Committee Revises Tax Reduction Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A $30.1 billion tax reduction bill, including rebates of up to $200 for all taxpayers this spring or summer, has made the first step on a trip through Congress.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which must originate all changes in federal tax law, voted 28-5 Thursday night for a combination of $8 billion in 1974 tax rebates, $8.3 billion in 1975 personal tax reductions, and $3.8 billion in increased investment incentives and cuts for business.

This was $4 billion more than President Ford requested in recession-fighting tax cuts.

Big business struck out, however, as the committee narrowly defeated a $1 billion bailout of financially troubled companies such as Chrysler and Lockheed, and voted to limit the giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to $100 million in additional investment incentives, $35 million less than AT&T would have received.

The bill, completed by the committee in less than four days, was a personal victory for Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who replaced Rep. Wilbur Mills as Congress' chief tax writer this year and who promised to have the bill finished by the end of the week.

If the bill should be passed by the House and later the Senate, everyone who paid taxes in 1974 - rich or poor - would receive a check from the government this spring or summer.

Low and moderate income Americans also would find the government taking less out of their paychecks every payday in the last half of the year, the result of lower withholding rates brought about by the committee's increase in the standard deduction.

Unemployment Up By 930,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Some 930,000 persons lost their jobs in January, driving up the nation's unemployment rate by a full percentage point to 8.2 per cent - the highest rate since 1941 - the Labor Department said today.

With no relief in sight, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics announced that a total of 7.5 million persons were out of work in January. Especially hard hit were the blue collar workers, whose unemployment rate rose to 11 per cent.

The Ford administration has predicted unemployment will reach 8.5 per cent this year and will average near 9 per cent over the next two years.

The bureau reported that blue collar workers "bore the brunt of these employment reductions" with some 1.7 million of them losing their jobs between September to January.

A 15 per cent unemployment rate was recorded in the construction industry; 10.5 per cent in the manufacturing industry and 10.2 per cent among agricultural wage and salary workers.

Virtually all worker groups have been affected by the recession. Some 1.8 million jobs were eliminated from September to January - 640,000 of them between December and January - as the nation's economy has contracted.

President Ford's requested program would have been limited to $4 billion in business investment incentives and $12 billion in individual 1974 rebates of 12 per cent up to $1,000.

The rebate section of the committee bill would grant a 10 per cent rebate up to a $200 maximum with the largest rebates going to middle income families with roughly $18,000 to $20,000 of adjusted gross income.

Above $20,000, the rebate would gradually be reduced until those making more than $30,000 would receive no more than $80 to $100. The exact figure is being calculated by the committee staff.

Normally procedural requirements then probably will delay House action until the last week in February or the first week in March.

Here are the basic ingredients of the Ways and Means Committee answer to Ford's program:

- A 10 per cent rebate of 1974 taxes up to $200 for everyone. Those who paid less than $100 in taxes would receive the full amount back. For upper income persons, the maximum $200 refund would gradually be phased down so that no one making more than $30,000 got more than $90 to $100.

- The working poor who earn up to $4,000 would get 5 per cent of that income as a payment from the government even if they paid no taxes because of other deductions and credits. The payments would gradually be reduced until no one making more than $5,000 would receive them. This $5.5 billion tax break is a form of negative income tax and almost a carbon copy of the "work bonus" plan long advocated by Sen. Russell Long, D-La.
- The investment tax credit, now 4 per cent for utilities and 7 per cent for other corporations, would be increased to 10 per cent for everyone. Hardpressed utilities would be exempted for two years.

FOR NEW CENTER

Senior Center Action Unfolding

By TEX DEWESE

Action aimed at development of a Pampa Senior Center for elderly citizens over 55 years of age got off the launch pad at a meeting of the recently formed ten-member planning board Thursday night in Lovett Memorial Library.

Following a briefing by Mike McQueen, area coordinator of the Governor's Committee on Aging, a branch of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, the planning board was organized with election of Pampa attorney Don Lane as board chairman, Rex McAnelly, vice chairman, and Mrs. M. Q. Wilson, secretary.

Other members of the board are Milo Carlson, Clyde Carruth, Gerald Sims, Jean Martindale, Mrs. Libby Shotwell, E. L. Green Jr. and George Warren.

services of the director at the end of the 13th month or retaining the director under a locally-financed budget which it is hoped would be in existence by that time.

Board chairman Lane said today immediate action would be taken to learn details on the funding assistance from the Federal Manpower Program.

Upon employment of a senior center director next step in planning would be a community-wide effort to find a building where adequate facilities could be installed to handle senior center projects on a priority basis.

Top priorities for a Pampa Senior Center currently are a building, where various activities can be programmed on a daily basis, and volunteer transportation for elderly persons.

McQueen went into detailed explanation on how the Amarillo Senior Center came into being and how it now operates for its approximately 5,000 members.

Assistance, he stated, is needed from Foundations, civic clubs, social service organizations, churches, city, county and school governments and individuals if the center is to be successful.

"It all started in Amarillo," McQueen said. "With a vague idea of what was needed and by whom it was needed."

"He gave the board a copy of priorities to be considered at the start and those to be considered as support for the center grows and additional services can be introduced and financed."

ON CYPRUS PROBLEM

Henry Asking Congress For More Elbow Room

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger are pleading with Congress for more diplomatic elbow room to work on the Cyprus problem, administration officials said today. They especially want Congress to lift the ban on military aid to Turkey.

the situation with ranking members of Congress in the foreign policy field in the White House Thursday. They said it was vital to continue aid for Turkey without cutoff dates if the United States is to help solve the Cyprus dispute.

The problem arose because the Foreign Assistance Act requires aid to be cut off to any country that uses U.S. aid for purposes other than self defense - and Turkey fought Greece, another U.S. ally. The administration says Congress must decide how to get around this law.

Kissinger is said to be especially concerned over Turkey where the United States has some intelligence gathering electronic installations in addition to the use of three air bases.

privately painting an even more dismal picture, contending that anti-American sentiment in the Eastern Mediterranean might make it more difficult to achieve an Arab-Israeli peace.

Kissinger believes significant progress on the Cyprus question must be achieved very slowly because of the internal situations of the two countries and the ethnic relationships on the independent island.

the number of Americans left with jobs in January totaled 94.6 million, about the same level of employment as August, 1973.

The department estimates that for each 1 per cent increase in unemployment approximately

ROBERT MUNNS

Another Resident Seeks Chief Spot

H. Robert "Bob" Munns, 35, said Thursday he had filed his application for the position of Pampa Chief of Police in the office of the city manager, Mack Wofford, last week.

Munns, a former officer with the Park Police, retired as detective sergeant after over 10 years of service. He also worked as a fingerprint technician for 20 months with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, identification division in Washington D.C.

His training includes 400 hours of training for the FBI technician position. He holds certification for completion of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Training in Washington, and has received notification from the Texas certification board for law enforcement officers he can obtain advanced certification in the State of Texas by completing three college hours.

He acted as instructor for rookies in the Park Police, training candidates in the law and procedure of arrest, search and seizure, fingerprint procedure and technical identification. Other training includes crime photography and advance fingerprint technology.

He is currently associated with Pampa Motor Co., employed as sales manager.

A native of Oklahoma, Munns graduated from high school in Turon, Kan. He is the father of four children who attend school in Pampa.

Munns is the third local applicant for the chief position vacated by the death of 23-year veteran James B. Conner on Jan. 1.

BRISCOE TO GIVE FORD

Alternate Energy Plans

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) - Gov. Dolph Briscoe, saying President Ford's energy proposals will be disastrous for Texas, will outline an alternative energy plan to the President during a meeting in Houston next Monday.

proposal to increase the cost of natural gas and petroleum products such as gasoline.

The governor declined to discuss details of what he will propose, but said it will not involve any major departure from stands he has taken in the past.

"I would not be in favor of rationing," he said. "I do not think rationing will work and I think it will have a very adverse effect on the state of Texas."

Sheriff's Office

Returns Suspect

Michael B. Nesbitt, 31, Pampa, has been returned from Moore County, where he had been charged with burglary early this week.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said today evidence uncovered in investigation of burglaries, one of which occurred three years ago, would be presented to the grand jury today.

Nesbitt is being held in connection with burglaries of pharmacies in Borger, Perryton and Dumas, as well as three pharmacy and two medical clinic burglaries in Pampa.

The suspect is being held for burglary of the Kelley Clinic, Dec. 22, 1974; and the Purviance Clinic, Jan. 2, 1972. Local burglaries include break-ins at Malone Pharmacy in Coronado Center; B & B Pharmacy, Ballard at Browning; and the H - Land Pharmacy, 1300 N. Hobart, all occurring on Dec. 29.

Proposed Texts

To Be Studied In Amarillo

Dan F. Long, superintendent of Pampa Independent Schools, has announced a meeting of textbook committee representatives which will be conducted in Amarillo Saturday.

The representatives have been reading and analyzing the textbooks which are being considered for adoption.

The meeting Saturday will give committee members opportunity to discuss proposed books with publishers' representatives.

Mayor To Attend

TML Breakfast

Pampa Mayor R.D. Wilkerson and City Commissioner Linden Shepherd will attend a Texas Municipal League Legislative breakfast at the Driscoll Hotel in Austin Monday morning.

The two city officials will have as their guests State Rep. Phil Cates of Pampa and State Sen. Max Sherman of Amarillo.

HAROLD COMER ... PAUL SIMMONS ... to seek school board posts

School Board Members To Run For Re-Election

Two current members of the Pampa Independent District School Board, president Paul Simmons and Atty. Harold Comer, will run for re-election in the April 5 school election.

The agenda for Monday's school board meeting was released today and one of the items on the agenda is the calling of the April 5 balloting.

Simmons and Comer, who currently are serving unexpired terms, were contacted by The News and asked if they planned to run for re-election.

Both Simmons and Comer said they would file their candidacies probably next week.

Simmons presently is serving out the unexpired term of George McCarroll, who resigned in 1973 when he was transferred from Pampa. He was appointed in February of that year and ran for election to the two-year unexpired term of McCarroll in April of 1973.

Comer was appointed to the board and currently is serving out the unexpired term of Bob Carmichael who resigned. At the April 5 election Comer will be running to complete Carmichael's one-year unexpired term.

Because the Pampa School Board expands from a five-man to a seven-man board this year, two additional members will be elected this year.

The board also is changing to place voting and elections will ballot on candidates for Places 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Balloting on all four places will be city-wide, but candidates must file for only one of the places.

Simmons said he will file for Place 1 and Comer will be a candidate in Place 4.

Terms of the other three members of the board do not expire this year. They are Sam Anderson, Bill Arrington and Curt Beck.

'The Language Of Oil'

Some crude oil is classified as sweet and other crude oil is termed sour. The difference is explained in a booklet put out by Mobil Oil Co. The Language of Oil explains that sour crudes have relatively large amounts of sulfur (1 per cent or more) where as sweet crudes have less sulfur. Most U.S. crudes tend to the sweet side while Middle East crudes tend to the sour. Sweetener crudes are more valuable. Because oil will continue to be in the news for the foreseeable future, other oil language terms will be helpful to the reader. Following are some samples.

Desulfurization - a refining process that reduces the sulfur content of petroleum products. Some sulfur compounds are corrosive. Sulfur in petroleum products is thought to be a factor in air pollution, also in corrosion of boilers, furnaces, and engines. Discovery - a wildcat (exploratory) well that finds a new deposit of oil or gas. A discovery may open up a new field where no oil or gas has been found before. Or it may locate a previously unknown underground reservoir that lies far beneath known producing areas.

North Slope - the name of the huge area that forms the northern portion of Alaska. It is called a slope because it slopes downward to the Arctic Ocean from the Brooks Mountain range. In 1968, a major oil discovery was made on the North Slope, near Prudhoe Bay, 250 miles north of the Arctic Circle. In 1973, reserves in that area were estimated at more than 10 million barrels.

Outer Continental Shelf - A gently sloping underwater plain extending seaward from both shorelines of the North American continent. It becomes the Continental Slope, which drops sharply to the deep ocean basins. Off the Atlantic Coast, the Outer Continental Shelf has an average width of 100 miles. Off the Pacific Coast, it averages about 20 miles. Both range in depth from a few feet at the shoreline to more than 600 feet below sea level.

Persian Gulf - A body of water in the Middle East bordered by the most prolific oil-producing areas in the world. Situated clockwise around the Gulf are Iraq, Iran, the Trucial States, Qatar, Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, and Kuwait. Together these countries have about 55 per cent of the world's proved oil reserves. South of the Persian Gulf are Muscat and Oman, also oil producers.

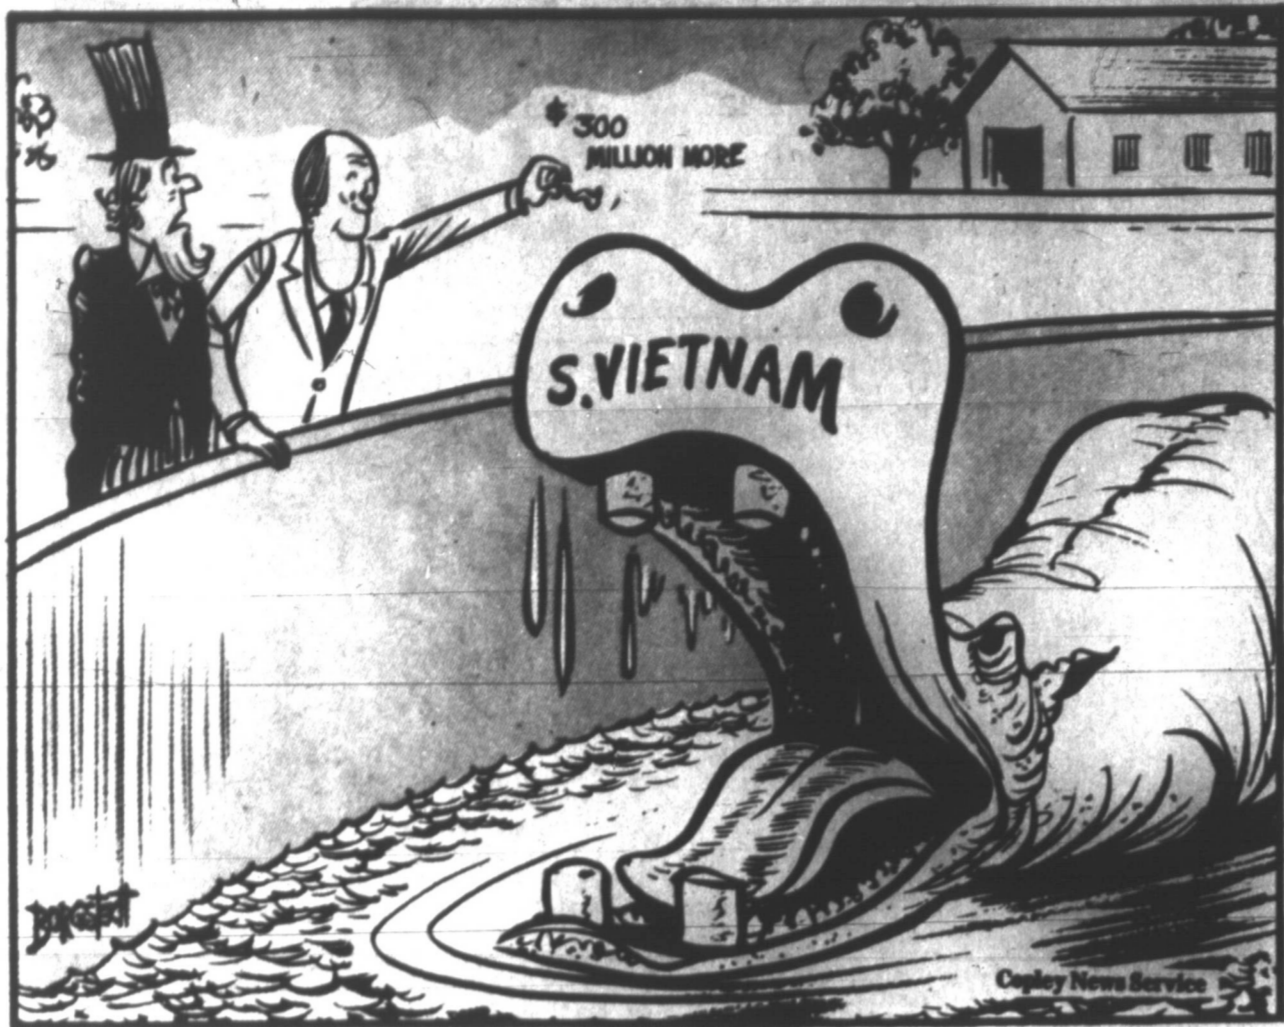

Reserves, prospective - Oil and gas from existing fields that can reasonably be counted on to be available in the future. They consist of all reserves which in the judgment of geologists, engineers and economists are likely to be added to proved reserves in the future. Reserves may change from 'prospective' to 'proved' as a result of additional drilling and changes in price levels which make marginal oil economically recovered.

Reserves, proved - already located oil and gas known to be recoverable with existing facilities, present technology, and at current cost and price.

INSIDE WASHINGTON Serious Crime On Increase

By ROBERT S. ALLEN WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 - The federal government is massively spending more than ever to fight crime - but there is still more crime than ever. Last year, the national crime rate soared 16 per cent above the 1973 record.

That isn't all. Not only is serious crime continuing to increase, but it is spreading viciously to suburban and rural sections. Most of these areas adjoining major population centers experienced big jumps in serious crime in 1974.

NEW UNITS PORT-AU-PRINE: Haiti (UPI) - El Rancho Hotel has begun work on 44 new units, 10 of which will be suites. owner Albert Silveira announced. The new units, to be completed by May, will give the hotel 100 rooms and 14 suites.

Latin American countries use many different names for their monetary units - including peso, escudo, sucre, guarani, sol, Bolivar, florin, franc, colon, quetzal, Lempira, Cordoba, Balboa and gourde.

Who is installing a new appliance or moving appliances to a new location, ask a qualified electrician, whether adequate electrical service is available.

Although Washington has the largest police force (4,650) of any city its size in the country, its crime rate escalated 7 per cent last year, with a record number of murders (256 as against 263 in 1973), and a startling 20 per cent zoom in burglaries (14,126 from 11,901).

That's the somber record of the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), an agency of the Justice Department.

Established in 1968, in the Johnson administration, for the purpose of assisting state and local government to combat crime, LEAA has spent $4.2 billion of taxpayers' money with virtually nothing to show for it.

Authority for that jolting assessment is Sen. William Proxmire, D Wis., chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, chairman of the Housing, Urban Development Appropriations subcommittee, and himself a victim of two muggings within a few blocks of the Capitol.

Declares the veteran legislator, "What has been the result of spending this immense amount of money? Failure, abject failure! Crime rates have not gone down; they have gone up. LEAA has shown every sign of being an intolerable boondoggle.

Yet despite this dismal showing, the Justice Department is preparing to ask Congress to continue LEAA and give it another huge wad of funds to spread around.

Who's Getting It? In an ignored report, Sen. Proxmire lists the following basic reasons for LEAA's shocking and immensely costly lack of results in curbing crime. Few restrictions and virtually no federal control over the billions dished out to state and local governments. In the seven years of LEAA's existence, it has had five administrators, in one 18-month period, it had no head at all.

LEAA's "block grant programs" (handing out huge sums to state and local units) have been widely characterized by "inefficiency, waste, maladministration, and in some cases corruption."

Under LEAA's policy of free-handed spending, tens of millions have been laddled out for so-called "research" - with no tangible results. Says Proxmire caustically, "The consulting business has done very well. There has been lots of 'planning,' lots of useless conferences, valueless research projects, and innumerable dubious studies."

Cited as graphic illustrations - $156 million to the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice; $86.4 million for "data systems and statistical assistance"; and an incredible $71.7 million for similar purpose in the last three years.

The Big Gainers While LEAA has had no more effect on the country's fearful crime problem than a flea has on an elephant, there have been some who have benefited handsomely from the $4.2 billion the agency has had no difficulty lading out in the seven years of its bedraggled operations. Sen. Proxmire dourly ticks them off as follows: The police hardware industry has been booming. Sales of radios, helicopters and riot gear have never been better. The consulting business particularly has done exceedingly well. The sad fact about LEAA is that it has encouraged states and local units to be more creative about winning federal grants than about combating crime.

Property crime is on the rise. Violent crime is on the rise. People worry about the safety of their homes. Americans are being held hostage by fear - fear of crime.

"The crime problem in our country is deadly serious, and any program intended to deal with it must be equally serious. We don't have the time or the money to waste on LEAA's sorry and despairing frivolities."

Key question is what is Congress going to do about it - if anything. Addendum: Pertinent observation by police chief David Couper, of Madison, Wis., Proxmire's home town: "LEAA is a game police departments play to get money from the federal government."

H.L. Hunt Wrote

Crime statistics, bad as they are, do not bring home the heartbreak and tragedy of criminal activity as poignantly as do the stories of the victims. Two stories in recent days lend emphasis to the problem of crime, a problem that grows daily. The brutality of the two cases should remind us all that we, as individuals, could fall victim to criminals at any time. It also serves notice that crime does have to be stopped.

The cases in point are those of a woman who was mugged as she walked on a street in Oakland, Calif., and a bus full of people who were hijacked, held captive on the vehicle and one of the passengers, a pregnant woman, was threatened with rape by a bandit. The victim in Oakland is employed as a telephone switchboard operator. She was set upon by a thug as she walked home. The woman lost an eye as a result of the attack. She now runs - in terror - from her apartment to her job. The brutal robbery experience of those innocent passengers on the bus in California probably will haunt the victims for the rest of their lives.

We, the people, must support our law enforcement agencies. We must give them more manpower. We must demand that our legislative bodies pass broad capital punishment laws. We should call for tougher bail bond laws. Whenever the police call for our assistance in appearing as witnesses we should respond. We should pass on information involving suspicious persons and automobiles. We can do no less if we want to prevent the return of the law of the jungle. Frankly, we are approaching that state now. Daylight muggings are commonplace in the streets of our large cities. Soon, it will be that way in the smaller communities. The full force of the law must be applied to eliminate crime.

Question Box

QUESTION: Some people claim that government spending causes inflation. If that is so, how does it happen that communist nations do not have inflation? Don't governments in communist or socialist countries spend money?

ANSWER: Whether there is inflation in totalitarian countries is difficult to see from this nation. When a totalitarian government is in power, it not only has control of the economic life, but it controls the communications which could tell us the truth about economics. However, we concede that a government which has complete control over the lives of its citizens certainly should be able to regulate the expansion of money supply. And if it is able to keep its citizens from demanding increasing benefits from government, it is not faced with the task of providing the extra benefits. Also, if it is not engaged in extensive give-aways of its people's substance, both domestic and foreign, there is less likelihood of expansionary spending. We have not heard of the Russians and Chinese, for instance, spreading about the production of their citizens other than if they get something in return.

Giveway Adds to Debt If the U.S. government rejected the demands of foreign nations that American food, and industrial output be given them or "sold" on long-term, low-interest financing, we believe the inflation in this nation would be quite a bit less than it is. It has been pointed out, for instance, that foreign-aid assistance programs which have not been repaid have had a large part in adding to the national indebtedness, which has caused a major part of the inflation.

Once, when it was pointed out that Russia had little or no income tax, a student of that nation said a government which had total control of the productive forces did not need to apply an income tax. That observer said the communist government controlled production and sold its products to its citizens for whatever price it chose. Thus there was no need for an income tax; it was all a sales tax. If there is inflation in a totalitarian nation the people have nothing to say about it.

Escape From Inflation? Another point which demonstrates the impossibility of measuring inflation in totalitarian countries is that those lands have controlled the price of their own currency, so that it cannot be compared against lands which have no control. Communist Russia decides the "value" of its currency compared with currency of other nations, and severely penalizes any black market transactions with its "money" as some American citizens have found out to their dismay.

If communist nations do not have inflation, or other "evils" of the quasi-capitalist nations, then there should be no attempts by citizens of those lands to emigrate for those less restrictive conditions. It is no secret that thousands, perhaps more, of the citizens of the USSR and the Chinese Communist land risk their lives in attempts to escape from the "benevolent" governments controlling their lives. Perhaps they would prefer the "evils" of what's left of capitalism to the "benefits" available in the totalitarian nations.

Grassroots Opinion

BENTLEYVILLE, PA.: COURIER: "You would think he had some kind of magic wand, Aladdin lamp, rabbit's foot or four-leaf clover. We're talking about President Gerald Ford. It's alarming how so many people feel that he can solve all of our problems. There are those who think that all that's needed to end inflation is for the President to give some kind of order... We think it stems from big government and the fact that so many people have grown to depend upon it rather than upon their own resources."

First he leaves her, then he libels her

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I married during college, and my husband left me two years later while I was pregnant with my first child. Living across the street was a man I'll call "Jim." He was a professor, and we became good friends. Jim was wonderful to me, bringing me meals he had prepared, and looking after me as though I was his little sister. I asked him to be my child's godfather. I felt safe with Jim because he was a homosexual.

Two years ago, I married Jim's brother, then a widower with three children. We've had a fantastically good marriage, but last night we had a foolish argument and my husband lashed out at me and said: "I have never thrown up to you the fact that you were a prostitute and your first husband was a pimp." (It came out that Jim had told him that my first husband had told him that.) Abby, my ex was a rat who could have said something like that, but the fact that Jim actually believed it and told it to his brother, who also thought it, is something I just can't handle.

Today my husband tried to assure me that he didn't believe that story, but I'm not convinced. I'm so upset I missed work today, something I never do.

Should I confront Jim? I don't want to put my husband in the middle, but he has to know that it is a lie. If it weren't for the children, I think I'd have committed suicide last night. Please help me. NO PLAY FOR PAY

DEAR NO: If you've had a "fantastically good marriage," believe your husband when he assures you that he doesn't believe that story. Put it out of your mind, and don't confront Jim unless your husband repeats the accusation. If he does, then talk to Jim and get the whole ugly mess settled once and for all.

DEAR ABBY: Lately, my mother, who is 43, and my father, who is 44, have started to act like they just got married. I am 12 and have an older sister and two younger brothers who said they noticed it, too.

Mom and Dad a book entitled "The Joy of Sex," and one night I heard my dad say my mother if she wanted to try something new. I really thought this was disgusting. I am losing respect for them. Or am I wrong to feel this way? MIXED-UP KID

DEAR MIXED: You're wrong. You ought to be happy that your parents find each other so appealing. (Lots of kids have parents who fight instead.) Responsible sex is joyous, and it's perfectly respectable.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one I'll bet you've never been asked before: About once a week, my mother, father, husband and I get together and play penny poker. I invited our 12-year-old son to sit in with us, and I taught him how to play. He caught on very quickly and loves the game. He has a newspaper route, so he has his own money. He can hold his own with the rest of us, but now I'm wondering if perhaps I didn't make a mistake. Are we instilling the love of gambling in this boy? Should I now refuse to let him play? Now that he has come to enjoy it so much, he begs to join us. Thank you for some sound advice. SAN DIEGO MOM

DEAR MOM: Card playing sharpens one's wit and is good exercise for the mind. I see nothing wrong with teaching the boy to play poker. But not for money, Mom. He'll learn that on his own soon enough.

IN PARIS

Onassis Slips Quietly Into American Hospital

PARIS (UPI) — Aristotle Onassis slipped into the American Hospital through a back door today for emergency medical treatment for a potentially deadly muscle disease. He looked tired and had deep circles under his eyes.

The 69-year-old Greek shipping magnate hurried through the rear entrance with his doctor after spending the night in his Paris apartment, his wife, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, at his side.

Onassis arrived at the hospital in his chauffeur-driven Mercedes sedan. He walked slowly, his shoulder stooped, through the entrance leading into the hospital chapel.

Three bodyguards, shouting in Greek-accented French "Assassins!" joined arms and pushed back four photographers who had been hiding behind a nearby parked car. Two policemen and several hospital attendants hurried out to help the tycoon through the doorway.

Survey Committee To Give Awards

Awards for distinguished service will be made to all members of the Gray County Historical Survey Committee at a combined meeting with the Gray County Bicentennial Committee in the parlor of the White Deer Land Museum at 5 p.m. next Thursday.

Another highlight of the meeting will be a report by the Bicentennial Horizons Committee outlining plans for local observance of the nation's 200th birthday.

Mrs. Clotilde Thompson, chairman of the Gray County Bicentennial Committee, said membership of the committee appointed by the Gray County Commissioners Court, is essentially the same as last year with a few additions in the area of bicentennial activities.

One photographer had been tipped off by a nurse that Onassis would try to sneak in through the chapel. The nurse leaned out of the hospital window gesturing in an attitude of prayer.

Onassis flew to Paris Thursday from Athens for hospital treatment of the disease, myasthenia gravis. His wife and daughter, Christine, followed on separate flight.

Friends said he had suffered a relapse after being treated for the disease last year.

More Could Lose Jobs Before Recession Ends

United Press International About 7 million Americans were estimated to be out of work in January, and President Ford's chief economic adviser says several hundred thousand more could lose their jobs before the recession hits bottom.

The Labor Department releases unemployment figures for January today, and indications were the rate would be near 8 per cent. If it exceeds 7.5 per cent it would be the highest in 25 years.

A jobless rate of 8 per cent means about 7.2 million persons out of work.

The Ford administration has said it now expects unemployment to average better than 8 per cent through the year.

The administration revised its December jobless rate from 7.1 per cent to 7.2 per cent, making it the highest since July, 1958, when it reached 7.5 per cent.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, Thursday told Congress' Joint Economic Committee it would peak at 8.5 per cent before it starts a slow decline.

Greenspan said there was little the government could do to prevent the soaring unemployment without creating even worse inflation through more massive pump-priming than the Ford administration seeks.

The nation is moving at alarming speed toward depression-like levels of unemployment in terms of absolute number — the truly human measure, said Sens. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y.

They sought $7.8 billion to create 1 million public service jobs for recession victims. Current law provides $1.5 billion for 250,000 public jobs.

In a development that signaled lower prime interest rates, The Federal Reserve bank reported that loan demand had fallen at major New York banks. Loans to commercial and industrial interests declined $93 million in the week through Wednesday but fell under the $335 million drop reported a week ago.

Dwindling loan demand, along with Fed efforts to pump more money into the commercial banking system, prompted the drop in the prime interest rate to 8 1/2 per cent.

It is the first time in nearly a year that the interest rate has been below 9 per cent.

Curfew Imposed In Lima

LIMA (UPI) — An overnight curfew and squads of patrolling soldiers brought quiet today to the streets of Lima, where at least 47 persons have been killed in two days of riots.

The leftist military government imposed an 8 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew on the capital, which was thronged Wednesday and Thursday by rampaging mobs that sacked and burned numerous downtown businesses.

Peruvian army troops fired bursts of machine-gun fire at looters Thursday and special police units were brought in from an anti-subversive school to help patrol the capital.

The government continued the state of siege and declared Thursday a holiday in an effort to keep people at home.

UPI reporters who toured Lima's Central Morgue and the 2nd of May Public Hospital said at least 47 persons had been killed by gunshot wounds and another 60 or 70 were hospitalized with injuries suffered in the riots.

The government released no death toll, but acknowledged "some losses of life, numerous wounded and the detention of a great number of persons involved in the disturbances." Police officials put the arrest total at 600.

The disorders, the most serious since the government of President Juan Velasco Alvarado took power in a bloodless coup in 1968, began when Lima's 7,000 police went out on strike to demand more pay.

Army troops used tanks to crush the strike Wednesday morning, sparking widespread looting and arson in the downtown commercial district.

Although the government said police were returning to work Thursday, few were seen.

Radio and television stations broadcast government warnings that troops had orders to "act energetically" to crush any further looting.

Isolated bursts of Army rifle fire rang out in the deserted downtown area soon after the curfew began at 8 p.m., two hours earlier than on Wednesday night, but diminished as the streets quickly emptied.

Government press secretary Augusto Zimmerman said the violence had been a "serious attack against the Peruvian revolution."

"This was a well-synchronized plan with the participation of students, political groups and extreme left-wing elements," Zimmerman said.

The government shut down the Lima bureau of Reuters, the British news agency, accusing it of spreading false rumors.

BUTZ CLAIMS

Congress Acts 'Irresponsibly'

DALLAS (UPI) — If Congress keeps acting as irresponsibly as it did when it rejected President Ford's proposal to raise the price of food stamps, Ford's recommended $52 billion budget deficit will balloon to $70 billion, according to Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

"The Congress must take a hard look at their actions," Butz said in a news conference Thursday following his speech before a National Livestock Feeders Association meeting.

"Are they going to reject all the President's reductions and decisions? And the deficit — he set up a $52 billion budget deficit but it was planned on the basis of Congress adopting recommendations he had made to save $17 billion elsewhere.

"If it goes as it did yesterday it would become a $70 billion deficit. Congress did a very irresponsible thing yesterday."

In his speech to the livestock feeders' association, Butz said the beef industry will produce seven pounds more meat per U.S. citizen this year than last.

He said persons who claim the world is heading toward starvation and grain should be preserved for hungry nations instead of for use as cattle feed are jumping on a "bandwagon of food hysteria."

He said suggestions Americans eat one less hamburger per week to save grain will not only do nothing to help the starving nations of the world but will waste large areas of forage land.

"It's time to put all this in perspective," Butz said. "Meat eating is not something to be ashamed of, nor should we cut it out of our diets...meat is here to stay."

STUFFED BODY IN BARREL

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — A burly Lebanese servant admitted he beat to death the wife of an heir to the Wrigley chewing gum fortune and stuffed her body in a cement-filled oil drum found in a junk yard, police said today.

Police said they were under a court gag order forbidding them to discuss the motive for the slaying, but might be able to reveal it "in a few days."

Daniel Garbis Bedelian, 40, was booked on suspicion of murder in the death of Nancy Fuller Atwater, 50, wife of A. G. Atwater Sr., retired Wrigley executive and heir to $10 million of the Wrigley fortune.

Atwater's sister is married to Philip Knight Wrigley of Chicago, who owns the Chicago Cubs baseball team and most of Santa Catalina Island off the coast of Southern California.

Wrigley's son William is president of the chewing gum company on which the family fortune is founded.

Bedelian had been hired as a night nurse for Atwater, a mentally incapacitated invalid.

Police said Bedelian led them Thursday to Mrs. Atwater's body, discovered "trussed up like a ham" in a 55-gallon oil drum filled with 270 pounds of cement in an auto wrecking yard in Sun Valley, Calif.

The cement had been improperly mixed and only a six-inch thick crust on top had hardened and had to be broken through.

The wrecking yard is owned by other Lebanese immigrants, friends of Bedelian's, who said he left the oil drum there.

The coroner's office said Mrs. Atwater had been killed some time before dawn Wednesday by a "blunt force" blow on the head, and may also have been stabbed in the head.

Newport Beach detectives and Orange County sheriff's deputies began searching for Bedelian after Atwater's day attendant became alarmed at Mrs. Atwater's disappearance. Detectives said they found bloodstains on the walls of the situation," Butz said. He said 1975 feed grain production is likely to increase and this should ease the squeeze on livestock producers.

"Some of our best farmers now get acreage yields that are 50 per cent or more higher than the national average," Butz said.

"This means we have some room to go in reaching higher overall production levels."

Servant Admits Killing Wife Of Wrigley Heir

The day attendant, David Jacobson, said he found Bedelian painting over the stains, saying he had "spilled some cranberry juice." Jacobson said Bedelian told him that Mrs. Atwater had left the house with some strangers. Jacobson became concerned when Mrs. Atwater's lawyer telephoned to ask why she had not appeared for a court hearing involving administration of the couple's $10 million estate, which is in litigation because of Atwater's incapacity.

Detectives said they examined the house, found evidence of a bloody struggle, and went looking for Bedelian at his home in Glendale. They sighted him on the street a few blocks away, and said he voluntarily led them to Mrs. Atwater's body.

Atwater, 67, who sleeps in another bedroom, was apparently unaware of the slaying of his wife in her room, police said.

INCOME TAX

Certain Limits Placed On Medical Deductions

There are certain limits applied to medical expenses which can be deducted from the federal income tax. These limitations are defined in this section of an 11-part series on helping you to prepare your federal income tax.

United Press International Taxpayers who itemize their deductions must consider minimum limits in deducting medical and dental expenses on their federal income tax returns, says Commerce Clearing House, national reporting authority on tax and business law.

Deduction is allowed for expenses actually paid during the taxable year covering medical care of the taxpayer, his wife or dependent to the extent such payments are not compensated for by insurance or through other means.

The deduction is limited, however, to that portion of the expenses which exceed three per cent of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income. There is also a one per cent limitation on drugs and medicines.

On a joint return, the three per cent is based on the total adjusted gross income of both the husband and wife.

The three per cent limitation, however, does not apply to one-half (up to $150 per year) of the amount paid for qualified deductible medical care insurance. Any amount over this limitation paid for such insurance is lumped together with the other medical expenses and deducted, subject to the three per cent rule.

Qualified medical insurance premiums include amounts paid for: Policies that provide reimbursement for hospitalization, surgical fees and other medical expenses;

Policies that provide only for the reimbursement of the cost of prescription drugs;

The medical care portion in policies providing for more than one type of reimbursement if the medical charge is reasonable and is stated separately in the insurance contract or is furnished to the taxpayer in a separate statement;

Membership in an association furnishing cooperative, or so-called "free choice" medical service, or group hospitalization and clinical care;

Supplementary medical care insurance under Medicare (but not the employee tax for hospital insurance); and Medical care insurance premiums paid by the taxpayer for himself, his spouse or a dependent before he reaches 65 which cover medical care after he reaches 65. These premiums are deductible when paid if they are payable on a level payment basis for 10 years or more, or until the year in which the taxpayer reaches 65, but in no case for less than 5 years.

Medical expenses include amounts paid for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment or prevention of disease or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body, including amounts paid for health insurance, dental work, eyeglasses, artificial limbs, hearing aids, transportation primarily for and essential to medical care, and the like.

Medicines and drugs are included only to the extent they exceed one per cent of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income. Funeral expenses are not medical expenses.

Federal Safety Board Views Major Reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal safety board was told today that a United Airlines passenger jet last October barely missed the same Virginia mountain where TWA flight 514 crashed Dec. 1 killing all 92 persons aboard.

A written statement by United Airlines Vice President J.D. Smith said his company had received an anonymous report from one of its pilots of a premature descent during an approach to Dulles International Airport last October.

The pilot was unaware until after his landing that he cleared Mt. Weather, 23 miles northwest of Dulles, by only about 36 feet.

Smith's statement underscored Thursday's testimony at a hearing on the TWA crash calling for a major revision in the Federal Aviation Administration descent profile chart for Runway 12 at Dulles.

TIA Wants Flight End For Valley

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas International Airlines, which has served the Lower Rio Grande Valley city of Harlingen for 27 years until a strike grounded its airplanes two months ago, is seeking to end its service there because of competition.

The competition has come from Southwest Airlines, the intrastate commuter outfit which, until Thursday, served only the cities of Houston, San Antonio and Dallas-Fort Worth.

The Texas Aeronautics Commission voted unanimously Thursday to permit Southwest to begin service to Harlingen.

Southwest officials said their flights will begin in two weeks. TIA filed a brief Thursday with the Civil Aeronautics Board asking for permission to suspend into the valley. TIA contends it will lose $2.8 million a year by being forced to compete with Southwest Air traffic out of Harlingen, TIA contends.

TIA is making a premature and impulsive decision to pull out from the Harlingen market," Southwest attorney Herb Kelleher said.

TIA will never be ready to accept competition," Kelleher said. "Let's not kid ourselves. TIA is in the business to make a buck, and it can make more bucks in a monopoly situation than in a competitive one."

Harlingen City Attorney Al Conway said the Lower Rio Grande Valley is one of the leading population centers in the country, and a parallel demand for transportation service should be met.

"Though Harlingen loves TIA, it regrets to see TIA wants to be disenchanted with Harlingen," Conway said.

Harlingen has been without air service since a TIA ground personnel strike shut down operations in December. TIA attorney Jim Wilson said the airline will file suit to reverse the TAC's decision, but will not seek a court injunction to stop Southwest service while the suit is pending.

TIA feels like it will have no alternative but to file suit to clear up the many legal matters which must be resolved," Wilson said.

"We expected it (the suit) all along," said Rollin W. King, executive vice-president of Southwest.

TIA filed suit against the commission once before to prevent certification of Southwest to compete in Texas. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in favor of Southwest in 1968.

—FAA procedures chief William L. Bersch disagreed with some professional pilots in saying airport approach charts cluttered with useless details "I would recommend that we give some very serious consideration to wiping off all unnecessary information," he said.

The problem was dramatized Thursday by two conflicts between expert witnesses, both highly technical, yet involving basic questions of air safety.

A Federal Aviation Administration official, Harry Ross, and a private airport designer, Richard A. Shea, disagreed over the adequacy of descent profile maps such as the one for Runway 12 at Dulles International Airport.

Ross said Flight 514's chart was adequate. Shea said the map should have shown 12 miles of descent instead of 6, and if it had, the TWA pilot would have seen explicitly that he should remain above 3,000 feet until after flying across a navigation point called Round Hill. The plane crashed about five miles short of Round Hill.

His successor has already been chosen, John T. Dunlop, 61, former director of the Cost of Living Council.

President Ford offered Brennan the job of ambassador to Ireland, but Brennan, 56, seems not inclined to take it.

He is considering going back to the job he held before becoming the 13th secretary of labor — president of the New York

Building and Construction Trades Council, the organization from which AFL-CIO President George Meany launched his career in the national labor movement.

Meany has been Brennan's sharpest critic as labor secretary, once commenting that he treated office as if it were vacant.

In response, Brennan said Thursday: "I'm here representing all the working people," Brennan said. "I wish we could have done more, but I have no regrets."

As labor secretary since 1973, Brennan has been devoting increasing amounts of time to the problems of the unemployed instead of problems of those with jobs.

"You've got to be moved by unemployment lines," he said. Brennan has tried to demonstrate that someone in Washington cares about the unemployed by traveling around the country visiting unemployment offices, meeting workers, taking their jeers in stride and urging unemployment office workers to show compassion and to shorten the long, often cold lines.

He improved relations with Congress and established some rapport with the White House, and was able to help steer into law a pension reform bill.

He helped expand and guide bills to improve unemployment insurance coverage. He was instrumental, if not the key, to passage of a broadened minimum wage bill.

Under Brennan, there has been more vigorous enforcement and administration of laws opening job opportunities for minorities and improving safety and health in work places.

But Brennan was targeted by White House staff members for removal soon after President Ford took office.

"I don't blame the President," he said. "Some of the new people (in the White House) don't have a feel for people, don't have a feel for politics. It's not good for the government. It's not helping the administration with labor."

The TWA flight made a similar error and hit the mountain.

The descent took place as darkness was approaching, restricting visibility from the cockpit, Smith said.

One almost certain outcome of the record-length hearing into the TWA crash will be a call for major reforms in the charts and procedures used by pilots for instrument landings throughout the United States.

The reform theme has at times overshadowed the search for what killed all 92 people on the Boeing 727 jet. National Transportation Safety Board officials believe the Dec. 1 crash on a Virginia mountain top may have revealed basic flaws in the air traffic control system.

As the inquiry enters its 10th day, witnesses disagree on what is wrong with the regulations and procedures and what would improve the safety of the 500,000 persons who travel by air each day in the United States.

Never before has a NTSB crash hearing lasted so long. The previous record of nine days, set two years ago in Chicago, was tied Thursday.

The probe is expected to end late next week. Chairman Luis M. Thayer said "the entire air traffic control system" is under investigation, not a single crash. This explains the unusually long list of 42 witnesses and the extensive questioning.

The problem was dramatized Thursday by two conflicts between expert witnesses, both highly technical, yet involving basic questions of air safety.

'WITH NO REGRETS' Labor Secretary Brennan Submits Resignation Letter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan says he is resigning with no regrets, but he does wish he could have done more for working people.

"I have written my letter of resignation," Brennan told UPI Thursday in an interview. He said it probably would go to the White House the same day, but he would stay on the job until the latter part of March.

His successor has already been chosen, John T. Dunlop, 61, former director of the Cost of Living Council.

FOR ILLEGALITY Officials Studying Wallace's Election

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace took an official stand of silence today while Justice Department officials studied provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act to determine if he is serving his third term illegally.

A Justice Department official Thursday said the department was trying to decide if a 1967 amendment to the Alabama constitution allowing state officials to succeed themselves in office should have been submitted to the department for approval.

Under the Voting Rights Act, any law change in Alabama, or five other Southern states, which might affect the minority voting rights must be submitted to the Justice Department. It appears the 1967 amendment was not submitted.

"One major question to be answered first is whether the Alabama succession amendment is a change covered by the provisions of the Voting Rights Act," the Justice Department official said.

The possible error, brought to light by the Birmingham Post-Herald, would affect Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley and Attorney General William J. Baxley as well as Wallace, who many believe sought his second consecutive term as a stepping stone to another presidential campaign.

Press Secretary Billy Joe Camp said Wallace was not "going to say anything" about the development and Baxley's office said he was out of town. But Beasley said he did not anticipate a problem.

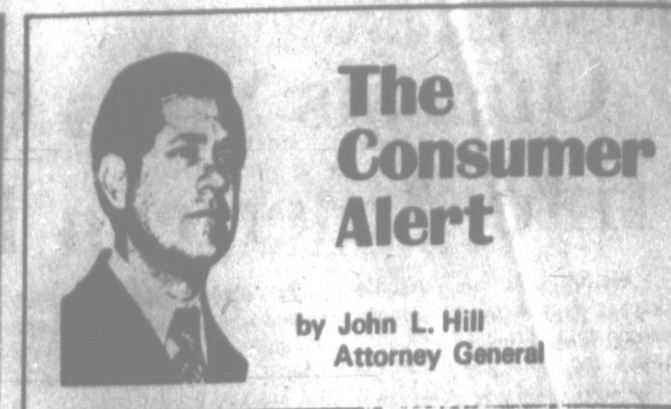

"I can't imagine the election of the top three officers of the state and the vote of the people could in any way be subject to change," Beasley said.

State Democratic Party Chairman Robert S. Vance said he viewed the matter as "a technical problem that can be taken care of."

"It is inconceivable to me that they (Justice Department) would cause any serious problems about it and I think it would be politically motivated if they did," he said.

Tuskegee mayor Johnny Ford, one of the first black leaders to endorse Wallace for a third term as governor, said he did not feel the succession amendment was discriminatory and he would support Wallace again "if a black did not enter the race."

Gordon Madison, a former assistant attorney general who would have been responsible for submitting the amendment, said he did not remember if a copy was sent to the Justice Department.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN — Imagine getting a letter indicating that you and your family might be heirs to the estate of a distant relative you never even knew existed? It sounds like the basis for a movie or novel but it could be the basis for a consumer complaint instead.

That's because in many cases, if you receive a similar letter, you're far more likely to lose money than to gain it.

Some companies sending out such mass mailings are specialists in what are called "missing heir" schemes.

Reports received by the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division indicate growing problems with these schemes in other states.

Most of them involve the company's mailing letters across the country to persons with common surnames such as Smith, Jones, Brown, Wilson, or Johnson.

The letters tell recipients that they could be heirs to money being held unclaimed in bank accounts — money which had been deposited by someone with the same surname as theirs.

Along with this initial contact letter comes an agreement form entitling the company to a finder's fee if the money is recovered by the person. In order for the company to research and process the claim, however, the recipient must send from $10 to $20 along with the signed agreement.

The consumer complaints that have arisen in other states indicate that when the recipient returns the agreement and fee he usually receives very little for his money.

What he gets often amounts only to the name and last known address of the bank depositor, as shown on the bank's records. Sometimes information is included on how to file a claim on the account in the state in which the bank is located.

Our Consumer Protection attorneys point out, however, that filing such a claim would be of little value unless the consumer could establish his right to the money.

Texas and other states have "escheat" laws which apply to unclaimed bank accounts, other personal property, and real property. "Escheat" is the process by which real and personal property pass to the custody of the state when there is no other valid claim.

According to Texas law, if person dies without a will and has no heirs, or is absent seven years and is believed dead, his property passes to the people of Texas. The State of Texas is very aggressive in its efforts to see that people who are entitled to property get it, however. The escheat process as applied to bank accounts works in the following way:

When a bank determines an account has been inactive for seven years, it must report the property to the State Treasurer. Sixty days after such a report is received, the Treasurer mails a notice to the sheriff of the county in which the bank is located, and the notice is posted in the county courthouse for 30 days.

In 120 days after filing of the report, notice of abandoned property must be published in a newspaper in the county. Persons claiming it can then present proof of the claim to the bank within 60 days. If the property is not claimed after another 90 days have passed, only then is it considered permanently abandoned and escheated to the state.

And any time after the property passes to the custody of the State, a person with a valid claim can recover it. The State Treasurer and the Attorney General have joint responsibility for establishing the validity of such claims.

The Treasurer will send the proper forms to be filled out, notarized, and returned. If the Treasurer and the Attorney General determine the claim is a valid one, payment will be made to the claimant by the state.

Briscoe Asks Disaster Aid

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he will ask President Ford today for federal assistance for flood victims in Nagadoches.

Briscoe said he expected detailed reports today on the extent of the damage in Nagadoches County. Preliminary estimates indicated the floods caused nearly $7 million in damage.

Briscoe signed a resolution Thursday authorizing $500,000 in state funds for disaster aid.

The resolution approved by the House and Senate Wednesday clears up legal questions about the expenditure of money appropriated in 1973 to pay one-fourth of the cost of grants of up to $5,000 per family for disaster victims. The federal government pays the other three-fourths.

Counties eligible for the aid have to be declared disaster areas by the governor and the Ford administration.

Anderson, Bell, Cooke, Denton, El Paso, Falls, Hopkins, McLennan, Parker and Williamson Counties have been declared disaster areas due to severe weather conditions.

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

The Venereal Disease Division of the Texas State Department of Health has reported a 50 percent decrease in cases of infectious, contagious, syphilis in the past four years. In 1970, there were 2,800 reported cases, but only 1,400 cases were reported in 1974.

Much of the progress that has been made in recent years against other communicable diseases, such as polio, smallpox, and Rubella, can be attributed to the widespread use of vaccines. However, there is no vaccine against syphilis.

State health authorities say that the dramatic decrease in the incidence of syphilis can be attributed to three principal causes.

First, the victims themselves. More people who are infected with syphilis have become willing to present themselves for diagnosis and treatment. No one gets syphilis on purpose, yet in the past there has been such a stigma attached to the disease, and so much shame associated with it, that people stayed away from medical care even when they suspected they needed it.

But in recent years, venereal disease has come out in the open. Syphilis is discussed frankly and factually in the schools, in newspaper articles, and on radio and television programs.

As a result, people are more willing to admit the possibility that they are infected—and thus are more willing to come to a

Dad Reunited With Daughter

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—For more than four months, William Schincke and Lorraine Swindler were just passing acquaintances in a Roman Catholic nursing home. Last week Schincke discovered Mrs. Swindler was his daughter; he had not seen in 40 years.

"All those times in the dining room and we never once sensed we were related to each other," the 83-year-old Schincke said Thursday.

He said his marriage to Lorraine's mother ended in divorce 40 years ago and he had not seen his daughter since then.

He entered the Lafon Nursing Home last September, and Mrs. Swindler, who is deaf and had been a Lafon resident for four years, did not know his name until she saw it on a bulletin board birthday message.

She realized it was the same as her father's name and subsequent questioning revealed she was Schincke's daughter.

"I knew how to find out if she was really my daughter," he said. "I asked her about a youngster she used to play with when she was a child. She told me her name was Betty."

"She knew the name of the big red horse we had, 'Dick.'"

"Then she started telling me about how I used to take her riding with me in a carriage we had. I knew it was really Lorraine."

Mrs. Swindler, 54, last saw her father when she was 13. She eventually married and entered the home when she became a widow and was left without relatives four years ago.

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

SATURDAY, FEB. 8
Your birthday today: You spend the first half-year disentangling yourself from personal limitations and shedding illusions or erroneous perspectives. You're on an upward trend, in which prosperity is strongly indicated. Relationships suffer occasional crisis, which are reconciled. Today's natives are one-of-a-kind, usually intuitive and dedicated to an unusual calling.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: The more people are involved, the heavier the going. Everyone adds his own conditions and complicates the simplest situation. Advice is unrealistic; use your own logic.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Family and associates pitch in enthusiastically. Rouse yourself to match them in mood and achievement. Home life improves spontaneously; relax and enjoy it.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: What you've been searching for over a long period arrives slowly. Eventually, you get the idea and adjust to more effective methods. Have a little more patience.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Everyone seems willing to waste money on whims but offers little toward common goals. Be sure you aren't cluttering someone's pathway while minding your own business.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: News of the day shows up in late dispatches and belated correspondence. Think before you answer. All proposals include special details; get an expert's opinion before you agree to them.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Select cheerful companions to help you cope with rivals and competitors to get your fair share of current benefits. You have a shift of mood and are relieved in later hours.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: You take a good look and find that you still have a lot of clutter to get rid of. Your favorite charity can use a wide range of gifts. Changed schedules bring better results.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Stay in a good humor as morning delays and confusion are cleared away. The more you rush matters, the slower your progress will be. Confide in a few old friends and swap opinions.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: There's much fuss about very little today. Straighten out accounts, locate mislaid items and tidy up! Handle routines in whatever fashion is easiest and take a break or two in between.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Stop long enough to listen to yourself and think where your spirit is drifting while you pursue material prosperity. Learn to correct discrepancies from your experience.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Nothing goes quite as expected, yet nothing goes awry. You've got a busy day and discover an erroneous decision. Routines are a bit tiresome, but unavoidable.

STAFF HAVING PROBLEMS
Briscoe To Form School Plan

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Thursday he would like to present his plan for reforming school finances in the next two weeks, but his staff is having a problem reaching a consensus with other groups on the cost of the program.

But Briscoe said the plan he will submit will not cost any more than $550 million for the next two years and "few school districts, if any" will have to raise property taxes to finance his proposal.

The governor said he will veto any school finance proposal that involves major tax increases.

Briscoe also said he hopes to announce his nominations for vacancies on the state Parks and Wildlife Commission next week but declined to say when he will make an appointment to the state Banking Board.

Briscoe sent an emergency message to the legislature Thursday requesting priority action on bills to:

- Spend $200,000 for a feasibility study on a rail system to link major metropolitan areas of the state with intermediate service to rural and suburban areas.
- Authorize county commissioners to exercise urban renewal powers in unincorporated areas.
- Require doctors, dentists and pharmacists who handle narcotics to pay a $5 licensing fee to the Texas Department of Public Safety and allocate the revenue to pay for enforcement of the controlled substances law.
- Appropriate $472,000 to keep the state comptroller's office in business.
- Let the Lower Colorado River Authority borrow more money to purchase equipment for new coal-fired generating plants.

Briscoe said he hopes to submit his school finance recommendations to the legislature within two weeks, but is having difficulty coming to an agreement with various groups involved in the effort to revamp current funding procedures.

"I think one of the major stumbling blocks—we might as well face it—will be the amount and overall cost of the program," he said.

Teacher salaries will be the key factor in the cost, Briscoe said.

The governor said he thinks $550 million is the maximum the state can spend on the financial revamping this biennium.

Briscoe said he will not support a plan requiring widespread property tax increases by local school districts. He said repeatedly he will veto any program requiring new or increased state taxes.

"Very few school districts, if any, would have to raise taxes under a program that I would recommend," Briscoe said.

Briscoe said his staff is working with other groups involved in the education finance question but progress has been slow on reaching a consensus.

"We're not as near consensus as I would like us to be," he said.

Briscoe said some school finance proposals carry price tags of more than $2 billion.

"I have worked in terms of $500 million—that's the upper limit that could be considered without new taxes this biennium."

IN MISDEMEANOR CASE
Erwin's Venue Request Hearing 'Longest Ever'

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—A defense attorney said Thursday the only persons in Travis County who have never heard of former University of Texas Regent Frank C. Erwin are "non-thinking hunks of flesh" who "don't read, don't watch television and don't give a damn."

Attorney Roy Minton said even a "pompous, right-wing, overbearing" man like Erwin is entitled to a fair trial on a drunken driving charge and the only way he can receive that kind of a trial is for it to be moved out of Travis County.

Judge Brock Jones said he would rule today on the motion to move Erwin's trial. Should Jones decide to keep the trial in Austin, another defense attorney, Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, has said he will use his privilege as a legislator to delay the trial until 30 days after the legislature adjourns June 2.

Erwin's Austin trial was scheduled to begin Feb. 18.

Minton said the hearing on the change of venue request was probably the longest ever conducted in a misdemeanor case in Texas.

Minton contended in his final arguments the publicity Erwin generated during his 12 years as a UT regent has prejudiced most of the community against him.

"No matter that he's a pompous, right-wing, overbearing—as Tony Koriath (a trial witness) said, 'He's so bad he's funny'—he's entitled to a fair trial," Minton said.

Minton agreed with Travis County Attorney Ned Granger that undoubtedly some jurors could be found in Austin who had never heard of Erwin.

"But we don't want a panel of 30 people who don't read, don't watch television, don't give a damn, because they're non-thinking hunks of flesh," he said.

Granger conceded Erwin's case has received a great deal of news coverage, but he said he thought "Erwin can get a fair trial. I would like to keep Mr. Erwin from driving while intoxicated on our streets."

The county attorney introduced as evidence a telephone poll taken by a member of his staff in late January which indicated out of 2,000 people questioned, 55 per cent knew nothing about Erwin other than his name. Minton objected to the poll, contending among other things it was inaccurate because it did not question only people qualified for jury duty.

Kit Khardiri, a St. Edward's University professor who said he scientifically designed the poll, testified it was accurate. Minton asked why two University of Texas professors who helped Khardiri write the questions did not appear in court to defend the poll.

"They were scared for their jobs," Khardiri said.

Erwin was arrested Oct. 8 by police who said he drove the wrong way on a one way street and weaved over the center line for five blocks on a two way street. He refused to take a test to measure the alcohol content in his blood.

He was found innocent on another drunken driving charge in 1972 in a trial moved to Belton.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK
My doctor has a one-word cure for lower back pains, alleviation of fatigue, sluggish sex life, loss of appetite, insomnia, headaches, irregularity, and bleeding gums. The word is exercise.
"Housewives are getting soft," he said. "Your push-button world is killing you. Get into shape, woman. Run! Bend! Stretch! There's nothing wrong with you that a few knee bends and a run around the block wouldn't cure."
I looked at him. A man who has to get off his feet to chew gum. A man who drives a cart around nine-holes of miniature golf. A man who refused to practice at Good Shepherd Hospital until they got a drive-in window.

"I don't think you understand," I said. "You're talking to this year's winner of the decathlon in Housewife Olympics."
"I have never heard of the Housewife Olympics," he snorted.
"That is obvious or you would never prescribe exercise to a housewife."

1. The 100 meter dash. An untrained toddler with a full bladder announces, "Tinkle tinkle" or wee wee, potty, toilet, hubba hubba, or what the magic word for bathroom is at your house). The mother making the fastest time scores 4 points.
2. The high jump. A woman must sprint the length of a newly waxed kitchen floor, lock the door against a group of children and return to her original position without breaking her face.

3. 16-point shot put. Must accurately heave into a floorless attic, 16 cartons of Christmas decorations, a rollaway cot, a plastic swimming pool and a glass punch bowl without falling feet first into the living room.
4. Broad jump. With trigger reflexes, the entrant must be able to leap over three women guests; beat them, to he bathroom, replace an empty spindle, put the lid down, pick 5 towels off the floor and wash "dirt" off the soap before they get there.

5. 400-meter dash. Between the time a doorbell rings and you discover it's the clergy, you have 15 seconds to hide the cars, get the sweatshirt off the kid reading a book. I'M AN ALCOHOLIC BUY ME A BEER and put a copy of Billy Graham on the coffee table.

6. The javelin throw. A mother is sent into a dark theater attended by 800 screaming children engaged in a popcorn-bumble-gum orgy and must get the attention of her child by hitting him squarely in the back of his head with her car keys.

7. The 1500 meter run. A sudden death race by a woman who has just post-dated a $2 check to a charity solicited by her husband's old girl friend to make a deposit before the bank closes.

Safety For Raw And Cooked Food

COLLEGE STATION — Most consumers know how easy it is for harmful bacteria to grow in raw meat or poultry held for several hours at room temperature.
But equal concern should be given to being sure cooked food is properly refrigerated, also, one foods and nutrition specialist pointed out this week.
Sally Springer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said that most bacteria in raw food are destroyed at cooking temperatures above 140 degrees F. But cooked foods can also be a haven for growing bacteria through recontamination or cross-contamination, she reminded.
"Cooked foods may be recontaminated if kitchen utensils used for preparing the food before cooking aren't washed before handling the same food cooked."

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Folks:
We hear a lot these days about the problems of the elderly or Senior Citizens, but often don't really realize just how they feel. So let's stop a minute and think.
I want to share just one of the many letters that I receive—this one from a dear "Senior Citizen"—which I think sums up what the vast majority are trying to say. We hear from many Senior Citizens, and I believe they want to be treated simply as people... individual human beings and, most of all, just loved—which is what all of us want! Right?
Here's a good "LETTER OF THOUGHT" me thinks, so here 'tis...
Heloise

Dear Heloise:
The years pass as regularly for the young as they do for the old. When a person is involved in making a life, the pattern is so plain—first childhood, then adulthood and then the harvest of the stewardship—how one has used his talents, his abilities and his power to produce a product we know as man.
We help to make the environment we live in and become a part of social life. Time passes quickly and we do not notice when we become one of the so-called "elderly," because we are actively enjoying life as usual if our physical bodies have not become sick or afflicted.
I want to be one of the "group" until I myself feel it's time I slow to my ability, and not be dropped or set aside as an "elderly" citizen or given special attention.
If along my way in life I have done things to deserve friends, they will need to be told what to do for me. They know my likes and dislikes and they respond in their attention to me.
I resent being visited by communities of people who come because of duty, or because I've had enough birthdays to be known as an elderly citizen.

Dear Heloise:
I have discovered a hint I would like to share with others who prefer the cooked pudding to the instant kind, but do not like standing over a hot stove waiting for it to come to a boil.
I have found that by using my ten-inch skillet over a large burner, the pudding comes to a full boil in just a few minutes time.

Dear Heloise:
It would be great to have a cup of coffee with you and I like mine hot, especially on cold winter mornings.
So the first thing I do when I go into the kitchen is to pour real hot water into the mug or cup, and, by the time I have prepared my breakfast, the cup is hot.
I then pour out the water and put in the fresh coffee. It stays hot much longer.

Study Reveals Profile Of Regular Churchgoer

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN, Ph.D.
Capley News Service.

The Protestant church is steadily losing members. The "why" is a question asked in a study conducted by a pastor, Rev. Frank Finkbinder, minister of the First United Methodist Church, Reseda, Calif. He found that those who left feel the church is too impersonal and unfriendly. In his detailed study to find out why people have left the church, he found developing a profile of the person that does not leave the church, but has stayed in the Protestant Church and chosen to support it with his time, talents and his money.

Dr. Finkbinder says just as the profile study shows the church drop-out worse than he really is, it seems that the mean average of the person who remains in the church looks better than he deserves. He points out that these results are comparative rather than definitive.

The active church member tends to be a theologically aware person, not implying that he is acquainted with the latest treatise, but his concepts will be cosmopolitan and representative of the non-church attendee. He has been involved in some church-offered adult education, so is somewhat more open-minded about issues.

"He has been involved in some decision-making office or has been a Sunday School teacher, he considers himself to have been involved in the process of where the church is going, though this has not led him to offer blanket approval for all that is happening in his church. In fact, he is very likely to question many stands taken, though he would agree that they were arrived at by democratic process. He has given to the church and been generous, his giving ranging from six dollars a week up, but this has not erased the doubts he has about the manner in which the money is spent.

"Conversely, he is apt to be bothered that so large a portion of the budget is going into capital investments and so little of it is getting into programming the actual ministry of the church to the community and the world.

"The active member is not only concerned for his church, but also for his community. The woman may be involved in an amazing number of organizations, giving several hours a week to various community projects, in addition to the church. These concerns center around such projects and interests as the local school, bond issues, the need for better city government, and a widespread program that will involve everyone in a concerted effort to meet the needs of young people.

"On the subject of social issues, the study found that the active member will be sensitive and thoughtful. He will be concerned about too much government expending for underdeveloped countries, but will want it continued at about the same level. There will be nagging thoughts about welfare, but he is not demanding that it immediately be cut back. The active member feels that the church ought to be doing more about civil rights and helping of minorities people."

"On the whole it was found that the involved Protestant church member feels that people are as moral today as they have been in the past and is generally optimistic about the future. This is not ignoring the problems, or even believing that they will eventually go away. Rather it is a feeling of faith about the nature of man and the goodness of God that will make it possible for us to deal successfully with the catalogue of ills with which he is only too well acquainted.

"He is also comfortable," noted Rev. Finkbinder, "in his relationship with his pastor. He may not see him socially on a regular basis, but he considers him a friend and feels he could go to him any time a need arose. He believes his minister is doing a good job and that he is using his time about right, but he would not like to see him get any more involved outside the local church than he already is.

"This hypothetical active member feels free to raise questions about his church and does not hesitate to criticize it at numerous points. On the other hand, as his church takes stands on critical issues, he believes it is doing as good a job as can be done. He does feel insecure in his relationship with the hierarchy of his denomination, but there is no distrust; only the question in his mind as to whether or not they really understand the local situation."

The study further indicated that the active member makes more money and feels more secure in his community than does his counterpart. He tends to have fewer problems in his community, in his job, and at home. In a sense, he belongs to the elite segment of society. From the outside it would appear to be snobbish; to him, it is the natural way of people who have similar interests and goals, getting together to pursue worthwhile interests.

majestic ideal that it became interchangeable with the name of God (I John 4:8). And from that point it began to run downhill. In our day the word 'love' has become an outcast...going from door to door...a beggar. That great, overpowering, driving force has become a whimpering, weak and confused outcast.

How did this come to be? Well, obviously one reason for the near death of the word has come from its overuse. We use it for everything...for heaven and hell. We use it for that brutal and cruel sex passion which would use human bodies as toys of personal pleasure. That grand and 'filled with glory' gift between a man and his woman is twisted into a sick and perverted desire to use and abuse for self alone. And its exploitation is a billion dollar market. The manipulation of matter over mind will make millions of dollars where honest labor will yield much less returns. The adult book store always displays the sign "If the sight of the human body offends you do not enter". The sight of the human body is not offensive at all—but the lies implied by those publications is offensive.

Isn't that just like the world? We proclaim God as love in one breath and then read that a movie actress five times divorced is the perfect love. We call tolerance of our faults — love.

We call our willingness to live and let live — love. We call our own good nature — love.

And when we want to identify what it is that burns the hearts and minds of the finest men and women until they offer their lives and fortunes to a Lord who will use it all — we call that love too.

The Greeks would never have mixed it all up that way. When they wished to talk of passion they called it EROS. When they wanted to talk of good nature they called it PHILIA. And when they wanted to talk of the fire that serves without thought of self gain they called it AGAPE (charity).

Careful now! We have done some funny things with the word "charity". When we give an old suit that we do not want any longer to some other person — we should not call that "giving to charity".

I do not suggest we stop doing that, but I do suggest that we stop calling that Charity. When I give my newest and finest suit to someone who does not have one, and keep my old one myself — now that's charity.

Are we free to decide to do that or not? Of course? God never violates human freedom to decide. But let us stop domesticating the God who so loved us that He poured out His blood for us — by calling our warm feelings in Church on Sunday — charity. Most of us are warm feelings in Church on Sunday. Charity happens in the middle of a blizzard on Thursday noon. But if you have ever stood there in that blizzard, you will know what freedom is, and what God is prepared to give you in return for the pailty gift of everything you have and own.

Do-It-Yourself Handbook Treats Everyday Ethics

NEW YORK — More than $1 billion worth of goods and materials are siphoned off the nation's shipping lines every year by thievery.

Shoplifters annually steal an estimated $12 billion worth of merchandise from stores.

"White-collar" criminals, embezzlers large and small, dip into the till every year to the tune of $40 billion.

Hotels and motels lose more than $600 million a year to the petty thievery of guests who help themselves to everything from towels to TV sets.

Politicians accept bribes running into the millions.

Wage earners steal time from employers by "playing sick" to stay off the job. Taxpayers cheat on their annual Internal Revenue returns.

Whatever the total bill is — and it runs into billions and billions of dollars — it is paid largely by the innocent victims of crimes petty and grand, according to American Viewpoint, Inc., an organization that has become a self-appointed conscience of America.

Ivan Hill, president of the organization with headquarters in Chapel Hill, N.C., has issued an appeal for adoption of the Golden Rule as the ethical law of the land in order to halt the "drift toward sleazy ethics and pervasive dishonesty."

If ever there was a time to reverse that trend, it is now, Hill declares, for most people are "fed up" with liars and exploiters and really want to improve the system.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," quotes Hill, a former newspaper and advertising executive who has also headed a drug firm and a real estate company. Since his retirement to Chapel Hill to write and think, Hill has devoted more and more time to developing his belief that all of society must take honesty and ethics more responsibly if America is to remain free.

"Our simple aim is to make honesty a working social principle," he says, "rather than a moral issue apart from our daily lives."

Hill has set forth the mission of American Viewpoint in "How to Make America More Honest," which he calls a "do-it-yourself handbook for everyday ethics." In his discussion, he holds to account members of every segment of society, declaring:

"Shocking breaches of ethical conduct appear from the boardrooms of big business to the bargain basements of department stores, from the state offices in the nation's capital to the curbsides of city streets. There is guilt, not only in the ghettos, but in the country clubs and sewing circles."

One of Hill's principal proposals is for the creation of a new profession of trained and skilled Counselors of Ethics to help people confront the complexities of life. While ministers and psychologists become involved in ethical matters, he said, there is need also for full-time practitioners.

Hill called for a corps of trained and positive persons, "probably wearing motorcycle crash helmets which simply say 'ethics.'"

"If they have business cards, they will read 'Baruch Bonesteel — Anybody's Misdemeanor is Everybody's Business.'"

Ethics should be taught in classrooms, Hill maintains. Codes of ethics should be removed from frames on office walls and put into everyday use. Members of the professions, such as medicine and the law, should keep each other honest and ethical and unions should insist that every member perform an honest day's work.

Jewish Religious Activity Drops

NEW YORK — Judaism has joined the American recession in religiosity.

Throughout organized religion in this country there has been a general decline from the post-World War II peaks of attendance at services and the boom in constructing houses of worship.

The Jews report they are no exception. Increased mobility and a declining birthrate have contributed to the drop in their religious activity, including a decline in synagogue construction and in enrollment in after-school and Sunday School classes.

Young people continue to be interested in Judaism, but as an academic subject rather than for purposes of worship. Nearly 330 colleges and universities offer courses in Jewish studies, a trend that has raised the level of Jewish culture and consciousness on the campus, but the general drift toward alienation of

Nazarene Revival Scheduled

The Church of the Nazarene will be in weekend revival beginning tonight at 7:30 p.m.

An outreach group from Bethany Nazarene College will be in charge of services which will also be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and at 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday. The public is invited to attend any or all of the meetings.

The student group will feature a vocal trio, pianists and two preachers.

The church is located at 500 N. West in Pampa.

Amarillo Site Fellowship International

A Texas Full Gospel Business Men Fellowship International, will be conducted for the Amarillo Region at the Villa Inn Motel Feb. 12-15.

Bill Swad, Columbus, Ohio, will be among the principal speakers. George Otis, Van Nuys, Calif., Duane Stenzel, Steve Sampson and Rev. and Mrs. Walter Standley, Independence Mo., and Dr. Roy Blizard are also included on the program.

The "team" leader will be Bill Wade.

Rev. Gene Allen is the local representative for the convention which is open to the public. To obtain more information, Rev. Allen has invited interested persons to call him.

Jewish youth has gone unchecked.

An extensive increase in intermarriage is threatening to transform Jewry from a religious to an ethnic community, although there is evidence that most children of "mixed" marriages are being reared as Jews.

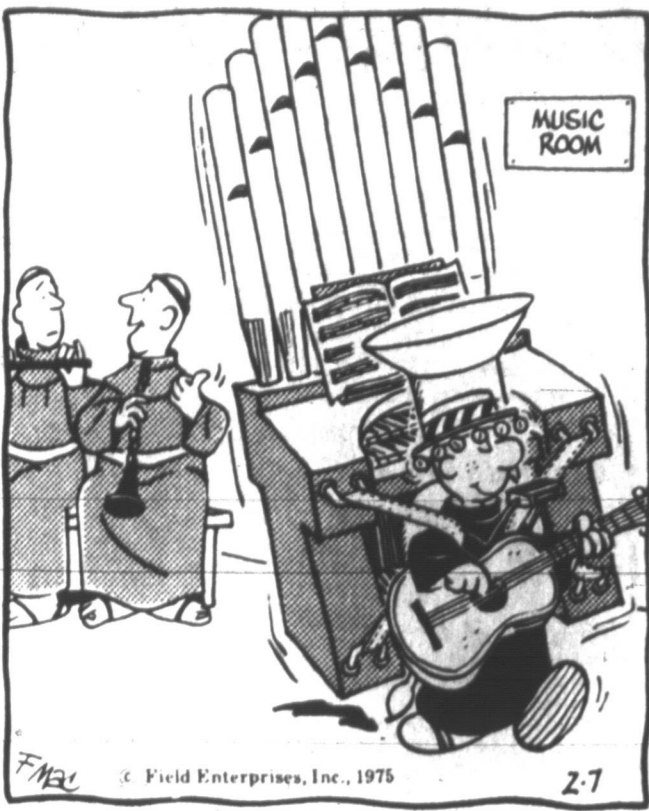

These are some of the major points made by Will Maslow, former executive director of the American Jewish Congress and now its general counsel, who in 30 years as an educator and Jewish leader has observed marked changes in the nature of Jewish life in America.

Maslow described what has been happening to American Judaism in a report on "The Structure and Functioning of the American Jewish Community," published jointly by the American Jewish Congress and the American Section of the World Jewish Congress.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Dave Camfield is the type of person who will say, "I told you so," if the situation deserves it.

The situation deserves it and Camfield has said it. "I told you this. At the start of district I said if our sophomore kids play like juniors and seniors and not like sophomores, we'd make a run at it. I thought Pampa would be the team to beat but I knew we were going to get better."

Now it's Tascosa in the driver's seat in the first half of district play, and Pampa and Berger, projected as the 3-AAAA elite at the start of the season, are tied for second place. Should Tascosa beat Caprock tonight, the Rebels will win the first half outright and gain a spot in the post-season playoffs.

"I had a sneaky feeling all along we were going to be a lot tougher than what people said we were. I'm still not sure we won't be blown out of the tub (Harvester Fieldhouse) when we go over there."

Tascosa, 13-10 for the season, has won four in a row and 10 of its last 12 games, including wins over Pampa and Berger on Tascosa's home court. "We like to play people in our gym," says Camfield.

Tuesday, Tascosa won, 75-68, over Berger and a letdown is possible for tonight's Caprock game. "It's a distinct possibility," the Rebel coach said. "We're referring to the Sandie game at every opportunity."

The "Sandie game" came after Tascosa edged Pampa, 60-59, to knock the Harvesters a game back. The Rebels then struggled against Amarillo High before pulling out a one-point, 60-59, victory.

"We're not going to take Caprock very lightly," Superstar Byron Carter is the Tascosa sparkplug. When the 5-8 senior is hot, the Rebels are more than likely going to win. Carter is averaging 18.6 points per game for the season and 21.5 in district.

The reason for his success, says Camfield, is "He's matured. Carter realizes what he has to do. He's not a ball hog. He'll get his 20 and he'll set up another 20."

Besides Carter, Tascosa has outstanding material, including leaper Lewis Moore and sophomore David Gilbreath, who looks more like an Olympic weight lifter than a basketball player.

Moore grabbed 26 rebounds against Berger, even though "we only had him for 19," said Camfield. But who's counting? Even nineteen rebounds would rank as a district high this season.

Tascosa's last district championship came in 1973, when the Rebels beat Pampa in a playoff with fine players like Randy Burkett, Bill Fountain and Robert Durrett.

Camfield believes this year's version is a better team than that one. "We do so much more..."

Who Would've Thought Derek Had Car Troubles

UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sometimes the man who has everything reaches the point where he has too much, and now that you mention it, Derek Sanderson would like to tell you a little story about that.

He's having himself a splendid season in his first year with the New York Rangers, so there's no sweat there, and playing hockey in the Big Apple is everything he ever imagined, so that's nice and cool, too.

Unflappable and uninhibited as ever, Derek Sanderson has the girls, the glamor and the grace, or maybe it's a sixth sense, to know instinctively when to take a little and leave a little for somebody else. In other words, he has everything he wants.

So what's his problem?

Derek Sanderson's problem is his car. It's a dazzling burgundy Rolls-Royce limousine he paid $31,000 for in Philadelphia two years ago and he has a vivid recollection of the day he made the purchase.

"It was a rainy day and I couldn't play golf," he says. "I was depressed."

Owning the car, Sanderson admits, gives him a feeling of fulfillment, accomplishment.

"It means you can afford it, but if anything goes wrong with the car, forget it," he says. "You can't get it serviced. The prices they charge kill you. They hit you for more money fixing the car than for buying it."

"Lemme tell you what happened to me one day last May. I'm going through the Callahan Tunnel in Boston and a cab stalled ahead of me. I hit the brakes. No brakes. The car won't stop. I'm pumping, but it doesn't do any good. Nothing. I swerved into another lane. Lucky no one was in it. The car grinds to a stop slowly.

"A buddy of mine was in the car with me and I say to him, 'Jeez, how am I gonna drive this?' He said, 'Why can't we get it towed?' I said, 'I can't. I'd be embarrassed. Everybody around here knows me.'"

"I was maybe 20-30 yards from a toll booth, and I manage to glide up to it. The car would stop if you weren't going over 10 miles an hour. I decide I'm gonna drive it slowly to the local Rolls dealer. Finally I get there, and you know what they did for me? Zero! Nothing!

"I said 'The brakes failed. They opened the hood. Sure enough, there's a leak. The fluid had leaked out. I told the guy to fix it and said I'd come back in a couple days. I came back four different times. They said they checked the seals, but they never did fix the car. You know what they said to me? They said, 'Here's a couple cans of brake fluid. Just keep filling it up.' Then they told me it would cost me $296. I said 'For what?' They said 'For labor.'"

Sanderson shook his head. "They wouldn't let the car out of the shop. I had to pay cash. 'Hey, I don't have cash. I told 'em, 'can't you put it on the bill?' They said no. I said 'Get the credit manager.' He said 'Sorry, we can't give you any credit.' The car had only 12,000 miles on it and he told me it wasn't covered by the warranty, either."

"Yeah, he knew who I was. That didn't matter, I had to go get the cash, and you know something? The car wasn't ever fixed. The ignition is gone, the battery is bad. The British don't know how to make batteries like the Americans. Oh yeah, I forgot to tell you, the wood cracked in the dash panel and they gave me a hard time about that also. Finally they replaced it."

Derek Sanderson is only one of a number of professional athletes who own a Rolls-Royce.

Tony Jacklin, the former U.S. and British Open champ, drives one and so do Walt Frazier and Earl Monroe of the New York Knicks, Nate Thurmond of the Chicago Bulls and Joe Frazier. Muhammad Ali bought one, too. "I don't charge me for garaging my car in the apartment house where I live," he says. "My rent is $1,400 a month. Parking is included free."

To avoid getting his nicked, Walt Frazier pays for two spaces instead of one in the garage where he keeps his Rolls. That can get a little expensive, but Sanderson doesn't have such a problem.

"They don't charge me for garaging my car in the apartment house where I live," he says. "My rent is $1,400 a month. Parking is included free."

Shootout-Part 1 Set Tonight

By PAUL SIMS

Shootout-Part 1 takes place tonight when Berger hosts Pampa in the game which could leave one of the two schools in a first place tie with high-flying Tascosa in the initial half of district play.

The first half of 3-AAAA action ends tonight with two other games — Tascosa vs. Caprock and Amarillo High vs. Palo Duro in an Amarillo Civic Center doubleheader.

Should Tascosa (13-10 overall and 4-0 in district games) beat Caprock (8-15 and 1-3), Dave Camfield's Rebels will capture top honors outright in the first half and clinch a spot in the post-season playoffs. The P.D. Amarillo contest doesn't mean anything as far as the title race goes, but the winner will avoid a last place finish in the half.

If Caprock upsets Tascosa, which has won four in a row and 10 of its last 12, the winner of the Berger-Pampa game will tie the Rebels with a 4-1 record.

Although a Caprock win would be considered an upset, Longhorn coach Bill White says Tascosa is definitely beatable.

And White adds Tascosa will lose if Caprock plays like it did in its 97-67 win over Palo Duro Tuesday in the Civic Center.

"We'll beat them easy if we have that kind of effort. That was probably our best game of the year. We didn't play our starters but for 2 1/2 quarters."

"Tascosa is physical. If they can beat you on the boards, rough you up, they'll beat you. But we play them different than other people do. We've already played them twice this year (Amarillo city tournament), so we know how to play them."

Pampa coach Robert McPherson is one person hoping for a Caprock win. But a win won't mean anything unless his rebounds per game. Tascosa, in its win over the Rebels Tuesday, was able to limit Kerr to only nine shots, three in the final three minutes, but the Berger post was able to connect on six and finished with 20 points.

"He's capable of getting 50 points," Camfield said. "McPherson said Pampa will not change its defense to stop Kerr but will 'play him like anybody else. We'll try to help out on him because defense is a team effort. Kerr plays low post. He and Howie should be an interesting matchup.'"

Lewis is scoring at a 16.3 clip for the season and is grabbing 11.3 rebounds per game. In district play, the big senior has especially come alive, averaging 19.2. That's good enough for fourth in the district behind Byron Carter of Tascosa (21.5), Kerr (21.2) and Sylvester Moore of P.D. (21.0).

Berger's high post will be 6-5 senior Jon Griffin, who has a 6.4 average. Pampa's 6-4 Nick Slaymaker (7.5) will be assigned to him.

Also starting for Berger tonight will be 6-1 senior Tom Hood (10.5), 6-2 junior Charlie Brown (8.0) and 6-2 senior Gary Benton (4.7).

Palmer Seven Back
In Bob Hope Classic
Miller Still In Front

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Seemingly these days, Johnny Miller can do no wrong if he's playing golf on a desert course.

Last month he set all sorts of records in the Arizona desert country while winning the Phoenix and Tucson Opens by a combined total of 24 shots.

Then he went "home" to play on the Monterey Peninsula, with its uncertain terrain and capricious ocean breezes and finished in a tie for 10th in the Crosby National Pro-Am.

Miller took last week off to rest and when he came down here to the California desert country this week, it was as though he had not left Arizona.

He shot an eight-under-par 64 Wednesday at Indian Wells and even though it took him half a dozen holes to get started Thursday, he still managed a three-under 69 and a three-shot lead today over Tom Shaw and Mac McLendon, with five-time Hoo champion Arnold Palmer seven shots off the lead after two rounds of the 90-hole, $160,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

"I love to play in the desert," Miller said. "It's not that I don't like to play elsewhere. It's just that I seem to do well on desert courses, especially the ones they have here."

For some reason, Thursday was not the best of days for Miller, he said.

Everyone else should be so lucky — not to feel all that charged up and still shoot a 69 to keep the lead in an event that will reward the winner with a $32,000 prize.

Shaw, who hasn't won a tournament since the 1971 Hawaiian Open, played his best round in as long as he can remember — a six-under 66 at Bermuda Dunes — while McLendon, who broke a six-year slump by winning the Walt Disney World with Hubert Green last fall, shot his second straight 69 — at Indian Wells — to lay three shots off the lead at eight under 133.

Palmer, meanwhile, had put problems once again. That's something that has plagued him for five years now, except for the 1973 Hope Classic when he put it all together for one week to win his fifth desert title.

"It's all very frustrating," Arnie said. "I had it close to the hole on nine greens but never got it in. When you are that close that often you should shoot a lot better than I did."

What Palmer shot — an even-par 72 that put him at four-under 140 with Jim Marshall and Buddy Allin, seven shots behind Miller.

There are 15 players in between Palmer and Miller, counting Shaw and McLendon, Bill Rogers, John Mahaffey, Bruce Crampton, Miller Barber and Tom Jenkins are at 137; Dave Hill, Jerry Heard, Don Bies and Dwight Nevil are 136, and Alan Tapie, Tommy Aaron, Randy Erskine, Bob Stanton and Jerry Barber are at 136. Defending champion Green is at 143 while Gary Groh, surprise winner of the Hawaiian Open winner last Monday, is at 141.

They use four courses in the Hope and the cut isn't made until after the fourth round — on Saturday. Today, Miller, Palmer and company play at La Quinta and move over to Bermuda Dunes on Saturday. The windup Sunday also will be at Bermuda.

LEAVES THURSDAY
Connors Injured
In Arkansas Meet

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors pulled a muscle or tore some ligaments in his left knee and dropped out of the Arkansas International tennis tournament Thursday.

Connors, the defending tournament champion, had two Little Rock physicians examine the knee Thursday and told reporters Thursday night he would not compete further in the $25,000 Arkansas tournament.

Dr. Ernest Harper, one of the physicians who examined Connors, said the world's top-ranked tennis player "probably pulled a muscle or could have torn some ligaments. We felt it would be foolish for him to continue to play. I would have told my own son not to go out and play with this injury."

Connors won his first-round match 6-2, 7-6 over Holland's Rolf Thung Tuesday and was scheduled to play a second-round match Thursday night.

"It wouldn't be fair to me and the fans if I couldn't give 100 per cent," Connors said. "I wouldn't like to play if all I could do was stand there and let them hit winners past me."

Connors first complained of trouble with the knee after his match with Thung. He had an ice pack on the knee when he met with reporters after the match and said he thought he accidentally hit it with his racket during the match. Connors played in a doubles match Wednesday and that could have strained the knee further.

Connors said he would abide by the decision of the physicians on whether or not he should continue with the tournament. He said he hoped he would be invited back to the Arkansas tournament next year because "this tournament is getting to be a bigger and better one."

Connors dropped out of two tournaments last year — once with a gastro-intestinal infection and a second time with a sprained knee. He said he hoped he will be able to play at Salisbury, Md., where the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association's National Indoor Championships begin Sunday.

In other second-round matches Thursday, George Hardie of Long Beach, Calif., eliminated Ion Tiriac 7-6, 6-3; Karl Meiler of West Germany defeated Barry Phillips-More of Australia 6-2, 6-2; and John Holland of California posted a 6-3, 6-2 upset over fellow Californian Jeff Austin.

then was unable to sign what he termed "a satisfactory contract" in 1972.

Gordon said when he became a free agent he signed a contract with Los Angeles on Oct. 13, 1972, after being contacted by at least six NFL teams.

The 31-year-old athletes' agent said talks with other teams reached a dead end because the Bears were asking too much in compensation under the Roelle rule.

Gordon's three remaining starters will be 6-2 Billy Wilton (18.3), 6-0 Robert Young (13.4) and 6-1 Richard Lane (4.0). All are seniors.

While Berger was losing its last district game, Pampa was whipping Amarillo High, 81-55, Tuesday in Harvester Fieldhouse.

"We probably played as good as we have in a long time. Three things we did well —," said McPherson. "— we fast broke, we rebounded and we played super defense."

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Dick Gordon, a former Chicago Bear star wide receiver, charged Thursday in federal court that the club's management discriminated against him and other black football players.

Gordon testified that Bears' owner George Halas once attacked him when he accused Halas of treating another player like "a nigger child."

The former Michigan State star testified for the second day in the lawsuit by 16 present and former National Football League players against the Roelle rule — a regulation that empowers the commissioner to set compensation before a player who plays out his option can be signed as a free agent by another team. It was named after NFL Commissioner Pete Roelle.

The NFL Players Association, on behalf of the players, contends the rule is monopolistic.

Gordon, an All-Pro with Chicago in 1970, played out his option with the Bears in 1971 and Pampa Junior High closed up its basketball season Thursday with only one win recorded.

The eighth-grade Red team, led by Steve Duke with 17 points, crushed visiting Perryton, 49-38. Steve Stout added 12 and Doug Skaggs 10 for the winners, who finished with a 4-6 district mark.

The ninth-grade Red, despite Gary Free's 11 points, fell to Perryton, 55-39, and finished 6-4.

The ninth-grade Blue team lost its 10th game without a win, falling to Dumas, 49-25, at Dumas. Bobby Burns scored 12 for Pampa Junior High.

The eighth-grade Blue team fell to Dumas, 47-37, and finished 2-8 in district.

Coaches for the season were Tommy Lester, ninth Red; Jim Reeves, ninth Blue; Steve Porter, eighth Red, and Fred Erwin, eighth Blue.

rebounded per game. Tascosa, in its win over the Rebels Tuesday, was able to limit Kerr to only nine shots, three in the final three minutes, but the Berger post was able to connect on six and finished with 20 points.

"He's capable of getting 50 points," Camfield said.

McPherson said Pampa will not change its defense to stop Kerr but will "play him like anybody else. We'll try to help out on him because defense is a team effort. Kerr plays low post. He and Howie should be an interesting matchup."

Lewis is scoring at a 16.3 clip for the season and is grabbing 11.3 rebounds per game. In district play, the big senior has especially come alive, averaging 19.2. That's good enough for fourth in the district behind Byron Carter of Tascosa (21.5), Kerr (21.2) and Sylvester Moore of P.D. (21.0).

Berger's high post will be 6-5 senior Jon Griffin, who has a 6.4 average. Pampa's 6-4 Nick Slaymaker (7.5) will be assigned to him.

Also starting for Berger tonight will be 6-1 senior Tom Hood (10.5), 6-2 junior Charlie Brown (8.0) and 6-2 senior Gary Benton (4.7).

Maryland Blasts Fordham

Lefty Driesell's coaching career has been an eminently successful one but the big moments have been ones of bitter frustration.

Driesell watched his fourth-ranked Maryland Terrapins roll to a 65-46 victory over Fordham at Madison Square Garden Thursday night, but afterwards he had to spend his time, as he often does, answering questions about his latest agony — Moses Malone.

In one form or another, the question always comes down to:

"If Maryland's that good now, how good would it be in Malone hadn't left to sign with the pros?"

Despite Malone's absence,

PHS Hosts Volleyball Tournament Saturday

Pampa, coming off an impressive tournament championship at Berger, will try to make it two titles in a row as the girls' volleyball team hosts its own tournament Saturday.

Pampa, Berger, Plainview and Hereford will compete in the Pampa tourney, which will be held in the high school gymnasium. Pampa and Hereford open the affair with a 9 a.m. match. Pampa surprised favorite Berger in the latter's tourney, losing the first game, 14-11, but capturing the last two, 11-9, and 17-15.

Then, the Harvesters whipped Berger's second string, 15-4, 15-3. The finals went to Pampa, which lost the first game to Perryton, 15-4, and won the last two, 15-3, 15-2.

Driesell has a shot at the national championship with an outstanding trio of guards in John Lucas, Mo Howard and Brad Davis.

BUT KEEPS SILENT Rose Mary Still Works For Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rose Mary Woods, who was Richard M. Nixon's personal secretary for more than a quarter-century, has been working in the former President's hideaway office next door to the White House sorting his personal and official papers.

The red-haired Miss Woods, 56, goes off the White House transition staff Feb. 9 but will continue handling clerical chores for Nixon in a new suite of offices reserved for former Presidents a block from the White House.

Whether she will continue to draw her present $36,000 annual salary is a question she must settle with Nixon, who will get $9,000 a year in retirement expenses.

Miss Woods, a private and intensely loyal aide throughout Nixon's turbulent political career, has become more of a mystery woman than ever since Nixon resigned the presidency in disgrace on Aug. 9. She refuses to talk to reporters.

While Nixon's tape recordings and most of his files and personal belongings are held in White House custody by order of Congress, Miss Woods kept busy packing Nixon's elephant collection, gavel, cartoons and other mementos for shipment to San Clemente, Calif.

Miss Woods was thrust into controversy with disclosure of a still unexplained, 18-and-a-half minute gap in a crucial Watergate tape which she had transcribed for Nixon. She testified she might accidentally have erased five minutes of the tape — but no more — when she paused to answer the telephone. This inspired jokes and cartoons about the "Rose Mary Stretch" from tape recorder to phone.

She still attends social events with her constant escort, Robert Gray, a vice president of the Hill & Knowlton public relations firm. She maintains her Watergate apartment and her contacts with old Nixon administration friends, in whom she confides her bitterness about her former President's downfall.

There are no suggestions that Miss Woods plans to follow the example of several other former Nixon aides and write an "insider" book about her years with Nixon.

The Almanac

By United Press International Today is Friday, Feb. 7, the 38th day of 1975 with 327 to follow. The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning star is Mars. The evening stars are Venus, Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn. Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius. American novelist Sinclair Lewis was born Feb. 7, 1885. On this day in history: In 1926, the average pay for common labor in the United States was 54 cents an hour.

In 1956, Autherine Lucy, the first Negro admitted to the University of Alabama, was expelled on grounds that she accused school officials of conspiring in riots that accompanied her court-ordered enrollment.

In 1967, fire in a restaurant atop a 10-story building in Montgomery, Ala., took 26 lives.

In 1973, the U.S. Senate voted to set up a seven-member committee to investigate the Watergate break-in of Democratic National Headquarters.

A thought for the day: English novelist Charles Dickens said, "There are books of which the backs and covers are the best parts."

MAKING HIS ROUNDS — The cold winds of winter don't stop this elderly gentleman from making his rounds in Madison's Tenney Park in Wisconsin. Winter snowstorms continued to make their rounds, too, to cover sections of the nation during mid-week as Canadian cold front systems swept throughout the land.

Schools have been closed, roads made hazardous and the nation's energy shortages strained again because of the late winter storms. Warmer weather is predicted for most of the nation, though, as the systems head southward. (UPI Photo)

Television In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Khan!" is chop phooey. "Khan!" — in case you have not been watching all the hyped promos on CBS — is the network's new detective thriller set in San Francisco. It premieres Friday night. "Khan!" also is the second bald-headed private-eye on CBS. The other is "Kojak."

Khan, who is not related to Genghis or Kubla, is a modern day Charlie Chan. In fact, he's such a modern day Charlie, that a group of Chinese in San Francisco — the Chinese Media Committee — have contended Khan is offensive to Sino-Americans.

The group is wrong. "Khan!" is offensive to everyone. Unless the scripts and the acting improve, CBS might as well send Khan to his ancestors.

In the opening show, Khan, played by Khigh Dhiagh, clears a professional football player who is accused of clubbing his girl friend to death with a statue. The ball player, a black quarterback, was framed by one of his coaches who was trying to keep him out of a championship game. The coach was working for professional gamblers.

Now, this plot is not the worst in the history of television or the most hackneyed. Certainly, the use of theme of pro ball allows the network to extend the football season. But it seems evident that Khan will never rise above mediocrity, especially since the level of acting never reaches the quality of the plot.

To wit: Khigh Dhiagh, who used play the villain Wo Fat in "Hawaii Five-O," walks through his role like a windup Buddha doll suffering from terminal constipation. In fact, Dhiagh recites his lines like a telegram.

Others in the show suffer from the same problems. Irene Yah-Ling Sun plays Khan's No. 1 and only daughter, Anna, a doctoral candidate in criminology. Miss Sun is attractive and icy, but suffers from the same malady that afflicts Khan.

Even Kim, Khan's No. 1 and only son, Kim, is designated by CBS to be "college educated." There must be a fear around CBS that Kim must be a college man because all Occidentals think Chinese work in laundries and use obscures. The trouble with Kim is that he is filled with starch and is waiting to be pressed.

The only interesting group left is the supporting cast, which is much better than the primary characters. Clu Gulager is workmanlike as the coach who tries to frame the quarterback. John Ireland adds a touch of class as the football team's impotent head coach.

And Victor Buono is his old delightful, villainous self as the gambling czar. He coos evil. The only unfortunate thing about his performance was that he was saddled with terrible lines. "Ed, don't be a twit," says Buono.

CRUDE OIL — VERNAL, Utah (UPI) — Oil shale deposits beneath Utah's 3,000-square-mile Uinta Basin are estimated to contain about nine times the estimated United States reserves of crude oil in 1970, according to the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.
