Small-Thompson-Crowe Domination in Illinois Crushed At Polls

FRANK SMITH SEES HOPE FOR SENATE FAIL

"America First" Ticket Has Hardly Single Victory

LONDON PLAYS UP ELECTION

Margins as Great in Chicago As Over the State

CHICAGO, April 11.—(P)—Candidates nominated for principal offices in Illinois at yesterday's primary election are indicated by incomplete returns today were:

Republican: Louis Lincoln Emerson, incumbent secretary of state.

Democratic: Floyd E. Thompson state supreme court justice.

Liberty-General:

Republican: Oscar E. Carleton, incumbent.

Democrat: Thomas J. Courtney former state senator.

United States Senator:

Republican: Otis F. Glenn.

Democrat: Anton J. Cermak, leader of "wet" element in Illinois Democracy.

State's attorney Cook county: Republican: John A. Swanson, circuit court judge.

Democrat: William J. Lindsay.

CHICAGO, April 11.—(P)—Illinois voters in statewide primary election yesterday wrote Gov. Len Small, of the books of their political favor, dashed the hopes of Frank L. Smith for another mandate to the Senate of the United States and, in Chicago, tore at the Republican leadership of Mayor Thompson by defeating his choice for state's attorney, Robert Crowe.

It was an unusually large turnout of votes that swept aside, almost in its entirety, the Republican ticket of Small-Thompson-Crowe which campaigned under the slogan "America First" blazoned on billboards and street signs the length of the state.

LONDON, April 11.—(P)—Chicago's primary election result was the big news in England today.

Robert Emmett Crowe, who prosecuted Loeb and Leopold and who personified the "America first" aspirations of Mayor Thompson in Cook county apparently had fallen in his attempt to mount the third term step of state's attorney.

Even the mayor himself, not a candidate for any post more important than committeeman of his home ward, seemed to have lost the solace even of that slight victory.

Louis Lincoln, 64-year-old secretary of state, was the candidate who swept to an unexpectedly large majority over small for the gubernatorial nomination.

State's attorney Cook county: Republican: John A. Swanson, circuit court judge.

Democrat: William J. Lindsay.

Chauncey Depew's Funeral

The last rites for Chauncey M. Depew were, as he had requested, of extreme simplicity. Here is shown the interior of St. Thomas' Church, New York City, where hundreds of nationally prominent persons gathered to honor the memory of the philosopher, financier and statesman—a man who was in politics before Abraham Lincoln became president. The casket is shown in front of the altar steps.

MODERN PAMPA BIG SURPRISE TO AN OLDTIMER

ALBERT BROWN WAS FREIGHTER THROUGH HERE BACK IN EARLY 80'S

A chance meeting on Cuyler street yesterday afternoon united two old friends after a 25-year separation. The meeting was between F. P. Reid and Albert Brown, the latter one of the first men to enter the Panhandle. The two were farmers on adjoining land near Mobeetie more than 25 years ago and from the time Mr. Brown moved away they have not met.

In recounting old times to a News reporter Mr. Brown, who is living at San Antonio, stated that he never expected to see Pampa a prosperous city like he stepped into yesterday. He trucked supplies into Pampa in the early eighties before the railroad was built and during the building of the road into Pampa. He made the trip from Dodge City by ox team and many were the interesting experiences related.

Other oldtime friends who met with Mr. Brown during his visit were J. S. Wynne, Walter Clark, and Lee Banks.

"Who would have ever thought that there would be a thriving city on the spot where I hauled supplies nearly 50 years ago?" Mr. Brown asked.

Erwin Is Chosen As New Deputy

A. J. Erwin, a resident of the city or the last two years, has been appointed to fill the vacancy in the sheriff's department caused by the recent resignation of O. T. Smith.

Mr. Erwin is well known here, having been a resident of Pampa more than 20 years ago. He commenced his duties as deputy yesterday.

WASHINGTTON, April 11.—(P)—Secretary Hoover has written Senator Stephens, Democrat, Mississippi that articles about the order abolishing race segregation in the census bureau are in a large degree foolish untruths.

Pampa Lions and ladies journeyed to Clarendon last night for an enjoyable inter-city banquet at the Anthro hotel.

Money order receipts at the Pampa post office continue to show large increase over the previous months, as do entire postal receipts for the month of March. Although the quarterly receipts show a few dollars decrease over the same period last year, business is steadily increasing.

The increase in money order receipts over February was $3,663.21, while the increase in postal receipts amounted to $128.10. Comparing the money order increase since the first of the year, the local office is due to have the greatest year in its history. Receipts for January were $23,765.01, February $28,201.32 and last month $31,864.53.

Postal receipts for March amounted to $10,039.11.

Excavation work is in progress for the foundation for the 25 by 30-foot extension to the postoffice building which will commence in the near future.

One of the most pleasing home talent musical events ever held here was given by the choir of the First Methodist church on Easter Sunday evening in rendering "Victory," a cantata by Henry Wildermere.

Interest in the Gray county oil field is centering this week around the Guernsey Oil company's No. 2 McKinney in section 163, block 3, three miles west of here, which is flowing 60 barrels from on top of pay at 3,295 feet, with 2,000,000 cubic feet of gas and 15,000,000 cubic feet braden-headed off.

LOVE, JOHNSON IN OPPOSITION

Governor Will Issue Statement About Dallas Candidate

HOUSTON, April 11.—(P)—Governor Dan Moody conferred with party leaders in Houston Wednesday, mapping out ways to carry forward the new harmony movement begun Saturday in Dallas, and at conclusion of the morning session seemed in a fighting mood. "Later in the day," he said, "I shall issue a prepared statement" on politics.

The governor said he probably would have considerable to say about Tom Love in his forthcoming statement.

HOUSTON, April 11.—(P)—Governor Dan Moody began an all day political conference here immediately after his arrival Wednesday from Austin.

Says Response Good

"You may say this right now," said the governor before entering a conference with Lynch Davidson, chairman of the "Democrats of Houston" and party leaders favoring the harmony movement, "that I feel even in this short time a great response from the people of Texas to the call for harmony and unity in the party."

Reports came to me from El Paso to the Sabine and from South Texas to the Panhandle that reveal a tremendous reaction of the right sort. The people of Texas realize that the harmony movement is a practical solution of our political problem.

Love Against Smith

DALLAS, April 11.—Thomas B. Love, candidate for Lieutenant-governor of the Democratic ticket, today announced that he favors the re-election of Governor Dan Moody and that Al Smith supporters will receive no aid from him.

His statement: "I am for Governor Moody for re-election because I think I can best serve the cause of good government in Texas by following that course. I am a candidate for Lieutenant-governor for the same reason.

"To pursue feuds and the reputation of being a 'fighter' is one thing, and to serve year by year and day by day in the cause of good government is another, and the latter is the only thing in politics worth while for me."

Owsley for Smith

AUSTIN, April 11.—(P)—Col. Alvin Owsley, candidate for the United States Senate, said here Wednesday that he would be "glad to support Governor Al Smith as the party nominee for president."

"I am sure," Col. Owsley said, "that if Governor Smith is elected, I could get much co-operation from him as senator from Texas, I know Governor Smith personally and he has a wonderful personality."

AUSTIN, April 11.—(P)—The ranks of the constitutional dry Democratic faction will be instructed to pass in primary conventions a resolution saying "we are against Smith, Reed, Ritchie or any other person occupying their position on prohibition," high-way Commissioner—Gene Johnson, speaker for the organization, declared Wednesday.

"This ought to settle the whole row," Mr. Johnson said, "as the primary Democrats claim that they too are against any wet."

MEXICAN COTTON DESTROYED

MEXICO CITY, April 11.—Dispatches from Torreon today said that the tornado which struck the State of Coahuila on Monday caused loss estimated at between ten million pesos ($5,000,000) and twenty-five million pesos ($12,500,000).

Cotton plantations over a wide area were completely ruined. They will need to be reseeded, with the prospect that the harvest will be injured by the boll weevil.

MOBETTIE WILL have natural gas in the near future, according to the Mobettie News. The connecting line will be laid from Magic City.

Many people do not know that this Panhandle civilization largely started at Mobettie; and that Old Fort Elliott was established to protect the Panhandle from Indian raids.

Law enforcement, such as there was, emanated from that capital of the Plains, and the jurisdiction of the officers included several days' travel in all directions. The original flagpole, school house, and a few other buildings spared by the disastrous tornado of about 1908 still remain.

It is unfortunate, but apparently inevitable, that the Kell railroad is to miss Mobettie by a few miles. This is not according to the desire of Frank Kell, the builder, who is a life member of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society and is interested in preserving historical lore of all kinds.

The performance of the Fester cantata at the Methodist church was creditable and prompts expression of the hope that the group of singers will continue practice on other works to be given at regular intervals.

A group of talented musicians bring pleasure to themselves and the public as well through effort such as is required for musical presentations. Pampa needs more of such groups. The size of a town or city does not limit its musical attainments, and meritorious performance is all the more noteworthy.

The high school orchestra is doing fine work, and the recently organized Pampa band should receive whole hearted support. Pampa is a town where civic pride and development make such organizations vital.

There is talent here for men's and women's choruses. Any body which will carefully select its voices and practice regularly can become famous throughout this territory and be in great demand. Nothing would bring more prestige to the city. Let's have more music.

Influx of cheap labor into this country is becoming an economic menace. Mexicans, more than a million of them, have found their way across the border in recent years.

Originally intending to remain only during harvest seasons, they became interested in our good wages, our schools, our "movies", and other attractions. They have remained, established homes of low standards, and encouraged their relatives and friends in Mexico to come here. This unrestricted immigration has resulted in colonies of cheap labor concentrating in hundreds of Texas cities. The American standard of living is seriously threatened.

OUT OUR WAY

HEROES ARE MADE - NOT BORN.

ing is seriously threatened, offsetting the advantage of having cheap harvest labor when it is badly needed. Plainly, Texans must insist that Congress take remedial steps.

We already have the negro. The black race is new in most Panhandle towns, and how to handle this new population is a question facing Pampa and neighboring cities. Granting the race all its constitutional rights, the fact remains that the living conditions, morals, and general aspects of negro sections are bad. Segregation and sympathetic but positive control seem the only safe procedure.

were only a complication which was dissipated completely when Mr. Hearst and everyone else admitted that the wild documents he had published weren't genuine.

The real Hotentot in the woodpile has been the question of the validity of titles acquired by some American oil men in Mexico.

That is supposed to account for the attitude of some oil interests which caused the State Department to talk sternly and threateningly to Mexico and the attitude of others who were willing to comply with the Mexican oil laws.

It has often been charged that some of the American oil concessions in Mexico had been obtained fraudulently.

If that is true, there is nothing in Mexico's oil regulations as agreed upon by Morrow and Calles which will enable the holders of invalid titles to retain property illegally acquired. The titles involved under the regulations are going to be reviewed and some of the big American oil companies may be affected.

All indications are that with Mexican-American relations as they are, the State Department will not make any desperate fights on behalf of oil interests whose fraudulent titles are thrown out by Mexican courts.

That, at least, must have been the Coolidge-Morrow attitude. The new oil regulations were not exactly an obliteration of points which might enable each nation to accuse the other of unfairness.

We now accept the Mexican theory of law that ownership of land does not automatically mean ownership of oil beneath the surface. Mexico argues to liberalize interpretation of the positive act required to prove ownership of the sub-surface and to abandon the plan to limit ownership rights to 50 years, which we claimed was retroactive and confiscatory.

The new regulations were based on a supreme court decision of a few months ago. They represented a defeat for the policy of former Ambassador Sheffield, who in a speech to the American colony in Mexico City called for a "concrete backbone" in our dealings with Mexico. Calles had previously insisted in his notes to Secretary Kellogg that the dispute be allowed to simmer until specific cases under the law had actually been decided by the Mexican courts.

It was significant that the Mexican supreme court withheld its decision until Sheffield had left and Morrow had arrived, bringing in an era of good feeling with the blessing of President Coolidge.

Now the oil companies will have to show Mexico when and how they obtained their titles. That is likely to be the next bone of trouble between Mexico and the oil companies, but probably not between Mexico and the United States.

WASHINGTON—Now that Ambassador Morrow and President Calles has shown how easily our oil row with Mexico might have been adjusted in the first place, we may learn soon the reason why it wasn't. El Progreso Enjoys Meeting Tuesday in T. D. Hobart Home

El Progreso met in regular session at the home of Mrs. T. D. Hobart Tuesday afternoon for a study of the novel, "The Time of Man," by Elizabeth Roberts.

The theme of the book is the life of a poor tenant family in the tobacco fields of Kentucky. The study was handled as follows:

A condensed outline of the novel was given by Mrs. John Andrews in an unusual and interesting manner, and was followed by the reading of several criticisms of the novel. The novel is considered the most readable of all the books of the month because of its realism, its character studies, and its descriptions of nature. The author is a native Kentuckian and in the story she gives a first-hand knowledge of the life of tenant farmers.

The conversations of the book are carried on in the vernacular of the mountain regions. Mrs. Craven pictured the "Chesser Family" in a very dramatic manner, imitating their language and expressions until one thought they were living. Ellen, the central figure of the book, was given by Mrs. G. T. Hunkanillar as a child of environment, who was so submerged by her surroundings that she was never able to rise above them.

Mrs. Dave Pope in her own naive way told of the love story of Ellen and Jonas, and she was followed by Mrs. E. R. House, who pictured the Chesser family in their various new homes as they were constantly moving on, always hoping for something a little better but never finding it. Ellen with her family repeated the life of the Chesser family.

Mrs. M. A. Finney read a thought-provoking paper on the "Tragedy of the Commonplace in the lives of Ellen and Jasper" and brought out the comparison that we to may be the victims on the commonplace if we permit the petty and the little things of life to dominate us. The program was concluded with a round-table discussion on "Whether the Literary Guide chooses wisely in the selection of this study novel as one of its earliest recommended books."

In a short business meeting the club voted to subscribe for the "Federation News," as it is the best medium for individual club members to keep in touch with national, state, and district federated news.

A letter was read from Mrs. Charles Smith of Amarillo urging each delegation to the district meeting at Dalhart to come prepared to take part in the singing contests sponsored by the music department. All members of Federated clubs are asked and requested to attend the district meeting at Dalhart and El Progreso is planning on sending a number of her members. The talk club work given by Mrs. F. T. Collins at the reception sponsored by members of El Progreso and Child Study clubs, April 2 was thoroughly enjoyed, and Mrs. Collins so endeared herself with all the members that they are more than anxious to have the pleasure of hearing her preside and talk at the district meeting.

The members are also looking forward to Mrs. Phoebe K. Warner's visit the latter part of April or the first of May, when she will come as the guest of all the women of the county to explain to them the organization of a county federation.

At the close of the program an business meeting, the hostess served a most delicious plate luncheon to the following members:

Mrs. John Andrews, Mrs. A. Cole, Mrs. W. M. Craven, Mrs. R. R. House, Mrs. M. A. Finney, Mrs. J. M. McDonald, Mrs. C. P. Buckler, Mrs. C. T. Hunkanillar, Mrs. P. C. Ledrick, Mrs. H. L. Ledrick, Mrs. Carson Loftus, Mrs. Dave Pope, Mrs. W. Purdiance, Mrs. James Todd, and Mrs. G. C. Walstad.

The club will meet April 24 with Mrs. C. M. Bryson for a study of "Poetry." Mrs. Carson Loftus will be the leader.

Night Owls Club Is Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Murphy

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Murphy were hosts Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. Joe Lutz to the members of the Night Owls Club. Lovely decorations of pink and green were arranged, and were further carried out in cut flowers. Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell received the high scores for the bridge games of the evening, while Mrs. Joe Lutz received low score.

A delicious three-course luncheon was served the following: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Seal, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lutz, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Seal, Mrs. I. H. Lavender, and Miss Helen Murphy.

It always goes better, it swings with a song; When your heart's in the work it goes rushing along; It sweetens the struggle, it hallows the strife, When your heart's in the battle That beautifies life.

It lifts us to singing, it decks us with smiles, When the heart's in the work every inch of the mile, It helps us to triumph, it cheers us with trust, When the heart sings of bloom, 'Neath the danger and dust.

It lightens the burdens, it casts off the gloom, When your heart's in the work it leads on to the bloom, It laughs off the trouble, it lessens the care, When your heart's in the work And your hats in the air. —Baltimore Sun.

LITTLE FIRE DAMAGE

Very little damage was done when fire broke out in a room on the second floor of the Liberty hotel last night at 7 o'clock. The fire department answered the call and with chemicals had the fire out before it had time to spread. The fire started from some clothing hanging over a stove in the bedroom.

INJURED MAN LIVES BUT RECOVERY HELD DOUBTFUL

LULING, April 11.—(P)—Emmett Whiteley, 40, rig builder who suffered the fracture of many bones late Tuesday when he fell forty feet from a derrick, was alive and conscious in a Luling hospital Wednesday, but physicians expressed doubt as to his survival.

Whiteley plunged head first upon the concrete base of the rig at the oil field six miles from the hospital. His jaws were crushed, head bones were fractured, and a number of body bones broken.

Buy Cheap Watches But No "Works"

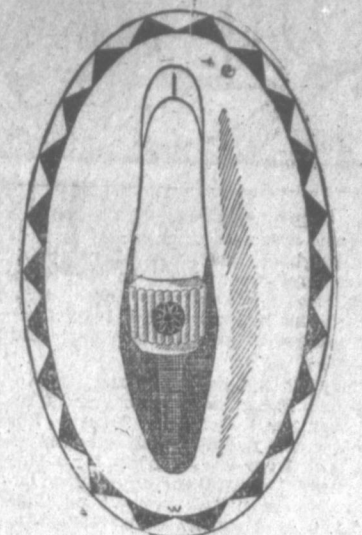

HAMILTON, Ont., April 11.—(P)—Three members of the city council, sent to New York to inspect engine equipment which the city proposed to purchase, bought "bargain" watches which had no works, it was disclosed at a council session.

Controller Morrison revealed the purchase at a meeting called to pass on the recommendation of the three aldermen, Polson, O'Heir, and Haggson.

The controller produced one of the "bargain" watches, which was of white gold, the hands readily adjustable and so fixed that the winding operation would not arouse suspicion. "The men who made these purchases," said the controller, "offer us expert advice on the engine equipment and speak to us in technical terms."

The announcement was greeted with laughter.

The council failed to make a choice on the $100,000 worth of equipment the three men had inspected, passing a motion to defer purchase until 1929.

MILK ALONE

BY ANNE AUSTIN AUTHOR OF "SAINT AND SINNER"

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Sally Ford is "fanned out" to Clem Carson, prosperous farmer, the summer she is 18, and leaves the state orphanage, the only home she has known since she was four. At the farm she finds a friend in David Nash, student and an athlete. Carson is angered because David prefers the little orphan to his daughter, Pearl. When he makes insulting remarks about Sally, David hits him a terrific blow.

David and Sally run away and join a carnival. David as cook's helper and Sally as "Princess Lalla," crystal gazer.

The midge, "Pity Sing," takes a fancy to Sally and vows her to be wary of Nita. Mrs. Bybee, wife of the carnival owner, promises Sally she will go to Stanton and see if she can find any news about Sally's mother. Sally has told her about her years in the orphanage and that the only information she has about her mother is that she lives in Stanton at one time. Late in the morning when Mrs. Bybee reads her letter, she goes with anxious heart.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

As Sally ran across lots to the side-tracked carnival train, she buried her precious new memory of David under layers of anxiety and questions. It would still be there when her questions had been answered by Mrs. Bybee, to comfort her if the showman's wife had been unsuccessful, to add to her joy if some trace of her mother had been found.

"Maybe—maybe I'll have a mother and a sweetheart, too," she marveled as she climbed, breathless, into the coach which had been pointed out to her as the showman's private car.

It was not really a private car, for Bybee and his wife occupied only one of the drawing rooms of the ancient Pullman car, long since retired from the official service of that company. The berths were occupied on long jumps by a number of the stars of the carnival and by some of the most affluent of the concessionaires and barkers, a few of the latter being part owners of such attractions as the "girlie show" and the "diving beauties." When the carnival showed in a town for more than a day, however, the performers usually preferred to sleep in tents, rather than in the stuffy, hot berths.

Since the carnival was in full swing at that hour of the day, Sally found the sleeping car deserted except for Mrs. Bybee, who called to her from the open door of the drawing room.

The carnival owner's wife was seated at a card table, which was covered with stacks of coins and bills of all denominations. Her lean fingers pushed the stacks about, counted them, jotted the totals on a sheet of lined paper.

"I'm treasurer and paymaster for the outfit," she told Sally, satisfaction glinting in her keen eyes. "Me and Bill, and she lifted a big, blue-barreled revolver from the faded green plush of the seat and twirled it unconcernedly on her thumb.

"Is business good?" Sally asked politely, as she edged fearfully into the small room.

"Might be worse," Mrs. Bybee conceded grudgingly. "Sit down, child. I'm not going to shoot you. Well, I went calling this morning," she added briskly, as she began to rake the stacks of coins into a large canvas bag.

"Oh!" Sally breathed, clasping her hands tightly in her lap. "Did you find out anything?"

Mrs. Bybee knotted a stout string around the gathered-up mouth of the bag, rose from her seat, lifted the green plush cushion, revealing a small safe beneath the seat. When she had stowed the bag away and twirled the combination lock, she rearranged the cushion and took her seat again, all without answering Sally's anxious question.

"Reckon I'm a fool to let anyone see where I keep the coin," she ridiculed herself. "But after making a blamed fool of myself this morning over their dresses your David give you, I guess I'd better try to do something to show you I trust you. You just keep your mouth shut about this safe and there won't be any harm done."

"You let me tell this my own way, child," Mrs. Bybee reproved her. "Well you say that missionary rig I had or this morning? I turned the trick all right. Lucky for you, this ain't the fastest growing town in the state, even if that billboard across from the station do say so. I found the address you gave me, all right. Same number, same house. Four-or-five-room dump, that may have been a pretty good imitation of a California bungalow 12 years ago. All run-down now, with a swarm of kids tumbling in and out and sticking out their tongues at me when their ma's back was turned. She said she'd lived there two years; moved here from Wisconsin. Didn't know a soul in Stanton when she moved here, and hadn't had time to get acquainted with many of her neighbors, what with a new baby every 14 months."

"Fool thing!" Sally murmured, finding pity in her heart for the bedraggled drug Mrs. Bybee's words pictured so vividly. But those too-merciful babies had a mother. What she wanted to know was—did she, Sally Ford, have a mother?

"Then a memory, so long submerged that she did not realize that it existed in her subconscious mind, pushed up spilled out surprisingly. "There was a big oak tree in the corner of the yard. I used to swing. Someone pushed the swing—someone—she tumbled for more, but the memory failed."

"It's still there, and there's still a swing," Mrs. Bybee admitted. "One of those dirty-faced little brats was climbing up and down the ropes like a monkey. Well, I reckon that's where you used to live, right enough. I asked this woman—name of Hickson—if any of her neighbors had lived there many years, and she pointed to the house next door and said 'Old Lady Bangs' owned the house and had lived there for more'n 20 years. This old Mrs. Bangs—"

"Bangs!" Sally cried. "Bangs! It was Gramma Bangs who swung me! I remember now! Gramma Bangs. She made me a rag doll with shoe-button eyes and the old lady night for a long time after I went to the orphanage because mama hadn't brought my doll. Did you see Gramma Bangs? Oh, Mrs. Bybee, if I could go to see her again!"

Mrs. Bybee's stern, long, hatchet-shaped face had softened marvelously, but at Sally's eager request she shook her head emphatically. "Not with the police looking for you and Dave. Yes, I saw her. She's all crippled up with rheumatism and was tickled to death to see Nora Ford's sister. That's who I said I was, your know. But it pretty near got me into trouble. The old lady look for a long time I knew a lot of things about you that I didn't know, and wouldn't have told me just what I'd come to find out if I hadn't used my brain in stringing her along. I had to go mighty easy asking about you, since it was my 'sister' I was supposed to be so hot up over finding, but lucky for you she'd been reading the papers and knew that you were in trouble."

"Oh!" Sally moaned, covering her hot face with her little brown-painted hands. "Then Gramma Bangs thinks I'm a bad girl—oh! Did you tell her I'm not?"

"What do you take me for—a blamed fool?" Mrs. Bybee demanded heatedly. "I didn't let on I'd ever seen you in my life. But it was something she let spill when she was talking about you and the story in the papers coming to me the low-down on the whole thing."

"Oh, what?" Sally implored, almost frantic with impatience.

"Well, she said, 'You can't blame Nora for putting Sally in the orphanage when the money stopped coming, seeing as how she was sick and needing an operation and everything. But it pret' near broke her heart—that's what the old dame said—'

"But—I don't understand," Sally protested, her sapphire eyes clouding with bewilderment. "The money? What money? Did she mean my—father?"

"I thought that at first, too," Mrs. Bybee nodded her bobbed gray head with satisfaction. "But lucky I didn't say so, or I'd have give the whole show away. I just 'yes, indeed' her, and went on. Reckon she thought I might be taking exceptions to the way she'd been running on about how pitiful it was for 'that dear little child' to be put in a orphan's home, so she tried to show me that my 'sister' had done the only thing she could do under the circumstances. She could do under the 'circumstances.'"

"Pretty soon it all come out. 'Nora,' she said, 'told me not to breathe a word to a soul, but seeing as how you're her sister and probably know all about it, I reckon it won't do no harm at all to tell you. Then she told me that Nora Ford had no more idea'n a jack rabbit whose baby you was—'

"Then she wasn't my mother!" Sally cried out in such a heart-broken voice that Mrs. Bybee reached across the card table and patted her withered fingers.

"No, she wasn't your mother," the showman's wife conceded with brusque sympathy. "But I can't see as how it leaves you any worse off than you was before. One thing ought to comfort you—you know I wasn't your own mother that turned you over to an orphanage and then beat it, leaving no address. Seems like," she went on briskly, "from what old Lady Bangs told me, that Nora Ford had been hired to take you when she was a maid in a swell home in New York, and she had to beat it—that was part of the agreement—so there never, would be any standal on your real mother. She didn't know whose kid you was—so the old lady says—and when the money orders stopped coming, she didn't have the least idea how to trace you people. She supposed they was dead—and I do, too. So it looks like you'd better make up your mind to being an orphan—"

"But, oh, Mrs. Bybee!" Sally cried piteously, her eyes wide blue pools of misery and shame. "My real mother must have been—bad, or she wouldn't have been ashamed of having me! Oh, I wish I hadn't found out!" And she laid her head down on her arms on the card table and burst into tears.

"Don't be a little fool!" Mrs. Bybee admonished her severely. "Reckon it ain't up to you, Sally Ford, to see yourself up in judgment on your mother, whoever she may have been."

"But she sent me away," Sally sobbed brokenly. "She was ashamed of me, and then forgot all about me. Oh, I wish I'd never been born!"

"I reckon every kid's said that a hundred times before she's old enough to have good sense," Mrs. Bybee scoffed. "Now, dry up and scoot to the dress tent to put some more make-up on your face. The show goes on. And take it from me, child, you're better off than a lot of girls that join up with the carnival. You're young and pretty and you've got a boy friend that'd commit murder for you and pret' near did it, and you've got a job that gives you a bed and cakes, and enough loose change to buy yourself some glad rags by the time we hit the Big Town—"

"The Big Town?" Sally raised her head, interest drawing unwillingly in her grieving blue eyes. "You mean—New York?"

"Sure I mean New York. We go into winter quarters there in November, and if you stick to the show I may be able to land you a job in the chorus. God knows you are pretty enough—just the type to make every six-footer want to fight any other man that look at you." "Oh, you're good to me!" Sally blinked away the last of her tears, which had streaked her brown make-up. "I'll stick if the police don't get me—and David. And," she paused at the door, her eyes shy and sweet, "thank you very much for trying to help me find my—my mother."

As she sped down the aisle of the car in her noiseless little red sandals, she was startled to see what looked like a sheaf of yellow, dried grass whisked through the closing door of the woman's dressing room. Then comprehension dawned. "I wonder," she took time from the contemplation of her desolating disappointment to muse, "what Nita is doing here. I wonder if she followed me—if she heard anything. I wouldn't want Nita to know about my mother. But I'll tell David. Will he despise me because my mother was—bad?"

Pupil Killed, Many Hurt When Train Hits School Bus

MARLBURY, Wis., April 11.—One girl was dead, and other fatalities were feared today as a consequence of the crash of a passenger train into a school bus bearing two dozen children homeward.
