HOME OFFICE

WHEN the Jefferson Standard began business in August, 1907, there were ONE HUNDRED ELEVEN old-line companies established and operating. The Jefferson Standard therefore started in 112th position. It ranked thirty-first in size among the more than three hundred United States life insurance companies, as regards the volume of regular annual-premium business in force, when it celebrated its twentieth anniversary in August, 1927. That means it passed eighty of the pre-existent companies in two decades of enormous expansion.

The Company has moved steadily forward since its very inception. It passed the 100 millions in force mark during the first thirteen years of its business life. In the following seven and a half years, that figure has grown until it now exceeds 322 millions. The Jefferson Standard has assets of more than 40 million dollars. That amount will be increased by future premiums and interest income. The resources are more than adequate to meet all future obligations of the Company.

Company are carefully placed in the most conservative classes of investments. Their prudence has resulted in a highly satisfactory mortality experience and excellent interest yield. This has afforded to policyholders low cost, up-to-date protection on a safe basis. There is a Jefferson Standard policy to suit all life insurance needs. Age limits extend from day of birth to 65 1/2 years.

The Company is actively represented in twenty-six states, also in Porto Rico and the District of Columbia. It has 983 agents and forty-four branch offices. The investments are made in the localities where policies are sold; the Jefferson therefore helps build up the communities in which it operates.

The affairs of the Jefferson Standard have always been conducted on a high plane. An honest, able management sees that the risks are selected with scientific care and that the funds of the

See the "72" romp away from them all

The one great outstanding fact in automobiles today is that, while practically every car that runs is patterned after Chrysler—the illustrious "72" continues to romp away from and around them all in every phase of performance that makes motoring a pleasure. Which can and does mean only one thing, of course—that since it can quickly be proven that Chrysler "72" excels every car which seeks to compete with it without a single exception, it unmistakably gives the greatest monetary and performance return which exists in the world's motor-car market today.

PAMPA HAS LARGEST DELEGATION AT DALHART MEETING OF FEDERATED CLUBS AND SEEKS 1930 CONVENTION

The seventh annual convention of the seventh district of Texas Federation of Women's clubs met in Dalhart April 24, 25, and 26 and Pampa had the largest individual delegation from any town in a district that includes 54 counties. The fourteen club women of Pampa, including two district officers, returned Thursday evening, reporting a wonderful time enjoying the hospitalities of Dalhart. Hostesses, who entertained royally with honorary dinners, and luncheons, not to speak of aiding to the interest of the program with a number of prominent speakers.

Mrs. F. T. Collins of Amarillo, president of seventh district, presided at the executive board meeting Tuesday morning, which has followed with a delightful luncheon served at the Osgawa hotel to the entire board of state and district officers and chairmen through the courtesy of the Oronal and Socias clubs of Dalhart.

District officers from Pampa were Mrs. I. B. Hughey, district chairman of the Americanization, and Mrs. R. R. House, district chairman of citizenship. Through the hospitalities of the Dalhart Chamber of Commerce, a Rain-bow dinner was served Tuesday evening by the Baptist ladies at the First Baptist church honoring the presidents of the 127 clubs represented. Mrs. I. D. Cole of Amarillo presided. The speakers of note were Mrs. A. Q. Bonner of Dalhart, and Mrs. W. R. Potter of Bowie, state president. Covers were laid for 200, including a number of Dalhart people. The rainbow scheme was carried out in all of the dinner, decorations, placards, and the menu all lending themselves to the rainbow idea.

Mrs. C. F. Smith of Amarillo, often known as the Schumann-Helik of Texas, was greatly appreciated for her splendid interpretation of vocal selections, particularly negro spirituals. Mrs. W. R. Taylor, president of the Wayside club, was instrumental in securing Mrs. Smith's presence to come to Pampa in the near future to assist in the presenting of a library benefit musical. Mrs. Smith is a vocal artist of note, and has the honor to have been the first person to be asked to be on the program of the Biennial to be given in San Antonio the last of May.

Wednesday morning the convention was formally opened with committee reports from different chairmen and from officers of the seventh district. These giving reports from Pampa were Mrs. E. W. Hagan, of Wayside club, Mrs. W. M. Craven, of El Progresso, Mrs. M. L. Dowd of Col. Baptist club, and Mrs. B. E. Finley of the Child Study. The noonday luncheon Wednesday was sponsored by the ladies of the Methodist church, who used the basement and equipment of the First Baptist church. Mrs. T. V. Reeves of Canyon presided and presented "The Applied Education" program.

Dr. P. W. Horn, president of Texas Technological college at Lubbock, delivered the principal address of the afternoon session, entitled "The Relation System." Dr. Horn called to the attention of his audience that today the West has the progressive methods, and more and more the East is looking to the West for these methods of the building of community interests that are making the state of Texas what it ought to be.

All visitors were entertained at the Dalhart Country club at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, which was the courtesy of the Dalhart Women's Literary club.

Mrs. J. H. Jernigan of Childress, chairman of the Fine Arts department presided over the Fine Arts evening program. A feature of the program was a one-act play entitled "On the Other Side of the Moon," directed by Mrs. E. H. Rowley, Amarillo, which was presented with much skill, and portrayed a story of the tragedy of the life of a child who has only one parent.

Mrs. Phoebe K. Warner of Claude, in her sincere and unassuming manner was the outstanding speaker of the convention. She gave her address Thursday afternoon at the County Federation luncheon with "The Bread Basket" as her subject. For 1928 Mrs. Warner says that the greatest work of federated clubs is to study the needs of farm women and how these needs of farm women may be met. Her answer to the greatest problem of rural neglect today is the formation of a county club federation. It is the desire of Mrs. Warner that the county federation idea be reality in every one of the fifty counties now represented in the seventh district.

Mrs. Warner stated that it is only through county federation that we may have such conveniences as the county library, county demonstration agents, county health nurses, rest rooms, universal tree plantings, club county fairs and the promotion of general cultural life throughout the community.

Several speakers from various counties in the era gave reports on what county federations were doing for their communities. It is hoped that in the near future Mrs. Warner will come to Pampa to assist in organizing a county federation in Gray county. This organization of the county further organization, and at a general meeting of the district is under way at the present time will be completed.

Snyder will be the next convention city. The invitation to meet in Pampa in 1930 was extended before the convention Thursday morning by Mrs. R. R. House, Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar, and Mrs. W. M. Craven. Novel invitations were:

"Mr. and Mrs. Pampa, Miss Pampa, and all the little Pampas request the honor of your presence at Pampa, Texas for the Annual meeting of the Seventh District of Federated Women's clubs in the year 1930" were distributed among the delegates, and the Pampa delegates made such a favorable impression, that other cities who had planned to ask for the convention in 1930 withdrew in the favor of Pampa.

Those attending the convention from Pampa were Mrs. R. R. House, Mrs. I. B. Hughey, Mrs. W. M. Craven, Mrs. Dave Pope, Mrs. H. L. Ledrick, Mrs. V. E. Fatherc, Mrs. B. E. Finley, Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar, Mrs. James Todd, Mrs. H. R. Lebell, Mrs. W. R. Taylor, Mrs. E. G. Hogan, Mrs. M. L. Dowd, and Mrs. Tom Eller.

Open House Meeting of Child Study Held in Cole Home

Mrs. A. Cole was the gracious hostess to the open house meeting held by the Child Study club Friday afternoon. Mrs. James Todd, chairman of the entertainment committee, introduced the president, Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar, who gave the welcome address to the visitors present, and in turn introduced Mrs. E. R. House, district chairman of the citizenship, and Mrs. I. B. Hughey, district chairman of Americanization, and Mrs. Tom Eller, president of Coleridge Study club.

Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar stated that Pampa had the largest delegation from any city of the district at the seventh district of Federated clubs meeting held at Dalhart April 24, 25, 26, and also that four federated clubs reported from Pampa. In outlining the course of study taken up by the Child Study club, Mrs. Hunkapillar said there was a course of ten books sent out from Dr. Becker's Institute in New York. These books deal with children of pre-school age, adolescent age, and the high school age, stressing the care of the physical body of the child, and also the influence of pictures and books on the life of a child.

Mrs. L. N. McCullough sang several highly enjoyable vocal selections, while Miss Harriet Hunkapillar delighted these present with humorous readings.

Mrs. B. E. Finley gave interesting facts on the District convention, stating that the visitors were royally entertained, and gave a brief outline of the wonderful talks of the various club women of the district.

Two piano selections were given by Mrs. I. B. Hughey. Mrs. James Todd reported on the Biennial to be held in San Antonio in May, and urged that all who can would attend, stating that 10 foreign countries would be represented in the 10,000 women who will convene there at that time.

Hostesses for the afternoon were

CITY PLANNING, especially phases having to do with enabling acts passed by the Texas legislature in 1927, will be discussed in detail at the League of Texas Municipalities convention in Denton May 7 and 8.

Several nationally known speakers will be present, brought in conjunction with the executive committee of Dallas Kesser Plan association. Texas municipal officers would do well to send delegates to this meeting, in view of the fact that the use of the six enabling acts on city planning and zoning are not generally understood.

City planning is a new science in many respects. Under the enabling act a city may not only rigidly define its growth in advance, but may restrict certain areas beyond the city limits. The meaning of community beauty and order, is no small moment. Promoters have bitterly contested the acts in some states because their methods were often contrary to proper development of new residence or industrial sections.

Sweetwater has under consideration the employment of a city planning engineer to untangle her confused streets and traffic situation. City City planning ten or fifteen years ago would have made this drastic step unnecessary. Cities do not grow; they are built—pretty, convenient cities are not accidents; they are planned.

HEROINES VS. REGULARS.

Pampa News: A famous novelist has married a type of woman he has never written about. Wonder if out of curiosity, desire for knowledge, or was he reserving one type that he didn't wish to appear to understand too well? Nothing makes some women madder than to give the impression that you understand them "perfectly." Maybe the famous novelist married a type of whom he had never written because he was tired of the disturbing Janes whom he had made the center of hundreds of thousands of words. When a man marries, he dimly aspires to rest, not restlessness. And if he is as good a biologist as novelist he must know that a restless wife forbids a tranquil husband. No man wants a heroine for a wife, because heroines are lots of bother. Most of them develop temperament, and although a novelist likes to depict temperament he doesn't like to marry a temperamentalist. On the other hand, a woman hates to marry a somnambulist. So, when a man who likes to doze around the house marries a lady who likes to throw in with excitement there's a great day coming, a day when there will be a confusion of tongues and they may go their separate ways, professing not to understand each other. A structure as solid as the Tower of Babel fell into dissolution by reason of the builders not being able to work together on account of a sudden difference in language. Likewise, some marriages come to nothing by reason of the high contracting parties misunderstanding one another. And as heroines are harder to understand than husbands are, it is always advisable for a novelist to avoid marrying an immortal and try his luck with a lady who shudders at the thought of publicity. There are some like that. You may not believe it, but there are some like that. Or somewhat like it.—State Press in Dallas News.

A Modern Alexander Looking for New Worlds to Conquer

THANKS

Higgins News—Oil is a wonderful thing. For example, look at the Pampa News. Sunday's News came out in festive garb and was further embellished with pictures of the whole force and the gang is not half bad to look at and that's a fact. Compliment? To be sure it is a compliment. Pampa should be proud of the gang. It is no small job in this day and time to get a paper on its feet and keep it running fast enough to make good time, but not fast enough to cause the front office to outrun the back departments.

One way to solve the unemployment problem is for a lot of idling working people to work harder.

Many a man who used to work in the fields until dark has sons who take interest in twilight leagues.

Probably the man who pays $400 a day for a hotel suite finds, along with ordinary folk, plenty of excuses to criticize the service.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, N.E.A. Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Salt Creek, which will be investigated by the Senate, is a billion-dollar ocean of oil.

Teapot Dome is almost a puddle alongside the Salt Creek field, which is said to be the richest oil deposit, acre for acre, in the world.

They lie side by side in Wyoming, the general field laid out in the shape of a bowling pin, with Teapot Dome the knob.

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, whose resolution earlier this year led to revelations of Sinclair's contributions to the Republicans campaign fund several years ago and who now demands investigation of Salt Creek, asks determination whether any of the leases in this 30,000-acre field were illegal or fraudulent, whether they gave anyone a monopoly on Salt Creek oil and whether any of them should be cancelled. Senators Walsh and Nye of the Teapot Dome Committee will handle the investigation.

In 1909, when the navy was beginning to consider seriously its future oil supply, President Taft withdrew all public oil lands from entry, refusing to permit further indiscriminate exploitation.

But a group of oil men brought up such claims as ex-president's authority to withdraw the lands and went right in and took out the oil.

It was not until 1915 that the supreme court upheld Taft's order. Then the oil men, instead of being forced by Congress to pay for the oil they had taken and to get out went to Congress and asked for "relief". They said they had exploited Salt Creek in good faith and demanded protection for their investment. They began a long and complicated fight for a leasing law which would lease all oil lands on a royalty basis, giving them the preference at Salt Creek.

The late Senator Robert M. La Follette fought and filibustered against the oil men's bill for six years, despite a powerful and persistent lobby. Finally it was passed by a Republican Congress under a Democratic administration. It was all bi-partisan and no outright corruption is alleged, although at least one senator and an Interior Department employee were later given fat oil jobs.

Charges also have been made of the payment of other hush money, for Salt Creek was so rich that the oil men could afford a policy of paying off and buying off all objectors and claimants.

The charge of fraud enters in connection with the title claims that the lessors were forced to show. Original entrants were limited by old

Efficiency Needed to Make Success of Big Carnival

Probably few of the people who will visit the midway of the carnival to be brought here May 7 by the American Legion will stop to realize the big machine in the background which is necessary to make the organization possible.

Back of the carnival stage is the general agent and traffic manager, a railroad expert, in whose hands the success of the entire show rests. He must be on the alert in knowing the financial, industrial, and agricultural conditions of the territory in which the show is to exhibit.

Next in line comes a special agent who directs exploitation, planning the bill posting and newspaper campaign and arranging for large stocks of goods such as meats, bakery goods, gasoline, bottled drinks, lumber, electricity, and laundry and cleaning.

When the show special arrives, a crew under the direction of an experienced train master brings the big wagons down the runs and sends them to the grounds. A lot superintendent puts them in position according to the plans of the grounds surveyor. One hundred and fifty workmen erect scores of tents and devices. A staff of electricians construct the network of the electrical lines which feed the thousands of lights.

In the office will be found a staff of bookkeepers working under the direction of the show secretary-treasurer. Thousands of items and accounts are ordinary merchants, selling hundreds of dollars at every stop, eating and playing, and earning a living for themselves and education for their children, many of whom are in various schools over the country.

CHAPTER XXXV
As long as she lived, Sally Ford would remember with shame that for one moment she was tempted by Arthur Van Horne's offer to prepare her for a stage career in New York.

the and inevitable performances lay ahead. But they were far out of the state which held Clem Carson, the orphanage.

that he was free again for Bybee had assured them that there was not the slightest chance of extradition on the charges which still stood against the two in their native state.

up her scattered purchases and presents. As the day wore on, with show after show drawing record crowds for a village of its size, "Princess Lalla" gazed more often into the shining blue depths of a small sapphire than into the magic depths of her crystal.

severely dressed body had been as familiar to her as her own. Instinctively, though her blood had turned instantly to ice water in her veins, Sally's right hand closed over her left, to conceal the sapphire. Thelma had not been permitted to keep even a bit of this glass.

Her eyes glittered; she gasped involuntarily with delight. If Van Horne had not been lucky, if he had not matched her to him with a stranded cry of triumph as his black eyes—mocking no longer, but wide and brilliant with desire—read the effect of his words, she might have committed herself, have promised him anything.

During the first week in the new city, Sally's eyes, as she sat at the window, watched the Bybees had dazed hope. Positively the only clarity that befell the carnival was the discovery that Bobo, the fat girl, had lost five pounds.

With money in their pockets, they could afford to buy all the necessities and little luxuries which their enforced flight from the Carson farm had deprived them of. Sally, her little face enchantingly grave and wise, chose their and socks and shirts for David, and almost forgot to bother about her own needs.

"Oh, David!" She laid her hand against her cheek, pressing the stone so hard that it left its many-faceted imprint upon her flesh. Then she had to kiss it? David had to kiss it—and her.

At half-past nine that night Gus, the barkeeper, had not quite finished his "spiel" about the Princess Lalla when the girl, whose eyes had been fixed trance-like upon her ring, saw a woman suddenly begin to ascend the steps to the platform. Before her startled eyes had traveled upward to the woman's face Sally knew who it was. For 12 years that big, stiffly corseted,

Van laughed, settled back in his seat and crossed his arms upon his breast. "I can walk until you have your little tummy full of carnival life and of hiding from the poles," he told her in his old, nonchalant way.

On Wednesday David was permitted to get up, and that afternoon for the first time he witnessed Sally's performance as "Princess Lalla." She performed so proficient in her intonation—reading those who sought knowledge of "past, present and future" that his smiling, amused attentiveness to her readings did not embarrass her.

"And here's something else," David said to her that Saturday morning. They were in the still-deserted Palace of Wonders their purchases spread out on Sally's platform.

"I wish it could have been a diamond," David deprecated. "I suppose all girls prefer diamond engagement rings, but—"

Apparently Enid Barr had been convinced of Bybee's gallant lies that little orphanage Betsy had been mistaken and that "Princess Lalla" was not "Sally Ford, playacting," but it was not until the show train was rolling out of the state in the small hours of Sunday morning that the girl dared breathe easily.

Sunday, on the show train, was a happy day, the happiest that Sally had ever known in her life. Freaks and dancers, barkers and concessionaries, all the members of that weirdly assorted family, the carnival, mingled in a joyous freedom from work and worry singing together, reminiscing, gambling, gossiping.

"Give me your hand and shut your eyes," David commanded gently, with a throb of excitement in his voice. She obeyed, but when she felt a ring being slipped upon the third finger of her left hand her eyes flew open and found a sapphire to match them. For the ring which David had bought for

They were still sitting there, talking, planning, making love shyly but ardently, when Gus, the barkeeper, mounted the box outside the tent and began to ballyhoo for the first show of the morning. "Even c'eck and I'm not in making yet, and you've got to run the wheel for Eddie today," Sally cried in dismay, jumping to her feet and gathering

The last week, except for the storm, had been an excellent one; money was free, spirits high. Even Mrs. Bybee hovering like a mother hen over David, was good-natured, inclined to remittance and give advice. Sally, whose talent for exquisite darning had been discovered by the women and girls, sat on the edge of David's berth, her face full of flesh and beige and sunlight, silk stockings, her needle flying busily, her lips curved with a milk of pure delight, as she listened to the surge of laughter and song and talk.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday morning before show time the two wandered about the village to which the carnival had journeyed the night before. It was heavenly to be able to walk the streets unafraid. David walked with head high, shoulders squared, unafraid to look any man in the face and Sally could have cried with joy

When the show was over, she joined him proudly, her little brown-painted hands clinging to his arm, her face split into a grin as she pattered at his side on a tour of the midway. It was then that her dream came true. At last she was doing the early the only calamity that befell the girl, buying her hot dog, salt water taffy, red lemonade—the two of them vinking cut of twin straws from the same glass.

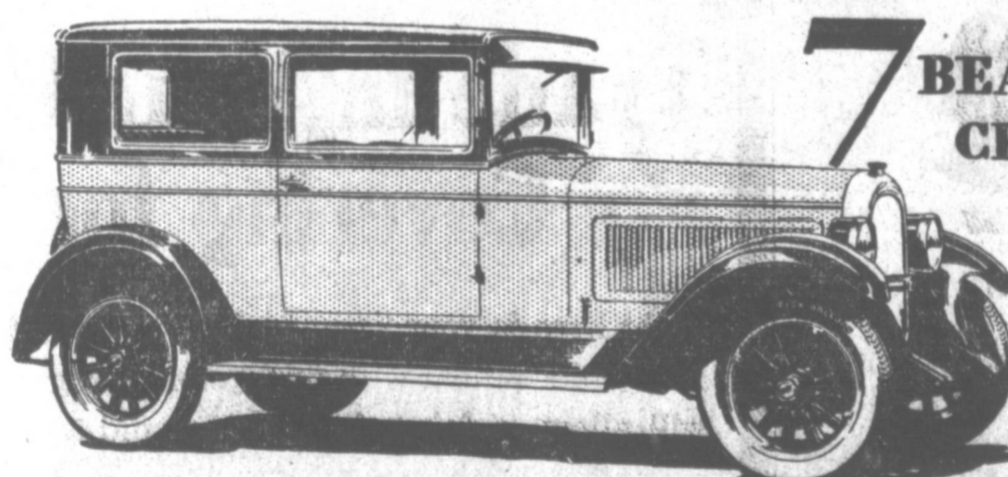

They were in the still-deserted Palace of Wonders their purchases spread out on Sally's platform. When she saw them she burst into tears, hugging them to her breast as if they were living, feeling things. "Why, David, darling!" she sobbed and laughed, "I've never before in all my life had any silk underwear or a pair of silk stockings! I—I'm afraid to wear them for fear I'll spoil them when I have to wash them. Oh, the dear things! The lovely, precious things!"

Harris Has Idea He Can Show Smith the Mitts

Tomorrow night at the Pampa Athletic club the old veteran, Wernie Smith, is to have a battle on his hands when he bumps up against Bucky Harris of Wichita in the ten-round main event. Harris is here in the pink of condition and says he is going to give Smith something he has never bumped into before.

In the first eight-round semi-final Kid Granite and Kid Rucker will tangle and for the second eight-round event Sammy Carlton and Junior Hudson are all set to go. The six-round preliminary event will feature Jack Morrison of Berger and Young Jack Dempsey of Amarillo.

Wernie Smith, 163 pounds, a veteran of 250 battles, has beaten his man in less than one round the last three fights, here but is up against a boy who can give and take with him any day. Smith has been at the top of the ladder in Madison square and is still one of the best in the country.
