PAMPA - Price increases for The Pampa News, which went into effect Sunday, will affect only news rack sales. There will be no increase in home delivery subscription rates, said Lewis James, circulation manager.

Rack prices for the News went to 50 cents daily and $1 on Sunday.

Publisher Wayland Thomas said the price increase was necessary to help offset the cost of newsprint, which is projected to increase up to 30 percent this

James said the increase in rack prices is the first increase since 1988, when the price of the Sunday paper went to 75 cents.

AMARILLO - Mac Thornberry was sworn in today as the Panhandle area's new congressman as the new Republican-controlled Congress opened its new session. Thornberry, an Amarillo Republican, announced his staff appointments for both the Washington and Amarillo offices. Tommy Thompson, a former editorial page editor for the Amarillo Globe-News, has been named Thornberry's administrative assistant and will manage staff operations and press relations from the Washington

Amarillo attorney Clay See has been appointed legislative assistant and will work in the Washington office. Kenneth Hodges, a farmer from Panhandle, also was appointed legislative assistant.

Sylvia Nugent, a political consultant from Amarillo who handled Thornberry's campaign against Democrat Bill Sarpaulis. will serve as interim manager of the district office in Amarillo.

Constituent representatives in the Amarillo office will be Melodi Moore-Byrd and Brent Pat McDowell of Shamrock will serve as Thornberry's agriculture representative.

PAMPA - Vandals practiced the art of criminal mischief across town with three acts of spray painting, one episode of shooting out windows and destruction in a city park.

On Tuesday, Pampa police officials investigated spray painted messages "Lizzard," "SR 13" and "Bael" at Horace Mann School, 400 N. Schiffman Faulkner, Machine, 401 N. Banks, and Auditorium, M.K.Brown

1100 W. Coronado. A pellet gun was reportedly used to shoot out windows of two locomotives owned by Santa Fe Railroad parked at the local depot in the 100 block of East Atchison. The bridge at Central Park was damaged as were two trash cans which were removed from their holders.

WASHINGTON (AP) Stuck in the car on a long road trip, you're scanning the dial as radio stations ebb and flow. But the day may be near when radio stations go where you go. Federal regulators are considering a handful of proposals for a new radio service that would be available nationwide, transmitted by satellite. The radio industry opposes the proposals, arguing they would drive local stations out of business.

The Federal Communications Commission is expected to decide on Jan. 12 whether or not the new satellite-delivered service should move forward.

Economy helped best by freedom

For nations of the world, the path from poverty to prosperity isn't foreign aid or government planning. It's freedom.

In an important new study, the Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C., has exhaustively documented this link between economic freedom and material progress. Researchers Bryan T. Johnson and Thomas P. Sheehy found, in their look at 101 countries of the world, that the most prosperous were those that protect private property and allow the free market to

The Heritage study rated each country in 10 different categories of economic freedom: trade policy, taxation, government consumption of economic output, monetary policy (i.e. inflation), foreign investment, banking, wage and price controls, property rights, regulation and the black market. A rating of 1 signaled maximum economic freedom, a 5 maximum government control.

By comparing economic freedom to living standards (as measured by purchasing power parity), the study found an undeniable correlation - what the authors call "The Curve of Economic Freedom." The countries-with the highest standard of living tend to be those that allow the most economic freedom. And those mired in subsistence poverty are almost universally those where government exercises the most control over economic life.

Even a quick survey of the world economy will confirm the Heritage theses. The richest countries in the world - Japan, the United States, Canada and the nations of Western Europe - all scored among the "free" or "mostly free" nations according to the Heritage Foundation's ratings of economic freedom. And those countries that have pulled themselves out of poverty in the last two generations - such as Hong Kong, Singapore, Taiwan and South Korea - were also among the most free eco-

Conversely, among the world's poorest nations - including China, India and most of Sub-Saharan Africa -, the vast majority were rated as either "mostly unfree" or "repressed" economically. The most economically repressed nations in the world - Cuba, North Korea and Vietnam - are also among the

This freedom factor delivers a devastating indictment of American post-war foreign aid policy. Since 1946, the united States has lavished more than $250 billion in economic aid on developing nations. This year alone, we'll spend $13 billion in foreign aid, most of it economic assistance. With few exceptions, this aid has been a colossal failure. The reason is simple. The key to development is not outside, government-to-government assistance, but domestic policies that encourage the free market. Nations such as Taiwan and South Korea have prospered with very little foreign aid because their economies are mostly free. International charity cases such as Tanzania and India remain desperately poor because their economies are mostly unfree. If anything, foreign economic aid retards development by shielding recipient governments from the full folly of centralized planning, This lesson applies equally to the former communist states of Eastern and Central Europe. The key to their economic progress is not transfusions of aid from abroad, but free markets at home. That explains why the two former communist states that have performed the best economically since their liberation - Estonia and the Czech Republic - also score the best on the scale of economic freedom.

The Curve of Economic Freedom contains a warning for countries at the wealthy end of the scale, too. The authors found a disturbing tendency of wealthier nations to backslide on economic freedom. "Once these countries reach a certain level of economic prosperity, as in the G-7 countries, they are tempted to regulate their economies, raise taxes and add welfare programs, which results in less economic freedom and slower rates of economic growth," the authors concluded.

If we want to promote economic prosperity at home and abroad, we should forget about foreign aid, industrial policy and other forms of government meddling. As the Heritage study confirms, a nation's economic health springs from only one source - economic freedom.

Getting searched by customs

James Garcia and Evaristo Vazquez - both born in Pennsylvania and both in their early 20s - had never been out of the country, and so they spent a week, on vacation, in Jamaica. They had a good time. Coming back home, however, turned out to be a terrifying experience.

At Newark Airport in New Jersey, as they went to pick up their luggage, Garcia and Vazquez were surrounded by customs agents, put into separate rooms and strip-searched. The detention of the two returning vacationers was conducted without a warrant, as were the searches.

The body searches revealed nothing illegal. Nor did the searches of their luggage. The diligent customs agents then decided to X-ray the suspects.

In the court papers filed by Stefan Presser and David Rudovsky (another attorney on the case), the United States of America - through its U.S. Customs Service, Department of the Treasury - is accused of violating an impressive number of constitutionally guaranteed rights when Garcia and Vazquez spent those unforgettable hours at Newark Airport and St. Francis Hospital:

"The warrantless detention, searches, handcuffing, X-rays and shackling of the plaintiffs were undertaken without reasonable suspicion or probable cause, and these actions were in violation of the laws of the state of New Jersey, and the Fourth and Fifth Amendments of the United States

Starting with the recovery of ancient eggs in Siberia and climaxing with the movie Jurassic Park, there is renewed popular interest in dinosaurs. Paleontologists are now reviewing old theories that have become new again.

Among the hypotheses for how the dinosaurs disappeared, the one now in the vanguard is that of paleontologist Robert T. Bakker: "The bugs did it." This suggests that the battle of wits between microbes and other Earth life has been going on for millions, perhaps billions, of years.

A population of dinosaurs, immense and powerful, ruled the world until the ponderous, peripatetic creatures strayed from home to encounter germs in previously widely separated regions. They were germs for which the dinosaurs had no inherent defense – germs so devious that they could disguise themselves as bodily tissue or, in a thousand other ways, confound any antibodies. They intermingled, intermarried and combined to comprise an unstoppable strain.

"Although it's always annoying to have to wait, this isn't necessarily a bad sign," explains Dr. John Connolly, author of the "Castle Connolly Pocket Guide: How to Find the Best Doctors, Hospitals and HMOs.

According to Connolly, "a doctor who spends extra time with another patient is probably exactly the doctor you want for yourself.'

However, if your doctor is frequently very late, he adds, you may wish to discuss this with him or her - or even want to find another doctor who better meets your needs.

Salaam said Monday that he will enter the draft. Miami defensive tackle Warren Sapp, the Lombardi winner, also declared his eligibility for the draft along with Hurricanes running back James Stewart, Florida receiver Jack Jackson, Pitt running back Curtis Martin and BYU quarterback John Walsh.

Texas offensive tackle Blake Brockermeyer was expected to announce his plans to turn pro today. Longhorns teammate Lovell Pinkney, a reciever, said he was turning pro, but his high school coach said he is wavering.

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL fined the expansion Carolina Panthers $150,000 and stripped them of two draft choices for talking to Pittsburgh defensive coordinator Dom Capers about their coaching job.

The Steelers were fined $50,000 and a moratorium was placed on signing Capers. The draft choices will be the 61st and 191st overall — the extra picks the Panthers had after the second and sixth rounds.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said league rules were violated when the Panthers contacted Capers, when the Steelers granted permission to talk to him, and when the Panthers and Capers engaged in discussions.

NEW YORK (AP) — Miami's Dan Marino, who completed 22 of 29 passes for 257 yards and two touchdowns in the Dolphins' 27-17 playoff victory over Kansas City, was selected the NFL player of the week. Chicago defensive end Trace Armstrong and Green Bay kicker Chris Jacke also were honored.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball officials turn their attention to replacement players today, and some government officials turn their attention to the 146-day-old strike.

While baseball's operations committee meets by telephone and discusses how to set up replacement ball, the 104th Congress opens. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Rep. Michael Biliarkis, R-Fla., planned to introduce legislation to remove the sport's 73-year-old antitrust exemption.
