting or club, call Maxine Stauffacher, at 835-2762.

CIA nomination amid 'tabloid atmosphere'

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, exasperated by yet another frustrated nomination, says the White House did everything right in naming a new CIA director but was still tripped up by the "tabloid atmosphere" surrounding the nomination process.

"This one really was by the books," Panetta said Sunday about retired Air Force Gen. Michael P.C. Cams, who withdrew his name Friday after admitting some errors in the hiring of an immigrant worker.

President Clinton on Saturday named Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch as his new nominee to head the intelligence agency.

Panetta, speaking on CBS' Face the Nation, said the administration got caught in a "Catch-22" situation where it wants to move quickly to fill vacancies but must wait two to three months for the FBI to complete background checks that occasionally, as in the Cams case, reveal information that upsets a nomination.

"Here's General Cams, who has had a 30-year career, he's a war hero, flown 200 missions over Southeast Asia, gone through Department of Defense background checks, security clearances, unanimously acclaimed when we nominated him for this position, and then after an FBI check someone comes out of the wall with some pretty nasty allegations and the general basically decides he doesn't want to go through hell, having to face those allegations.

"It's unfortunate, but we're living in kind of a tabloid atmosphere these days," Panetta said.

He denied that the Cams withdrawal reflected badly on the administration or could affect national security as the CIA struggles to overcome the Aldrich Ames spy case.

"I think the fact is, the president acted quickly here to name John Deutch. ... He's an outstanding individual. He's going to bring tremendous leadership to that position," Panetta said.

Among other White House nominees who withdrew their names or never took office because of various problems were Zoe Baird for attorney general, Lani Guinier for the Justice Department's top civil rights post and Bobby Ray Inman for defense secretary. The nomination of Henry Foster to be surgeon general is being held up by questions on his record of performing abortions.

Deutch, who went through extensive background checks in being confirmed for his current position, is expected to have a smooth road to confirmation in the new job.

"I expect to support him," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said on NBC's Meet the Press. "I think he's a good choice. He probably should have been chosen to begin with."

Wealthy Mexicans indulge in peso dodging

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Wealthy Mexicans are shipping cattle in droves across the Rio Grande, building apartments in Texas and forming partnerships with U.S. steel companies to protect their assets from a plummeting peso.

According to a report in the Sunday editions of The Monitor newspaper in McAllen, Mexicans owners can get as much as 50 percent more for cattle in the U.S. than in their home country.

"And, they are paid in dollars," said John Schrock, owner of a Starr County feedlot. "There are so many, they are crossing at all crossing points allowed."

As the peso fell Thursday to its fifth consecutive record low, the Mexican government announced plans to increase sales tax, as well as hike in gasoline and electric prices and assorted fees.

Business and labor leaders have rejected President Ernesto Zedillo's prescription for Mexico's ailing economy, despite his insistence that their help is needed.

So while ranchers in the border state of Tamaulipas are driving their cattle north, Mexico City's billionaires are investing in offshore corporations.

"They are putting their money into safe places until the peso crisis shakes out," said Dale A. Kimball Jr., a McAllen lawyer who works with Mexicans investing in the United States and U.S. residents investing in Mexico.

In Monterrey, Mexico, about 150 miles south of Laredo, businessman Salvador Estrella said his own steel company is negotiating a joint venture with an Ohio company as a refuge from the unstable Mexican currency.

"Everyone would, if they could," he said. "We are looking for short-term investments."

But Mexicans do not always find it easy to get their money out of the country, according to Leo Lopez, vice president of McAllen National Bank.

"They borrowed money from Mexican banks, and interest rates went from 20 to 50 percent," Lopez said.

Now, many Mexicans who had borrowed in Mexico are trying to pay off those loans by using their U.S. dollar accounts, he said.

"We are also seeing customers borrowing money in dollars and using deposits as collateral," he said. "They say that as soon as they get their loans liquidated, they are getting their money out of the country. There is a 70 percent inflation rate in Mexico."

Small and medium-size businesses in Mexico are looking north more often for partnerships and experience rather than taking their money out of Mexico, said Victor Hernandez, owner of Proyectos y Edificaciones Hervic, a construction company in Monterrey.

Extremists kidnap girl from school, cut her throat

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Six Islamic extremists kidnapped a girl from her school today, then killed her by slashing her throat near the school gate, the official Algerian news agency reported.

The slaying was one of several reports of attacks on women since Friday, the deadline set by Islamic extremists demanding that female sympathizers be freed from jail.

Fatima Ghodbane, 15, was killed outside the Mohamed Lazhar school near Blida, south of Algiers, the APS news agency said.

APS also reported that eight gunmen killed a pregnant woman today at her home near Blida. It gave no motive for the slaying, but the region is a center of Islamic extremism.

The agency confirmed a newspaper report of the assassinations Saturday of two sisters, aged 18 and 21, who were killed in front of their father and 13-year-old sister by gunmen who barged into the family home.

One of the slain women was the fiancée of a policeman, the newspaper Liberte reported. Another older sister, also the fiancée of a policeman, was killed last year, the paper said.

The Armed Islamic Group has threatened to attack the wives of police and army officers in retribution for the refusal of the military-backed regime to free women jailed as sympathizers to the militants.

A car bomb Friday at a project housing policemen's families in an Algiers suburb injured 63 people.

Thousands of militants have been jailed since the start of an Islamic insurgency three years ago that has killed an estimated 30,000 people. Armed groups began their effort to install an Islamic state by force since the army canceled January 1992 elections that Muslim fundamentalists were winning.
