Senate Cautious On Primary Bill

FOLEY PREDICTS

Crops Supports Action Possible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., predicted today there is a "very good chance" his panel can push a one-year emergency price support hike for major crops through the House this month.

Foley said that if the House acts as quickly as he hopes, the Senate Agriculture Committee may agree to act rapidly on the House bill, giving it priority over the broad-scale omnibus farm bill on which the Senate panel is currently working.

After dealing with the one-year hike for 1975 crops, Foley said, congressional farm leaders could turn next to action on an omnibus farm bill covering a wide range of other farm and food issues.

Foley's committee had been scheduled to meet Thursday to act on subcommittee-approved legislation to raise feed grain, wheat and cotton supports for 1975 and milk supports for 1975 and 1976.

The meeting was canceled and re-scheduled for March 4, however, to allow Foley to confer on legislative strategy with Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga.

Foley said he had also discussed the developing price support issue with Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz who has labeled support hikes approved by House subcommittees as "unacceptable."

Butz appears willing to discuss possible compromises on support increases, Foley said. But the House leader said he sensed that members of his committee are in no mood to back down. This means the lawmakers may be moving toward a presidential veto and would need a two-thirds margin in the House to make their decisions stick, he said.

House subcommittees dealing with segments of the farm bill have voted to raise 1975 wheat support target prices to $3.10 a bushel, corn to $2.25 a bushel and cotton to 46 cents a pound. A dairy subcommittee yesterday voted unanimously to hike manufacturing milk supports to 8 per cent of parity through March of 1975 and to require quarterly increases in supports if farm costs continue to rise.

Butz has given no public indication of what support rates he would accept above the current $2.05 a bushel for wheat. Congressional backers of the support hikes contend they are needed to allow farmers to produce the big crops consumers need without facing financial disaster due to sharp production cost increases in the past two years. Butz, on the other hand, has warned big support hikes could be costly to the treasury and could pile up surplus stocks in government hands.

City Readies Condemnation Proceedings

Condemnation proceedings against property owners on SH 273 (S. Cuyler St.) who have not yet agreed to right-of-way purchase settlements for street improvement are in the preparation stage. City Atty. Bob Gordon said today.

Gordon was authorized recently by the Pampa City Commission to file condemnation lawsuits against the owners of 20 parcels of 10-ft strips on each side of the street.

That number now has been reduced through negotiation to five owners of eight tracts of needed right-of-way.

A total of 69 parcels were involved at the outset of right-of-way purchases for the widening and paving of S. Cuyler from Brown St. to McCullough St., a project in which the State Highway Department is participating.

Gordon said preparation of the suits will continue for probably another three weeks, at which time he will ask District Court Judge Grainger McIlhenny to appoint a three-man condemnation commission to hear the proceedings against property owners with whom right-of-way purchase agreements have not been reached by that time.

Rebates Program Ending

DETROIT (UPI) — The great rebate game ends today, and no one is sure if it really worked.

Nor was it certain any of the Big Four automakers would revive or extend it.

"What are we going to do for an encore?" said James Vohes, general sales manager for Pontiac.

It was a question the industry, auto dealers and consumers alike asked as the highly publicized—and expensive—sales campaign neared the end of its run.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. all said flatly or obliquely the rebate game was over.

To replace the rebates, auto companies apparently will cut prices slightly by removing some standard equipment and making it optional. GM and AMC were first to take this step and Ford indicated it might do likewise soon.

GM started the lower price campaign by reducing the sticker price on nine small models from $104 to $113. Then AMC cut prices on 11 models by amounts ranging from $25 to $198.

Ford said it would decide soon what cuts, if any, to make. Chrysler said it was reviewing the situation.

Chrysler launched the rebates Jan. 12, offering to send new car buyers rebates of $200 to $500. Other companies followed suit and upped the maximum rebate to $600.

This, in turn, touched off a wave of rebate offers from companies as diverse as Grand Trunk Western Railroad and a Detroit jewelry store.

The rebate idea was sparked by sluggish sales that eventually resulted in a record backlog of 1.7 million unsold cars and massive layoffs of auto workers. Auto companies simply misjudged the market—building more cars than they could sell at prices averaging $1,000 more than the 1974 models.

The companies have not disclosed how much the rebate program cost. One source said Ford paid $30 million in rebates in January.

Auto executives said they did not like the rebates because profit margins were so low it did not make long-term sense. Analysts said they suspected many buyers were going to purchase new cars anyway, rebates or not.

A recent UPI survey of the nation's consumers showed they preferred a permanent price cut to the rebate system.

Sirens Working

A special city-wide test of Pampa's disaster warning sirens yesterday afternoon proved them all to be in working order.

Eight of the signals in all sections of the city were tested at 1:30 p.m. yesterday.

Radio units stationed at each of them reported they were functioning properly.

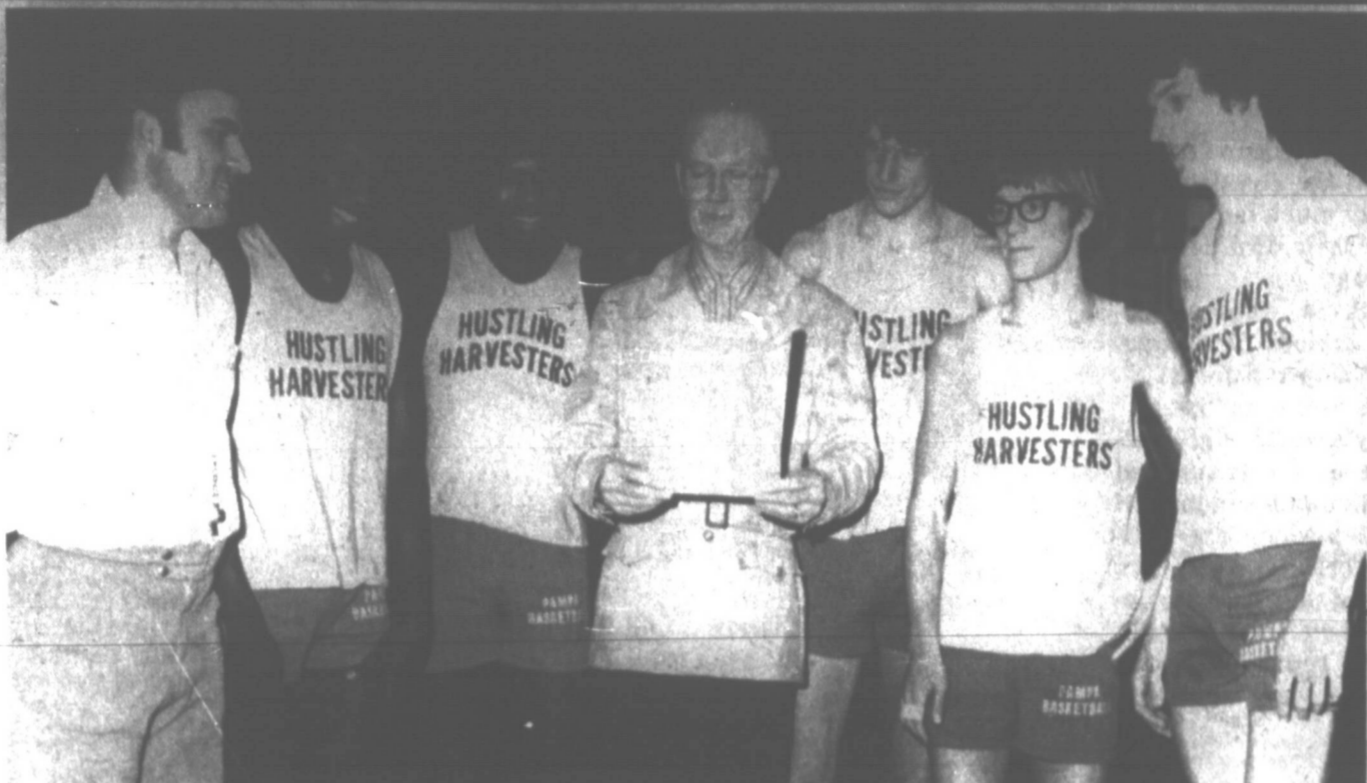

Regular tests are held once a week.

Skellytown School Compiling Roster

The Skellytown Elementary School is compiling a roster of prospective kindergarten students for the 1975-76 school terms.

Children who are five years old or who will be five years old before Sept. 1, 1975, should be listed with the school, according to officials there.

Children may be included by calling the school at 846-2483 in Skellytown.

Indians Indicate Illegal Subsidies

SHIPROCK, N.M. (UPI) — The armed Indians who seized an electronics plant on the Navajo reservation said today they found internal company documents showing the firm was receiving a federal subsidy of questionable legality.

A protest spokesman also said documents uncovered by the Indian occupation force inside the Fairchild Camera Co. plant indicated the firm was considering abandoning the facility if the subsidy ended.

The spokesman said the subsidy, involving on-the-job training funds, totaled $2.4 million during the past two fiscal years.

Company spokesmen could not be located for comment.

The Indians took over the plant peacefully Monday protesting the firing of Indian employees and issued a series of demands including the rehiring of the 140 Fairchild employees laid off last week.

FOR POLICE CHIEF

City Commissioners went into executive session at City Hall at 10 o'clock this forenoon in an attempt to agree on an appointment of a Pampa police chief.

They were meeting with City Manager Mack Wofford who, according to provisions of the city charter, must make a recommendation for the appointment.

In order to finalize the city manager's recommendation, commissioners must "consent" by at least a 3 to 2 vote.

It was stated by the city manager that today's closed door meeting was expected to be devoted almost entirely to a review of the 22 applications for the post that have been received.

Attending the meeting in addition to the city manager were Mayor R.D. Wilkerson.

Deadline Today On City Races

Today was the deadline for filing for office in Pampa's upcoming April 1 city election.

Potential candidates for the office of mayor, Ward 1 and Ward 3 commissioners had until 5 p.m. today to file at the office of the city secretary in City Hall.

Up until noon today the only candidates for the posts were the incumbents. They are Mayor R.D. Wilkerson, Ward 1 commissioner Ray Thompson and Ward 3 commissioner Leo Braswell, all of who have filed for re-election.

"We can document this word for word through files that we have found in the building," said John Trudell, national chairman of the American Indian Movement.

The AIM leader offered to arrange to permit a reporter from United Press International to enter the occupied plant to study the documents. Previously, the armed protestors barred newsmen from the facility.

"If they (Fairchild) had to pay the people with their own money," Trudell said, it appeared the firm would "pull out and go overseas."

Trudell said the documents showed the firm received for "nine years in a row" training funds under Public Law 959, which were supposed to be available for only two or three years under the law.

Trudell quoted a Bureau of Indian Affairs official, Daniel D. McDonald, director of the Office of Tribal Resources

Development, as saying in one memorandum to company officials: "This situation could become very embarrassing to both the bureau and the company."

Also quoted by Trudell were several documents purportedly signed by Dick Fischer of the finance department at the Shiprock plant.

Trudell said Fischer stated in internal correspondence dated June 25, 1974, "McDonald, who was instrumental in bringing Fairchild to the reservation, replied that the (one-the-job training) contract had been in effect for over eight years and was becoming a source of embarrassment... Finally, he (McDonald) offered an opinion that the ongoing nature of the contract might not be legal..."

In another memo on the subject of training fund contract negotiations with the BIA, Fischer said "Fairchild is not the only company that has received reimbursement for more than two years," Trudell said.

The AIM leader said the documents showed company strategy in the contract negotiations with BIA was to play on the specter of unemployment on the reservation.

In one memo quoted by Trudell, Fischer reportedly said: "With reservation unemployment at 67 per cent, I believe the bureau (BIA) could hardly tolerate a substantial reduction in employment. The above facts communicated clearly but strongly by the president to the BIA would result, I'm sure, in a new contract."

June 25, 1974, correspondence from Fischer to officials at company headquarters in Mountain View, Calif., was quoted by Trudell as follows:

"Finally, some long-term planning should be done on the future application of the Shiprock plant. The bottom line will always show Shiprock more costly when competing in the assembly league with offshore (overseas) plants. However, it seems wasteful to utilize only 60 per cent of Shiprock's manufacturing space and to not take advantage of a labor rate that is more attractive than anything else domestically."

Junior Stock Show Planned

The Gray County Junior Livestock Show for 1975 will be conducted Saturday beginning at 1 p.m.

The show, under sponsorship of the Pampa Noon Lions Club, is expected to be the biggest and best yet, according to Joe Wheeley, superintendent of the event.

Show calves and barrows will be exhibited for judging by Future Farmers of America and 4-H Club members within the county.

Showmanship trophies will be awarded in both divisions, along with awards and ribbons for placing.

Kenneth Holloway, Moore County Extension agent, will judge show calves and Larry D. Schickendanz, head of the Agricultural Department of Frank Phillips College, will be swine judge.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A presidential primary bill rushed through the House of Representatives apparently will travel more slowly through the Senate.

Sen. Don Adams, D-Jasper, Senate sponsor of the measure, said he sees no need for special handling of the bill, which was designed to enhance the candidacy of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex.

Political pressure from Bentsen helped get the bill passed by the House Thursday, only 10 days after it was first presented to the House Elections Committee.

Twenty-four witnesses appeared before that committee, and only one—the sponsor, Rep. Tom Schieffer, D-Fort Worth—endorsed the bill. The committee immediately approved it 6-4, however, sending it to the full House.

The House tentatively approved the bill Wednesday after two days of debate, then sent it to the Senate Thursday by an 83-52 vote.

"Right now I've got 16 co-authors, and I've got to have 25 votes to bring it up," Adams said.

"I don't think we need to be in a big hurry. I want the people to have the opportunity to come up here or write their senators and express their opinions on this bill."

The bill, as it passed the House, sets up a presidential primary for Texas in May, 1976, and provides for election by senatorial districts of 75 per cent of the state's delegates to national party conventions. The remaining 25 per cent would be selected by state party conventions.

Before adjourning for the weekend Thursday, the House also tentatively approved a bill by Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, prohibiting employers from discharging employees because they serve on juries. The measure would let workers fired because of jury service file civil damage suits against their former employers.

The House postponed until Monday a vote on another bill by Mrs. Johnson permitting the state's three largest counties to appoint a jail administrator to perform some of the duties of the sheriff.

Harris County legislators objected to the plan, and wanted time to prepare amendments exempting their county from the bill.

The Senate has decided state colleges and universities should be allowed to use funds left over from last year to help pay current faculty salaries.

Senators voted 25-2 Thursday to let state colleges and universities spend $518,000 left over from last year's budgets over the objections of Sen. Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells.

Creighton said the bill—which now goes to the House—was a way to get around legislative budget restrictions.

The Legislative Budget Board nailed those funds down on purpose so these folks would have to spend it for what they say they're going to spend it for and if they don't it lapses," Creighton said.

Sen. William T. Moore, D-Bryan, said Creighton's approach will encourage the schools to spend money needlessly to avoid losing it.

"To me it is stupidity to tell the institutions 'If you don't use the money this year you're going to lose it,'" Moore said. "You're going to encourage them to waste money."

Moore said a number of colleges and universities had fewer students enrolled than originally expected last year and did not use all the sums allocated for faculty pay.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, said Thursday the State Cosmetology Commission had been mismanaging its funds and was slanted towards the industry.

Ogg refused to vote on the nominations of two men—J.H. Jemison of Houston and Frank Joseph of Harlingen—to serve on the commission.

"I'm a little unhappy with the way things have been conducted by that board," Ogg said. "There's some evidence that rather than turning in fees they collect much of the money has been kept in shoe boxes."

"I'm afraid it's a little industry-dominated."

The Birds Have It!

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The pans were flying in a flock of fowl debate in the Texas House Thursday.

Rep. Ron Bird, D-San Antonio, took the floor to speak for a resolution to proclaim March 21 "Mockingbird Day" in honor of the state's official bird.

Rep. Ben Z. Grant, D-Marshall, played Abbott to Bird's Costello.

Grant: "I understand you have a bird bill this morning."

Bird: "Mr. Grant, although it may appear to some to be a bill, it's really my nose."

Grant: "Mr. Nugent (Rep. Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville) is the real sponsor of this resolution, is he not? Why isn't he up here to speak for it?"

Bird: "Apparently Mr. Nugent thought he wouldn't be able to make this resolution fly."

Grant: "He may be trying to kill two birds with one stone."

Bird: "I can assure you I'm not trying to feather my own nest."

They tried a few more—all ducks—and then Rep. Jim Kaster, D-El Paso, got in on the act. (Kaster, a rival of Bird's in the House humor caucus, has been pushing for passage of his own resolution to name the common ladybug the state insect.)

Kaster: "My resolution on the ladybug has been derided constantly. What makes you think your resolution will get through?"

Bird: "This is not a sexist bill as your's was, Mr. Kaster."

Bird returned the floor to Speaker Bill Clayton.

"Mr. Speaker, has the gentleman yielded the nest?" inquired Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio.

"I believe he flew the coop," Clayton replied.

The resolution passed without dissent.

Pushers Death Penalty Urged

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, says heroin sellers should be given the death penalty as a way to stop drug traffic in Texas.

Mengden introduced a bill Thursday providing for the death penalty for persons importing or selling heroin or opium in Texas.

He also introduced a proposal authorizing the attorney general to pay a $5,000 reward to anyone giving information leading to the arrest and conviction of a drug pusher.

"Drug abuse represents the ultimate threat to our country," Mengden said. "If we are to survive as a nation, we must take strong positive actions to completely eliminate drugs from society."

"Because we have no sympathy whatsoever for these despicable criminals, the death penalty is more than appropriate."

Rodeo Association Elects 2 Directors

The directors of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association met Thursday night in the Chamber of Commerce offices to make plans for the upcoming rodeo scheduled for July 30 and 31, and Aug. 1 and 2.

Two new directors were elected to fill vacancies on the board.

Tom Coffee will serve a three year term, and Bush Jordan will serve a one year term.

CONGRESS MUST APPROVE

Navy's budget critical

Navy Secretary William Middendorf has warned Congress that the United States of America is at a "crossroads" that will determine whether our Navy wins or loses the battle to stay abreast of the growing naval strength of the Soviet Union.

We now have fewer ships in our active fleet than we had in 1940 — a year and a half before Pearl Harbor. From a postwar level of 976 vessels in 1968, the fleet has now shrunk to barely 500.

Mr. Middendorf and Adm. James L. Holloway III, the new chief of naval operations, were before the Senate Armed Services Committee to fire the opening gun on behalf of the $33.7 billion Navy budget proposed for 1975-76, with a special plea for $3.18 billion to include for construction of 23 new ships. As expected they are drawing counterfire from members of Congress who want to trim back defense requests to free more money for domestic programs.

Sen. William Proxmire in particular accuses the Navy of playing a "numbers game" in comparing U.S. and Soviet naval forces. The senator could not be more wrong. If the testimony were based on numbers alone we would expect something like panic in Congress because, in numbers, our 500-ship Navy compares with a Soviet navy of well over 2,000 vessels.

Those numbers are part of the problem, but by no means the most important part. The bottom line is the comparison between the ability of the U.S. Navy to fulfill its mission around the world and the ability of the Soviet navy to keep it from doing so. That is where Mr. Middendorf sees us at the "crossroads."

It has been quite clear for several years that the Russians are building a navy much larger than they need for their own defense. Russia is a land power, largely self-sufficient in natural resources, with a block of contiguous allies in Eastern Europe.

The United States is an "island" nation in today's world, highly dependent on the sea for its survival and linked to 43 nations in mutual security treaties which are holding the free world together. The responsibility of the Navy is increasing with the closing of overseas bases and reduction of our military manpower deployed abroad.

Congress must make a crucial decision at this fork in the road. Either we are going to maintain a Navy that can safely project U.S. power wherever it may be needed in an international emergency, or we are going to give the Soviet Union the headway to challenge that power with a good chance of neutralizing it, if not defeating it.

In one sense, naval strategists must indeed play a numbers game. It involves, for instance, calculating the formidable power of one of our aircraft carriers in comparison with the advances made by Soviet technology in anti-ship missiles and the fast combat craft that can launch them. Or in comparing the eight separate weapons systems on board the newest Soviet cruiser against the four aboard our largest frigate, or in comparing our own antisubmarine resources against what we know of the Soviet countermeasure capability. Those are complex calculations, and it is obvious that the Russians have been doing their math with the intention of coming out ahead.

Medical review plan

When government dispenses huge sums, "strings" are inevitable. The result may be bureaucratic meddling but that's the way it is.

Confronted with enormous, rising costs, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare plans a "utilization review" program beginning Feb. 1 for millions of hospitalized Medicare and Medicaid patients. In essence, the government wants to be assured that patients are not hospitalized needlessly or kept in the hospital longer than necessary.

Government and taxpayers from whom the funds are obtained have a legitimate interest in keeping costs down and reducing abuses. The new review plan, revised from an earlier proposal to police hospital admissions, deserves a fair trial.

It requires review within two days after the patient is admitted. HEW estimates savings of $40 million in Medicare and $2.5 million in Medicaid between Feb. 1 and June 30.

Care must be taken to assure that adequate aid is not denied the needy and that laymen have no part in making medical decisions.

Distasteful as it is for one professional to second-guess another, physicians face the obligation of reviewing their colleagues' decisions to prevent unwarranted use of Medicare and Medicaid funds.

Certain central African tribeswomen are never allowed to eat liver, because they believe that liver is the seat of the soul, and women, who have no souls, shouldn't be allowed to acquire any.

'SLEEPLESS NIGHTS'

THE CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Producers Vs. Non-Producers

By WILLIAM RUSHER

If you think the basic economic (and therefore political) cleavage in America today is between business and labor, you are at least a quarter of a century out of date. The relevant fracture-line is now between producers and non-producers, and it runs roughly at right angles to the old split. That is why the two major parties have been failing so spectacularly to reflect the views of the voters and why there is so much talk these days about a new conservative party.

Under the administrations of Franklin Roosevelt in the 1930s and 40s, American politics was seen as pretty much a battle of haves vs. have-nots. The Democrats, who loudly championed the cause of the "little man," won the elections with monotonous regularity.

But recent analyses by Kevin Phillips and others suggest that whatever truth there may once have been in this concept of the national debate, it has long since ceased to bear any relation to reality. To the extent that the Republican and Democratic parties remain committed to that model, they resemble a couple of dinosaurs overtaken by some natural disaster in the midst of a savage struggle — fossilized forever in the postures of their long-forgotten feud.

The great central fact that looms over the America of the mid-1970s is the growth, in the past 25 years, of a whole new economic class. This class is often described as the "non-producers," since, like the lilies of the field, its members toil not, neither do they spin. They are neither businessmen nor manufacturers, blue-collar workers nor farmers. Instead, the dominant members of the new class form a "verbalist" elite, and they and their equally non-productive mass constituency have a set of economic interests sharply at variance with those of the producing sectors of the American Society.

The verbalists traffic in words and occasionally ideas. They include the print and electronic media, the major foundations and research institutions, the educational establishment in all its manifestations, and — last but not least — the huge federal and state bureaucracies.

It is not widely realized how pervasive the influence of these closely allied forces has become, and what an enormous chunk of our national wealth they already consume. Between 1948 and 1974, for example, federal expenditures on research and development increased from $1 billion to $20 billion per year, between 1940 and 1973, national outlays for education soared from $3.2 billion to $96.2 billion, in the same period the number of tax-exempt foundations jumped from 314 to 28,000, deploying assets of more than $20 billion. By 1980, Phillips estimates, a breathtaking 40 percent of our entire national income will be spent on activities related to this verbalist elite — compared to just 2.5 percent on manufacturing.

To keep this new elite happily occupied with the constant social changes which are naturally its stock in trade, the assumptions of ideological liberalism have been harnessed and put to work. A new mass constituency also non-productive has been called into being. It includes not only the whole vast category of individuals who are, for all practical purposes, permanently on welfare, but also the students in our schools and colleges, and it is systematically enlarged by the addition of various allegedly oppressed minorities that are forever being discovered, sensitized, mobilized, "liberated" and brought in line to receive the services and ritual ministrations of the verbalist elite.

Are there political implications in all this? You'd better believe it. The producers of America — the businessmen, workers and farmers — have a common economic interest in limiting the growth of this rapacious new non-producing class. Their first target, unquestionably, will be the permanent denizens of the nation's welfare rolls, and the bureaucracy that coddles them, the second, very likely will be the costly swarm of leftist teachers and semi-permanent students in our educational institutions. After that it will be the turn of the other non-producers who have recently learned how to live, as of right, off the generosity of working Americans. A collision is inevitable — it is in fact long overdue, and it is going to give rise to some spectacular political realignments.

Stay out of trees -- that's a bear fact

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Lynn Rogers, a University of Minnesota graduate student in ecology who has earned a reputation as "The Bearman," the foremost authority on the Minnesota black bear, says "The only time I've known a female black bear to hurt someone was when the person tried to run away or climb a tree."

"If you see a bear and you decide you don't want it around, just hold up your arms to make yourself big and say something. She'll just run away."

EDUCATION IN U.S.
Queen's English
Stirs Up Readers

By MAX RAFFERTY
(Rarely do I run all letters from a single state. My Maryland readers seem so concerned over dictionary and English usage, however, that I'm making an exception today.)

Q — "A reader recently complained about the accent marks being placed before rather than after the syllables in the newest Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, copyrighted 1973. I, too, was distressed by this, but in my copy of Webster copyrighted 1966, I found the pronunciation symbols even more distressing."

"For instance, an upside-down 'e' is pronounced like 'a' in 'banana'; the same upside-down 'e' with an accent mark at either the upper right or lower right is pronounced like 'u' in 'humdrum,' plus a lot more of such nonsense."

"After learning phonetics in school and finding that almost all of the dictionaries, no matter which company printed them, used the same phonetic symbols we learned in school, it is most disconcerting to come upon this gobbledygook. Fortunately I held on to my old dictionary, and when I want to know how to pronounce a word I look it up in the old one. I do not intend to learn new phonetics at my age."

"I am disappointed in the publishers of Webster. I always felt they were the best on the market and can only feel sorry for them to have been taken in by such foolishness."

"How do you feel about the phonetic symbols as described above?" — Mrs. P.A.M., Baltimore, Md.

A — Obviously, as a lifelong schoolteacher, I object strenuously to anybody — publisher or not — negating unilaterally the results of my teaching. It's like some dummy reversing the meaning of the arithmetical symbols after I'd invested a good part of my life teaching kids the difference between "plus" and "minus" signs.

Q — "Seems as though scandals may be afoot in all walks of life. You may have guessed correctly how the changing of the placement of the accent occurred. However, look to American Book Co. rather than Webster for the egghead."

A — No!

"But cheer up! Would you believe I recently heard a 'new' reading method on TV? It called to do with something called 'phonetics'!" — T.M., Glen Burnie, Md.

Old flame still burns after 42 years

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am still in love with the man I was in love with 42 years ago, when I was 16.

We both married different people. I had a very unhappy life being married to the wrong man for 41 years. Two months ago, my husband died. That's when I started to think about Benny again. I finally located him through his relatives, and I called him up. (He lives 600 miles from here.) When I told him who I was he nearly dropped dead. He couldn't talk much because his wife was there, so we made arrangements for him to call me from work. Now he calls me almost every day. We talked about old times and all the fun we used to have, and said he never stopped loving me.

His problem is his wife. They have been married for 40 years, and he doesn't know how to tell her that he doesn't love her, and he wants to be free to marry me. He said she is a sickly woman, she can't work, and he hates to hurt her. Can you help us?

STILL IN LOVE

DEAR STILL: I know of no way for a man to tell his wife of 40 years that he wants to be free to marry his childhood sweetheart.

I think that you and Benny are trying to relive the past. It can't be done. Besides, Benny is very much married, and therefore unavailable. So do Benny, his family, and yourself a big favor, and get out of his life. You can't build happiness on the broken hearts of others.

DEAR ABBY: I have a 22-year-old daughter who is living with her boyfriend in a nearby town.

My friends and relatives don't know this and they are constantly asking me where she is. I get upset and start to cry and don't know what to say.

I raised this girl the best I could and I can't accept the fact that she turned out this way. How can I learn to live with this?

A MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You can tell yourself that a 22-year-old daughter is responsible for her own lifestyle. If you raised her "the best you could," you needn't be ashamed. It's not necessary to say that she is living with her boyfriend. You can say that she is no longer living at home. It's true.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has always been a heavy smoker. (Four packs a day for the last 30 years.) Al had a heart attack last year, and the doctor gave him some orders. Quit smoking (which he did, believe it or not) and avoid all excitement. (He was more specific; absolutely no fooling around with young girls unless he wanted to die in bed.)

Now Al tells me he's nervous and restless. He says he has to lead a more "normal" life and can't give up everything he enjoys. He's asked me if I would rather have him go back to smoking again, or fooling around with young girls. Isn't that a choice for you?

How should I answer him? With all his faults, I love him and don't want to be a widow. But which is worse, lung cancer or a heart attack?

AL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It's a draw. But with a choice like that you'd probably worry less if you saw Al smoking. (P.S. Your Al certainly is a shrewd trader.)

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

House Approves Tax Rebates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the Senate acts within the next few weeks, rebate checks of $100 to $200 could be on their way to 80 million taxpayers early this summer.

The House voted Thursday night to give Americans $21.3 billion in tax cuts and rebates, but to increase oil company taxes $2.5 billion by abruptly eliminating the most controversial of all tax breaks, the oil depletion allowance.

It's now up to the Senate — and it might not be that simple. A fight, and probably a filibuster, is expected in the Senate over the House's 248 to 163 vote to eliminate the 22 per cent depletion allowance for oil and gas.

However, the Senate is likely to add even more individual cuts especially for middle income taxpayers.

The House cut in $5.3 billion greater than President Ford's proposed $16 billion recession-fighting tax bill, but Ford has indicated he probably would accept it in its present form.

Unlike Ford's proposal, which contained only rebates of 1974 taxes, the House bill grants both rebates and 1975 tax cuts. There was almost no disagreement on business tax cuts which amounted to $5.1 billion of the House bill.

The House bill contains rebates of 10 per cent of 1974 taxes (those due by April 15) to a maximum of $200, plus lower withholding rates in the last half of the year, brought about by an increase in the standard deduction.

All taxpayers would receive refunds, but once a family's income passed $20,000, the size would begin to shrink until those making more than $30,000 would receive only $100.

For lower income taxpayers a minimum rebate would be established: either $100 or the full tax paid if that was less than $100. The working poor who pay little or no tax would get direct payments of up to $200 in what amounts to a form of negative income tax.

More than half the tax breaks would go to the 45 million taxpayers making less than $10,000 per year. The average tax cut — including rebates — for those in the $3,000 to $5,000 income range would be $305, in the $5,000-$10,000 range it would be $222.50, in the $10,000-$20,000 range it would be $212, and in the $20,000-$30,000 range it would be $174. Individuals would gain more or less depending on individual circumstances.

A beaming Rep. William Green, D-Pa., who led the anti-depletion fight, said Americans recognized depletion was "an unconscionable loophole for an industry whose profits already are outrageous."

Many congressmen, especially those from oil states, said eliminating the depletion would increase the price of gasoline by 10 cents to 20 cents per gallon and that repeal would play into the hands of the big oil companies by making the oil business less attractive to the independent wildcatter.

The successful Green amendment would end the depletion allowance retroactive to Jan. 1, except for gas under long-term contract, which would be exempt until the contract expired or until it was renegotiated.

The depletion allowance permits oil and gas companies to deduct for tax purposes 22 per cent of the income from their oil and gas wells up to a maximum of half their taxable income.

Blaze Burns Telephone Building

NEW YORK (UPI) — A suburban fire in a telephone building burned for a second straight day today. The blaze knocked out phones in a large section of Manhattan and injured more than 170 persons Thursday. Other calamities, all unrelated, struck on the same day.

Hardhat construction workers protesting layoffs blocked traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge and delayed commuters for up to two hours. Thousands more placard-carrying hardhats converged on City Hall and Foley Square, forming human chains to block traffic, waving American flags and yelling, "We want jobs!" A helicopter crashed on a landing pad near the East River a few blocks north of the demonstration, injuring two persons.

And in the crowded New York harbor, a 630-foot Panamanian tanker carrying 190,000 barrels of oil ran aground.

The Coast Guard was able to free the tanker before any oil spilled, the helicopter pilot was hospitalized, and the demonstrators eventually went home.

But the telephone company said it did not know when the 170,000 phones silenced by the fire would be working again. One official spoke in terms of weeks.

Firemen declared the blaze, which burned out a key switching center, "under control" about supertime Thursday. But it continued to smolder, and fire fighters stayed overnight to make sure it would not flare up again.

Telephone Company spokesman Don Mahoney called the fire "the worst disaster in service in New York Telephone history."

About 150 firemen and 20 civilians were treated at hospitals for smoke inhalation or minor injuries, and an undetermined number of other victims were treated at the scene.

Acrid smoke billowed from the switching center and spread into surrounding streets, where pedestrians held handkerchiefs over their faces. A nearby high school, filled with smoke, released its students and closed for the day.

Firemen, dripping with sweat from the 125-degree temperatures inside the building, emerged frequently to refill oxygen bottles for the masks they wore to avoid breathing toxic fumes.

"It's a very difficult fire to fight," said fireman John Joyce. "It's very, very hot. You go in for five minutes and your ears start to burn, and then you know it's time to get out."

REMODELING CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, V.I. (UPI) — The 30-room Anchor Inn, formerly the Old Quarter hotel, has reopened after a three-month remodeling. The new owner of the harbor-front inn, Lon B. Southerland Jr., said 21 more rooms are planned for early 1978.

Phthians Attend Lodge Meeting With Amarillo

Roy E. Avery, administrator of Texas Pythian Children Home, Weatherford, was guest speaker at a meeting Thursday evening at the Amarillo Knights of Pythian's Lodge Hall.

Avery outlined plans of the Children Home to build four cottages — type homes on the present grounds. Each new house will hold eight children plus two house parents. The present dormitories will be remodeled.

The home hopes to increase the cattle herd, the dairy herd, horses and hogs and to improve the orchard.

James D. Maness, director of childcare, was also present from the Children Home and spoke on the care and education of the Pythian children.

Earl Green served as master of ceremony, with Ed Baum, chancellor commander, welcoming members and guests.

A.B. Altman, Jr., Pampa, chairman of region one Pythian Youth program, invited members of Amarillo Lodge to enter students in this year's programs. Ray Barnard, Pampa, presented Avery a large flag to be used at the Home. The flag was given to the home in memory of Virgil Fugate, by his brother, G.R. Fugate, Pampa Lodge No. 480.

Other members present from Pampa were Knight C.M. "Peg" Whittle, and Knight and Mrs. Tony L. Smith.

Members of Amarillo Temple furnished refreshments for the group.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Towering a majestic 36 feet above the tail of General Grant's horse, the smog-capped peak now known as Capitol Hill is spacious enough to have once accommodated a suburb of Algonquin Indians.

But Congress has outgrown it. Sometime soon, if all goes as expected, the House of Representatives will take over a five-story building a full quarter-mile westward from the foot of the precipice.

Then, after $17 million has been spent on remodeling work, the structure will provide office space for some of the 20,000 congressional employees now crowded upon the summit.

Why does Congress, with a fixed membership of 100 senators and 435 representatives, continue to grow by leaps and bounds, committees, boards and commissions?

There are two answers to that question:

One reason congressmen are hiring more aides and assistants, clerks and flak-catchers, is because they have such a heavy recess load.

To the confused layman or journalist, a congressional recess, such as the week-long Lincoln's Birthday observance this month, might have the earmarks of an occasion for ease-taking by the lawgivers. But no.

Ever since their return, they have been cranking out press releases attesting to the rigors of the recess. By these accounts, it was an exhausting period of consultation, commingling and sojourning with constituents.

"I believe this recess was necessary as a vital link in our democratic process," one congressman wrote.

Such strenuous activities obviously generate a tremendous amount of staff work. And with eight more recesses still to come this year, that extra office space won't be available a minute too soon.

Another reason for congressional expansion is the vastly increased responsibility the lawgivers are shouldering during the economy-energy emergency.

A few years ago, when senators and representatives took a more modest view of their bounden duties and obligations, Congress probably wouldn't have formulated more than 25 or 30 comprehensive economy-energy programs.

Now, of course, the view of the average member is of national if not global dimensions, with the result that Congress has come up with roughly 500 comprehensive economy-energy packages.

Needless to say, the amount of staff work entailed in formulating this massive response to the economy-energy emergency is immense.

Between recessing and formulating comprehensive programs, the congressional overflow could soon reach the top of the Washington Monument.

We may eventually see the day when Congress has to move Capitol Hill to Mt. Shasta.

SWCD Group Attends Meet

The directors of the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District attended the Panhandle Association of Conservation Districts meeting in Tulsa Wednesday.

Keynote speaker was Charles Wood, Lubbock, Area I director. Wood led the discussion of land use planning legislation and other pertinent legislation pertaining to soil and water conservation.

Don Roder, Follett, was elected president during the business session. Other officers chosen for one year terms were James Bible, Wayside, vice-president; and Frank Buzzard, Spearman, secretary.

A tour of the newly constructed MacKenzie Dam culminated the day of activity for the group.

The Pampa delegation included Curtis Schaffer, Ralph McLaughlin, Tony Smitherman, Robert Sailor and Milton Carpenter, directors; and Perry Gruhkey, conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service in Pampa.

Four Federal Prisoners Escape, Shoot Trooper

CLARENDON, Ark. (UPI) — Four federal prisoners escaped from a county jail Thursday and one of them shot and killed a state trooper attempting to apprehend him. Three of the four, including the one who allegedly killed the policeman, were recaptured.

Thirty additional state troopers were called into Monroe County Thursday night to help in the search for the fourth fugitive, identified as Philip Wayne Caudle, 21, of Mayflower, Ark.

Trooper William Ron Brooks III, 28, of Monroe, Ark., was shot to death while attempting to capture two of the escapees. Authorities said one of the escapees will be charged in connection with Brooks' death.

Police said Caudle, who was being held for theft from an interstate shipment, was armed with a .38-caliber pistol and a 30-30 rifle. He was described as 6-1, 160 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a seven-day growth of beard.

Captured earlier were Carl Eugene Webster, who was being held on charges of bank robbery and escaping from federal custody, and Edward Butler and Larry Ray Hutcherson, both being held on auto theft charges.

A spokesman for the Arkansas State Police said Brooks, who was commissioned a state trooper in 1970, arrived at Clarendon shortly after the four federal prisoners had taken a 16-year-old trusty captive and forced their way out of the jail. The trusty told Brooks of the escape and he began running through the city on foot looking for the four.

The spokesman said Brooks saw Butler and Hutcherson and fired a warning shot. The two men stopped and the trooper ordered them to lie face down on the ground. He walked up, handcuffed the two together and kicked two guns away from them.

The spokesman said when Butler and Hutcherson stood up, one of them pulled a shotgun, concealed gun and shot Brooks three times before he could fire a shot. He said it had not been determined which of the two escapees shot Brooks. Witnesses who observed the shooting notified deputies at the Monroe County sheriff's office.

Biologists Adopt New Guidelines

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. (UPI) — Molecular biologists from 16 countries have adopted strict guidelines for preventing dangerous man-made "bugs" from escaping research labs.

The agreement, in effect, lifts a worldwide voluntary suspension of certain experiments where cultured organisms might enter the natural environment and infect humans.

Genetic scientists spent four 13-hour days on the 2,500-word draft, which said research should resume in certain banned areas, but that numerous safety precautions must be observed.

Those attending the conference at the Asilomar grounds south of San Francisco admitted there was no effective way to enforce the policy worldwide.

"In my country many people will not obey these regulations in every respect," said Toshihiko Arai, of Keio University, Tokyo. "It depends on the experiment."

Most scientists last summer voluntarily abandoned experiments that might have resulted in the escape of bacteria with transplanted cancer genes and of bacteria with genes resistant to commonly used antibiotics.

The fear was that these organisms might escape the laboratory and infect humans and plants with no natural resistance to them.

Scientists in the past five years have learned how to use enzymes to cut and rejoin DNA molecules—which contain the genetic codes for all life forms.

The ability to transplant or change the structure of such genes offers possible solutions to every human ailment, plus enlarged food production. In the near future, scientists hope to produce "factories" for insulin, antibiotics and protein.

The policy adopted Thursday, which is subject to later revision, would ban any gene transplant involving certain fatal viruses until technology is improved. With other experiments, the draft specified numerous safety precautions.

Such voluntary restrictions have little precedent among scientists, who are dedicated to free inquiry and highly competitive with each other.

A few researchers present expressed dissatisfaction with portions of the statement and at one point Nobel Laureate Joshua Lederberg complained that "very complex issues are being railroaded."

A. A. Bayev of the Soviet Union said the draft was a recommendation that will be useful in discussions in his country.

Government attorneys played a tape recording during the bribery-extortion trial of former Gov. David Hall Thursday purporting to be the sound of incriminating notes being flushed down the toilet in the governor's suite.

Secretary of State John Rogers testified Thursday Hall wrote the notes in the governor's office, where Rogers had gone with a tape recorder loaned to him by the FBI to seek evidence of an alleged $25,000 bribe he said Hall offered him last December. Rogers, acting as an undercover agent for the FBI, said the notes read "Office bugged for 10 days. . . Wait eight months. . . and 'Trust me.'"

Rogers said the office recording was taken Jan. 9, just four days before Hall's term as governor ended.

"He picked up a lighter, went to the bathroom, lit the notes and let them burn down as small as he could hold them," Rogers said. "Then he threw them down the toilet stool and flushed the stool."

Dallas financier W.W. "Doc" Taylor is a co-defendant in the trial. Taylor is accused of offering a $50,000 bribe to be split between Hall and Rogers in return for investment of $10 million in Taylor's firm.

U.S. Attorney Bill Burkett said several hours of additional recordings would be played today in the case. He said one of them would be between Rogers and R. Kevin Mooney of Fort Worth, an agent for Taylor.

Rogers is the government's key witness in the trial. Rogers said Hall told him in December, "There's $25,000 in it for you and $25,000 for me."

In the recording played for the jury Thursday, there are sounds like a pen scratching on paper, then later the sound of a flushing toilet.

Rogers failed in this and several other recordings, however, to get the governor to mention a bribe on tape. Other testimony showed Hall had been tipped Dec. 31 that Rogers was trying to trap him.

In the Jan. 9 recording, Hall refused to talk about the $10 million and the alleged payoff other than to say it was a good investment for the state.

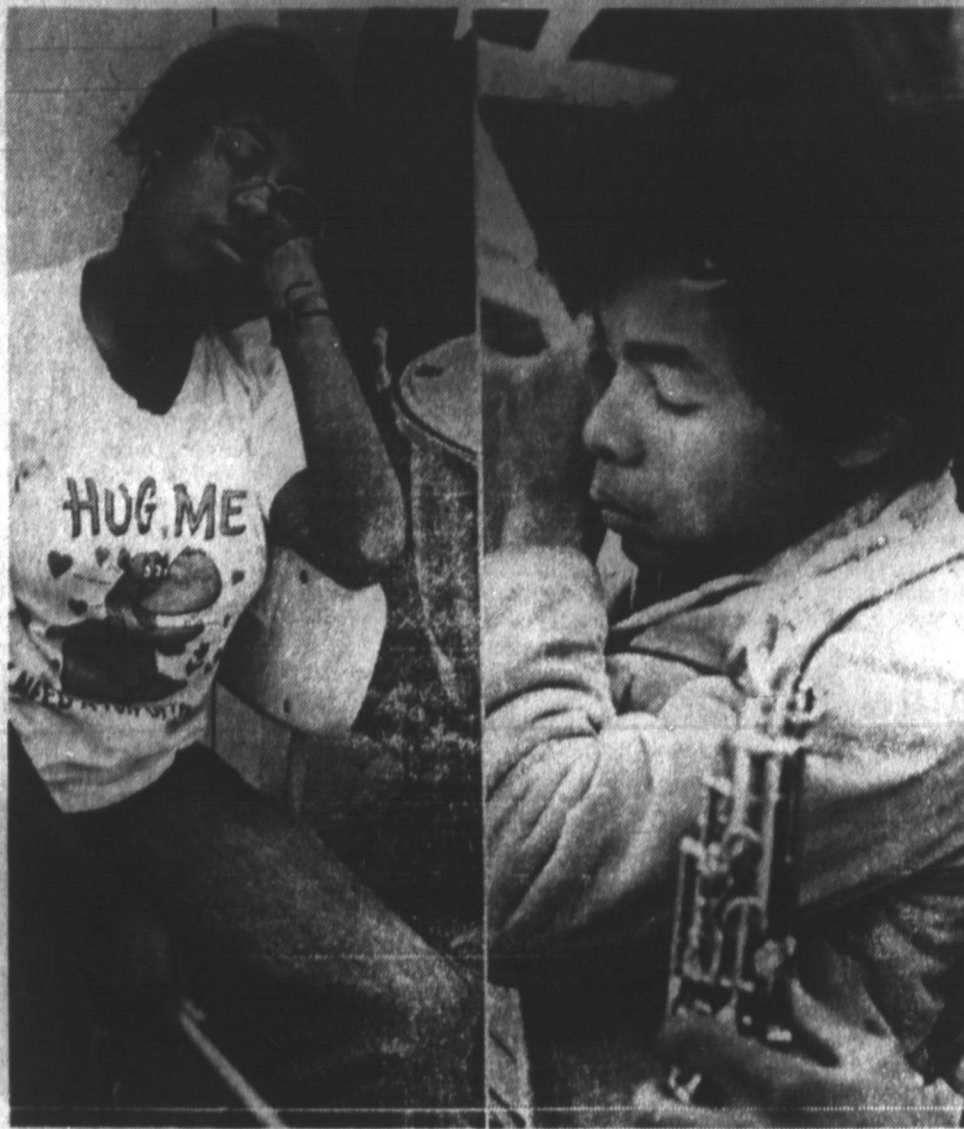

Rogers, sensing that Hall knew they were being recorded, said he proposed he and the governor go to a steam bath and take off their clothes, or go to Rogers' father's house and strip to prove they weren't being recorded, but Hall refused.

Rogers expressed fear he wouldn't be paid but he said Hall avoided replying except for writing the notes.

During the taped Jan. 9 conversation, Hall and Rogers discussed an investigation by a federal grand jury, which was to indict Hall seven days later.

Hall told Rogers a "big surprise" is coming from the jury.

"They do not have evidence of anything wrong, and that's where they're screwed," Hall said.

BY FIRING SQUAD Leftists Threaten To Kill US Agent

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A leftist guerrilla group threatened to kill a kidnaped U.S. official tonight if the Argentine government fails to prove four missing commandos are alive.

The Montoneros guerrillas said John Egan, the 62-year-old U.S. consular agent in Cordoba, "has been sentenced to death by firing squad."

The guerrilla group said Egan — "a direct representative of Yankee interests" — would be killed unless the government shows by 7 p.m. that the four missing guerrillas are "alive and well."

The Montoneros, in a communique issued Thursday, said the "sentence will be lifted and he will be released" if the government meets the demands.

Egan, a former employee of Kaiser Corp. for more than 30 years, has served as consular agent since March, 1973, in Cordoba, 427 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

The Montoneros demanded the government put the four missing guerrillas on nationwide television and radio to prove their well-being.

Egan, a native of Pennsylvania, was dragged from his suburban Cordoba home Wednesday night by four gunmen, police sources said.

Sources close to the investigation said one of the kidnapers, posing as an agriculture expert planning to travel to the United States, visited his home a week ago.

The man led the heavily armed commandos into the house, seized Egan and tried to drug his wife with an ether soaked rag, the sources said.

The Montoneros' communique said the abduction was carried out 48 hours later than planned because two members of the attack squad were shot to death Monday in a gunbattle with police.

The communique demanded the whereabouts of Montoneros guerrillas Gustavo Stentem, Luis Silva, Chango Diaz and Pedro Medina. It said all four were arrested by authorities during recent stepped-up anti-guerrilla activity.

The American Embassy in Buenos Aires said there was "no direct communication from the Montoneros," and expressed concern for Egan's health.

"He suffers from a bad heart condition," one embassy source said.

St. Paul Church Plans Missionary Conference

The St. Paul United Methodist Missionary Conference is scheduled to begin March 14, according to the pastor, Rev. Charles Graff.

Three outstanding speakers will lead discussions in the course of the three-day event which is designed to interest adults, children and young people.

The conference will call attention to the church's goal of $4,000 to be used in the mission field in 1975.

The "Faith Promise" offerings will be used in the field, while the conference will serve as an education measure for the people.

Rev. Harold Spann, vice-president of Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.; Miss Ellen Pfirman, missionary to Burundi, Africa and Rev. Fred W. Yazzie, pastor of Bisti United Methodist Church and director of the Community Center of the Bisti Methodist Mission in New Mexico will be speakers for the occasion.

Rev. Spann is a noted author and director of "Good News" and serves on the board of World Gospel Mission. Articles authored by the leader have appeared in numerous publications, and he has been instrumental in promoting the mission field of the Methodist faith.

Miss Pfirman serves with the World Gospel Mission, an interdenominational missionary organization with 250 missionaries in 15 areas around the world.

She has completed two tours in the mission field of Africa and plans to return following her tour.

She has been instrumental in leading Vacation Bible Schools and teaching women in refugee camps.

Rev. Yazzie, a full-blood Navajo Indian, was born on the reservation in Shiprock, N.M. He graduated from the Methodist Mission in Farmington, N.M., and was converted and called to the ministry while a sophomore at Methodist High. He was ordained an elder in 1968 and was the first Navajo ordained a minister of the Methodist Church.

Hightower Calls On Consumers To Write FPC

U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon, 13th Congressional District congressman, today called on farmers and consumers to urge the Federal Power Commission to modify its Dec. 13 decision in the El Paso Natural Gas Co. plan prior to losing jurisdiction in the courts.

Final pleadings must be made by March 19, Hightower stated in a telegram to The Pampa News.

The decision by the FPC reclassified natural gas used for irrigation from commercial priority two to industrial priority 3.

If allowed to stand, Hightower said, a strong possibility exists that irrigation farmers would find themselves without natural gas fuel.

Said Hightower: "I, along with many colleagues, have expressed strong opposition by telegram and letter to FPC commissioners, but all such communications go into the executive file."

"I suggest one effective avenue left is a strong outcry from people directly affected, farmers and consumers."

"If enough letters are directed to members of the FPC, the message might penetrate."

Hightower urged that letters be sent to the following members of the Federal Power Commission:

John N. Nassikas, chairman; Albert B. Brooke Jr., Rush Moody Jr., William L. Springer, and Don S. Smith.

It's Amarillo Confab Time!

VICTORIA, Tex. (UPI) — Not only will there be a Miss Vacant Lot of the World Contest, there will also be championship belching, spitting and beer can smashing in an expanded Armadillo Confab and exposition this year.

Officials of the annual event Thursday said they have moved the annual madness out of downtown Victoria, because of traffic congestion, to Riverside Park, giving the confab more room for more events during the scheduled May 23-25 dates.

Each year the Miss Vacant Lot of the World and Surrounding Counties Extravaganza gathers most of the publicity, but new contests and the best of the old will provide some competition this year.

Contests will include the Victoria County Championship Belching Contest and the World Championship Tuba and Raspberry Blowoff, the Beer Can Smash, the Greatest All-around Person in the World Contest, the World Championship Spitting Contest with two divisions (against the wind and with the wind), the Bull Durham Roll-off, the World Championship Armadillo Rooting and Burrowing Contest and the Largest Armadillo of the World Contest.

AMBASSADOR NEW YORK (UPI) — New York City's 1975 Summer Festival ambassador, 23-year-old Christine Busini, is making a 13,000-mile tour of South and Central America to promote tourism to her hometown. The city played host to more than 16 million visitors last year.

FOR POLITICAL AIMS

Presidents Made FBI Requests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon made requests for FBI files — including some on opposing members of Congress — which might have been used politically, sources said today.

These were some of the "abuses" cited by Attorney General Edward H. Levi in his testimony Thursday to a House judiciary subcommittee.

The sources would not allow themselves to be identified, or even if they were connected with government. More than one told UPI that Kennedy, Nixon and Johnson had sought FBI checks on members of Congress who criticized or opposed their policies.

They said the request was frequently expressed in terms of a security concern though it could be suspected of having political motivation. They did not know what information was obtained or if it was used.

"Of all the presidents, Johnson was clearly the worst in regard to using the bureau," one source said and the second shared that view. "Before I go to bed, I read my FBI's." Johnson used to brag to reporters — always off the record.

Johnson asked for FBI checks on two gatherings of his own party, the Democratic National Convention in 1964 in Atlantic City and in 1968 in Chicago, they said. Johnson was interested in activities of his delegates in 1964 although he was assured of getting the nomination and the only question was who could get adequate support for vice president.

Although the sources considered the 1964 checks were clearly political, one took a different view of the 1968 requests, at a convention where there were street demonstrations and high tension. He said it was a "close call" to put a political label on the 1968 requests and he was inclined to declare them legitimate.

Levi said one of the abuses was "a check of FBI files on the staff of a campaign opponent." After the hearing, Deputy Attorney General Laurence H. Silberman told reporters that Johnson, through his press secretary, Bill Moyers, tried to find out information about the campaign of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz.

The sources explained Silberman's reference. Near election day, a Johnson aide, Walter Jenkins, was arrested on a morals charge and the president feared Goldwater would make it a campaign issue.

Johnson, they added, tried to get the FBI to deflect criminal investigations from former Senate Democratic secretary Bobby Baker, convicted in 1967 of larceny, conspiracy and income tax evasion and sentenced to prison.

In virtually all of the incidents, UPI's sources said they could not see where the requested FBI activity got the desired results.

Following Levi's testimony before the Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, FBI director Clarence M. Kelley testified he has received no political interference from the White House in any form since he took office.

Following the hearing Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., chairman of the Senate judiciary subcommittee on constitutional rights disclosed another file was kept in the Justice Department, one outside the FBI. Tunney announced he had received assurance from Levi that this file has been closed so it cannot be further used.

Five State Shorthorn Show Date Announced

The annual Five State Shorthorn Association show and sale will be held on March 8 at the Texas County Fair Grounds in Guymon, Okla. The show of sale cattle will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the sale following at 12:30 p.m.

Many of the females are cow-cal pairs with big ready-to-wean heifer calves at side which would make outstanding junior show prospects. There will also be a few steers for show purposes.

There will be a Dutch Treat banquet on the night of March 7 at the Hotel Dale in Guymon beginning at 7 p.m. for all interested persons.

The sale is being managed by the Five State Association with Dick Kane of Wisner, Neb. as the auctioneer.

The Five State Lasso Association will serve lunch sale day at the fair grounds.

Cub Returned

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — A six-week-old bear cub taken from the Little Rock Zoo was turned in to police officers Thursday night by a teen-ager who said he bought the animal for $15.

Jerome Huckaby, 17, of Beebe, told officers a man sold him the bear Wednesday for $15. He said the man told him he found the cub wandering in a wooded area.

The cub was reported missing Wednesday morning by the Little Rock Zoo. Huckaby told officers he heard news reports about the missing bear and decided to turn it in to authorities.

Huckaby is a construction worker at the University of Arkansas Medical Center.

4TH COW 'Copter Sighted Near Mutilation

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A rancher says an aircraft, which he describes as a "newer style helicopter," apparently set down in a grassy area shortly before the discovery of South Texas' most recently mutilated cow.

Stanley Jasik, who ranches near Leming, Tex., said he spotted the silver-colored craft Tuesday two miles from the San Antonio River.

Cletus Edwards, a San Antonio oil distributor who owns a ranch in south Bexar County, found one of his cows at the same site the next day.

The cow's tongue, udder and sex organs were missing — the exact condition of four other cows found in the past two weeks in three other South Texas counties. Veterinarians examined in detail two of the cows and reported the animals' blood had been drained.

The stomach lining was not ruptured under where the udder was, Edwards said. They had to peel it off. It wasn't a coyote. They leave torn skin. This was a clean, neat cut.

A tiny spot of blood over the cow's left eye appeared "like an ice pick puncture," Edwards said, but the hole was too small for a bullet wound. He said it would be impossible for predators to have cut the tongue as far back in the mouth as it was.

Jasik said he spotted the dead cow Tuesday not long after the aircraft circled and sped off from a patch of coastal grass, but did not think much about it until Edwards told him the animal was mutilated.

He went down in the blackjacket part where the pastures are and stayed down awhile," Jasik said. "Then he came back up and then I think after he noticed that I was out there in the field close to where the cow was, he sort of made a circle and he just got up and took off."

Jasik described the silver craft as a "new style helicopter, you know, the one that makes that screaming sound. They're a lot faster than the regular old helicopter."

The animal mutilations have occurred during the last month from Minnesota to Texas. Some persons have speculated a group of devil worshippers are taking the organs for use in their satanist ceremonies.

Terry Mitchell, a UFO buff who lectures at the University of Minnesota, has advanced the theory that extraterrestrial beings are doing post-mortem on the animals.

Asked about Mitchell's theory on UFO's, Jasik said "it's either something like that or a helo, because it doesn't leave any tracks or signs behind it. It was two or three miles to the road. They have to come in from the air. I'm thinking it's either a chopper or some kind of space outfit or something I don't know."

Jasik said the closest he got to the craft was one quarter of a mile.

The rancher said he did not understand why anybody on earth would want cow tongues, udders and reproductive tracts.

"That sure is very strange and very odd for them to take that kind of stuff. That's why I don't think anybody from this earth would be stupid enough to do something like that, to go through all that trouble and if he'd get caught, he'd be in a hell of a shape in my notion."

Consumer Facts On Celery

COLLEGE STATION — Few foods add so much to so many different dishes as celery does. Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist, said this week.

"It combines especially well in a salad with other vegetables or fruits. Celery sharpens the flavor of vegetable soup — and when prepared with milk, it makes a hearty cream soup," the specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said.

Two main varieties of celery are commonly found on the market. Pascal varieties are green and may have coarse stalks. These are gaining popularity because of the distinct flavor and almost complete absence of "strings," Mrs. Clyatt explained.

Yellow, or golden, varieties

— sometimes called Golden Heart — are bleached white.

"Top quality celery has thick, solid stalks that are brittle enough to snap easily. Leaves are fresh and green," she said.

Celery is highly perishable and needs a cool, moist temperature to keep its crispness. One average celery stalk weighs about one and a half pounds and can be diced up to make about one quart of celery cubes, according to this specialist.

Books

By JOAN HANAUER
United Press International
9Maying at Potsdam, 7by Charles L. Mee Jr. (Evans, $10.95)

This is the story of how the leaders of the victorious nations in World War II met in the German town of Potsdam and "rescued" discord from the threatened outbreak of peace," as the author writes in the prologue.

Stalin, Truman and Churchill (replaced in mid-meeting by Clement Attlee) bickered and argued trying to wrest the best deal for their individual countries. Never was any pretense made of mapping an overall peace plan based on fairness and aimed at easing the national tensions that lead to war.

The author, editor of Horizons magazine, masterfully exposes the bumbling and selfishness of the leaders as they maneuver for advantage. Quoting liberally from the text of the meetings, he also draws on diaries and other documents and observations made by participants in the meetings. The result is a stark, exciting narrative of two weeks that shaped, or misshaped, the postwar world.

There is much that is monumental in this book. The western world is literally being hacked up and doled out among the Big Three leaders. Germany is divided; size and content of reparations are fought over; Truman and Churchill dicker over whether to tell Stalin about the successful testing of the atomic bomb. The drama of those two weeks needs no heightening. The facts themselves serve.

The insights into the attitudes of the Big Three are endlessly fascinating. Mee writes that Churchill came ill prepared yet assaulted the initial negotiations with rambling, bombastic discourses. One of his aides worried that the British Prime Minister was giving in too readily to Stalin.

Truman, thrust into the U.S. presidency only a few months before, surprises many by his directness and sensible toughness. Stalin we learn less about, but his weak attempts at humor tell something about him. Attlee, arriving late, never quite manages to get into the conversation.

This is a book that should not be missed, about a drama with all the elements of high tragedy that dwindles to mere pathos at the end.

Samuel Johnson, by John Wain. (Viking, $12.50) Johnson, that towering literary figure of the 18th century, chiefly has been known for his compilation of a dictionary and as the originator of bon mots recorded by Boswell. This biography successfully attempts to explain the man in more human terms. We meet Johnson's acquaintances, not all as stodgy as might be expected. We learn he liked a night on the town and could laugh at himself. Here is a commendable biography of a giant of the past.

First Presbyterian Church Announces New Pastorship

The Reverend Norman D. Dow, Jr. will take up the pastorship of the First Presbyterian Church Sunday, March 2. The pulpit was vacated last March when the Reverend Martin Hager moved to the St. Paul Presbyterian Church in Houston. During the interim Dr. Bobby L. Stalcup has been serving as Stated Supply Minister, having come to Pampa from Portales, N.M. Dr. Stalcup, also a member of the Palo Duro Union Presbytery, will be relocating shortly into another pastorate as soon as his plans become finalized.

Presbyterian Church Paris, Ill. since 1969. Concurrent with his pastorate he also served on the staff of St. Mary-of-the-Woods College as librarian and Professor of Bibliography. Reverend Dow is a native Texan, raised in San Antonio, and attended Texas University where he graduated in 1948. He then entered Austin Theological Seminary, acquiring his B.D. Degree in 1950. After holding a pastorate in South Texas he returned to Austin Seminary to serve on the staff for some 12 years, during which time he also obtained graduate degrees in Greek, Master of Theology and Library Science. Being a Bible scholar and student of religion literature he later pursued these interests with two years study at St. Andrews, Scotland. His wife, Veola, an active teammate in the ministry, also brings the attributes of a trained musician in voice and organ.

The Dows will reside in the Manse at 515 N. Gray, hoping to complete their move by March 10.

A farewell and appreciation dinner was held Wednesday evening for Reverend Stalcup and his family; their many friends enjoying this fellowship and wishing them God's speed in their future post.

Short Pastorages Studied In United Methodist Circle

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN, Ph.D.
Copley News Service

The United Methodists are appointed by their bishop to their parishes for one year at a time. The United Presbyterians are voted into their appointments by their congregations for life. In between these two extremes are all the other variations of the manner whereby a pastor is called to the service of his particular church.

The pattern for the less effective minister most frequently included short pastorates. Pastors who were rated more effective had served in their parish a minimum of four years or longer. It was found that a very long pastorate of 12 or more years apparently did not affect negatively the rating of efficiency, but rather increased the effectiveness of ministry.

turnover in membership each year, the advantages of the stabilizing influence of the pastor with long term ministry is a great deal higher.

Many of the men who have succeeded to denominational leadership have not been in a local parish for a considerable length of time and still retain the image which was much more prevalent during the times when the communities were more stable.

The question facing the various forms of church government is that of pastors tending to stay too short a time in one parish before accepting another charge. Most often this is a standard means of promotion, the recognition of work well done. But does it serve the church best to do it this way? It is also the way of a man who is incapable of adjusting and giving good leadership to his church. He is moved on to some other unsuspecting congregation, and then quickly moves on again.

The exception was short term pastorates, led by young men, who saw quick membership growth. They were given a high effectiveness rating, in spite of their short tenure. In the study, it surfaced that the most ineffective ministers were those who had a succession of one or two year pastorates.

G. Bromley Oxman, when asked by his critics about his 34 years in one pulpit, said that he did not need to change pulpits because his congregation was constantly changing. He added that it is not unlike preaching to a parade. Staying in one place and letting the congregation move may become the style for the more effective ministers of the future in the Protestant denominations.

Recent research from Emory Seminary has suggested that Protestant pastors do move too often. A study was conducted to find the relationship between pastoral effectiveness and pastoral ability. Darwin Moss discovered that patterns of short pastorates, those that he defined as lasting four years or less, were more frequently characteristic of "less effective ministers."

The Office of Research of the United Presbyterian Church stated they found a negative correlation of effectiveness with the number of changes in pastoral situations among young Presbyterian ministers.

At one time, the communities which the major denominations served were stable, and for the most part, agriculturally based. The viewpoint prevailed that different men had different gifts to offer to a congregation, such as being a teacher and another being outstanding in administration, therefore, it was to the church's enrichment for a pastorate to have a steady succession of ministers.

In our present culture where one family in four moves every year, and the greatest majority of congregations find a 10 to 20 per cent turnover in membership each year, the advantages of the stabilizing influence of the pastor with long term ministry is a great deal higher.

Recent research from Emory Seminary has suggested that Protestant pastors do move too often. A study was conducted to find the relationship between pastoral effectiveness and pastoral ability. Darwin Moss discovered that patterns of short pastorates, those that he defined as lasting four years or less, were more frequently characteristic of "less effective ministers."

HAROLD THOMPSON

PASTOR KEN CARTWRIGHT

The baptism of the Holy Spirit! Faith healing! Miracles! Soaring flights of ecstatic experience! Feelings of warmth, love, and unity! What does it all mean? The Bible speaks of wonderful manifestations of God's power in the last days. Are we seeing it now? Is the current surge of interest in these things an indication that this current movement is the real thing? Does it come from God? Does it lead back to God? Is it 100 percent Biblically sound?

But now that I have your attention, my main question to you is this: Upon what do you base the validity of your Christian experience?

If ever a generation of people had reason to hope for and hasten the return of the Lord Jesus Christ — it is this generation. And Jesus warned us that prior to His second coming false prophets and even false Christs would deceive many. They would show "great signs and wonders; inasmuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." Mt. 24:24

Speaking of a great apostate religious power, Paul says Satan would work through him "with all power and signs and lying manifestations of God's power in garb, "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." 2 Tim. 3:5 Speaking of malignant deception, Paul adds "Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light." 2 Cor. 11:14 In vision John saw devils "working miracles." Rev. 18:14 If you base your religion upon great signs, wonders, angels of light, miracles, and ecstatic feeling — you might find yourself in serious trouble or eternally lost. Are you building upon the sands of subjective feeling and experience, or upon the rock of God's objective norm — the Bible? Do you test your experience by the Bible, or the Bible by your experience?

Not exorcism, miracles, wonderful works, or even prophesying is Christ's criteria for judging in the day of judgment. What will Christ say to many then? Listen to Jesus' own words: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven: (Note: many professing Christ as Lord will be lost because they left out the following) but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Mt. 7:21-23.

How will you stand at the judgment seat? Do you realize merely confessing Christ as Lord is not enough? Are you obeying the Father's will? Do you pray prayerfully, willingly, and daily come to the Bible to learn and to obey the Father's will — regardless of the price?

If your source of strength is found in complete submission and obedience to Jesus Christ and all the Bible, then you are building upon the rock and will stand the test. But if you build upon the sands of subjective experience and feeling, then your house will crumble when the floods of deception sweep over your soul. And great will be the fall of it.

Pampa, Tascosa Laying Cards On Table Tonight

"They're just a good group of kids." That's why Pampa is where it is today, according to basketball coach Robert McPherson.

Pampa and Tascosa are the only teams left in competition for the District 3-AAAA championship. One will capture the title tonight and play Lubbock-Monterey Tuesday for the bi-district championship.

"I think we can beat them," McPherson said. "We beat them once and we should beat them before." He was talking about Pampa's 60-58 loss to Tascosa in the first half of district play. Since that game, the Harvesters have won eight straight and, before that loss, had won five in a row.

Tonight's game, should Pampa win, will be the start of a long venture for the Harvesters. "If all things are equal and we play well and our game plan goes well, we have a good chance to get to the regional tournament. But we've got to beat Tascosa."

This year's team is, record-wise, McPherson's finest in his six-year tenure at Pampa. In 1970, his Harvesters went 24-7 but Palo Duro won the championship and advanced to regional. This year, Pampa is 24-4.

Tickets can be purchased at the school business office today or at the game. Prices are $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for students.

Playing in the Civic Center will not give Tascosa a home-court advantage tonight, despite what many Pampa fans have said.

Tascosa has used the facility only six times this season and has yet to play well there. The Rebels practice in their own gym, not the coliseum.

Tascosa did not choose the Civic Center as the site of the game, as was reported in the Amarillo newspaper Thursday. The site was mutually agreed upon after Tascosa turned down Pampa's request to use Sam Houston Fieldhouse in Borger, and Pampa rejected Tascosa's bid to use the West Texas State Fieldhouse in Canyon.

"I'm glad we're playing there," McPherson said Thursday. "It's up to town, it's first class."

Tascosa has played well in only one game at the Civic Center this year. The Rebels have won all six games, but five were close: Palo Duro, 71-58; Amarillo High, 60-59; Caprock, 63-59; Palo Duro, 84-49 (only big point margin); Amarillo High, 69-63, and Caprock, 72-64.

Now that the Pampa-Borger rivalry is over for this year, the fun and games must come to an end between Borger News-Herald sports editor Ron Chast and myself. At least until next season.

Which means what is about to be said isn't in jest. Chast's comments in the Wednesday News-Herald were uncalled for. The Borger scribe wrote, "Borger began to settle down and play good basketball in the second quarter, but at times it seemed the Bulldogs were playing seven men — the five who comprised the Harvester lineup and the two who were officiating the game. For the second consecutive game, Kerr was literally shoved around inside with the officials refusing to blow their whistles. The officials reportedly came from out of town, but one would have thought they had lived in Pampa all their lives."

Sturdy Wanamaker of Canyon and Phillip Peace of Dallas officiated Tuesday's game. Both were approved by Borger basketball coach Duane Hunt before the game.

Hunt in the same story was also quoted concerning the alleged poor officiating. "I thought Joe (Kerr) had a super game considering the fact that he had to carry about three players on his back most of the night."

But the Borger coach was, in the story, not as critical as Chast. In fact, Hunt talked more about Pampa's fine performance than anything else. "Pampa just has a tremendous team. They have the best talent in the district and are well-coached. I think they'll beat Tascosa in the district playoff."

The Pampa junior varsity closed out its season with a 20-4 record and won the JV district championship with a 9-1 mark. The Harvesters' only loss was to Caprock. A lot of credit must go to George Bailey, who moved up from the junior high to coach the Harvesters last season and assist McPherson.

Bailey played for Pampa from 1965-68 and was named to the Class AAAA all-state team in 1968.

Border Olympics Nod To Longhorns

LAREDO, Tex. (UPI) — The Baylor Bears, who came close to upsetting the Texas Longhorns in the Southwest Conference indoor championships earlier this season, will try again this weekend in the Southwest's first major outdoor track and field meet of the season — the 43rd Border Olympics.

"We ought to have a real good track meet," said Baylor coach Clyde Hart, who is also the honorary referee of the meet. "We will give Texas trouble, but the Longhorns are the team to beat."

The Border Olympics often serves as a preview to the Southwest Conference meet, which will be held at Lubbock in May. This year, however, the Texas Longhorns are not at their peak for the Border.

Foot problems will keep Paul Craig out of the meet and fellow distance runner Tim Patton will not run, either. Reed Fischer is questionable because of a bad knee.

Title Contest Set Today

Tascosa and Pampa, winners of the first and second half respectively, battle at 8 p.m. today in the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum for the District 3-AAAA championship.

The winner will play Lubbock-Monterey Tuesday in bi-district. Winner of that game will advance to the regional tournament next weekend at Abilene.

Lorenc scored 18 points against Caprock Tuesday to lead Tascosa to a 72-64 win. "He did a super job; he probably made only three mistakes the whole ball game," Camfield said. "Lewis Moore did a good job.

but have been reinstated and will play.

Cleveland may not start but will definitely come off the bench if he doesn't. Other starters tonight could be guard Kurt Reinhold (18.6), 6-3 center David Gilbreath (5.2), 6-2 Lewis Moore (14.1) and 5-10 Mike Lorenc (7.1).

Camfield's lineup will include 5-8 guard Byron Carter (19.0 average in district) and 6-4 sophomore Dwight Cleveland (10.0). The two were suspended from school Tuesday for fighting.

Tonight's championship game will probably draw around 6,000 fans to the Amarillo coliseum. "I think people are probably looking at it from the standpoint that the team that gets out of district will probably end up in Abilene," Rebel coach Dave Camfield said this morning. "I hope we're ready. We have to be."

Among the top players to be here include Rusty Harris of Caprock and Caprock's doubles team of Kendall Stanford and Greg Taylor. The Longhorns also have a strong girls doubles team — Yvonne Berryhill and Pam Pride.

He got 20 points and 17 rebounds.

Camfield has also been pleased with the play of Reinhold this season. "Curt Reinhold has been excellent all through the district race."

Pampa starters will be 6-6 Howie Lewis (19.2), 6-1 Billy Wilton (15.8), 6-0 Robert Young (15.7), 6-4 Nick Slaymaker (10.3) and 6-1 Richard Lane (6.3).

The Rebel coach believes fouls and rebounds, as in the previous two meetings between the schools, will again play a big part in tonight's game. "That's so true. And if one team has a bad shooting night, that will be a determining factor. But I don't look for that."

Tascosa (18-11) worked out 15 minutes longer than usual Thursday, while Pampa (24-4) held a normal workout, although shooting was emphasized.

"You could tell our kids were tense. They were thinking about the ball game. It was a normal workout. All our kids were there. We may have worked out about 15 more minutes than usual but if that's good or bad, I don't know," Camfield said.

Tickets will be available at the door tonight. Prices are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Ishimatsu Stops Ken Buchanan

TOKYO (UPI) — World Boxing Council lightweight champion Guts Ishimatsu of Japan closed challenger Ken Buchanan's previously injured left eye Thursday night with a sixth-round flurry and went on to beat the Scotsman by a unanimous decision in a 15-round title bout at the Tokyo Municipal Gymnasium.

A crowd of 9,000 watched the 25-year-old champion's third successful defense of the title won from Mexican Rodolfo Gonzalez here last April.

Buchanan, 29, WBC top-ranking lightweight contender and World Boxing Association lightweight champion from September, 1970, to June, 1972, was generally favored because of his greater experience and boxing skill. Although he carried the fight with fast left jabs, he kept missing with his straight rights.

The Scotch fighter, his eye swollen shut, admitted later in his dressing room that "I could not see with the left eye from the sixth round. Ishimatsu is a strong fighter but I thought I was the winner because I landed the cleaner punches."

Pampa Teams Dominating ToT Tourney

Pampa teams continue to do well in the annual Top O' Texas Invitational Basketball Tournament at the Pampa Youth and Community Center.

Pampa Independents, one of the favorites to capture the title, blasted Borger, 66-45, Thursday. In other games, Pampa Celanese nipped Spearman, 60-58, and Pampa's First Baptist Church beat Amarillo Downtowners, 2-0 (forfeit).

In Wednesday games, Celanese trimmed Hub Clothiers of Amarillo, 52-47. First National Bank of Pampa eliminated Hereford Armour, 59-56, and Borger's Alvin's Radiator whipped First Baptist, 68-46.

The tournament will continue Monday.

Foot Troubles Don't Stop Bob Perryton Entered At Vernon

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — After awhile, the leader board began to look like a casualty list.

Tom Shaw came in after his round with a heavily bandaged forearm. Lou Graham and Eddie Pearce said their backs were aching so bad they had to see a doctor and Doug Sanders' thumb wasn't just hurt.

And the leader in the $260,000 Jackie Gleason Invitational Golf Classic, Bob Stanton, had a foot that was so sore that between shots he had to take his shoe off.

"It's funny, when I had the shoe off, it didn't hurt at all," Stanton said.

"I didn't take it off after every shot, but when it would start hurting, I took the shoe off and walk to the next shot," Stanton said after limping to a blazing 64, just one shot off the course record set in the pro-am Wednesday by Jack Nicklaus.

Stanton's round was three shots better than eight golfers — including Graham, Pearce and Sanders — who were bunched at 67. Others in the logjam were Nicklaus, Joe Porter, Miller Barber, Joe Porter and Terry Diehl.

Shaw was in another large logjam at 68.

Stanton, summing up his round, said he was "knocking it pretty close to the hole all day and I was making putts."

Stanton, a native of Sydney, Australia, who now lives in his wife's hometown of Biloxi, Miss., has been a pro since 1965 and on the American tour since 1967, but despite some major wins in Europe and Australia, he has never won in the United States.

Of all the injuries discussed Thursday, Tom Shaw's may have been the most serious.

The Miami pro said his forearm was gashed Sunday night when he tried to break up a fight between two of his three West Highland White Terriers.

"I don't know how many stitches it was, but it was about this long," he said holding up his thumb and index finger about three inches apart.

PHS Hosting Tourney For Area Net Teams

Four area tennis teams, including Pampa, are involved in the Pampa Invitational Tennis Tournament today and Saturday at the high school courts.

Caprock, Borger and Perryton are in Pampa for the high school event.

Among the top players to be here include Rusty Harris of Caprock and Caprock's doubles team of Kendall Stanford and Greg Taylor. The Longhorns also have a strong girls doubles team — Yvonne Berryhill and Pam Pride.

Track Teams Begin Season With Practice

Competition, although on the practice level, for Pampa's track team begins Saturday at Harvester Stadium as district teams will split into two groups and hold a pair of triangular meets.

Pampa, Amarillo High and Caprock will compete in one practice meet, while Palo Duro, Borger and Tascosa will participate in another.

"We're going to be competitive," Pampa coach Scott Dunnam said. "We're going to set us a goal and try to shoot for that."

The meet will not have any preliminaries. Running and field events will start at 2 p.m.

Pampa opens its regular track season with its own Top O' Texas Invitational Track Meet March 8. Teams entered include Hereford, Plainview, Perryton, Borger, an Amarillo school (not known which one), Canyon and Dumas.

Hunter Course Registration Set This Week

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in cooperation with the National Rifle Association and the Pampa Optimist Club is offering a new "Hunter Safety Course" starting on March 13.

It was previously announced the course would start Thursday. Registration will be at the Pampa Optimist Club Building Tuesday, Thursday and March 11 between 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. Registration fee for course will be $1.00 for the approximately 12 to 14 hours of instruction. Classes will be held on Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Anyone 12 years of age or older is eligible; those between 12 and 18 years old should bring a parent with them to sign their

Spikers Fall To Tascosa

AMARILLO — Tascosa tripped Pampa, 15-3, 12-9, in girls' volleyball action Thursday night in the Rebel gymnasium.

The loss left Pampa with a 1-2 district mark. The Harvesters host Amarillo High Tuesday.

Pampa also lost the junior varsity match to Tascosa.

Hockey sticks usually are made of northern white ash or rock elm.

IN FOREIGN TRAVELING

Who, What And When To Tip

By MURRAY J. BROWN
 UPI Travel Editor

Who, what and when to tip is probably one of the most perplexing problems for Americans traveling in foreign lands.

For like death and taxes, tipping has become a fact of modern life that must be faced abroad as well as at home. And those gratuities can add up to a mighty neat sum—up to 20 per cent of the travel budget in some cases.

The word tips is said to be an acronym for the phrase: "To Insure Prompt Service" marked on bowls by waiters in 18th century London pubs.

But in today's world, tips are no longer a reward for quick, courteous or efficient services. Rather, tipping has become to be expected as part of his due by virtually everyone who performs any kind of service, from the dirty-faced shoeshine boy at the airport to the white-tie-and-tails concierge at the hotel.

The problem is that there are no fast-and-hard rules. Practices vary from continent to continent, from country to country and sometimes from country to country in the same country.

As a result, Americans unfamiliar with local currencies and customs often over tip or under tip, not only embarrassing themselves but any other American who should pass that way in the future.

So check out the situation with government tourist bureaus, travel agencies, airlines or shipping companies before leaving home.

Unlike the United States, where you generally tip individually as you go, most hotels and restaurants in Western Europe usually add on the bill the so-called service charges, ranging from 10 to 15 per cent, which they distribute to the help. But even then, guests are expected to dole out a little extra for porters, doormen, bellboys, elevator operators, chambermaids, bartenders, waiters, etc. The concierge, or hall porter, also expects to be rewarded for any special services he might have rendered, as does the maitre d' and wine steward.

If not sure that service charges have been included, ask the hotel clerk, waiter or bartender. Figure between 15 and 20 per cent if the charges are not on the bill.

In some countries, you will have to drop a few coins in the palms of theater ushers or in the plate for checkroom and washroom attendants. Barbers and beauty shop attendants also are tipped.

Taxi drivers expect at least 20 per cent of the meter fare—make sure they drop the flag—and a little more if they help with the luggage. If there are no posted fixed fees, tip porters—if you can find them—at airports, piers, bus and railroad stations the equivalent of about 25 cents per bag, depending on the size and weight of the load.

Incidentally, carry a pocketful of small bills and coins for tipping—it's surprising how few cabbies, porters and others ever have change for bigger banknotes.

Tipping is prohibited—or officially discouraged—in some countries, including the Soviet Union, Iceland and Tahiti. However travelers report distributing "gifts" of money or goods for extra services, anyway. But be particularly cautious in offering any such gifts in Russia and the East European countries.

While the practice is still not as widespread as in the west, hotels in Japan and other Asian countries usually add service charges of 10 to 15 per cent and no additional tipping is necessary. Tip 10 to 15 per cent in restaurants, etc. when service charges are not included. Otherwise Americans are expected to tip for services in the major cities as they do at home.

Believe it or not, taxi-drivers in Tokyo do not expect tips—one handed my 300 yen back with a smile and bow.

You don't have to tip taxi drivers in Mexico City, either. But otherwise tipping is an accepted practice throughout Mexico and most hotels, restaurants, etc., add 15 to 20 per cent for service charges.

Tipping also is expected in most of Latin America and the West Indies, even when service charges are added to bills. You will tip in Africa, too, where most of the better hotels now include service charges.

GAMBLING CASINO
 SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI)—Carnival Cruise Lines expects to have a gambling casino in operation aboard its cruise ship Mardi Gras this winter. The casino will operate when the ship is on the high seas, but will be closed in ports. The Mardi Gras operates out of Miami on weekly cruises to San Juan, St. Thomas and Nassau.

Happy Birthday

Your Horoscope

SATURDAY, MARCH 1

Your birthday today: Personal pragmatism should be your motto for this busy year. You gain nothing by clashing with tradition. Work hard to convert latent or potential resources into usable form. Relationships are either profound or casual, but there's no middle ground. Today's natives seldom use all their skills at the same time, approach one, then another.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Nothing works out automatically or smoothly. Mind your manners and do the best you can. Don't take anything for granted as you pick your way through a rather mixed day.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Not all of today's comments will please you. Consider sources and don't react immediately. Present your best appearance as you prepare for another, easier situation.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: It's time to refresh your memory, give credit where it's due and answer long-standing questions. A symbolic gift expresses your sentiments better than words. Meditate, relax!

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Dissension is likely as temperaments are aroused, probably through competition. Avoid stirring up home conditions with shoptalk or by taking sides on external issue.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: The quiet approach is the only sensible one this weekend. Do whatever is at hand without advance debate. Special care in travel is indicated.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Overconfidence spoils many short-term projects but offers experience. Expect others to be confused and hasty. Set things straight without complaint.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A recent court ruling may have ended a tax break enjoyed by some professionals — the practice of charging off "home office" expenses on income tax returns.

The case, ironically, involved a lawyer for the Internal Revenue Service who deducted $100 of his $2,100 yearly apartment rent because, he said, he worked there occasionally in his off-time.

At first, according to the Research Group Inc., which reports on such matters for the legal profession, the IRS disallowed the claim, only to be reversed by the U.S. Tax Court.

The court found that the lawyer's apartment expenses were related to his business. But on Jan. 20 of this year, according to the group, an appeals court said the cost of incidental business carried on somewhere other than a person's main place of business is not deductible so far as rent goes.

The court also ruled that the lawyer's regular office always was available to him at the times he worked at home and that reading and otherwise working at home was simply a part of his job.

The lawyer involved has decided not to appeal, so the precedent may be established. In any case the research group said persons claiming a home office expense deduction should be able to prove the work at home is required — not just a preference — and that their regular office is not available to them in the evening or on weekends.

A reader in Newville, Pa., asks:

"Why does canned pineapple 'packed in its own juices' cost just as much as that packed in heavy syrup? I have always felt that it should cost less, but especially with the high cost of sugar it seems that again the consumer is paying more than he should be."

You may be right. The only reason one industry expert could give for the price being the same is that the packers have to add juice to each can, and that may add a bit to the cost — more than would be the case if the pineapple in each can contained enough juice to provide a proper medium.

But it may simply be a marketing technique — it's just as easy to charge the same for all similar sized cans of pineapple, on the assumption shoppers won't notice, or at least won't complain.

The canning industry, incidentally, has just won a revision in the Food and Drug Administration rules which will permit them to substitute corn syrup for sugar in many products to which sugar had formerly been added. That won't bring prices down, they claim, but it may keep them from going up as much as they would have assuming continuing instability in sugar prices.

A reader in Hornell, N.Y., who is 79, has a couple of complaints she probably shares with more than a few other older Americans.

"One of my complaints is food packaging. It is hard to find anything in vegetables or fruits that aren't wrapped. There are a lot of us old folks around who would like one cucumber or onion or three oranges. I wanted one cucumber the other day, had to buy two. I used one, the other will spoil.

"The packaging causes the food to cost more, contributing to the high cost of living."

Immunization Clinic Slated

The Texas Department of Public Health has announced the Pampa clinic date for immunizations on Mar. 13 at Carver Center.

Immunizations will be administered to all children over two months of age.

Protection against polio, diphtheria, lock jaw, whooping cough, measles and rubella are provided free of charge under the program.

Clinic hours are 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.

FUEL BILLS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Close house doors promptly to keep heat inside. As a further heat-saving stratagem, use just one door — front or back — during winter. This helps keep heat from escaping.

Also, keep children from running in and out unnecessarily. Some experts estimate that fuel bills are three per cent higher for every child in a family.

Plan To Tame Wild Motorists

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Officials have a plan to tame some of the wilder driving habits in this West Texas city and — with the help of some federal and state funds — it involves more than the mere threat of meaner policemen and higher fines.

"The city's street system seems to spawn an increasing number of accidents," says Jeff Briley, Lubbock's recently appointed traffic safety coordinator. "This rise cannot be attributed to the increased population alone. We feel there is a need for a more concentrated effort in traffic safety."

Thus, like many other Texas cities, Lubbock intends to adopt a comprehensive plan of engineering, enforcement and education for motorists designed to cut down on traffic-related accidents, deaths and injuries on city streets.

"In the past we have been able to provide a continued treatment of our problem, but we have not worked to cure or eliminate the disease," Briley said in an interview. "What we mean is that giving traffic citations is not always the best means to accomplish a set end.

"We apprehend violators but fail to eliminate the cause of the violation," he said.

Under the new program, high accident intersections in the city will be monitored by uniformed policemen driving marked cruisers. Salary overtime and costs of operating extra vehicles will be borne by the federal government.

"We're not on a ticket writing campaign," Briley said. "While controlling violators, we also want to educate them so they will not continue to be violators. So, sometimes tickets will be written. But other times the violator will be stopped and told what he has done wrong and then given education literature so he will know the correct way to drive in the future."

Briley said the program's emphasis is on safety.

"There is a difference between a safety campaign and a ticket writing campaign," he said.

Officers at the selected intersections, to be announced to the public in advance, will fill out daily activity reports explaining the how and the why of accidents they witness or investigate.

Violators will be provided with a Selective Traffic Enforcement Program brochure explaining the program, its rationale and goals.

"We feel this multipurpose program is the real answer to better driving on our city streets," Briley said.
