PAMPA, TEXAS

50¢ DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Good Evening!

The Lefors LEFORS Independent School District board election will be held in conjunction with the Lefors city election on May 6.

While Pat Seely was named absentee judge for the election during Monday night's meeting of the school board, judges and clerks for the May 6 election will be provided by the city, Joe Roper, Lefors ISD superintendent, said today.

Three members of the board of trustees are up for election, Roper said. Keith Roberson, Barry Jackson and Clay Lock will face the voters in May.

In other business during Monday night's regularly scheduled meeting of the Lefors ISD school board, trustees approved all teacher contracts and approved the Glencoe health text book for the 1995-1996 school year.

PAMPA — A fund-raising drive is underway to collect money to finance a heart transplant for a Pampa man.

Kim Lindsay, 40, was diagnosed with a viral heart infection in January and is in need of a heart transplant, according to Gladson Reed. Lindsay is in line for a transplant in Albuquerque, N.M., and must raise $100,000 for the procedure.

An account has been opened at First National Bank of Pampa, Box 781, Pampa.

Lindsay's family members include his wife, Debbie Lindsay his daughters Lucretia, a student at West Texas A&M, and Amber, a Pampa High School senior, and his mother, Bernice Rowland.

PAMPA - Pampa Home Educators' Association is to host a demonstration of A Beka Book home school resources.

The 20-minute presentation is set to begin at 7 p.m. Thursday in the fellowship hall at First Baptist Church. Textbooks for nursery school through 12th grade will be available for review.

The curriculum is Christianbased and offers an intensive phonics program for early education instruction. A Beka also offers a correspondence school and a video home school program.

A Beka claims use by over 20,000 private school and over 150,000 home schooling families nationwide.

The public is invited.

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — A former Pampa, Texas, teen now living in North Carolina has been accused of shooting his father in early January.

William Linwood Clark Jr., 15, of Mebane, N.C., stands charged with murder in the shooting death of his father, 44year-old William Linwood Clark Sr., on Jan. 12. The teen was indicted in Superior court in Hillsborough on Feb. 20. According to a spokesman for the Orange County district attorney's office, the youth will be tried "with all the rights and privileges of an adult."

The boy formerly attended Pampa schools.

Mr. Clark was shot once in the back of the head with an SKS 7.62-mm rifle in his trailer house on Buckhorn Road in Mebane, according to The Raleigh News and Observer.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. George Pataki, using the pen of a slain police officer, signed legislation today to make New York the 38th state with a death penalty.

The law is to take effect with crimes committed on or after Sept. 1. The method of execution: lethal injection.

The Republican-controlled Senate passed the bill Monday evening. The state Assembly then approved the measure today.

Cold, thunderstorms move across Texas

From AP and Staff Reports

At least one suspected tornado wreaked havoc on parts of Southeast Texas early today as a line of severe thunderstorms rumbled across the state.

At least five people were slightly hurt, officials said.

The storms were the vanguard of an Arctic cold front that moved rapidly across the state Monday night and early today, dropping temperatures from afternoon highs in the 80 degrees yesterday to forecasted lows tonight in the 30s.

The Arctic cold front moved rapidly across the state Monday night and early today. In West Texas, it had pushed through all but extreme western sections, dropping temperatures into the low teens with a covering of sleet and light snow.

Accuser turns accused as investigation grows in Mexican assassination case has become the accused in Mexico's most spectacular murder case.

Mario Ruiz Massieu, who as a federal prosecutor claimed a highlevel coverup in his brother's murder, was charged Monday with trying to divert attention from the true mastermind: the brother of then-President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

And the Attorney General's Office said it has learned from U.S. Customs officials that $6.9 million was deposited in a Houston bank under Ruiz Massieu's name.

The money supposedly arrived between March and November 1994 - a period when Mario Ruiz Massieu headed anti-narcotics prosecutions in Mexico as well as the probe of the September murder of his brother, the second-highest official in Mexico's governing party.

These were the latest shocking twists to a case that has shaken Mexico's political establishment, already battered by the country's economic crisis.

Ruiz Massieu appeared in a Newark, N.J., federal court on Monday to answer charges of failing also asked he be held for extradition to Mexico.

A bail hearing was scheduled for March 14 in Newark.

MEXICO CITY (AP) - The accuser Office said Monday that a judge had issued an arrest warrant for the former prosecutor, a necessary step for extradition. It said a formal extradition request would be made within 60 days.

As the court met in New Jersey, another judge in Mexico ended a sixday arraignment of Raul Salinas de Gortari and ordered him held for trial on charges of plotting the murder of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, Mario's brother.

Carlos Salinas de Gortari, whose presidential term ended Dec. 1, was not implicated.

The September assassination of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, the No. 2 man in the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, was one of several high-profile murders and kidnappings that have jolted Mexico and called its stability into question.

A Roman Catholic cardinal was slain in 1993, the favored presidential candidate was assassinated in March 1994 and one of the nation's top bankers was held by unidentified kidnappers for a huge ransom.

Surgeon general nominee reminds students patient is most important thing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Shirt has performed as an obstetricianclean, Dr. Henry Foster, the besieged surgeon general nominee, toured a hospital wing for babies who are critically ill, very premature or just out of surgery. He then turned and told Dr. Anne Fletcher, director of the neonatal unit at Children's National Medical Center, that he would try to reduce the number of low birth-weight babies as the nation's top advocate for public health.

Another goal, he said later, would be to reduce teenage pregnancies.

"We have to turn that around by enhancing life options," Foster said Monday in a speech to young doctors and medical students at the hospital.

Foster, former dean and acting president of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., was nominated by President Clinton last month to be surgeon general. But conservatives and abortion opponents are lining up against him because he supports abortion rights and distributing condoms to young people.

The nomination came under furof the number of abortions Foster teaching responsibility.

Foster has personally lobbied the senators who will vote on the nomination and has made several public appearances on his own behalf. Confirmation hearings are expected to begin this month.

After viewing the babies hooked up to all kinds of blipping monitors, Foster told a group of young doctors and students that truly caring about patients is as important as knowing how to treat them medically.

He said the surgeon general's post is "critically important" to the nation because it involves educating Americans about health issues. He said that as a teacher at the medical college he encouraged students to learn and get good grades, but that was only part of his job.

"I had to stress the art of care," he said. "You have to care about your patient. If you don't do that you're not complete as a physician.'

The New Jersey 'family cap' reform

Much of the current congressional debate on welfare reform revolves around the link between subsidizing unwed young mothers and the rising rates of illegitimacy in the

In the past 30 years, when welfare programs have greatly expanded, the national illegitimacy rate has risen from 5 percent to 30 percent. Among blacks, the rate has soared from 25 percent to more than 66 percent, an incredible debilitation for that community. (The welfare-illegitimacy link, it should be noted, is not a racial matter: welfare-state Sweden, where 99 percent of the population is white, has a 50 percent illegiti-

It turns out that New Jersey has provided a laboratory of sorts to test the welfare-illegitimacy link.

Until 1993, in New Jersey, as in all states, women receiving payments from the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program received an automatic increase in benefits for each additional child they had.

In 1993, however, black Democratic Assemblyman Wayne Bryant won passage in the New Jersey legislature of an innovative reform known as the 'family cap.' Mothers already enrolled in AFCD, no longer received the automatic increase for additional children.

Heritage Foundation Senior Policy Analyst Robert Rector describes the results: "In the experimental program, a 4 percent reduction in the dollar value of monthly welfare benefits was found to cause a 29 percent decrease in future illegitimate births among women enrolled in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program.

Despite the modest nature of the experiment, Mr. Rector noted, "During the first 10 months after the cap went into effect (from August 1993 to June 1994), births among AFDC mothers subject to the family cap were significantly lower than births to AFDC mothers in the control group who were exempt from the cap.'

The lesson seems clear. It's time for government to stop being a "virtual father." And it's time for taxpayers to stop subsidizing illegitimacy.

Compensation vs. confiscation

In 1986, David Lucas bought two residential lots on a South Carolina barrier island, planning to do just what all the neighbors had done: build beach houses. Big miscalculation. In 1988, the state passed a law forbidding the construction of permanent structures in that area - and Lucas' $1.2 million property was suddenly worth just about nothing.

Plenty of landowners have gotten shafted by government land use regulations, but Lucas was one of the luckier ones. In 1992, the Supreme Court said the state had essentially confiscated his property and was obligated to pay him $1.2 million - in keeping with the Fifth Amendment provision that "private property may not be taken for public use without just compensation." It was his good fortune that the law had entirely destroyed the value of his parcel. If it had merely cut it in half, Lucas would have had to swallow the loss. The Supreme Court rule was clear: Full destruction of the value of a piece of land requires full compensation, but partial destruction requires no compensation.

Does that seem fair? It does to House Republicans, who included in their Contract With America a promise to create a more consistent policy. Under a bill that is expected to reach the House floor next week, property owners who suffer substantial economic losses because of federal controls on land use would be entitled to compensation. The bill would mainly affect restrictions meant to protect endangered species or wetlands. It would come into play, as the Competitive Enterprise Institute explains, "when federal regulations prevent private landowners from exercising the reasonable use of their property, such as building a home, filling a ditch or planting a crop."

The principle is simple: If the public thinks a particular wetland or forest is important enough to protect health and safety. If a landowner is dumping all of us - should also pay the bill.

deserve protection from development, the public should be willing to pay to keep it pristine. If it is not important enough for all of us to pay for, we should not expect a single unlucky landowner to bear the cost alone.

Fair compensation has always been required when the government expropriates land to build highways and create nature preserves. But when the government merely compelled a private landowner to create a nature preserve, in effect, at her own expense, the rule didn't apply - even though the deprivation might have been equally costly. Only in recent years has the Supreme Court understood that regulation can amount to confiscation. But the court has only rarely been willing to make government bodies pay for such losses. And even when property owners have a winning case, they may lack the resources for a court fight. More protection is needed. So the GOP's Private Property Protection Act would require the federal government to reimburse landowners when regulations devalue their property by 10 percent or more.

Critics claim that this will mean paying polluters not to pollute. But the bill takes pains to exclude toxic waste into a creek that flows through his neighbor's property, he can expect no monetary reward when he is forced to stop. University of Chicago law professor Richard Epstein notes that the government can always escape the obligation to pay in either of two ways: "It can show that regulation is reasonably calculated to prevent the infliction of some present or threatened harm to others; or it can show that the in-kind benefits the regulation provides the landowner offset the losses it impos-

Environmentalists retort that if owners are entitled to compensation from the government when it reduces the value of their property, they should have to pay the government when it raises the value of their property, say, by building a new road or a subway system. But property owners who benefit from federal projects have already paid for them, through

And the federal government will not owe anything just because it does something to lower someone's property values. Cutting off farm subsidies would have that effect; so would tightening pollution regulations; so would establishing a nuclear waste site. But the victims would have no recourse - because the government has not deprived them of any of the customary prerogatives of property owners. This bill upholds something more precious than mere land values: individual liberties rooted in the Constitution.

Until now, Americans have been able to advance supposedly worthy goals like safeguarding the habitat of the spotted owl at no cost to themselves, by conscripting landowners to shoulder the burden. This measure would assure that those who enjoy the pollution laws, zoning ordinances and measures to benefits of preserving an environmental amenity -

We might start with a manifesto addressed to liberals, conservatives, social democrats, socialists, communists, libertarians and capitalists. It should go something like this:

We are human beings, not economic units. The purpose of human life is not to make widgets. The purpose of society is not to make widgets. The purpose of government is not to facilitate the making of widgets. The measure of a good life, a good person, a good society, a good nation is not economic.

If you think about it, nearly all of the political debate in the postwar era has been framed in economic terms - which system will best promote the production of the most widgets? A person in modern America is judged a success if he has money, no matter how he got it, no matter how much of a louse in human terms he may be.

Both Gingrich and his democratic counterpart are saying to the American people, "My system will offer you the most economic benefits."

Charley Reese

To which we should reply, we work to live, not live to work. What we want you guys to do is stop interfering in our lives, stop messing them up. Our goal is to have communities in which people are as happy and content as it is possible to be, given the human condition. We don't need to be millionaires to achieve that.

Of course, there is a material or economic aspect of human life. We must work in order to provide food and shelter and amenities. The question is one of priorities - do you live to work or work to live? And do you structure your laws to benefit people or to benefit corporations? Do you measure success in terms of healthy, happy people or in terms of corporate profits and stock share prices?

The North American Free Trade Agreement, for example, benefits corporations and hurts people, both American and Mexican. It gives corporations access to cheap Mexican labor and the American market. Already, 36,000 of our fellow citizens have lost their jobs because of NAFTA.

What has saved many jobs is political and social instability in Mexico. The big shots weren't as smart as they thought they were. Nothing scares a Wall Street shark more than a hungry man with a match and a gun. I think you're going to see a revolution in Mexico. Certainly if I were Mexican, I'd revolt.

And it would suit me if, when the revolution comes, our Mexican neighbors burn or nationalize every American factory in the country. The owners of those plants down there are not worthy of sympathy from either Americans or Mexicans. They are like vultures, feeding on the misery of the Mexican people, and totally indifferent to the fate of Americans.

Another example: Interest on people's savings is taxed. Interest on business loans is tax-deductible. This tax deduction is what made possible the junk bonds and the takeovers that ruined so many Americans. Eliminating the tax deduction for interest on business loans has to be a top priority in tax reform. That will strike a real blow at the sharks.

Finally, they tell us we must compete globally? No, we don't. We don't have to compete against forced labor in China and against cheap labor in Mexico. We just have to replace the politicians in Washington with people who will shut those humanmisery-subsidized products out of our market.

Gingrich reminds me of Gorbachev. Gorbachev intended to preserve the Soviet Union by introducing mild reforms, but the people seized the opportunity and dumped the whole system. We Americans should do the same.

Is the media a perfect scapegoat?

Chuck

Stone

O.J. Simpson does keep distinguished company. When it comes to journalistic allies, you can't beat this list: President Clinton, Rush Limbaugh, House Majority Leader Dick Armey, Sen. Bob Packwood, Rep. Maxine Waters, former CIA director Bobby Ray Inman and former President Bush counsel C. Boyden Gray. All dispute Cassius' lament that "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves."

Instead, they believe that a major source of their personal problems - and most social problems - is that unsavory, ubiquitous usurper of uprightness, the media. With O.J. they share a common hatred for a common enemy. The devil didn't make them do it: the media did.

Recently, on the front page of the eminently respectable New York Times was woman-brutalizing Orenthal James protesting that just as "some unknown killers murdered Nicole (Brown Simpson) and Ronald Goldman, now the press was murdering me."

On the same page was that ol' foulmouthed bigot himself, House Majority Leader Armey blaming the media for reporting his descent into execrable verbosity. Sloshing through a pool of his crocodile tears, the chubby-faced Texan tried to cop a plea after he had called his Democratic colleague, Rep. Barney Frank, who is openly gay, "Barney Fag."

"I take strong exception to the airing of the tape attack (sniffle). And I take this exception especially in light of the fact that I went to the press who had the tape (oh, save, First Amendment) and explained to them, in the best humor I could (groan), that I had simply (snivel) mispronounced (sob) a name." (parenthetical expressions are mine.)

Can any decent thinking person defend this apostle of bigotry - who comes off like a subliminal ally of people who believe that women are broads, blacks are niggers, Hispanics are spics and Jews are kikes? But like Martin Luther's lament that "it all depends on whose ox is gored," democracy's most precious instrument of freedom - the press - is being scorched these days as the culprit for everybody's accusations of sexual misconduct from responsible women, Sen. Packwood came up with an astonishing rebuttal, "the news media will even lie to get (the accusers') stories."

As did Spiro Agnew, Bill Clinton assails the "elite media" of being guilty of "a convergence of the way the press has handled (the Vincent Foster

Three months ago, former President Bush's counsel, Gray, peered down into the sewer of his mind and declared to an audience that the media's object "is not to destroy the presidency, but to take it over."

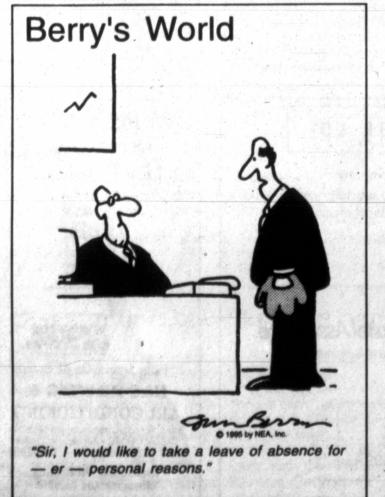

Inman, once exalted for his ability to walk on water, had declined to be Clinton's secretary of Defense because the press, led by ideological cannibal Bill Safire, had "savaged" him.

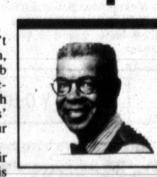

Limbaugh excoriates the "liberal media" for every sin since Eve gave Adam the apple. From my 37 years experience, I can assure you that massive empirical evidence easily proves that the American press is as racist as any institution in America. But it is also an equal opportunity gluteus maximus kicker.

Reporting the blatant misdeeds of a black organization does not, ipso facto, make the media racist. Rep. Waters accused "some members of the press, mostly members of the white press," of trying to create divi-sions among blacks. Waters has fought the good fight for decades. But trying to defend the NAACP leadership's series of unconscionable acts is tantamount to rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic.

For the media today, "These are the times that try men's souls." But just as democracy prevailed when (sob) and even the transcribing of a stumbled work case) and the way the Republicans have tried to Tom Paine wrote those works, the media, warts and all, (tear drop), as if it were an intentional personal manipulate it." Shrugging off the multiplicity of will continue to ennoble this wonderful experiment.

Why do golf balls have dimples?

A golf ball is dotted with up to 500 dimples. These tiny pits make the ball fly high, straight and far.

A thin skin of air clings to the front of a smooth ball in flight. It flows over the surface and leaves little swirls of air behind it when it leaves the ball. These swirls drag on the ball and slow it down. Also, because the air in front of the ball doesn't flow behind the ball, a low-pressure area forms in the back. This drags on the ball, too.

A golf ball's dimples force air to flow all the way to its rear. That way, the ball isn't left in a cloud of swirling air.

Dimpled balls fly straighter and faster than smooth balls. They also travel farther about three times as far. And that puts smiles - and dimples — on golfers' faces.

Monet's late make up traveling show

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Twenty-two of French Impressionist Claude Monet's late paintings of his Giverny gardens, including some of the water lilies series, have gone on show in an exhibition at the New Orleans Museum of Art that's scheduled to be shown later in San Francisco.

Besides water lilies, the works are full of the garden's delights — including roses, wisteria, irises and a weeping willow.

The paintings are on loan from the large collection of the Musee Marmottan, Paris, and the museum says eight of them have never been seen in the United States.

The works were all painted in the last two decades of the artist's life; he died in 1926 at Giverny. Museum director E. John Bullard calls them "the final flowering of a master

The exhibition, "Monet: Late Paintings of Giverny from the Musee Marmottan," will be on show at the Museum of Art through March 12. It will then travel to the M.H. de Young Memorial Museum, San Francisco, to be on view March 25-May 29 as part of the museum's centennial celebration.

DEAR HELEN: With pleasure. Here it is:

1. When you telephone your son at his home and his wife answers the phone, do not say, "Is John there?" Spend a few minutes asking how she is and what's new. And if they live out of town, when you write a letter, always address it to both your son and his wife.

UCLA stays No.1 in collegiate poll

By CHRIS DUNCAN Associated Press Writer

When Western Kentucky coach Matt Kilcullen told his team that it was ranked No. 23 in this week's poll, the first response from a player was, "It's about time."

The Hilltoppers, winners of 11 straight and 23 of their last 24 games, have not been ranked all season, although only top-ranked UCLA (23-2) has fewer losses and only fifth-ranked Arkansas (25-5) has as many wins.

But first-year coach Kilcullen is doing the traditional coach's job of downplaying of the ranking, Western's first since December 1993.

"It's is nice and we're happy with it — but it doesn't give us an automatic bid," Kilcullen said. "It's something we can be happy with, but it's something we now have to put on the back burner. We've got a lot of basketball left to play."

The Hilltoppers (25-3, 17-1 in the Sun Belt Conference) play Arkansas-Little Rock tonight for the conference tournament championship and an automatic NCAA Tournament berth. The Hilltoppers are probably already into the tournament but Kilcullen said tonight's game is an important one.

"We set a number of goals at the start of the season, and so far we've achieved about all of them - going undefeated at home (12-0), winning the conference and now putting ourselves in a position to get an automatic bid," Kilcullen said.

UCLA, meanwhile, remained No. 1 in the poll

The Bruins (23-2) were a near-unanimous choice of the nationwide media panel, getting 65 first-place votes and 1,649 points to easily outdistance Kansas (22-4), which moved up one spot to No. 2 with one first-place vote and 1,556 points.

Kentucky moved from fifth to third, while North Carolina dropped two spots to fourth. The rest of the Top Ten was Arkansas, Connecticut, Wake Forest, Massachusetts, Michigan State and Maryland.

The rest of the poll changed dramatically, with three teams moving into the rankings -No. 22 Utah, No. 23 Western Kentucky and No. 25 Oregon — and three dropping out — No. 20 Stanford, No. 24 Iowa State and No. 25 Xavier, Virginia led the Second Ten and was followed by Arizona, Villanova, Purdue, Mississippi State, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arizona State, Oklahoma State and Alabama. The last five ranked teams were Syracuse, Utah, Western Kentucky, Georgetown and Oregon.

Groom senior Bo Burgin (right) is guarded by Wheeler's Ramon Meraz during the The all-district team was selected by a vote of Groom Invitational earlier this season. Burgin was named to the District 3-1A All-District Team.

Simpson defense raises possibility of other killers pressing its "rush to judgment" theory, suggesting that drugs and a banana could have led a more vigilant police force to the real killer or killers.

Resuming cross-examination of Detective Tom Lange on Monday after an 10-day hiatus, defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. suggested two murder scenarios that would exclude Simpson:

- A drug hit possibly related to Faye Resnick, a friend of Nicole Brown Simpson's who admits past drug problems,

- Or something to do with Ronald Goldman, a young man with two lists: one of women's names and numbers, including Ms. Simpson's; and a grocery list that included bananas, which often carry a kind of sticker found at the crime scene.

Lange, who was to return to the stand today for more cross-examination, rejected both of Cochran's theories. The detective said he never seriously considered the possibility that someone other than Simpson was the culprit.

Law professor Robert Pugsley of Southwestern University said Cochran has a tough task ahead in placing all the information brought out during cross-examination into a palatable scenario for the jury.

"Anybody can throw around alternative theories, but LOS ANGELES (AP) - O.J. Simpson's defense kept he has yet to produce a witness who can back this up," Pugsley said.

Lange's testimony was the first time the jury heard from a witness since Feb. 23, when attention shifted to reluctant defense witness Rosa Lopez. As she had promised, Lopez returned Monday to her native El Salvador after having her alibi testimony videotaped for possible later use before the jury.

In court, Simpson's lawyers continued to press their two-pronged attack: trying to show that police were incompetent and that they rushed to incriminate Simpson without pursuing other leads.

For instance, Cochran asked if police looked into Resnick's background. The socialite lived with Ms. Simpson days before the murders, before she was admitted to a drug-treatment clinic. The judge barred questions about Resnick's entry into the clinic, where she was the night of the crime.

Lange said his partner, Detective Philip Vannatter, interviewed Resnick on tape. But Lange said he never listened to the recording.

"Did you ever look into the possibility drugs were a factor (in the murders)?" Cochran asked Lange.

The detective said he "superficially" looked into drugs as a possible motive, but no connection was found. "In this particular case, we had another direction to go,"

Cochran also explored a Goldman connection, asking: "Did you ever consider that Mr. Goldman may have been the targets of the assassin or assassins that particular night? Did you ever consider that at all?" "The targets of an assassin?" Lange replied incredulously, looking perplexed.

Cochran then changed his wording to whether Goldman was "the target of ... the perpetrator or perpetrators" on June 12. Lange still seemed mystified. "Did you ever - as the investigating officer in this case ever consider any other theory than if O.J. Simpson was the only perpetrator in this case?" Cochran asked. "I had absolutely no other evidence that would point me in any other direction," Lange replied. Prosecutors say Simpson set out to kill his ex-wife and that Goldman happened upon the scene when he went there to return a pair of glasses.

Lange acknowledged finding a list of women's phone numbers, including Ms. Simpson's, in a notebook at Goldman's apartment. He was unsure if anyone ever followed up on the names.

"I didn't see any other leads to follow up on," Lange said. "There was no other evidence to pursue.

Under questioning from Cochran, Lange said he made no effort to determine when and where Goldman ate his last meal and said he did not tell the coroner's office to examine the contents of Goldman's stomach to establish the time of death.

Cochran also pressed Lange about what appeared to be a fruit label found near the bodies.

Cochran asked Lange to unwrap Goldman's clothes a white shirt and black pants he had worn to work the night of the murders. Among his belongings was a green scrap of paper scrawled with a grocery list.

Lange said he had never seen the list before. Cochran indicated the shopping list included bananas, and suggested that labels such as the one found at the crime scene frequently are found on bananas.

Cochran didn't explain the significance of the banana questions, but hinted that they might be related to the time of death or show that police ignored clues at the

When Cochran mentioned the list, there was tittering in the spectator section where the Goldman family was

The demonstrators, many carrying small children, dodged waiters as they took over the head table and jammed the aisles, protesting reductions in the school lunch program. In doing so, they prompted cancellation of the House speaker's speech.

"Don't take the food out of the children's mouths," said Maxine Nelson of Pine Bluff, Ark., who, like the others, belongs to the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, or ACORN.

Faced with the raucous protest, luncheon organizers from the county officials. The demonstrators cheered the decision.

Last week, House Republicans advanced a proposal to replace the federally mandated school lunch program with a state-administered system funded by federal block

Opponents said it could lead to cuts in free and subsidized school lunches to the poor.

The legislation would increase spending by 4.5 percent per year up from $6.68 billion next year to $7.85 billion in 2000 - but opponents say that would not keep pace with demand coupled with inflation.

The demonstrators at the Washington Hilton Hotel were "just tragically misinformed," Gingrich National Association of Counties later told reporters, questioning abandoned plans for speeches by their motives and criticizing their Gingrich and others before the 2,000 behavior. > Although Gingrich was the protest's target, some demonstrators directed barbs at county officials, shouting through bullhorns that the cost of one of their baked chicken meals probably would finance a week of school lunches.

The county officials, in turn, fumed. One NACO official said their luncheon leftovers were going to Washington homeless shelters.

"This only makes me less supportive of their cause," said Shirley Greene, county commission chairwoman from Latah County, Idaho. "... It's about time people figured out they have to do something for themselves rather than have their hand out to the government."

Added Jack Olsen of Oakland County, Mich.: "I think they've probably not won many friends today.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hoping to To uncover materials that might be defining an assassination record to help set parameters for its work.

In 1992, responding to renewed public interest created by Oliver Stone's film JFK, which portrayed an elaborate conspiracy, Congress voted to compel the release of virtually all assassination-related documents to the National Archives.

So far, the Archives have indexed 120,000 records, with an additional 60,000 pending for addition to the data base. After a CIA file on Lee Harvey Oswald was made public in 1993, 2,000 research requests were logged in under three months.

One of the board's main jobs is to review records that government agencies do not want released, possibly for national security or privacy concerns. It can delay release, but only until 2017, the deadline set by law.

Ultimately, the goal is to have all the records available to the public at the archives, or possibly by computer.

"But our focus is really on the records themselves," Tunheim said, "to get them available to the public

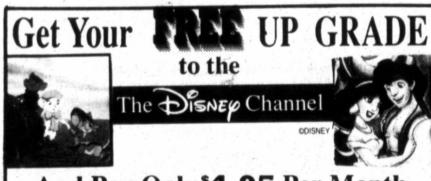

Suspect confesses to receive reward

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) - A suspect in a 14-year-old double murder surrendered and made a futile attempt to collect the $3,000 reward for his own capture.

Gerald Lydell Voyles went straight to jail instead. "We believe he was serious about the reward. He will not be eligible,' Sheriff Lawrence W. Crow Jr. said. Police said Voyles, 39, walked up to the Polk County jail information window on Sunday, asked about the $3,000, and gave his name. Voyles and two others were charged in the deaths of two men whose bodies were found in a pond in 1981. The men had been shot and their bodies wrapped in wire fencing and weighted with concrete blocks.
