

Grand Jury Subpoenas Fired Bell Executive

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Fired Southwestern Bell executive James H. Ashley, who won a court fight Monday to protect telephone company records that might be used as evidence in his $29 million libel suit against the telephone company, was subpoenaed before a federal grand jury today to tell what he knows about alleged wrongdoing in the company.

Following a day long hearing Monday, granted Ashley and his attorney, Pat Maloney, an injunction they sought to protect subpoenaed documents in the case and to prevent Bell and American Telephone & Telegraph from tapping telephones of the accusers and their attorneys.

There may not be any records. There may not be any monitoring devices. Curry made the ruling despite a strong denial by William J. Jonas Jr., a former FBI agent who heads security for Bell in San Antonio, and other telephone company officials that the utility ever engaged in any wiretapping without a proper court order.

Jonas testified. "Mr. Robert Wimmer, supervisor, prepared the report under my supervision." He denied any knowledge of similar dossiers prepared on Austin city councilmen, alleged in a deposition by Bill Holman, Bell district manager in Austin who also is subpoenaed for today's grand jury.

John Siesel, commercial engineer for Bell in San Antonio, denied Ashley's allegation that he participated in shredding files. Maloney called J.L. Patterson, an electronics expert who said he previously found taps on the telephones of the Houston police chief and district attorney.

MIDEAST INTERVENTION?

Survival is paramount

It is not reckless saber-rattling for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to discuss the possibility that Arab oil policies could lead to military intervention by the West if they result in "actual strangulation of the industrialized world." He has simply stated a condition of international affairs that should have been considered all along — and probably has been — by oil-exporters who regard their vital commodity as a political weapon.

Potential circumstances which would dictate a military takeover of oil fields in the Middle East have been discussed privately ever since the Arabs rolled out their oil weapon in the form of production cutbacks and an embargo last winter. At the public level, U.S. officials have confined their remarks to the most restrained sort of warnings that boycotts and extortionary pricing policies could lead to "disaster" for the world at large if they created an energy and economic crisis of sufficient magnitude.

There is no reason why the various aspects of any potential disaster should not be examined. That is how disasters can be prevented. It is also how preparations can be made to deal with them if they occur.

President Ford commented recently that Mr. Kissinger was making "a highly qualified answer to a hypothetical situation" when he acknowledged in a magazine interview that U.S. military action in the Middle East could not be ruled out. Of course the "strangulation of the industrialized world" by loss of its basic fuel supply is a hypothetical situation, and Mr. Ford himself dealt with the same hypothesis in a speech last Sept. 23. He warned oil producers that their policies could lead to "a breakdown of world order and safety," which is another way of saying they could lead to war.

The industrial nations, our own included, would have no justification in threatening the Arabs with war or invasion just because we are being inconvenienced by their oil policies. However, every nation is committed to its own survival above all else, and when actual survival becomes the issue, its military forces are the only weapon it may turn to.

The Middle East has seen two wars since 1967 and could be on the brink of another because the state of Israel faces a threat to its survival and Israelis have committed themselves to preserving their nation at any cost. Whether or not one agrees with the strategy Israel has employed, it is hard to argue that the Israelis do not have a right to use military power to preclude their extermination. Mr. Kissinger has simply pointed out that if other nations truly find their backs to the wall as a result of Arab policies, they are no more likely than Israel to let themselves go under without a fight.

No cheap, safe bumper?

Automakers are happy, understandably, over a proposed rollback in bumper standards, which, according to industry spokesmen, have added as much as $120 to the cost of the average car.

But the reduction in the requirement that bumpers absorb the impact of a 5-miles-per-hour collision to effectiveness at half that speed does not stir similar joy among auto insurers. An executive of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety said repair costs have been reduced by more than two-thirds for cars involved in minor, low-speed accidents since the standards were adopted in 1972.

The Department of Transportation has justified its proposal by citing anticipated gas savings tied to elimination of 100 pounds from the typical vehicle.

The contemplated change would remain in effect until 1980 when the "no-damage" standard would be raised again — this time to 4 m.p.h. Manufacturers think "the technology is here" to meet the 1980 requirement with plastic or rubber bumpers, but the bumpers on 1975 models do not.

Harried car owners, squeezed by the higher costs of driving or repairing, will have the opportunity to comment during a 45-day period before the new ruling is effective. They may be justified in asking why they can't have both economy and safety.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Words and How They Trip You

By WILLIAM RUSHER

Edwin Newman's new book "Strictly Speaking: Will America be the Death of English?" has obviously touched a nerve. Or is it being so widely discussed merely because it deals with one of the pet preconceptions of us professional verbalizers — columnist, editorial writers, TV commentators etc. — who necessarily determine in large part what gets talked about? Probably the answer lies somewhere in between.

English is one of those subjects on which I like to think of myself as only a moderate conservative. Certainly I cannot be counted among the fanatics for whom a split infinitive or a dangling preposition is a crime ranking somewhere between cannibalism and genocide. Nor am I a deliberate word collector, like one friend of mine who literally rummages through dictionaries looking for rare and unfamiliar words, which he then contrives to insert into otherwise unremarkable sentences. The basic purpose of language after all is to communicate, and it hardly serves that purpose to load one's paragraphs with archaic terms that simply halt semantic traffic while the writer shows off his vocabulary.

At the same time, I get a little impatient with friends who object that some word I have used is too wordy or too pedantic.

"Recondite" itself is often complained of, though Webster's defines it as meaning "beyond the grasp of the ordinary mind or understanding" — or, in other words, exactly what I had in mind to say. No doubt there is some way to say more or less the same thing more simply "too hard" would probably have conveyed my general meaning fairly well. But "hard," according to Webster's, has 16 different meanings when used as an adjective, plus 8 more when used as an adverb, so it is scarcely a very precise vehicle for the conveyance of meaning. And precision is worth taking some trouble over, for imprecision is the enemy of all clear and effective thought.

Grammatical errors are generally to be avoided for "the same reason." I don't know nothing about it, it is logically the precise opposite of "I don't know anything about it," and only experience has taught us that it is usually intended, not as the opposite of the second statement, but merely as an emphatic and ungrammatical variant of it. We are forced to go through life listening not so much to what people actually say as to the noises they make, from which we try as best we can to deduce their real meaning.

Of course every language is constantly changing, and I believe within reason, in keeping up with the times. There is no more excuse for using "alack" or "harken" today than there is for wearing a codpiece or a bustle: they are all outmoded. Yet I confess that I grieve over the almost total disappearance of the old and (I should have thought) familiar and useful distinction between "convince" and "persuade." Both are transitive verbs, but until recently only "persuade" was ever followed by the infinitive: "I persuaded him to do this and so." "Convince" was followed by "that": "I convinced him that such and such was true."

Now, alas, just about everybody has stopped using "persuade" altogether and instead uses "convince" with the infinitive: "I convinced him to do this and so" — a construction that sounds to my ear at any rate, as obtrusive and generally offensive as a buzz-saw. A neat distinction of emphasis — between my efforts and his interior conversion — has been lost.

Charles Kettering, the famous research director of General Motors, is supposed to have been the author of the dictum that "A problem well stated is a problem half solved." Logically speaking, as an irritated nit-picker once pointed out when I quoted it, that isn't strictly true. But Kettering was onto something very important nevertheless. When we have learned to describe a problem with precision we are usually well on our way to solving it, because the very process of describing it will tend to suggest its components and their accessibility to modification. And that's worth knowing, Dig?

CHEWING TOBACCO

NEW YORK (UPI) — According to government and industry estimates, the combined production of smokeless or chewing tobacco and snuff for 1974 will be 107 million pounds, an increase of seven per cent over the 1973 total.

Chewing tobacco will likely total 82 million pounds, its highest level in 20 years. Snuff output for 1974 is estimated at 25 million pounds. All but less than one per cent of U.S. snuffs are taken in the same way as chewing tobacco, that is, tasted rather than snuffed.

These figures are based on U.S. Department of Agriculture figures for the first nine months of 1974.

TIME LAG

NEW YORK (UPI) — Astronomers at The American Museum-Hayden Planetarium report that the year 1974 was 365 days and one second long. The extra "leap-second" was added by our nation's timekeepers. The National Bureau of Standards, to keep our clocks in step with planet earth.

Astronomical time is based on the rotation of the earth, but our basic timekeeping is by atomic clock. Our planet is slowing down, at an irregular rate, and so periodically we must add an extra second to our year.

The leap-second was inserted at the end of December 31. Thus the start of 1975 A.D. was delayed by that one second.

Universe One-Shot Deal That May Expand Forever

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service
The universe of which we are a part is a one-shot deal that most likely will continue to expand forever, eventually leaving our own Milky Way galaxy alone like a celestial island in a sea of spatial darkness.

This is the conclusion reached by four astronomers at the California Institute of Technology and the University of Texas after a prolonged and intensive study of all astronomical data to date.

The evidence indicates, the scientists said, that there is far too little matter in the universe for the forces of gravity ever to pull it back together again.

The team put forth its view in the current issue of the Astrophysical Journal. Its members are Dr. J. Richard Gott III, an astrophysicist, and astronomer Dr. James E. Gunn, a professor of astronomy, both of Caltech, and Dr. David N. Schramm and Dr. Beatrice M. Tinsley, of the University of Texas.

The astronomers' conclusions strike at the heart of one of the key questions of science — the very nature and structure of the universe.

Most scientists believe that all the matter of the universe was once compacted into a tiny ball that exploded about 14 billion years ago and has been expanding ever since as some sort of great billowing cloud of gas.

Where concentrations of this gas occurred, gravitational forces created galaxies and within galaxies the stars and around some stars the planets.

However, in recent years, many, if not most, astronomers have come to the conclusion that the force of gravity will sooner or later overcome the explosive force of the "big bang" and pull the matter of the universe back into its original tiny ball, perhaps to explode again and start the expansion process all over once more. This concept is known as the oscillating or closed universe model.

This is the concept that the Caltech-Texas team rejects. Instead, they said, they favor an open universe that will continue to expand forever.

This expansion, Gunn noted, will not affect the Milky Way galaxy itself, but will gradually separate it from our own local group of galaxies and our own group from other groups.

The scientists came to their conclusion after studying almost all the available evidence about the universe and support this conclusion with a series of "arguments."

The main argument deals with the amount of observable mass in the universe. Gunn and his associates have added up the total mass and the total amount of gravity, calculated from the motions of objects in the universe, and compared them.

They conclude that the mass falls short by a factor of 10 or 20 of "closing" the universe. In short, the mass of the universe is too small and too diffuse for the force of gravity to pull it together again.

This is so, Gunn said, even if one considers the possibility that there is a great deal of mass hidden in the still theoretical "black holes," giant collapsed stars that are so dense that their gravity is so intense that nothing, not even light, can escape. If such holes exist, they would be impossible to detect by direct methods.

However, even this unobserved mass, which some believe may be in black holes or neutron stars, is not enough by a wide margin to close the universe, Gunn said.

Damon and Pythias: more than just good friends?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My friend and I have a difference of opinion. He says Damon and Pythias were homosexuals. I say they were straight. Can you check this out and let us know?
C AND B

DEAR C AND B: I wrote to twelve leading universities. Their responses included yeses, noes and maybes. I think the Chairman of the English Department at the University of Chicago summed it up very well:

"DEAR ABBY: You asked if Damon and Pythias were gay. In dealing with characters of such remote antiquity, who exist more in the realm of legend, it is sometimes difficult to find much evidence on the most intimate details of their private lives.

"Damon and Pythias were famous for their devotion to each other, and they were Greeks. Beyond that, I think whatever they did was pretty much their own business, and even if I knew, I wouldn't say."

"One less than eminent authority said to me: 'I think Damon was okay, but I'm not so sure about Pythias.'"

Sincerely,
STUART M. TAYE

DEAR ABBY: I have a better answer to your CONFIDENTIAL TO "SAME FIGHT EVERY YEAR": Apparently someone wrote in to say that she and her husband fought every year about whether they should go to HER parents' for Christmas and Thanksgiving dinner, or to HIS parents'.

You suggested a compromise: Thanksgiving, go to HER parents' and Christmas, go to HIS. I also fought that battle for years, and finally came up with the perfect solution. Now I have my own Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners. I invite my parents and my in-laws to our home. They can either accept or decline. In any case, the problem of where to go is solved.

NO MORE FIGHTS

DEAR NO MORE: You're right. Your solution IS better.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas, when we had our annual Christmas party, an unusual thing happened. Some of our guests mistook the "7 PM" on our invitation for "4 PM," and while we were just halfway prepared for our party, two couples arrived at 4 PM.

We were shocked but invited them in, offered them a drink and took turns chatting with them. In the meantime, we were trying to prepare the food, drinks, decorations and ourselves.

After a while we found out what had happened, but we didn't ask them to come back later and they didn't offer. Abby, what would you have done in this case?
GOOFED IN VEGAS

DEAR GOOFED: Same as you, I appreciate your sharing this "goff" because it gives me the opportunity to tell my readers to write out the hour ("seven o'clock in the evening," instead of using the numerical figure "7"). The three hours prior to the arrival of guests are the most hectic.

Public Outcry Growing For Privacy Protection

By United Press International
Last summer, a major scandal erupted in Texas when it was disclosed the state's Department of Public Safety was keeping intelligence files and had classified a Dallas airline pilot a "subversive."
Earlier this year, Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken called for repeal of the 1950 Subversive Activities Act, which has allowed state police to gather dossiers on 50,000 citizens suspected of organized criminal activity or subversion.
In Maryland, the state Senate is pressing for an investigation of alleged spying on private citizens and public officials by the Baltimore city police department.
The trend is apparent. The public is demanding increased protection for their right to privacy.
The public outcry in Texas resulted in the agency's "purging" its files, destroying those not related to criminal investigations. Legislation to disband secret police activities is expected to be introduced soon in Michigan, and the Maryland Senate is expected to designate a committee to investigate the Baltimore police.

Even states denying the existence of noncriminal files are drafting right to privacy legislation, designed in many instances to protect consumers from unfair computer snooping.
Rhode Island, for instance, is about to begin a pilot program with federal funds decriminalizing most traffic offenses. Sentences will be oriented more toward safety awareness than punishment.
In some cases, states have simply cut off funding for agencies maintaining secret files. Others never had the money to get started.

Two years ago, Mississippi Gov. Bill Waller vetoed funding for the old state Sovereignty Commission, which was created in the 1950s to protect the state's rights. The commission maintained secret files on various persons, including civil rights figures.
However, since Waller vetoed its funding, the commission's files were locked up and sealed in an underground records center. Although the commission is still on the books, it has no staff or investigators.
Major James T. Stanley, deputy director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, said, "We don't maintain those kinds of files." The reason, he said, is his agency doesn't have the money or personnel.
In Indiana, the attorney general and state police by law can keep certain files on noncriminals. State police keep records of all firearms permits, and the attorney general has a consumer protection division to keep files on complaints. There seldom is any public outcry over that type of file keeping.
But, a few states still retain dossiers on public officials and private citizens who have committed no crimes.
Kansas Attorney General Curt Schneider last month disclosed 3,000 to 4,000 files had been accumulated on individuals by the intelligence and organized crime unit of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation.
Schneider said at least 300 or 400 of the files were on persons who were considered innocent of any crime. He ordered the records sealed until he could examine them personally, and said he would destroy any file if there was no legitimate reason for the KBI to keep it.
New Jersey, which has indicted 150 public officials in the past five years, readily admits to keeping files on noncriminals and persons never accused of crimes, including politicians.
"They are kept because of the organized crime implication, not because they are politicians," a spokesman for the New Jersey attorney general said. "We have had an increasing effort against official corruption. We keep them where there is an allegation of criminality."

TWA Plane Crash Investigated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pilot and copilot of TWA Flight 514 knew there were mountains in the area — they discussed it. But they had been given permission by the air controller at Dulles to descend to the standard landing approach altitude — or 1,800 feet.
The crew decided to take the word of the controller and disregard their charts, which were hard to read anyway because stormy conditions were making for a rough flight. Five minutes later on Dec. 1 the airplane crashed on a mountain in the Blue Ridge range 23 miles from the airport, killing all 92 persons aboard.
Veteran airline captains testifying Monday at the government's inquiry into the crash said many pilots would have reacted to the clearance given Flight 514 by doing exactly the same things that which led to the TWA crash.

They expressed a lack of confidence in landing approach clearances given by air traffic controllers.
The controller who cleared Flight 514, Merle W. Dameron said he never received any formal instruction on the specific approach he ordered.
Flight 514's pilot Richard Brock got clearance about four miles northeast of Front Royal, Va.
"TWA 514, you're cleared for a VOR-DME approach to runway 1-2," the Dulles controller said.
A "VOR-DME" approach is a less precise instrument approach system than that used for the main runways at Dulles. But it is the only instrument equipment available for Runway 12, a secondary cross-wind strip at Dulles that all planes landing in Washington had to use in the storm-swept conditions that existed Dec. 1.
"Roger," Brock radioed back.

Then five seconds later he said to his copilot Leonard Kreshack: "Eighteen hundred's the bottom (indicating an intention to descend to 1,800 feet from an altitude of 7,000)."
Three minutes later Brock said to his crew: "You know, according to this dumb sheet (the airport approach map) it says 3,400 (feet) to Round Hill (a navigation point) is our minimum altitude."
During the next 90 seconds the crew members chatted back and forth, apparently unaware of any danger. Then Brock's final words, two seconds before the crash: "Get some power on!"
But it was too late. The final sounds were a warning horn indicating the jetliner was dangerously close to the ground, followed by the sound of impact.
Three pilots, all of whom landed on Runway 12 just before or just after the TWA crash, told the hearing Monday the turbulent wind conditions made it very hard to read airport approach charts as they neared Washington.
Pilot Jan Minkler of American Airlines said he got a landing approach clearance virtually identical to that given Flight 514 while his plane was about 30 miles from Dulles Dec. 1. He said it surprised him because the usual practice is for such clearance to withhold until a plane is about 10 miles from the airport.

Instead of taking his plane down immediately, Minkler said, he asked the radar controller for the minimum safe altitude and subsequently was given radar guidance to the airport.
Both Minkler and Eastern Airlines pilot V. J. Beaudrault said many pilots would have descended to the standard landing approach altitude — 1,800 feet in the case of Dulles — immediately after getting approach clearance. Beaudrault said the number who would do this was "many more than I would like to believe."
The technical questions being explored at the hearing are of vital importance to the safety of the 500,000 persons who fly on U.S. airliners each day.

Meat Packer Bonding Plan Under Study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposals to require bonding of meat packers will not solve problems posed by the current bankruptcy action involving a major midwest meat packer, an industry spokesman said today.
The bankruptcy of American Beef Packers, Inc., of Omaha, Neb., left farmers holding millions of dollars in at least temporarily uncollectible checks in a number of midwest states. It has produced new interest in legislation which would require packers to post bonds.
Congressional aides said several members of the House and Senate have been exploring possible legislation under which the federal Packers and Stockyards Administration would require packers bonding in the same way it now requires bonds from livestock dealers.
Richard E. Lyng, president of the American Meat Institute, said however, that bonding "doesn't seem to offer a solution" to the kinds of problems posed by the American Beef Packers case.
The AMI, a trade association representing major packers, has opposed bonding in the past and Lyng said "in all probability" probably will continue its opposition.
"If you bonded a packer heavily enough to protect farmers against a $25 million loss, the cost would be prohibitive. Complete bond protection would be so costly it probably would eliminate a very large number of packers from business," Lyng said.
The trade association executive said bonds offering "taken" protection covering only part of the amount packers pay farmers at any given time would be relatively cheap.
"But this would be of almost no value to farmers," Lyng said. In fact, he added, such bonds might lure farmers into a false sense of security.
The AMI president, who was an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture from 1969-72, said meat packers are "deeply concerned" about losses suffered by farmers. He said industry leaders "are going to give this problem close attention."

Eastland Denies Accepted Bribe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., powerful chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, denied allegations Tuesday that he took a "$50,000 to $80,000 payoff" from Texas oil billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.
Responding to allegations in a Monday column by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten that he took a payoff to keep Hunt's name out of a wiretapping case, Eastland said:
"There is absolutely no truth to the allegations that I took a bribe. I have never taken a payoff from anybody at any place at any time."
The newspaper column said Hunt asked Eastland to intervene with the Justice Department, but in 1973 "the department realized the lid was about to blow" and indicted Hunt and his brother, Herbert Hunt.
The case stemmed from the Jan. 16, 1970, arrest of Patrick McCann in Dallas for wiretapping Anderson said the trail led to Nelson Hunt and that at Hunt's request, Eastland called the deputy attorney general, Richard G. Kleindienst, and wrote a letter to the U.S. Parole Board on McCann's behalf.
Eastland, who serves as president pro tempore of the Senate as its senior member, denied he received a payoff from Hunt for his help and an aide to the senator said the letter to the Parole Board, went out over Eastland's signature without him seeing it.

inquiry about the parole status of a prisoner named Patrick McCann.
"This was handled on a staff level by Courtney Pace, an administrative assistant, and Mr. Pace made a routine inquiry of the executive officer of the federal Parole Board," the statement continued.
"Mr. Pace said that in his three decades in Washington, he had received assurance from legal authorities that this type of inquiry is entirely appropriate," the aide said. "He got a reply from the Parole Board and wrote Hunt on Jan. 14, 1974, saying he had learned McCann was indeed imprisoned at Seagoville, Tex., in July 1973, on an indeterminate three-year sentence."
The spokesman said the letter also informed Hunt that McCann was given a parole hearing in September 1973 and that the date for his prospective release had been set for May, 1974, approximately 10 months after McCann was imprisoned.
"Which is a little less than the one-third usually required before parole is considered."
The aide noted that the letter from Eastland's office was written in January 1974 but "the parole board had taken action in September of 1973."
Eastland was not notified of this by Pace after he returned to Washington, the spokesman said "then last Monday, Jan. 20, 1975, Eastland asked Pace about the letter to the Parole Board concerning McCann. Pace remembered the correspondence, got it from the files and showed it to Eastland for the first time and Eastland released the letters to Jack Anderson last week."

Bill Introduced On Constitution
AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorney General John Hill says he is confident the legislature will provide the two-thirds majority approval needed to rewrite the Texas Constitution.
Hill proposed an article by article revision of the state constitution Monday based on work done by the unsuccessful 1974 Constitutional Convention.
Hill said the 10 articles he sent to lawmakers are the same as ones included in the Constitutional Convention's final draft, which failed by a three-vote margin.
Sen. Bob Gammage, D-Houston, and Rep. Bill Sullivan, D-Gainesville, will sponsor the proposed amendments in the legislature.
Hill said if the issues could be submitted to voters in 1975, the state could still have a new constitution in effect by 1976.

Change Sought In Drunk Laws
AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Throwing drunks in jail is a waste of the taxpayers' money, according to Sen. Mike McKinnon, D-Corpus Christi, who has introduced legislation to repeal Texas criminal laws against being drunk in public.
The powers and duties of the Texas Commission on Alcoholism need to be more broadly and explicitly delineated, with a view toward treating alcoholics so that they may be restored to leading normal, wholesome, and productive lives," McKinnon said Monday.
"The Texas public drunkenness statute does nothing to provide treatment for these people."
McKinnon's bill does not affect statutes against drunk driving or committing other criminal offenses while drunk. It does away with provisions allowing criminal prosecution and fines of up to $200 for anyone found drunk in a public place.
"Throwing an alcoholic in jail does not solve anything," McKinnon said. "I view it as a waste of the taxpayers' money and also a waste of law enforcement officers' time which could be better applied combatting more serious criminal offenses."

TWQB Seeking Tough Standards

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Water Quality Board will make a proposal this week to the Environmental Protection Agency to allow states to set stricter standards than those contained in pending EPA regulations, according to Gov. Dolph Briscoe.
The governor said Monday the stricter standards are needed to keep raw sewage from boats out of Texas waters.
"We already have sufficient problems with the quality of water in Texas streams and lakes without adding this intolerable source of pollution to the list," Briscoe said.
Texas water quality regulations do not allow such discharges, but EPA standards which supersede state law would allow raw sewage to be dumped into Texas waters.
The proposed EPA regulation, Briscoe said, was to be issued this week, but a meeting Thursday between state officials and EPA Director Russell Train in Washington convinced the agency to delay the measure.

Briscoe Attorneys Ordered To Court

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorneys for Gov. Dolph Briscoe were ordered to appear in court today to explain changes made in a transcript of the governor's sworn testimony about campaign contributions.
Attorneys for Frances Farenthold said the changes alter Briscoe's testimony, but Briscoe's attorneys said the changes were made so the statement could be as accurate as possible.
The transcript in question came from a question-and-answer session Farenthold's attorneys had with Briscoe last Nov. 14.
District Judge Herman Jones ordered the governor to answer the Farenthold lawyers' inquiries under oath in connection with her $2.5 million damage suit against Briscoe for allegedly accepting illegal cash.
When the court reporter hired to record the closed door question and answer session turned in a transcript Briscoe penalized in a number of changes.

Farenthold's lawyers contend the changes — dealing primarily with the timing of a $15,000 cash contribution to Briscoe in 1972 from South Texas rancher-banker Clinton Manges — seriously altered the governor's account of the transaction.
The governor's lawyer, Joe H. Reynolds of Houston, replied in a written statement to Jones Jan. 16.
"The changes and corrections made in the deposition were pursuant to the rules for the purpose that the defendant's testimony be as accurate as it could possibly be," Reynolds said.
Briscoe never reported the Manges contribution in his campaign finance statements to the secretary of state.
In the deposition he gave Farenthold's attorneys, the governor said he kept the cash locked in his office, intending to return it to Manges.

- Senators Okay Bill For Fees
AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Despite his reservations about out of state snowbirds descending on Texas, Sen. Mike McKinnon joined 27 other senators Monday to approve a bill giving senior citizens free admission to state parks.
The bill now goes to the House. McKinnon, D-Corpus Christi, objected to the bill on grounds it would open Texas parks to nonresidents.
"Snowbirds can come to South Texas from out of state and use the state parks free," McKinnon said.
But McKinnon voted for the measure, which passed 28-2. Only Sens. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, and Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, voted against it.
The bill by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, permits anyone over 65 to escape the park admission fee, and leaves administration of the law in the hands of the Parks and Wildlife Department.
The proposal will cost the state $33,000 in lost revenue this year, and up to $47,000 by 1980.
The United States produces about 25 per cent of the world's yearly consumption of salt.

IRA Bomb Blitz Strikes London

LONDON (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army's renewed bomb blitz put London on an anti-terrorist alert today. Police cleared wide areas of the capital in fear of new bombings and raided the homes of IRA sympathizers for traces of the bombers.

Anonymous telephone callers reporting bombs planted in several locations downtown forced police to block off traffic and warn people off the streets in precautions against a repeat of blasts that wounded 26 persons in Manchester and London on Monday.

Oxford Street, the city's main shopping street, was closed along with the two-mile sector between Trafalgar Square and Fleet Street, site of the nation's newspaper offices.

Police with loudspeakers warned pedestrians to get inside and stay away from windows lest an explosion shatter them and send shards of glass flying.

IRA sympathizers in Belfast said IRA's 12-hour blitz Monday may mark a last-minute show of strength before the outlawed Roman Catholic group agrees to resume the collapsed year-end truce. An IRA spokesman said a cease-fire was up to the Irish government.

Sean O'Brady of the IRA in Dublin said there could be no truce until Ireland meets the demands of 17 IRA hunger strikers in Portlaoise jail. They are seeking not only improved conditions but also status as political prisoners. Dublin has said no to both.

One of the strikers, Patrick Ward, 28, has been given the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church. The IRA spokesman said his comrades could not be expected to hold their fire while he and others were dying.

The blitz on Britain reopened with a blast that wounded 19 persons in Manchester, then spread to London with five explosions wounding another seven. Two more bombs were found unexploded in the capital.

Scotland Yard said it was questioning three men — one captured in a car chase and two Irishmen taken from their homes in southwest London during the night — in connection with the IRA bombing campaign that began last November.

For London, it was the first such series of blasts since the IRA called its holiday truce Dec. 22. Before that, 27 persons were killed and more than 200 wounded in a six-week bombing campaign aimed at forcing Britain out of Northern Ireland.

Detectives took fingerprints from the two unexploded bombs and tried to trace the timing devices and explosives. One of the bombs had been timed to go off in front of a shop at 7:45 p.m. but its clock stopped at 7:15.

Scotland Yard asked the public to be on the lookout for suspicious persons or parcels. Police patrols were increased.

In Northern Ireland, the underground organization planted three bombs in Belfast and six in Londonderry, 65 miles northwest of the province capital.

The IRA, which has been fighting to drive Britain out of Northern Ireland, began the blitz in Londonderry, setting off three bombs along Shipquay Street.

The hundreds of tremors in the area of Brawley, Calif., in the Imperial Valley have confirmed the suspected existence of a fault there, seismologists said.

There was a big bang, a lot of flying glass, Edward Dupont said after a bomb injured 19 persons in the crowded basement of Lewis' department store in Manchester.

Three hours later, a blast damaged Gieves, a 200-year-old military tailoring shop on Bond Street in London. No one was injured.

The bombers then hit a gas storage depot and a chemical plant in the London suburb of Enfield, causing minor damages but no casualties.

A blast rocked Ratners, a jewelry store in suburban Kensington, injuring two women. A final blast hit a department store near Buckingham Palace, injuring one person.

China bought three million tons of U.S. wheat in the 1973-74 marketing year, more than any other foreign nation.

Peking had placed orders for a total of 1.75 million bushels for delivery in the current marketing year which ends June 30.

Agriculture Department officials said the Chinese cancellation may increase domestic grain supplies and force growers to put more pressure on the government to relax its requirement for advanced approval of large wheat export sales.

AT WORK Rep. Phil Cates of Pampa, Clayton Garrison, executive director of the Parks & Wildlife Department, and State Senator Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls examine the plans for the new Lake Theo State Park.

State Park Created In Panhandle

The creation of a new state park in Briscoe County of the Texas Panhandle was announced jointly today by Congressman Jack Hightower of Vernon, State Senator Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls, and Representative Phil Cates of Pampa.

Located approximately 95 miles from both Lubbock and Amarillo, the site will be known as Lake Theo State Park. Instrumental in acquiring designation of the site as a state park was former state Sen. Hightower, who is now serving a first term in Congress.

The state legislative delegation from the area expressed pleasure with the creation of the park. Sen. Farabee said he felt the park would be "a tremendous asset" to the area.

The park, more properly known as the Geisler Ranch, is accessible via FM 1065 and a county road north of Quitaque. The park contains in excess of 13,500 acres including two scenic caprock canyons, several thousand acres of roughland below the escarpment, the 130 acre Lake Theo impoundment, and several smaller lakes and tanks.

The scenic features of the Lake Theo site are somewhat similar to Palo Duro Canyon, but enhanced by the existence of a small fishing lake and the potential for creating other water features.

BY ISRAELI FORCES Pentagon Experts Urge Withdrawal

By United Press International Pentagon experts have suggested that Israeli forces withdraw from the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai as part of a second stage agreement with Egypt, an Israeli newspaper said today.

The newspaper Ma'ariv said in a dispatch from Washington Defense Department officials suggested the cornerstone of a new Israeli defense line be the 3,600-foot mountain Jebel Yelek.

Ma'ariv said Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will not make an official proposal to the new withdrawal line to Israel unless negotiations between Israel and Egypt on an interim accord become deadlocked.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday night Israel is willing to return much, but never all, of the Arab lands captured during the six-day war in 1967.

"We are ready to make peace and we are ready for a peace treaty to give back a lot of the territories that are under our control," Rabin told 400 delegates at a fund-raising convention in the Gulf of Aqaba resort of Eilat.

Jebel Yelek is 22 miles northeast of the Gidi pass. The Mitla is about 10 miles south of the Gidi.

The Beirut newspaper Al Safir said today Lebanon has decided to turn down a Soviet offer of ground-to-air missiles to protect it against repeated Israeli attacks.

Moscow made the offer after Israeli troops crossed into southern Lebanon almost nightly two weeks ago in attacks on suspected guerrilla bases.

The newspaper said Beirut wanted to avoid the stationing of Soviet technicians in Lebanon and believed the United States remained the only power to deter Israel.

dent Anwar Sadat "has tried to become moderate" but has yet to show "a real commitment to make peace with Israel."

In France today, Sadat toured the Thomson-CSF industrial facilities in Bagneux, south of Paris, amid reports he might buy the firm's ground to air missiles, which the French claim is one of the deadliest plane-destroying weapons.

The Egyptian leader also looked at the latest electronic equipment produced by Thomson-CSF, including radars capable of tracking low-flying supersonic jets at distances of up to 62 miles.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, at a dinner Monday-night for Sadat, called for "the (Israeli) evacuation of the occupied territories" and "the right of Israel to live like all states of the region in secure, recognized and, I add, effectively guaranteed borders."

Police are investigating the burglary of the Catalina Club, discovered at 3:30 a.m. today by a patrolling officer.

Police indicate a patrolling policeman discovered a door ajar at the lounge while on routine rounds today.

Investigation revealed pool tables, a juke box and cigarette machine had been tampered with. The owner was contacted and later advised officers six cases of beer and one case of wine, total monetary value, $80, had been stolen.

Officers determined entry had been made through a vent on the roof of the South City business.

The Duchess of Gloucester, aunt of King Henry VI of England, was condemned as a witch.

Quakes Jolt California

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — More than 1,000 mild to moderate earthquakes have shaken Southern California in the past six days, mostly in a desert region near the Mexican border, but the latest rolled through the San Fernando Valley late Monday night.

The hundreds of tremors in the area of Brawley, Calif., in the Imperial Valley have confirmed the suspected existence of a fault there, seismologists said.

There have been no injuries or serious damage reported from any of the quakes. A minor quake, registering a mild 2.8 on the Richter Scale, shook the San Fernando Valley, a Los Angeles suburban area, at 9:22 p.m. PST Monday night.

Seismologists at Cal Tech in Pasadena said the quake had its epicenter in Woodland Hills, toward the western end of the valley, and residents reported feeling it in North Hollywood and Studio City in the east and Northridge to the north.

A Cal Tech spokesman said the quake "must have been very shallow to have been felt over such a wide area at such low strength."

Some 200 miles to the southeast, in the Imperial Valley, more than 1,000 quakes had been registered by Monday since "swarms" — as such repeated quakes are called — began last Wednesday. Nine registered 4.0 or more on the Richter Scale, sharp enough to give residents an unpleasant jolt, and another 25 registered 2.5 or more, strong enough to be clearly felt.

The strongest shake, registering 4.7 last Wednesday, broke store windows, toppled canned goods in supermarkets and dropped patches of plaster from hotel ceilings. The most active days were Saturday and Sunday, with more than 400 quakes a day.

The quakes confirmed the existence of the Brawley fault, running south from the Salton Sea to Westmoreland, just north of the border with Mexico. Cal Tech seismologists said.

Rotary To Hear Service Program

WT "Bill" Murphy, Paris, past governor of Rotary District 583, will be guest speaker at the noon meeting of Rotary Club Wednesday at Coronado Inn.

He will offer a challenge to the local Rotarians on "Service Above Self."

Captain Bart Deggs, commanding officer of the Pampa Salvation Army, will introduce the speaker, who has served in civic and Rotary leader capacities for many years.

Murphy headed Rotary District 583 which is comprised of 34 clubs in the East Texas region, including parts of Arkansas and Oklahoma.

He first joined Rotary in 1950 and has been active in projects as a member of a committee every year since. He is a graduate of Texas A&M and veteran of World War II.

The cancellation was announced by Cook Industries Inc., a Memphis-based commodity trading firm Monday. The firm said the Chinese gave no reason for backing out of the contracts.

We can only speculate on their reasons, a Cook spokesman said. "It may be they just don't need it because of their good crops we simply don't know."

Exposition March 15 Slated By Girl Scouts

The Scouts - in - Action Exposition, sponsored by the Pampa Girl Scout organization, will be held March 15 in the Optimist Building.

Twenty-one troops consisting of approximately 425 girls are working on re-cycling, conservation and safety projects to be displayed at the fair.

Movies dealing with the subjects will be shown throughout the day in a room adjoining the display section.

Purposes of the exposition are to give Pampans some new ideas on using re-cycling and conservation techniques at home as well as to familiarize the public with Girl Scouting's far reaching program and achievements.

If interested in stretching your dollar, improving your safety and insuring the future of a beautiful land, you're invited to visit the event, priced at 25 cents each.

Pampa Garden Club Views Films, Names New Officers

A view of the flora and fauna in "gardens around the world" was the program at a recent meeting of the Pampa Garden Club. Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Darsen showed pictures depicting the customs and costumes of the Polynesian people on the Samoa and Fiji Islands, views of the Waitomo Glowworm Grotto with ceiling of fireflies at New Zealand, boomerang-throwing and sheep shearing at Sydney, Australia, and Australian wildlife and flowers at sanctuaries at Melbourne and Brisbane.

Mrs. Georgia Mack showed pictures of gardens in Paris, Athens, and the Shah's Palace at Teheran, Iran. She told of the beautiful flowers grown in volcanic soil with camel manure during her stay of several months in Teheran, Iran in 1974.

Elected president of the Pampa Garden Club for the year 1975 - 1976 was Mrs. Rue Hestand. Serving with her will be Mrs. Joe Curtis, first vice-president; Mrs. Georgia Mack, second vice-president; Mrs.

A.B. Cross, treasurer; Mrs. S.T. Holding, recording secretary; Mrs. Booker Mohon, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E.J. Hudson, historian; and Mrs. J.A. Knox, parliamentarian. These officers will be installed at the May luncheon.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Holly Gray and Mrs. Darsen.

The next meeting of the Club will be Monday, Feb. 3, 9:15 a.m., Flame Room, and the program will be on arranging and drying flower materials.

DECEPTIVE TRADE
Don't do business with any salesman who offers a buying plan that even resembles a referral selling scheme. This is called a deceptive trade practice, which is illegal in Texas. The Lefors Art and Civic Club recently met in the Civic Center with Mrs.

Howard Archer, 1st vice-president, presiding. Mrs. Bill Mullins led in the Club Collect and the Pledge to the Flag. Roll call was answered by 12 members and minutes from the last meeting were read and approved.

A motion was made and seconded that club accept the resignation of Mmes. Jesse Dykes, Garrell Roberson and Weldon Hofferly, with accepted motion.

Mrs. J.W. Franks volunteered to replace Mrs. Roberson on the telephone committee. Each department chairman was asked to have their reports to Mrs. Joe Watson.

Each department chairman was present at a workshop conducted in the home of Mrs. Joe Watson Jan. 2.

A panel discussion on the "Emerging Woman in Our Land" was given by Mmes. Howard Archer, R.W. Beck, Harry Youngblood and Bob Klein, concerning the rights and problems of women in our land. Group discussion followed the program concerning Bills before the legislature having to do with equal rights of women.

Door prize was won by Mrs. Harry Youngblood. Mmes. Jimmy Hannon and Jerry Conway were hostesses.

More Curls And Width Seen For Spring-Summer

Beautiful Hair Is Romantic

(For Spring-Summer 1975)

Here is a delicately balanced toule of curls, perfectly formed to give the face a beautiful frame. The National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association's "romance look" is created by freely styling full circle curls with the fingers instead of the brush. Bouncy love-locks will frame the face in many individual ways to complement the wearer. This fashion form haircut may be gently combed down to equal fullness on each side for a super evening look.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

West's spade opening was captured by declarer's ace. Declarer next surveyed the possibilities. First, East had to have the king of trumps, for otherwise the contract was doomed to defeat. So declarer promptly led his singleton diamond to dummy's ace, after which he laid down the queen of trumps.

The defenders now cooperated beautifully. East played the three, and West dropped the ten-spot. This play by West "convinced" declarer that West had no more trumps, and hence, that East had been dealt the K - 5 - 3 of trumps.

Hoping to "coup" East's remaining K - 5 of trumps, declarer then prepared to cash as many diamonds as he could. When East eventually trumped low, declarer would overtrump. His ace of trumps would next fell East's now - singleton king, after which declarer would re - enter dummy via the eight of trumps. He would then continue leading diamonds, discarding thereon his remaining spade and four hearts.

But when declarer led dummy's king of diamonds at trick four, West spiked declarer's hopes by ruffing the king (on this trick South had discarded his losing spade.) West then cashed the ace of hearts, for the setting trick.

Had East covered the queen of clubs with his king, declarer would have been forced to fulfill his contract. He would have taken the king with the ace, and cashed the club jack, felling the two outstanding trumps. The board would next have been entered via the club eight, and on dummy's diamonds South would have discarded his five major - suit losers.

Or, if West had not fished with the club ten, declarer, in all probability, would have led a second club off dummy, felling East's king and West's ten. And, once again, with the club eight serving as an entry to the board, South would bring home his contract.

WORTHWHILE CLUB
Mrs. Mattie Brown hosted the Jan. 3 meeting of the Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club, with Mrs. Maggie Smith, president.

Mrs. Elaine Houston, Extension Agent, presented the program on "Fibers and Fabrics," stressing the importance of reading fabric bolt ends, buying wisely, and being aware of current fashions and fabric trends.

The Jan. 17 meeting was hosted by Mrs. May Cude, 526 S. Ballard. Mrs. Smith conducted the business meeting and roll call was answered with "How I keep my income tax records."

Worthwhile Club members will host the Senior Citizens, Thursday, Feb. 27 at Lovett Memorial Library.

Mrs. Gladys Stone gave the program on patchwork using double knit scraps. The introducing of patchwork and its origins has been connected with sharing and neighborliness, particularly in America, she told.

"Friendship Quilt" was one of the first quilts made. It was sometimes called an "album quilt" which had been appliqued by friends. If the quilt was presented at a ceremony, it was called a "presentation quilt," she continued.

Freedom quilts were only made for young men on their 21st birthday. Girls of his acquaintance were invited to his house, and spent the afternoon stitching quilt tops together. It was then put away until the time came to add it to the others in his future wife's bottom drawer.

stated the speaker.

Members present were Mmes. Donna Lee Brown, Alma Jaynes, Janice Carter, Billie Brookshire, Corrine Wheeler, Oleta Carlton, Mattie Brown, Mina Benham, Beulah Walling, Alta May Skaggs, Maggie Smith, Gladys Stone, Dot Chisim and May Cude.

The next meeting will be Feb. 7 with Janice Carter.

The taste for honey is age-old. The National Geographic Society says, Aristotle called it "dew distilled from the stars and the rainbow." In the Middle Ages, honey came into its own as a medicin god for "grumbling in the guts" and "wambling stomach."

Senior Center Corner

By GERTIE SHAW
There were 79 seniors present Thursday at Lovett and everyone had a wonderful time.

Door prizes went to Mrs. Elma Bailey and W.J. Chamberline. Mrs. Henry is reported in the hospital and Mattie Dixon reports she and her sister are improving and she will be back in Pampa soon.

Ethel Evans and husband, Jay, were unable to be back with us after being out quite sometime. Visitors were Paul Sutton and Edd Ray.

The Pampa Art Club members Mmes. Francine Mack, Robin Gantz, Ruth Wells, Hermalyn LaFon, Katherine Stringer and Tommie Grant served coffee and pie.

Altirans present were Louise Sewell, Marion Jameson, Olive Hill, Gertrude Barber, Lora Dunn and Lillian Snow.

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 29

Your birthday today: You're forced to rely on your own resources and thrive this coming year if you're on the right track or anywhere near it. Aside from a few misunderstandings, relationships go well and deepen all year. Today's natives approach and solve problems unconventionally, have a knack for figuring out what other people think.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Whatever you were worrying about turns out to be trivial. Take calculated risks; there are no guaranteed courses of action to follow. Bring home a symbol of your true feelings.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: There's room for improvement, but not much time. Social outings are favored, but if you're not in demand, clean up your home.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: You have breaks and luck coming to you. Be there to benefit from them and enjoy the stir you're causing. Evening celebrations should include rest.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Go ahead with additional project based on past guidelines. With reasonable diligence, you resolve even the fine details. Sentimental moods prevail.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: With all your boldness and bravado, today's circumstances catch you off-base. Chances now are awkward but eventually work to your benefit.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: The direct route is neither the quickest nor the best. Intangible rewards drift in your favor. Put aside some of your formality; get closer to those who are attracted to you.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Improvise! Resolve social and family differences with a creative, experimental idea. Go along with a joke or prank.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: You've got a great deal going for you, particularly public opinion. Make definite, formal explanations of what you want and how you plan to get it.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Make a sale or settle an issue as quickly as conditions permit. Friends and associates scatter and leave you to carry on alone. Flex your muscles; get clean-ups started.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: This is one day to get away from your usual habits and take a look at yourself and where you've gone. Push plans to final stages.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Put up with trivial annoyances without reacting. Concentrate on building your public image and establishing contacts with influential people.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Brisk movements will overcome your tendency toward laziness. Your interest rises as you follow normal routines and orderly schedules. Home life is brighter tonight.

IN ELECTION METHODS

Cities Unresponsive To Black Needs

TYLER, Tex. (UPI) — The cities of Lufkin and Nacogdoches appear to be "largely unresponsive" to their black populations because city officials are elected at large, according to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Justice said Monday he will hold a hearing Feb. 7 at which time he is expected to officially order the two cities to present plans to split the cities into districts with city officials elected from the districts.

The single member districts must be installed in time for this year's municipal elections in the two East Texas communities.

Justice did not implement single member districts in Monday's ruling but he indicated he would do so at the hearing Feb. 7 unless the cities could come up with convincing arguments that would change his mind.

Concerning the city of Lufkin, Justice said Monday: "The court concludes the city of Lufkin has been and continues to be largely unresponsive to the needs and interests for the black community."

Will car of future have 2 engines?

BONN, West Germany — The West German government is sponsoring research and development of a twin-engine car which would minimize pollution and be economical to run.

The first engine would be internal combustion encased in the housing of a Wankel rotary which would be electric with an energy conversion and storage device. The electric motor would enable the hybrid car to run quietly in city driving and the gasoline power would provide economical freeway locomotion. — CNS

Geothermal hole being dug in Idaho

BOISE, Idaho — The first geothermal program in the nation to try to tap water below 320 degrees Fahrenheit and use it for generating electric power is progressing as a 24-hour-a-day drilling goes on in Idaho's Raft River Valley.

Expected to be completed in early March, the 8,000-foot geothermal exploratory hole will cost about $700,000. — CNS Rayson was defeated.

"The runoff was tainted by anonymous racial campaign material distributed in the white areas of Nacogdoches," Justice said. "Of even more significance in insuring Rayson's defeat was the action by the city commission in scheduling the runoff election on the last possible day available to them under the charter which was also the last day of final examinations for the spring semester at Stephen F. Austin."

EARLY WARNING

Oh, My Aching Back... Or Heart Attack Sign?

This is the seventh of eight articles sponsored by the Panhandle Emergency Medical Services Systems, Inc. to acquaint the public with the early warning signs of heart attack.

Oh, my aching back...

That's a common complaint. Perhaps, what isn't so commonly known is that back pain can be an early warning sign of a heart attack. That is being taught in a public education program sponsored by the Panhandle Emergency Medical Services Systems, Inc.

Pain in the center of the chest may extend into the back or occur only in the back, above the waist, commonly between the shoulder blades, according to the American Heart Association.

A six-month study of heart patients in an urban-rural area showed that 13.6 percent of the heart patients reported pain in the back.

Sweating is even more common as an early warning sign. The six-month sampling showed 48.3 percent with sweating as a symptom. A physician said that sweating is particularly suspect if it is heavy and if it is accompanied by pain or a feeling of pressure, fullness, squeezing or aching in the chest, back, arms, neck, jaws or upper abdomen. Shortness of breath, nausea or vomiting round out a list of symptoms which call for quick medical checks.

What's the quickest way to get a medical check? Call a doctor, says the American Heart Association.

Physician-first contacts, said one advisory committee member, avoid admitting chest-pain cases which don't require hospitalization.

Also, a physician can advise a patient on the mode of transportation, which in rural areas often means a car rather than an ambulance. The survey also showed that physicians scored well on all three points crucial to patients:

(1) Is the doctor available?
(2) Can the patient get to him promptly through the receptionist's iron wall?
(3) How soon does the doctor make up his mind about what to do for the patient?

Coupled with educated patient response, this is viewed by the project's medical advisers as assurance on the theme: "Early attention can mean prevention."

Last Summary.

Do you hate peas, brussels sprouts, spinach (especially spinach) and in fact nearly all vegetables? Do you not only hate them but avoid them at all costs? If so, you may need to take vitamin supplements. But if you generally eat balanced meals, you probably don't need to take extra vitamins, says the Better Business Bureau.

Many dietary supplements are promoted, according to the Food and Drug Administration, as an insurance policy to guarantee good health. The implication of this advertising contributes to the myth that even a balanced diet can't provide adequate nutrients.

This is not true. A diet that generally meets the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) requirements for vitamins A, B1, B2, C and D will nearly always provide the necessary amounts of other vitamins.

Nor is the assumption true that if the U.S. RDA of a certain vitamin is good for you, then greater amounts must be even better for you.

As a matter of fact, it is possible to poison yourself by taking too many supplemental vitamins. About 4,000 cases of vitamin poisoning are reported in the U.S. each year.

Excessive amounts taken over a period of time can be toxic; as an example, the FDA prohibits, except by prescription, any daily recommended intake of a tablet or capsule of more than 10,000 International Units of vitamin A and 400 of vitamin D.

Many people who are concerned about the vitamins in their food buy organically grown foods. There's a lot of controversy over whether or not organic foods are better for you, but one thing is usually true: you pay more for foods sold as organic.

And regardless of the cost, you usually have no real assurance that the organic foods you're paying so much for are actually organic. In nearly all states there are no controls over whether a product is grown organically; the food may be organic simply because the seller says it is.

The Better Business Bureau suggests that when you buy organic food, buy from someone you trust.

An energy saving tip from the Better Business Bureau: Use only small amounts of water when cooking vegetables. Foods cooked in minimum amounts of water will heat faster. Shorter cooking time takes less energy — and helps preserve vitamins, too!
