Lighting Ceremony Kicks Off Holiday Season

LIGHTING SCENE--This is the scene at Friday night's lighting ceremony held at the Mule Memorial Sight on Highway 84. This shows a portion of the crowd gathered for the occasion.

Kick-off ceremonies officially opened the Christmas season here Friday night with a special program and lighting of the giant Christmas tree and downtown decorations.

... And there really was an unusual story behind the placing of the first high tree in a certain position near the Mule Memorial and as the program progressed, this story came to light.

John Shelton served as master of ceremonies. The singing of Christmas Carols opened the program with Rev. Walter Buice, education director of the First Baptist Church leading the group singing. Chester Clay Beavers provided organ music.

Dr. Charles Lewis, president of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke on behalf of the Chamber, expressing Yuletide thoughts and appreciation for the cooperation exercised in getting this first program of this type completed.

Harvey Bass, chairman of the Go-Go committee also expressed his appreciation to the many people and business firms who helped make this scene complete. Shelton headed up the Christmas tree committee. Mayor Wilbur LeVaque flipped the switch which turned on the all-red lights on the tree as well as those downtown. One lone white bulb burns in the center of a star in the tree top.

It was at this point that Shelton told how Harvey Bass began to dream along these lines back in February. It seemed to Bass that since Muleshoe, Texas was the only city where there was a life-size statue, a Monument to the Mule ... that it was only fitting that this be the only city with such a Mule facing an illuminated Christmas tree.

The entire setting creates a beautiful picture of Christmas time. To the west of the Memorial and the tree, a nativity scene has been placed, with baby Jesus in the manger and the wise men standing nearby. To the east of the Memorial, is the log cabin Santa used for his workshop.

The 37-foot tree is decorated with about 700 coffee cans which were painted by the Rotary Club and Rotary Anas, plus other ornaments placed there during a community decorating party held Saturday afternoon.

ALL ON--Mayor Wilbur LeVaque has just turned on the Christmas light over the tree, lighting downtown area and the giant Christmas tree.

Officers Third Holiday Dinner Held Thursday

The third annual Thanksgiving dinner for law enforcement officers and their families was held Thursday at City Hall. Host couples were members of the City Police Department and their wives.

Attending were Police Chief and Mrs. Harold White and family; Patrolman David Cunningham and family, Patrolman and Mrs. John Moore and Patrolman Jimmy Kinser and guest Miss Janette Slayton; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Spahn and Pam, Venita King and guest, Janice Harper, Opal Brooks and her mother, Mrs. John Boydston, Ruth Briscoe and son, Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Black and family and Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Jack.

The group spent an enjoyable afternoon playing table games. Aside from the turkey and all the trimmings, the forces had something else for which to be thankful ... all citizens were good citizens and not one single call interrupted the holiday event.

Local Law Officers' Work Varied

Bailey County Sheriff's office reports that one arrested Friday morning last week had been turned over to Navy officers after being picked up here by Deputy Sheriff on "absent without leave" charge.

Two others were lodged in county jail at the same time for vagrancy and investigation and released.

A Bula man was arrested and charged with aggravated assault, handed a $150. fine and given 10 days in jail.

Another subject was picked up in Morton and held for the local office on charge of enticing a minor and another was picked up in Sudan for Bailey County on charges of felony theft of an automobile.

Highway Patrolman Freddie Jack investigated an accident Tuesday six miles south on Highway 214. Jack said a tire rod broken on a vehicle being driven by T. C. Palmer, Hereford, which caused it to veer across the highway. Another vehicle "be driven by Clifford Mauis, Muleshoe left the highway to avoid collision with the out of control car. However, the two hit in the ditch.

Another wreck at 6 p.m., Wednesday occurred about 6 miles north on Highway 214 involving a car driven by Robert Alton Morris, Lazbuddie, and a cotton trailer being pulled by Arthur Marvin Bradley, Rt. 2., Muleshoe.

Morris was coming up behind the trailer which did not have rear lights. He attempted to stop, slid his vehicle around and the back of his pickup slammed into the rear of the trailer. Bradley was given a citation for not having rear trailer lights, according to investigating officer, Freddie Jack. Thanksgiving day was reported to be quiet.

Research Promotion Cited At CPI Trustee Meeting

Results of current farmer-financed research and promotion were cited today by Cotton Producers Institute trustees as examples of what can be accomplished when funds are available for a far bigger program.

Examples, reported at trustee meeting in El Paso, included new systemic insecticide developed in CPI project at University of California. In tests during 1966, use increased yields by as much as 1,600 pounds of seed cotton per acre. Among other results noted were successful marketing of all-cotton, durable press men's suits during summer of 1966; significant improvements in cotton's position in other markets where durable press is important; and vital leads toward improved methods of controlling verticillium wilt and perennial weeds.

Highly successful example of CPI promotional effort was limited program of cooperative retail store advertising for cotton products. Technique was tested in 20 metropolitan markets in 1966 and survey reveals it not only sold cotton products but drew excellent response from retailers.

Following reports, trustees adopted resolution strongly commending National Cotton Council for results achieved, mileage obtained from funds available, and for laying strong foundation for new program. "We realize the CPI effort is small compared to what cotton must do to compete successfully with synthetic fibers. Results of current projects, however, are highly encouraging and demonstrate what can be accomplished if adequate financing becomes available," Russell Giffen, Fresno, Calif., chairman of trustees, declared. Trustees stressed that farmers can provide financing for adequate program by voting "yes" in Cotton Research and Promotion Referendum, December 5-9.

Cotton Baled

At Fast Pace

Three-fourths of Bailey County cotton has been stripped with total bales ginned nearing the 45,000 mark. Ideal weather conditions have enabled farmers to continue the harvest which is reported to be 80 to 85 percent complete. See AREA COTTON Page 3

Yule Parade

Plans are complete for the annual Christmas parade to be held at 9 p.m., Saturday, December 3.

The point of origin will be at the Boy Scout block on South Main Street and will progress to Avenue G and turn left to the Morton highway, then north to highway 70-84 then south down Main Street and terminate at the same place it originated.

Each float, vehicle, and group is expected to be in place by 2:45 p.m. Each individual group has been assigned a number and white numbers will be painted on the pavement for forming the parade. For example, if your number is 12, then your group will line up in the parade directly behind the number 12 on the pavement.

This is the way the parade is to be formed. A City Police car will lead the parade followed by Miss Muleshoe, 1966 and Little Miss Muleshoe, sponsored by the Jaycees and Jayceettes. In third position will be the Color Guard and Texas Tech Air Force ROTC; the Angel Flight, which is a Texas Tech girl's unit; First Baptist Church Young People; F.H. A. and Homemakers float; Lazbuddie; Chamber of Commerce officials; Girl Scouts; Calvary Baptist Young People; Llano Estacado, School Officials; Muleshoe Jaycees; Muleshoe High School Drafting Class; First Christian Church Christian Womens Fellowship; Muleshoe Art Association; Muleshoe

High School Band, County officials, Methodist Church Alpha Circle, Jenny TOPS, Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority, Cup Scout Pack 620, (this will be the official Santa float) Morton Sherriffs Posse, City officials and city fire truck.

Floats will bear signs defining the category in which they are entered, either (Fant) for fantasy or (Rel.) for religion. Prizes will be given for first, second and third place winners, in the amount of $100, $75, and $50. Five floats have been entered in the religion division and eight in fantasy.

In the religion division are First Baptist Young People, Calvary Baptist Young People, Muleshoe Jaycees, First Christian Church Christian Wo-

Tax Exempt Industry

GUEST EDITORIAL

Across the country today, communities issue tax-exempt bonds to build plants they lease to manufacturers who leave their old cities and set up shop where they expect to find advantages in lower operating costs, closer proximity to markets or raw materials, or lower taxes.

There is a move on in Texas to pass legislation allowing this state to get into this area of attracting industry, and there is likely to be quite a debate when the legislature comes into session in January.

The industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce in Perryton has run up against this matter of tax incentives in other states and members of this committee have from time to time expressed the wish that this state had something like it.

Guyton, our neighbor to the northwest, was able to pass a city bond issue with the proceeds used to build facilities for the Swift packing plant, and the bonds thus issued are attractive because the interest on them is exempt from federal income tax to the buyer.

This is the sales gimmick in municipal bonds, and those states that allow municipalities or states to issue them have had a lot of success in financing industrial expansion that way.

Originally, Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee led the field, but other states have gotten into the act. In 1950 there were municipal tax-exempt bonds issued in the amount of $7 million, while in the first nine months of 1966, a total of $439 million has been issued.

This trend is not without its critics. Rep. Henry S. Ruess, Wisconsin Democrat, recently said, "The function of the state and local government is to provide public needs—schools, hospitals, roads, waste treatment facilities, not finance start-up factories or greening card plants. Today cities build and own manufacturing plants. Tomorrow they may operate them."

It is doubtful, however, that warnings like this will stop the practice. Small communities with natural advantages will do what is necessary to lure plants that will give their residents employment.

Local financing, with a city bond issue to be retired from lease payments from industry, is a powerful attraction to locating industry in a community.

Texas, while blessed with a lot of natural advantages, finds itself at a disadvantage in this area. The chances are that our lawmakers will be given a chance in January to make some changes.

Uncle's Rising Debt Costs

GUEST EDITORIAL

Any suggestion that federal deficit spending may entail a risk of eventual national bankruptcy is hooded down by those espousing the "new economics."

They consider such forebodings outdated and a manifestation of what they derisively call the "conventional wisdom." They regard it as "simplyistic" to apply the rules of family finances to national fiscal affairs, although it was no less so early Keynesian than Franklin D. Roosevelt who said in his first presidential acceptance speech that "any government, like any family," could spend a little more than it earned for a year, "but you and I know that a continuation of that habit means the poorhouse."

Even as recently as during the administration of the late President Kennedy, it was considered prudent politically to pay at least lip service to the "conventional wisdom." President Kennedy began by advocating what he called a "cyclically balanced" budget. But he ended up telling the Yale graduates of 1962 that it was a "myth" to suppose federal deficits created inflation and budgetary surpluses prevented it.

From that point forward, the federal government has thrown

Research and Promotion Referendum:

DO-OR-DIE DECISION FOR COTTON FARMERS

By W. R. POAGE (D-Tex.)

This speech by Congressman Poage was transcribed at Waco, October 28, 1966 for TV and radio broadcast over the Cotton Belt.

AS ONE who has been fighting the battles of the cotton farmer in Congress for some 30 years, I could not fail to comment on the great significance of the referendum on cotton research and promotion which will be held in the cotton-growing states early in December.

I cannot remain silent because, as I see it, it is a do-or-die decision that cotton farmers will make in this referendum.

Of all our major American crops, cotton is in the deepest trouble. The carryover has reached almost 17 million bales, an all-time record high. And why have we accumulated this staggering total? Purely and simply because we have not been selling enough cotton.

Cotton's markets, at home and abroad, are being taken over by the synthetic fibers. And the big guns they are now using to take our markets are research and promotion. Fifty years ago 90 percent of our textiles were made of cotton. Today cotton supplies only 60 percent. If only half the American textiles which are presently being made of synthetics were made of cotton, we would have no surplus.

In this day and age, the producers of any product have to put up big money to improve it and to sell it through advertising and other techniques of promotion. Either they do this or they go out of business. In essence, this is the decision farmers must make in the referendum on cotton research and promotion.

Of course, the price of cotton is always a problem for the farmer. It has been a problem in the past and it could be a problem in the future in the competitive position of cotton, but it's not a problem for cotton right now—thanks to our direct payment program. That program goes far enough but it is helping to move cotton.

Since the mid-1950's, the Congress has enacted program after program aimed at helping farmers compete in price while maintaining their income. Across these years billions of dollars have been involved in price subsidies. These subsidies have helped American cotton farmers a great deal—especially in their fight against the competition from rayon and foreign-grown cotton. Without these subsidies, most cotton farmers would have been put out of business long ago.

I have long thought that we should make cotton completely competitive in the markets by letting it sell at world prices with the government making up the difference between the world price and a fair price, just as we do in the case of wool. I still believe this is the best approach, but as things now stand—under the emergency four-year program in effect—the government has come just about as far as we can reasonably expect in making cotton competitive in price, in the domestic as well as the foreign market.

Even so, cotton is still suffering market losses, and farmers are continuing to lose acres. The reason is plain to even a casual observer of modern textile competition. While cotton is right now competing in price, it is not competing in research and promotion. All you have to do to see this is to pick up your daily newspaper and look at the ads. The synthetic producers are pouring over $200 million a year into efforts to improve and sell their fibers. By comparison, cotton producers are only putting up about $4 to $5 million.

That is why I was so pleased, early this year, when cotton producers came to the Congress with a self-help plan which would give farmers the opportunity to put up a dollar a bale for a research and promotion program that they would operate themselves.

I immediately joined in—and helped support for—the successful effort to pass the Cotton Research and Promotion bill, which authorized the referendum.

I did this because the need for big money for cotton research and promotion was so desperate and so obvious.

I did it because it was completely apparent that if anyone was going to put up this money, it would have to be the farmer.

I did it because it offered the farmer a clear-cut choice of whether he wanted to compete after the fashion of growing cotton. I also supported the self-help approach because it would be such an enormous asset in getting public support and further constructive action from the Congress on the government cotton program.

With farmers a small, shrinking minority in this nation, it is getting harder and harder to get legislation in behalf of agriculture, and especially in behalf of cotton.

There are many in the Congress who are ready to throw up their hands on

Diversification Is Farming Answer

GUEST EDITORIAL

Appearance of radishes and cauliflower on a commercial scale in the Herford area that has provided important economic news for the territory in that they tend to expand the tremendous diversification program which the community already enjoys, also emphasize the fact that scores of More important, still, the two new crops over vegetables can also be produced profitably in the Magic Triangle.

When one studies the situation thoroughly, it becomes evident that the big difference between this area and other West Texas communities rests in the matter of diversification. This is the one factor that guarantees agricultural income beyond all others, chiefly because the loss of a single crop does not establish a 12-month loss for the individual producer -- not, consequently, for the entire community. Of this basis, the Herford territory has grown and expanded during the past decade.

Of tremendous importance, too, is the fact that the community has established and maintains extensive nation-wide marketing contacts which, in turn, have established sizeable packing, processing and packaging operations so important before vegetable production can flourish.

Another thing which many growers like about the additional crops is the small acreage and short season which they require. From a growing standpoint, it is safe to assume that we have barely scratched the surface with present crops. In the Brand farms, for instance, are reports of successful growing of celery as far back as 25 years ago. Berries and small fruits provide another field which has not been expanded in the territory. Sooner or later, it also seems feasible that production of many new crops will occur, and it is equally likely that some form of processing, either by freezing, canning, or spray preservatives will follow.

Probably the most encouraging thing of all, though, is the fact that we have people who are interested in expanding their horizons; people who are willing to experiment with new crops and new methods, rather than sit back and stick 100 percent with the old reliables. It was the foresight and vision of such people who brought the community where it is today, and so long as we have a new crop of such people from generation to generation, we will continue to grow and prosper.

---Herford Sunday Brand---

even rudimentary fiscal caution to the winds. The Johnson administration is piling all manner of "Great Society" welfare spending on top of escalating Vietnams war costs now running at an estimated $2 billion a month.

Anybody remonstrating is told that there is an essential difference between personal deficits and governmental deficits, and that the eventual bankruptcy implicit in the former isn't necessarily implicit in the latter.

Of course the governmental deficits have been running almost without interruption for more than 30 years and the fiscal grasshoppers have been exulting over the ants during most of this time. But consider the multiplying difficulties that are developing in refinancing the towering national debt. The rapidly mounting interest on this $324 billion debt now is second only to defense as the costliest single item in the budget. It is approaching $13 billion a year, and soon will go completely into orbit, partly as a result of the vastly increased indicated deficits associated with the war in Viet Nam and partly as a result of the general increase in interest cost.

Ominous immediately is the rise in interest rates. Of the cotton. There are many who either believe that cotton can't be saved, or isn't worth saving if it is going to be a heavy perpetual drain on the Treasury. This is what we have to contend with, and it is deadly serious. I believe that the attitude of Congress will be profoundly affected, for better or for worse, by the cotton farmers' decision in the referendum on research and promotion.

If cotton farmers show they want and are able to complete any approving the one-dollar-a-bale assessment for research and promotion—I think the Congress will be inclined to go along with further substantial assistance after the present four-year program expires.

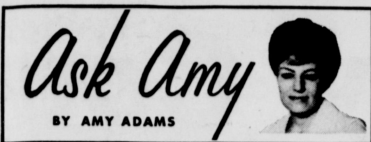

And never overlook the fact that the assistance cotton farmers are receiving this year is quite substantial. To protect the farmer's income, to meet price competition, and to reduce the surplus, the government is making domestic allotment payments and diversion payments. For a typical farmer who has an allotment of perhaps 30 acres, who has average yields, and who took the 35 percent diversion, the total payment on his production this year would come to about $7,250 a bale.

Think about that. Government help of about $250 a bale for the typical farmer! Surely many Northern Congressmen are asking: "Is it worth this much to the country to try and save cotton?" In my judgment, Congress will feel that it is very much worthwhile—if it can see genuine promise that there will be programs capable of putting cotton on its feet and making it self-sufficient within some reasonable period of time.

If there is to be such an outlook, a greatly expanded program of research and promotion must be at the very heart of it. If farmers agree in the referendum to build that kind of outlook by putting up the sum of one dollar a bale, I believe the Congress will continue to provide substantial assistance over a reasonable period of time.

On the other hand, if farmers refuse to put up the dollar a bale—if they show by their votes that they are ready to give up on cotton—I think the majority of the Congress will be ready to give up, too.

With this much involved I feel that serious business requires that we approve the referendum on cotton research and promotion by an overwhelming majority.

THIS COULD BE SERIOUS

Dear Amy: My husband doesn't trust me at all. He says he knows I have been unfaithful even before (and after) our marriage, but I know I haven't. No matter what I say, he says he is right.

We have been married almost ten years and have three children. I love him very much and just wouldn't do what he says I do. He drinks and once in a while stays out late, then comes home accusing me. Just last night he accused me of being unfaithful when his brother took the baby and I to the hospital in an emergency. What will the children think of me?

He is wonderful in many other ways, but how can we be happy when this is in his mind? Claudia

Dear Claudia: Get your husband to a doctor. It is not normal for a person to be chronically suspicious without reason. This could be a symptom of something very serious!

Dear Amy: Please give me your opinion on this. I'm 16 years old and I'm going to Beauty School. I love my work and I'm graduating in 4 months. After I receive my license and make good, my father is going to buy me a shop, and I'm also going to be married.

But there is one thing. My boyfriend makes good money, but I still want to work because I love doing beauty work. Please tell me, can I be a mother, a wife, a housewife and a good businesswoman all at the same time? Love to be ALL Four

Dear ALL Four: You can! I am . . . and there are 120 million others like me!

Dear Amy: My problem is very serious. While I was engaged to my present husband I went out with another man and had an affair. And, unfortunately, I got in trouble.

I put my husband in a compromising position and later informed him he was going to be a father. We were married right away and no one was ever the wiser. I never told anyone, even my child's real father who moved away a few days after dating me.

Now my daughter has grown up and attends a northern college. She has written telling us she is married. She sent us a wedding picture and to my horror, I discovered the man she married is actually my first boyfriend and her father. I'm sick, confused and horrified that this unbelievable marriage has taken place. What should I do.

No Name Please Dear No Name: There is nothing sensible you can do now. Bringing all this to light could jeopardize your marriage, shock your daughter and your "son-in-law" wouldn't believe you anyway. You have much to lose and nothing to gain.

There is a divine law by which tell me, can I be a mother, all thoughts and actions are judged. It is the Law of Consequences: "For as a man sows, so shall he reap."

Dear Amy: We girls are all 13 or 14 years old and in the 8th grade at a Catholic school. There is this one boy in our class whom we will call "Dick." Dick is good looking and very friendly. In fact, he's a little too friendly with the girls. Almost every week he has a new girlfriend. The worst part of it all is that he has an awful temper. If he says anything to you that's not thing back to him, whether you're a boy or girl, he'll sock you.

We girls would like to know what to do? Should we ignore him completely when he asks us to go out with him -- or what?

A Bunch of Taken Girls Dear Girls: Of course ignore him! A proper young man wouldn't make offensive remarks much less "sock" a young lady.

A taste of the cold shoulder should cool his temper.

PERSONAL TO LILI: It's true; only famous men get their heads on paper money. But women don't mind, they would rather get their hands on it!

Dr. Combs said certain barriers have to be removed before learning takes place, namely, individuals have to be challenged rather than threatened; they need to explore rather than to be told; they must become involved rather than be onlookers, and they must dare to try something different, rather than follow routine. The old idea that learning takes place only when someone is telling something must be discouraged. We cannot substitute facts for meaning, he related.

H.I. Bass Honored On Birthday At Church Party

H. I. Bass, who recently turned 93 years-of-age, was honored with a birthday party get-together Sunday afternoon in the dining room of the Muleshoe Primitive Baptist Church. Bass was presented with a huge birthday cake in the shape of an open Bible given him from friends at Lubbock. Decorations of red icing roses were featured on white icing. One of the honoree's favorite scriptures was inscribed on the cake in black lettering. A single white candle, when lit gave a glow of serenity as Bass made his wish, not for himself but for his friends and relatives' health and happiness in their future years. Tears trickled down the faces of his loved ones as they stood by and watched, heard him make the wish and then blew the light from the candle out.

Bass has been a member of the Primitive Baptist Church some 70 years. He has learned many chapters of the Bible by memory of which he still is able to quote many of these. He has contributed his fairly good health as to finding a scripture for every need in his joys and sorrows, thus far in life. The honoree is an inspiration to his many grand and great grandchildren, according to his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Watson.

Candlelight Ceremony Unites Couple in Wedlock

A candlelight ceremony performed in the Northside Baptist Church in Hobbs, N. M., united in marriage Betty Ann Richey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wiseman, and Gerald R. Gober, son of Mr. and Mrs. Webb Gover, Farwell. The ceremony was said by the Rev. Robert Tremaine.

The church was decorated with bouquets of antique gold chrysanthemums, lemon foliage and Baker's fern arranged against a background of gold branched candleabra holding white tapers. The sanctuary railing was decorated with garlands of fern, white candles and clusters of gold chrysanthemums. A white aisle cloth marked the bridal aisle, and the couple knelt on a white wrought iron prie dieu for the benediction. Pews of the church were marked with clusters of gold chrysanthemums, greenery and white satin bows.

Nathan Moore, Lubbock, served as best man and Gibson Hoffman, Lubbock, and Mike Paine, Levelland, were ushers. Tim Tremaine served as ring-bearer and candles were lighted by David Stewart and Alan Gover, brother of the groom. Mrs. Robert Byle was matron of honor. She wore a floor length sleeveless dress of antique gold brocade designed with a portrait neckline. The empire waistline was encircled with a moss green velvet ribbon tied in a bow with long streamers. Her shoes were tied to match and she carried a cascade bouquet of gold miniature mums trimmed with gold and moss green velvet leaves, tied with loops of green velvet ribbon. Bridesmaids were Linda Wiseman, sister of the bride, and Kathryn Gover, sister of the groom. They were dressed identically to the matron of honor.

Tori Tremaine was flower girl. She chose a floor-length antique gold pea de soie dress designed with brief sleeves and portrait neckline. She carried a white lace basket trimmed with moss green velvet ribbon and leaves and filled with white rose petals.

The bride was attired in a floor-length gown of white pea de soie designed with a portrait neckline. Re-embroidered Alecon lace motifs were applied on the sleeveless empire bodice and the A-line skirt. A formal redingote fastened at the front of the waistline with a bow. The elbow-length Kubuki sleeves were heavily applied with re-embroidered Alecon lace motifs encrusted with pearls.

Soft pleats at the back of the coat formed a chapel-length train. Her headpiece was a caplet of pea de soie petals edged with pearls and accented by a bow holding a tiered veil of imported silk illusion.

The bride carried a cathedral bouquet of white Butterfly roses, stephanotis and camellia foliage accented with white lace leaves and satin ribbon atop a white Bible. For something old, she wore a 54-year-old wedding ring belonging to her maternal grandmother, new was her wedding gown; borrowed was a handkerchief belonging to her mother; and blue was her garter. She carried pennants in her

Ralph Odom Will Miss Tarr, Mr. Sharum Speak to Baptists

Ralph Odom, missionary who spent three years in India, will speak on the book, "Beneath the Himalayas" at a luncheon meeting at the First Baptist Church here, Tuesday.

Members of the Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist Church ask members of other area churches to bring salads for the noon luncheon and attend the program which will follow.

Elrita Fern Tarr and Robert Byfield Sharum were united in marriage in the West Camp Baptist Church Nov. 6. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Tarr and Mr. and Mrs. John Sharum.

The mid-afternoon, double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Raymond A. Quick, a former pastor of the church and close friend of the couple. Rene's Walser provided appropriate nuptial selections proceeding the ceremony and also played the processional and recessional.

Ushers for the ceremony were Rocky Sharum, brother of the groom, Dean Crume and Spencer Smith, close friends of the couple.

Gary Blain, a friend of the groom, served as best man.

The bride was given in marriage by her father in a floor-length lavender brocade dress, designed with a round neckline, long sleeves which came to petal points at the wrists, and an empire waistline accented by a bow. The detachable train was fastened to the dress at the shoulders.

Her elbow length veil of white lace was held in place by a crown of white seed pearls. She carried an arrangement of white carnations atop a white Bible.

Following tradition, the bride wore and borrowed an amethyst ring belonging to the groom's grandmother; new was her dress, and blue was a garter. For luck she carried in her shoes, pennies minted in the year of her birth and that of the groom.

Maid of honor, Becky Taylor, also wore an ankle-length dress of lavender brocade, styled similarly to that of the bride. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations encircling a single lavender flower.

a little BIG NOW

We all get a thrill out of seeing our children put on our hats or shoes. Obviously they don't fit now, but some day he, or she will grow to fit them. At the same time imagine that they are trying on our lives. Would they fit? ... or do you live the type of life that you would want them to grow to. Live a life of worship of the Lord.

"Thou wilt show me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny. The truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Tech Yule Ceremony Set: Campus Colorful

Texas Tech, its buildings gaily decked with thousands of glittering lights, officially inaugurates the Christmas season at 7 p. m. Dec. 6 with the eight annual Carol of Lights program in the Science Quadrangle.

More than 17,000 lights will outline campus buildings and the campus radio station tower during the month-long observance. There will be one addition to this year's lighting plan. Shabby around the Memorial Circle will be outlined by the multi-colored lights for the first time.

The colorful ceremony will feature the music of six re-idence hall choirs, the Tech choir, a brass band and group carol singing. As an added attraction, modern dancers from Tech's Women's Physical Education Department will perform under the direction of Mrs. Susan Aker. The dancers will perform on the roofs of the walkways along the Chemistry and Social Science buildings. Gene Kenney will direct the Tech Choir.

The theme of this year's program will be "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men." The Tech Women's Residence Council sponsors the project.

Proceeding the activities, a dinner will be given in the Gates and Wall Hall Cafeteria for special guests, university officials and members and officers of the Women's Residence Council.

Sandy Harris, a Corsicana senior and chairman of the Women's Residence Council, will serve as mistress of ceremonies for the program.

An open house and reception will be given in the Tech Union following the ceremony. For the first time members of Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity, will lead a torchlight parade from the Quadrangle to the Union where entertainment will be presented by the Phi Mu Alpha Choir.

Thousands of visitors are expected for the observance, which will be climaxed by the turning off of all campus lights and the simultaneous turning on of the more than 17,000 red, yellow and white lights outlining campus buildings.

The Christmas scene will continue to unfold at dusk each evening through December as photostatic cells connected to the lighting system automatically turn on the display.

The greetings from the Christmas Lights throughout the years have extended far beyond the Tech campus. Wire service photos have carried views of the lights to all parts of the nation. Several magazines have featured the presentation on their Christmas covers. Numerous photographers and artists have found them an inspirational means of portraying the Christmas season.

Tech maintenance crews will work about three weeks in advance of the ceremony uncrating and electrical systems and placing thousands of lights on building facings. The project is financed through private donations.

The observance began in 1959, when the Administration Building and Chemistry and Science buildings and the L.B. Public, private and parochial schools which are participating in the 1967 Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow. The program is sponsored by General Mills, Inc.

on an expense-paid educational tour of historical shrines in Washington, D. C. and Colonial Williamsburg. The trip will culminate with a dinner at which the 1967 Betty Crocker All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow and her runners-up will be announced.

Judging for national honors is on the basis of the original test scores plus personal observation and interviews during the tour. The program is the only national scholarship competition exclusively for high school senior girls.

General Mills, Inc., launched the program in 1954 to emphasize the importance of homemaking as a career. The Betty Crocker Search is on the approved list of national contests and activities of the National Association of Secondary-School Principals, Science Research Associates, Chicago, prepares the test and also has charge of scoring and judging.

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to express our deepest appreciation for the food, flowers, and prayers and expressions of sympathy shown us during our recent bereavement.

Mrs. Dewey Rush, Jr., children and other relatives.

LETTER TO SANTA

Dear Santa, I want a ROCK'em SOK'EM Robots, and some new clothes and a football suit with a football with it.

Love, Timm Bliss

P.S. I want some surprises in my stocking.

Sharum...

The groom's mother wore a brown plaid dress with brown accessories and chise pink carnations for her corsage. The reception was held in the home of the bride's parents with members of the wedding party and families of the couple in attendance. Punch was served with the wedding cake, which was topped with lavender trim and white by a bride and groom figurine.

The new Mrs. Sharum wore a blue skirt with inverted pleats and a matching long sleeved jacket for a wedding trip to Greenville. Complementing her attire was a corsage lifted from her bridal bouquet.

The couple are now at home in Farwell.

The bride is a sophomore at Farwell High School and plans to finish her school work by correspondence. The groom, a graduate of Farwell High School, is presently employed at Watt's Oil and Tire Company in Farwell.

throughout the south plains. Total cotton classed at the Lubbock, Lamesa and Brownfield elevators $15,000 at mid-week. The three offices have 202,000 unclassified samples on hand Wednesday. This brought the total classified and received to 817,000.

Trading increased considerably in the new crop cotton on the Lubbock market this week and prices remained steady.

Demand was strongest for cotton with micronaire of 3.5 and better and cotton in this micronaire category was selling at a greater premium over the loan. Cotton in other micronaire categories were generally selling at or near loan prices.

Strict Low Middling, Middling Light Spotted and Strict Low Middling Light Spotted were in greatest demand.

Cotton prices paid South Plains farmers, as reported by the Consumer and Marketing Service of the USDA, ranged from the loan to $2.00 per bale over the loan for white grades. Light Spotted grades were bringing from $1.00 to $4.50 per bale over the loan.

Average prices paid for predominant qualities in the 3.5 to 4.9 micronaire range were: Middling Light Spotted 29/32-18,30, Middling Light Spotted 31/32-19,75, Middling Light Spotted 31/32-19,25, Strict Low Middling Light Spotted 29/32-17,30, Strict Low Middling Light Spotted 15/16-17,80, Strict Low Middling Light Spotted 31/32-18,20, Middling Spotted 29/32-16,00, Middling Spotted 15/16-17,05 and Middling Spotted 31/32-17,05.

Cotton seed prices at gins ranged from $60 to $74 per ton.

Santa and the Giant Fighter

CHAPTER ONE
SANTA AND THE GIANT FIGHTER

ONCE UPON A time there lived a little boy named William Henry Christopher Preserve.

What a remarkable long name for a small boy to have. What was even more remarkable was the amount of disturbance he caused.

Boys are sometimes naughty, everyone knows, and they are expected to be a problem now and then. But it seemed that because this boy had three names, he got into as much trouble as three boys.

For one thing he did not like school. He day-dreamed. He talked out loud. He made strange faces. And he simply would not study his lessons.

"Two plus two and six minus four" he complained to his mother. "Who cares about all that? When I grow up I am going to be a giant killer. I don't have to study for that."

His mother told him there were no such things as giants but William Henry Christopher insisted there were. He said giants were bigger than mountains and meaner than witches.

and a whole army of soldiers could not strike a strong giant down.

"You know perfectly well that's all make-believe," said his mother.

"It is not make-believe I myself have seen lots of giants"

That was another worrisome thing about the boy. He told stories, because of course, he hadn't really seen lots of giants. Not even one. If he had why hadn't anyone else seen one? But he pretended he had and if you pretend something hard enough it's practically the same thing as true.

He made himself a sword out of two pieces of wood from an old orange crate. This was to fight giants with, he said. He was always talking about the giant fights he expected to have. It was very tiresome.

Often while eating dinner or getting ready for this bath he would tell stories about giants he had seen. His parents were sick of these stories. They no longer listened. They hoped if they didn't listen he would stop pretending.

Then one day in school the class was having a spelling lesson. The teacher wrote CAT in big letters on the blackboard. While her back was turned William Henry Christopher stood up and announced that he would have a giant who had followed him all the way to the classroom.

"And he's probably hiding in the cloak room this very minute"

This was very upsetting to the class and naturally the teacher complained to the boy's parents.

That night the boy's father spoke very sternly. It was near Christmas and the father said, "You stop this talk about giants. Santa Claus isn't coming to your house this year."

William Henry Christopher said, "Father, have you ever seen Santa Claus?"

"Of course not," said the father, lighting his pipe. "But if you don't believe yourself he'll not leave anything in your stocking, you'll see."

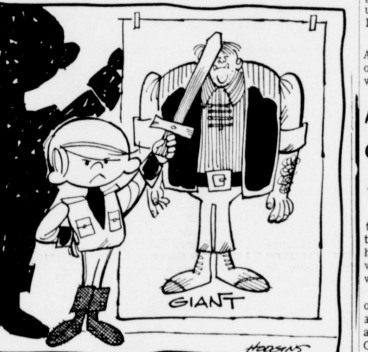

"But," said the boy, "if there's a Santa Claus why can't there be giants?"

"Because I say so!" retorted the father, crossing and he spilled his pipe all over the rug.

"But there are!" cried the boy. "I know because--"

His father got to his feet and shouted, "Go to bed! No supper for you tonight!"

Convention Topics Give Insight on Military Dead

"A bodiless funeral is like a baptism without the baby, a wedding without the bride, or a birthday celebration without the birthday child."

That is what Howard C. Reather, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Executive Secretary of the National Funeral Directors Association told NFD's 85th annual convention held recently at Miami Beach, regarding memorial services.

Most men of most cultures of most countries view their dead, Reather stated, and as they do they confirm the reality and finality of death. "People want and need to confront the deaths of relatives and friends in a dignified, solemn and respected manner and you have helped them do so," Reather asserted.

That is why funeral directors must continue to offer personal service to meet the mental and physical needs, demands and desires of the bereaved, if funeral service as we know it today is to progress, Reather declared.

This means, he added, that funeral directors must emphasize the real values of the funeral, and that facilities, equipment and burial merchandise must be relegated to secondary roles.

Reather, quoted Dr. William M. Lamers of San Francisco to point up how psychiatry looks at the importance of the funeral:

"The funeral can't guarantee emotional well being in the future. But it provides the beginning - a setting within which the survivors begin to work through their reactions to loss. If the funeral does this, it is successful."

In another convention address Thomas W. Toy, Dayton, Ohio, civilian head of the Air Force Mortuary Program, stated that our American dead in Viet Nam were being returned to the United States within three to six months from the date on which went to his room and got into bed without taking off his clothes.

"I'm going to run away, he thought. I'll show them. They'll be sorry."

But it was really too cold and too dark and he was too tired to run away just then. He pulled the covers over his head and went to sleep. At least he thought he was asleep but he couldn't have been because very clearly he heard a tap-tap-tap at the closet door and a high pitched voice from inside the closet cried out, "Hey, you! Open the door!"

William Henry Christopher jumped out of bed. It was a giant he thought wildly. He snatched up his sword and threw open the closet door.

ing to grow its educational standards must not be increased and periodically evaluated to assure their continued adequacy.

Schoen declared that with greater public understanding of the values of the funeral, funeral directors will require more education in the years ahead to better serve the living. And after they have completed their formal training, funeral directors will have to keep abreast of all pertinent studies and research in the fields of death, grief and bereavement to effectively deal with the public's ever expanding interest in these subjects, he insisted.

Another convention highlight was the report of the NFD's Committee on International Relations which outlined the proposed simplified rules for international transportation of the dead recently approved by the Pan American Sanitary Conference following recommendation by NFD's Committee Chairman Edward C. Johnson, Chicago, Illinois said it was directed by the Conference that these rules be submitted to the World Health Organization which headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland for its consideration and adoption.

The National Funeral Directors Association is an affiliation of 49 state associations and the District of Columbia, which in turn are made up of district and county groups. Its current membership is over 14,000. NFD is the largest association of funeral directors in the United States, and its members annually conduct more than 75% of all the funeral services held in America.
