Good Evening!

STATE

By The Associated Press

One ticket bought in the North Texas area correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot is worth an estimated $11 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 15, 28, 30, 34, 37 and 41.

In addition to the jackpot winner, there were 125 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $2,025. There were 7,276 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $125.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

EL PASO (AP) — The Tigua Indians have been given until Jan. 23 to settle a dispute over which set of elected officials will govern the tribe.

A disagreement during the tribal elections last month caused a rift that resulted in two tribal councils being elected.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs must now determine which tribal council will be officially recognized by the federal government, an important step if the Tiguas are to receive federal funds this year.

If the matter isn't settled by Jan. 23, the BIA could call for a new tribal election or officially recognize one of the two governments, said Roy Brandys, an attorney for the leader of the Tigua splinter faction.

NATIONAL

NEW YORK (AP) — Cardinal John O'Connor has turned 75 and written his mandatory letter of resignation, but he may not be retiring any time soon as leader of one of the nation's largest Roman Catholic dioceses.

Vatican law calls for all bishops to offer to step down when they turn 75, as O'Connor did Sunday. However, church officials traveling with Pope John Paul II in New Guinea told The Associated Press today that the pope is likely to ask O'Connor to remain as head of the 2.3 million member Archdiocese of New York.

O'Connor didn't talk about his birthday or his letter when he celebrated Mass on Sunday at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

STUEBENVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A woman shot five times in the head and neck with arrows died, and charges against her 16-year-old son have been upgraded to murder, officials said.

Suzanne Nemeth, 40, died of her injuries Sunday night, Sheriff Fred Abdalla said. An autopsy was scheduled for today.

Mrs. Nemeth had been struck by the arrows Jan. 7 as she was lying on her living room couch.

Her son, Brian Nemeth, had been charged in the assault. Prosecutors are seeking to try Nemeth as an adult.

Nemeth made four telephone calls to police following the shooting, asking for an ambulance. He said in at least two of them that he shot his mother, prosecutor Stephen Stern said.

BOSTON (AP) — Bishop David E. Johnson, bishop of the nation's largest Episcopal diocese, died of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Johnson, 61, committed suicide, apparently on Saturday, diocesan spokesman Jay Cormier confirmed. He had died of a single rifle shot, according to Jill Reilly, spokeswoman for the Middlesex County District Attorney's office.

A friend discovered the body Sunday in Johnson's suburban Framingham apartment.

Russian advance stalled in Chechnya

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russia's drive to take central Grozny was stalled today by fierce Chechen resistance, despite three days of intense bombing in the city center.

Waves of Russian helicopter gunships swooped down on western Grozny today, firing rockets in the most concentrated such attack in the battle for the capital of separatist Chechnya.

Some Chechen fighters said their forces had retaken parts of the railway station in northern Grozny and that just a few Russian soldiers were holding the terminal.

The claim could not be immediately confirmed, but heavy small-arms fire could be heard coming from the station area.

The presidential palace, symbol of Chechnya's independence drive, remained in Chechen hands despite a heavy bombardment.

Despite the Russians' overwhelming military superiority, their advance was being blunted by the infantry's apparent inability or unwillingness to storm and capture Chechen positions.

Most of the Russian infantry is made up of young Russian conscripts, poorly trained and unmotivated.

The devastated city was fairly quiet overnight.

"At least we got to sleep last night," said a smiling elderly woman on a street corner.

But shelling and rocket fire resumed today and was focused on the presidential palace. Explosions were followed by brief periods of calm. Chechens said the lulls were temporary.

"It only seems quieter. It's just a break," said a Chechen officer, who gave his first name as Vakh.

The Russians took advantage of improved visibility today to step up air activity. Fighter jets screamed in low and fired rockets, while reconnaissance planes made several runs over Grozny.

Helicopter gunships flew over settlements about six miles west of the city.

Later in the day, several helicopters attacked buildings in the western part of the capital, followed by waves of other gunships. Russian helicopters had not been used in Grozny in such numbers before.

While Russian convoys loaded with thousands of artillery shells rumbled along the roads toward Grozny on Sunday, the Chechens said they were running low on ammunition and weapons. But they vowed to hold their ground.

A number of civilians were killed in the fighting.

Valentin Yanus, 56, a cameraman from St. Petersburg's Channel 5 television, became the fourth journalist to die in the war. Russian army doctors said he was killed in central Grozny on Saturday.

Casualty estimates vary wildly, but thousands of people are believed to have been killed since Dec. 11, when Moscow sent troops into Chechnya, a mostly Muslim republic of 1.2 million people, to crush its independence drive. The ground assault on Grozny began New Year's Eve.

Russia plans to install a provisional government in Grozny. Chechens have vowed to wage guerrilla war from the southern mountains.

The Russian government press service estimated the number of armed rebels still in Grozny at 1,500 to 2,000.

Russian news reports cited Chechen elders as saying a son of Chechen leader Dzhokhar Dudayev had been killed defending Grozny. Ovlur Dudayev was buried Friday, the Interfax and IJAR Tass news agencies said. The reports could not be independently confirmed.

President Boris Yeltsin has invited President Clinton to a summit in Moscow in May, despite increasing U.S. criticism of the Russian military campaign in Chechnya, the IJAR Tass news agency said.

Commissioners discuss maintenance personnel request for county jail

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

A request for a full-time maintenance worker responsible only for jail problems met with opposition today by county commissioners who said they believe the two maintenance employees on staff had been hired to tend both jail and county repairs.

Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield asked the court to add a full-time repairman responsible for jail problems only. He said he would provide jailer training for a new hire so the employee could use trustees as helpers.

"It is my thinking if we could get by until next year at budget time ... it would be better," said Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright.

Stubblefield told the court on five weekend occasions he had been unable to contact either of the two county maintenance employees for air conditioning and heating problems in the jail and had to call a local contractor for emergency service at $75 per hour.

"I can't imagine what it's like to have 40 people up there (in jail) who write you a grievance because there's no hot water," Stubblefield said.

As a compromise measure, County Judge Richard Peet agreed to look into a pager system for maintenance employees, put jail repairs on priority status and institute a work order system to keep track of needed and completed jail repairs.

Two maintenance positions were created during jail construction, said Precinct 1 Commissioner Joe Wheeley.

Commissioners unanimously voted to keep hands off a Lefors problem in which a group of residents have petitioned the court to mandate a property owner clean up land adjacent to the city park.

Wheeley said the petition claims land adjacent to the park — a former welding business — is a health hazard. Owner Jerry Williams said some clean up work is being done, the commissioner said. Williams has not been contacted by any Lefors resident about the property, Wheeley said.

"I think there's a lot of areas that can be checked into before we start mandating property owners," said Wheeley.

In other actions, commissioners hired John Stone to fill the maintenance position vacated by Tommy Parks. The court approved hiring Susan Winborne as Peet's full-time secretary.

Tax Assessor/Collector Sammie Morris asked the court for permission to sell a surplus printer, terminal and hard drive. Peet told her it would be necessary to secure bids on them in accordance with law. The court authorized Peet to solicit bids for a 1,000 pound safe at the same time, providing no county office needs it.

The court agreed to designate 11 holidays for county employees. They include April 14 — Good Friday; April 29 — Memorial Day; July 3 and 4 — Independence Day; Sept. 4 — Labor Day; Nov. 23 and 24 — Thanksgiving; Dec. 22 and 25 — Christmas; Dec. 29 and Jan. 1 — New Year's.

Salaries and bills totaling $463,422.62 were paid. Included are some one-time payments to emergency services and liability insurance premiums.

A salary grievance committee was selected which includes seven elected officials and three residents from the 1994 grand jury list. Since its institution in 1972, it has never met, said County Clerk Wanda Carter.

Floods create toxic mess

GUERNEVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Racing waters and flooded homes swirled propane tanks, anti-freeze, pesticides, bleach and other poisonous materials into a toxic stew dumping into the ocean.

Toxic fumes overcame two workers Sunday as they helped clean up around the Russian River, which winds through the Northern California wine country before emptying into Pacific waters.

The men, both members of the California Conservation Corps, were treated at a hospital for dizziness and nausea and returned to work after being released.

"There are some gnarly black oil slicks in there," Conservation Corps member Henry Belli said. "It smells like rotten eggs."

Workers donned protective clothing and gas masks to remove poisons such as anti-freeze, pesticides, bleach and other materials.

Cleanup crews also found propane tanks, paint cans and chemicals within a mile of washing into the Pacific. Some containers broke open, creating health hazards, said Tom Daly, fire protection district engineer in Guerneville, about 60 miles north of San Francisco.

"As things get uncovered, then we're going to find more and more different hazards," Daly said. "Any type of toxic material, being motor oil, gasoline, fuels, cleaning substances, all those things are considered hazards if they start to mix together."

The cleanup will take weeks, he said. Creating additional problems, the main flooding area is just 15 miles from the mouth of the Russian River, where the salmon are running. That could pose a danger to the fish and people using nearby beaches, said Marty Isom of the Sonoma County Department of Health.

Morehead Food Products recall issued

Meat, cheese and potato salad products manufactured by the Amarillo-based Morehead Food Products are being recalled from stores in Pampa and other areas because a food processing worker was found to carry the hepatitis A virus.

Mike Morehead, president of the company, said today that pimento cheese salad, ham salad, chicken salad and potato salad under the Morehead Salad and Shurefine Salad labels, as well as Morehead bulk salads sold in 5-pound containers, are the only products affected by the recall.

"Our route drivers are delivering letters to stores in Pampa this week, informing them to pull the products," Morehead said. "A lot of the products were caught before they got onto the store shelves, but some may be in the stores already and we want to get them off the shelves."

He said the company had received no reports of illnesses caused by eating the affected salads.

"We don't know if the food was contaminated or not, but we are taking no chances. People who bought the affected products should return them to the stores," Morehead said.

The affected products are:

- Morehead Salads label — pimento cheese spread with expiration dates of April 18 and May 2; and ham salad, chicken salad and potato salad with expiration dates of Feb. 20 and March 6.

- Morehead bulk products — Pimento cheese spread with manufacturing dates of Dec. 19 and Jan. 2; ham salad dated Dec. 20; chicken salad dated Dec. 22 and Jan. 5; and potato salad dated Dec. 20 and Jan. 3.

- Shurefine Salads label — Pimento cheese spread dated April 18 and May 2; chicken salad dated Feb. 20, Feb. 28 and March 6; ham salad dated Feb. 20 and March 6; and potato salad dated Feb. 20, March 6 and March 13.

Morehead products are distributed in West Texas, New Mexico and parts of Kansas and Oklahoma, Morehead said.

Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show nears

Weight-in for Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show is scheduled for Friday, according to Jim Greene, president of the livestock show.

Greene said the deadline for turning in all weights for animals is 6 p.m. Friday.

The show, scheduled for Friday through Monday at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion in Recreation Park, has expanded to include seven more counties, Greene said.

Counties included in this year's livestock show are Gray, Roberts, Carson, Ochiltree, Wheeler, Hemphill, Lipscomb, Armstrong, Collingsworth, Donley, Hansford and Hutchinson.

This year entries so far include 276 barrows, seven heifers, 40 steers, 94 lambs and 26 rabbits.

The Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday with steer judging. Heifers will be judged following steers, Greene said. Both steers and heifers will be judged by Don Reeves.

Lambs will be judged beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, followed by rabbit judging. Dale Dunlap will judge lambs.

After church services at 10 a.m. Sunday, Bryan Anderson will judge barrows starting at 1 p.m.

A Bidder's Barbecue will be held in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion at 5 p.m. Monday followed by the Top O' Texas Sale at 6 p.m. James Hefley of McLean will be auctioneer.

Members of the Livestock Show committee are soliciting buyers for the sale, Greene said. Anyone wanting to purchase an animal or donate to the pool should contact the show secretary, Sherry Johnson, at 669-2632.

Balanced budget plan draws debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Nancy Kassebaum compared the balanced budget amendment to the largely ineffectual constitutional ban on liquor sales, but House Republicans said their drive to change the constitution was on course.

The House is due to begin debate in the next few weeks on a constitutional amendment to balance the budget by 2002.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said he was confident he had the two-thirds vote needed to approve a measure that included a provision requiring a three-fifths super-majority to pass future tax increases.

"And when we get it in the House I believe it will inspire the Senate," where opposition is stronger, Armey said on ABC's This Week with David Brinkley.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, the House Budget Committee chairman, told CBS' Face the Nation that the Republican leadership was pushing for the three-fifths clause because "we should make it excruciatingly difficult" to raise taxes.

"The future of this republic is at stake if we don't begin to control the size and the scope of the government," said Kasich.

But Kassebaum, who heads the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said the budget amendment "may be like (the) prohibition amendment. We may have to just get it out of our system, prohibition didn't stop drinking."

The 18th Amendment to ban the sale of alcohol was ratified in 1919 and repealed by the 21st Amendment in 1933.

The Kansas senator, who has voted against a balanced budget amendment in the past, did not say how she would vote this time. But she stressed that her interest was in the hard decisions of how spending can be cut.

"I'm not quite sure why I think people — meaning my colleagues in the House and Senate — feel we need this happiness and security blanket to give us the courage to do this," she said.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich, appearing with Kassebaum on NBC's Meet the Press, said a balanced budget amendment would put a straightjacket on the government when it tries to help the nation through periods of economic downturn.

"The goal of a balanced budget is not my goal," Reich said.

On CNN's Late Edition, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, said he opposed to the three-fifths majority for tax bills and predicted in the Senate the proposal would have problems even getting out of the Judiciary Committee.

Sunday afternoon play

Marcy Harper and Lee Cahall and their dogs, Socks, Shy and Striker, play on the bridge over Red Deer Creek behind the M.K. Brown Swimming Pool Sunday afternoon. Though Pampa area residents have been enjoying mild winter weather in the past week, with highs in the 60s, cooler weather is expected tomorrow with a high only in the 40s.

Dog training track to open

LORENA (AP) — Greyhound breeders are hoping that a new training and research center will help polish their occasionally tarnished image.

The $675,000 training and research center is designed to prepare greyhounds for racing.

The greyhound racing industry's image has been marred in the past by accusations of inhumane treatment of animals.

"Quite frankly because of the history of the sport we have been getting a lot of bad raps and we want the public out here," Jim Frey, executive director of the Texas Greyhound Association, told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

The facility, scheduled to open Wednesday, has a control tower, a grandstand and a track modeled after the three facilities in Texas where betting is legal — the Corpus Christi Greyhound Track, Valley Greyhound Track in Harlingen and the Gulf Greyhound Park in La Marque.

"It is the best of its kind," Frey said. "If you were raising greyhounds, this is where you want to take them before they go to the official track."

The track is located on a 47-acre site atop a hill near Lorena, about 15 miles southwest of Waco. It is one of only a few full-size training tracks in the country, Frey said.

While the track will be used to train dogs that will compete at tracks where parimutuel betting is allowed, betting will not be permitted at the Lorena site.

The TGA eventually plans to build an administrative building, an enclosed grandstand and an auction facility, Frey said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, right, leaves the Middle Street Baptist Church in Portsmouth, N.H., on Sunday. He delivered the morning sermon and said that someday New Hampshire would join the other 49 states in honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. with a holiday.

Message of MLK Day: Work still to be done

By JACQUI COOK
Associated Press Writer

As Americans commemorate the life of Martin Luther King Jr. today, civil rights leaders say there is still much to be done to preserve his legacy, let alone achieve his famous dream.

Yolanda King said the holiday is a time when young people in particular should be taught about her father's teachings.

"I'm always amazed when talking to young children at how little they know," Ms. King, 38, told a Cleveland audience Saturday. "They know Martin Luther King Jr. was killed, they know that. And they know he had a dream. And that's about where it stops."

Some of the speakers flocking to private church services and spirited public gatherings before today's holiday said King's message remains urgent, and shouldn't be glossed over as ancient history.

"Doctor King was not a non-threatening orator but a public policy prophet," The Rev. Jesse Jackson said at a weekend celebration in Manchester, N.H. "He was killed not for being eloquent but for being a threatening drum major for justice."

Jackson held King's body moments after he was assassinated April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn. King would have turned 66 years old Sunday.

On Sunday, Jackson went to Portsmouth, N.H., to chastise the state for being the only one that doesn't set aside a day to honor the slain civil rights leader. The state has a Civil Rights Day.

Elsewhere, more than 30,000 people were expected to hear President Clinton today during a King observance in Denver. The president planned a second King Day address tonight in California.

Three die, 10 children missing in avalanche

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — An avalanche of ice and snow hit a fishing village in northwestern Iceland today, killing three people. Eleven others — including 10 children — were reported missing.

Johannes Reykdal of Iceland's Civil Defense Force said three people were found dead by search teams in Sudavik, 130 miles north of the capital of Reykjavik.

He said three injured survivors also were found. Ten children were among those missing, he said.

Companies fund Bush's inauguration

DALLAS (AP) — While corporate donations have made up the bulk of the financing for recent state inaugurations, several citizen watchdog groups in Texas are charging that the companies are trying to buy influence.

Officials say Tuesday's inauguration of Gov.-elect George W. Bush's and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock will be affordable for everyone because of almost $1 million in contributions from about 40 companies.

Inaugural planners and donors said the contributions are a goodwill gesture and will help save taxpayer money that is set aside for the event.

But several groups have suggested otherwise, charging that the companies making the big contributions are seizing a chance to buy influence with the new administration.

State law prohibits corporations from making direct contributions to candidates in Texas. But there is no such ban on donations for inaugural activities or to legislative caucuses, which are groups of lawmakers with similar agendas.

"The companies know that if they contribute that it will help them get access later and get their names well known among other influential participants in the inaugural activities," said Tom "Smitty" Smith, executive director of Public Citizen of Texas, a nonprofit group that lobbies for government reforms.

Jeanne Johnson Phillips of Dallas, executive director of the Texas Inaugural Committee, disputed the suggestion.

Corporate donations have made it possible to keep inaugural costs down so that all Texans can join in the fun, she said.

"Our purpose was to make sure that all Texans could be a part of this," Ms. Phillips said of the committee's fund-raising efforts.

"Some gasoline (to get to Austin) and 10 bucks let you participate in history," she told The Dallas Morning News.

Because of the corporate help, she said, inaugural guests can get $10 tickets to an inaugural gala tonight, a musical program featuring mostly Texas performers at Austin's Frank Erwin Center.

The swearing-in of Bush and Bullock is at noon Tuesday at the Capitol, followed by a barbecue lunch on the Capitol grounds, a parade on Congress Avenue and three $50-per-person inaugural balls that evening.

As of Friday, 38 corporate sponsors had donated $977,500, and ticket sales were expected to bring an additional $600,000, Phillips said.

In return for donations, the companies get a handful of tickets to the various events around Austin, an invitation to the private receptions for Bush and Bullock and a mention in the inaugural program.

Phillips said the fund raising was made simple by the fact that Bush, a Republican, and Bullock, a Democrat, are sharing the spotlight.

"The wonderful thing about it this time is it's been easy to make it a bipartisan event, so you have friends on both sides," she said.

Security tightened on trans-Pacific flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. aviation officials, concerned that a hard-to-detect liquid bomb might be smuggled aboard an airplane, are tightening security on trans-Pacific flights.

The new measures, which went into effect Sunday, include the screening of gels, liquids and aerosols bigger than 1 ounce in carry-on bags, Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Liz Neblett said.

She declined to discuss which airports and flights would face the stiffer security checks, but the State Department said the measures would apply to flights to East Asia.

The crackdown came after two

U.S. jetliners flying over the Pacific Ocean had to land late Saturday night because of bomb threats tied to protests of Pope John Paul II's tour of Asia.

A United Airlines flight from Tokyo to Honolulu was ordered back to Japan and another from Los Angeles to Hong Kong was instructed to land in Taipei, officials in Tokyo and Taipei reported Sunday. No bombs were found.

"We're very concerned about these threats because of the numbers of American citizens traveling," said State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Young. "We understand the additional security measures will cause travelers some inconvenience."

But we believe they are necessary to ensure the maximum possible security."

Concern over the safety of American airliners flying the Pacific increased after Philippine police arrested two Arabs and seized bomb-making equipment in a Jan. 6 raid on an apartment near the Vatican ambassador's residence, where the pope had been staying.

U.S. and Philippine officials said Friday that about 20 others were being sought in what is believed to be a plot by Muslim extremists against John Paul.

The pope arrived in the Philippines on Thursday for the start of an 11-day tour.

Bull injures 20 people in Bangladesh

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A bull went on a rampage after breaking free from a slaughterhouse, damaging stores and injuring at least 20 people, police said today.

One person who tried to grab the bull by its horns was hospitalized with a hand injury.

Police captured the bull after an hour-long chase in Narayanganj, 10 miles southeast of Dhaka, on Sunday night. Officers used six buses to trap the bull on a street.

The bull spent the night in a police station. It may yet end up in the slaughterhouse, police said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Letting technology hinder free choice

A study by three Virginia Commonwealth University economists suggests that automobile air bags might lead motorists to drive less carefully and thereby cause more accidents.

The hypothesis is not outlandish; earlier studies had suggested similar results for drivers wearing seatbelts.

The study should remind us to keep technological fixes for various problems in perspective.

The study analyzed 206 fatal accidents in Virginia in 1993 involving 1990-1993 model cars, 43 percent of which had air bags. It found that in fatal crashes involving an air-bag-equipped car and one with no air bag, the driver of the car with the air bag was responsible 73 percent of the time.

In 13 single-car accidents in which passengers, but not the driver died, nine of the drivers had air bags.

These are small numbers. But the idea that drivers with air bags might drive more recklessly than those without them is not illogical.

As George Hoffer, one of the authors, said, however, "If you don't change your driving habits, you're clearly safer with an air bag." And maybe an air bag is a good idea because some other bozo with an air bag might slam into you.

The larger lesson is that each new innovation — each choice people make — has costs as well as benefits. That's often not welcome news, but it's the way things are in the real world.

In the case of safety innovations, the costs are not always immediately apparent.

Air bags protect crash-test dummies better than seat belts and much better than nothing at all. But dummies don't change their behavior on their own.

Few had predicted that people would either.

That's all the more reason to expand freedom of choice in such matters rather than mandating what seems to be good in light of today's limited knowledge.

People vary widely in behavior and in values. New ideas, with new costs and new benefits, come along all the time. Shouldn't people decide for themselves what risks they will undertake and at what costs?

Or is that too radical an idea for our government bureaucrats, who would prefer to tell us always what's best for us?

The silent rooters of Salvi

By American standards, sad to say, John Salvi did not kill all that many people. If two dead, five wounded, had happened in South Central Los Angeles or East Harlem or Newark, N.J., in or near a shopping center, bus station, athletic-supply store, amusement park public swimming pool or subway, the ration of space given over to the criminal episode would have been routine.

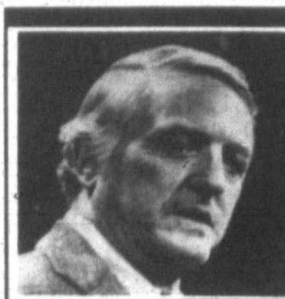

The statistical news over the weekend was that New York City has benefited from a dramatic 10 percent decrease in homicide now that the figures are in for 1994 — a mere 1,584 persons were killed. If you had given front-page attention to each of those, that comes to five stories per day, leaving scant room for Bosnia, North Korea or Paula Jones.

Yet The New York Times, acclaimed as the model of sobriety, gave not front-page attention to Salvi's shootings but the upper-right-hand spot on the newspaper reserved for the major news event of the preceding day. And not only on Day 1, but on Day 2.

Why such attention? Because the background of the shooting was an abortion center. The planted axiom of the stories is that people who oppose abortion are ready to gun down those who perform abortions, administer to their operations or patronize their facilities.

The following three days saw a frantic scurrying by the media for defenders of the alleged killer. He, by this time, had been apprehended after another round of shooting, a few rounds of .22-caliber bullets into an abortion franchise in Virginia. The disappointment came when, searching into his background, it was learned that yes, Salvi was opposed to abortion, but no, there were no grounds for assuming he had been preoccupied with the cause.

Those who knew him did not associate him with that deranged brand of militance that says the way to stop abortion is to shoot abortionists. He appears to be someone who acted more or less on impulse, and it is probably not reckless to guess that when time comes to try him for murder, his lawyer will plead insanity of some kind.

The next objective was to find someone who defended what Salvi had done. One newspaper made mention of persons who had defended Salvi's act, though the dispatch gave the names of only two who actually said words to the effect that the only way to stop abortion is to kill abortionists and their patrons, provided that the objective is to save babies' lives, not to kill people.

One has the feeling that it was a very diligent search, inasmuch as not one accredited anti-abortion organization has defended, let alone urged, violence in behalf of their cause.

When Paul Hill was convicted of killing an abortionist and his bodyguard and was sentenced to death, there was no march in Washington to protest the verdict. A public demonstration to defend Salvi brought together a total of eight people.

When Cardinal O'Connor was asked to express himself on anti-abortionists who want to approach the abortionists with gun in hand, his simple statement was, "Let them kill me." A dramatic but eye-catching means of condemning utterly any such action.

Now, America being as America is, there are extremists in practically every political camp. There were certainly extremists prepared to die to fight the abolition of Jim Crow, and one of them got so exercised on the subject, he killed Martin Luther King. There was plenty of heat on the other side, and one person who hungered for historical recognition and no doubt fancied himself a champion of civil right decided to make his point by shooting Gov. George Wallace.

And someone outraged by the pro-Israel policies of our government satisfied himself to make his point by assassinating Robert F. Kennedy. Five years earlier, someone protesting our anti-Castro policies thought to do something about it by assassinating John F. Kennedy.

Now these shootings obviously got a great deal of publicity. But that publicity had to do with the eminence of the targets. It was not implicitly reported as object lessons in the terrible lengths to which opposition to civil rights, a tough anti-communist policy, a pro-civil rights policy or a pro-Israeli policy could take people. The anti-Vietnam protesters killed and dynamited people every now and again, but their acts were not translated into condemnation of the anti-Vietnam movement.

You can maintain with learned conviction that Lenin was a pure product of Bolshevism. But you can't get very far contending that Sirhan Sirhan is the flower of partisanship to Israel, or that James Earl Ray is the authentic child of opposition to the civil rights acts.

So that Salvi is singular not in his devotion to life, but in the madness of his advocacy of it.

Forgive us, Father, for we sin by saying it, but our guess is that more people who are opposed to abortion were agonized by what Salvi did than those choicers who silently welcome the man who puts anti-abortion protest on the front page, demonstrating the inherent violence of their position.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Jan. 16, the 16th day of 1995. There are 349 days left in the year. This is the Martin Luther King Jr. federal holiday.

Today's Highlight in History:

Seventy-five years ago, on Jan. 16, 1920, Prohibition began as the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution took effect. (It was later repealed by the 21st Amendment.)

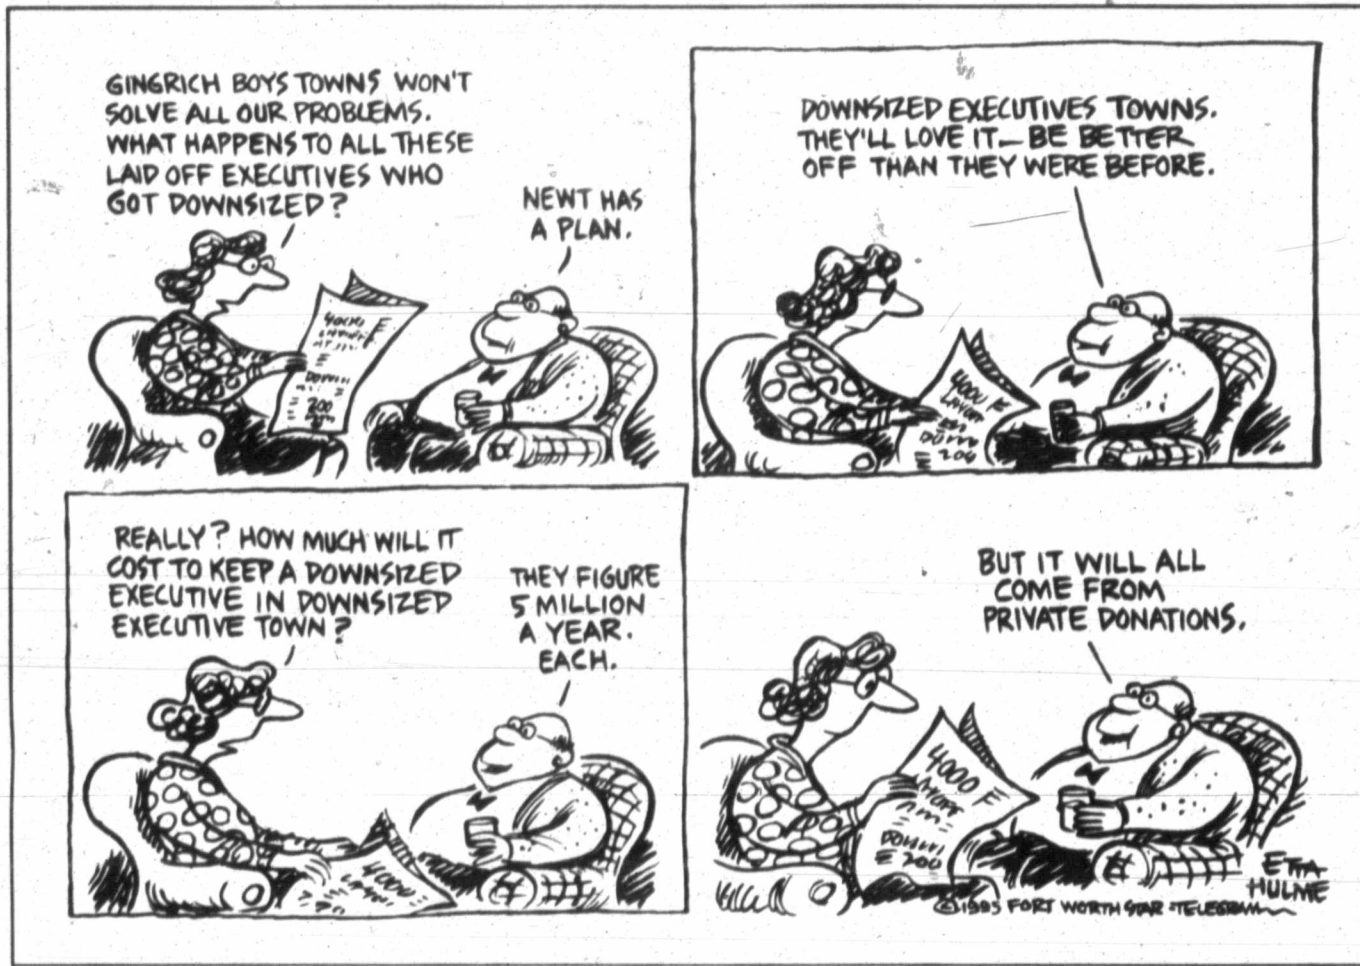

On this date:

In 1919, Nebraska, Wyoming and Missouri became the 36th, 37th and 38th states to ratify Prohibition, which went into effect a year later.

In 1942, actress Carole Lombard, her mother and about 20 other people were killed when their plane crashed near Las Vegas as they were returning from a war-bond promotion tour.

In 1944, General Dwight D. Eisenhower took command of the Allied Invasion Force in London.

In 1957, three B-52s took off from Castle Air Force Base in California on the first non-stop round-the-world flight, which lasted 45 hours and 19 minutes.

Bankruptcy from racial quotas

Under the 1964 Civil Rights Act, racial quotas are strictly illegal. However, in some universities and corporations and in the United States government, white men are discriminated against.

Female workers, under the law, are required to receive the same pay as men — yet few do. On average, women in the same jobs are paid 30 percent less.

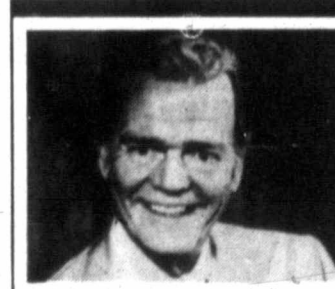

A Department of Defense memo states: "In the future, special permission will be required for the promotion of all white men without disabilities."

Former Assistant Treasury Secretary Paul Craig Roberts says, "It's got to where a white male cannot be promoted unless he first pokes out his eye or cuts off his hand."

Reverse discrimination masquerades under a lot of assumed names. In the Federal Aviation Administration, they call it "diverse selections."

Associate Administrator of Air Traffic Management Bill Jeffers acknowledges that "this is in line with a commitment to fill one of every two vacancies with a 'diversity selection.'"

With more and more air crashes traced to somebody having goofed, we should be concentrating on seeking the most skilled and most capable flight and ground crews. The very idea that less than the best should be hired first — for whatever reason — is not only an insult to other workers, but it threatens the lives of us all.

The Department of Energy, under Secretary Hazel O'Leary, has demonstrated noteworthy administrative efficiency. But now, the DOE has issued something called "Strategic Plan for Diversity," which specifies that 65.1 percent of senior executives must be minorities or women. It authorizes set-asides for minority contractors.

And the DOE is spending $128 million of your tax dollars in grants to black colleges.

Whatever the merits of the colleges, charity is not the business of the DOE.

Now, the quota system has reached the epitome of lunacy in the United States Forest Service: "Anybody with brains need not apply."

That's the distilled essence of a new directive that says that the Forest Service is deliberately seeking out unqualified candidates for job openings.

Sometimes, situations have to get stinking rotten before Americans, aroused by the smell, begin to object.

California Rep. Wally Herger says, "Bureaucracy has run amok. Nobody has a civil right to a job for which he or she is not qualified."

Yet, the last time I looked, the United States Forest Service, in public advertisements for employees, specified that "only applicants who do not meet standards will be considered." So, taxpayers are expected to fund the salaries of substandard employees. Any American business thus run would go broke.

Come to think of it, the Big Government Business has!

Can GOP ward off a new third party?

Former senator Paul Tsongas stirred a certain amount of interest recently with his suggestion that a new party be formed to participate in the 1996 presidential election. He even has a nominee to propose: Gen. Colin Powell.

Actually, Sen. Tsongas isn't even the first prominent person to suggest the possibility of a third party in 1996. Ross Perot has been hinting at the same thing for several months. His most recent formulation of the idea runs roughly as follows: "We gave the Democrats their chance in 1992, and now we're giving the Republicans a chance. If they mess up, we'll have a third party in 1996." No prizes for guessing who his nominee will be.

Varying state laws used to make it all but impossible for a new party to get on the ballot in enough states to matter. The first person in recent history to get on the ballot in all 50 was George Wallace in 1968, and he succeeded only by persuading the Supreme Court that Ohio's election laws were unconstitutional.

Since then, however, the states have tended to reduce the obstacles to putting third parties on the ballot, and it can be assumed that any party that nominates Colin Powell or Ross Perot can get on the ballot in all 50.

But could Powell or Perot win on such a basis? Powell is a formidably popular figure, and Tsongas is clearly calculating that his popularity, coupled with a comfortably centrist position on most issues and a grim determination to reduce the federal deficit, would attract enough voters to edge out the nominees of the two traditional parties.

But last November's elections suggest that the public is not in the mood for popular centrists just now. The voters seem to want somebody as disgusted with Washington as they are. And that, Ross Perot must be thinking, is where he comes in.

Don't forget that Perot, despite a dismayingly on-again-off-again performance, and without a party behind him that could field candidates for Congress, managed to take 19 percent (or nearly one in five) of the voters away from Bush and Clinton in 1992.

Whether he can do that again in 1996, however, or even come close to it, depends heavily on the performance of the 104th Congress now just getting under way on Capitol Hill.

The new Republican Congress is the voters' last attempt to correct what is wrong with their country, and it seems clear that at least the Republican majority in the House knows this and is prepared to take drastic actions on a whole series of fronts. Whether the House's proposed reforms can pass the Senate, however — a body more accustomed to compromise, and with a Republican majority that includes some notoriously spineless "moderates" — is another question.

However, the pressure on majority leader Dole and the Senate's Republican "moderates" to go along with Speaker Gingrich and the House Republicans will be ferocious. With any luck, therefore, the GOP should be able to go before the voters in 1996 with the proud claim that it not only heard but largely obeyed the message of the 1994 elections.

That will let a lot of air out of Ross Perot's tires. To be sure, he can form a new party and run if he wants to; three billion bucks, like rank, has its privileges. But the 5 or 6 percent Perot might muster on Election Day isn't likely to be enough to give Bill Clinton another term, or to populate Congress with Perotists, if the Republicans acquit themselves well in the two years just ahead.

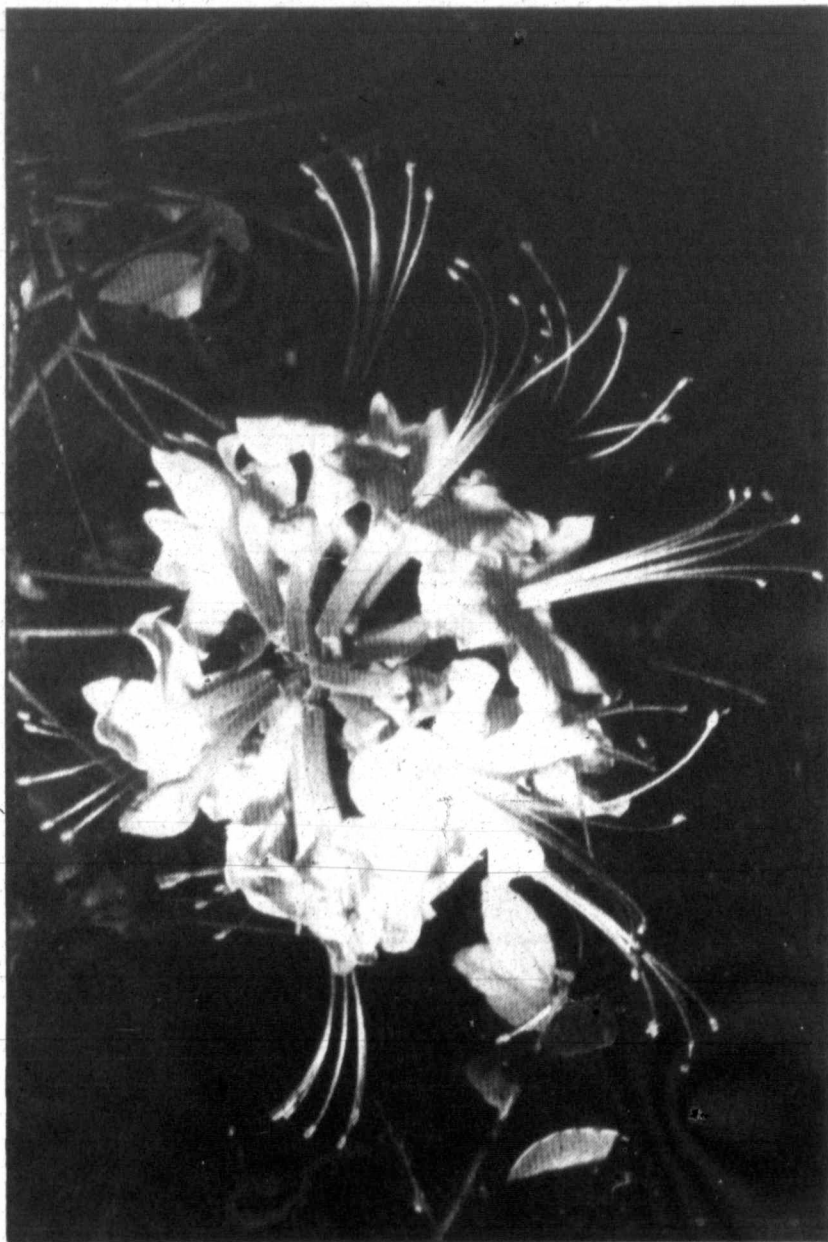

Seldom has a party been offered an opportunity more exciting than the one now opening before the Republicans in the 104th Congress. They must be bold, yet avoid the appearance of insensitivity. Wish them luck!

Texas wildflowers theme of exhibit

The "Wild Azalea" will be among the wildflowers and other native plants featured in a photo exhibit at the Square House Museum through February 26.

"Texas: The Natural Beauty" is an exhibition of 35 spectacular color photographs of wildflowers and other native plants from around the state. It can be viewed at the Square House Museum in Panhandle through Feb. 26.

This traveling exhibit is coordinated by the Amarillo Garden Center with support from the Barrick Foundation of Amarillo. The photographs were selected from the extensive collection of the Texas Department of Highways (TXDOT) and produced by Color Solutions. Each measures 16"x20" and has an acrylic face mount (no mat or frame) which enhances the clarity and depth of the image.

Texas' natural habitats are renowned for their size, number, and diversity. Crucial to the maintenance of these habitats is one of the state's natural treasures: the wildflowers. TXDOT has made a commitment to spreading the beauty of wildflowers as well as to the re-establishment of natural flora along 700,000 acres of highway right-of-way.

With over 5,000 species of wildflowers indigenous to Texas, this exhibition can only provide an overview of their variety and natural beauty. Specimens were selected to assure representation of native plants in each of six natural regions. Informative labels indicate in which region, or regions, each plant can be found.

"Texas: The Natural Beauty" can be viewed in the Hazlewood Arts and Education Building from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the Museum and the exhibition is free. For more information, please call

Cults range from very small to thousands

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine
For AP Special Features

There are from 700 to 5,000 cults active today, ranging from groups with a handful of members to the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, which boasts tens of thousands of devotees worldwide.

Every 10 years or so, Paula Dranov wrote in an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, grisly news of cult activity dominates the news — the recent collective suicide-murders of members of the Order of the Solar Temple in Switzerland and Canada, the inferno in Waco, Texas, that destroyed David Koresh and his fellow Branch Davidians.

One mystery is why people join cults. Former cult members testify about "mind control," but many experts maintain that most of these groups are harmless, if specious, new religions that provide temporary havens for rebellious, impressionable or vulnerable people.

A foray into the cult underworld can exact a huge emotional toll — ranging from self-doubt arising from even a brief surrender of personal autonomy to forced abusive sexual relationships with magnetic leaders.

"No one plans to join a cult," said Lorna Goldberg, a New Jersey psychoanalyst who helps former cultists. "Cults target people in transition — college students away from home for the first time, people who have moved to new cities for jobs, those who have just been divorced or widowed."

But New York City psychiatrist Marc Galanter, in his study of a group's cult members, found most suffered "from significant emotional distress."

J. Gordon Melton, director of the Institute for the Study of American Religion, in Santa Barbara, Calif., said the average cult member has been in three or four other groups. He suggested cults serve as "holding tanks" for young people rebelling against overprotective parents.

Activists in the Cult Awareness Network and the American Family Foundation, the most strident cult awareness organizations, contend deception is a hallmark of cult recruitment and at the outset newcomers have no inkling how rigidly their lives will be controlled.

When they speak of mind control, experts disagree on whether it is even possible without the use of force.

"No one who's observed these groups closely has concluded brainwashing is the reason people are there," said David Bromley, a professor of sociology at Virginia Commonwealth University.

"Sexual abuse of women in cults is a pretty common story," Goldberg said. The Children of God, a 1970s group now making a comeback as The Family, used to send women on "happy hooking" expeditions to recruit men. AIDS ended these tactics, but The Family continues to encourage extramarital sex.

The Church Universal and Triumphant, the survivalist cult headed by Elizabeth Clare Prophet, not only forbids premarital sex but restricts lovemaking of married followers.

"These sexual rules are just another example of how cults control minds by regulating behavior,"

Goldberg said.

Most cult members drift away within a year or two.

"Turnover is huge," said Dean Kelley, a counselor on religious liberty to the National Council of Churches. "The Unification Church loses half of its members each year or so."

Deprogramming — holding cult members against their will and bombarding them with anti-cult information — is no longer popular. Rick Ross, one of the few deprogrammers still in business, rarely resorts to "involuntary" methods.

"The only justification for involuntary deprogramming today is when a cult is about to ship a member overseas out of the family's reach," Ross said.

He relies, according to Cosmopolitan, on gentler techniques similar to those of exit counselor — mostly former cult members who intervene only after parents or relatives have prevailed upon the cult member to participate.

Winter can be tough on skin

By DR. SETH ORLOW
New York University Medical Center
For AP Special Features

Wintertime gives your skin, the human body's largest organ, a double whammy. Outdoors, you often get hit by windy, dry, cold air. Indoors, you get dry, heated air.

So as a result of the constant dryness, the water in and under your skin may evaporate, often leading to itchy, cracked skin.

Despite the outdoor elements and indoor conditions, dry skin doesn't have to be your wintertime fate. You can protect against winter-related dry skin and cut down on its annoying discomfort by taking a few skin-care precautions.

Many people will first notice the effects of winter on their skin after showering; once the shower water has been toweled away from your body, a tightness may linger on the skin. The tightness occurs because showering and soaps strip away your skin's superficial layers, which are the layers with the highest oil concentration and which act as a seal that keeps moisture in the skin.

To minimize this loss of protective oils, cut down on the frequency and length of bathing. Our bodies tend not to get as soiled in the winter as during the hot weather months, so long baths and showers aren't usually necessary.

Also, don't use pure soaps; instead, use soaps with a moisturizing cream or glycerin base. Pure soaps act as harsh strippers of the skin. That's how they get rid of dirt and make you feel so squeaky clean. In general, when in the shower, remember that the more you wash and scrub, the more you dry out your skin.

The use of moisturizers is another key to protecting against dry skin. Use a moisturizer immediately after bathing. The moisturizer traps water in the skin, acting as a sealant. In most cases, the thicker a moisturizer, the greater its effectiveness. Thus, greasy feeling ointments are the best, followed by creams, lotions and oils.

Spend extra time on your legs, which are especially prone to dryness.

Once you get out of the shower, use a moisturizer and, when ready to go out into the cold, dress appropriately. Cover exposed body parts. Wear gloves and use some type of balm that will protect lips.

If you spend a lot of time indoors, purchase a room humidifier. Moist room air diminishes skin dryness. If none of the above suggestions work and you end up with an annoying itch, try an oatmeal or starch-and-soap bath which can help alleviate the itching, and be sure to moisturize afterward.

How to kidnap your wife

By JENNIFER MERIN
For AP Special Features

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last February, Suzanne Burroughs went to Los Angeles Airport to pick up a package for a friend. She grumbled to herself en route, partly because she agreed to the errand and partly because her husband hadn't remembered Valentine's Day.

Or so she thought. Actually, getting her to the airport was part of Mark Burroughs' elaborate scheme to kidnap his wife for a Valentine's getaway to Hawaii, a crime they both say paid off big-time in romance and memories.

"I did it for both of us," Mark Burroughs says. "We had a stressful winter and needed a break."

They're not alone in needing — or wanting — a romantic interlude. The possibilities are as limitless as your imagination and finances. Take a weekend at a cozy old inn, a week for a wild adventure white-water rafting or get carried away for a day of hot-air ballooning over scenic countryside.

Working a month in advance with a travel agent, Burroughs, a lawyer, booked a week in an ocean-view room at the Four Seasons Resort at Wailea on Maui.

Once they arrived, there would be leis, champagne, chocolates and tropical fruit. There would be spa treatments, a sunset sail, candle-lit dinners — and privacy.

But oh, so much for Mark to do before, all without Suzanne knowing.

He asked her boss at the film studio if Suzanne could have time gested roomy clothes would fit, even if they indulged in rich foods, another provided a list of toiletries. Small items left behind could be purchased in Hawaii.

Another challenge was to keep everything on the Q.T.

"I don't know how they did it. Nobody dropped a clue and I didn't suspect a thing," Suzanne says.

"In fact, I was sort of annoyed with Mark because he hadn't done anything to celebrate our Valentine's Day. No card, no chocolates or flowers. And I groused about going to the airport on that errand, wondering why we had agreed to it.

"When we got there, a squad of friends were waiting to see us off. It was great. I handed them the car keys and we boarded the plane for the most romantic, wonderful week of my life. I loved being kidnaped.

"Now I'm looking for an opportunity to get even."

"I did it for both of us," Mark Burroughs says. "We had a stressful winter and needed a break."

off. He checked her date book for any conflicts, ultimately rescheduling an appointment with her hairdresser.

Packing was the real challenge. Even 12 years of marriage hadn't prepared Mark for picking the clothes and toiletries Suzanne would need. Swimwear, underwear and comfortable shoes were obvious. Then, limiting himself to one suitcase for convenience, he decided casual clothes were easiest. Taking note of what Suzanne wore most frequently, he planned to have favorite items washed or cleaned just before the trip. One friend sug-

Warm Wedding Memories Are Buried in Avalanche of Snow

DEAR ABBY: You asked if anyone could top the ruined cruise wedding. Well, I can. I was married on March 13 in Albany, N.Y., during the blizzard of '93. Twenty-seven inches of snow fell and the wind chill was 60 below zero.

I cried for two hours that morning as the phone kept ringing. Relatives and friends were calling to say they were snowed in and wouldn't be there.

My soon-to-be husband called and fought with my mother. Somebody hung up on somebody — I still don't know the whole story. By the time the photographer arrived, I had regained my composure, until he told me his windshield wipers were frozen solid and he had to leave immediately to pick up another car.

Just then, I happened to glance out the window to see two limos drive by the house without stopping. The husband of one of my bridesmaids ran out in the blizzard and flagged them down. I wore snow boots under my wedding gown.

When we arrived at the church, the parking lot was scattered with 4x4's, and only half of our guests had made it.

After the ceremony, the photographer was taking pictures when one of the limo drivers ran into the church and yelled, "We have to leave now!" Apparently one of the limos was completely frozen, and visibility on the roads was near zero, so our wedding party of six piled into the one remaining limo and began a frightening ride to our reception.

We arrived to find 60 of the 120 expected guests. We called a halt to our reception after a few of the relatives became hysterical worrying about how they were going to get home, since all the roads were closed. I put my boots back on, and my husband and I pushed our guests' cars out of snowdrifts.

My husband and I finally arrived at my parents' home to get our luggage and head for the honeymoon suite of a local hotel. When we turned on the TV, we learned that the hotel was on fire and being evacuated!

All roads out of town were closed, so we had no choice but to spend our wedding night at my parents' home. We were unexpected and there weren't enough beds, so we spent our wedding night on the floor in sleeping bags!

We had planned to travel to a ski resort the next day, but the roads were still closed, so we spent our honeymoon at my parents' house, shoveling snow and scraping ice. True to his word, my husband had said, "It will be a cold day in hell when I get married!" Well, it was.

LISA PALLOZZI,
BASKING RIDGE, N.J.

DEAR READERS: Today we pay tribute to a great American, Martin Luther King Jr., whose words of wisdom are even more meaningful today than they were 27 years ago, when he said:

"One day, somebody should remind us that, even though there may be political and ideological differences between us, the Vietnamese are our brothers, the Russians are our brothers, the Chinese are our brothers; and one day, we've got to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

God bless America, and may we Americans, by our conduct, be worthy of God's blessings.

GROOM — The Groom Tigerettes rolled past Vega, 61-37, Friday night to boost their record to 19-1 for the season.

Misty Homen scored 18 points and Melanie Friemel added 13 to lead Groom's scoring attack. Sandie Conrad and Kay Case followed with 9 points while Angie Conrad chipped in 6.

"The girls played real well. We got 24 points in the first quarter. I think our loss to Claude really helped us," said Groom head coach Mitchell Davis. Vega beat Groom, 63-58, in the boys' game.

Dusty Walker was high scorer for Vega with 12 points.

Bojurgin scored 14 of his 16 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Tigers in scoring. Seth Ritter added 10 points.

PAMPA — Pampa hosts Amarillo Caprock in a District 1-4A doubleheader Tuesday night in McNelly Fieldhouse.

The girls' game tips off at 6, followed by the boys at 7:30.

FOOTBALL

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Los Angeles Rams president John Shaw arrived in St. Louis on Sunday to complete a deal to move the franchise.

Al Kerth, a spokesman for FANS Inc., the St. Louis group courting the Rams, said Shaw and owner Georgia Frontiere were among eight to 10 team officials scheduled to arrive throughout the night.

Today, the deal — which could give the Rams $20 million a year in profits — is to be finalized. And Kerth said a news conference is scheduled Tuesday to formally welcome the Rams to town.

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas defensive end Charles Haley announced his retirement Sunday after the Cowboys' 38-28 loss at San Francisco in the NFC title game, the Dallas Morning News reported today. Haley, 31, joined the Cowboys in 1992 in a trade with the 49ers.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The on-again, off-again courtship between the Philadelphia Eagles and former coach Dick Vermeil ended because of Vermeil's contract demands, team owner Jeffrey Lurie said Saturday.

GOLF

HONOLULU (AP) — John Morse shot a 4-under-par 68 on Sunday for a three-stroke victory over Tom Lehman and Duffy Waldorf in the Hawaiian Open.

Morse, who earned $216,000 for his first PGA Tour victory, had a 19-under-269 total on the Waialae Country Club course. Lehman closed with a 67 and Waldorf shot a 68.

Paul Azinger, making a comeback after battling cancer, shot a 66 to finish in a fourth-place tie with Bill Glasson (66) and Dan Pohl (69) at 274.

DORADO, Puerto Rico (AP) — Jim Colbert made a 3-foot birdie putt after a remarkable recovery from a bunker on the third hole of a playoff with Jim Albus on Sunday to win the Senior Tournament of Champions.

Colbert, who earned $148,000 for his 10th victory on the Senior PGA Tour, shot a 1-under-par 71 and Albus had a 69 for 7-under 209 totals on the Hyatt Dorado Beach East course. Jim Dent (69) and Larry Gilbert (70) followed at 210.

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Dawn Coe-Jones shot a 3-under-par 69 on Sunday for a six-stroke victory in the LPGA Tournament of Champions.

Coe-Jones, who earned $115,000 for her third career victory, had a 7-under 281 total on the North-South course at Grand Cypress. Beth Daniel shot a 71 to finish second.

49ers turn back Cowboys

By ROB GLOSTER
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — All season long, teams have targeted Eric Davis as the weak link in the 49ers' secondary. He's the only member of the defensive backfield not going to the Pro Bowl.

But the cornerback, tormented by his failures against Dallas in previous games, needed less than three minutes to set the tone for San Francisco's 38-28 victory in Sunday's NFC championship game.

Davis returned an interception 44 yards for a touchdown on the third play of the game, and stripped Dallas receiver Michael Irvin of the ball three plays later to set up another touchdown.

And when Dallas fumbled away the ensuing kickoff, the 49ers drove 35 yards for yet another touchdown.

With 7:27 gone in the game, San Francisco led 21-0. The Cowboys never caught up.

"It's kind of like the Keystone Cops. It was a laugh," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer. "Obviously, when we make the plays we did the first five minutes of the ballgame, you just say, 'How in the world can you win the ballgame?'"

"Spotting them a 21-point lead was like spotting Carl Lewis 20 yards in a 100-yard dash," added Dallas' Emmitt Smith.

Davis opened the scoring when he slid off his receiver, Irvin, and moved in front of Kevin Williams to make the interception. He sped untouched to the end zone.

"It was a calculated risk," Davis said. "I had my back to my receiver to make them think I was manned up on him. I made my break and I just beat him to the ball."

On Dallas' next series, Davis forced a fumble by Irvin and safety Tim McDonald made the recovery at the Dallas 39. Four plays later, Steve Young lofted a pass in the right flat to Ricky Waters, who high stepped into the end zone.

Williams fumbled the kickoff and kicker Doug Brien recovered for San Francisco at the Dallas 35.

From there, Steve Young moved the 49ers into the end zone in seven plays. A 9-yard draw by Young got the ball to the 1, and fullback William Floyd scored on the next play.

"Eric set the tone of the game today. He's my partner in crime," said fellow cornerback Deion

"Prime Time" Sanders.

Davis, who added an interception on a Hail Mary pass by Troy Aikman on the final play of the first half, did not have a perfect day. He was burned by Irvin for a 44-yard touchdown catch late in the first quarter, and Irvin scored on him again in the fourth quarter.

But his early plays proved too costly for the Cowboys. And they came against a team that had taunted Davis after scorching him in previous games.

In last year's NFC title game, Bernie Kosar lofted a pass that barely sailed over the head of the leaping Davis and into the arms of Alvin Harper, who went 42 yards for a touchdown that gave Dallas an insurmountable 35-14 advantage.

And Harper had a 90-yard reception against Davis in a game this season to set up a touchdown.

"Every time I get him in man coverage, he's going to get beat," Harper bragged after that November game.

The 49ers switched assignments Sunday, putting Sanders on Harper and using Davis and another defender to double-cover Irvin.

Since Sanders was signed as a free agent by the 49ers in September, Davis has become the focus of opponents' game plans.

Teams scared of Sanders have tried to attack Davis, who ended up leading the 49ers in passes defended.

"The pressure has always been on me with this guy playing on the other side," Davis said, referring to Sanders. "I knew I just had to go out and make plays."

Harvesters down Lubbock Monterey in prep soccer play

The Pampa High boys' soccer team downed Lubbock Monterey, 4-1, Saturday at Harvester Stadium.

Ville Hanni scored for Pampa on a penalty kick at the seven-minute mark in the first half. Monterey answered back with a penalty kick in the 14th minute.

Pampa came back to score in the 15th minute on Salvador Del Fierro's goal and Trey McCavit's assist to give the Harvesters a 2-1 lead at halftime.

Luke Long got an assist from Joey Mendoza to score in the 15th minute of the second half. Pampa's final score came in the 77th minute on Kyle Johnson's assist to Bryan McCormick.

Lubbock had two yellow cards and Randal Odom drew a red card for Pampa.

The Harvesters meet Palo Duro Tuesday in Amarillo with the match starting at 4:30 p.m.

The Harvesters are now 2-0 on the season. They defeated Canyon, 9-0, in the opener. The next home match is Saturday when Pampa meets Borger at 2 p.m.

Chargers rally past Steelers

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — They wouldn't quit talking, and that got them in trouble. When the Pittsburgh Steelers quit running, the San Diego Chargers really knew they had a chance.

Through Super Bowl years and subpar ones, through Chuck Noll's 23 seasons and Bill Cowher's three seasons, one Steelers' constant remained: their commitment to the run.

So imagine the Chargers' surprise, and delight, when the Steelers, leading 13-3 in the second half of the AFC championship game Sunday, all but abandoned the run.

Because they did, the AFC's Super Bowl representative turned out to be San Diego after the Chargers' 17-13 victory sent the Steelers packing not for Miami, but for the winter.

"All week, we have been hearing about their running game," said linebacker Junior Seau, who did much of the run-stuffing with 16 tackles. "We've been underdogs all the way through the season. You have to do something rare to get respect in this league."

They did, limiting the league's top rushing offense to 66 yards, the Steelers' second-lowest this season. And Foster, who has never run harder than he did in gaining 133 yards the week before against Cleveland, didn't look like the same runner, with only 47 yards on 20 carries.

He virtually disappeared in the second half, gaining but 14 yards on his seven carries.

"Barry Foster didn't want to run in the second half," cornerback Darrien Gordon said. "I could see it in his eyes. I don't know if he was fatigued or what. That whole second half, they started throwing the ball. They came out throwing on first down. When does Pittsburgh ever do that?"

"I was celebrating. I said, 'They starting to panic.' They had no respect, they had their Super Bowl rap video and their towels and a bunch of excuses."

The Steelers, nine-point favorites, also had no excuses.

"It's a very empty feeling right now," Cowher said. "It was very exciting what was going on in this town. The whole city was excited. It was all there for us. We came very close... it's hard. It's just hard."

Pittsburgh denied being overconfident, but Charger after Charger talked about getting fired up by stories the Steelers met for a half-hour last week to choreograph their Super Bowl rap video.

"You have to be confident, and we were confident," tackle John Jackson said. "But you also have to execute, and we didn't execute."

The team that seldom made mistakes — they had a league-low 18 turnovers in 18 games — made them at the worst possible time, twice committing critical coverage mistakes that led to Stan Humphries' two 43-yard touchdown passes.

"Is it a shock? Yeah, it's a shock," wide receiver Andre Hastings said. "The whole game we believed we would win the game. We believed it the entire (drive). We were confident to the very last play."

Sampras beats Pozza in opening round of Australian Tennis Open

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — With one sublime sequence of shots and several well-chosen words, Pete Sampras issued a warning to any pretenders to his Australian Open crown and No. 1 ranking.

Consider this display in a 6-3, 6-2, 6-0 victory today over Gianluca Pozzi during the first round:

Sampras darted to his right for a forehand volley and whirled to his left to put away a backhand volley for one point, slammed an ace up the middle for the second point, dropped a feathery half-volley for the third point and drove a deep backhand to take the game at love.

Sampras could do anything he wanted, and usually did, against the No. 95 Pozzi, whose soft game is suited more to clay courts. But in case any of Sampras' higher-ranked rivals weren't watching, he reiterated his intentions with his comments a few minutes later.

"Winning ... walking away from here defending my title," Sampras said. "Anything less is not good enough. I'm at the point that either you win it or you don't. I've been on both sides of winning majors and losing the finals, and there's a huge difference. Nobody remembers who comes in second."

To that end, Sampras is still working on ways of improving his game, trying to serve and volley on his second serve for the first time in his career, chip and charge a little, mix things up to keep his opponents guessing.

"The last thing I want to do is be predictable, so the guy knows where I'm going all the time," Sampras said. "It's something I want to work on to add to my game."

As the Australian Open began, the aura of invincibility that surrounded Sampras each time he strode on court a year ago seemed gone.

None of this change in attitude had to do with a loss of power or speed or determination by Sampras, who is completely healed from the injuries that nagged him last summer after he won Wimbledon again.

Rather, it was the result of improvements made by his main rivals, notably Andre Agassi, who surged from a low of No. 32 to No. 2 by year's end after winning the U.S. Open, and Boris Becker, back up from No. 11 to No. 3, with an eye on regaining the top spot he held briefly after winning in Australia in 1991.

There was two-time Australian champion Jim Courier, hoping to enjoy the game at last as he works his way back up the rankings from No. 9.

And there was No. 5 Michael Chang, who got a psychological boost by beating Sampras in straight sets in the final of an exhibition Saturday.

"As far as the top players, everyone is very, very close," Chang said. "Pete's had some injuries and it takes its toll on you after a while, physically and mentally. Everyone realizes that no one can be No. 1 forever, and what goes up comes down. So you try to see if you can pop in there."

In women's matches, Wimbledon champion and No. 2 Conchita Martinez beat Barbara Rittner 6-3, 6-2, and No. 4 Mary Pierce beat Tina Krizan 6-1, 6-0.

Martina Hingis, the 14-year-old from Switzerland, won her first match in a Grand Slam tournament, beating Jolene Watanabe 6-0, 7-6 (7-2). Hingis won the first set in just 19 minutes, yielding only 11 points.

Pampa Middle School girls win championships at White Deer tourney

WHITE DEER — The Pampa 7th and 8th grade girls brought home championship trophies from the White Deer Middle School Tournament held over the weekend.

In the 8th grade division, Pampa defeated White Deer, 23-14, in the finals. Lisa Dwight was high scorer for Pampa with 6 points.

Pampa beat Clarendon, 30-11, and Highland Park, 29-18, in earlier games. Jenny Fatheree was high scorer with 11 points against Clarendon and Dwight was high scorer with 12 points against Highland Park.

Pampa 7th graders won over Shamrock, 41-9, in the championship game. Tandi Morton was the leading scorer for Pampa with 14 points.

Pampa also beat Clarendon, 46-16, and Highland Park, 28-17. Jordanna Young scored 20 points against Clarendon and Morton had 10 points against Highland Park.

Usery wants another attempt to settle Major League baseball strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Mediator W.J. Usery wants to make another attempt to settle the baseball strike and will meet Thursday in Washington with the owners' negotiating committee.

A management official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, confirmed the meeting Sunday. The official said no events of great significance were expected.

"It's just a meeting to look everyone in the eye and say, 'You've got to get this settled for the good of the country,'" the management official said. Owners broke off talks Dec. 22 and implemented their salary cap proposal the following day. The sides haven't met since.

Boston Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington, chairman of management's negotiating committee, has spent the past two weeks helping formulate the rules for replacement players that owners intend to hire for spring training and the regular season. Baseball's ruling executive council approved the rules Friday.

Union head Donald Fehr has spent the past 10 days conducting regional meetings with players. Fehr will hold his seventh meeting today outside Caracas, Venezuela. The final meeting of the tour is Wednesday at Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

Usery was appointed by the Clinton Administration Oct. 14 and led the sides through five rounds of bargaining in the following two months. While he did cajole owners into making two tax proposals, the players' association said both plans eventually would act like salary caps, which owners didn't deny.

"We weren't the ones who cut off talks," Fehr said Saturday. "If they have something to say to us, I'm sure we'll hear from them."

On Saturday, owners said they were prepared to play the 1995 World Series with replacements, and striking major leaguers said they were considering a barnstorming city-to-city tour of all-star teams this spring.

Spring training is to start Feb. 16 with minor leaguers and replacement players. A high Baltimore Orioles source, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the team will refuse to play spring training games with replacements.

Massachusetts keeps top spot in college poll

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Massachusetts and Connecticut held the top two spots in the college basketball poll today, the second week in a row they were there. The big news, however, is who isn't in the Top 25.

For the first time since December 1986, Duke is not among the ranks of the ranked. A run of 143 consecutive poll appearances came to an end when the Blue Devils (9-6) didn't get enough votes after dropping their fourth consecutive game, the last three without coach Mike Krzyzewski on the bench.

Massachusetts (11-1) held the top spot with three wins last week, an overtime squeaker at St. Bonaventure, a slow sure one over Rutgers and a decisive 93-60 thrashing of then-No. 21 Penn on Saturday night. The Minutemen received 47 first-place votes and 1,629 points from the national media panel to easily outdistance Connecticut, the only remaining unbeaten Division I team.

The Huskies (12-0) were No. 1 on 16 ballots and had 1,588 points, 68 more than North Carolina (12-1), which had the other three first-place votes as it moved up one spot in the rankings.

UCLA (9-1) moved up two spots to fourth and was followed by Kentucky, Syracuse, Kansas, Maryland, Arkansas and Georgetown.

Arizona, which takes over for Duke with the longest current streak in the rankings, led the Second Ten and was followed by Michigan State, Arizona State, Iowa State, Wake Forest, Missouri, Oregon, Virginia, New Mexico State and Illinois.

The last five teams were Stanford, Georgia Tech, Cincinnati, Florida and Penn. Virginia, Illinois, Stanford and Cincinnati were the new teams in this week's poll. Each had been ranked earlier in the season.

They replaced Clemson, Iowa, California and Duke, which is off to an 0-4 start in the Atlantic Coast Conference for the first time since 1982-83. Krzyzewski's third season in Durham, N.C., and the last time the Blue Devils finished below .500.

Krzyzewski will be out indefinitely as doctors have forced him to rest his back, which he had surgery on in October. Pete Gaudet took over as interim head coach following a loss to Clemson, and Duke has lost to Georgia Tech, Wake Forest and Virginia since.

The latest was 91-88 in double overtime Saturday in which the Blue Devils blew a 23-point lead in the second half. It also got the Cavaliers (10-3) back in the Top 25 after a three-week absence. They started the week with a 61-37 victory over Clemson, the Tigers' first loss of the season. Clemson (10-2) then lost to North Carolina-83-66 Saturday and was knocked out of the rankings after a one-week appearance.

Illinois (13-3) came back in on a five-game winning streak since losing to Connecticut and is off to a 4-0 start in the Big Ten.

Stanford (11-2) was in in the rankings for one week before splitting two games in the state of Washington. The Cardinal got back in this week after splitting home games with the Arizona teams in the Pac-10s, the loss 89-83 in overtime to Arizona on Saturday.

Cincinnati (12-5), which was ranked as high as 10th earlier in the season, has won four in a row since dropping two of three at the Rainbow Classic and falling from the rankings.

Iowa (11-5) dropped out after three straight one-point losses, two on the road and all in the Big Ten, while California (8-4) fell from the rankings after losing four of its last five.

Arizona's poll streak is now at 133, starting with the preseason poll in 1987-88, a year the Wildcats reached the Final Four. The next three longest streaks belong to North Carolina, 81, Kentucky, 79, and Kansas, 71.

Iowa State had the week's biggest jump among the ranked teams, moving from 23rd to 14th following Saturday's 69-65 victory over Kansas that dropped the Jayhawks four spots to seventh. Oregon's leap from 25 to 17 was next-highest following the Ducks' 96-83 win over Oregon State on Saturday.

The week's biggest drop was Florida's fall from 15th to 24th. The Gators lost two games last week, to Kentucky early and a 73-70 buzzer-beater to Villanova on Saturday.

Saturday's other ranked results were: No. 2 Connecticut 70, Providence 62; Auburn 104, No. 5 Arkansas 90; No. 6 UCLA 91, Washington State 78; No. 7 Kentucky 83, Georgia 71; No. 8 Syracuse 65, Pittsburgh 63; No. 9 Maryland 76, No. 14 Wake Forest 66; No. 10 Georgetown 75, Boston College 60; No. 11 Michigan State 70, Oklahoma State 69; No. 12 Arizona State 73, No. 20 California 68; No. 17 Missouri 67, Kansas State 61; Purdue 84, No. 19 Iowa 83.

Sunray slips by Wheeler in basketball twinbill

SUNRAY — Sunray slipped by Wheeler, 56-53, in a boys' basketball game Friday night.

Kelly Porter scored 19 points and Kelly Hill added 17 to lead Sunray in scoring.

Top scorer for Wheeler was Jarrod Ledbetter with 17, followed by Justin Hefley, 13.

"We were only 2 of 10 from the foul line," said Wheeler head coach Shawn Read. "We missed enough free throws and layups to win a ballgame. The kids are playing hard, but good things just aren't happening to us right now."

Gunmen kill Austin woman at Cambodian tourist site

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Gunmen opened fire on a tourist van at the Angkor Wat temple complex, Cambodia's biggest tourist attraction, killing an Austin, Texas, woman and seriously wounding her husband, U.S. and Cambodian officials said. The couple's Cambodian guide also was killed.

A provincial official said the attack Sunday was carried out by Khmer Rouge guerrillas, but that could not be confirmed. The forested area around the temples in Siem Reap province is heavily fought over by Khmer Rouge guerrillas and government soldiers.

A State Department official in Washington identified the woman as Susan Ginsburg Hadden of Austin. Her husband was identified as James Hadden Jr.

The official said Mrs. Hadden was killed when gunmen opened fire on the van after it stopped at a roadblock. The official, who asked not to be identified, said robbery appeared to be the motive for the attack.

U.S. Embassy spokesman David Miller said the wounded American was being treated in Phnom Penh, but would not release his condition.

Diethelm Travel, which sponsored the Americans' trip to Siem Reap, said the man, whom it identified as V. Hadden, suffered from shrapnel injuries and was evacuated by military aircraft to Phnom Penh.

The Americans were headed to Banteay Srey, one of several 12th-century temples in Angkor Wat.

Guides regularly take tourists around the main complex of delicately-carved temples, but discourage visits to Banteay Srey because it is isolated on a long, pot-holed dirt road, and thus more vulnerable to attack.

Uk Kim Leng, the provincial police chief, said the Khmer Rouge fired on the vehicle with a grenade launcher as it traveled along the dirt road to the temple site.

The Cambodia Daily, Phnom Penh's English-language daily, said the Americans were traveling in a convoy of four vehicles of more than a dozen tourists and four policemen.

A German tourist in another vehicle was slightly injured, the newspaper said.

Chief of Angkor Police Chea Sophal told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that police engaged the attackers in a firefight for about five minutes until government soldiers arrived. One attacker was injured in the battle, he said.

The government often blames violent incidents on the Khmer Rouge, but unpaid soldiers regularly extort money at gunpoint from motorists and bandit gangs with no political allegiances also roam the countryside.

An Information Ministry spokesman said it was unclear if the Khmer Rouge were to blame, noting that no hostages were taken.

Khmer Rouge defectors say the group has offered a reward to any guerrilla who seizes a foreigner.

Yeltsin invites Clinton to Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin has invited President Clinton to a summit in Moscow in May, despite increasing U.S. criticism of the Russian military campaign in Chechnya, the ITAR-Tass news agency said today.

A high-ranking Foreign Ministry official told ITAR-Tass that Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev would discuss the proposed meeting with Secretary of State Warren Christopher in Geneva on Tuesday.

"We have prospects of a summit meeting in May," the official told ITAR-Tass. "There is an invitation and there is an intention of U.S. President Bill Clinton to arrive in Moscow at that time."

Clinton's last visit to Moscow was in January 1994, shortly after the stunning success of ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovskiy in parliamentary elections. Yeltsin repaid the visit with a trip to Washington last September.

There was no immediate comment on the proposed summit in Washington.

Boy Scouts' bodies found in flooded western North Carolina

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Jimmy Poovey knew the rain-swollen creek was dangerous and he warned the three Boy Scouts to stay away. They didn't. A footbridge spanning the rolling waters collapsed under their weight.

"I told them to go home," said Poovey, who owns a cabin near the creek. "Ten minutes later, they were dead."

The three had been on their way to buy candy Saturday at a nearby store after their camping trip was canceled because of bad weather.

Two of the bodies were found a half-mile apart Sunday in the shallow water downstream from the bridge. The other boy was found late Saturday a quarter of a mile from the collapse.

"I almost broke down crying. It was terrible," said 13-year-old Joe Gerald, who joined in the search for his friends. He had planned to join them, but hadn't brought his rain gear.

The weekend flooding left at least one other person dead and another missing. Rain forced dozens from their homes, washed out bridges and roads, caused mudslides and downed trees and power lines.

The boys, Jacob Wine, Gerard Gasque and Kevin DuVall, all 14, were among seven scouts and three adults from an Atlanta troop camping in the Pisgah National Forest.

The troop had gone to a cabin owned by one of the group's leaders.
