HOW A YOUNG woman established the date of her birth by proving that a registered calf was born on the same day she was told by the Associated Press in reporting a court case.

This is not a bad example of the condition of Texas vital statistics. No state department has to combat more hazardous methods than the state department of health, which, aided by the recently organized Texas Child Health Council, is conducting a state-wide campaign for birth registrations and death records.

Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, in speaking of the example of the young lady in court, said she had no birth certificate and that her estate was inaccessible pending proof of the date of her birth. Finally, a friend went on the stand and swore he remembered a calf born on the same day the girl was. The calf was registered. Its papers showed the date of birth. The date was such as to prove the young woman of age, and entitled to the provisions of a will.

This ironic contrast between valued livestock records and slipshod registering of human lives should be used effectively, but more drastic steps will have to be taken if Texas is to take her rightful place in the nation's statistics and if her children are to be protected by proper recording.

There is hope for more effective work in the fact that under a new law enacted by the 40th legislature, the state health department is given direct control of vital statistics and those who gather them. Now a registrar can be anyone the health department appoints; formerly city and county clerks were the registrars of vital statistics for their communities.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

Washington—Your correspondent cannot help being impressed by the probable significance of the honor which has been thrust upon the Hon. Simeon D. Fess, senior senator from the undeniably great state of Ohio.

It is difficult to dodge the impression that the election of the Hon. Simeon as keynote for the Republican National Convention was encompassed after careful forethought by those gents who hope to draft President Coolidge for renomination and by those other gents who pretend to hope to draft the president as a means of reducing the delegate strength of the candidate they oppose.

Anyone who has heard Senator Simeon make a speech knows that he is not exactly the best inspirational orator the party could produce. And neither is he an ideal keynote from the standpoint of prestige or popularity.

A Sad Tale—In Two Parts

The one thing which has brought great fame to the Hon. Simeon is the fact that of all those who have shouted for the renomination of the Hon. Simeon's close friend, Mr. Coolidge, he has shouted loudest, longest, oftenest and most passionately. Again and again he has reiterated that Mr. Coolidge had not closed the door—that he would answer the party's call in its hour of need.

Aside from that, the only thing that might have been expected to weigh more heavily against Senator Simeon's chances as a keynote than his lack of assets for the job was his relative unavailability.

For of all men in public life, the Hon. Simeon is perhaps the only one who can be called a liar without fear of a libel suit. Senator Simeon admitted on the Senate floor that in his efforts to help Mr. Coolidge he had prevaricated to newspaper men at the White House. The evidence is on page 2873 of the Congressional Record, where you will find that the mendacious Simeon said: "Then I added what was not true, but I wanted to get it across."

Now there are many men in public life who are far greater liars than the senator from Ohio, but there are few who admit being liars at all.

Whether it is more honorable to lie and deny it or to lie and admit it, the fact remains that a reputation for mendacity would ordinarily be counted against a man when the parties pick their keynoters.

We now seem to have demonstrated that some remarkably cogent reason was behind the selection of Cousin Fess. Was that reason the fact that he could make a heck of a good speech in praise of Mr. Coolidge and so get the delegates roused up over the president with a good four-and-a-half-minute outburst for "Our Cal" when Fess had concluded? Probably not, for any keynoter would be forced to brag a great deal about Mr. Coolidge, and there are several others who could do it more effectively than the Hon. Simeon.

Apparently the only logical deduction is that such gents as Chairman William M. Butler and Vice Chairman Charles D. Hilles of the Republican National Committee were anxious to strengthen the impression among the brethren that Mr. Coolidge was still a potent factor. Even the most obtuse politician, anxious to hitch onto the proper bandwagon, could not avoid being struck by the fact that the party's big bosses had chosen from the entire field this one man known to all as the most vociferous of the Coolidge draftsmen.

TWINKLES

Smith and Hoover may not be the next presidential nominees, but they will have to go quite a ways to fall from convention grace, it appears.

Moody is pleading for Texas harmony, which is somewhat unlike the kind of silence he was after when he was fighting the Klan.

Missouri bank robbers are said to be threatening to rob a Texas bank. All right boys, but remember the Panhandle-Plains country doesn't offer many convenient creek bottoms.

It is getting to where one cannot tell a good story, without vile human creatures interpreting it in various ways, mostly bad.

Before a statue is carved in gargantuan fashion upon a mountain side, its subject must be carved deeply upon the hearts of a grateful people.

ANNE AUSTIN AUTHOR OF "SAINT AND SINNER"

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Sally Ford is "famed out" to Clem Carson, prosperous farmer, the summer she is 16, and leaves the state orphanage, the only home she has known since she was four. At the farm she finds a friend in David Nash, student and an athlete. Carson is angered because David prefers the little orphanage to the farm. When he makes insulting remarks about Sally, David hits him a terrific blow.

David and Sally run away and join a carnival. David as cook's helper and Sally as "Princess Lalla," crystal gazer.

The midge, "Pitty Sing," takes a fancy to Sally and warns her to beware of Nita. Mrs. Bybee, wife of the carnival owner, promises Sally she will go to Stanton and see if she can find any news about Sally's mother. Sally has told her about her years in the orphanage and that the only information she has about her mother is that she lived in Stanton at one time. Later in the morning when Mrs. Bybee sends for her, she goes with anxious heart.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

It was a sad, listless little "Princess Lalla" who cupped tiny brown hands about a crystal ball and pretended to read "past, present and future" in its mysterious depths as the afternoon crowd of the carnival's last day in Stanton milled about the attraction in the Palace of Wonders. There was the crack of an unsuspected whip in the voice of Gus, the Barker, as he bent over her after his oft-repeated spiel:

"Snap into it, kid! These rubes is lousy with coin and we've got to get our share. You're crabbin' the act some-thing fierce 'afternoon. Step on it!"

Sally made a valiant effort to obey, but her crystal-gazing that afternoon was not a riotous success. She made one or two bad blunders, the worst of which caused a near-panic.

For she was so absorbed in her own disappointment and in contemplating the effect of her news upon David, when she should tell him that she was an illegitimate child of a woman who had abandoned her, that her eyes and intuition were not so keen as they had been. Although there had been a sharp-faced shrew of a wife clinging to his arm before he vaulted upon the platform for a "reading," she mechanically told a meek little middle-aged man that he was in love with a "so beau-tiful girl wif golden hair" and that he would "marry wif her."

After the poor husband had been snatched from the platform by his furiously jealous wife and given a most undignified padding with her hastily removed shoe—an added attraction which proved vastly entertaining to the carnival crowd but which caused a good many quarters to find their hasty way back into handbags and trouser pockets—Sally felt her failure so keenly that she leaned backward in an effort to be cautious.

"For God's sake, kid, snap out of it before the next show!" Gus pleaded, nipping his dripping brow with a huge purple-bordered white silk handkerchief. "I'm part owner of this tent, you know, and you're hittin' me where I live. Come on, at's a good girl! Forget it—whatever's eatin' on you! This ain't a half-bad world—not a-tall! What if that sheik of yours is trailin' in Nita around? Reckon he's just after her grouch bag—"

"Her—grouch bag?" Sally seized upon the unfamiliar phrase in order to put off as long as possible full realization of the heart-stopping news he was giving her so casually.

"That's right. You're still a rube, ain't you. A grouch bag is a show business way of sayin' a performer's got a wad salted down to blow wif the kid, you have a good, hard cry in the dress tent before the next show and you'll feel like a new woman. That's me all over! Never tell a wren to turn off the faucet! Nothin' like a good cry. I ain't been married four times for nuthin'."

Sally waited to hear no more. She rushed out of the Palace of Wonders in a frantic little figure in purple satin trousers and gold-branded green jacket, her red-sandaled feet-purning the grass tumbled turf that divided the show tent from the dress tent. And because he was almost blinded with the tears which Gus, the Barker, had sagely recommended, she collided with another figure in the alley.

"Look where you're going, you little charity brat, you—" And Nita's harsh, metallic voice added a word which Sally Ford had sometimes seen scrawled in chalk on the high board fence that divided the boys' playground from the girls' at the orphanage.

So Nita had listened! She had been eavesdropping when Mrs. Bybee had told Sally the shameful thing, she had learned from Grandma Bawgis about Sally's birth and abandonment! "You can't call me that!" Sally gasped, rage flaming over her transforming her suddenly from a timid, brow-beaten child of charity into a wild-cat.

Before Nita, the Hula dancer could lift a hand to defend herself a small purple-and-green clad fury flung it self upon her breast; gilded nails on brown-painted fingers flashed out were about to rip down those painted, sallow cheeks like the claws of the wild-cat she had become when powerful hands seized her by the shoulders and dragged her back.

"What telly' going on here?" Gus the Barker, panted as Sally struggled furiously, still insane with rage at the insult Nita had flung at her.

"Better keep this she-devil out of my sight, Gus, or I'll cut her heart out!" Nita panted, adjusting the grass skirt, which Sally's furious onslaught had torn from the dancer's hips, exposing the narrow red satin tights which ended far above her thin, unlovely knees.

"I'm surprised at you, Sally," Gus said severely, but his small eyes twinkled at her. "Next time you're having a friendly argument with this grass-skirt artist, for Gawd's sake settle it by pulling her hair. The show's gotta go on and some of these rubes like her map. Don't ask me why. I ain't good at puzzles."

Sally smiled feebly the passing of her rage having left her feeling rather sick and foolish. Gus's arm was still about her shoulders, in a paternal sort of fondness, as Nita switched away, her grass skirts hissing angrily.

"Kinda foolish of you, Sally, to pick a fight with that dame. She could-a ruint this pretty face of yours. She's a bad mama, honey, and you'd better make yourself scarce when she's around. And say kid—take a tip from old Gus; no sheik ain't worth fightin' for. I been fought over myself considerable in my time, and believe me while two frails was fightin' for me I was lookin' about for another one."

Sally felt shriveled with shame. "I wasn't fightin' her because of—of David," she muttered, digging the toe of one little red sandal into the dusty grass of the show lot. "Nita called me a— a nasty name. You'd have fought too!"

"Sure! But not with a dame like Nita. If I was you! You ain't no match for her. Now, you trot along to the dress tent and rest or cry or say your prayers or anything you want to—except fight!—all show time again. And for God's sake, don't turn your back when Nita's around!"

Sally did not see the Hula dancer again that afternoon, for Nita belonged to the "girle show," which had a tent all its own. To encourage her in her confidence as a crystal-gazer, or rather to bluster up the faith of the skeptical audience, which had somehow become wise to the fact that "Princess Lalla" had "pulled some bones," Gus the Barker, arranged for four or five "schilllers"—employees of the carnival, both men and women, dressed to look like members of the audience—to have their fortunes told.

Sally, tipped off by a code signal of Gus's, let her imagination run riot as she read the magic crystal for the "schilllers," and to everything she told them they nodded their heads or slapped their thighs in high appreciation loudly proclaiming that "Princess Lalla" was a woe, a witch, the grandest little fortune-teller in the world. Business picked up amazingly; quarters were thrust upon Gus with such speed that he had to form a line of applicants for "past, present and future" upon Sally's platform.

She did not see David at supper which she ate in the cook tent after having carried "Pitty Sing," the midge, to the privilege car. Buck, the negotiator of the privilege car, grinned at her, but David was nowhere to be seen. Was he "trailin' Nita," as Gus the Barker, had called it? Jealousy laid a hand of pain about her heart, such a new sort of pain that she wanted childishly, to stop and examine it. It pained instant fellowship in her heart with that other so-new emotion—love. She wanted all afternoon, until Gus had stopped her heart for a beat or two with his casual reference to David and Nita, to fly to David for comfort and pour out her news to him. She had heard, in anticipation, his softly spoken tender "Dear little Sally! Don't mind 'oo much. We have each other." So far had her imagination run away with her!

It was the last evening of the carnival in Stanton, and money rolled into the pockets of the concessionaries and the showmen.

"Last chance to see the tallest man on earth and the littiest woman! Last chance, folks!"

It was already a little old to Sally—the speller's ballyhoo. She could have repeated it herself. Glamor was fading from the carnival. The dancing girls were not young and beautiful, as they had seemed at first; they had never danced on Broadway in Ziegfeld's Follies; they never would. They were oldish-young women who sneered at the "rubes" and had calluses on the bottoms of their arching feet from dancing on rough board platforms.

Just before the last show Sally wandered out into the midway from the Palace of Wonders, money in her hand which Pop Bybee had advanced to her. But it was lonely "playing the wheels" all by herself, and although Eddie Cobb fixed it so that she won on a big Kewpie doll with pink maline skirts and saucy, marcelled red hair, there was little thrill in his possession. When a forlornly weeping little girl stopped her tears to gaze covetously at the treasure, Sally gave it up without a pang, and wandered on to the salt water taffy stand, where one of her precious nickels went for a small bag of the tooth-resisting sweet.

She no longer minded or noticed the crowd that collected and followed her wherever she went; she had become used to it already. The crowd did not interest her, for it did not hold David who was froced to hide indignantly in the show train, for fear the heavy hand of a local constable would close menacingly over his shoulder. At the thought Sally shuddered and flung away her taffy. They would be leaving Stanton tonight, leaving danger behind them. It had not occurred to her to ask where the show train was going. But it was going away, away. David could come out of hiding. Bybee had said the authorities in other states wouldn't be interested in a couple of authors who had done nothing worse than "bust a farmer's leg and beat it—"

"What kinda burg is the capital?" she was startled to hear a hot-dog concessionaire call to the ticket-seller for the feris wheel.

"Fretty good, pickin's," the ticket-seller answered. "We run into a spell of bad weather there last year and it was a Jonah town, but it looks good this season. The Kidder says he has to plank down half a grand for the lot—the dirty bums—their city councilors."

"We're going to the capital next?" Sally leaned over the counter to ask the hot-dog man.

"Sure, kid. Didn't you know? I heard you come from that burg. Old home week for Eddie, too. You and him going out to give the old homestead the once-over?"

Sally did not wait to answer. Although it was almost time for the last show the little red sandals flew toward the side-tracked show train—and David. Her jealousy, even her just-realized love for him, were forgotten. There was only fear—fear of iron bars and shameful uniforms, iron bars which would cage David's superb young body and break his spirit; fear of the reformatory, in which she would again become a dull-eyed unit in a hopeless army, but branded now with a shameful scarlet letter which she did not deserve.

They couldn't go to the capital city where they were both known; they would have to run away again, walk all night through the dark, fugitives from justice."

Baptist Circles Meet Wednesday In Various Homes

Circle Two of the Baptist W. M. U. met Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Woolver. Due to the absence of the leader of the Missionary program it was postponed until a later meeting, and unfinished business from a previous meeting was taken up. The circles will meet in the regular general meeting at the church next Wednesday. A missionary program has been arranged.

Circle Three of the Baptist W. M. U. met Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Paul Link with fourteen members present. Devotional was led by Mrs. J. A. Chitt, and was followed by a review of the book, "The Life Beautiful" with special parts being given by Mrs. J. P. Wehrung, Mrs. J. R. Carr, Mrs. L. S. Anderson, and Mrs. J. H. Dalton. An interesting round table discussion was joined into by all. The hostess served a delicious salad course.

Mrs. Weldon Wilson Is Hostess Wednesday To Young Ladies Circle

Mrs. Weldon Wilson was hostess Wednesday evening to the members of the Girl's Circle of the Christian church. The lesson was opened with a Scripture reading. During the business session the girls voted to make cookies to send to the Fowler Orphan's home in Dallas. The next meeting of the circle will be held at the church at which time the girls will entertain the Women's circles with a Mother's day program. Mrs. Wilson served a delicious dessert course to the following members:

Mrs. James Todd, Miss Hazel Campbell, Miss Ruth Lester, Miss Pearl Wilson, Miss Eliza Helen Meers, Miss Ota Gregory, and Miss Mary Joe Harmon.

Dr. R. E. L. Morgan To Speak Here Soon; Is Great Educator

The A. A. U. W. are entertaining Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. I. B. Hughey with a tea-honoring the senior girls, their mothers, the junior girls, their mothers, and the members of the high school faculty. The principal speaker of the afternoon will be Dr. R. E. L. Morgan of Amarillo.

Dr. R. E. L. Morgan, a great educator and preacher, was for a number of years one of the leading pastors in the Oklahoma Conference, and later served several years as presiding elder of the leading Districts of the conference. Dr. Morgan became president of Clarendon college in 1926, and when the North West Texas Conference sold the college, he became the leader of a movement to establish an educational institution in Amarillo, and for the last months he has been successfully leading in a campaign to raise two hundred thousand dollars in Amarillo, to build a Methodist college. It is expected that this amount will be raised within the near future, and work to begin. Dr. Morgan is acquainted with the educational problems of the day as few men are, and it is a privilege of the women and girls of Pampa to hear him speak.

Modes of the Moment

PARIS—(AP)—Jenny uses black combined with chartreuse green in a skirt-and-blouse dress. The finely pleated skirt of black crepe de chine wraps around, a departure from most pleated skirts. The neat fits to follow the line of a fitted yoke which extends into a slender point on the blouse.

Family Menus

BREAKFAST—Sliced oranges, cereal cooked with chopped figs, cream, bread crumb pancakes, new maple sirup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Cream of asparagus soup, cheese muffins, jellied fruit salad, cocoa.

DINNER—Casserole of beef's tongue, twice baked potatoes, celery, cress and apple salad, vanilla ice cream, fudge cake, milk, coffee.

One of the most attractive ways to use cress in a salad is to strip the leaves from the stalks and use them as a border for the other material comprising the "salad". This is done in the dinner salad with finely minced cress sprinkled over the top of the dressing on each serving.

Casserole of Beef's Tongue
One beef's tongue, 1 cup sliced carrot, 1-2 cup sliced onion, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, 1 lemon, 2 cups sliced tomatoes, 1 cup sauted mushrooms (optional but good), 3s loaves fat salt pork.

Sauté tongue in boiling water for twenty minutes. Drain and remove skin. Place on a bed or sliced fat salt pork sprinkled with carrot, onion and parsley in casserole. Add boiling water to cover. Add lemon juice. Cover closely and cook in a moderate oven three hours. Remove tongue to hot platter and cut in thin slices without cutting deep enough to separate them. Strain liquid in casserole and add to tomatoes rubbed through a coarse sieve. Heat to the boiling point and still in 1-1-2 tablespoons flour stir to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Bring to the boiling point and boil, stirring constantly for five minutes. Add sauted mushrooms and pour over tongue.

J. Wilson Smith, E. N. Smith, and O. W. Smith have returned from Manchester, Okla., where they attended the funeral of their father, J. F. Smith. Mr. Smith, who was 70 years old, died April 1st following a brief illness, and will be remembered as residing in Gray County west of Pampa during the years 1916, and 1917.

Stinnett Courthouse
Paving Progress
39 Years on Paper
White Deer Review

BY DAVID M. WARREN
A month has brought about much progress in Hutchinson county affairs. The new $341,000 courthouse at Stinnett is well under way. It is astonishing how much work has been done on the new courthouse in the past month. County officials say it will be December before the building is completed. The new courthouse is absolutely fire-proof and is two or three times larger than any other courthouse in the Panhandle plains.

The paving program in Hutchinson county has been resumed with the coming of spring. It will be only a few more months before the highway will be paved all the way from Borger to Stinnett. Another week will find a new bridge on this highway across the Canadian river completed. This bridge and the new paving will bring Borger and Stinnett within fifteen minutes of each other by driving time.

Real consideration has been given the public in making the detour from the north end of Borger to connect with the main highway nearer Electric City. Although the highway winds around between oil wells, it is not difficult to find one's way.

Another few days will find paving started on the first six-mile stretch out of Panhandle on the Borger highway. A good detour, which will be only two miles farther, has been graded. The Carson commissioner's court should be commended for the consideration of the public on this detour. When highway 33 was graded from St. Francis to Panhandle, it seems that the public did not get the consideration it deserved in the way of detours.

Thirty-nine years on one newspaper is a long time. L. E. Haskett arrived in Childress April 8, 1889, to become employed on the Childress Index. He began a connection with that newspaper which has not been closed to this date. Mr. Haskett said that thirty-nine years ago it was not believed possible to farm west of Wichita Falls and that it was nothing uncommon to see as many as one hundred cowboys in Childress at one time. During the intervening years, Childress county has be-

White Deer will have a complete newspaper plant in a few days for the first time. The Review was established about four years ago and it has enjoyed a substantial growth. White Deer is to be congratulated because it has grown to a city warranting a complete plant. This makes the third complete plant that has been installed by the Nunn-Warren newspapers. Others that have been installed are Borger and Quitaque, Pampa, Panhandle, and Silverton had complete plants when they were purchased by the present owners. Other cities in which this organization has newspapers are growing rapidly and it is hoped that they will soon warrant establishment of a complete plant.

Killer of Husband Gets 5-year Suspended Sentence at Houston

HOUSTON, April 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Leona Kirchhofer, 24, was at liberty Thursday under a five-year suspended sentence for shooting and killing her husband, John G. Kirchhofer, 28, at their home here February 8. When the verdict was returned Wednesday night, the accused widow smiled, embraced her mother, Mrs. L. Page, and thanked her attorneys. The trial began Monday. Mrs. Kirchhofer testified that her husband threatened to shoot her and that she "beat him" to it.

NO FIRE LOSS

The fire department received a call at 9 o'clock this morning from the office of the Pampa Times, where a pile of boxes had caught fire. A line of hose was strung and the blaze put out with very little loss.

OIL OPERATOR DIES

FORT WORTH, April 12.—(AP)—Jno. T. Hughes, oil operator of Fort Worth died early today in Mineral Wells, a message received here said. His death was said to have been due to heart disease. Hughes was treasurer of the Jack Dalton Oil company and the Zedie-Belle Oil company. He is survived by his widow and a daughter.

Deputy C. E. "Tiny" Pipes was in Amarillo yesterday and returned sporting a new "ten-gallon" Stetson hat, a gift to the jovial desk sergeant.

Mayor and Mrs. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Castlesberry and Mrs. Clark of White Deer attended the American Legion ball last night.

POLICE CHIEF ANDREWS WILL RETIRE SOON

John V. Andrews, chief of police has tendered his resignation, effective April 15. Mr. Andrews made the following statement to the city commission: "Due to the fact that I have entered the race for sheriff of Gray county and as the time for the primary election is drawing near and feeling that it is necessary to the interest of my candidacy that I give a considerable amount of my time to that issue, and feeling that to do so would necessitate a neglect of my present duties, I herewith tender my resignation as chief of police of the city of Pampa to be effective April 15th, 1928."

Speed Attempt Fails

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 12.—(AP)—Ray Koeh, veteran racing driver made an unsuccessful attempt today to lower the world's automobile speed record, his two runs on the beach at 155 and 144 miles an hour respectively falling short of the present mark of 206.9 set a few weeks ago by Major Campbell of London.

OUT OUR WAY

Geo. W. Briggs--

I am certain that his work in Pampa will be outstanding. "Pampa is fortunate in having a wide-awake press."

See City Needs

"A brief glance at the city and surrounding territory shows the need of much work. As great as was the development during the past few years Pampa is just getting started. A few of the needs can be briefly stated. As I see it, after a few hours in the city for example, the streets should be designated by signs, the houses should be numbered. Pampa is a city now."

Will Stress Agriculture

"The country must be developed along with the city, for after all, agriculture is the foundation of all permanent prosperity. This section is well known for its wheat, and other products, but a more intensive development is needed. More diversification more poultry, dairying and hog raising should be the aim. It needs a few thousand more farmers."

Need Road Connections

"This brings up the proposition of a county agent and a home demonstration agent. The experience of all counties is that they can do very much toward developing a county."
