Most States Expecting Large Money Surplus

United Press International
While private industry and the federal government wallow in debt, many state governments are rolling in money—enough to pay off two-thirds of this year's federal deficit of $6.3 billion. With several sharp exceptions, officials in state after state estimate they will wind up their fiscal year with healthy surpluses. More than 40 of the 50 states are in the black, to the tune of a combined total of $4.1 billion, with California and Texas accounting for almost half.

But newly elected politicians already have plans to spend it, and inflation and recession are eating away at it.

Texas leads the nation with a huge projected budget surplus of about $1.5 billion, the result of higher than anticipated income from sales taxes and the soaring price of gas and oil.

California's "cut, squeeze and trim" $500 million surplus is outgoing Gov. Ronald Reagan's pride and joy. The surplus last year was $800 million, but Reagan and the legislature temporarily cut the sales tax by 1 per cent and granted an income tax rebate.

Other states are not so fortunate. New Jersey, with no state income tax and a sales tax hard hit by recession, faces a deficit next year which officials estimate at anywhere from $240 million to $1 billion.

Massachusetts could have a deficit as high as $316 million because of declining revenues. Connecticut, Vermont and Maine also face possible deficits.

Rhode Island and New Hampshire will have to strain to keep their budgets in balance.

In Virginia, a drop in corporate and individual taxes may put the state more than $16 million in the red next year.

Many states reflect a surplus for a simple reason: they are forbidden by law to operate in the red.

In Indiana, State Budget Director Edison Thuma said his state has a projected $139.8 million surplus because it is unconstitutional to run a deficit, and impossible to run a competent government on a zero balance.

Other states which don't reflect a budget surplus have nest eggs set aside to help cushion hard times.

Alaska, for example, received nearly $1 billion in oil lease sales in 1969. Since, then, however, the state has been spending both the interest and some the principal in attempts to catch up on badly needed services it had not been in the position to provide before.

States with surpluses are fighting to keep them. Illinois, which had about $300 million in surplus this year, faces soaring welfare costs that could cut it to $100 million.

Some New York officials say the state's surplus will run about $20 million next spring because of higher than estimated income from income and sales taxes caused by inflation. But incoming Democrats say any surplus will be eaten away by rising costs.

Michigan had a $208.3 million surplus this year, but most of that is melting away because of property and income tax credits. On Nov. 5, voters also repealed the state sales tax on food and prescription drugs.

Israeli Warplanes Hit Arab Targets

United Press International
Israeli warplanes Saturday attacked suspected Arab guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon for the first time in almost three weeks.

At the same time, the Soviet Union reaffirmed its support of Palestinian statehood in a communique marking the end of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat's Moscow visit.

Arab sources said the PLO will open a diplomatic mission in the Soviet capital soon.

An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said all planes returned safely to base after hitting "terrorist targets north of Zarit," an Israeli border settlement in western Galilee.

Arab newsmen said four American-made Phantom fighter-bombers bombed and rocketed fields and hills surrounding three villages in south Lebanon for 15 minutes, damaging vegetable and tobacco crops, but causing no casualties.

The raid was aimed at the areas surrounding the villages of Kafra, Yater and Hariss in the Bini Jbeil sector, between four and six miles north of the Lebanese-Israeli border.

When the Israeli planes withdrew, the inhabitants of Kafra staged a demonstration and cut a road in the region to demand stronger government protection, the newsmen said.

The Israeli airstrike was the first since Nov. 11, when planes hit targets near Hasbaya, in the southeast Arkoub region of Lebanon.

Since then, Israeli artillery has regularly pounded positions across the frontier and an army patrol inside Lebanon killed five guerrillas in a clash Thursday night.

The Golan Heights was reported quiet following the U.N. Security Council's approval Friday night of a six-month renewal of international supervision in the military disengagement zone separating Israeli and Syrian troops. But military sources said Israel continued its alert along the frontier, although some reserves called up two weeks ago had been demobilized.

Arafat, reported by Arab sources to be pleased with his Moscow trip, arrived in Belgrade Saturday for talks with President Tito and other Yugoslav leaders.

The Soviet communique again urged convening the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East.

It said the two sides welcomed the decision taken on the establishment of independent Palestinian national authority under PLO leadership in the territory of Palestine which will be liberated in the course of withdrawal of Israeli troops from captured Arab lands.

It said the Soviet Union supports the Palestinians' "inalienable rights to self-determination and creation of their own national home, up to formation of their statehood."

Public Sales Clinic Gains More Interest

Unusual interest in being shown in the upcoming Patterson Public, Customer and Employee Relations Sales Clinic scheduled in Pampa Jan. 14 and 15.

Under sponsorship of the Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Daily-News, the clinic will be conducted in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Sessions will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. on both Tuesday and Wednesday nights, Jan. 14-15.

The clinic is designed for agencies, businesses and individuals interested in improving public, customer and employee relations.

Subjects to be covered will include achieving success, approaching people, customer buying motives, organizing thinking, presenting ideas effectively, telephone techniques, quoting prices, overcoming resistance, sales closing, remembering names, effective speaking and suggestion selling.

Gene McMeen, a Patterson representative in the area to confer with businessmen and to speak to civic clubs in the remaining weeks before the clinic opens on Jan. 14, may be contacted at the Chamber of Commerce office in the Hughes Bldg (telephone 669-3241).

Chamber Manager E.O. Wedgworth said the clinic, which has been held in Pampa previously with favorable response, also has been highly acclaimed in sessions held in El Paso, Odessa, Midland, Lubbock and Amarillo.

In Pampa, Wedgworth stated, it will be open to men and women from the sales, parts, service and credit departments, secretaries, bookkeepers and members of office staffs, tellers, officers, executives, supervisors and shop and factory workers.

'Nice Funeral Service' Slated For H.L. Hunt

DALLAS (UPI) — The body of billionaire Haroldson Lafayette "H.L." Hunt, wealthiest of Texas oilmen, was put on display Saturday in a copper casket in a "regular" 15 by 20 foot stateroom of a funeral home that faces a busy highway.

Hunt, whose fortune has been estimated at from $1.5 to $5 billion, died Friday in Baylor Medical Center of complications arising from old age. He was 85.

The body was put on display just before noon Saturday. It was dressed in a dark suit, blue shirt and blue bow tie.

There were few flowers in the stateroom as it was opened and a few mourners.

A funeral director declined to go into details about the arrangements for the wealthiest man ever to need his services.

"We do not discuss what families pay for funerals," he said. "Anyway, how is it possible to say what is a proper funeral for a man of Mr. Hunt's means. You can say he will have a nice funeral service."

The body will be on display in Sparkman-Hillcrest Northwest Highway Funeral Home until 8 p.m. Saturday night, from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday and from 8 a.m. to noon on Monday.

At noon Monday, the body will be moved to First Baptist Church of which Hunt was a member. The pastor, Dr. Wallie A. Criswell, will conduct a funeral service at 2 p.m.

After the service, the body will be returned to Sparkman-Hillcrest Memorial Park, which surrounds the funeral home, and buried beside the grave of his first wife, Lydia Bunker Hunt. She died May 6, 1955 of a stroke.

The arrangements for Hunt's funeral were like his lifestyle — low key. Though one of the world's wealthiest men, he bought readymade suits, reported six days a week to a plain office with a vera (a species of cactus) plants for decorations and until recent years brought his own lunch in a paper bag.

In recent years his secretary had prepared his lunch of beef bouillon, red cabbage slaw, cherries, pecans, dates, celery, onions and orange juice. He thought there was a special virtue in red cabbage.

Hunt was born Feb. 17, 1889, in Ramsey, Ill., to which his father, a Confederate veteran from Arkansas, moved because he feared the terrors of post Civil War Reconstruction.

When the Mideast began to produce big amounts of oil, Hunt shared in the profits because he had holdings there. He also was a big real estate owner and produced drugs and cosmetics.

Hunt would never say whether he had as much money as people thought, if indeed he knew how much he was really worth.

Fair Skies Linger Over Area

Fair skies were expected to reign over the area today in the wake of a cold front which lingered in the vicinity over the weekend.

Temperatures were forecast to begin a slight warming trend through Monday, with a high today in the middle 40s and a high Monday near 50. Overnight low should reach into the low 40s.

Skies were generally fair over Pampa Saturday, with the high remaining in the chilly upper 20s.

A cold front which sent temperatures plunging to 10 degrees above zero in the Panhandle and glazd highways kept its icy grip on the state Saturday.

The front moved out of the state Friday taking most of the freezing rain, sleet and snow with it. However, freezing or near freezing temperatures continued Saturday with only a slight warming trend expected Sunday.

Temperatures stayed well above freezing in the Rio Grande Valley. The lowest temperature in the state was 13 degrees, which was reported in Dalhart Friday night.

Strong, gusty winds pushed the cold front across East Texas and along the Gulf Coast, where small craft warnings were hoisted.

One inch of snow fell at Wichita Falls, coating bridges and overpasses with ice and limiting visibility.

Sleet mixed with rain invaded the Dallas-Fort Worth area and most of the dismal weather was confined to North Central Texas. Only scattered showers were reported in Northeast and Southeast Texas.

Skies cleared over most of the state Saturday.

Lows Saturday night were expected to range from the teens in the Panhandle to the 40s in Southeastern Texas.

REVIVES TRADITION

Ford Sees Army, Navy Clash

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Reviving a tradition allowed to die more than a decade ago, sports-loving President Ford cut short his working day at the White House Saturday and joined more than 90,000 other fans at the 75th annual Army-Navy football battle.

He was the first President to attend an Army-Navy game since John F. Kennedy presided over the 1962 clash, and only the second to do so in more than 20 years.

Ford tossed a coin to get the gridiron classic under way in Philadelphia's John F. Kennedy Stadium, then took his seat on the Navy side of the field. Navy kicked off.

The two teams were fighting for the Commander in Chief Trophy, first captured by Army but taken over last year by Navy in a humiliating 51-0 rout of the Cadets.

Publicly maintaining strict neutrality despite his World War II experience as a Navy officer, the President agreed to follow tradition, by sitting on the Middle side of the field for the opening half of the game and then switching to the Cadet side for the final half.

"I'm rooting half one way and half the other," he said at the Philadelphia Naval Yard after stepping hatless but wearing a fur-collared suede coat and tan boots in the crisp November breeze, from the helicopter in which he flew from Washington.

Privately, however, Ford was understood to be rooting for Navy. The Midshipmen were favored to win this year's contest.

On his way into the stadium, Ford passed about a dozen demonstrators clad in olive green fatigues and protesting the President's veto earlier in the week of a bill to increase education benefits for veterans. One held a sign reading: "Vietnam Vets are Tired of Biting the Bullet for OMB (the Office of Management and Budget)."

Inside the field, however, Ford was among friends. During the halftime he was presented the silver coin he had tossed to start the game, and just before he moved across to the Army side of the field one cadet pinned a big black and yellow "Go Army" button on his lapel.

On his way across the field, Ford paid his respects first to the goat that was the Navy's mascot, and then to the Army's mule.

He traded his overcoat and sports jacket for an Army cardigan sweater someone had given him.

A man shouted: "Mr. President, wouldn't you rather be down there playing?" Ford smiled and replied: "No, I'm a better spectator."

He told an interviewer on the field: "I didn't dare mention that I might bring the Army luck when I left the Navy side, but I guess I can cheer a little for the Army now." At the time, Navy was leading 17 to 0.

Until 1951, the appearance of the President at the annual academy clash was an informal but firm tradition.

The election of Dwight D. Eisenhower, a one-time West Point player who knew he could not remain impartial and therefore stayed away, saw the practice fall into disuse.

Hazardous Roads Hike Death Tolls

United Press International
Despite hazardous driving conditions brought by the winter's first severe cold front, Texans took to the highways during the long holiday and the state's death toll climbed steadily.

A United Press International survey showed 24 persons were killed accidentally in the state since the death count began at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Eighteen died in traffic accidents, two in a two-train crash and two in a chemical plant explosion. One person drowned and another was accidentally shot.

The National Weather Service said an inch of snow was on the ground in the Panhandle Saturday and some bridges were iced as temperatures dropped below freezing in all areas but the Rio Grande Valley.

Skies cleared Saturday but freezing or near freezing temperatures were to return to most of the state overnight.

James C. Kaiser, 28, of Port Arthur, and Darly A. Harper, 35, of Kountze were killed in a Goodyear Chemical Plant explosion Friday night at Beaumont which also injured 10 workers.

Alan Curtis Kelley, 32, of Austin and his 3 year old daughter, Shannon Yvonne were killed in a one-car rollover south of Austin on FM 3041. Shannon would have been four Dec. 8.

David Earl Kotrla, 20, of Weimer also died in a one-car crash, the Department of Public Safety said. Kotrla's car ran off a Weimer street early Saturday.

Sibyl McCrary Rozelle, 47, of Rusk was struck broadside and killed in a two-car collision Saturday, just south of Jacksonville at the intersection of Loop 456 and FM 768 in Cherokee County, troopers said.

Rumaldo Aguirre, 46, of Lyford was struck and killed Friday night in an auto-pedestrian accident on U.S. 77 south of Sebastian in Cameron County.

A HELPING HAND — Six-year-old Jay Williams, a student at Austin Elementary School, drops a few coins into the Salvation Army Christmas kettle downtown to aid those less-fortunate than himself. Bill Smith, Salvation Army volunteer worker, mans the kettle on the opening day of the annual drive. Jay is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Williams.

SLUMP IS MEDICINAL

Inflation still No. 1 villain

The White House is now acknowledging that the U.S. economy is "moving into a recession." This gets President Ford into the company of economists who have been using the term with greater frequency as the mass of economic statistics accumulated over the past several months.

The debate over the right label for our economic condition reminds us of the arguments that arose in the early 1950s over whether the clash of armies in Korea was a police action or a war. No matter what it was called, it had to be fought.

Whether we are in a recession, or whether we use the term "stagflation" to describe our plight, the combination of inflation and a business slump is serious and getting more serious. It is a battle that has to be fought.

The big question is what the "lame duck" 93rd Congress coming back from an election recess will be inclined to do. House Speaker Carl Albert has remarked that he doubts if anyone expects Congress to "turn around the worldwide inflation by Thanksgiving." No one does, but with layoffs in the auto industry now numbering 84,000 and the next calculation of the unemployment rate almost sure to exceed 6 per cent, the current Congress may find it hard to plead that it is too "lame" to work, too "lame" to respond to cries for some meaningful moves to counter inflation or recession or both.

In the wings is a 94th Congress, to be seated in January, even more weighted with liberal Democrats than the 93rd and carrying an election "mandate" to do something for the economy. Regardless of what prescription the administration's economists might be writing, the new Congress may feel compelled to grab the ball and run with it in some new direction.

This does not augur well for Mr. Ford's hope to keep the government wedded to the "old-time religion" of fiscal prudence and monetary restraint. Achieving a balanced budget in the next fiscal year — a key element of anti-inflation strategy — may be impossible without a tax increase or major cuts in costly social programs. The new Congress is not likely to regard those alternatives as in keeping with its "mandate."

The President's earlier reluctance to say that there is a recession under way has had a beneficial effect. It very properly emphasized that our No. 1 problem is inflation, and that the business slump, no matter how bad it gets, has to be endured with all its consequences as part of the process of getting rid of the inflationary virus. However, if the current Congress or the new one takes the approach that curing inflation is less important than treating its symptoms, retreating to economic controls or a new spree of deficit spending, then the outlook for returning to a truly healthy economy — one that is free, stable and productive — is bleak indeed.

A misunderstanding?

It must be a misunderstanding. Reports that the lame-duck session of Congress will consider proposals to raise the pay of its members by $15,000 annually and to give similar increases to other federal officials just don't jibe with the campaign rhetoric of recent weeks.

It is time, we've been told to get a grip on spending, to prune the budget, to reverse the inflationary spiral that has its roots in federal deficits spanning several years.

In the wake of the election results, which some congressional leaders have called a "mandate" to put a lid on living costs, the hinted attempt to raise salaries merits the description applied by retiring Rep. H. R. Gross.

It is, the Iowa Republican said, "an almost incredible, unconscionable move at this moment."

The current $42,500 salary of representatives and senators is augmented by generous expense allowances and numerous "fringe benefits," ranging from cut-rate haircuts to free tax assistance. Each representative is entitled to 16 employees on his personal staff — at salaries up to $37,000 a year. Many senators have between 40 and 50 staff members.

The cost of operating Congress has jumped from $42 million 20 years ago to $328 million this year. The operations budget has grown 15 times as fast as the population Congress serves. Some nervous capital observers suggest that unless the lawmakers take a severe look at their own practices, the United States Congress will require more than $1 billion to function in 1984.

Almost certainly, the congressional leadership will tell the American people it's all a mistake and that Congress is, after all, going to endure the same sacrifices and economies it expects from the inflation-pinched public.

IT ISN'T WHETHER YOU WIN OR LOSE, BUT HOW YOU PLAY THE GAME. HOWEVER, HERE ARE THE SCORES.

Specimens of Current Folly

By MAX RAFFERTY

In any attempt to discover what's wrong with us these days, it's better to concentrate on a few typical examples rather than to try to take in the whole vast, creepy tapestry. Here are a few cases in point.

1 — Auburn University's Dru McGowen says sexist words like "manpower," "serviceman" and "workmanlike" are out. Seems they "discredit" women. If this moonstruck trend is permitted to progress unwated, it will presume, change "The Story of Mankind" to "The Story of Personkind," metamorphose Virgil's opening line to "I sing of arms and the person," and transform the title of Millet's famous painting into "The You-Know-What With the Hoe."

The search continues, Dru tells us confidently, for a neuter title which will include married women, unmarried women, men and presumably eunuchs.

2 — Pleasanton's, Calif., warden Water Lumpkin describes his new prison, which is coeducational, overlooks an emerald lake, features rock music, patio chairs and comfy dormitories and prescribes flashy street clothes instead of those nasty old stripes. "It's great. Our biggest problem is sex."

I'll buy that, Warden Lumpkin restricts the biological urge of his inmates (opps' summer resort members) to holding hands, but they've got everything else: billiards, shuffleboard, TV, private rooms.

After all, your guests include some of California's finest bank robbers, air pirates and dope smugglers.

3 — Aggression psychotherapist George Bach says we've got the typical American family all wrong.

"Its main dish is conflict," he bellows. "Niceness is phony."

He encourages "open but structured expressions of aggression," with lots of stomping, shouting and fist-hammering. One of his lab assistants in Los Angeles puts in charmingly: "Structuring your anger is like potty training. It's easier to let go but it's better to hold it for an appropriate time."

Come to think of it, Al Capone had a similar philosophy. He always structured his aggressions toward appropriate times. Like St. Valentine's Day.

4 — Raleigh's, N.C., assistant school superintendent, William Freitag, told teacher Janice Patterson to knock off letting first-grade pupils observe one minute of silent prayer daily. Even silence is suspect nowadays.

Mrs. Patterson resigned. "My conscience leaves me no choice," she said. "God deserves at least one minute a day."

And that's about the way it goes, folks. Criminals are entertained in country clubs. Family harmony is denied by psychiatrists while anger and hatred are played up. Teachers are forced to resign because they let their pupils say silent prayers of their own choosing. And female bedlamites take the shears to the language of Shakespeare and Milton in order to get even with males for bringing home and laying at their feet the mammoth steaks, the mink pelts and gold bracelets of the last 10,000 years.

Potomac Fever

Now that Ford admitted there is a recession, he may call on Dear Abby for advice.

With so many stone-age Republicans defeated, GOP moderates expect their party elephant to be another Secretariat.

Now there's actually a LOSE button for "Lights Out. Save Energy." It's the successor to WIN.

Senator Dole said Ford would have to toughen his "Boy Scout image." Slogans won't get us out of the woods.

Dear Abby

He expects bedroom entertainment

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman, age 36. A nice looking man rang my doorbell saying his car was stalled and he wanted to use my telephone to call for help.

I let him in, he made the call, and while waiting, I fixed coffee and we sat in my kitchen drinking coffee and getting acquainted. I really started to like this man.

He said he wasn't married and it would be nice to see me again. He gave me his name and phone number and I gave him mine. A week passed and he didn't call, so I called him, and asked (in a joking way) if he had lost my number.

He said no, he was just going to call me. I asked him if he wanted to come over for supper that night and he said yes. He came, bringing a box of candy.

I'm sorry to say that he didn't waste much time letting me know he expected to be entertained in the bedroom. I said I wasn't that kind of person.

He left rather early and acted disappointed. He told me to call him if I ever changed my mind.

I really want to see him again, Abby, but I hate to call him. What do you suggest?

MISSING HIM

DEAR MISSING: If you call him, he'll assume that you've decided to entertain him in the bedroom. Have you?

DEAR ABBY: My husband was a good football player in college, but he never was a star. Now he seems determined that our 16-year-old son, Jimmy, will be a star no matter what.

Last year Jimmy broke his leg in the middle of the football season. This year, during the first game, he tore the cartilage in his knee.

To my husband, Jimmy is merely "out for the season." He's already telling Jimmy, "Wait 'til next year, Tiger!" I know Jimmy doesn't really share his father's enthusiasm for football, but he hates to let his father down. I am afraid for Jimmy to play again next year. How can I handle this?

OUTSIDE LINEBACKER

DEAR OUT: Have a mom-to-son talk with Jimmy. If he doesn't really want gridiron glory at the expense of his bones, then both of you dig in and make a goal line stand against your husband's obvious obsession. It's time Dad learned "You can't win 'em all."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 52-year-old live-in housekeeper for a middle-aged widower and his teen-age son. My problem concerns a woman I've never met. She keeps calling my employer from 10 P.M. until she gets him. (I usually go to bed at 10:30.)

If Mr. M. isn't home, I offer to take her number and have him call her when he comes in, but that isn't good enough. She rings up every 15 minutes until she gets him. Sometimes he doesn't get home until 1 A.M., so you can imagine what this does to my sleep. When she finally gets him, she talks for as long as an hour.

Last night he didn't get in until 1:15. After talking to her for half an hour, I heard him say that he was exhausted and he'd call her from his office on Monday. Ten minutes later she called again. She'd forgotten something!

What would you do with such a pest?

IRRITATED IN CALIF.

DEAR IRRITATED: All you can do is complain to your boss. If her calls are unwelcome, he could (a) get an unlisted number, or (b) ask her not to phone after 10. If he doesn't do "a" or "b," and your sleep is more important than your job, you could give him your notice.

Rearview Mirror

THANKSGIVING Day has come and gone and Christmas is just around that proverbial corner. By now the left-over turkey pieces should be all polished off with nothing left but turkey soup and a cranberry or two.

But, coming up — The Christmas holiday shopping rush, pushing and shoving in the store aisles, pawing merchandise that has been pawed and pawed by others searching for something to wrap in a pretty package for Aunt Minnie and Uncle Ben.

You probably have noticed — if you pay attention to calendars — that there are only 20 more shopping days until Christmas. But, many will wait until the afternoon of Dec. 24 to make the final dash into stores for that last-minute gift you almost forgot to get for cousin Hercules who already has everything.

All of this is aside from the shock one gets every time the price tag comes into view and causes a second look into the billfold to see if what's there is going to cover everybody on the Christmas list or whether you will have to mortgage your soul to the company store.

INFLATION has hit the world of Christmas gifts just like it has hit everything else. Buying toys for the kids is something to drive parents up the wall.

The doll you used to buy for little Susie at a buck-fifty now comes at around $10 to $15. Buying an electric train for Johnnie is like taking the loss on a pen of cattle.

Then there's a fellow who feels he must get a Christmas gift for his girl. For him, here's a tip. We all know diamonds are a girl's best friend.

So, if you are planning to marry the girl — buy her a diamond and you have at least half a chance of making an investment and cashing in on it after you're married. In this community property state you will still own half of it.

Legal advice given here is for free. The fellow who kneads the dough for the Rearview Mirror loaf of bread each Sunday has not been admitted to the bar.

TALKED WITH Santa Claus when he was in town last week and he said he believes this Christmas of 1974 is going to be one of the roughest he has had for many years. That's from the standpoint of being able to provide everything the sand-box crowd is asking for in their letters to him.

Some of it he won't be able to bring because it just isn't in stock and a lot of it he won't be able to deliver to boys and girls on his list because of inflation.

Some of the fancy merchandized toys and games, according to Santa, are beyond the price range of many parents who assist old St. Nick in financing the load he carries across the nation on Christmas Eve. You can no longer get two oranges for a nickel or find a 5-cent bag of candy.

That's why it is important for those who can afford it to heed the appeal of the Salvation Army. Contribute what you can to the S.A. kettles so that children of needy families — parents who do not have the money to buy Christmas presents — will have a merry Christmas, too.

The money-the Salvation Army collects between now and Christmas will go to provide baskets of food for indigent families and buy toys and goodies for their children. The money you give will make your Christmas merrier with knowledge that you have helped bring cheer to others at the Yuletide.

SCHOOL HOUSE Kitty reminded us the other day there had been no comment in the Mirror about Pampa's new school superintendent, Dr. Dan Long, who has been on the job now for nearly three months.

S.H.K. reports she has learned that folks throughout the district like the way he administers — especially the invitation he issued to district patrons to write or contact his office with suggestions, questions or complaints which might help in the formation of school policies.

The invitation came at one of those recent informal meetings in neighborhood schools to encourage parents of district students to relay opinions concerning school business and functions to the superintendent and members of the school board.

About the only comment is that it seems like an excellent idea and Dr. Long is to be complimented for trying to get the "feel" of the public with respect to school policy.

Book Protest Continues

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Waving flags and anti-communist placards, more than 2,000 persons marched through city streets crowded with Christmas shoppers Saturday in a renewed protest against controversial school books.

The demonstration was the first in three weeks by clergy-led parents who believe a new series of texts in Kanawha County's schools are obscene and un-American.

Bundled in heavy clothing and carrying umbrellas against the cold, rainy weather, the protesters massed at the Civic Center, a sports arena, and paraded through the downtown area before returning to the arena for a series of speeches.

"This is a national rally against those books," said the Rev. Avis Hill, dressed in frontier clothes, as he led the march.

Dozens of signs said, "No peaceful coexistence with satanic communism."

Others read, "Trash is for burning," "God save America" and "Wish we had more people like sweet Alice"—the last in reference to anti-textbook school board member Alice Moore.

At the Civic Center, protesters lined up at tables to purchase pamphlets and books with titles such as "Thugs and Communists," "Henry Kissinger—Soviet Agent" and "More Deadly Than War—The Communist Revolution in America."

The marchers wore red, white and blue armbands. Some carried signs saying they were from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut.

The protest against 325 new school textbooks approved this year for Kanawha County's schools is more than three months old.

School attendance at one time was only about two-thirds of the county's 45,000 pupils because thousands were kept home by parents feeling the books were unfit for classrooms. Attendance has been normal recently.

Hill, who with the Revs. Ezra Graley and Marvin Horan has been a leader in the anti-book protest, said the issue had become a "springboard for general resentment against arrogant authority that controls more and more of the people's lives while disrespecting their wishes."

Selassie Signs Over Fortune To Aid Victims

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Deposed Emperor Haile Selassie has freely signed over his entire personal and family fortune—unofficially estimated at $1.5 billion—to aid victims of Ethiopia's disastrous drought.

The military government announced Saturday.

The communique said Selassie signed over his fortune "of his own free will," and not to save his life as widely reported.

Selassie's entire income from investments, corporate stockholdings, bank deposits and "all jewels and precious stones" would be used by the drought relief commission set up late last year, the communique said.

It did not say how much money was involved but financial circles estimated the 82-year-old emperor had deposited up to $1.5 billion in secret Swiss bank accounts.

The military communique said Selassie signed a letter transferring his family's fortune to account No. 246 at the Bank of Ethiopia—the account of the Drought Commission.

The government's denials that it intended to execute the "Lion of Judah" did not dampen speculation that Selassie signed in fear of his life.

Lt Gen. Aman Andom, former head of the ruling Provisional Military Council, was killed when he allegedly resisted arrest.

Boston Crowd Gives Support To Integration

BOSTON (UPI) — A predominantly white crowd gathered on historic Boston Common Saturday to demonstrate support for the court-ordered school integration which brought flashes of street violence and massive absenteeism to this racially troubled city.

The rally was highlighted by an address by Mrs. Coretta Scott King, wife of assassinated civil rights leader, Martin Luther King, Jr.

The demonstrators, who met before a statue commemorating black enlistees who fought in the Civil War, walked singing civil rights songs for three blocks from the state house to city hall, where Mrs. King spoke to them.

Mrs. King told the gathering that the problem plaguing the Boston public school system in the wake of the federal desegregation order was not really busing.

"The conduct of certain opponents of busing has made the issue one of racism in its broadest aspects," she said.

"Can anyone believe that people using or condoning violence as well as vulgar racial epithets are making a democratic protest against busing? No. They are making an undemocratic assault on equality."

Mrs. King said for that reason it was important for everyone, including those not fully committed to busing, to oppose attacks on school children and integration.

Mrs. King conceded that the process of integration would not be easy. She said it must be realized that this generation of black and white youths is paying the price of 300 years of racial oppression.

However, she said, "there can be no return to the ugly stains of the past."

PIF Schedules Annual Meeting

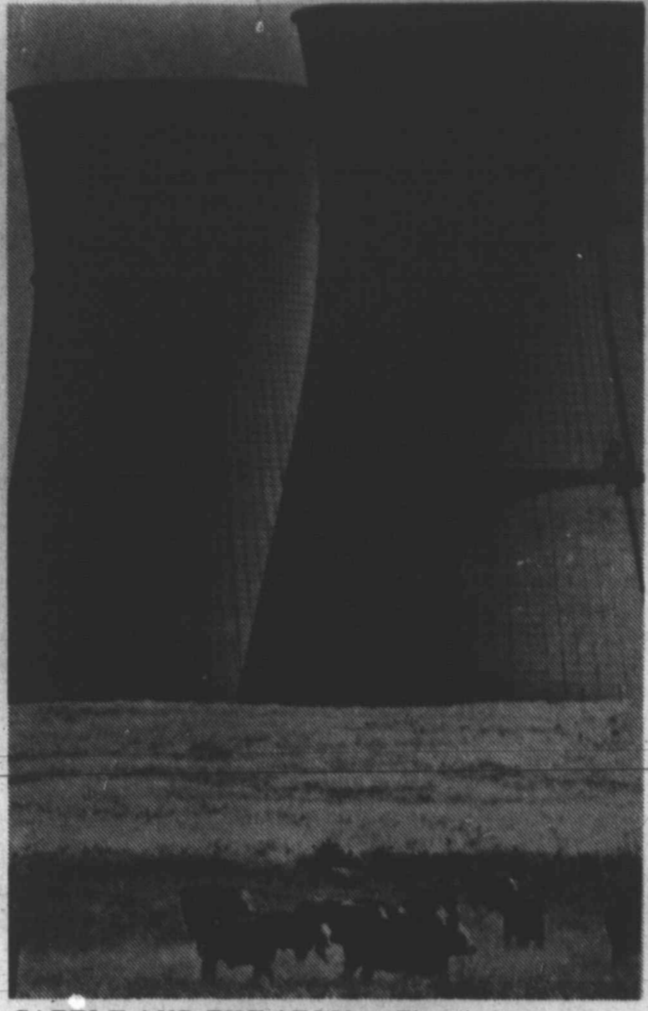

The annual membership meeting of the Pampa Industrial Foundation will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Kay Fancher, foundation president, said a slate of nominees from which five directors will be elected is to be presented at the business meeting. Names of the nominees will go on the ballot. The five to be elected will each serve a three-year term.

Board members whose terms expire this month are Ray Kuhn, Fred Neslage, E.L. Green Jr., Frank Culbertson and Harold Barrett.

Fancher said another highlight of the meeting will be a detailed report of PIF finances.

Other current officers of the foundation are: Harold Barrett, E.L. Green Jr. and Fred Neslage, vice presidents; Aubrey L. Steele and Floyd Watson, treasurers; E.O. Wedgeworth, executive vice president and secretary; Bill Chambliss, auditor, and Don Lane, legal counsel.

OF ARMS PACT Kissinger Ready To Face Critics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger completed his diplomatic swing through China and Japan Saturday and returned to Washington to face critics of the prospective new U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms agreement.

Kissinger's plane landed at Andrews Air Force base at 2:27 p.m. EST.

Officials traveling with Kissinger said he was especially anxious to deal with the critical reaction to the prospective strategic arms limitation agreement reached in outline form by President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev at their Vladivostok summit last week.

The Ford-Brezhnev outline dealt with limits to be set upon multiple-warhead missiles. Critics in congress said it set the levels so far above current stocks that another arms race would develop to fulfill quotas.

When Ford returned home from Vladivostok last Sunday, Kissinger flew separately to Peking for diplomatic talks with Chinese leaders. He arranged for Ford to visit China next year, and officials disclosed the trip will probably occur in the second half of the year, probably after Brezhnev's June visit to the United States.

FOUND IN RUBBLE Two Die In Explosion At Goodyear Factory

BEAUMONT, Tex. (UPI) — Firefighters digging through the rubble left from a series of explosions that destroyed 25 per cent of the $5 million Goodyear synthetic rubber plant found the bodies of two workers Saturday.

Ten persons were injured in the blasts Friday night and homes were damaged up to six miles away. Originally plant officials thought there were no fatalities.

"We discovered the bodies early this morning. We just couldn't get in there before then," Goodyear spokesman Bob Rowley said. "We thought were home free, but we weren't."

The victims were identified as James C. Kaizer, 28, and Daryl A. Harper, 35, both of the Beaumont area.

Rowley said the explosions apparently were caused by a hydrocarbon leak after a fire broke out in the plant's isoprene unit where the company makes a substance vital to the manufacturing of synthetic rubber.

Firemen were trying to contain the fire when the first blast struck sending flames and fireballs 500 feet into the air. A 180-foot distillation tower melted in the heat and collapsed.

"About one-fourth of the plant was extensively damaged," Rowley said. "All the power is gone. Even the clocks have stopped. We certainly won't be able to resume operations for at least a week."

There were 15 men in the isoprene unit when the fire broke out. The 10 workers injured were in good condition with mostly minor burns except Ronny Hively, 33, who suffered first and second degree burns to the face and lacerations to the scalp.

A college gymnasium more than 10 miles from the plant was rocked by the explosion during a basketball game and the Department of Public Safety said the blasts were heard or felt as far away as 35 miles.

"I was looking toward the plant," said Buddy Woods, who lives six miles north of the plant. "There were two immediate explosions that rocked my house and damaged the wall in my den. There was wind with it and two more smaller flashes not as violent as the first."

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Department evacuated residents immediately south of the plant, located 10 miles south of Beaumont, as a precautionary measure against further explosions. The residents returned to their homes Friday night.

There was no estimate of total damages to the plant.

Churchill Group Marks Birthday

LONDON (UPI) — Members of Winston Churchill's family lunched privately at Blenheim Palace Saturday, opening a nostalgia-filled weekend marking the 100th birthday anniversary of the late prime minister who led Britain through its "finest hour."

Radio and television planned special programs and memorabilia recalling the wartime leader flooded stores.

Wreaths smothered the ninefoot Churchill statue in Parliament Square while memorial dinners were held throughout the country.

Family spokesmen said Churchill's widow, 91-year-old Clementine, and other family members laid a wreath at the famed statesman's grave near his ancestral home outside London before sitting down to lunch.

Churchill was born in Blenheim Palace on Nov. 30, 1874. He was buried next to his parents in the nearby village of Bladon when he died on Jan. 24, 1965.

A 90-minute television special to be screened by the British Broadcast Corp. (BBC) with Richard Burton playing Churchill formed the centerpiece and the most controversial aspect of the centennial observances.

The controversy flared over an article Burton wrote for The New York Times last week. In it, he described Churchill as a coward comparable to Hitler and accused him of wanting to destroy the German race.

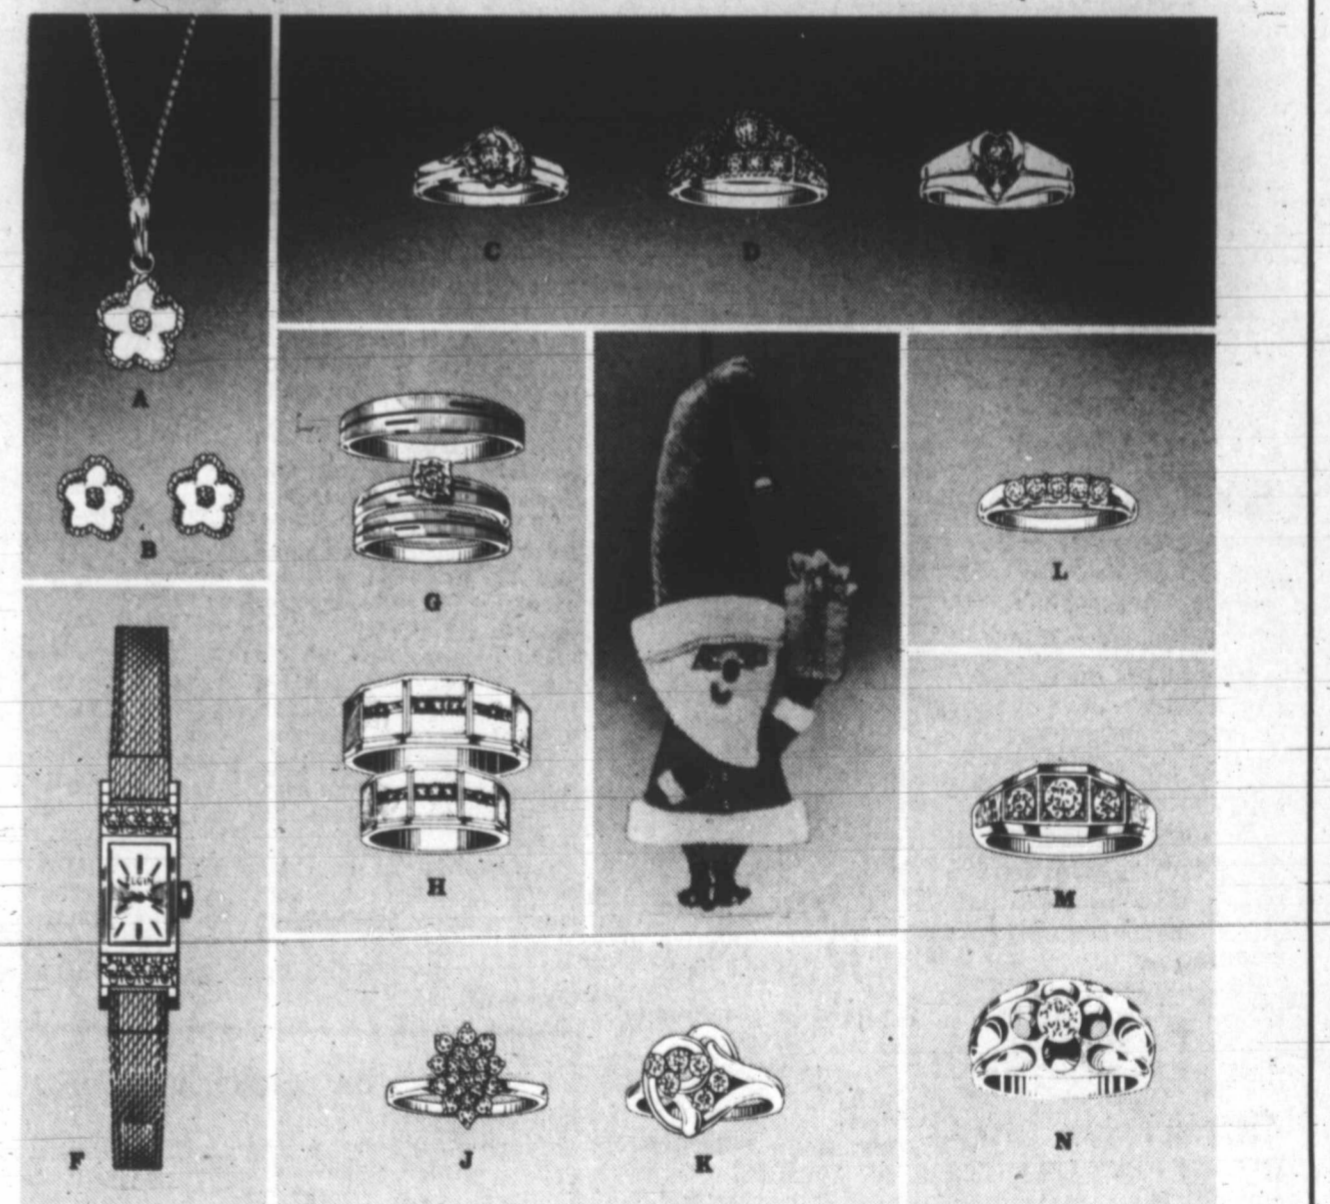

The reaction in Britain was swift and devastating. Numerous commentators and members of Parliament condemned Burton's remarks and one BBC executive said the actor would never be employed by the network again.

The publicity generated by the article boosted sales of the numerous memorabilia as it nudged Briton's memories about the man who offered the country nothing "but blood, toil, tears and sweat" in the dark days after Dunkirk.

"We shall fight them on the beaches," he told the British people. "We shall never surrender."

Among the items marking the centennial were Churchill postage stamps at $13.20 per set, Churchill medallions at $19.20, Churchill busts for $17 and full sets of fine bone Churchill dinner services for $4,200.

Grain Swindle Charges Filed

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Charges have been filed in two counties and a civil action has been filed in U. S. District Court in connection with an alleged grain swindle, according to Lancaster County Attorney Paul Douglas. The operation is believed to involve approximately $330,000 worth of grain.

Douglas said Friday authorities are renewing an alert issued a week ago for grain elevator operators to be on the lookout for potential out-of-state buyers. The operation, Douglas said, involves about a dozen persons, believed to be from Oklahoma, who "hit these grain elevators by giving checks out of Oklahoma banks."

The operators then sell the grain to another elevator at a lower price and stop payments on the checks given to buy the grain the first time, officials said.

Douglas said at least three possible swindlers were stopped last week after news media cooperated in issuing an alert.

He added that the criminal felony complaints of obtaining property under false pretenses were filed in York and Otoe counties but no one has been arrested in connection with the alleged offenses.

McCook Equity Exchange has filed the suit in federal court, naming Elvin Woods, doing business as Redwood Farms of Sallisaw, Okla., as the defendant.

Douglas said it is believed individuals involved in the fraud are still in Nebraska.

He said a meeting was held Friday with Daniel Wherry, assistant U. S. attorney, FBI agents from Nebraska and Kansas, grain elevator people and their attorneys, representatives of other federal agencies and the state patrol.

Authorities believe some of the Nebraska grain is being sold in Topeka, Douglas said.

City Officials, Mayors Gather For Convention

HOUSTON (UPI) — An estimated 4,000 mayors and other city officials from the United States and Puerto Rico will open the 50th annual convention of the National League of Cities Sunday.

Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley, a strong advocate of a bigger voice for cities in national policy, will deliver the keynote address Sunday afternoon.

The delegates at the five-day meeting, called the "Congress of Cities," will discuss inflation, mass transit, federal money and local taxation, employment and crime.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development James Lynn and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar Weinberger also will address the group. Resolutions adopted at the meeting and a final "municipal policy" paper are expected to have an impact on national convention platforms of both major political parties in 1975.

More than 250 black mayors and councilmen will present 11 resolutions to the league calling for a strong stand on expanding federal revenue sharing grants to localities with the greatest need.

IN LONDON RAIDS

Britain Starts Arrests Against IRA Members

LONDON (UPI) — Detectives armed with emergency police powers opened a nationwide offensive against the newly outlawed Irish Republican Army Saturday, arresting 10 suspected IRA bombers in north London raids.

Other policemen sealed off the country's air and seaports and stopped shoppers on the streets of London to search their parcels in anticipation of retaliatory IRA bomb attacks.

"The capital is closed down as tight as a drum as far as Irish people are concerned," a senior police officer said. "Known IRA supporters can't open their front gates without us knowing about it."

Police said the 10 men and women picked up in north London raids were being held for questioning in the Guildford and Woolwich pub bomb blasts that killed seven Britons and wounded 86 others in October and early November.

The arrests were the first made since Britain's new antiterrorist law to combat a wave of urban bombings attributed to the IRA went into effect Friday.

As police stood outside suspect IRA houses, Scotland Yard asked the Home Office for permission to arrest and deport known IRA leaders. A police spokesman declined comment on the number, saying "we are not giving out any information until action has been taken."

At air and seaports, police and customs officials frisked all passengers leaving for or arriving from Ireland and thoroughly searched their baggage.

HITCHHIKERS ARRESTED

Canadians Rescue Kidnap Victim

GRAND FALLS, N.B. (UPI) — Canadian police Saturday rescued a Massachusetts businessman and arrested three hitchhikers on charges of kidnaping him when he stopped to give them a lift.

Galen McLaughlin, 62, of Acton, Mass., was rescued unharmed early Saturday, 36 hours after he picked up three hitchhikers who robbed him and held him hostage. Royal Canadian Mounted Police Sgt. C.M.G. McKenny, who led the investigation, said the kidnapers "threatened McLaughlin's life and held him hostage for two days."

"But just what they wanted to do with him I still don't know," McKenny said. McLaughlin, owner of the McLaughlin Tool Co. of Boxboro, Mass., was reported to be en route home.

The episode began about 6 p.m. EST Thursday on U.S. Highway 95, near Pittsfield, Maine, when McLaughlin, en route to visit relatives in the Bangor area, stopped to pick up three hitchhikers.

One of them pulled out a .22 caliber pistol. After robbing McLaughlin of about $400 in cash, the trio forced him to drive them to Canada, where they crossed the border at Holton, Maine, about 11:30 p.m. Thursday, police said.

They then drove to Grand Falls, where the trio reportedly split up.

McKenny said he spotted Friday afternoon a "suspicious character" near a motel in Grand Falls. He arrested Ronald Valente, 25, of Haverhill, Mass. He said the suspect had some of McLaughlin's clothing and identification.

At the time of the arrest, McKenny said, an alarm was out across the northeastern U.S. and Canada for McLaughlin's car.

McKinny said the Mounted Police concentrated their search in the Grand Falls area, in the northwestern part of the province.

IN COAL DISPUTE

Official Predicts Contract Approval

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Arnold Miller, president of the United Mine Workers Union, Saturday predicted at least 60 per cent of the nation's 120,000 striking coal miners would ratify a proposed new wage contract and might be back at work as early as next Wednesday.

Miller campaigned for the contract in West Virginia as UMW leaders held district meetings around the country, giving detailed, article-by-article explanations of the new agreement reached with the coal operators.

The striking miners will vote on the contract Monday.

Despite dissension among the rank-and-file, particularly in West Virginia where the majority of the UMW members work, Miller said the contract would be ratified by "60 per cent or up."

Should the contract be approved Monday, Miller said, it was possible miners would be reporting for work on the 12:01 a.m. shift Wednesday.

The miners went on strike when the old contract expired Nov. 12.

The anti-contract sentiment centered in southern West Virginia and was led by a group called Miners Committee to Defend the Right to Strike. They planned motorcades through the coal fields to meet with miners and pass out literature opposing the contract.

In Salem, Ill., 20 miners from West Frankfort, Ill., showed up Saturday at a UMW meeting with signs protesting the proposed contract they came to study.

The signs, roughly printed on cardboard, read: "What safety did we get—none. What benefits did we get—none. Down with the contract. More vacation or no work."

In addition to the district contract briefings, the union purchased time on 80 radio stations in coal areas to air 15-minute statements by Miller and UMW Secretary-Treasurer Harry Patrick.

In their statements, the two men said the contract provided over-all increases of 64 per cent in wages and benefits and was "the fattest and best labor agreement that has ever been negotiated."

FOR BELL RATES

Gravitt Was Warned About Court Defense

DALLAS (UPI) — T.O. Gravitt was warned when he took over Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. operations in Texas that Bell rates might be hard to defend in court, the Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

Gravitt received the warning, the newspaper said, in a memorandum and working paper from E.C. Smith of St. Louis, former Vice-President of revenue requirements rate making.

"There is no question but what the Southwestern approach in Texas rate cases is out of step with its approach in Missouri and Kansas and with that used by other Bell System companies," the memorandum said.

Gravitt, 51, was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning in the garage of his Dallas home. The car motor was running and the Dallas County coroner ruled his death was a suicide.

Gravitt's widow, Oleta, her two sons and James H. Ashley, a Bell colleague from San Antonio, sued the company for libel and slander.

FOR 1976 GOP Governors Plan To Rebuild

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Republican governors, reduced to a baker's dozen by the 1974 elections, gathered here Sunday to talk about what hit them Nov. 5 and lay plans to rebuild for 1976.

Actually, the Republican Governors' Association does not decline to 13 members until early next year, and conference officials say 17 of the 18 GOP incumbents and three of the four party heroes who took over previously Democratic states would be at the three-day meeting in the shadow of the Gateway Arch.

The spotlight will be on the governors-elect—James A. Rhodes, who made a comeback in Ohio, Robert F. Bennett, who ended long-time Democratic domination of the Kansas governorship, and James B. Edwards, who captured the South Carolina governorship from a disrupted opposition. Only Jay Hammond, who returned Alaska to GOP control, will not attend because he takes the oath Monday after a recount gave him a 287-vote victory over Democrat William Egan.

The sole incumbent GOP governor who did not indicate an intention to help show the flag here was Stanley Hathaway of Wyoming, who is retiring from public office.

But Gov. Ronald Reagan, whose retirement after two terms opened the California power base to Democratic capture, and Gov. Malcolm Wilson, who lost New York despite a year's head start given him by the retirement of Nelson A. Rockefeller, were scheduled to attend.

So were defeated incumbents John Vanderhoof of Colorado—like Wilson a lieutenant governor whose succession to office could not be turned into an elected term, and Francis Sargent of Massachusetts, who could not stem the tide that made his state the only Democratic win besides the District of Columbia in 1972.

The Republican governors did not plan to look away from the wreckage of last month's elections. They invited public opinion pollster Louis Harris, Michigan Republican state chairman William F. McLaughlin and Bennett to analyze the 1974 results at the opening business session Monday.

Webb Named Manager For Celanese Firm

Max E. Webb, former Pampan, has been appointed vice president and general manager of Celanese Piping Systems, a division of Celanese Plastics Company, which operates plastic pipe plants in Hilliard, Ohio; Louisville, Ky.; and Santa Ana, Calif.

Prior to his new appointment, Webb was vice president - sales of Celanese Chemical Co.

R.C. Schroeder, president of Celanese Plastics Co., said Webb will be responsible for the Piping Systems' current operations as well as the utilization of the company's human and capital resources to provide for future growth.

Born in Streetman, Tex., Webb is a 1960 graduate of the University of New Mexico with a B.S. degree in chemical engineering. He joined Celanese as a production engineer at the Pampa chemical plant after graduation.

Webb's subsequent assignments at Pampa included unit supervisor, group leader, process engineering supervisor and production superintendent. Transferred from Pampa to New York City headquarters in 1969 as a major products manager, he was later promoted to product director and, in 1970, made vice president of sales.

API To Elect New Officers

Oilmen from over the Texas Panhandle will be in Pampa next Saturday night for the annual election of officers banquet of the Panhandle Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute.

Gray County Sheriff Ruff Jordan will be the speaker at the affair to be held in the Pampa Shrine Club south of the city.

Sheriff Jordan will speak on "Law Enforcement in the Panhandle Oil and Gas Field."

Fred Neslage will emcee the banquet program. There will be a social hour at 7 p.m. and the dinner is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Preceding the program there will be a short business session highlighted by the annual election of API chapter officers.

B.R. (Bud) Nunn is the outgoing president. The new officers will take over Jan. 1.

McIlhany Gets Appointed To Criminal Board

Gov. Dolph Briscoe Saturday announced the appointment of Judge Grainger W. McIlhany, judge of the 31st Judicial District in the Texas Panhandle, to the newly-created Criminal Justice Division Advisory Board.

Judge McIlhany will assist in the administration of some $36 million annually in Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) and state funds to combat crime at every level — from prevention to rehabilitation.

One of the primary duties of the new 20-member board, which succeeds the Criminal Justice Council, will be consideration of a comprehensive annual criminal justice plan, a specific roadmap to reduce crime.

The plan will define that state's crime problems and detail existing resources for dealing with those problems. It will set goals for reducing crime in Texas and spell out methods for achieving those goals, including types of projects that Gov. Briscoe and his Criminal Justice Division will consider for funding.

Based upon the philosophy that crime is a local problem that can best be attacked by local citizens, the plan will incorporate input from local governments and state agencies along with plans and priorities submitted by regional councils of government.

The new board will meet monthly to consider proposals for local projects, and to recommend projects to Gov. Briscoe for his consideration.

BOOTS HIM OUT Heiress Fidler Rejects Fiance

VILLANOVA, Pa. (UPI) — Millionaire heiress Rachel Fidler, the 77-year-old maiden aunt of Happy Rockefeller, has booted her 29-year-old fiance out of her mansion, and apparently out of her life.

Lower Merion police said they went to the Fidler estate Friday after staff members telephoned and asked them to eject an "unwelcome guest." The guest turned out to be Michael Wilson, Miss Fidler's fiance.

Miss Fidler announced her engagement last month to Wilson, her former chauffeur and the son of a Welsh coal miner.

"Don't call anymore," a staff member told UPI. "Everything is over here."

Wilson, who had spent the last several weeks in Wales, reportedly entered the 26-room mansion through a kitchen door on Thursday. Staff members apparently called police after they were unsuccessful in their efforts to remove Wilson.

"He (Wilson) took his belongings and drove away in his car," said Lower Merion Police Capt. Salvatore Frustaci. "The matter was apparently settled amicably." Wilson's destination was unknown.

A staff member said Miss Fidler, who could not be reached for comment, was "terribly upset" by the turn of events.

"She is such a sweet lady and he was just after her for her money," the staff member said. "We don't want her to talk to anyone because we're afraid she might have a breakdown."

Miss Fidler, who was disturbed by widespread publicity following the announcement of her engagement, was reportedly very upset in recent weeks with Wilson's published comments about her fortune.

"He told the newspapers that his feelings toward her were nothing," the staff member said. "Then he tried to get her to help him get a loan from a bank and they turned him down. It was just the money he wanted."

Miss Fidler met Wilson while vacationing last winter in Palm Beach, Fla. She was a guest at the Breakers Hotel and he was a waiter.

Price Charges Demo Group Seeks Power

Pampa Congressman Bob Price charged in his Dec. 1 weekly report to 13th Congressional District constituents that what he terms "Congressional Democrat reformers" are moving rapidly to expand their power.

Price states in the report: "The agenda for a meeting this week of the House Democratic Caucus, composed of all House members from that political party, calls for consideration of proposals to bind party members on House committees to vote the will of the Caucus majority, and another to require a permanent 2-1 majority of the important House Rules, Ways and Means, and Appropriations committees."

"The first would give unprecedented power to a coalition of only 98 House Democrat members, while the later would attempt to dictate committee makeup for succeeding Congresses."

U.S. Rep. elect Jack Hightower from Vernon, who defeated Price for the 13th Congressional District seat in Congress at the Nov. 5 election, announced several days ago he would be in Washington this week for the scheduled Democratic caucus.

Last Week On Wall Street

By BOB HILL
Lentz, Newton & Co. Manufacturers of drilling rigs, mud pumps and industrial motors are so covered up with orders from oil drilling contractors, they are not quoting a delivery time of two or three years. Back in 1973 such equipment was available on 30 to 150 days notice.

The oil equipment industry is expanding plant as fast as possible, as much as 50 per cent overall, in order to handle the stepped up pace of worldwide drilling activity.

But, now politics and inflation rear their ugly heads. If the oil depletion allowance is ended and an excess profits tax is heaped on the oil producers, drilling activity could go down hill very quickly. So, long range planning for the oil equipment manufacturer is almost impossible these days.

Soaring material costs are pushing through price increases almost daily. Hughes Tool raised its rock bit prices 28 per cent in 24 months. Just getting a price increase into effect takes as long as six months. But, as costs keep soaring, the industry's profits (up sharply) may turn around dramatically within a year.

A big question is how high costs can go before drilling becomes unprofitable for U.S. oil and gas the 8,000-ft. range.

PRPC Gains Justice Grant

AUSTIN — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has announced his approval of a $4.738 million justice grant to the Amarillo-based Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to purchase technical law enforcement equipment.

The equipment will include crime scene search equipment, photography equipment, and equipment for law enforcement recording of field reports. Four law enforcement agencies in the PRPC area will participate in the project, which will be under the direction of W.H. Hollifield.

Money for the grant comes from the Criminal Justice Division of the Governor's Office. CJD administers the state's block grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration under the Crime Control Act of 1973.

The grant was among 43, for a total of $6,385,327, which Gov. Briscoe approved after he received recommendations from the Executive Committee of the Criminal Justice Council Nov. 8.

Fire Destroys AFB Hangar

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A fire Saturday destroyed a wooden frame hangar containing about $5.5 million in automotive and communications equipment at Bergstrom Air Force Base, base officials said.

No one was injured in the blaze and there was no damage to aircraft, officials said.

Country Music

By M. FALLWELL
Copyright 1974 Country Music Magazine

The first time I heard the song called "Fairytale," now a top twenty country hit and seadily rising in the popcharts, I had no idea that the Pointer Sisters were singing it.

The reason for my initial shock upon learning that the Pointers were singing a country hit had more to do with their whole visual style, their concert ambience, the way they come across in person, than the fact that they are black.

Musically, the Sisters are anywhere they want to be. They like all music — as long as it's good. Coming from a solid gospel background, they are able to sing anything they want to. Flatly speaking, they sing rings around most people we listen to every day.

Visually, they are a different story. Their image is wild, trendy, glittery, trashy — forties, and extremely Now. When I heard that they were going to do a guest spot on the Opry, I had to be there.

To give you an idea of how people in the business took this information, when the cast of "Hee Haw," which was filming in Nashville at the time, learned of it, they all scrambled for phones to reserve backstage passes for the night the Pointers were scheduled.

Like me, they wanted to be flies on the wall when those flashy ladies waltzed onstage beneath a huge painted canvas backdrop advertising Goo - Goo Clusters. It was going to be too good to miss.

So, here we are in the new Opry House. The auditorium is filled to capacity. Grant Turner introduces a brand new act in country music: "Let's give a fine welcome for...The Pointer Sisters." Then three gorgeous black girls sashay onstage, dressed in the nines in flowing, velvety, frilly old clothes. 30s and 40s cast-offs they'd picked up in second-hand stores for next to nothing.

The Sisters sang two numbers, "Fairytale" and another country oriented song. By the end of the first number, the audience died in the wool country fans — had stopped straining and had begun to listen. A few heads turned to each other as if to say "Hey, this good."

Then there was clapping, finally, the cheering came. All too soon, the Sisters were finished and the next act had to go on. Under different circumstances, I'm sure they would have gotten an encore.

This really says something, both for the Pointer Sisters and for country fans. Either the audience comes to the Sisters or there's just no electricity. Of course, country performers have always played up to their audiences, complimented them between songs, cajoled them, pampered them. In country music, the fan is king (who ever heard of a pop Fan Fair?), and it's definitely not wise to assault or ignore the king.

In pop music, sometimes the reverse is true. In fact, it has been the fashion lately for fans to seek out the artist, much as pilgrims seek out a prophet, rather than the other way around.

Not so with country fans. They have worked hard all day long, and they want to be entertained. In addition, they want autographs. You might even say that the very needs of country fans are more basic and understandable than those of pop fans.

Another quality of country fans is that they can tell the chaff from the wheat. No matter how much the Pointer Sisters might have put them off, even irritated them at first, the audience ultimately realized they were listening to real music.

Of course, "Fairytale" was already a country hit.

'OPERATION RETREAD'

Oklahoma Guard Recruiting Older Men

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A touch of gray at the temples, a bit of an abdominal paunch, over 40 years old and maybe even over 50, but still wanted for military service.

That is the theme of "Operation Retread" recruiting by the Oklahoma Army National Guard. Objective of the project is to bring prior-service personnel who already have basic military training and possess skills needed by the guard back into the fold.

And it provides an opportunity for a veteran with let's say 12 to 15 years of military duty a chance to spend a few more years being a guardsman and earn retirement pay.

"We get a man that's got maybe 14 years of duty and he wants back in; that guy makes a good soldier," said Col. Erman E. Winner, recruitment and retention officer for the Oklahoma guard. "He's not the kind to go sneaking off to the bowling alley during weekend drills."

Prototype of the program is Grover C. Giles, 56, who is an active recruiter of the "over the hill" set and has taken the pseudonym of Sgt. Retread.

Giles, who knows what gray hairs and rotund stomachs are all about, spent 15 years in active duty before leaving the army in 1953. Twenty years later, after retiring as a swimming pool contractor, he re-enlisted in the National Guard last year and will have earned his 20-year retirement by the time he reaches 60 years of age.

And he is busy spreading the word to other persons in Oklahoma who may have prior service and need just a few more years to earn their retirement.

So far about 400 of the "Over the Hillers" have signed on and as a result the 700th Support Battalion, Giles unit, has 102 per cent of authorized strength, while many guard units throughout the nation are struggling to keep enough men active to justify their existence.

Retread is, of course, just one portion of the Oklahoma guard's recruiting program. Like every other state it is looking for the high school graduates and even college graduates that might make a career of military service.

But Oklahoma is unique in pushing for the veteran, the experienced soldier while at the same time signing up the "raw recruit."

"We get a little rank heavy," Winner said. "Maybe we don't need so many old men coming into the guard."

But he is quick to admit it is beneficial to have personnel with experience and noted the old timers were usually the first to show up and the last to leave on drill weekends.

Another program strongly promoted by the guard is the three-by-three, a program that allows a young man to spend three years in active guard duty and then go into inactive reserves for another three years.

That completes his obligation — two years shorter than the prior eight year requirement of combined active and inactive duty.

One benefit of the retread program is getting young men at the same time veterans return. There are several father and son teams in the Oklahoma guard since Retread started; in one instance it is a father and two sons.

The father is a veteran working toward his retirement, the sons are youngsters just beginning military service.

Because of Retread and other recruiting programs, Oklahoma ranks seventh in the nation in percentage of authorized manpower. Winner said. But more important, he said, the state ranks first in combat readiness.

And that's what the National Guard is all about — being ready to serve, at a moment's notice, whether it be a natural disaster, a civil disturbance or a national crisis.

Red Cross News

By LIBBY SHOTWELL

Jan Robertson, Water Safety Instructor for Red Cross, has completed an Adult Advanced Beginner Class at the Pampa Youth Center pool. The following have completed this class and received their cards: Elaine, Graham, Helen McGill, Reta Sewell, Virginia Bookout, Barbara Veach, Augusta Brown, Lila West, Mayda King, and Mary Guinn. There were 18 in the class.

Travis Elementary School provided the Thanksgiving tray favors for the VA Hospital patients in Amarillo. The clever tray mats, nut cups with candy in them and favors of miniature turkeys helped the men and women who were ill and away from home at this time of the year.

Disaster Operations continue in the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, and Alaska. Two weeks of heavy rains and severe winter storms along the western coast of Alaska have kept the Disaster services busy.

In Puerto Rico, the Red Cross have worked with local authorities to shelter and feed hundreds of victims and to provide emergency needs for 2,000 families. It is estimated that the Red Cross will spend $ 00,000 in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico alone helping families who are victims of disaster.

Two Red Cross shelters housed 100 persons in Nome, Alaska. Part of your United Fund dollar goes to Disaster service each year.

Lefors Captures 1st Quarterfinals Ever

7-5 Pirates Have Near-Perfect Game

By PAUL SIMS
 "Except for the fumbles, it was darn near a perfect ball game," Lefors coach Leonard Tolbert, in his first playoffs ever as a football coach, said after Lefors (7-5) belted previously unbeaten Bronte, 28-13, Friday night in Spur.

The Pirates, winners of five in a row, including three straight over highly ranked ball clubs, take on Celina in the state Class B semifinals at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Vernon.

It would seem that the Pirates will have to guard against overconfidence since they are now the "Giant Killers" of Class B. But Tolbert says overconfidence is not the main problem.

"Overconfidence? No, not necessarily," Tolbert said. "I think they know what they have to do."

Tolbert was miffed at his team's fumbles, four of which were recovered by the No. 2 ranked Longhorns, and said turnovers, or the guarding against them, will be stressed this week in workouts.

"We do every week. We preach it every day. Our kids are just real emotional and are real anxious, over-anxious, to get the job done."

In an attempt to get the team relaxed before the game, Tolbert created a loose atmosphere.

"Until about an hour before the game, we let them cut up, goose around, stay loose and have fun to get them relaxed. Then, we settle them down and passed out the playbooks."

The Pirates, despite the fumbles, executed almost to perfection as only one play resulted in minus yardage. That was when quarterback Greg Beck chased a loose ball in the Pirate backfield and was canned for an eight-yard loss.

The Lefors backfield accounted for 386 yards rushing, while the defense yielded only 110 yards on the ground. The Lefors offensive line was also exceptional, opening gaping holes for its backs on almost every play.

Guard Larry Franks played a big part in the win, keeping senior tackle Mark Lee out of the backfield and away from the Lefors runners.

"I don't think they were No. 2 in the state. They and Sundown would have been a good game," Franks, a 165-pound junior said. "I don't think they (defensive linemen) were that good."

They had good linebackers and pursued real well. We just kind of took it to them all the time."

Tackle Carl Cady, a 210-pound senior, had the unenviable task of blocking 230-pound Clint Porter. "He's just big," Cady said, "and he was pretty quick for his size. The defensive line was quick."

"They had good speed but they weren't any better than Groom. Groom was about the toughest we played all year."

"I'm just looking forward to next week," Cady added.

Halfback Phil White, was another Lefors standout, catching an 18-yard pass for the touchdown which put the Pirates ahead for keeps.

"I came out of the backfield and I caught the pass on about the five. There was one on my team helping me — Bobby Dunn. He was running a different pattern and when I caught it, he tried to help me. I don't know if I could of gone in unless he had been there."

"That was my most important play this year."

White also shined defensively, intercepting a Nelson Coulter pass in the waning minutes to ice the victory. He was also instrumental in holding all-state candidate Alan Barbee to only 64 yards, although he gives complete credit for that to linebacker Barney Sawyer.

"Barney was keying on him pretty good. He likes to stick the most important play."

Bronte's best aspect? "Their sweeps and quick pitches. That's what they scored on," White said.

The game marked the first time in Lefors' history it has won a spot in the state semifinals. Should it win Friday, Lefors will play either top-ranked Big Sandy or Moody.

Army Errors Cause Demise

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Navy, led by the record breaking running of senior halfback Cleveland Cooper and aided by three costly Army miscues, powered its way to a 19-0 victory Saturday over the Cadets in the 75th annual service classic attended by President Ford and a disappointing crowd of 83,247.

Navy turned a poor Army punt, a fumble and a broken play into a field goal, a touchdown and a safety in the nationally televised game. Cooper rushed for 105 yards to become the only back ever to gain over 100 yards in three consecutive years of the traditional rivalry.

Junior fullback Bob Jackson sidelined for three straight games with a back ailment, scored the Middles' two touchdowns on plunges of three and six yards.

The Navy defense continually throttled Army's offense to gain the Middles' second straight victory in the series.

 SPUR — Halfback Phil White, alternating with Jim Hix throughout the game, caught the biggest pass of his life — an 18-yard touchdown pass which put Lefors ahead to stay against Bronte in the state quarterfinals — and he wasn't overly enthused.

On the bus going back home to Lefors when football players are supposed to be thinking about the game they just won and about the team they'll play next, what was White doing? "I was asleep," said the sophomore halfback.

"Yeah, I guess the touchdown made me pretty happy."

"I came out the backfield and I caught the pass on about the five. There was one on my team helping me — Bobby Dunn. He was running a different pattern and when I caught it he tried to help me. I don't know if I could of gone in unless he had been there."

White grabbed the Greg Beck pass on the Bronte six and, using a key block by Dunn, broke the short distance down the left sideline to score, giving Lefors a 12-7 lead, one which was never headed, and the Pirates went on to surprise Bronte, 28-13, Friday night in Spur.

The win gives Lefors the right to play Celina in the state Class B semifinals for the first time in the Pirates' history.

'Horns Rip A&M

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas figured out a way to beat Texas A&M.

"Our game plan was to run straight at them," offensive tackle Bob Simmons said moments after Texas' startling 32-3 victory over the Aggies in a nationally televised contest. "One thing teams haven't been doing is running straight at them."

"Our coaches thought we had enough power to do it and I guess we did. Of course it makes it a lot easier when you start off the game with two touchdowns."

Texas A&M fumbled twice in the opening seconds of the game and Texas converted them both into quick touchdowns. The Longhorns led 14-0 with 59:06 to play in the game. It was all downhill after that.

"We just got unbelievable breaks at the start of the game," coach Darrell Royal said. "What was it? Fourteen points in 54 seconds? Good gracious! That is something you dream about."

"That's the only way we could beat an outstanding A&M team by that score. They just gave us break after break."

The win sent Texas, 8-3, into the Gator Bowl Dec. 30 against Auburn, 9-2, who lost to top-ranked Alabama in the second half of Friday's televised football doubleheader. It also sent Baylor to the Cotton Bowl for the first time in the school's history. If Texas A&M had defeated Texas, the Aggies would have been the host team in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1 against Penn State.

Which brings up another interesting story. Texas appeared destined for at least a share of the Southwest Conference crown until a month ago when it ran up against Baylor. The Longhorns led 24-7 at the half, but the Bears came back in the second half to win 34-24. It marked the first time anybody really paid any attention to the Bears this season.

After that game Royal went into the Baylor dressing room and said something to the effect of "Don't look back, go all the way. Anytime Texas doesn't win (the conference championship — which it has the last six years), I hope Baylor does."

Royal amplified a little on that incident Friday.

"You have to excuse what I said. We had just blown a big lead and I wasn't rational. It was four days after that before somebody told me what I said."

Before Friday's game A&M had averaged surrendering only 129 yards a game rushing and were ranked second in the nation in rushing defense. Texas' freshman fullback Earl Campbell gained 128 yards on his own Friday.

"The offensive line did it for me," he said. "They did a bunch of great blocking up front. I owe all that yardage to them."

Both teams made the big defensive play in the third period, as neither was able to score. Lefors drove from its own 32 down to the Bronte 16 at the start of the second half, but gave up the ball on another fumble, recovered by tackle Mark Lee.

Coulter, Bronte's second leading rusher during the regular season with over 1,000 yards (Barbee led all Longhorns), pulled the "Horns to within eight with history at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Vernon. Celina eliminated Valley Mills, 49-6, Thursday.

"That pass to White had a lot to do with it," Lefors coach Leonard Tolbert said. "They were covering our men out of the backfield with their interior linebackers, so we decided we could beat them to the end zone."

White did just that, and it turned out to be the tempo changer in the game.

The Pirates took the lead first as Barney Sawyer, a bull-like runner at fullback, burst up the middle, veered left and outran everyone 62 yards for a touchdown. Time of the score was not available due to an electrical short in the press box and on the scoreboard. Beck missed on the PAT try.

The touchdown came late in the first period a Bronte punt, a lost Lefors fumble and another Bronte punt.

After another Bronte punt, Lefors had possession on its own 30, and on the third play from scrimmage, Beck fumbled, permitting the Longhorns' Billy Ren Lee to recover on the 33.

It took only four plays, including a 13-yard pass from Nelson Coulter to all-state tight end candidate Jim Dan Raughton, for the Longhorns to tie the score. Alan Barbee did the honors with a 19-yard jaunt around the right end. Barbee, an elusive halfback and exceptional all-around performer, added the go-ahead extra point.

The touchdown happened at 10:35 in the second quarter. White scored five minutes later.

The Pirates took a two-touchdown lead with 1:28 left in the half on a six-yard run by Hix. The TD finished a nine-play, 70-yard drive, in which Lefors used five different rushers. Beck's kick made it 21-7.

an 11-yard scamper with 10:19 left in the game.

The score came six plays after Wayne Alexander intercepted a Beck pass on the Bronte 20 and returned it to his own 36. Coulter passed to Raughton for 15 and 18 yards and to Bobby Bailey for 20 yards in the scoring march.

Barbee tried to run for two extra points, but was rapped by linebacker Rick Jennings short of the goal line.

The Pirates' final touchdown, an 18-yard run by Sawyer who took the ball up the middle and weaved his way to paydirt, happened with 7:15 left in the game. Beck kicked the point after.

The Longhorns 11 times more in the game, trying to get back into it, but the Lefors secondary allowed only one completion. White intercepted late in the game to thwart one Longhorn series.

"We just made sure they didn't hit the bomb. We gave 'em those short passes," Tolbert said.

"Except for the fumbles, it was darn near a perfect ball game. We had Barbee pretty well bottled up. That quarterback was something else, though. He played hurt the second half."

Barbee was held to 64 yards on 14 carries, as Bronte gained only 110 yards on the ground. Coulter picked up 22 yards on 11 attempts.

Sawyer led everyone with 214 yards on 27 rushes. He was followed by Beck, 18 carries for 79 yards; Hix, 9 for 57; Jennings, 6 for 23, and White, 3 for 13.

Coulter passed 25 times and completed seven for 101 yards. Beck threw twice, completing the one to White for the touchdown.

Lefors led in first downs, 27-10, and punted only once in the game compared to four times for the losers.

Turnovers again hurt the Pirates, who lost four fumbles and had a pass intercepted. "Our kids are just real emotional," said Tolbert, "and are real anxious, over-anxious, to get the job done."

Ex-Champ James Braddock Dies

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. (UPI) — James J. Braddock, whose rise from the depths of despair to the heavyweight championship in 1935 earned him the title of boxing's "Cinderella Man," died at his home Friday, just one week shy of his 69th birthday.

The irrepressible Irishman, one of the most popular boxers of his era, apparently passed away in his sleep from natural causes. Police said they received a call from Mrs. Braddock about noon, saying she was unable to wake her husband.

His survivors include his wife, Mae; two sons, Howard and Jay; a daughter, Rose Marie DeWitt; four brothers and six grandchildren. Funeral services will be held Tuesday, Dec. 3, at Cliffside Park, N.J.

A member of boxing's Hall of Fame, Braddock, born in New York City on Dec. 6, 1905, fought 85 professional bouts during his 17-year career, winning 51, including 26 by knockout.

His most famous victory came on June 13, 1935, at the Long Island Bowl when he went into the ring a 10-1 underdog and decided Max Baer in 15 rounds for the world championship.

That victory still ranks as the biggest upset in heavyweight championship history.

PHS, Host Cooper In Key City Finals

ABILENE — Pampa kept its early season perfect record intact by beating both Temple and Abilene High in the Key City Invitational Basketball Tournament, setting up a finals showdown between the Harvesters and Abilene Cooper Saturday night.

Results of that finals game were not available due to the lateness but will be available in Monday's News.

Friday, Pampa whipped Temple, 74 - 58, in the first round.

Three Harvesters hit for double figures as Howie Lewis scored 22 points, Billy Wilbon 21 and Robert Young 19.

"We looked real well. We played tremendous defense and had good balance scoring. We ran the fast break real well, also," said Pampa coach Robert McPherson after the win.

Pampa held Temple's top player, James Weddington, to only three field goals for six points.

The same three Harvesters seniors who led Pampa in the opener shined in the second round as Pampa ripped Abilene High, 85 - 70. Young scored 23, Lewis 20 and Wilbon 17.

Pampa became 3 - 0 with the win over Abilene.

Spectacular Comeback Destroys Notre Dame

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Anthony Davis, who destroyed Notre Dame with six touchdowns as a sophomore, returned to haunt the Irish again Saturday, taking the opening second half kickoff back 100 yards for a score that ignited University of Southern California to a miracle 55-24 comeback victory.

Seemingly beaten 24-0 with just 53 seconds remaining in the first half after Notre Dame's third touchdown of the game, the Rose Bowl-bound Trojans managed to score with 10 seconds left in the second quarter.

Davis, held to only 29 yards on 11 carries in the first half, took Pat McLaughlin's second half kickoff two steps deep in his end zone and stunned the Irish with his sixth TD on a kickoff return at USC, an NCAA record.

Before the third quarter was over, USC had scored four more touchdowns for a 41-24 lead.

Davis, who broke O.J.

Simpson's Pacific Eight career rushing record last weekend in the Trojans' conference clinching win over UCLA, scored his team's first four touchdowns, giving him 11 in his three games against Notre Dame.

Washington Sparkles As OU Bops Cowboys

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Flashy Joe Washington returned a punt 57 yards for one score and zipped five yards for another in a sudden five-touchdown outburst that gave unbeaten Oklahoma, trailing by three points late in the third quarter, a 44 - 13 victory over Oklahoma State Saturday.

Sooner quarterback Steve Davis scored on runs of 12 and one yards, halfback Grant Burget scored from the four, freshman halfback Elvis Peacock ran 10 yards to score and Tony DiRienzo kicked a 33-yard field goal.

The Cowboys, leading 13-10 with less than three minutes left in the third period, got field goals of 53 and 33 yards from Abby Daigle and a two-yard touchdown run from halfback Leonard Thompson.

Defensive end Jimbo Elrod, a needle in the Cowboy offense all afternoon, set up the first touchdown in the Sooner's late game deluge with a fumble recovery at the Cowboy 21. Burget banged over four plays later to turn it around at 16-13 and once the dike was broken, things went from bad to worse for the Fiesta Bowl-bound Cowboys.

A 34-yard run by fullback Jim Littrell, the Sooners' leading rusher with 116 yards on 16 carries, set up Davis' second touchdown. Moments later Washington seemed smothered under a gang of Cowboy defenders on a punt return, but wriggled free and scooted 57 yards down the sideline.

A fumbled kick gave the Sooners the ball at the Cowboy five to set up Washington's second touchdown, and on the ensuing kickoff the Sooners got the ball back at the OSU 10 and Peacock dashed in for the final touchdown.

Oklahoma State edged the Sooners in first downs, 13 to 11, but trailed in rushing, 316 yards to 155. Neither team completed a single pass during the cold, blustery afternoon.

Rasmussen Named Top Defensiveman

Dane Rasmussen, a senior defensive tackle from Pampa, was named Defensive Player of the Year today, according to the Amarillo Globe - News all-district team, which is voted on by district sports writers and coaches.

Rasmussen led Pampa in tackles and quarterback sacks this season and is one of the Harvesters' top college prospects.

Joining him on the all-district defensive line are teammate Ron Willett, Palo Duro's Wesley Roberts and Caprock's Lynn Miller. Roberts is the only junior, the other linemen are seniors.

Other Harvesters to make the elite team are senior defensive back Mike Adair, split end Howie Lewis and center David Hampton.

To nobody's surprise, the District 3-AAAA Coach of the Year is John Welborn, who finished with an 8 - 2 record in his first year at Pampa.

Offensive Player of the Year was Palo Duro fullback Greg Sellmyer, a senior.

The Coaches' all-district squad will be released at the end of Palo Duro's season.

Baylor Snares Outright Championship

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — By the simple expediency of giving the ball to Steve Beard early and often, the Baylor Bears rolled to a 24-3 win over Rice Saturday and completed their most historic weekend ever as owners of the Southwest Conference title.

Baylor had already wrapped up a Cotton Bowl berth Jan. 1 against Penn State and at least a share of the crown Friday when Texas throttled Texas A&M, 32-3, but needed a win over the Owls to wrap up its first undisputed league crown in 50 years.

Beard became the first 1,000-yard runner in the 76-year history of Baylor football and eclipsed a conference record for most carries in a single season as well as scoring the first

Bears touchdown — the only one they needed.

Late in the first period Beard carried on all six plays of a 58-yard drive which ended with the squatty tailback cutting to the outside of right end and dashing 20 yards for the score.

Pat McNeil added a 10-yard touchdown run in the second period and backup quarterback Mark Jackson ran 13 yards for another score early in the final quarter. David Hicks kicked a 35-yard field goal in the waning minutes.

Rice's only score came on a 29-yard field goal by Alan Pringle in the third period.

Beard, the Southwest Conference's leading rusher, carried 28 times for 134 yards Saturday bringing his season total to 1,104 yards on 267 attempts. The 267 carries cracked a league mark of 244 set by Rice's Stabile Vincent in 1971.

Baylor ended its regular season with a 8-3 mark and a 61 conference record, a stunning turnaround from 1973 when the Bears could win only two games — none of them in Southwest Conference play.

Thanks to the remarkable comeback Baylor-Athletic Director Jack Patterson tore up the remaining two years on coach Grant Teaff's contract Saturday and awarded him a new five-year pact. The Bears, after the emotional experience of clinching a Cotton Bowl berth while simply watching television

Friday, appeared flat early in the Rice contest Saturday and did not show an offensive spark until the first period was almost over.

Operating with a gusty, cold north wind, Baylor took over at its own 42 and simply let Beard do it.

He was given the ball six consecutive times and with the aid of a 15-yard face mask penalty, the Bears scored the opening touchdown less than two minutes before it lost the wind advantage.

HARVESTER OF THE WEEK — Post Charles Pearce, a 6-4 junior, led the junior varsity in rebounds and play under the basket last season. Pearce gives the Harvesters strong depth this year, both on the boards and in scoring from up close.

Saunders-Organ Exchange Vows In Home Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Judith Marie Saunders and Joe Michael Organ was solemnized at 3 p.m. Friday, Nov. 22 at the home of the bride, 1425 Charles.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. George Saunders, Forgan, Okla., formerly of McLean. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Organ, 412 West St., Pampa, are parents of the bridegroom.

THE CEREMONY

George Saunders, father of the bride, and minister of the Forgan Church of Christ, officiated for the double-ring ceremony. Janice Wright, sister of the bride, sang "Whither Thou Goest," and a quartet composed of Bill Cox and Mickey Lee, both of Pampa and Joyce Foster, sister of the bride, Lubbock, and Janice Wright, sister of the bride, Longview, sang "Faithful and True" and "Be With Us Lord."

THE BRIDE

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of Angelmist peau de soie and reembroidered Chantilly lace over bridal taffeta designed with a high Mandarin neckline. The attire was styled with an empire waistline, long-Bishop sleeves, and bell skirt. Inserts of lace enhanced the neckline, bodice, sleeves and skirt of the gown. A pleated ruffle of peau de soie and lace complemented the hemline of the floor-length gown. The full back ended in a sweeping Chapel length train.

Her veil of imported illusion fell from a coil and the bride carried a bouquet of white carnations with pink sweetheart roses, baby's breath and sprengeri fern.

ATTENDANTS

Maid of honor was Tonya Organ, Pampa, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a formal floor length gown of pink knit and carried a nosegay of pink pixie carnations and baby's breath.

Tim Haigood, Pampa was

MRS. JOE MICHAEL ORGAN nee Miss Judith Marie Saunders

best man.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony a reception was held. A nylon lace cloth over burgundy underskirt covered the serving table which was decorated with the bridal bouquet and the three-tiered white wedding cake, decorated with pink roses and topped with three pink satin wedding bells.

Janice Wright, sister of the bride, served cake and Joyce Foster, sister of the bride poured punch.

For the Oklahoma City wedding trip, the bride wore a burgundy suit dress and a pink sweetheart-rose corsage.

The couple will reside at 1425 Charles.

AFFILIATIONS

A 1970 McLean High School graduate, the bride attended Lubbock Christian College and is presently employed by Beacon Supply Co.

The bridegroom, a 1970

New Frontiers In Science Is Varietas Club Program

Mrs. H. Price Dosier was hostess to the Varietas Federated Study Club on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Aubrey Sprawls, president, presided.

Members brought gifts to be sent to the state hospital in Wichita Falls. Mrs. S.C. Evans led the group in parliamentary procedure. The members answered roll call by giving personal thanks for special joys at Thanksgiving time.

The program was entitled, "New Frontiers in Science" and was presented by Miss Anna Pierce, who spoke on "Life in 2000 A.D." Using charts, posters, pictures, and clippings, she gave a summary of twenty-first century living as projected by authorities in the fields of economics, medicine, science, genetics, and other phases of life after the year 2000.

She stressed especially the articles written by Neil Armstrong concerning the expectations of moon travel and moon colonization at that time. She said, "With life expectancy increasing every year, we can all hope to be here at the beginning of the twenty-first century. It is good to know what we may expect life to be at that time."

The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. R.W. Lane on Dec. 10, at 2 p.m. instead of 2:30. A Christmas gift exchange will hold and a Christmas program.

Presented at the meeting were Miss Anna Pierce and Mmes. W.A. Bohot, W.H. Burden, F.A. Cary, H. Price Dosier, S.C. Evans, Lee Harrah, Rue Hestand, J.E. Kirchman, R.W. Lane, Raymond Morrison, Otis Nace, L.B. Penick, J.R. Spearman, Aubrey Sprawls, Sherman White, and Abel Wood.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

In poring through some old family photo albums the other night, two things became apparent. First, my husband is still wearing the same baggy pants he wore in 1953. Second, in every picture I look like I am mouthing an obscenity into the camera.

There is no reasonable explanation for the first. However, there is a defense for the latter.

I don't know how many of you are married to camera freaks. But I married one. Our wedding portrait has only one person in it — me. I spent the honeymoon coaxing him out of the closet where he was changing film. He wanted me to postpone the birth of our first child until morning to get a better light reading. What I'm telling you is that I was on Candid Camera three years before Allen Funt.

My husband was the first to note that I rarely smiled in pictures. "This would have been a great picture," he said one day, "if only you had looked up and smiled."

"I don't like to have my picture taken when I am eating a ham sandwich and a piece of fat starts to unravel and I look like I am eating a sea serpent...live."

"What about this one?" he asked thrusting another picture in my face.

"Showing me standing in the privacy of my backyard getting some sun while balancing a glass of milk and a sandwich on my protruding stomach is hardly amusing. You have yet to snap me while I am inhaling."

"What's the matter with that?" he asked.

"Your timing!" I admonished. "Your timing is rotten."

Wives and families will bear me out. On a guided tour you are the first to leave the bus and the last to leave the rock formations which when developed are underexposed and look like a terminal case of acne.

The candid picture he took for the Christmas card will reveal three children in raggy pajamas who look like an anti-nuclear war poster and a mother who yearns to be a nun.

The picture he took of you from the rear while you were bending over the campfire is enough to make you burn every pair of slacks you own.

If the usual festive holiday portrait prevails it will show us around the dinner table, one child laughing with cottage cheese in his mouth, one pushing his brother's face in, and mother forming a word she saw on a restroom wall in Spokane while she watches a hot meal turn icy.

Monotoned mixtures... in leathers, fabrics, jewelry... in all the accessories women will be adding to their basic wardrobes this fall. Air Step swirls soft patent and gentle leather in a casual shoe that mixes well in any wardrobe.

Mother blamed for son's crime

An English judge named Solomon, Judge Peter Solomon, says a mother's stubborn refusal to give her 15-year-old son pocket money led him into crime — three burglaries involving property and cash worth about $750.

Judge Solomon told her the boy was almost blameless. She was the one who should "be filled with shame and guilt" and warned, "If this little boy comes in front of me again one thing I will do will be to impose a fine which you will have to pay and you won't forget it." — CNS

Fall Planting Is Garden Club Topic

"Planting bulbs at different times in the fall will extend the length of the bloom season," stated Mrs. Rue Hestand in a program on bulbs presented at a recent meeting of the Pampa Garden Club. She stated that the soil should include a mixture of humus and bonemeal fertilizer.

Mrs. H.H. Boynton noted that in planting tulips 10 to 12 inches deep, bulbs will not form and the blooms will be larger. She stated that lilies should be planted slightly on their sides and not straight up. Lilies should be placed in raised beds which will drain well and into a which a little gravel has been placed at the bottom.

The Club was presented the National award they received at the convention of the National Council of Gaaden Clubs for their sponsorship of the placement of 133 volumes of People and Their Environment, a resource guide, in the Pampa schools. Mrs. James Malone was chairman of this project.

It was announced that over 50 attended the Zone meeting held in Pampa for District 1, Texas Garden Clubs, Inc. Mrs. Hestand was appointed Vice-Director from Pampa at the Zone meeting.

Refreshments were served by hostesses Mrs. S.T. Holding and Mrs. E.L. Hudson. Mrs. Boynton provided an arrangement of roses and the next meeting will be held at the Hospitality Room, Citizens Bank, Dec. 16.

Holiday Cooking Is Alpha Iota Program

Alpha Iota Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota met recently in the Reddi Room of Southwestern Public Service for a program on Festive Foods. The demonstration, given by Mrs. Mildred Prince, was designed to give new and easy recipe ideas for the coming holiday season.

The latest in microwave cooking and blender uses were demonstrated culminated by a meal enjoyed by all.

Before the program, President, Jeannine Peurifoy, conducted a short business meeting in which Mrs. John Best presented a budget which will be voted on at the next meeting.

The annual Christmas project was discussed and it was decided to wait until the next meeting to make a final decision on the project.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mmes. Albert

Drinovsky, Neil Quattlebaum, and Jack Alexander.

Other members attending were Mmes. Frank Anderson, John Best, Jay Boettner, Tommy Burns, Doug Coffee, Stephen Dewey, Joe Duncan, Jerry Farmer, San Hanks, Ernest Hawking, Tommy Lester, Jerry Peurifoy, Richard Steele, Peggy Stevens, Jack Williams, Ray Welch, and Dennis Wyatt.

When you soak dry beans overnight before cooking, refrigerate them to prevent fermentation.

To shorten soaking time for dry beans, either boil them in water to cover for two minutes or pressure cook them three to 10 minutes; then remove from the heat and let stand, covered, for an hour before finishing the cooking.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Gals:
I have gotten so disgusted with this opaque fingernail polish recently (that's the kind with the white stuff in the bottom) that is supposed to mix and, if it doesn't, you have to shake your hand off.

I finally learned to turn the bottle on it's side instead of standing it up when I put it away.

This way, the white opaque goop is on the side of the bottle and you can mix it quicker by using the brush!

How could I have missed something so simple all these years?

Well, heaven help a duck, I did!

Another little tidbit to note is, if you have any makeup with those little beads in the bottle, when the bottle is empty, save those little lead beads (they look like BB shots), wash 'em off, and put them in your bottle of polish.

Helps mix the wonderful stuff.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

If I stop at a friend's house and don't want to forget my package that I have brought with me, I leave my car key in or with the package.

I might walk out the door without the package, but I couldn't get very far without my car keys!

Works everytime!

Mavis Decker

Dear Heloise:

I save all the little scraps of material that my mother gets in the mail for advertising. When I have enough, I sew them all together and make a quilt for a tiny doll I have.

All the different prints make it extra pretty and they are already cut in squares for me.

Roxi (age 11)

You're the doll!

FASHIONETTES

Designer Stephen Burrows is a strong believer in fashion in parts, so they can be combined in a number of ways. For instance, his spring collection features big pullovers with big roll-up sleeves to be worn with coordinated pants or skirts. Burrows won the Coty award in 1973 for his leisure fashions.

The unbelted chemise, imported once again from Paris, runs through New York designer collections. But the Americans give equal time to belts, super-wide, super-narrow. A favorite, the sashlike cummerbund.

That oldie of the fabric world is back full force in spring collections. It's poplin, smoothsurfaced and used in everything from sportswear to the sharpest looking of daytime dresses, suits and coats.

American designers aren't giving up on the ankle-length dress for evening. It looks great on women with slim, slim ankles. Not recommended if you're a miss or missus five-by-five.

Leave it to designer Adele Simpson to take fashion advantage of the familiar Beautiful People phrase. Mrs. Simpson shows a group of slim evening dresses for spring, featuring people figures on a dark background. Faces are anonymous.

Kasper for Joan Leslie introduces the raincoat dress for spring. It's poplin and is a simply cut garment to be worn as dress or coat and done in bright shades—green, lilac, yellow—for dreary days.

Watch for shirts and ties throughout the spring collections from American designers.

Panhandle Water

By Felix W. Ryals
Dwayne E. Konrad, Extension Irrigation Engineer, Colorado State University, was one of the speakers of the Great Plains Ground Water Management Workshop in Gaden City, Kansas on November 7 and 8. He presented a paper on "Ground Water Management and Agriculture on the Northern High Plains of Colorado." Last week we carried his outline of the description of the area, and early ground water use. Irrigation got under way as a method of farming in 1960. The dry years of 1963 and 1964 greatly speeded up the change over from dryland farming to irrigation. Over 500 irrigation wells were drilled in an area of northern Colorado limited to 9,000 square miles. We continue his address today.

Ground Water Management Act was enacted in May, 1965. Controlled ground water development began. Over 2,000 wells were drilled by 1968. Kit Carson County alone had 800 wells with heavy concentrations near Burlington. The Gates Rubber Company and Ceres Land Company developments set off sandyland irrigation development in the Joes and Wray areas. The "first in time, first in right" doctrine for water rights obviously forced many landowners to drill wells in advance of their normal desires. Restriction efforts did, in this manner, accelerate irrigation development.

Controlling Aquifer Depletion
In 1965, rural leaders (also irrigators) felt that restrictions on pumping from the Ogallala would eventually be necessary to sustain the irrigation based economy. Key rural people visited west Texas to see what full irrigation development could do for rural economy. They were greatly impressed by agricultural activity, new construction, and all the things a high growth rate can offer. The types of questions that they returned with were — what do people do and where do people go as the water supply dwindles, how much water-based development is really necessary, and how much annual depletion can the people afford? They knew that conservation of pumped water and some artificial recharge could extend an aquifer life if pumping was restricted. Without well or pumping restrictions, conservation and artificial recharge invite and make possible more development. Conservation practices provide maximum use of water but conservation is not by itself an effective tool for controlling the rate of aquifer depletion.

Irrigation Development Today
There are about 3,200 irrigation wells in the NHP basin today. Most of these wells are concentrated in Kit Carson (1,000 wells) and Yuma (1,400) Counties. Irrigation well drilling, even though restricted according to well concentration planning, is still proceeding at a rate of about 200 wells per year. It is expected that well numbers will level off at 4 - 5,000. Further ground water exploration, policy changes, new irrigation methods and farm commodity demands will dictate ultimate development. Irrigated acreage is presently near one-third million acres. Investment in irrigation equipment alone is estimated at nearly 100 million dollars. Corn, sorghums, sugar beets, wheat, dry beans, and tame grasses are the main irrigated crops.

Vo-Ag Student Teacher Busy In PHS Program

By ALETHA DAVIS

Armed with almost four years of formal education and a work plan designed by Texas Tech University Department of Agricultural Education, Randall Williams arrived in Pampa Oct. 28 to begin an eight-week student teaching program in the Vocational Agricultural Department.

The senior ag major, a native of Shamrock, will complete his assignment here as a student teacher Dec. 17, and return to Tech to complete his requirements for a degree in his field. Following graduation in May, Williams is considering graduate work at A&M.

RANDALL WILLIAMS
...student teacher

The intern teacher has been busy during his stay in Pampa. A large part of his time has been devoted to the ag department and outside activities of the students. He, as assistant to Bob Skaggs, traveled to Clarendon for District Contests with the Future Farmers of America Chapter of Pampa High School. The Farm Radio team brought home a first place rating as a result of the competition. Other projects aided by the student teacher have involved purchase of pigs and calves for show by students.

suggests student teachers act as observers for one week, moving into a full classroom schedule by the last week. Williams has been able to participate as an instructor during his tenure here.

Following his work plan, the student has instructed classes in animal science, plant and soil science, mechanics related to agricultural needs and farm and ranch management. Record keeping and supervised farming are other areas listed on the work plan. Student teachers are urged to attend faculty meetings, FFA meetings, and evaluate experiences in written form at the end of the student teaching program. An evaluation report is due from Williams on Dec. 9.

"I had a choice of schools," commented Williams. "But I chose Pampa, and I really like it here. The whole experience has been helpful and now I know I like teaching. I may even decide to go into teaching on the college level." Williams, a Wheeler County native, has been active in 4-H and FFA for many years and is a member of the FFA Collegiate Association of Texas Tech, the College Rodeo Association and Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural fraternity, and is on the Dean's List at Tech.

Direct association with the students stands out in his recall of this student-teaching experience. Williams has advised students when selecting show animals and recently took part in the execution of a pig sale designed to permit FFA and 4-H members to purchase prime pigs for show.

"This has been great," surmised the prospective teacher. Plans for the future hold many prospects, according to Williams. "I can go into ranching, farming, or teaching. I'll have an education, and that opens doors to many areas."

"We have a student teacher in ag and we'd like everyone to know about him," was the explanation offered by FFA reporter Ronnie Haynes when he recently visited The News office to turn in an FFA item. That statement probably sums up the feelings of all the vo-ag students here. So it's hats off to the vo-ag student teaching program at Texas Tech. People in Pampa would say it's a really good idea!

COTTON GIN

The McLean Cotton Gin is now ready for operation. The Gin was purchased by Joe Skipper of McLean after the former owners shut the Gin down as a result of what they described as unreasonable regulations from the Texas Air Quality Control Board. The gin will continue to be a nice asset to the McLean area. From one thousand to two thousand bales of cotton are ginned annually at the gin. Some of this comes from surrounding counties. Harvested acres in Gray County varies from 1500 to 2500 acres annually.

WHEAT DISEASE PROBLEM

Although our plant disease Specialist has not made a definite diagnosis that we have a rust problem in our wheat — this is my best answer. There are thirty-three strains or races of rust. There can be other mutation races from these identified 33 races. There is too much circumstantial evidence that rust is the problem. I have seen two other years in the fifties when a different type of rust hit us. In the fifties you could turn a white piece of cloth rusty red by pulling a leaf through the piece of cloth. The type we have just had does not seem to emit the rust in the form of a postule.

The weather pattern this fall has been ideal for the development of a rust condition. We had very little sub-freezing weather. Several nights of below freezing temperature destroys the rust spores which originates from Old Mexico after strong South winds. We have had these strong winds. Many of the older dry land varieties were extremely susceptible to rust damage. The later developed varieties such as sturdy were bred to be partially resistant to rust damage. The Wichita variety is one of the most susceptible varieties. It was this variety that has shown by far the most damage.

If you have looked at the wheat recently you have noticed a marked improvement. This has been due to the sub-freezing temperature.

In the late 1950's we saw a severe infestation of rust that defoliated wheat. It was late Spring after freezing temperatures were over. The wheat was farther enough along in its maturity period that no damage was done.

Our likelihood of a spring infestation of rust is no greater than normal. The fall infestation of rust spores will be totally killed by winter weather. Rust usually follows a long wet spell and wild 45 to 60 degree temperatures. We believe the present rust problem will have very little affect on yields next spring. Again I stand to be corrected if I am wrong. Much of this information was taken from an excellent publication put out by the Kansas Experiment Station. The rest was learned in the school of hard knocks.

Learning May Exceed Profits Of 1974 4-H Swine Producers

Today's young hog producers, including those in the national 4-H swine program are finding it increasingly tough to make a profit. Always confronted with risks, the current squeeze, resulting from spiraling costs and shrinking market price, has placed producers in a tight financial position.

Even so, many of the young hog farmers will find 1974 a successful year. They are the ones who will share in the many awards offered by Moorman Mfg. Co., in the Cooperative Extension Service supervised national 4-H swine program. Some 5,300 young people are expected to qualify for awards which include — six national scholarships of $700 each, an expense-paid trip to National 4-H Congress (one per state) and more than 5,200 winners of county medals of honor (four per county).

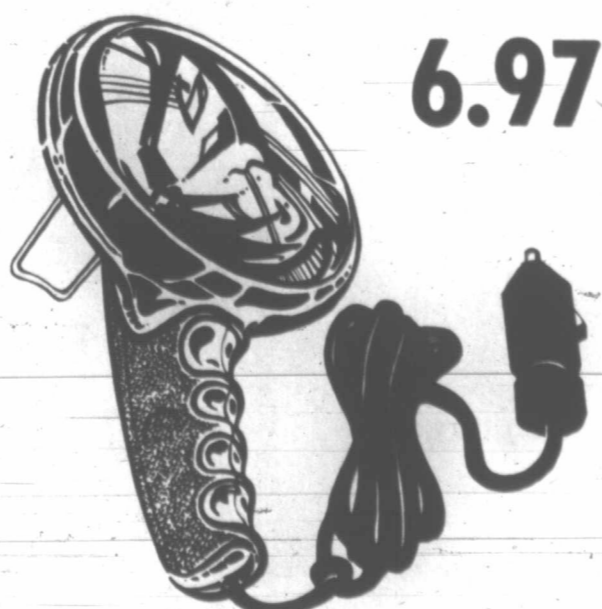

Although the year may produce little dollar profit for the nearly 110,000 members enrolled in 4-H swine program, it promises to be educationally stimulating. And it could be just the right time to get the "learning by doing" experience necessary to take advantage of an improved economic situation in the future.

Young swine producers are encouraged to help do their part to produce more meat through the national 4-H swine program. Sponsored nationally by Moorman Mfg. Co., Inc., boys and girls in the program learn all aspects of swine production, from raising the animal to marketing techniques that bring him to the family dinner table. The 4-H swine program is supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service and awards are arranged through the National 4-H Service Committee.

Water Supply Placement Major Factor In Economy

The investment return ratio on the rancher's dollar day points toward more intensive management of grasslands. According to soil conservationist, Rodney Hyatt, the implementation of a more intense grazing system will help ease this situation.

To initiate such a grazing system may require the grouping of cattle into larger herds, thereby requiring more livestock water in each grazing unit. Consequently, Hyatt encourages landowners to consider a reasonably large trough at watering sites. This will help eliminate a major problem many ranchers over the state have encountered when they began their planned rotational grazing systems: WATER SHORTAGE!

Spacing water facilities as evenly possible throughout pastures is also important for better livestock grazing distribution stated Hyatt.

Livestock wells and water storage facilities as pictured above, are the most dependable and permanent source of stock water for this area.

Planning and cost-share assistance is available to landowners and operators for land improvements through the Gray County Soil & Water Conservation District.

On The Farm Front

By B. BRENNER
UPI FARM EDITOR
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the midst of a world grain shortage that has produced warnings of possible famine in some developing countries, world milk production is rising to surplus levels this year, a new Agriculture Department analysis reports.

The report by the agency's Foreign Agricultural Service said global milk production is rising about 2 per cent this year after an increase of under 1.5 per cent in 1973.

As a result, the report said, pressures to find new export markets for dairy products are growing in traditional exporting areas including New Zealand.

Those developments, the FAS said, signal increased pressure on importing countries including the United States to accept more dairy products.

American dairy farmers, who complain they are losing money because of high feed costs, have been putting counterpressures on the administration to resist any increase in U.S. dairy import quotas.

President Ford recently promised the government would not raise dairy import levels without advance consultation with farm spokesmen.

The FAS report said milk production prospects for 1975 will depend heavily on weather conditions affecting crops and pastures as well as on other factors including meat prices.

Experts pointed out that milk production increased this year because a worldwide beef glut has held cattle prices down and made it unattractive in some countries to sell dairy cattle for beef slaughter.

Another major factor, experts indicated, will be government decisions on milk prices.

"Since prices of milk and other dairy products are artificially maintained in most countries to protect farmer incomes, market conditions are secondary to government policy in their effect on milk prices," the FAS analysis said.

With good weather, experts speculated that continuing inflation will lead to further rises in milk prices and global milk production will increase another 1 to 2 per cent.

The report said the 1974 production gain of about 2 per cent is due largely to increases in New Zealand and the European Common Market. In Europe, where support prices were increased 5 per cent in October, surplus stocks are 1774 — Benjamin Franklin, in London as a representative of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts Bay colonies, supposedly is in disfavor with the British government, having been berated in the Privy Council early in the year, and dismissed as deputy postmaster general for America. Now, however, he is being approached indirectly on behalf of Lord North and the British cabinet to use his influence to bring about a reconciliation between the colonies and the mother country. He is offered almost any financial reward if he can do so, with an advance payment of about $8,000 promised. Franklin's answer is that only a repeal of the Coercive Acts and a withdrawal of British troops from Boston could provide a basis for such a reconciliation, and those terms are unacceptable in London. Franklin is so offended by the use of money and social pressure in this manner that he is driven to believe that American independence is the only proper course.

1824 — The landing of the Pilgrims in New England 204 years ago is commemorated at Plymouth, Mass., with "splendor and magnificence," the town brilliantly illuminated, an evening ball and supper, and many visitors present. The ceremonies opened with song and prayer, and an oration by Prof. Edward Everett, of Harvard, a former Boston clergyman, now editor of the North American Review, and later to serve three terms as governor of Massachusetts, as well as in the House and Senate, in the Cabinet, and as U.S. envoy to Great Britain, and also as president of Harvard. In great demand as a speaker, he raised $70,000 with a lecture on George Washington, the funds turned over to the Mount Vernon Association to help purchase Washington's estate as a national shrine.

U.S. Army strength now is 5,779, with the law limiting that strength to 6,183. Pensioners from the Revolutionary War now number 13,034.

1874 — There is great excitement in Nevada with the reported discovery of a new vein of silver behind a rock wall in the rich Cornstock Lode, with an estimated yield worth $150 million. Mining stocks soar on the San Francisco exchange.

Complaints about "the demoralizing Parisian-canon dance" bring a police raid on the Metropolitan Theater in New York with the proprietor of the theater and 12 dancing girls taken to the police station. Broadway crowds yell in derision at the police, and the girls are cheered.

A watch given to the Marquis de Lafayette by General Washington in 1782, and stolen from him at Nashville during his U.S. tour in 1824-1825, had been found in a Louisville pawn shop in 1873 and purchased for $75 by a gentleman who recognized its value. Congress appropriated $300 a few months ago to buy the watch, and it is presented to Lafayette's grandson at this time in a ceremony at the American Legation in Paris. Lafayette himself had died in 1834, but members of his family were present, with other distinguished persons, as U.S. Minister Elihu Benjamin Washburn made the presentation to Osgare de La Fayette.

Suffolk Lamb Grand Champ

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 125-pound Suffolk lamb owned by Charles Hunter of Blanco, Tex., has won the open class grand championship title at the 1974 International Live Stock Exposition.

Judges in the exposition's first major livestock judging event Thursday chose Hunter's lamb for having the best quality and largest lamb chop and leg of lamb on the hoof.

"Lambie," a 100-pound Hampshire-Suffolk crossbred belonging to 14-year-old Lonna Bolin, Maravia, Iowa, took the junior grand championship, but lost in open class competition.

The reserve grand championship went to a 124-pound Suffolk lamb owned by Richard Roe, St. Ansgar, Iowa.

Teresa Jahner, 15, won the junior reserve grand championship for her 100-pound Suffolk lamb.

The grand championship pen went to five feeder Chianna-Angus crossbred calves owned by Jerry Adamson, Cody, Neb. Five Hereford calves exhibited by Larry Descheemaeker, Sheridan, Mont., won the reserve grand championship.

More than 3,500 cattle, hogs and sheep have been entered in the exposition, which is celebrating its 75th anniversary.

THE SCIENTISTS TELL ME ...

By Robert L. Haney, Science Writer
The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station

Grade Changes Should Show True Beef Quality

Tenderness is the quality most consumers look for in beef. Yet the present beef grading system does not accurately reflect this quality. It is time for a change in the system, according to many people in the meat industry.

Researchers with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station have proved that the present system does not accurately identify quality factors associated with ultimate eating satisfaction of consumers. Consequently, the system not only is unsatisfactory but is frequently unfair to producer, feeder, processor, retailer and consumer.

Early research work discredited the belief that fatness was closely associated with tenderness in meat. Later research has proved that marbling (fat distributed in the lean), the primary criterion of the present USDA Beef Quality Grading system, has at best a very low positive correlation with tenderness. And tenderness is the dominant attribute considered by consumers in rating palatability of beef steaks and roasts, according to Dr. Zerle Carpenter, one of the Experiment Station scientists engaged in meat research.

Maturity is another criterion included in the grading system that Carpenter believes is not accurate. Meatpacking groups agree and point out that improved breeding and feeding practices involved in beef production have resulted in the marketing of more young finished cattle. To these the maturity consideration doesn't apply.

Furthermore, present grading standards encourage the feeder to produce an animal that is too fat. In fact, he is penalized if he doesn't produce such an animal, and those last few pounds the animal puts on to make grade are usually the most expensive gains he makes. But the meatpacker doesn't really want overfat animals nor does the retailer. And consumers have shown repeatedly that they don't want fat beef.

The present beef grading system does not encourage the production of the right kind of beef, and it is unable to reward production of the kind of beef the consumer actually wants.

What kind is that? It's well-finished, tender beef that's not too fatty but is juicy, nutritious and tasty.

Experiment Station researchers are looking into what constitutes desired quality in beef, better ways to produce quality, and easy ways to identify it. Such information should provide a sound basis for decisions on grading changes.

For example, discovery that relaxed muscle fibers are more tender than contracted ones led to a practical application through a new system of suspending sides of beef from the pelvic bone, following slaughter. This produces more tender steaks and roasts from the loin, rib and round and is known worldwide as the Texas A&M Tenderstretch Method," Carpenter says. Degree of tenderness is improved about 40 percent.

Dr. Thayne Dutton, Dr. Gary Smith, and Professor Robert Hostetler are other Experiment Station scientists who have done much research on different characteristics of muscle tissue. They found that beef will be tenderer if it is not chilled immediately after slaughter. Instead, carcasses kept at about 60°F for 6 to 8 hours after slaughter and then chilled produce tenderer beef.

If meat can be identified during processing as potentially tough, then it can be tenderized, according to Carpenter and his associates.

In addition to Tenderstretch and delayed chill, there are mechanical tenderizers as well as those using enzymes (naturally occurring or of plant origin).

"Aging meat is a way to tenderize it with naturally occurring enzymes. Eight to 14 days is the optimal time to age it," Carpenter says.

"We feel the industry should take advantage of one additional way to get this desired quality. We should put to work the trait of heritable tenderness discovered by Experiment Station scientists Dr. O. D. Butler and Dr. T. C.

Cartwright. They proved tenderness definitely can be transmitted from beef parent to offspring. If we would offer incentives to the producer and identify tender vs. less tender beef and pay for the characteristic, then we would have increased interest in producing tender beef. We know this can be done, but we'll have to revise the system to take advantage of it.

"In summary," Carpenter said, "we must develop new methods for identifying carcasses according to expected palatability. Because the grading system is important to the livestock industry and the consuming public, TAES scientists have accepted the challenge of developing an improved system and consequently have implemented a series of high priority studies intended to provide a new beef grading system. Some minor changes in the USDA grading system have been proposed recently; TAES research generally supports these changes. However, major modifications are needed but must be based upon sound research evidence. Then, those who produce and market the kind of beef desired by the consumers will be recognized and rewarded for their efforts."

POINT OF VIEW

Newhart says reality is 'in'

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It was the late Joe E. Lewis who once observed that Bob Newhart looked like some anonymous fellow on the street selling Watch Tower. Newhart would disagree with that assessment but only slightly. "Me, I think I look like a fellow who's about two years away from being branch manager of one of the smaller markets."

What Bob Newhart may not resemble at all, in the public image, is a psychologist, which is the role he portrays in his hugely successful CBS comedy series, a part of the network's Saturday night Murderer's Row.

"The truth is, I look like an accountant," says Newhart. "That's been my trouble. I looked the part of an accountant so I'd get hired as one even though I got my degree in management at Loyola University, back in Chicago."

"Translated, a management degree means you went through school without knowing what you wanted to be. But I wasn't cut out for accounting. I was always putting a dollar or two of my own into petty cash. Had to, in order to keep the books straight. Well, the company I was working for wasn't too happy with that ..."

By the time Newhart found his true niche, in comedy, he had also flunked out of law school after two years

("which is no disgrace," he adds, "because so few people do make it at Loyola they hold their graduations in a closet") and strayed through an assortment of jobs, which included clerking in a cigar store.

From the start, when he emerged in the late 1950s, it was no easy matter to pin down Newhart's particular brand of humor. It was satiric, contemporary and sharply observed, its lampooning right on target. One of his best-known monologues, for instance, presupposed that the art of public relations, of image-making, was as highly polished in Abraham Lincoln's time as it is today.

Lifting an imaginary phone to his ear, Newhart would become the high-powered public relations counsel calling long distance to Gettysburg: "Abe, listen, you got the speech? You haven't changed the speech, have you, Abe? You typed it? Abe, how many times have we told you — on the BACKS OF ENVELOPES! ... Anything else? You changed 'four score and seven' to what? To 87? I understand it means the same thing, Abe, but that's meant to be a grabber. We test-marketed four score and seven in Erie and they flipped, Abe ..."

And there was his record

item about the games manufacturer listening to Abner Doubleday describing an invention of his called baseball ("That's the most complicated game I ever heard of. Forget it. ... But, listen, if you come up with anything two or three couples can play, let us know ...")

"Lately," Bob was saying, "I've had to change my comedy in clubs somewhat. I do less routines and more conversational stuff. I can still do the Driving Instructor but I've got to talk to an audience more. In Marshall McLuhan terms, the audiences want to feel involved. It requires an adapting of the comic to a new mood of people out in front."

"Something very similar happened in television," Bob went on. "McCluhan said that radio was the hot medium, TV viewers would sit back and the comic or the comedy show would lay everything out and never really become involved. Even the laugh track told the viewers when to laugh."

"Now the big thing in television comedy is reality and involvement. That's why when I told the producers I didn't want to be a father knows best. At first, there was talk of making me the boy next door. But the network went out and took a poll — turned out that eight out of 10 people can't stand the boy next door."

Newhart actually had one major proviso — no kids and no dogs. "The old 'TV family' format was gone," he says, "along with the gimmick show, like 'The Flying Nun' and 'I Dream of Jeannie.' What succeeds now is 'Sanford and Son' and Mary Tyler Moore and 'Rhoda' and 'Chico and the Man' and of course 'All in the Family,' and what makes Archie Bunker work is that there really are Archie Bunkers."

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SUNDAY, DEC. 1
Your birthday today: Sends you off on your own in a most subtle, intricate pattern of unique opportunities for personal growth. It will be a definite challenge for you to find a balanced program that provides for spiritual as well as intellectual and material enrichment. Today's natives frequently have many talents but are able to concentrate exclusively on a specialty.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Local events make this Sunday busy and complicated. Fit as many activities as possible into your time. Don't allow anyone to have a monopoly on your attention.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Your appraisal of today's complex conditions isn't overly brilliant, but neither is that of many VIP's. Excuse yourself from entering business transactions.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Consider what you would do if you were by yourself, and take this into account when you select your course of action. If you can go it alone, do so.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: People and conditions recede from practical controls or fixed schedules. Do your own thinking, offer very little in the way of comment and don't force issues.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Nothing is exactly as it appears to be today. Hold onto your money. Many things that tempt you have no intrinsic value. Protect your health by avoiding fatigue.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Check everything out. Everything improves, but nothing takes specific form or direction. Proceed on faith, but don't expect excitement.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Relatives and neighbors all have schemes. Avoid them, and don't sign your name or jeopardize credit rating for anyone else's obligations.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Your finest endorsement today is how well you present yourself. Hobbies deserve renewed interest and should be shared. Gambling is exceptionally tricky.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: In today's rush of distracting incidents and odd appearances, don't be misled. There is no short cut to wealth and personal power.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Correct conclusions are hard to achieve; a diagnosis of even ordinary problems, elusive. Decisions are better postponed for further consideration.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Social movement is in directions you hadn't planned. You find improvising awkward and expensive. You'll be happier if you can successfully "sit this one out."

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Keep business out of your Sunday even more so than usual. Share creative hobbies or competition sports. Don't expect people to live up to their promises.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 2
Your birthday today: This year's effort has two main goals: overcoming limitations and gathering resources. Success in both seems probably if spiritual development through regular meditation is sought. Relationships come easier, more often have a serious rather than a superficial quality. Today's natives are energetic, thrifty, with a tendency toward a belief in destiny.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Pitch in to do something to everyone's benefit as you set up schedules for the coming work week. Poll associates for whatever positive suggestions they have to offer.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Close relatives are underfoot, worrisome and unexpectedly in the way. Don't say much ahead of time about your specific plans.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: You can't afford to speculate in financial dilemmas. Conventional methods are still the most reliable. Check up on any health symptoms.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Everyone around you seems to be in the doldrums and requires tactical handling. Persistence pays off. Find out what you need to protect your health.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: If you can work away from the center of public attention, fine. Some of what is necessary now may not please you, but be sure to do it promptly.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Today calls for extra cash outlays no matter what. Don't neglect routines, however trivial, but don't tend to them more than you have to.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: A slow start takes patience. You can upgrade your financial situation by judicious management, hard work. Older people, perhaps parents, need special care.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Technical agents are unlikely to be very useful; postpone formal or legal action where possible. It's time to objectively evaluate your personality.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: All monetary affairs are open to suspicion. Confidential projects bring unexpected side effects, but are generally beneficial.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Your marriage partner and competitive activities all scatter your attention. Slacken off until you figure out which problem is the most urgent.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You try too much too fast today. Put most of your restless energy into career or business ventures. Evening includes a bit of excitement, pleasant surprises.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Ask for whatever you've earned, but leave the situation open for more negotiation tomorrow. You speculate in misguided circles.

Now that the White House agrees we're in a recession, it will swing into action to place the blame.

Senator Bensen thinks there's a groundswell in Texas for his Presidential hopes. However, Senator Jackson is confident it's a dry hole.

MAN AND MEDICINE

Circumcision Question Raised

By IRWIN J. POLK, M.D.
Copley News Service

Circumcision is a topic with doctors again.

Over the years, this operation to remove the foreskin has been a topic with doctors, usually for medical reasons. Now health insurance carriers are asking groups of specialists to help them decide whether or not circumcision of newborns should be covered by insurance. So the question arises again as to whether or not circumcision is economically and medically the thing to do to a newborn boy.

The circumcision operation has an interesting history. It dates back to ancient Egypt where it was done to mark the slaves apart from the rest of the people. Eventually all descendants of slaves were circumcised.

The Phoenicians and later the Jews who were largely slaves in Egypt turned the circumcision operation into a ritual. Independently in places as far apart as North and South America and Australia ritual circumcision developed. It was often used as a test of the ability of the man to withstand pain as he entered into adult life. But aside from the use of circumcision as a religious rite, there seemed to be no special use for the operation.

Then about 1942 it began to be reported that there was less cancer of the uterus in women whose husbands had been circumcised. Cancer of the cervix, for example, was found to be 20 times more common in women who were married to uncircumcised men than in women whose husbands had been operated on. So there appeared to be medical justification for the operation. Other evidence in favor of circumcision has appeared.

Cancer of the prostate is less common in men who have had circumcision. Cancer of the penis is less common in men who have been circumcised in infancy. Also less common are many other diseases of the male organ, infections, obstruction to the urinary outflow, for example. So there appears to be some medical justification for the operation.

Are there any drawbacks to circumcision? Probably not. The rate of complications for this operation is negligible when it is done by a qualified operator on an otherwise healthy, normal child. Of course, a complete physical examination of the infant is essential before any operation is done. This is no less true for circumcision.

For while the operation is safe in almost all infants, there are a few infants who might have trouble with it. This group includes the infants whose genitalia are malformed at birth as well as infants with defects in the blood-clotting process. But for almost all male infants, circumcision is a safe procedure.

Economically, the operation is best performed in the newborn period. The child is already in the hospital and need not be admitted especially for surgery. Circumcision is usually done on the first day of life or ritually on the eighth day. In either case, the otherwise normal infant is ready to go home when his mother does.

Psychologically, the newborn period is suitable. There is no chance that the boy will have any unhappy memory of an operation done on him in infancy. The usual objections to this operation in older children and adults are chiefly psychological ones.

In fact, most of the objections to circumcision are on psychological grounds. There has always been an argument against circumcision which says that removing the foreskin may lessen the sensitivity of the organ. This has not been clearly shown to be the case. But the argument remains, possibly because the subject of surgery to the male sex organ is an uncomfortable one for many men including doctors.

Nevertheless, the question remains: Is it advisable for medical reasons and economic ones to circumcise the newborn male? The answer on both counts would seem to be: yes.

Deaf tend to pair with deaf spouse

A census recently completed by New York University and the National Association of the Deaf reports that deaf persons marry less frequently than their age peers in the general population.

When they do marry, they are more apt to pair with deaf spouses and their marriages tend to be somewhat less stable than marriages in general. — CNS

Briscoe, Lawmakers Receive Public School Updating Plan

AUSTIN — An updated public school finance plan, keyed to a fair market value index of taxable property throughout Texas, is among 17 recommendations sent to Gov. Dolph Briscoe and the 64th Legislature Tuesday by the State Board of Education.

The proposals are included in a booklet, "Recommendations for Legislative Consideration on Public Education in Texas," and two supplementary booklets, "Public School Finance Plan" and "Public School Organization," according to Dr. M.L. Brockett, state commissioner of education.

Substantially an expansion of the Foundation School Program, the plan incorporates proposals recommended to the 63rd session of the Legislature by the Board in February, 1973. Under the plan, funding of the Texas public school system would be built on four key points: (1) Expansion of the present Foundation School Program to a level providing an adequate base of support. (2) Establishment of a market value index by the Legislature. (3) Expansion of school district capability to enrich the Foundation School Program and equalization of that capability if market value data are available. (4) Retention of debt service and capital outlay as a local responsibility.

Supplementary recommendations on public school organization included: (1) School District Responsibility. (2) County School Administration. and (3) State Plan for the Governance of Public School Education. The balance of the proposals are contained in one publication. They include:

He joined TSTA in June, 1961, and is now serving as director, Division of Special Services.

Mother Earth News

By JOHN SUTTLEWORTH
I have to chuckle every time I hear one of the government's (or industry's) "experts" rattle on today about energy conservation.

"Give us 20 billion (or 100 billion or a trillion) dollars," they say, "and by 1985 (or 1990 or 2200), we'll be able to design and build houses that use only half (or one-third or one-fourth) the energy our homes now consume."

I chuckle because a fellow named Wendell Thomas has already made the breakthrough that those self-styled experts are looking for. He did it 26 years ago. On an investment of practically nothing.

And, from the day that his ideas were put into operation, he spent not one single cent on fuel to either warm or cool his home!

It was in 1948 that Wendell and his wife retired to the Celso Community in the mountains of western North Carolina. The couple bought an acre of land for $100 (those were the "good ole days") and set to work building a 32 by 24 foot shed-roof dwelling.

"It was a moderately solar-heated house," says Thomas. "But its main feature was the way I arranged vents in the main floor and set up a Riteway heater in the building."

What Wendell did was: (1) he dug a generous basement under the house. (2) he cut a series of vents in the building's main floor just inside the exterior walls and (3) he installed a large grill — again, in the main floor — and his wood-burning heater right in the center of the dwelling. This rather unusual arrangement of vents and heater set up a very interesting circulation of air in the Thomas home.

During the winter, cold air flowed down the inside of the building's exterior walls, through the vents around the outside of the main floor and into the basement. There, since the surrounding ground was warmer than he outside atmosphere, the air was somewhat heated and began to rise back to the main level through the grill in the center of the house.

As it passed the wood-burning stove, it was warmed still more. This made the air flow up to the dwelling's roof where it spread out to the exterior walls, was cooled and began to sink to the basement again.

The normal winter air circulation in the Thomas home, then, took the shape of a giant two-story donut that rolled up in the middle and down around the outside.

In the summer, this donut was still there...but it flowed the other way, the air on the main floor just inside the building's exterior walls was warmed by the heat coming in through those walls...and it rose. As it did so, it pulled cooler air up from the basement to take its place. Which, in turn, pulled more air across the basement's floor...still more air down through the central grill...and so on.

Thus the two-story donut atmosphere in the Thomas house sank in its center and rose around the outside during the summer...and the main floor was cooled with "air conditioning" from the basement.

Wendell says, "On the coldest winter mornings, when the temperature outside was zero, the temperature inside — with no heat in the stove — was about 50 degrees F. A fire in the stove would raise that to 70 degrees within 10 minutes, and at nine in the morning, we'd let the blaze go out."

"The sun would take over and keep the temperature of the house above 70. What little wood we burned was cut from our own property and we spent not a cent on fuel."

During the summer, it never got more than 85 degrees in the place."

Wendell Thomas' first "self-heating-self-cooling" house, then, worked a whole lot better than approximately 99.9 percent of all the dwellings ever constructed in North America. Still, he figured that he could do better and — in 1957 — Thomas constructed an improved version of his home.

This second house had all the good features of the first and, in addition, was set right down into the ground on its north and west sides. No windows at all were placed in the north wall and the glass used on the other sides of the building was two — and even three — panes thick for insulation.

Result? Temperatures inside the house never drop below 60 degrees F. in the winter and never climb above 75 degrees during the summer. That's a maximum variation of only 15 degrees year-round!

AKND THERE'S MORE!
Thanks to the largely vertical circulation of air in the Thomas home, the upstairs walls never dry out and crack in the winter. Nor does the basement become damp and moldy during the summer. Wendell's house, in short, works the way a house should work.

So, all you "experts" take note. You don't need umpteen zillion dollars and forty-seven years of paper shuffling to develop and test a comfortable dwelling that can be heated and cooled for mere pennies a year.

For a more complete and illustrated description of the construction and operation of the Thomas homes, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to the Mother Earth News, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 39, "The Self-Heating, Self-Cooling House."

THE PATRIOT YEARS Sheep shipment barred in N. Y.

Copley News Service

The following item is from the Pennsylvania Packet, Philadelphia, in the fall of 1774, 200 years ago:

NEW-YORK — On Monday last a discovery being made that 18 sheep were in a sloop in the harbour, bound for the West-Indies, a number of citizens waited on the Captain, and informed him that the exportation of sheep was contrary to a resolution of the Continental Congress, and thereupon obtained his promise that they should be re-landed, and not carried out of the harbour.

The people were satisfied and patiently waited till evening, when a report prevailed that the vessel was to sail that night; about two hundred inhabitants assembled on the wharf, appointed and sent four persons to wait on the Committee of Correspondence, and request their advice concerning the measures proper to be taken.

By their advice the merchant to whom the vessel came consigned, was sent for, and desired to cause the sheep to be handed and delivered to one of the Committee, appointed on this occasion, by the people, which person gave his promise to return the sheep as soon as the vessel had sailed.

Accordingly the sheep were landed, delivered, and soon after the vessel was sailed, returned to the proprietor; on which the people, being well satisfied, peaceably dispersed.
