PAMPA GETS .72 INCH

Thundershowers Drench Vicinity, Much Of State

Thundershowers moved into the area last night dumping .72 of an inch of the precious moisture on the city.

Hard rains pelted Pampa beginning at 6:45 p.m. Monday and lasted through the evening. The rain filled the gutters and turned the streets into rivers.

Perryton recorded .05 of an inch while Miami received an inch of moisture.

By 8 p.m., Wheeler had received a half inch and light rain still fell 30 minutes later.

Pea size hail was reported in some parts of the Panhandle but Pampa received little, although winds became gusty before the storm was over. Some light hail was reported in sections of Pampa.

More rain is in the forecast for tonight and Wednesday. Winds are predicted to be strong and gusty and temperatures will remain in the mid-80's in UPI reports.

A stalled front along the coast that caused rainfall far into North Texas kept the state cooler than normal Monday.

Most of the state was under a blanket of clouds Monday night and showers were scattered from the coast into Central and North Texas.

High temperatures ranged from the low 70s to the upper 90s. Alice, Cotulla and McAllen shared the state's high of 98 degrees while Abilene, which received the most rain, had a high of 78.

Abilene reported 1.32 inches of rain during the day and San Angelo had almost three quarters of an inch.

The other communities with rain reported less than a half an inch to a mere trace.

Light rain touched some areas in the drought-parched midlands for the first time in weeks early today as thundershowers moved across the central and southern Plains.

But the light showers did little to help the dust-dry Midwest and skies stayed clear over the driest areas.

Thundershowers stretched from southern Texas to northwestern Missouri. The heaviest rainfall centered over north central Texas. A downpour flooded some streets in San Antonio, Tex.

Turkish Troops Attack Cypriots

United Press International Attacking at dawn, Turkish invasion forces battered Greek Cypriot national guardsmen on the north coast of Cyprus with heavy artillery today in the longest sustained period of firing since the cease-fire last week. Greek officers reacted by postponing the signature of an agreement on a cease-fire line.

Turkish Cypriot forces also seized control of a post in the east coast port of Famagusta Monday night which gave them control of the harbor.

United Nations spokesman said the fighting today in the mountains west of Kyrenia has lasted for more than eight hours. The Turkish forces fought mostly with heavy artillery and mortars, the spokesman said.

It forced a delay of more than two hours in the start of the fifth round of military truce talks in Cyprus between Greek and Turkish officers, conference sources said. The scheduled signing of a partial accord on a cease-fire line was postponed.

"Owing to the Turkish attack at Lapithos and Karavas (two towns on the north coast) a delay was inevitable while the Greek representative received further instructions." A U.N. source at the talks said. The sources at the tripartite talks said Turkish Col. Nezih Chakar told his colleagues his forces did not violate the cease-fire agreement in the renewed action but engaged only in "mopping up small pockets of resistance."

In the brief fighting in Famagusta Monday night, the spokesman said, Turkish Cypriot forces captured a key post at the northern entrance to the harbor.

A U.N. source said Cyprus President Glafkos Clerides threatened military retaliation if the Turkish Cypriots did not quit the outpost.

Woman Injured In Car Accident

Mrs. Jerry Biggers, 35, of 941 S. Wells was listed in good condition at Highland General Hospital this morning following an accident on Highway 152 at about 6:20 p.m. Monday.

Troopers of the Texas Highway Patrol said Mrs. Biggers was a passenger in a car driven by Randy Whitsett, Pampa, when the car was struck from the rear by a car driven by Mary Anderson, of White Deer.

Officers said Whitsett, westbound at a point about four miles west of Pampa, attempted a left turn onto a county road when his car was struck by the Anderson vehicle.

Mrs. Biggers was taken to the hospital by Metropolitan Ambulance Service and was expected to remain hospitalized today for observation. She had complained of back pains.

There were no other injuries. Whitsett was charged with failure to indicate a turn, and Mary Anderson was charged with failure to control speed.

WEATHER

Considerable cloudiness with continued thundershowers tonight and Wednesday. Variable winds strong and gusty in thundershowers areas. High today in mid-80's. Yesterday's high, 83. Low, 58. 72 of an inch of moisture.

By TEX DeWEESE
Approval of salary increases for 229 city employees amounting to approximately $130,000 and reactivation of the old Board of City Development topped last night's third study session of Pampa's proposed 1974-75 city budget.

The BCD was revived at the instigation of Mayor R.D. Wilkerson following his reading of a letter from Kay Fancher, president of the Pampa Industrial Foundation, who urged its restoration as a means of supplementing PIF and Chamber of Commerce expenditures for the hiring of an industrial relations director to seek new industry for Pampa.

Fancher said in his letter "if the Foundation continues to spend the necessary monies for a continued full-time industrial development man, it will soon deplete its resources, and our community will be completely out of the race to captivate new business and industry."

"Almost all surrounding communities have this facility available to them, and if we plan to stay competitive, we must follow suit."

The proposed operating budget for the city, scheduled to be filed by 5 p.m. Friday with the City Secretary, will total $2,728,998 exclusive of $32,000 to be spent from federal revenue sharing funds for heavy equipment replacements and other capital outlay.

The grand total to be spent in the coming fiscal year would spiral to $3,109,800 (operating budget plus revenue sharing fund expenditures).

The actual operating budget as proposed would run to approximately $179,000 more than the current year, following removal of a $75,000 item for street seal-coating which now will be paid out of revenue sharing money.

The new proposed city tax rate was upped from $1.90 per $100 assessed property valuation to $1.92 for fiscal 1974-75. The current tax rate is $1.72.

The extra 2 cents would go to finance the proposed BCD operation. It would bring in an estimated $10,800 in tax money.

Chamber and Pampa Industrial Foundation officials indicated today it would take from $30,000 to $35,000 a year to support the industrial director salary, office help and travel expenses.

The old Pampa Board of City Development, which subsidized Chamber of Commerce operations, was dissolved in 1963 during the term of Mayor E.C. Sidwell. The chamber office was moved out of City Hall. It has been supported by Pampa business and professional firms and private citizens through an annual membership drive ever since.

The Pampa city charter provides the city commission may appoint a Board of City Development of not to exceed 15 members who would serve without pay.

City commissioners seemed to agree that, if the proposal is finally okayed, the five members of the commission would be named to the BCD at least for the first year of operation.

It also seemed to be the opinion of commissioners that the only function of the re-activated board would be administration of any funds designated for the office of the economic relations director.

During last night's discussions Ward 3 Commissioner Leo Braswell and Ward 4 Commissioner Linden Shepherd indicated they are opposed to the BCD proposal at this time.

It was learned today although four or five applications have been received for the vacant industrial director's post, decision on the hiring of a replacement for Harris Brinson, resigned, will depend upon adoption of a plan for financing the office.

The proposed salary increases for city employees, tentatively approved by city commissioners last night, will total approximately $130,000.

Studying the salary list in detail commissioners found no increase had been proposed for the city manager in the new budget.

They agree to increase his salary $1,200 a year to $18,900. The city manager receives $175 monthly car allowance.

City Manager Mack Wofford explained that salary increases for city workers had been arrived at by following survey findings conducted by the Public Administration Service of Chicago.

PAS representatives made salary comparisons for comparable jobs in local industry and city jobs in area cities.

City employees were interviewed relative to job duties, terms of service and job capabilities.

The salary increases will vary percentage-wise with workers in the lower brackets receiving the biggest increases.

The proposed operating budget will show the following general breakdown compared with the current estimated budget:

Personal services, $1,895,112 against $1,718,889 this year; contractual services, $343,867 against $366,784; commodities, $172,829 against $162,699; capital outlay, nothing against $3,919, ($382 for capital outlay next year is not included in the operating budget since it comes from revenue sharing funds); debt services, $305,190 against $298,190 for the current fiscal year which ends Sept. 30.

As Wofford pointed out again today nothing in the proposed budget has been finalized and cannot be until the budget ordinance and tax rate ordinance come up for a final vote of the city commission next Sept. 10. A public hearing will be set for Aug. 27.

Wofford said the City Hall staff will spend the next few days putting the proposed budget figures together.

"Hopefully we will get it ready for filing with the city secretary by the 5 p.m. Friday deadline," Wofford said.

Nixon Meets With Cabinet

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Nixon met with his cabinet today to explain his statement that he withheld damaging evidence about his involvement in the Watergate cover-up.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said it was not an "emergency session" and was designed only to "build on the President's statement" Monday. White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig gathered top staff members about the time the President's statement was released Monday and told Nixon was determined to stay in office.

"The President said he wasn't going to be hounded out of office," one aide reported.

Vice President Gerald R. Ford canceled a morning appearance before an agriculture group to attend the cabinet meeting. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger attended the meeting, apparently postponing a scheduled session with Jordan Premier Zaid Rifaia to discuss the Mideast situation.

Nixon chatted easily with his aides at the beginning of the meeting, but the overflow crowd of reporters allowed briefly in the cabinet room for routine picture-taking could not hear what he said. It was the first time that most of them had seen the President in a week.

Joseph J. Maraziti, N.J.; Wiley Mayne, Iowa, and Henry Smith, N.Y., said they now will vote for impeachment and the other four said they were reassessing their positions.

Sandman told a news conference he had sent a letter to Nixon urging him to consider resignation for the good of the country.

"Even if he should prevail in the Senate, the presidency would be diluted" and the country weakened for the rest of Nixon's term, Sandman said.

At the White House, a spokesman said the reaction of Congress to Nixon's admissions was assessed at a morning staff meeting and he termed it "bad," but added, "It was about what was expected."

Griffin and Wiggins both said Nixon should resign. Wiggins said he had been told on Friday of the new transcripts' disclosure that Nixon had sought to have the CIA impede the FBI's Watergate investigation.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Nixon told his Cabinet today he does not intend to resign and believes "the Constitution is the overriding factor" in his determination to stay in office.

"He's going to proceed with the constitutional process," said Col. George Joulawan, Haig's top assistant.

President's Disclosures Cost Him GOP Support

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Republican support of President Nixon eroded seriously in Congress today following his admission he withheld evidence from the House Judiciary Committee. Six of 10 GOP committee members who voted against his impeachment changed their minds.

Rep. Charles W. Sandman Jr., R-N.J., who became a national figure through his insistence during nationally televised committee debate on "specificity" of charges against the President, today said new transcripts yielded Monday by Nixon carried the "hard proof" of criminality warranting impeachment.

The transcripts - showing Nixon suggested the FBI limit its investigation six days after the Watergate break-in - and the President's admission he withheld that evidence from Congress, the courts, his own lawyer and the American people swelled the pro-impeachment forces in Congress.

In rapid succession today:

-Sandman said he would vote for impeachment and sent a letter to the White House suggesting Nixon resign for the good of the country. He predicted a "practically unanimous" House vote to impeach.

-Rep. Robert McClory, Ill., second-ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said he favored beginning House impeachment debate next week and limiting it one day.

-Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., a leader among Southern Democrats who supported Nixon, called for his resignation. Sikes said he was dropping his plan to introduce a motion to censure instead of impeaching Nixon, but said he would wait a few days before deciding how to vote on impeachment.

-The President summoned his cabinet to a White House meeting shortly before noon, with aides passing the word that the President had vowed he is "not going to be hounded out of office."

-Reps. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., one of two Republican women members of the House, Alan Steelman, R-Tex., and Edwin B. Forsythe, R-N.J., called on Nixon to step down and said they would vote to impeach him if he did not.

-New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson and Rep. Louis Wyman, R-N.H., two of Nixon's staunchest supporters during the two-year Watergate ordeal called for his resignation.

The defections today followed those Monday of a number of top Republicans, including Robert P. Griffin, Republican whip in the Senate, and Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, Nixon's most influential defender on the Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., was one of the few persons coming to Nixon's defense. Curtis said that so far as he was concerned, none of the "vital processes" of law had been delayed.

"Of course these things are damaging," Curtis said. "I do not believe that they are of such proportion that they should be the controlling factor - at least at this time - in determining the impeachment question."

The first news of Nixon's statement Monday sent congressmen scurrying into groups on the House floor for on-the-spot caucuses. Some members said an impeachment resolution would have passed on the spot if it had come up.

Debate on impeachment had been scheduled to begin next week, with nearly two weeks set aside for debate. There was a growing cry for much quicker action. Wiggins said he thought debate could be completed in 10 hours with action on amendments and a final vote taking another 20 hours.

"The necessity for 55 to 60 hours of debate is no longer there," Wiggins said.

Wiggins and Sandman were among the 10 Republicans who voted, against every article of impeachment during the Judiciary Committee hearings and have changed their minds since. GOP Reps. David W. Dennis, Ind.;

Joseph J. Maraziti, N.J.; Wiley Mayne, Iowa, and Henry Smith, N.Y., said they now will vote for impeachment and the other four said they were reassessing their positions.

Sandman told a news conference he had sent a letter to Nixon urging him to consider resignation for the good of the country.

"Even if he should prevail in the Senate, the presidency would be diluted" and the country weakened for the rest of Nixon's term, Sandman said.

At the White House, a spokesman said the reaction of Congress to Nixon's admissions was assessed at a morning staff meeting and he termed it "bad," but added, "It was about what was expected."

Griffin and Wiggins both said Nixon should resign. Wiggins said he had been told on Friday of the new transcripts' disclosure that Nixon had sought to have the CIA impede the FBI's Watergate investigation.

AT&T Offers To Make Pay Increase Retroactive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. has offered to make newly negotiated pay increases for most of its system employees retroactive if union members ratify the contract this month.

A Bell Telephone spokesman said the new contracts, regardless of when they are ratified, will mean higher phone bills.

But there was still no agreement today on money and related issues involving workers still on strike in the ATT Western Electric subsidiaries, the manufacturing arm of the Bell systems.

Bell Telephone officials Monday disclosed details of the tentative agreement reached Sunday night two hours before a strike deadline by most of its 725,000 workers.

However, in a separate dispute, more than 50,000 workers represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (IBEW) walked out early Monday at the scheduled deadline because of unresolved issues in connection with Western Electric contracts.

ATT said that if local contracts are settled by Aug. 11 and the national package agreement is ratified by Sept. 1, the new pay levels will be retroactive July 18 or the date following termination of individual contracts, whichever is later.

The company said if the bargaining and ratification process is not completed on schedule, the wage provisions will become effective as local agreements are reached.

House To Debate Election Reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House is ready to debate a sweeping reform of election campaigns including restrictions on candidate spending and political contributions.

The House Rules Committee Monday sent the measure to the floor for possible action on Wednesday.

The bill is a new version of one that the Senate approved earlier. Some negotiations will be needed to work out the differences if it passes the House.

The Rules committee approved an amendment sought by reform organizations such as Common Cause, which would set up a Federal Elections Commission independent of congressional control to oversee provisions of the act.

The House Administration Committee would, under the version it drafted, have control over the legislation along with the Senate Rules and Administration Committee.

The measure would provide $20 million gathered by checkoff of income taxes for each majority party candidate for president plus $2 million for each of the national conventions.

Senate candidates would be held to spending $75,000 or 5 cents times the state's population each in the primary and general election. House candidates would be limited to $75,000 in the primary and $75,000 in the general election.

Individual contributions would be limited to $1,000 in the primary and the general election to a single candidate, and no more than $25,000 to all candidates in a single year. Committees would be limited to $5,000.

Cain Attends DECA Meet In Washington

National president of Distributive Education Clubs of America, Inc., Randy Cain of Pampa recently attended the national officer leadership development conference in Washington, D.C. on July 21-27.

The purpose of the leadership development conference is to develop leadership skills and to provide training for all high school, junior collegiate, collegiate, and alumni national officers.

During the conference the 20 officers were drilled on public speaking, leadership development and their knowledge of DECA. The 1974-75 officers also developed their program of work for the coming school year. Members were flown in from all over the nation.

Cain will be a freshman at the University of Texas at Austin this fall, where he will be majoring in business administration. He was recently elected to national president of the high school division last May in Chicago at the DECA national career development conference.

He is the son of Judge and Mrs. Don E. Cain, 1826 Williston.

One of the highlights of the week-long training session was a Congressional reception at the White House in which the officers met with the DECA congressional advisory board, and also had the opportunity to meet with Vice President Gerald Ford.

Ford Decides To Keep Silent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Acknowledging that the House would pass articles of impeachment and there would be a Senate trial for President Nixon, Vice President Gerald R. Ford Monday said he will make no further comments about it.

In a statement issued Monday, Ford said: "The public interest is no longer served by repetition of my previously expressed belief that, on the basis of all the evidence known to me and the American people, the President is not guilty of an impeachable offense under the Constitution, which specifies treason, bribery, high crimes and misdemeanors."

"Inasmuch as additional evidence is about to be forthcoming from the President — which he says may be damaging — I intend to respectfully decline to discuss impeachment matters in public or in response to questions until they are more fully available."

Ford said "the whole truth should be the objective of the trial before the Senate."

He said he would be relieved of his presiding duties once a trial begins and there are no precedents to guide me except my own common sense and my conscience.

"Both tell me to let my widely known views on the impeachment issue stand until I have reason to change them and to refuse further comment at this time."

Ford said he had promised Congress he would be a "calm communicator and ready conciliator" when he was appointed. But now, he said, "the President and the Congress are now in an adversary relationship."

Chaplain Claims Carrasco 'Sick'

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — A Catholic chaplain held hostage by Fred Gomez Carrasco and wounded by one of his confederates says the world is better off without him.

"I think he was a very, very sick, a very, very vicious man, and I think the world is better off that he's not in it any more," the Rev. Joseph O'Brien said of Carrasco.

Ironically, Carrasco told O'Brien during his 11-day siege at the state penitentiary that the Catholic chaplain was one of the few persons he had ever met that he respected.

O'Brien was one of four hostages handcuffed to Carrasco and his confederates, Rudolph Dominguez and Ignacio Cuevas, as they emerged from their lair in the prison library Saturday night.

Battle Rages At Da Nang

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist troops fired a barrage of rockets at Da Nang today and moved heavy tanks into a raging battle to capture the approaches to South Vietnam's second largest city.

Communist gunners fired a salvo of 10 Soviet-made 122mm rockets at the sprawling Da Nang air base and surrounding homes during the morning, wounding three civilians and a militiaman.

UPI photographer Lim Thanh Van, reporting from the scene, said the shelling — the fourth in a three-week-old Communist drive against Da Nang — battered an air force helicopter and a civilian home.

Communists advancing on the port city from the southwest have fired 120 of the 100-pound rockets at the Da Nang area since the offensive began, killing or wounding more than 100 persons.

North Vietnamese troops in heavy Soviet-made T54 tanks advanced on besieged Duc Duc Monday, firing 60 shells at the county capital from big 100mm armored guns. The government reported three civilians killed and five wounded.

Military officers in Saigon have predicted Duc Duc and Thung Duc, neighboring county capitals 25 miles southwest of Da Nang, could fall to a concerted Communist attack.

In Saigon, U.S. Charge d'Affaires W. J. Lehmann said the Communists have no chance in overrunning South Vietnam despite their 21-day-old push against Da Nang, 370 miles north of Saigon.

"The tides of history have placed that goal irrevocably out of reach," he said.

Government rangers Monday retook two of 11 outposts lost to Communists in weekend fighting around Duc Duc. Field officers said, however, the town was still in serious danger with most of its 10,000 residents gone.

In Thung Duc fighting Monday, Communists shot down a A-37 fighter-bomber, forcing the pilot to parachute into Viet Cong territory. A second A37 crashed on takeoff from Da Nang air base, but the pilot escaped injury.

Military sources said Communists also shot down a government C-47 cargo plane Monday over Phu Hoa, 10 miles northwest of Saigon, killing all five crewmen.

In Cambodia, rebel gunners fired a barrage of rockets into Phnom Penh Monday night in the sixth consecutive night of shelling against the capital.

Carrasco and his cohorts held 12 hostages in the library for 11 days, the longest such confrontation in American penal history.

As they walked down the zigzagging concrete ramp inside a contraption fashioned from blackboards covered with library books and shielded by the eight other hostages, they were met by 13 state and federal law officers who called on them to surrender.

At this point, prison officials said, Carrasco, Dominguez and Cuevas opened fire on the hostages, killing Julia Standley, 43, a prison librarian, and Elizabeth Beseda, 47, a teacher. O'Brien was wounded.

The officers used high powered hoses to blow away the human shield and the convicts lost control of their contraption leaving them completely exposed.

Following a 10-minute period of silence another gunfight took place during which Carrasco and Dominguez were killed.

A final autopsy report released Monday said the two convicts apparently had a suicide pact between them.

"We will stand on the suicide," Justice of the Peace J.W. Beeler said after receiving an autopsy report from the Harris County Medical Examiner.

"I cannot say that Carrasco held a gun to his head and killed himself. I can merely say that (with) all the speculation about the number of shots put into his body, Carrasco had one bullet wound — period."

The report said Carrasco died of a single bullet fired through his right temple from the same type of gun — a .357 Magnum pistol — that Carrasco was carrying.

Immunization Clinic Slated

Another free immunization clinic will be held at the Carver Center, 321 W. Albert, Thursday from 1-4 p.m.

The clinic is basically operated to provide vaccinations and shots for children needing the protection, but anyone requiring immunization may attend.

Pre-school and young school aged children are eligible to have immunizations for polio, tetanus, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles and rubella.

The State Department of Health recommends infants be started on immunizations at two months of age.

Children enrolling in day care centers, kindergartens and schools in the fall must be immunized against these diseases as specified by the State Board of Health.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Dr. Gault asked me to accompany him as Research Psychologist for 5 years in dealing with the deaf. We were stationed at George Washington University and later at Smith College. But notice my stress on practicality vs. "educational featherbedding."

CASE B-602: Robert H. Gault was Head of the Psychology Department at Northwestern University the first 3 years I was teaching there.

"How'd you like to go to Washington, D.C., with me?" he asked one day as we had luncheon.

"For I have just been awarded a 5-year grant from the National Research Council and the Carnegie Institution of Washington, D.C."

"I want you to go along to run the laboratory experiments on deaf and blind students."

So I headed East, where I also taught the Applied Psychology courses at George Washington University.

After our 5-year research had ended, we both came back to Northwestern to resume teaching at Evanston.

The new head of the department was a sociable fellow, who asked me to direct our Psychology Laboratory and also teach various courses.

"Dr. Crane," he added, "we'd also like for you to offer a new course on the History of Psychology for graduate students."

"What do you say?"

Well, I thanked him but sidestepped developing that course since my primary interest lay in Applied Psychology, as Advertising, Salesmanship, Personnel Administration and Child Development.

Actually, I could have condensed the History of Psychology into 60 minutes!

As an exponent of efficiency engineering, I disliked trying to string out a 60-minute digest into 17 weeks!

For this was what I deemed "Educational Featherbedding!"

Oh, I could easily have selected at least 17 of the leading pioneers in psychology, starting with Aristotle.

And then might have assigned the graduate students one or two library readings, plus a term paper on one or another of those pioneers.

But such impracticality was not my cup of tea!

Yet it appeals to many "ivory tower" professors who like to pontificate in classrooms and thus avoid the rigorous workaday world where you must manufacture or sell useful items such as life insurance, stocks and bonds, shoes or other merchandise, services and even newspapers.

Like William James, I prefer to stress practical education that is focussed on the daily problems of everyday life.

Which, incidentally, is why I launched this "Worry Clinic," to vaccinate literate Americans against divorce, delinquency, neuroses and unhappiness.

For 5 years I worked with speech correction while a Research Psychologist in Washington and later in Smith College in Northampton, Massachusetts.

But I resented the expensive and drawn out treatments of such things as functional stuttering, just as I opposed stringing out a 60-minute digest into a 17-week course on the History of Psychology.

So I developed that famous "Stutter Triangle," now widely used and explained in my college textbooks.

It can stop functional stuttering in 30 seconds!

And via the Demosthenes technique!

Yet my column was then cancelled at Minneapolis because of pressure from speech therapists, who preferred to string out the visits to a speech teacher and thus screamed in protest at my "unorthodox ideas!"

So send for my "Vocational Guidance" booklet, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Melrose, Indiana 47988. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

States Must Save Energy Together

By BILL HOBBY

Lieutenant Governor AUSTIN—At a recent meeting of the National Conference of Lieutenant Governors in Albuquerque, New Mexico, I attended several presentations about state government's role in the energy crisis.

At this conference, many of the nation's lieutenant governors gained new insights into the problems and possible solutions presented by the energy crisis.

As chairman of the conference's Energy and Natural Resources Committee, I was particularly interested in a study conducted in California.

The RAND Corporation estimated that energy equal to between 440,000 and 710,000 barrels of oil a day could be saved in the next two years through immediate conservation measures.

This could mean an energy saving in California alone of between 15 and 25 per cent.

The study indicated that eventually the rate of growth in demand for electricity in California could be cut by more than half. Such a reduction would help greatly to relieve pressures for higher fuel prices.

Obviously, this study has applications—and similar savings—for Texas as well as all the 50 states.

The conservation measures which can reduce energy demands are relatively simple. No new technology is needed.

The California study predicted that reducing lighting intensity and changing the ventilation systems in commercial buildings could save up to the equivalent of 140,000 barrels of oil a day.

Increasing thermal management programs in industry, which means eliminating unnecessary waste of heat through slight technical changes in factories, could save another 134,000 barrels a day.

Changing the thermostats in California homes could save 118,000 barrels a day immediately.

These figures demonstrate how important it is for all of us to conserve energy whenever we can—in our homes, schools, factories, and offices.

The lieutenant governors also saw a model designed by the University of Wisconsin to determine the environmental costs of different energy alternatives. It will be a helpful tool in guiding states toward solutions of their particular energy problems.

It was apparent from this meeting that the states must work together in developing energy programs and sharing innovations in the energy field.

Ford Wants To Censure

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—

Vice President Gerald Ford said Sunday he would vote to censure President Nixon if he were still a member of the House of Representatives.

At the same time, the former House GOP leader insisted that Nixon is innocent of any impeachable offense. Nonetheless, he said, the House probably would vote to impeach.

The situation has eroded and I think the possibility is that the vote (to impeach) will be unfavorable to the President," Ford said.

"Censure is less serious (than impeachment), and therefore, if the alternative was presented and I were in the House, I would favor it."

The vice president spent Sunday playing golf with Rep. David C. Treen, R-La., and visiting Crippled Children's Hospital.

Last Week In Wall Street

By BOB HILL

Lentz, Newton & Co., Amarillo

Gold ownership by U.S. citizens will soon become a reality for the first time in four decades, probably by Dec. 31.

Experts disagree on the effect this will have on the price of gold but if you are planning to invest in gold or use it as a hedge against inflation (historically it's been a poor inflation hedge) then the warning to the investor is Caveat Emptor: let the buyer beware.

Standards of size and purity will be established very soon by the major gold trading exchanges. Be sure that any gold bars which you purchase meet those standards. There are a few gold dealers in the U.S. today but you can bet that new names will swarm into the field once gold ownership finally becomes legal.

So, protect yourself by dealing with a long established firm, known for reliability. Fraudulent gold bars that contain less than the stamped amount and with forged stampings of the major gold bullion dealers will be showing up.

The only way to avoid getting caught with a forged bar is to do business with a reputable dealer.

If you intend to buy bullion, don't buy small bars, wafers or medallions. This is what unscrupulous and unregulated silver and placer gold dealers in Utah and Nevada are pushing now with astronomical markups. Buy the biggest bar you can afford.

You will pay a higher premium for the smaller bar and take a heavy discount when you get ready to sell it. Wafers and medallions are even harder to sell.

Gold coins are still probably your best bet if you are a determined gold investor. You don't have to wait until gold ownership becomes legal to buy coins.

Gold coins are a legal investment now. One of the key advantages in coins is that they are much harder to counterfeit or shave than bars.

They also have excellent certification, the government issuing them. They are in effect round bars of gold since each coin contains an ounce or more of gold. They are also easier to sell and have the added intrinsic value of being a collectors item.

The best bargains in coins are the Austrian 100 Corona (.98 oz. of fine gold) or the Mexican 50 Peso (1.2 oz.). Both are currently selling only 10 percent to 15 percent above actual gold content.

If you are going to keep gold or gold coins in your house, get ready for some stiff insurance premiums. You can also keep them in a bank safe—deposit box but remember the banks don't insure the contents of the box.

Building Collapses

MIAMI (UPI)—A three-story parking garage in downtown Miami collapsed yesterday, trapping as many as a dozen people under rubble and cars.

There were 15 or 20 people inside and so far we've gotten six or eight out," said a fire department spokesman. "It's a bad scene, apparently. We haven't got any injury reports yet, but it can't be good. There's concrete and automobiles on top of some of those people."

A command post was set up by police and fire officials almost immediately after the cave-in of the garage, which is adjacent to the Miami offices of the federal drug enforcement agency.

Karen Kirschbaum of Miami, who drove by the scene, said the building "totally collapsed and the cars fell down into the building."

Some people were hanging out the windows of the part that was still standing. They were afraid to move because the building was all cracked.

Boating

By JACK WOLISTON

NEW YORK (UPI)—More people have been bitten this year by the canoeing bug, and this segment of recreational boating is growing at a tremendous pace.

There's no accurate count, but there's probably more than a half million canoes now gliding around the nation's waterways—and it's easy to see why.

The initial cost is moderate. Upkeep is simple and economical. There are no fuel problems. They can be cartopped easily from one waterway to another.

More and more recreational areas are establishing canoe trails where paddlers often have the choice of gliding serenely through the placid waters of a lake or stream or fighting the white water rapids of a raging river.

Canoe racing groups have been formed in many states and they stage annual meets, some of which draw hundreds of competitors.

The state of Florida has available a booklet, "Florida Canoe Trail Guide," which sketches the attractions of 16 river canoe trails now in the state's canoe trail system.

One trip is a 66 mile journey on the Peace River from just east of Fort Meade downstream to a point near Arcadia.

"The Peace is an ideal river for canoeing," the booklet states. "Dense forest borders the waterway along most of the trail with the only mark of civilization being an occasional bridge, powerlines and some pasture land. Rarely, a house is visible from the river."

Texas is another state which caters to canoeists, and one of the finest trails there is a 17 mile stretch of the Colorado River from Bend to Post-Oak Creek.

"towering bluffs, scenic canyons, and beautiful water make this trip enjoyable for any canoeist," says the magazine Texas Rivers and Rapids.

The growth in popularity of the canoe has prompted manufacturers to offer scores of accessories to make life as pleasant as possible for the paddler.

One eliminates the paddle altogether. It's a rowing rig that includes an oarsman's seat and oarlocks that clamp easily onto the gunwales without any tools.

And then there's a bracket for portside attachment of a small outboard motor to ease, as the manufacturer puts it, "a long journey upstream or across a broad lake to the small and primitive waterways you can fish best by canoe."

'I'm For The Achiever'

Traditionally, it has been the American way to favor the "underdog," the weak, the defenseless.

Let two youngsters get into a contest of fistcuffs and the rooting from the sidelines is almost always predominantly in support of the smaller of the two combatants, even though he may have instigated the altercation.

Be there a difference between the man of means and one of less affluence and public opinion almost invariably, will favor the latter, regardless of which has right on his side.

If a woman is being mistreated, men of passive and peaceful natures will rush to her defense as a member of the "weaker" sex.

Let it be known that someone, particularly a child, is hungry, ill-clothed or poorly housed, and people of good will go all out to render assistance.

And, of course, Americans have always been open-handed toward hundreds of formal charities, opening both their hearts and their pocketbooks to aid those less fortunate at home and abroad.

Yes, the people of this country have traditionally been in the corner of the "down-trodden underdog," and, within reason, it is to be hoped that it will continue that way.

However, there are times, particularly of late, when one suspects that the pendulum has swung entirely too far in that direction.

When politicians, as is so often the case, get elected to office on the poorly disguised promise to loot the productive and provident in order to reward the non-productive and improvident, and when being "poor" and "down-trodden" are regarded as lifetime professions by millions of people, one gets the distinct impression that the time has come to reverse the swing of things.

Sensing this some years ago, Miller Upton, President of Beloit College in a Kansas town of that name, penned a little piece that has been picked up and republished by hundreds of newspapers over the years as a "guest editorial." Titled "I'm For The Achiever," educator Upton's thoughts on the subject are reproduced here again for the benefit of our readers:

I have just about reached the end of my tolerance for the way our society now seems to have sympathetic concern only for the misfit, the pervert, the drug addict, the drifter, the chronic criminal and the underachiever. It seems to me that we have lost touch with reality and become warped in our attachments.

I feel it is time for someone like me to stand up and say, in short, "I'm for the upperdog."

I'm for the achiever — the one who sets out to do something and does it; the one who recognizes the problems and opportunities at hand, and endeavors to deal with them; the one who is successful at his immediate task because he is not worrying about someone else's failings; the one who doesn't consider it "square" to be constantly looking for more to do, who isn't always rationalizing why he shouldn't be doing what he is doing; the one, who carries the work of his part of the world squarely on his shoulders.

It is important to recognize that the quality of any society is directly related to the quality of the individuals who make it up. Therefore, let us stop referring naively to creating "a great society." It is enough at this stage of our development to aspire to create a decent society. And to do so, our first task is to help each individual be decent unto himself and in his relationship with other individuals.

We will never create a good society, much less a great one, until individual excellence and achievement are not only respected but encouraged. That is why I am for the upperdog — the achiever, the succeder.

ALL THAT GLITTERS

Political Inns And Outs

By VIC GOLD

WASHINGTON — Political coincidence is a peculiar phenomenon.

Item: A San Clemente hotel, after years of providing rooms for the Nixon staff and press, decided a fortnight ago that it couldn't afford to accommodate its Washington guests anymore.

We're losing $100,000 a year in tourist trade because of the space taken up by the Western White House press entourage, the inn's management announced. Sorry, Ron. You and the rest can check out tomorrow morning.

Peculiar, right? I mean, that this should have occurred at this time, rather than, say, two or three years ago. After all, $100,000 a year is a lot of money. You'd think that, if the sacrifice is too much to make in the summer of 1974, the management might have cut their losses by giving Ron Ziegler and the Western White House boys notice two or three years ago.

Item: Coincidentally, at about the same time Ziegler & Co. were being shuffled into the street out West, Congressman Lawrence Hogan of Maryland, a Republican who had been one of the President's most vehement supporters through months of Judiciary Committee haggling over impeachment evidence, suddenly did a 180-degree turn and delivered another kind of political-eviction notice.

Hogan, who also (by coincidence) happens to be running for governor of an overwhelmingly Democratic state, said that after looking at the evidence presented the committee he just couldn't find any more room in his mind or heart to support Nixon (or, as he touchingly put it, "my President") on the crucial impeachment vote.

Odd, isn't it? That is, here the good Maryland Congressman has been looking at this very same evidence as it accumulated, then going out in front of those TV cameras virtually every day to say there just wasn't anything there to support an impeachment vote.

So what's changed that's brought San Clemente hostlers and ambitious Maryland politicians to reexamine their prior policy on tenancy? A phenomenon which, on the political high seas, is recognized as the principle of migratory rodentia.

The writer recalls, for example, an episode which took place 10 years ago, when Sen. Barry Goldwater's presidential campaign-ship sank slowly into the Western sunset. On election day, we — Goldwater's staff and press corps — had been comfortably settled in a resort hotel outside Phoenix.

Nothing was too good for the Arizona Senator's staff that day. The hospitality of the inn was overwhelming. But then, with the evening, came a tidal wave of votes which quickly dispelled any possibility that Barry Goldwater might wake up the following morning as President-elect of the United States.

Well, now. Would you believe what the good Senator's staff and accompanying press found slipped under our doors that following a.m.? You guessed it, if you're familiar with that principle of the political high seas: we were instructed to vacate the premises no later than noon.

I was younger then, my carapace of political cynicism not quite hardened. It took me at least a half-hour after receiving that notice to vacate to wonder whether, if Barry Goldwater had been elected President, we might not have been permitted — indeed, encouraged — to stay on, enjoying the hospitality of the inn.

And so I wonder, this summer of 1974, about what those eviction notices from office seekers and innkeepers mean in terms of the future of the Nixon White House.

Could it be, to make myself perfectly clear, that if Jerry Ford's staff and press were to show up one day soon in San Clemente, that innkeeper might reexamine his books and conclude — well, what's $100,000 a year when you can do a favor for a friend? (Copyright 1974)

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not. — Charles Kingsley, English novelist.

BY BLACK AMERICA

New Style 'Power' Sought

By VICTOR RIESEL

No one can speak for America's black people. But Charlie Rangel is more than one voice from Harlem. He chairs the ever-growing Congressional Black Caucus. I turned to him to ask where he believes Black America is going, what are its problems, I asked for answers that would avoid the cliché. But that was unnecessary. Charlie is not given to bromides. This is obvious from his answers, written here exclusively for this column.

By REP. CHARLES RANGEL

WASHINGTON — Before I address the role of the Congressional Black Caucus in today's political and social environment, we must first appreciate the nature of the black movement of the '70s as opposed to that of the '60s.

In the '60s there were salient issues concerning laws and practices which were diametrically opposed to the basic rights of minorities in exercising the freedoms provided by the Constitution. Discrimination in job opportunities, voting and housing were some of the more vivid civil rights issues that addressed policies which were inherently incongruent with the ideals of democratic liberty.

These issues affected essentially all members of the black community. Consequently, they were very amenable to a national homogeneous black movement with well-defined goals related to full enfranchisement of blacks into the economic, political and social mainstream of our society.

There were well-identified national black leaders who basically agreed with the goals but sometimes differed as to the most effective approach. Unorthodox tactics (sit-ins, protest rallies and marches, riots) to bring pressure for change were justified. They highlighted the frustrations of 20 million blacks who did not have the necessary political representation or clout to effect change through the conventional political process.

The late '60s saw the demise of the most influential leader of the movement during that era, Dr. Martin Luther King. Closely following his death, the Congress passed open housing legislation, the last major step in dismantling the legal civil rights barriers facing all blacks in joining the American mainstream.

These actions led to a dramatic change in the nature of the movement. The leadership has shifted from a few spokesmen outside the political system to many elected officials within the system. Today, in addition to the black congressional members and one Senator, we have over 2,000 elected officials. Even though this represents only 1/2 of 1 percent of the total number of elected officials in this country, it is greater than five years ago.

With more blacks beginning to move into the economic mainstream, the issues concerning black Americans are becoming more diffused. Black businessmen in the cities see different priorities for legislation than those envisioned by the black farmers. The black poor have different priorities than the white-collar black. This change in the nature of the black movement leads us to the role of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Blacks, who represent only 11 percent of the population, 38 percent of which are living in poverty, make up only 3 percent of the Congress. We are forced to compete in a political system that responds primarily to political and economic power. This is a relatively new arena for the black movement which requires new strategies and tactics. Brute force confrontation tactics of the '60s must be replaced by political finesse. Herein lies the role of the Congressional Black Caucus. We must spearhead the national black effort in dealing in this new arena, remove the bureaucratic and rhetorical shroud surrounding major issues facing the nation, and define what they mean to black Americans.

When addressing federalism, regionalism, health, energy, and other national issues, we must analyze these issues from the standpoint of how they affect black people. We must identify common concerns. We must ensure that national legislation is responsive to the needs of Black America.

In order for 3 percent of the Congress to effect change we must learn and educate our people on the subtle art of forming coalitions, lobbying, publicity, letter campaigns, compromise, and other tactics generally associated with manipulating the political system for special interest groups.

One of the most important ways of affecting legislation is the ability to influence committee action. One or more of the standing committees of Congress must act on any legislation before action is taken on the floor of the House or Senate. The Black Caucus has attempted to cover all of the standing committees in the House which have influence on legislation affecting the social concerns of most minorities and poor in this country. The 16 Caucus members are now assigned to 14 of the 21 standing committees.

The Joint Center for Political Studies, a non-profit research organization funded to assist minority elected officials, has provided invaluable assistance to the Caucus in identifying those Congressmen whose constituencies should have concerns similar to those of the Caucus. Periodically, we will evaluate these Congressmen in terms of their voting records on legislation affecting blacks and the poor. Since the number of blacks and poor in these districts can constitute the margin of victory in close elections, the Black Caucus can use these data as leverage in gaining the support of their Representatives.

An example of this type of legislative activity was the recent success in our efforts to save the Office of Economic Opportunity programs. The Office of Economic Opportunity was created in 1964, launching this country's war on poverty. Since that time it has provided experimental creativity in developing programs for the nation's poorer citizens. Since a third of the nation's blacks are categorized as poor, OEO had special significance to black Americans.

This spring we were faced with the expiration of the OEO enabling legislation which would have meant the automatic demise of the agency. Congressional action was not taken. In response to this situation, my fellow Caucus member, Augustus Hawkins of California, introduced a bill which would extend OEO programs and funding authority to June 1977. The Congressional Black Caucus worked to achieve the passage of this legislation by securing commitments from individual state delegations, stimulating local groups to urge their respective representatives to support it, mobilizing blacks in districts in which they number 25 percent or more of the voting population to urge their elected officials to support it, and mobilizing black mayors.

This resulted in massive support which covered the racial, political, and ideological spectrums. Alabama's Gov. George Wallace was for it; so was Congressman William Jennings Bryan Dorn of South Carolina and Indianapolis's Republican Mayor Richard Lugar, to name just a few new supporters. We effectively pointed out to them that community action agencies have proven to be cheap and effective ways of administering federal, state and local programs which reached an estimated 12 million poor, most of whom were white and included large percentages of children and the aged. So when Mr. Hawkins entered into deliberation in the House Committee on Education and Labor, he was armed with sufficient support to make a strong case.

Out of that committee came the Community Services Act which included essentially all the major OEO programs but established a new agency, the Community Action Administration, under HEW for administering it. This compromise was made in order to ensure passage on the floor of the House. And indeed, the House overwhelmingly (331-51) passed the legislation which now awaits Senate action.

INSIDE REPORT

Ford Burdened With Unprecedented Situation

By ROWLAND EVANS

And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Vice President Gerald Ford has launched his trenchant new defense of President Nixon to avoid political reprisal from the pro-Nixon Republican hardcore, undercutting him with Republican moderates — including staunch friends in the House.

Ford's thesis, spelled out to aides repeatedly, is that he must not risk a trace of a fingerprint on the impeachment dagger to insure that the Republican right wing will not turn on him.

As Republicans and voters of all persuasions join the pro-impeachment ranks, intimates say Ford is convinced their resentment will disappear if, in the end, he is catapulted into the White House. That is in the future. For the present at least, even old Republican friends are expressing doubts about the Vice President's political judgment in handling a delicate and unprecedented situation.

In fact, the Vice President has been subjected to quiet pressure from his own staff not to tie himself to Mr. Nixon.

Just as the House Judiciary Committee began its formal impeachment investigation, a Ford aide drafted a speech for the Vice President to get him off the hook. The thrust of that never-delivered speech: now that the House is considering the evidence, it would be injudicious for Ford to express an opinion since such evidence is not available to him; he had faith in the President but would refuse ex parte judgments.

Ford's political lieutenants say he has no intention today of modifying his loyalist defense of the man who made him Vice President. He still lobbies quietly, urging House Republicans to give Mr. Nixon the benefit of every doubt (but avoiding arm-twisting).

His top assistants have been dismayed by the escalation of Ford's public defense of the President while other Republicans abandon the sinking presidential ship. That new intensity began July 25 in Muncie, Ind., in his speech for Rep. David Dennis, a Nixon defender on the Judiciary Committee facing reelection troubles — a speech viewed by some Ford intimates as a disaster.

Outside pressure for a change of course is on the rise. There is almost as much gossip in the House Republican cloakroom over Ford's repeated declarations of Mr. Nixon's total "innocence" as over impeachment itself. The criticism comes not only from pro-impeachment Republicans but from fence-sitters and Nixon loyalists deeply worried that Ford is frittering away his guilt-edged asset of national popularity by blatant catering to the dwindling Nixon hardcore.

"We all want Jerry to shut up and stay that way," one of his longtime friends in the House told us. "He is the hope of the party and of the country for 1976."

What gives that critical comment special force is the fact that it comes from one of the elected House Republican leaders, a Ford-style Republican who himself is uncommitted.

Another member of the House Republican leadership holds similar views. Ford, he says privately, is wasting his unique political assets both within his party and in the country at large by asserting Mr. Nixon's innocence in the face of overwhelming House Judiciary Committee votes declaring him guilty of impeachable acts.

Ford is being strongly advised not to overestimate the pro-Nixon hardcore, particularly with the defections of such conservatives as Maryland's Rep. Lawrence J. Hogan and Virginia's Caldwell Butler. The Hogans and the Butlers, they believe, are vastly more important than the handful of ultra-Nixonites who have written the Vice President scathing letters for having said that a vote for impeachment will not keep him from campaigning on behalf of a Republican Congressman.

But Ford seems oblivious. Concentrating in his cross-country speaking tours on stone age Republican audiences who roar their approval of his defense of Mr. Nixon, Ford seems out of touch with the trend among House Republicans now threatening the President with a massive impeachment defeat.

That could leave Ford a hero with the so-called hardcore but a villain — at least momentarily — with the rest of the country. More uncomfortably for Ford, he would be on the wrong side of the fence from every Republican in Congress who ends up voting not that "the President of the United States is right," as Ford proclaimed in Muncie, but that the is very wrong.

Having spoken out loudly for Mr. Nixon when other Republican leaders were silent, Ford has more than paid his dues. Now, his friends believe, is the time to avoid getting trapped on the wrong side of the fence, not by turning against the President, but by simply deciding to "shut up and stay that way."

Question Box

QUESTION: Last April 3 we old people got a 7 percent raise on our Social Security but it was deducted from our welfare checks. Why do the politicians treat us this way? Is it because they don't care about us old folks?

ANSWER: We make no pretense of being able to divine what politicians think about other than getting elected and adding to their own power, they have demonstrated that is what they are most interested in. However, there continues to be misconceptions about Social Security and welfare payments.

It should be remembered that when Social Security was proposed back in the days of the New Deal, it was supposed to eliminate all welfare programs. It was to be a government "insurance" program, and its sponsors in the administration and in Congress told the people that within a very few years, there would be no more old age assistance programs because they would not be needed, since all would be collecting the "insurance" payments.

However, it has not worked out as its advocates promised. Like all other government welfare programs, Social Security has been added on to the previous programs. If it had gone as the people were told by the politicians, each time the Social Security "benefits" were increased, the old-age assistance payments would have been replaced, so that the only recipients would have been those who had been making payments through the Social Security taxes. But the politicians since 1940 have abandoned the idea of Social Security as an insurance program. It is just one more welfare program, and it is added onto the programs it was designed to replace.

We can only surmise that the additions of payments to one welfare program accompanied by the reductions in the other program are just going through the formalities. Then, subsequently, the politicians probably will pass further legislation just before election, granting increases in the regular welfare payments. In this way, the political figures can claim credit for being humanitarian, not once, but twice. Thinking persons know, however, that the same politicians also are the ones who have so inflated the money supply that the previous welfare and Social Security payments are inadequate.

It's the same old merry-go-round, which will continue as long as the people continue to rely on politicians to solve their personal problems.

DUNAGIN'S PEOPLE

"WHAT ARE SOME OF YOUR QUALIFICATIONS OTHER THAN NOT GUILTY?"

Dear Abby

She should just say: "NO!"

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been struggling with this problem for a year and can't seem to come up with a solution. I am 27, reasonably attractive and divorced. When a girl is 21 and not yet married, she can say no to a fellow and use the excuse that she is saving herself for marriage. But when she's 27 and divorced, what can she say that will be acceptable? "I don't believe in sex outside marriage," it sounds like I'm trying to rope myself another husband, which is not necessarily true. How can I get around this? What I need is some clever saying that will get me off the hook without making me sound like a goody-goody. STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: What makes you think you have to either deliver, or come up with an excuse? Surely you have something other than sex to offer a man. Just say: "No," and don't feel that you have to justify it.

DEAR ABBY: The days when girls went to college to catch a husband are a thing of the past. If girls don't get an education so they can support themselves they will end up on welfare.

The no-fault divorces are telling a story loud and clear. Women are not going to be able to hook a man and live off him for the rest of their lives.

A relative of mine is now looking for work at the age of 67. For 15 years her ex-husband sent her $800 a month, and she spent every dime of it. Last month she was told there will be no more checks and now she is half out of her mind. She's never done any kind of work in her life. She's hopelessly helpless.

She wants to come and live with me. I told her no. At age 45, I went back to school for two years to prepare myself for the job I now have. I like being independent, and I don't want to give up my privacy, which is what I would have to do if I let her come and live with me. Do you blame me? ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I'd have to know more about the relationship between you and this relative. If she is someone who looked after you when you were helpless, it would make a difference.

DEAR ABBY: The girl I'm dating has been invited to her cousin's wedding. She received a formal invitation, and enclosed was a note which read: "I am sorry, but I must ask you please not to bring a guest as it will be too much. Thank you," and it was signed by the bride's mother.

My question: Isn't it customary for a girl who is dating someone special to be allowed to bring him? I had quite a long discussion with my girl friend. I told her that under the circumstances I didn't think she should attend the wedding either as I do not approve of her going without me as her escort. I would like your opinion. OBJECT

DEAR OBJECT: Objection overruled! You aren't officially engaged to her, and should not expect to be included. You appear to be unduly possessive of a girl who is only "dating." And you are out of order to insist that she not attend her cousin's wedding because you were not made welcome. Case dismissed.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M AND K: When an argument develops into a physical fight, the one who lands the first blow has lost the argument.

Joyce Pipes-Gordon Jarmon Exchange Vows In White Deer

WHITE DEER — Miss Joyce Pipes became the bride of Gordon Jarmon, July 19, in a ceremony read at First Baptist Church, White Deer.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Pipes, White Deer, and Mr. and Mrs. I.C. Jarman, Gardendale.

THE CEREMONY The double-ring ceremony, read by Rev. Ron Ledbetter, pastor, was performed before a setting of yellow gladioli held in tall wicker baskets, flanking the altar. Mrs. R.A. Ramming, organist, presented traditional wedding selections and accompanied Mrs. Joe Mitchell, vocalist, as she sang, "Time In A Bottle" and "Twelfth of Never." Organ selections included "Funny Face," and theme from "Love Story."

THE BRIDE Given in marriage by her father with "her mother and I," a vow, the bride chose a formal gown of candlelight mirror mist embroidery designed by the bride and fashioned by her mother. The empire waistline was enhanced by a detachable floor length train. The Juliet sleeves of mirror mist ended with soft cuffs at the wrist. The bodice was complemented by a soft roll high collar.

Her veil of illusion was attached to a Juliet cap crusted with lace rosettes. The traditional wedding items were carried out with a blue garter, pennies minted in the birthday years of the couple and a sixpence presented to the bride by her nephew, Ray Simons, White Deer. She carried a cascade bouquet of carnations and spider mums.

ATTENDANTS Mrs. Ray Simons, White Deer, was her sister's matron of honor. Her floor-length gown of yellow organza over gold, featured a low rounded neck line accented by a wide flat ruffle edged with lace. The short puffed sleeves followed the mode set by the gathered floor-length skirt. She wore a garden hat of yellow completed by a wide ribbon band set with white daisies, and carried a nosegay of yellow carnations surrounding a yellow rose.

James McElreath, Canyon, served the bridegroom as best man. Larry Wynn, Umbarger, and Don Field, Odessa, were ushers.

RECEPTION Mrs. Jimmy Jarmon, Odessa, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, registered guests attending the reception held in the church parlor following the ceremony. The bride's table was draped with a white organdy cloth edged in lace. The three-tiered cake featured Roman colonades and a hanging bell. Bridal colors of yellow and white added accent to the roses and the bell ornament topping the cake. Mrs. Kay McElreath, Canyon, served punch from a crystal service. "AT WIT'S END"

Speaking of minority groups, my husband has just informed me that a little-noted band of oppressed people in this country is becoming quite militant — the Left-Handers of America.

They are that brave little bunch of pilgrims who pledge allegiance backwards, take 20 minutes to screw in a lightbulb and always get seated at the left end of the dinner table or must register their elbows with the police as a deadly weapon.

I have first-hand information on the subject of "lefties" because my husband and I have a mixed marriage. I am an Orthodox right-hander and he is a Latter-day Leftie. It hasn't been easy, but we've made it work.

He endures shifting gears with his right hand and I bear the frustration of scouring the city for left-handed bowling shoes for his birthday.

He got used to shaking hands with his wrong hand, while I put up playing tennis with him in which I think I'm hitting to his weak backhand and it is his powerful forehand.

The other day as he went crazy trying to get a right-handed twist wire off the bread he snapped, "It won't always be like this. One of these days..."

"Are you on your Leftie crusade again where all the left-handed people unite and declare war on right-handers?"

This may seem humorous to you," he growled, "but how would you like to go through life using scissors that don't fit ... turning off the water spigot when you think you're turning it on ... putting stamps in the upper right-hand corner, driving on the right side of the road ... reading a right-handed newspaper, starting the power mower on the right side and having your life dominated by a right-handed guitar. Face it! I am persecuted by right-handers!"

"Will you get hold of yourself?" I ordered. "Things are getting better for left-handers and you know it. Many firms are beginning to employ left-handers. Marriages are flourishing between the hands. And the other day a right-hander even took a left-hander to lunch!"

"Bit deal!" sulked my husband. "I'll bet the knife was to the right of the plate."

Your Horoscope by Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 7 Your birthday today: Finds you moving ahead toward a simpler, more spiritual life with fewer, yet more positive commitments. Relationships either become stronger or lapse. New contacts involve too many incidentals to accommodate. Today's natives are volatile, easily stirred, willing to be placated, impatient with those who don't think. Aries [March 21-April 19]: Facts from far away are easily adapted into effective local information. People shift speed and direction without warning; give them plenty of room to do so. Your personal touch is important now. Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Consult experts, but check to see whether their suggestions realistically assess your situation. Intuition comes in bright and clear—are you listening? Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Slackening pace is beneficial. Attend to routine, rather than push large, new projects. Say or do more to express deep feelings where it counts. Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Some complexities in arrangements are inevitable. Keep business in its appropriate time and place; don't talk shop at home. Add to savings account where possible. Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Your own pride, as well as that of others, gets in the way. Travel requires extra care. A bright idea in late evening promises exceptional benefit, once you iron out the main details. Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Ways to build seem few. A gentle suggestion on any issue is sufficient. Elegant, expensive items arouse impulses to spend money. Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Pausing for explanations before going ahead with what seems to be a good thing. There will be another, and more effective, opportunity if you wait. Keeping your temper saves the day. Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Find a way to get better working conditions and to save your strength for a greater purpose tomorrow. Check facts and figures. Most stories are still incomplete. Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Moments of antagonism come between even the closest personal ties. Find where you can work in solitude. Today's studies

Over 40 Years-- King And Sons

John T. King and Sons, 918 S. Barnes, has been serving the oil industry since 1930--for over 40 years.

The company was then known as Stapp King Electric and Machine Co., where the first Pyle National Generators, run by steam, and the old Robert Obsch Magnetos were repaired. Old-timers will remember the type EK, type R and Oc Wice magnetos that were rebuilt at this time.

Six years after its founding, the company became known as the King Chemical Company, with patent rights on the first paraffin solvents and paraffin scrapers that were popular in the oil fields for many years to follow.

Since the end of World War II, John T. King and Sons have been serving the Panhandle field in various capacities and have met challenging changes with the advent of future automation in the field of oil field production and products.

John T. King and Sons handle a complete selection of industrial magnetos, pumps, skids and industrial electronic automation equipment.

One of the newer types of magnetos stocked by King and Sons is the Altronic, a magne-to used for larger industrial purposes.

The firm also has Frank Murphy safety switches and electronic control units for field installation.

Safety devices include United Engineer PKM and Keystone and Associated Well Sounders, Rockwell water meters and Worthington pumps. Fischer controls and natural gas regulators are also found at John T. King and Sons.

John T. King and Sons, more so than keeping up with changes that are sweeping our period of time, are finding newer and better ways of pleasing their old and new customers.

King is represented as an authorized central distributor for the latest type of ignition units that eliminates breaker point and impulse couplings, spark plug life extended, higher voltages available at low cranking rpm, shielded and low fire hazards--all are featured in the newest Altronic ignition system.

DISPLAYING A HANDFUL of Planters II is Vic Helton, Pampa distributor for the organic fertilizer. Containing no nitrogen, the fertilizer is designed to put the land back in balance with nature by using earthworms to produce humus.

Vic Helton Wants To Balance Soil

Although both he and his product are relatively new to the area, Vic Helton is ready to help area people put their land back in balance with nature with Planters II.

Planters II is a help to the soil but not a plant food. Being a totally organic fertilizer, it contains no nitrogen.

The fertilizer enables earthworms to come back to the soil.

Given the organic materials to work with, an earthworm can make one-half pound of soil humus per year. As he burrows deeper into the soil, the worm catacombs the soil with tunnels, promoting soil aeration and encouraging absorption of whatever moisture is naturally or artificially available.

Research shows the earthworm's wastes, its castings, are five times richer in nitrogen, three times richer in magnesium, seven times richer in phosphorus and 11 times richer in Potash, then is contained in the materials it eats. They can produce 12 and one-half tons of topsoil a year in each acre of good garden-type soil.

Used in an season, under any conditions, wet or dry, Planters can eventual increases soil and crop quality and higher protein quality while it continuously builds up the soil. Used for two or three years, Planters can increase yields.

Helton, originally from Briscoe, Tex., has been in the Planters business for two months.

IH Gains New Pampa Truck Dealer

A new International Harvester Co. truck dealer in Pampa, Tri-Plains International Trucks, Inc., was announced today by David K. Heady, manager of IH's three-state Dallas Truck Sales Region.

The new IH dealership, located on Price Road, will sell and service the full line of International trucks, Heady said.

The president of Tri-Plains International is Jerry L. Gardner, a native of this area who joined International Harvester at Lubbock as a trainee in 1963.

The new firm will employ 17 initially, Gardner said.

Tri-Plains International has the modern shop, experienced personnel and well-stocked parts department to fully serve our customers in this area," Heady said.

Facilities include 12,690 sq. ft. in three buildings and include a 7,200 sq. ft. service shop with seven service bays and a 3,000 sq. ft. parts department.

In addition to Gardner, key personnel include Marcia K. Darby, secretary-treasurer; Dale Davis, parts manager; and Jerry Carter, service manager.

Gardner graduated from Eastern New Mexico University in 1963 with a business administration degree. After IH sales training at Lubbock, he was promoted to salesman and parts supervisor there and zone manager at Oklahoma City, Okla., and Dallas.

He was branch sales manager at Tulsa, Okla., before moving to Pampa.

Gardner is married and has two children.

An opportunity for your son.

Newspaper route management teaches him to deal with people

A BOY with a newspaper route earns money that can help him get the things he wants. Even a college education.

More than that, he learns life's important lessons.

One of these is on how to deal with people.

Meeting his customers on his route, collecting and servicing, he gains this valuable business competence. It will help him throughout his life. Many former newspaperboys, notable successes among them, have told us as much.

Your newspaperboy also applies the arithmetic he learns in the classroom in a practical way by making change and handling bills...thus he becomes a better student. He learns, too, the value of promptness and of good manners.

In fact, you'll find that a newspaperboy manages to keep a step ahead of other boys in preparing for life...while building a bank account of his own.

Should your son be inclined to put himself that step ahead, have him get in touch with us. There may be a route available to him in your neighborhood. And along with it...the opportunity for the self-advancement you want him to have.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

I had the opportunity to see "the most famous cowboy since Buffalo Bill", according to Rodeo Sports News, an opportunity several people blew Saturday night in the final performance of the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

Another plus for me was that I had the opportunity to talk with Larry Mahan, that cowboy, right after he had scored 69 points in the saddle bronc riding, an event which he took second place behind nationally-ranked Bobby Berger of Norman, Okla.

Mahan, who resides in Dallas but is home only two days out of every month, ranks number three in the All-Around Cowboy championship standings, having earned over 20 grand in 1974. He is far behind his pace of last year, when he set all kinds of records en route to his sixth world championship, which came to him when he finished '73 with $64,447, the highest money total in the history of rodeo.

"I'm not going to as many rodeos this year," said Mahan, who declared himself as semi-retired at the start of the year. "This (the Pampa rodeo) is the only one I've been to this week. So far this year I've been to about 30 rodeos. I had been to 60 by this time last year."

Mahan, after he left Pampa Saturday night, headed for Dallas, where he worked Sunday morning with his newest money-making venture, "Larry Mahan Wild West Shows," and then for Oklahoma City, where he spent Sunday afternoon promoting "The Great American Cowboy," a movie about rodeo.

So he's keeping busy, just as busy as he would be if he was making every rodeo he possibly could.

But Mahan, who also won third place in bareback bronc riding and competed for no score in bull riding in the Pampa rodeo, has won close to $25,000 this year despite attending only a few rodeos, which shows he's still the best, the creme of a crop of about 3,500 professional cowboys.

"I've had some good wins lately. At Calgary (July 5-14), it was the biggest rodeo I've ever won." At the Calgary Stampede, Mahan won the bareback riding and placed second in bull riding, racking up $6,796, his biggest total in an 11-year professional career. The Calgary (in Alberta, Can.) Stampede is the fifth biggest rodeo in America with a purse of over $90,000.

Mahan, who is 30, the same age as his buddy, Dallas Cowboy Craig Morton, says he'll always be a rodeo man, even though his shirt business and a book he is writing are taking up much of his time. "I won't get out of it; I'll go to rodeos for many years."

For cowboys, it's possible to compete past the age of 40, which makes it different from most professional sports. "It depends on how they take care of themselves," said Mahan.

Before Mahan had to close the conversation because the bareback bronc event was coming up, he gave me a few pointers about riding.

"In all three of the riding events, it's a combination of timing, coordination, balance and the physical and mental approaches to the thing. Bull riding is the toughest to stay on at the whistle. You plan your ride before you take off on the animal. Then in bull riding, you have to be aggressive and move instinctively."

That's Mahan's strategy in a nutshell for what it's worth, and for him, it's been worth plenty.

He added, comparing rodeo to other sports. "The thing of it is, in rodeo you're out there for eight seconds. You don't get as sore each week as you do in football. But there's an element of danger. You can't blow a whistle like you stop a football play and stop a bull from stepping on you."

Mahan has been called just about everything — like the most famous cowboy since Buffalo Bill. I called him "The Hank Aaron of Rodeo." You know, I thought he's heard them all. But from the way he smiled, I don't think he had never heard that one.

Staubach Upset

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys' quarterback Roger Staubach doesn't like the way NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey is handling the negotiations of the Players Association strike. But he wasn't going to say anything about it until Garvey made that "Pearl Harbor" crack.

Garvey was quoted in the Washington Post as saying, when learning Staubach had decided to report to camp, that "I'd hate to have been at Pearl Harbor with him."

Garvey later said he was talking in generalizations to the Post and that he didn't expect to see the quote in print.

"I can certainly see why Roger would be upset," Garvey said. "I sent him a telegram about the quote. I'm still very disappointed he reported, but the decision was his to make."

Wynn Says Reds Scared

Jimmy Wynn likes to think it's almost all over but the Cincinnati Reds still have history of their side.

The Reds are scared, they know it and we know it," Wynn beamed Monday night after he hit a two-run homer and Steve Yeager hit a grand slam to give the Dodgers a 6-3 victory over the Reds in a nationally-televised game.

"I don't know what this win does to Cincinnati but it really helped our spirits," Wynn added. "This game was really important. You could sense the significance by the reaction of the crowd. It really built our morale. They know they're going to have to do more than we do to get going."

The victory moved the Dodgers 7 1/2 games ahead with two more games left in this series and even Reds Manager Sparky Anderson admitted, "obviously, it was a very important victory for Los Angeles."

But the Reds remember last year—and the Dodgers must, too. Last year, the Reds advanced nine games on the Dodgers in two weeks. They were 4 1/2 behind on Aug. 28 and five games ahead by Sept. 12. The Reds won by 3 1/2.

The Dodgers this year don't seem on the verge of collapse. They were 5 1/2 in front at the All-Star break and have won 10 of 13 since then, including eight in a row.

The Dodgers are 9-1 against the Reds this year although Anderson said before the game, "it doesn't matter who you win them against, you've just got to win the most games. They could turn around and lose several in a row."

Yeager hit the first grand slam of his career in the seventh inning off Don Gullett after Ron Cey beat out an infield hit. Joe Ferguson walked and Tom Paciorek loaded the bases with a bunt single when he was trying to sacrifice.

Dodger Manager Walt Alton hopes Yeager doesn't keep shooting for homers now. He said, "Steve sometimes swings too hard. I hope this doesn't spoil him. He's hit better this year because he's going to rightfield more."

Alton said that if Anderson had brought in a right-hander to pitch to Yeager, he might have batted for him. Of course, if Paciorek had been out on his sacrifice attempt, the Reds probably would have walked Yeager and he wouldn't have had a shot at the homer.

Orioles Leading Red Sox By 3

United Press International

The Baltimore Orioles, who used speed to win the American League's Eastern Division Title in 1973, hope power will do it for them this year.

The Orioles staged a strong finish last season with "roadrunners" Al Bumbry and Rich Coggins leading their attack. They aren't exactly knocking down fences this season but they've had a flurry of seven homers in their last seven games and are now three games behind the first-place Boston Red Sox.

Bobby Grich and Paul Blair, both of whom have already surpassed their 1973 season homer totals, connected for the game-winning blows Monday night when the Orioles swept the Detroit Tigers 7-4 and 6-3.

Grich hit a three-run homer in the second inning of the first game and also singled in a run to help Wayne Garland win his fourth game. Grich has hit 17 homers this year compared to 12 last season.

Paul Blair hit his 12th homer—compared to 10 last season—to snap a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning of the second game. Doyle Alexander went 7-13 in that one for his fifth win.

Between them, Grich and Blair had seven hits, scored 10 runs and drove in six during the doubleheader.

New York Yankees beat Boston 8-0. Texas pummeled Chicago 13-8 and Minnesota rebounded from a 2-1 opening game loss to down Oakland 4-3 in other AL games.

National League results were Houston 7 San Francisco 2, New York 10 Montreal 4, Los Angeles 6

Gross Collects Five Base Hits

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Greg Gross, an unassuming 22-year-old rookie from York, Pa., can't quite believe what's happening to him this year while he is trying to win his major league spurs with the Houston Astros.

He came to the Astros' camp in the spring determined to gain a spot on the big club after getting a small taste of the big leagues at the end of the 1973 season.

"I would have been satisfied to be a part-time player," he confessed Monday after banging out five singles in a perfect performance that boosted his own batting average to a lofty .317 and the Astros to a 7-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

"I had no illusions about my ability," said the frankly speaking outfielder. "I knew I could hit but .317 seems like a 1,000. I don't have any power to speak of and when I hit line drives they land in someone's glove because the outfielders play me shallow. So, I just go up there and try to hit grounders between the infielders and hope they go through."

Gross' first three hits in Monday's game never got out of the infield, his fourth hit was a soft fly to right that fell in and his fifth was a carbon copy, only this one dropped into center.

Players, Owners Still At Stalemate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiations resume today in the stalemated 36-day National Football League players strike but there seems to be little hope of a quick settlement.

The players and the owners are starting to resemble two weary fighters in the late rounds who are inflicting a lot of damage on each other but are both incapable of scoring a knockout punch.

A few big names including John Hadl, Bob Griese and Terry Bradshaw crossed the picket lines Monday but despite rumors of wholesale defections, the players ranks remained fairly solid.

And two New York Jets, John Ebersole and Rob Spicer, checked back out of camp Monday and joined the picket line after previously crossing the line.

According to the owners' figures, 323 veterans and 98 starters have checked into camp. Since there are 1,300 veterans and 572 starters on the 26 teams, the players are holding steady with the start of the regular season still almost six weeks away.

But the players have failed to either keep the rookies out of camp or to stop the exhibition games from being played—two objectives they mentioned earlier. The players' strike, though, directly resulted in the low attendance at the 12 exhibition games over the weekend. The players claim the owners lost $3.4 million. The owners admit they lost money—although the players' figure may be high—but they say it doesn't help the players if they have less money to meet the players' financial demands.

The negotiations start at 1 p.m. today with federal mediator William Usery trying to find some common ground.

But John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said, "we're a long way apart. We're farther apart than we were on March 16. And we're no closer together as a result of this weekend."

The first exhibition weekend ended Monday night when 35,321 fans paid to see the Kansas City Chiefs, down the Detroit Lions 20-12. The Chiefs, who sold out the 78,000-seat Arrowhead Stadium for all of their exhibition games last season, originally sold 38,000 tickets for the game. Eight thousand fans asked for refunds but 5,000 more bought them at the gate for the total of 35,321.

The 12-game total for the weekend was 315,834—over 200,000 below the total for the first weekend last year.

The players are hoping the small crowds at the exhibition games will force the owners to make concessions.

White Sox Fall To Texas

CHICAGO (UPI) — The only good thing Chicago White Sox manager Chuck Tanner could find in a 19-8 loss to the Texas Rangers was that he got good relief pitching.

This opinion came even though Cy Acosta and Rick Gossage gave up 12 hits and eight runs to the Rangers in 8-1-3 innings. By the time Acosta got into the game, though, the Rangers were en route to victory after tagging starter Stan Bahnsen for three hits, two walks and five runs before the first inning was over.

"Bahnsen wasn't able to get it over the plate," Tanner said, "and when he did, he was high and they hit it. I was pleased with Acosta because it was his first chance since he was on the disabled list and he threw the ball well. Then Gossage pitched well."

"We didn't have much choice because we used everybody in the doubleheader Sunday. There were a lot of base hits all over the place and they got more than we did."

After the game the Sox moved to strengthen their pitching, bringing up 21-year-old Jack Kucek from Iowa and sending Bill Moran to Knoxville to make room for Kucek.

Kucek was the Sox second round draft choice and had a 5-2 record for the Class-A Appleton team, with a 1.76 earned run average. In his last three games he had 36 strikeouts in 27 innings. He had been on the low roster a week but didn't pitch there.

Today's Sports Parade

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Some people look at the America's Cup and say to themselves, "hmm, mmm, mmm, nibble, looking shiny trophy."

That's the customary reaction.

Then there are other people who look at this same Cup and see something entirely different. They see the Holy Grail of Yacht Racing.

Bob Bavier, who captains the Courageous, a new trim aluminum-hulled 12-meter launched only last May, belongs in the second category. To him, the America's Cup is something special. He considers it so special, he's putting himself in a position where he would seem to have everything to lose by what he's doing now, and nothing to gain. He doesn't see it that way at all, though.

In a nutshell, the situation with Bavier is this: He skipped the Constellation, which beat the English boat, Sovereign, 10 years ago.

This means he has a perfect record, one successful America's Cup defense to his credit in as many tries—He's batting 1.000 so far so good.

Now as skipper of the Courageous, there is that chance Bavier's boat won't even be chosen by the selection committee to defend the Cup for the United States next month against the foreign challenger, either Australia's Southern Cross or the France. In preliminary trials so far, Intrepid, with her wooden hull, has made a better showing than Courageous.

Suppose, though, the selection committee does name the Courageous as the defender. Push on a little further and suppose the Aussies pull an upset. Suppose they somehow manage to win the America's Cup, the way they keep feeling more and more they will next month. It would be the first time a foreign boat had won the America's Cup; the first time ever the United States had lost. The circumstance alone is calculated to make you shudder.

Forevermore Bob Bavier would go down in yachting history as the first skipper of a U.S. boat to fail in defense of the America's Cup. For shame. He doesn't think so, though.

"I'd rather be in the finals and lose than not be in it at all," says Bavier, a sun-fanned, 56-year-old resident of Darien, Conn., who wears a perpetual expression of preoccupation and the same kind of funny little cap that Dave Wottle, the middle distance runner, does.

"Certainly, I hope we win, but I wouldn't consider us favorites if we lost out to Intrepid. Would I feel disappointed? Yes. Chagrined? Well, maybe if I felt we laid an egg and did poorly, but if I could say in my own mind we did everything we possibly could, and they simply were faster, I wouldn't hang my head at all. I'd just be so glad we were in it."

Everybody in sailing has lost more than he has won. Nobody wins them all. That even applies to someone like Jack Nicklaus.

Bob Bavier looked out over the water from where he was sitting up on the bridge of a tender boat, alongside the Courageous.

When it all boils down to in the end," he said, speaking of the America's Cup final which begins here Sept. 10, "is a match race for a trophy that has been in existence over 100 years. "You have one boat, the other people have another. Only one boat wins; the other one is lost. It's a very intense competition against people who don't make mistakes."

"The best way to win is to sail steady and wait for the other guy to make a mistake. You can't expect him to do what you want him to do. He simply won't do it."

Gary Player Attempting 'Bantam Ben's' Record

CLEMMONS, N.C. (UPI) — South African Gary Player, easily the best of the "little" golfers since Ben Hogan's legs gave out, has his eye set this week on one of "Bantam Ben's" most cherished records.

Hogan, now retired, is the only man to win, in the same year, three of the four tournaments that make up the "grand slam" of professional golf—the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA. No one has won all four in the same year.

Hogan won three in 1953, missing that year only the PGA (won by Walter Burkemo). Jack Nicklaus made a run two years ago when he won the Masters and the U.S. Open, but Nicklaus finished second to Lee Trevino in the British Open and Player then won the PGA that year.

Player, Nicklaus and Trevino all skipped this past weekend's PGA stop at Sutton, Mass., to get in some early practice on the 7,050-yard Tanglewood course, located about 10 miles southwest of Winston-Salem, N.C., the tobacco capital.

Player arrived here Sunday, and practiced Sunday and Monday despite a constant threat of rain. The course got a good soaking last week but Player and other early arrivals praised its condition on Monday.

"It's a true test for a major championship," said Player. "It's a well-balanced course with a variety of holes. The bunkers are well placed and they have good sand."

Player predicted even-par 280 would be a good score for the four days of play. "I'd say that would come close to winning."

The broad purpose of the program is to provide consumer education so that the public becomes more aware of possible deceptive trade practices.

In the implementation of the program, Gail House, a teaching assistant in the Home Management section and a candidate for a Master of Science degree in Home Economics, is serving an internship this summer in the office of the Consumer Protection Division operated under the direction of Assistant Attorney General John H. Richards.

Ms. House is the first to serve the internship and she considers it a major step in preparing herself to better teach students and future teachers about consumer laws and rights. She is minoring in law and is the first Home Economics graduate student with such a degree program.

By working with Richards and others in the Consumer Protection Division, Ms. House expects to become familiar with the types of complaints consumers take to the division office, what the laws are, and how the cases are handled.

This type of consumer information will be passed on through her teaching and her interaction with other faculty of the College of Home Economics. The Consumer Protection Division offers to the citizens of Texas a means of recourse for those who have been fraudulently exploited by business establishments and other entrepreneurs.

The six-week internship calls for Ms. House spending 12 hours per week in Richards' office observing, learning, and assisting in any manner mutually helpful to the office and to the intern.

The pilot program in Lubbock grew out of a request from Clinton Cross who heads the El Paso office of the Consumer Protection Division, and Joe Longley, division chief in the Austin office of the Texas attorney general.

"The general thrust of the program is to offer actual first-hand experience in handling complaints and people," Richards said, "and to acquaint the intern with information which the consumer needs to understand the relationship between rights and responsibilities."

Dr. Jane Coulter of the Home Management section described the internship program as one which is expected to produce valuable results in the acquisition and dissemination of information badly needed by consumers.

In addition, it is expected to provide outstanding students with opportunities for acquiring expertise in dealing with consumer problems and better prepare them for assuming positions with business, government and social agencies upon graduation from college.

"We are pleased with the program at Texas Tech and in Lubbock and we are hopeful that additional internships and traineeships will be established in other divisional offices of the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's office," she said.

Tech Professor Receives Grant

LUBBOCK — M.F. Crass, III, Ph.D., associate professor of physiology at Texas Tech University School of Medicine, has received a $15,000 grant from the Upjohn Company to conduct research on certain drugs which are used in treating adult-onset diabetic patients.

The drugs, sulfonylurea compounds, stimulate the release of insulin from the pancreas, thereby reducing the blood sugar level. The drugs have caused controversy because of clinical findings which led some physicians to question whether these drugs may cause cardiovascular problems in some patients.

Most physicians are aware of the controversy about the drug and take indicated precautions in prescribing it. The Upjohn Company manufactures a drug of this type which is marketed under the name "Tolbutamide."

Dr. Crass' grant is a continuation of Upjohn funds which have supported the project since 1972, when he began work on it at the University of Nebraska Medical Center at Omaha.

Explaining his investigation, Dr. Crass said, "Clinical evidence suggested that these (sulfonylurea) drugs may have led to cardiovascular deaths in some diabetic patients, but criticism arose pertaining to the way in which the clinical study was carried out, i.e., the scientific and statistical methodology associated with the study.

It led many academically oriented physicians to question the validity of the findings. This, in turn, stimulated further research into these drugs, and their effects upon the heart."

He said that prior to 1970, the management of adult-onset diabetes with Tolbutamide or other sulfonylurea drugs was considered simple and routine. The later controversy resulted in the Upjohn Company's sponsorship of his research.

Isolated heart studies on rats in Dr. Crass' laboratory and in similar studies at the University of Miami have demonstrated that the drugs do influence the action of the heart muscle. An observed increase in heart action may be accompanied by a rise in the oxygen consumption.

He said that this increase over a period of time could create a stress on the heart. The extent of the stress and its effects are the current focus of his investigations.

Dr. Crass is continuing experiments involving daily administration of Tolbutamide and a newer, more potent oral hypoglycemic (blood sugar-lowering) agent to laboratory animals to simulate the daily drug therapy of adult-onset diabetic patients.

Concert Records

By WILBUR G. LANDREY
NEW YORK (UPI) — For Strauss' (Richard) lovers, there is something on records in recent months—two recordings of his underplayed tone poem Sinfonia Domestica and three of the concertos which were a parenthesis around his career.

The Sinfonia Domestica is program music about the Strauss family itself which caused some controversy in its time from critics who doubted that a baby's bath and the act of love should be displayed in music.

The ninth of Strauss' ten tone poems, first performed in 1904, it deserves a place in the permanent repertory. The two recent performances on records underline this.

The new one is by Herbert Von Karajan directing the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra (Angel S 36973).

The older one is a budget priced Odyssey reissue of the unforgettable performance by George Szell and the Cleveland Symphony (Y 32889). This happens to be my favorite, but both are masterful performances.

A bonus on the Szell record is a performance of Strauss' Horn Concerto No. 1 in E flat major played by Myron Bloom.

Strauss' concertos came at the beginning and end of his composing career. The No. 1 horn concerto, composed for the natural valveless horn and originally for Strauss' father, came in 1882 and 1883

—when he was 19. Already Till Eulenspiegel can be heard.

The Horn Concerto No. 2 in E flat major was composed in 1942 for the French horn with valves. It is a complex and subtle work, and the echoes of Eulenspiegel still are there.

Von Karajan and the Berlin with Norbert Hauptmann have recorded No. 2 along with the even later Oboe concerto (1946) played by Lothar Koch (Deutsche Grammophon 2530 439).

Recommended: John Browning playing Ravel's Concerto in D for the Left Hand with Erich Leinsdorf conducting the Philharmonia Orchestra (Seraphim S 60224).

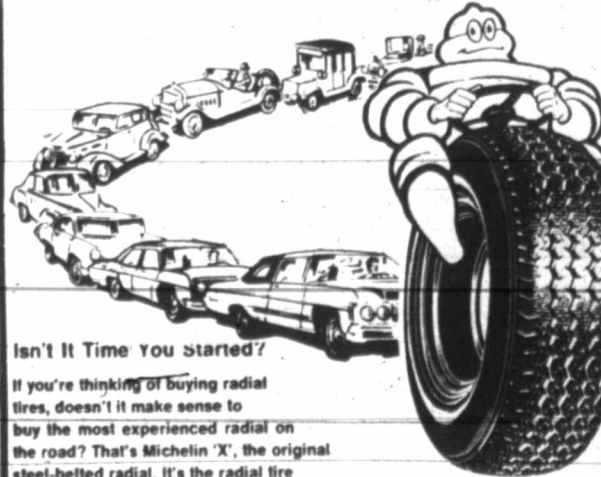

Of interest: The first recording of Rodion Shehedrin's music for the ballet Anna Karenina, based on Tolstoy's novel, premiered in Moscow in 1972 with Maya Plisetskaya (Angel Melodiya SRB 4126—two records).

ISRAELI CONDUCTOR COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — Israeli conductor Yuri Ahronovich has become general manager and chief conductor of the Cologne opera.

Before emigrating from the Soviet Union in 1972, Ahronovich directed Radio Moscow's Orchestra. In Israel he headed the Israeli Philharmonic after the late Istvan Kertsz
