Oil Rich Nations Threaten To Tie Prices to Inflation

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (UPI) — The oil-producing nations opened a major policy-making meeting today with a threat to tie oil prices to world inflation or to stop quoting these prices in dollars.

Gabon President Albert-Bernard Bongo keynoted the meeting of ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by accusing the west of undermining of African singers and drummers to open the first meeting that the cartel has held here. It would be possible to decide the pegging of petroleum prices and to post our prices in a suitable unit of accounting," Bongo said.

OPEC's new wealth through inflation and a falling dollar. Gabon is one of OPEC's newest and smallest members and this palm-shaded West African capital put on a rhythmic, hand-clapping show

The ministers from the 13 OPEC nations who applauded Bongo's speech knew that he referred to two proposals before the meeting. —A plan to stop quoting oil prices in U.S. dollars and use instead the Special Drawing Right, an artificial currency backed by 16 major currencies. The immediate effect of such a move would be a slight increase — about 30 cents per barrel — in oil prices.

Pampa Officials Keep Gift Money Out of Budget

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff
Since the beginning of the federal government's Revenue Sharing windfall in 1972, Pampa city officials have steered clear of channeling the "gift money" into the annual budget for operating expenses.

City Manager Mack Wofford says that principle still is being kept in mind as the city prepares its operating budget for fiscal 1975-76.

First reports from department heads on their needs for the coming year, which starts Oct. 1, are due in the office of the city personnel director Milton Saltzman Wednesday.

Revenue sharing money totaling $629,113 received by Pampa has been spent only for capital outlay and items such as fire trucks and equipment needed by various city departments. The possible exception to that was $75,000 for street maintenance and $80,000 for replacement of sewer lines in the current year's budget.

The city does not put revenue sharing cash into operating funds such as salaries or other items that have to be replenished year after year. That has been due to the possibility revenue sharing money could be cut off at any time.

Instead, city fathers invest it in capital outlay items and maintain a balance of revenue sharing cash to be used for that purpose in the future — and for that purpose only.

The current balance in the city's special revenue sharing fund is already allocated for use in water line replacements, according to S.M. Chittenden, Pampa's finance director.

"We are using the money for that and for seal-coating streets," Chittenden said. He added that none of the revenue sharing funds go into the city's operating budget.

He said that is because the city manager and city commissioners take a dim view of putting revenue sharing money into operating funds that could be cut off in the future.

In other words, he indicated, the City does not want to be caught with its "finances down."

Although, because of inflation and recession, many cities across the nation have been forced into operating deficits, Pampa so far has been able to balance its budget fairly well.

As for the continuation of revenue sharing funds, The Daily Bond Buyer, a publication regarded as a responsible authority on municipal bonds, reports in its most recent issue that Revenue Sharing seems certain to continue — but with changes.

Reports The Bond Buyer. Obviously, inflation which affects governments possibly in more devastating ways than it does individuals or private companies, who enjoy much greater flexibility in earnings, spending and saving than do governments, is the primary villain today.

This is because, while local government revenue from taxes and other sources shrinks their expenditures, chiefly in the form of support and relief programs for their economically oppressed citizens, increase by leaps and bounds.

That, essentially, is what was pointed out by City Manager Mack Wofford in an article in Sunday's Pampa News in which he detailed what the city has been facing in the past ten years in way of increased costs for operating various city departments — costs that have climbed all the way from 35 to 100 per cent.

All of these factors, city officials say, necessarily must be taken into consideration as department heads submit their budgets for the coming year.

Pampa also is preparing to call an election when city commissioners meet Tuesday to cover the city's share of costs in construction of a $14 million sewage treatment plant.

These measures would be capable of largely protecting the development of our countries against the running inflation of the Western economies," Bongo said.

The Gabonese leader's speech seemed to set the stage for an OPEC attempt either to circumvent the price freeze now or arrange for new price hikes in September.

The need to protect OPEC's funds from inflation and the dollar's problems dominated most conversations here.

The oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were scheduled to begin a three-day meeting in this palm-shaded West African capital today to consider ways to insure their petrodollars.

Uproar Continues Over CIA Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five months after President Ford asked Vice President Nelson Rockefeller to head an investigation into U.S. intelligence agencies, the uproar over the final product is almost as loud as the one that created the probe.

Ford will hold a nationally televised news conference at 7:30 p.m. EDT tonight and he was expected to announce he will release the 350-page Rockefeller commission report but withhold from the public an accompanying report on allegations the Central Intelligence Agency was involved in plots to assassinate foreign leaders.

White House sources said

Ford will turn over the commission's findings on the assassination question to the Senate committee investigating the CIA, headed by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Ford got the report Friday. Despite an earlier statement from Rockefeller it would be released to the public Sunday, the White House decided to keep it under wraps, not saying if or when it would be released.

But Ford aides said during the weekend it would be released, but without the sensitive material on alleged CIA plots to kill foreign leaders, which the panel did not complete.

Refugees Find Jobs Tight

United Press International
The Vietnamese are job hunting in the tough and tight American marketplace.

And for the war refugees who sought peace for 30 years, the new search in a new homeland is not easy.

Recession unemployment has hit a 34-year high, with 8.5 million Americans out of work. Still, Leonard Chapman Jr., commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said refugees will not take away jobs from U.S. citizens.

So far, 27,600 refugees have been released from the camps into the U.S. mainland.

The total number of refugees and the number who will be competing for jobs will be a small number when it is looked at in the proper perspective," Chapman said. Many of these are professional people — doctors, technicians and businessmen.

He said that of the expected 140,000 refugees, 60 per cent are children and only about 3,000 are heads of families who will be looking for jobs.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. of California said he will ask President Ford this week to provide a job for an American for every job found for a refugee. It is called the "Jobs for Americans Plan" and would cost the federal government $350 million.

The Vietnamese refugees will not be the recipients of one dime of the job development money," said Robert Gnaizda of the plan to be submitted to the President's Advisory Committee on Refugees. They will have to compete in the marketplace.

Those Vietnamese already competing will take just about any job.

Lam Quang Thi, 44, a former South Vietnamese army general, has a degree in French philosophy and a black belt in karate. He is staying with his sister-in-law in a small apartment over her Vietnamese-American cafe in San Francisco. The general's wife helps out in the restaurant.

What does an unemployed three-star general do? "Anything I can," he said. "However, at the present time I do not know what to do. When I arrived here, my wife and I had only $1,200. I now have about $100 in my pocket. I never had any great amount of money. I spent all my life in the military.

Pham Van Phuc, 45, his wife and 10 children are staying at the International Bible College in San Antonio, Tex. The children range in age from 2 to 26. The two oldest sons have accounting degrees and speak English and they work at $2.25 an hour in a furniture factory.

"It is very hard work," said the father.

The oldest daughter babysat one day. But she cannot do it," the father said. "The children are so bad — their behavior." He has been luckier. He began work Monday in a supermarket.

"I don't know yet what I'll be doing," Phuc said. "What they pay I don't know yet. It will be from 10 to 10 I'll accept any kind of job they offer."

"Little by little, step by step, I'll find a better one," he said. "I'm worried about our future life."

HEW May Investigate Caballero Resignation

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
The Department of Health, Education and Welfare will probably be asked to investigate West Texas State University Action in regard to Dr. Emilio Caballero's position as head of the art department — a post he has held for the past 27 years.

Dr. Caballero's resignation, which he contends was forced, was accepted by the board in a 5-2 vote Feb. 26.

George Whittenburg, Amarillo attorney representing Dr. Caballero, said today that he will wait for the Texas attorney general ruling on the issue unless the board tries to move his client out or name a successor.

Whittenburg in discussing his client's position at this time. Several Pampa residents have signed a petition requesting that regents reconsider acceptance of Dr. Caballero's resignation.

Mrs. David Gantz of 2132 Mary Ellen said she personally obtained 50 signatures from this city supporting Caballero.

"I do not think he voluntarily submitted his resignation," she said. "I personally thought he was one of the best art teachers WTSU has ever had, and the best I have ever studied under."

Dr. Caballero was the featured speaker for the Pampa Fine Arts Club 1975 banquet recently. He was introduced by Dr. Cal Lang who said Pampa had always felt very warmly toward Caballero.

The speaker commented that he was touched with Pampa's loyalty to him.

Whittenburg said this morning that the issue has been hard on Dr. Caballero's health, and added that he has been having chest pains.

If this adversely affects his health, we will be in court," Whittenburg said.

He explained that two members of the regents board "just want to sweep the matter under the rug without consideration."

"But we have withdrawn the resignation and will not relinquish the position," Whittenburg stated emphatically.

Mrs. Robert A. Johnson of Pampa, one of the organizers of the group who is supporting Dr. Caballero, was not available for comment today.

While many signed petitions locally asking reconsideration of Dr. Caballero's position, some Pampa residents were some of the opinion that the matter should be left to the board.

"I am sure they (the regents) know what they are doing and the matter should be left to them," said a Pampa resident who declined to be named

Winning Banjo Picker

J.A. "Slick" Robertson, 73, of Amarillo, tied for first place Saturday at a banjo picking contest in Borger, held in conjunction with the annual fish fry. Robertson's banjo is an American Double Eagle made in about 1912, he said. It is valued at several thousand dollars.

Dueling Banjos

Slick Picked At Borger Meet

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff
Anything J.A. "Slick" Robertson can whistle he can play on his banjo.

Robertson, 73, of Amarillo has been playing music for 68 years and he has played everything from medicine shows to dances to accompanying many known singers.

Slick, who tied for first place

Saturday at the banjo pickers contest in Borger, said that over the years he has driven nearly a million miles on his Panhandle of Texas to play the banjo for folks.

Robertson currently picks on Friday and Saturday nights at Shakey's on East Amarillo Blvd. in Amarillo.

His banjo is an American Double Eagle made about 1912 he said, and valued at several thousand dollars.

"I bought it in 1936 for $555," he said. "And I could have bought any new car in town for that then."

Robertson said he has played with Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, and the Andrews Sisters made their debut with me.

He said that while he never worked regular with Bob Wills, "I did sit in with him. Oh yeah, I played with Jimmie Rodgers in Memphis, Tex. in 1929. Boy he was a great one. Remember that All Around the Water Tank?"

That was the same year that Slick played with Dr. Lee's Medicine Show.

I joined him at Elk City and we went down into the Rio Grande Valley and played all winter," Robertson recalled.

"We rode in a big car with a tent in the back to sleep in. When we'd get into a town, he'd lease lumber to build a stage."

Asked if the medicine he helped Dr. Lee sell was any good, Slick said, "It'd just make your bowels move in about 30 minutes, is all. He just colored some water and put some salts in it. It cost him about 9 cents a bottle and he'd sell it for $1 a bottle."

Before the contest Saturday, Slick reminisced about another trip he made to Borger back in 1926.

"Me and fiddler come to Borger from over at Altus. We were supposed to play over here but some guy rolled a head across the sidewalk in front of us — over a pool game, mind ya — so we went on back to Altus."

Back in those days, Slick remembered, "We had to do what you call buskin around. We'd go in a cafe and sit down and play and maybe make enough to pay for our meal."

While he has had some hard times in the past, "I've just had a good life," Robertson said. "I've swamilled, I've pipelined, I've painted, I was a cook, I've pulled over 1400 pounds of bolts in a day."

More recently he played for three seasons at the amphitheatre in Palo Duro Canyon with the production, Texas.

I learned ever bit of everything I ever played," he said. "I guess I'm the only one that knows all three parts to Under the Double Eagle."

Slick's is a four-string banjo with much elaborate handcarving. It is a solid well-made instrument that weighs about 18 pounds.

The secret to playing the banjo well is not secret at all, according to Slick.

"You've gotta have good pick work and know your strings," he said.

Several pickers at the contest made it obvious that they know their strings. Each played two numbers and had 10 minutes in which to perform.

Following the playing, the judges couldn't come to a decision. They requested four pickers to play again — Slick, Ray Chancellor, Mike Casey and Edwin Maxwell — all from Amarillo.

Both Slick and Chancellor played four string instruments. Casey played an original number he called Prairie Schooner, as one of his first round numbers. Maxwell played Opus 36 by Bach (that's right) which the judges requested he repeat for his second round number.

It appeared to rattle him a bit. "That's hardly fair is it?" he asked the announcer.

Back in those days, Slick remembered, "We had to do what you call buskin around. We'd go in a cafe and sit down and play and maybe make enough to pay for our meal."

While he has had some hard times in the past, "I've just had a good life," Robertson said. "I've swamilled, I've pipelined, I've painted, I was a cook, I've pulled over 1400 pounds of bolts in a day."

"We'll play anything you want the announcer said. He did play a different selection."

Following the second round, the judges still couldn't come to a decision and requested yet another number from the four finalists.

Chancellor played "Waitin' on the Robert E. Lee" without announcing the title, showing the strain of the unexpected judges' request for additional playing.

Robertson played "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," and looked and picked as though he could go on for hours.

Casey played "Cripple Creek" on his five string banjo, almost identical to the instrument played by Maxwell, owing to the judges' request of the previous round, Maxwell repeated Opus 36.

The judges conferred, then requested yet another number from Chancellor and Robertson.

Chancellor played "Swanee" and Slick said, "I'm going to play a song I'm really proud of, it changed my life. What A Friend We Have in Jesus."

Finally the judges announced the winners of the contest.

Maxwell won the $25 fourth prize. Casey won the $50 third prize.

And here's where we run into trouble, the judge announcing the results said.

They couldn't decide on a winner. Slick and Chancellor were declared tied and were left with the problem of how to split the $75 second prize and the grand prize of a $50 banjo.

Ms. Saxe Pleads Guilty After Plea Bargaining

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — In a surprise move minutes before trial, revolutionary Susan E. Saxe on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List for five years, changed her plea to guilty today to charges stemming from a 1970 bank robbery here.

The plea was entered by the former Brandeis University honor student in exchange for a 10-year prison term under an agreement reached with the government.

Ms. Saxe, 26, of Albany, N.Y. also pleaded guilty in connection with the looting of a National Guard armory in Newbury Port, Mass. three weeks after the local holiday which occurred on Sept. 1, 1970.

In the plea bargained agreement with the government, Ms. Saxe would be sentenced in the case to a two-year prison term to run concurrently with the 10-year term for the robbery here.

BURNS' ADVICE GOOD

Economy is curing self

Both the optimist and the pessimist can fill his plate at the smorgasbord of economic statistics these days. For good news on inflation, the month-to-month increases in the consumer price index so far in 1975 have been much lower than the monthly jumps we saw in 1974. For bad news, food prices which fell during February and March started up again in April, and the Department of Agriculture believes they will continue to rise during the summer.

There is good news and bad news from the recession front, too. Unemployment was higher again at the last reading. Automobile sales did not perform as well this spring as the industry had hoped. On the other hand, the market for cars is strong enough that for the first time since last November all 58 of the auto and truck plants in the United States of America were operating. If Detroit can be regarded as a bellwether of the economy, that is definitely a plus for the future.

There is a time-lag between the onset of economic trends and the gathering of statistics which tell us what is happening, so it is hard to draw firm conclusions about the future in the midst of the current signs and omens. However, Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns makes sense when he suggests it is time to "sit back for a little while" and let things take their course. He is convinced the economy is in a "turning zone," with inflation unwinding and with recession wheeling around toward recovery.

This has led Mr. Burns to chart a "moderate course" in Federal Reserve monetary policies, allowing for sufficient growth in the money supply to handle the demands of a recovering economy but not so great as to stoke the fires of inflation once again. It will take some careful navigating by the Federal Reserve to stay on such a course, and a lot depends on whether the rest of the government is willing to follow suit.

Congress has just about emptied its arsenal of antirecession ideas. It has cut taxes, created thousands of public jobs and laid down programs to stimulate the housing industry. If Congress does not "sit back for a while" and let these stimulants go to work it may find that its zeal for fighting recession is delivering us into the hands of that other enemy, inflation. In fact, it may already have done so with its anticipated budget deficit of some $70 billion next year.

Mr. Burns is being criticized for "standing pat" when unemployment remains so high and the onset of recovery is still not clearly visible. However, he has shown in the past that he has the courage of his convictions. What is needed now in Congress is the political courage to concede that the government has done as much to stimulate the economy as it is prudent for the government to do.

Philippine gambit

The remarks made recently by Philippine leaders about reducing their reliance upon the United States are calculated to open a discussion about the role of our military bases there.

What has happened in Southeast Asia may not confirm the now-discredited "domino theory" but it plainly indicates that the independent governments in that region are asserting their right to change their foreign policy to reflect changing circumstances.

Thailand, which borders on Cambodia and Laos, has demanded that all American troops be removed. The Philippines, separated from Vietnam by more than 500 miles of the South China Sea and linked to the United States by close ties since the Spanish-American War, have reacted less urgently.

Still, a reappraisal is inevitable and is in order on both sides of the relationship between the U.S. and the Philippines.

There may be good reason on both sides to make it more of an arm's-length relationship. But the Philippine bases are more important than ever to our forward defense line in the Western Pacific. And the U.S. military presence may be more important than ever to the national security of the Philippines.

A realistic reappraisal should strengthen the relationship by bringing it closer to present-day realities.

'HE'S BEGINNING TO FEEL BETTER...'

INCLUDING REAGAN Ford Ready for All Comers

By ROBERTS ALLEN WASHINGTON, June 8 — President Ford will definitely run in New Hampshire's first-of-the-crop primary, and is ready and willing to take on any and all Republican challengers.

Particularly these include former Gov. Ronald Reagan and Sen. Charles Percy, Ill., who has been taking sky pot-shots at the President.

That's the authoritative word from the inner group of political planners formulating the President's campaign strategy and organization. As one long close to him put it:

The President is not going out of his way looking for a fight, but he's not ducking either. He doesn't feel that a sharp primary contest will hurt either him or the party. He's prepared to take on all comers — without exception. If anyone in the Republican party thinks he has anything better to offer voters than the President's leadership and record, let him lay it on the line.

The President has complete confidence in the outcome of such a showdown — in New Hampshire and other primaries we are deliberating.

With the President's approval, two campaign organizations are in process of being up by the planning group: (1) political, (2) fund raising — both separate from each other and the Republican National Committee.

Veteran Expert Former national chairman Raymond Bliss is foremost among those likely to head the campaign committee.

The Ohioan is 67, but is one of the most skilled and experienced political administrators and technicians in the country, and is so regarded by the President.

Also being considered by the planners is advising the campaign headquarters be in the Middle West — not in Washington.

With the headquarters of virtually all the numerous Democratic presidential scramblers located in Washington, and the capital itself overwhelmingly Democratic, the planners think that for geographic, psychological and other reasons it would be desirable that management of the President's electioneering operations be centered elsewhere.

Most probable location is Chicago.

In preparation for the President's impending increased political activity, there was a little-noticed important shuffle in the White House staff.

Jerry H. Jones, staff secretary, was given a new job of supervising appointments, scheduling and advance operations. James Conner, cabinet secretary, was shifted to Jones's office. Both will function under chief of staff Donald Rumsfeld.

Already seven full-time staffers work on preparations for presidential trips; assisting them are several score part-time helpers about the country.

They key inside planning group consists of former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, who as a fellow Congressman played a major role in the President's elevation to House Republican leader; chief of staff Donald Rumsfeld; Robert Hartman, one-time Washington correspondent and, with Laird, the President's closest adviser; former White House congressional liaison specialist Bryce Harlow; former Rep. John Byrnes, R.-Wis.; ex-Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton.

Name-Calling Rep. Bella Abzug, bulky New York radical, rancorously strident woman libber, incessant dove (except when it comes to Israel), and militant gadfly on virtually everything, is furious.

She has been publicly accused of "sexism," and is raging mad on two grounds:

"Sexism" is one of her favorite derogatory castigations; and it was hung on her by a male fellow New York left-winger — Rep. Edward Koch.

Also adding to Mrs. Abzug's fuming indignation is the reason behind Koch's searing brand. He is vigorously espousing the senatorial candidacy of Miss Bess Myerson, former New York City commissioner of consumer affairs — personally and politically far more attractive than Mrs. Abzug.

Mrs. Abzug vehemently aspires to the seat held by Conservative Republican Sen. James Buckley, and truculently feels she has priority claim to run against him.

With characteristic outspokenness, she spells out just why she feels that way: "I am a proven legislator, a proven fighter, and a proven leader. I have demonstrated all these qualities as a member of Congress, and the record proves it."

(That's what she says! But it's almost axiomatic in the House that an amendment or proposal by Mrs. Abzug is certain of rejection, most of the time overwhelmingly. When the multi-billion-dollar military procurement bill was recently before the House, everything she sponsored was promptly and flatly junked.)

Basis of Rep. Koch's "sexism" blast at Mrs. Abzug was her condemnation of him for "pitting woman against woman."

While contending that she "admires" Miss Myerson, and that she had been a good consumer affairs champion, still Mrs. Abzug can't see her as a serious candidate against Buckley. She holds that she alone has what it takes to lick him.

Koch irreverently brushes that off as plain "sexism" — to Mrs. Abzug's fury.

"What it really is," she rages, "is sexism on his part. He is the sexist. He is pitting woman against woman and Democrat against Democrat. I'm the one who has proven qualifications to be Senator."

A dog robber in the oil business is a loyal aid who does unorthodox jobs for his boss and is often a master of "midnight requisition."

Question Box

QUESTION: Most members of Congress claim to be concerned about the high prices of food. If they are interested in protecting the consumer against high prices, how come they voted to put higher floors under prices of farm products? Are politicians really interested in protecting the consumer?

ANSWER: We long ago decided that the principal interest of most politicians is to increase their own power and influence. And the quickest way to do that is to win votes. Long ago, political figures learned that they could win votes and acquire prestige by doing what seems popular with the largest number of voters. If it were more popular to limit government to its legitimate function of protecting individual freedom only, politicians would take that stand. But apparently that is the least popular stand, even though we are convinced that would result in "the greatest good for the greatest number."

There is no question that legislation to establish such things as minimum prices for agricultural goods are of no benefit to consumers. But political figures apparently are convinced they can pull the wool over the eyes of enough people when they say they are helping keep small farmers in business by establishing floor prices under certain farm crops. Truth is that the subsidies of minimum prices nearly always benefit the "fat cats" and do little to help the small farmer, merchant or worker. A recent Brookings Institution study found that 7.1 per cent of all farms got 40.3 per cent of the subsidies, while the poorest 50.8 per cent of all farms got only 9.1 per cent of the subsidies. National Review reported:

So, the members of Congress will continue to vote subsidies such as minimum prices, tariffs, import restrictions, minimum wages, and immigration restrictions, all of which increase the prices of what consumers buy. They will continue to spend more than they take in, financing a large part of their excess spending by inflationary monetary policies.

further hitting all consumers. Then they will continue to wring their hands for the "poor consumer," and usually will attack the same big industries, the same corporate farmers, the same big labor unions they have promoted.

And they will create more consumer bureaus, like the Food and Drug Administration, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Aviation Authority, the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Interstate Commerce Commission, all of which further restrict the consumers' choice. And they — thus far — have fooled enough voters into believing they are being helped by these costly and wasteful bureaucracies.

If the politicians were truly interested in protecting the consumer, they would start paring back all of the multifarious political boondoggles that have made government the most costly part of living. But they won't do it unless they are convinced that such action would be politically helpful to the politicians.

Harlingen, Tex., was crowded with armed Texas Rangers and U. S. Customs and Immigration inspectors during the early part of this century, earning it the nickname, "six-shooter junction."

ALI BAN ASKED BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A congressman asked the Argentine government Monday to keep Muhammad Ali off the nation's radio and television, calling the world heavyweight boxing champion "unscrupulous and a circus spectacle."

Rep. Lisardo O. Nicolich, a Radical party leader, called Ali's latest bout against Ron Lyle last Friday "a pitiful show... very far from resembling a sports event."

"Why should we continue to sponsor with so much money a circus spectacle that does nothing more than favor the interests of unscrupulous people?"

He's Alive and Well And Collecting His Own Social Security

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I had the same problem "OUT IN THE BOONDOCKS" had. My husband deserted me, and I wanted to get married again but couldn't locate my husband to divorce him. On the advice of my lawyer, I put an ad in the newspaper asking my husband to please contact me. It ran for three weeks without results, so I went ahead, divorced him and married the other man.

It's been 12 years now and I still haven't heard from my "ex" and neither has his family. However, when I wanted to declare him legally dead so my children could collect his Social Security and I could collect his life insurance, I was advised that my "ex" was still paying into his Social Security, which meant he is still alive!

But (get this!) the law is protecting that bum by refusing to let me know the location from which he is paying. How about that?

DESERTED

DEAR DESERTED: Social Security data are confidential. The law is very democratic. Even "bums" have rights.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 75-year-old widow in excellent health, am very independent and am enjoying a full life. Two years ago, my brother lost his wife and came to make his home with me. He is 86. We are of the Jewish faith.

A cousin of ours invited my brother to the first seder (a religious dinner) at her home. However, she did not invite me! I know why, too. She has a new boyfriend and was afraid that if he saw me, he might like me more than her. (This cousin is 70 and is also a widow.)

I felt bad because this might be the last seder I could spend with my brother.

Do you think it was very nice of our cousin to invite my brother and not me? (He didn't want to go without me, but I insisted!)

STAYED HOME

DEAR STAYED: No. But on the brighter side, it's a compliment that at age 75, your charm and personality poses a threat to a woman five years your junior.

DEAR ABBY: This may sound crazy, but I need your advice. I am divorced and the mother of a sweet, 4-year-old boy named Ronnie.

We were at home recently when an armed intruder confronted us. The man was gentle and he quickly put Ronnie at ease. He wanted only money and promised not to hurt us. We both explained to Ronnie that Mommy would have to be tied up for a while. He seemed to understand. After I was bound and gagged, Ronnie was told to turn the TV on and when the program was over (about 20 minutes) he could help me or call for help. I was taken to another room and the robber left.

Abby, my son spent the next THREE HOURS watching TV while I was bound and utterly helpless. I finally managed, through the gag, to tell him to go next door for help.

Could Ronnie possibly have some hostility toward me? Should I see a psychologist? Please answer.

TIED UP

DEAR TIED: From your description of the way the intruder put Ronnie at ease and "explained" that you would have to be tied up for a while, the boy obviously felt no urgency about getting help or setting you free. Psychologist? Hostility? What for? The kid didn't get the picture—except on TV.

Former CIA Man Calls Agency President's Secret Weapon Could Nationalize Oil

ATLANTA (UPI) — A former high-level Central Intelligence Agency official says the CIA is "a secret weapon of the presidency" that poses a danger to the American people unless controlled by Congress.

Victor Marchetti, whose CIA posts included special assistant to the executive director, said in an interview Sunday the CIA "is not concerned with defending democracy but with doing the bidding of the big power elements in our society."

"That is why they overthrow democratic governments and prop up dictators all over the world."

'Arms Deal' Threatens Belgium's Government

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The decision to grant the United States the "arms deal of the century" is threatening to undermine Belgium's coalition government.

General Dynamics F16 fighter-bombers, paving the way for what military analysts described as the "arms deal of the century."

He said "it's now or never for congressional control of the agency."

A small party in Prime Minister Leo Tindemans' cabinet opposed the decision Sunday and raised the possibility of a pullout from the four-party coalition.

Belgium joined three other European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — Norway, Denmark and Holland — in choosing the American plane over the French Mirage F1E.

Marchetti is appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court a lower court ruling which upheld CIA deletions from the book.

Mainly About People

Weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Coffin, 522 Red Deer, were Mrs. Herbert White and son Davis, Mrs. Herschel Harvey and daughter and Anna all of Pasasena, Tex. and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moreland, Alan and Brenda, Wichita, Kan. They attended the wedding of their brother, Steven McDaniel and Jan Gray.

The four countries, acting in consortium, will buy 334 of the planes for $2 billion. The U.S. Air Force has ordered 650 and purchases from other countries are expected to raise the production total to as high as 1,500.

Marchetti, here to address the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia, held a number of CIA posts during his 14 years with the agency. He resigned in 1969 and co-authored a book on the CIA which became the subject of a legal battle.

Meat Prices To Continue to Rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retail meat prices probably will keep rising through mid-year and are likely to remain above year-ago levels through the end of 1975, the Agriculture Department says.

The report said prices began rising in April after declining for several months because of a seasonal drop in beef production and further, sharper cuts in pork production.

Marchetti, here to address the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia, held a number of CIA posts during his 14 years with the agency. He resigned in 1969 and co-authored a book on the CIA which became the subject of a legal battle.

Teams Rescue Wreck Victim

WARNGAU, West Germany (UPI) — Rescue teams using acetylene torches cut through the wreckage of two passenger trains today in a search for victims trapped in twisted metal and shattered glass.

Officials said they were having difficulty in establishing the exact number of persons killed because mangled bodies were still being found in the wreckage. Police revised the death toll to 36 with 86 injured, lower than the death toll of 42 they had reported earlier.

Many of the injured were reported in critical condition. One hundred policemen, 250 firemen, 200 first aid workers and more than 20 doctors worked through the night with the help of giant electric lights.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Gov. Edwin Edwards has warned a congressional committee to be wary of provisions of a proposed resolution dealing with offshore oil operations because they could result in nationalization of the oil industry.

Edwards, the first witness to testify Saturday before the Ad Hoc House Select Committee on the Outer Continental Shelf, said he disagreed with the resolution's plan to study whether the federal government should assume authority to explore offshore oil fields, a task now in the hands of private oil companies.

Edwards said drilling must take place off the Atlantic Coast to assure the country of an adequate supply of oil. A vice president of Shell Oil Co. echoed the governor's comments about Atlantic drilling.

"These people on the East Coast must realize that they must share in this activity just as you in the Gulf of Mexico have shared in this activity," Shell spokesman Gene Loveland said.

Govs Seek Wallace Pledge

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — George Wallace has a short message for all Democrats who want him to pledge his party loyalty before they consider him for the 1976 presidential nomination: You go first.

The Alabama governor arrived at the 67th annual National Governors Conference Sunday to find himself and his son-to-be announced candidacy political Topic A among his colleagues.

His neighbor, Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, had suggested on a national television program that Wallace, while strong in early presidential polls, was not getting support from national Democratic leaders because he had not pledged to stay in the party and support its nominee if his campaign failed.

Wallace turned the Askew proposal around: "I wonder if all these leaders want to announce they want to support me if I'm the nominee. I don't know why I'm required to take a loyalty oath until they do."

As to the statement by the chairman of the conference, Democratic Gov. Calvin Rampton of Utah, that he could not support Wallace because the Alabamian's health was not up to the rigors of the presidency or vice presidency, the wheelchair-bound governor said, "If I decide to run, it's because I feel well enough to run."

Wallace did not say he would abide by the party's decision next year on a nominee and in fact added: "There are a lot of people I can't support either."

He said the Democrats who have been attacking him recently were old opponents but his appeal was going to be to the "people" anyway.

Wallace's appeal to the public was apparent as he was rolled into the lobby of the convention hotel a few blocks from New Orleans' historic French Quarter.

One woman rushed up to him and kissed the governor, and his arrival attracted far more attention than any of the other state chief executives.

The talk of Wallace's candidacy took center stage despite the hope of Rampton and other conference leaders that they could keep the spotlight on the meeting's theme: state responsibility to county and local governments.

In his opening speech, Rampton told his colleagues the states "have failed fully to meet our responsibility to the units of local government and they have turned to the federal government in desperation."

Rampton said recent events have "undermined the faith of the people in those who hold public office," and warned the situation could be remedied "only by improving our instruments of government."

Prison Escape Dramatic But Short for Escapee

JACKSON, Mich. (UPI) — The walls are gray and musty and give Southern Michigan Prison its title as the world's largest walled prison. Dale Otto Remling watched them closely.

He had waited two years. He could wait a few minutes longer.

A red handkerchief lay in the middle of a 60 by 75-foot courtyard of green grass. It was Friday, 11 a.m.

Suddenly, a low flying helicopter appeared above the 30 foot walls.

The black-and-white chopper, manned by a Vietnam veteran with a knife at his throat, jerked toward the red target, overshot it, then settled down smoothly.

Dale Otto Remling, the smiling conman, stepped aboard.

Thirty hours later — still smiling — Remling was back, this time through the front door.

His alleged confederates in the daring escape were in disarray — some in jail, others on the run.

"I didn't have any intentions of hurting anyone," said Remling.

But Remling, a slippery 47-year-old conman who has spent much of the last 20 years in various prisons on bad checks charges, had a lot else on his mind. Like getting out.

Apparently he didn't mind even conning two men and three women already charged in the escape.

Police Sunday arrested Donald Lee Hill, and were still looking for Morris Eugene Colosky, 21, and Gertrude Woodbury.

"We think that was the reason for their involvement," Detective Timothy Ryan of the Jackson State Police post said during the weekend. "Remling probably said he had a lot of money stashed somewhere and promised to share it with them."

Remling, however, had little chance to do any negotiating. Despite the precise timing of his dramatic escape, they failed to reckon with helicopter pilot Richard Jackson.

Jackson, 29, a pilot for a helicopter firm, had been forced by Remling's accomplice to pick up the inmate and whisk him to a field north of the prison where three cars waited. They tossed a chemical into Jackson's face, apparently hoping to disable him long enough to make good their escape.

But 90 seconds later, the combat-tested pilot recovered, notified police, then followed one of the retreating automobiles.

Rattled by the pilot's actions, Remling abandoned one of the getaway cars and fled on foot, spending a night in the open, police theorize.

"Remling said he spent an awful night hiding here and there and with mosquitos biting the hell out of him," said one officer.

He was arrested Saturday in a bar in the tiny town of Leslie, just north of the prison. Police said he had walked into the town to go shopping.

"I didn't shed any tears," Remling said about the arrest. "After all, he (a plainclothes officer) had the cannon on me. I didn't have it on him."

Union Demonstration Broken Up by Police

HIDALGO, Tex. (UPI) — Police today broke up a demonstration by United Farm Workers members who blocked the international bridge to Reynoso, Mexico, stopping Mexican laborers from working in Texas melon fields.

UFW state leader Tony Orendain said the international bridge was the only place demonstrators could stop the workers from entering the state.

Six Hidalgo County deputies stood about 200 yards from the demonstrators, then assistant city marshal Roberto Garza told Orendain the blockade was illegal and asked the demonstrators to leave.

About 100 persons walked off the bridge and back through U.S. Customs stations. Moments later thundershowers scattered the crowd.

"As long as they stay on the other side of that marker, I could care less," a Mexican immigration officer said. "If they come over here, it is very illegal and they would be arrested."

The UFW demonstrators blocked the bridge just hours before two district judges in the county seat of Edinburg were scheduled to announce whether they will allow union elections at three Hidalgo County farms.

"I don't like the judges," Orendain said.

Orendain said he doesn't think the union's chances of success are good.

Judge Magus Smith of 93rd District Court and 26th District Court Judge Joe Eves held a hearing Friday on suits by farm owners and operators against the UFW and countersuits filed by the union for the elections.

Vets, Stamp Recipients May Wait for Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 20 million poverty-stricken Americans will be unable to buy food stamps by the end of this week unless the House and Senate can agree on how much money to spend on improving railroad beds.

Agreement is expected this week, but the Veterans Administration has already run out of money and has been forced to stop issuing GI Bill educational benefits because of the congressional impasse on one item in a catch-all $15 billion supplemental appropriations bill.

"We expect to run out of money at the end of the week," said George Hall, budget officer for the Agriculture Department's Food and Nutrition Service.

If the money runs out, he said, "We'll have to get out telegrams to all the states telling them to stop issuing stamps."

Asked what recipients would do for money to buy food, Hall said, "There really isn't much they can do." He said the federal lunch program in 90,000 schools also would run out of money, but it wouldn't be as big a problem because most schools are closing for the summer.

The House today takes up for the fourth time the question of how much should be spent on the rail bed improvements. It is now proposing $5 million compared to $175 million insisted on by the Senate.

Until the bill is enacted, up to 500,000 veterans may not get their educational benefits checks on schedule and the food stamp program will run out of money by the end of this week.

The supplemental bill, first acted upon by the House April 14, provides money for agencies to continue program through the fiscal year ending June 30.

Trip, Court of Awards Highlights GS Activities

Bouncing down the derrick slide, cooling off in the wet log flume ride, screaming on the Big Bend, and stroking down a "dangerous" river in a canoe were all a part of Girl Scout Troop 90's trip to Six Flags this past weekend.

In addition to a day at Six Flags, the troop and sponsors visited the Museum of Science and History where they attended the Noble Planetarium show "A Spectroscopic Symphony" with pictures and commentary in addition to the starlit program.

They visited the Kimbell Art Museum which houses a multimillion-dollar art collection from prehistoric to Picasso in an innovative building designed where natural light is diffused evenly across the galleries through specially designed filters. Indoor fountains, patios, and a terraced waterfall are part of the landscaping of the building, opened in 1972.

On the morning of departure for Pampa, the Troop toured the Fort Worth Zoological Park which contains an aquarium, America's largest herpetarium (reptile exhibit), a tropical aviary with rain forest display, African animals, and children's zoo.

The eleven troop members, six adult sponsors and three guests making the trip were Terri Alexander, Cheryl Birkes, Melinda Collinsworth, Sherri Courtney, Connie Maness, Kathy Morgan, Kelli Snider, Amy Turner, Roxanne Willis, Kim Hagerman and Suzanne Walsh. Mr. and Mrs. Archie Maness, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Collinsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Birkes, Kathy Collinsworth, Raymond Maness and Dean Birkes.

The Six Flags trip climaxed a year of activities, which include collecting beer cans and aluminum for recycling and operating the depository at 19th and Hobart. The Scouts planted daffodils in the Santa Fe Park, prepared test materials for the Presbyterian Satellite School, and earned the Challenge of the Environment in assisting at the Girl Scout En Action fair. They recycled items using aluminum cans for art plaques, fabric scraps for flowers and spoons for holders, newspapers for decorated wrapping paper, and composed an exhibit on bicycle safety, earning a blue ribbon at the En Action fair.

The troop members painted denim shirts for their Own Troop's art badge. They were awarded a first place District I, Texas State Garden Clubs award for their conservation work the previous year, and the money was used to buy a plant at the Santa Fe (Scout) Park.

Troop members had a work day at Camp Cibola and spent a weekend at Boiling Springs, Oklahoma, at the fall Cadette Camporee. For a biennial project they are taping interviews with Pampa pioneers.

The Troop was awarded a Blue Ribbon Troop Award by Quivira Girl Scout Council at the recent Court of Awards and picnic held for parents.

Six members awarded their First Class Scout pins were Misses Alexander, Birkes, Courtney, Maness, Morgan, and Willis. These girls completed their four challenges and six proficiency badges to win First Class standing.

Earning the Social Dependability Challenges and World Heritage badges were Misses Collinsworth, Snider, and Turner. Presenting the awards were Mrs. Birkes, troop leader, and Mrs. Maness, assistant leader.

By ERMA BOMBECK

This year, there are 60 million Americans who are planting vegetable gardens.

Have you any idea what it means to have 60 million tillers of the soil running loose? I'll give it to you straight. It means there will have to be at least 210 million tillers to eat the stuff at harvest time, and frankly, I don't think we have the population to handle it.

At last count, there were 80 million adult non-gardeners in this country. Of this amount, 32 million are allergic to tomatoes and their faces break out after eating the first bushel. Twenty-eight million are still eating bread and butter pickles they canned in 1958 and of the remaining 20 million, 18 million had their teeth turn green during July and August.

To begin with, the harvest of a home garden never occurs when the gardener is at home. He is always on vacation. I don't know how this phenomenon occurs, but I have known tillers who have hung around all summer waiting for their labors to bear fruit. They leave a few hours for a dental appointment only to return and realize they've missed the harvest.

Another phenomenon is that you can share your garden with friends. After the first 500 pounds of bib lettuce a gardener has no friends. Several years ago, my husband and I visualized an orchard in our backyard. One pear tree seemed inadequate, so we planted 12 of them. One day, our daughter came running into the house feverish with excitement. "Our first pear," she exclaimed. We put the pear on the mantel and hooked up a three-colored revolving light used on the tree at Christmas and watched it glisten.

Several weeks later, when we had tired of pear delight, pear salad, pear pie, pear cake, pears over cereal, pear casserole, pear omelets, pear pizza and pear sandwiches, we started to make house calls with them.

By the fifth week of harvest, I began to feel like a Welcome Wagon lady on the moon. As I approached a house with a shopping bag of pears, I would observe cars in the driveway, doors wide open, radios blaring, draperies moving, but no visible signs of human life.

When the next year rolled around, our daughter once again announced, "Our first pear." We clapped a hand over her mouth and sent her to her room.

I know the work involved in gardening and it is gratifying that the American people are intent on solving the food problem, but the real heroes of the war against inflation have to be the non-gardeners who smile and burp. "Why, everyone can use another bushel of radishes!"

Skellytown TOPS

American Researchers Detect Birth Defects

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Researchers already are obtaining valuable information from a new program which analyzes one in every three births in the United States to detect patterns of birth defects, a national birth defects conference was told Tuesday.

The Birth Defects Monitoring Program, begun in December at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., uses computers to sift through information from one million births each year, one-third of the U.S. total. It can detect geographical, racial and other kinds of trends in 200 defect types.

A team of doctors from the Center described early results to medical researchers attending the eighth annual Birth Defects Conference sponsored by the National Foundation-March of Dimes and the University of Kansas Medical Center. The conference ends today with discussions of advances in diagnosis and therapy, and growth problems.

Dr. Larry D. Edmonds said in the last four years reports of a particular kind of congenital heart defect have doubled, and statistics also show that blacks are twice as likely as whites to have the defect, known as patent ductus arteriosus.

In babies who have the defect, a shunt which kept their blood from flowing from the heart to the lungs while in the womb fails to stop operating at birth so their blood is not properly oxygenated by breathing.

Another researcher from the center, Dr. Godfrey P. Oakley, told the conference of drawbacks in the monitoring program — that incidences of some defects are so low it is hard to detect their cause, and that any statistical survey only raises questions and doesn't solve problems.

"The process of untangling human teratogens (birth defect-causing agents) is a complex one" that requires the energies of many people in many fields, Oakley said.

Recollections

As a part of a bicentennial effort, the Governor's Committee on Aging is seeking elderly people who have interesting stories to tell about growing up in Texas. They might be persons who are knowledgeable in old-time skills or handicrafts — a blacksmith, glassblower, or bootmaker. Or they might be persons who were involved in building Texas' industries — oil, cotton, cattle, etc. The only requirements are that they are at least 60 years old and grew up in Texas. Feature stories will be written on these people. If you know of someone you'd like to nominate, let me know and we'll send you an information blank.

Flammability
One of the "hottest" issues in the furniture, textile and design business today relates to the proposed Consumer Product Safety Commission's flammability standards.

Congress recently handed the Consumer Product Safety Commission the job of reducing carpet, mattress and upholstery fires — but withheld jurisdiction over the major ignition source, the cigarette.

According to industry reports, more than 124,000 fires in which upholstery was the first source of ignition were recorded during the 12 months ending April, 1974. Cigarettes were cited as the cause of more than 356,000 residential and personal fires.

Over the past few years, the furniture industry has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in research in an unsuccessful attempt to find a satisfactory answer to practical cigarette-proof upholstered furniture.

If approved, the Consumer Product Safety Commission's proposed standards for making household items impervious to carelessly handled cigarettes will result in far-reaching changes for both the furniture industry and consumers.

Industry leaders predict that if proposed standards become effective, costs on less expensive furniture will go up as high as 25 per cent by 1976, while costs on expensive furniture will increase about 10 per cent.

They also predict that about 70 per cent of the upholstery fabrics in use today including all prints, velvets and cotton fabrics, will be eliminated from the market because they can't pass cigarette-proof flammability standards.

Industry spokesmen are quick to point out that the million of pieces of furniture already in American homes will have no protection under the standards, while furniture purchased by the 65 per cent of the non-smoking consumers will be required to be cigarette-proof.

More than half the fatalities in cigarette fires happen to people over 65 years old who are under the influence of prescribed drugs, alcohol, or are too infirm to move.

Death is usually caused, not by flame, but by smoke inhalation, causing anoxia and carbon monoxide poisoning.

Washington Watch

Pampa News
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Here are some recent news items of interest to Texas.
OLD MARES — When Rep. Bob Poage, D - Waco, was trying — unsuccessfully — to ward off a challenge to his chairmanship of the House Agriculture Committee earlier this year, there were repeated rumors that the 38 - year veteran had promised not to run for reelection if he could retain his chairmanship for two more years.

Whether the Democratic lawmaker will seek a 20th term is apparently still an open question. One aide cautions that Poage is "about as stubborn as any old mare about to be put out to pasture," and just may well give it "one last hurrah."

One legislator whose congressional intentions are not quite so ambiguous is State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale, who is clearly interested in Poage's seat. Kubiak has already hired a press secretary with congressional experience, Rusty Todd, who is a former press aide to Rep. Jake Pickle, D - Austin. And there is also talk that former Lt. Governor Ben Barnes, now living in exile in Brownwood, may be thirsting for another political watering trough. Brownwood is in Poage's district.

Two other Texas House members are also thinking about running for higher office. Rep. Charles Wilson, D - Lufkin, and Barbara Jordan, D - Houston, are both looking ahead to 1978 with apparent interest. That's when GOP Sen. John Tower is up for reelection.

GIMME SHELTER — His presidential candidacy now four months young, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen plods on, week after week, keeping a speaking schedule that takes him from the Senate to as many as four affairs a day.
For instance, on May 22,

Bentsen was in Norfolk, Virginia, whirled his way from a press conference to fundraising receptions and off again the next day to Tennessee.
During the same week, Bentsen met with the editorial boards of the New York Times and the U.S. News & World Report magazine to discuss his White House ambitions.
GRUDGING PRAISE — A columnist who covers the federal bureaucracy for a Washington newspaper has praised a Texas congressman for his careful scrutiny of government benefits.

Mike Causey, who writes a daily Federal Diary column for The Washington Post, said Rep. Richard White, D - El Paso, "has earned the grudging praise of federal union leaders for his no-nonsense handling" of the House Subcommittee on Retirement and Employee Benefits, which he chairs.
"White takes a conservative, hard - line cost approach to the question of new federal fringe benefits, but even the lobbyists who oppose him say he is running the subcommittee sessions fairly, and well."

BAN THOSE CHEMICALS — Liberal Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D - Houston, has introduced legislation to prohibit the sale and use of chemicals posing an "unreasonable" risk to human health and the environment.

Police Stress Bicycle Safety

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
The number of bicycles in use has doubled over the past 20 years — as have the fatal accidents — and Pampa is no exception.
Patrolman P.W. Maynard of the Pampa Police Department estimated 4,000 bicycles are in operation within the city limits.
During the month of May, two bicyclists were injured.
"That was two too many," reported the officer. During 1974, one city cyclist was killed, three injured and another bicycle accident resulted in extensive property damages.
The Pampa Police Department and the Pampa Jaycees will sponsor a safety class on June 21 for bicyclists of all ages. There will be no charge, and those who successfully complete the class will be awarded certificates.
The hours for the class will be announced later.
Officer Maynard said the most dangerous violation among cyclists is riding at night with improper lighting.

The cause of one major accident here is listed as a child's failure to see a stop sign — and he rode in front of an oncoming vehicle.
"The motorist couldn't stop," Maynard reported.
Police Department officers urge motorists to drive with caution throughout city streets since school is out, the number of bicycle riders is sure to increase.
Bicycle laws are the same as those set out of operators of motor vehicles — only cyclists are not required to take a drivers license test.
"But failure to abide by the laws could cost a life," the patrolman warned.
Parents are urged to see that their children's bicycles are properly maintained, and to teach the proper hand and arm signals for use on roadways.
Cyclists should wear clothing which can be easily seen.

Reflectors and reflector tape is needed — and all traffic rules should be obeyed.
Officers report that many parents send a child to grocery store on a bicycle which is not equipped with a basket.
"Sacks can interfere with operation of a bicycle," said Maynard.
National statistics show that 820 cyclists are killed annually in collisions between motor vehicles and bikes.
Over 50 per cent occur at intersections; 70 per cent in daylight; and 80 per cent injured or killed in traffic accidents are violating a traffic law at the time of the accident.
Patrolman Maynard emphasized that cyclists must obey the rules of the road.
"Watch out for sudden opening of a parked car door and for cars pulling out of driveways and alleys," he advised. "And don't ride double, perform stunts on streets nor ride a bicycle that's too big for you."

Officer Maynard said a dozen "dos" in the rules of the road that cyclists should observe include: "Keep to the right, go with traffic, ride single file if with a group, obey all traffic signals and signs, use less traveled roads when possible; walk the bike across busy streets, keep both hands on handle bars, except when signaling, give pedestrians the right of way, ride in a straight line, keep eyes straight ahead, keep behind moving cars, and at night wear light clothes."
The don'ts, he said include, "don't ride in rain, snow or fog and don't pass on hills or curves."

Cyclists have their bikes checked regularly and make sure tires are in good condition.
Under helpful hints on how to choose a bicycle, Maynard advised purchasers to straddle crossbar and determine if his feet are flat on the ground. A light bicycle is recommended for training or club riding; and a standard or middleweight for rough riding.
Equipment should include headlight, bell or horn, reflector, chain guard, coaster brakes, pump, mirror, carriers and kickstands.

Wheels Of Safety

Bicycle safety within the city is of prime concern, especially during summer months with an estimated 4,000 bicycles on city streets. Shelly Matlock and Ricky Lee Davis seek help from Pampa Police Department P.W. Maynard for tire inspection.

Governors Agree That Ford Failed

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—By a wide margin, the nation's governors agree that President Ford and Congress have failed to develop an adequate energy program. Most would prefer fuel supply allocations to price increases.
In response to a UPI poll on the eve of the national Governors Conference, only Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken said he feels a program is being developed. A few others give Ford credit for trying, and some see slight progress.

Winners of the national grand prizes in the same contest are Linda Wiggins, 11, Clovis, New Mex.; Howard Ireland, 9, Indianantic, Fla.; Michelle Baker, 8, Fairborn, Ohio; Amy Engelbert, 12, New Sharon, Iowa; Merri Moser, 8, Guttenberg, Iowa; Patty Doherty, 9, Wauwatosa, Wis.; and Kelley Kimble, 12, Glen Allen, Va. Each will receive a set of 12 Inflatable Puffer Kites, each with 300 feet of string.
All the winners will receive their prizes by mail.

But of the 37 governors participating in the poll, 26 flatly replied "no" when asked whether the government has developed, or is in the process of developing, a workable program.
Their replies indicate as much disagreement over what should be done as exists in the administration and Congress. Most, however, indicate they favor allocation over Ford's increase of tariffs on imported oil or congressional moves to tax gasoline—both of which would increase fuel prices.
The governors would accept allocation—many of them reluctantly—but rationing of gas was termed a measure of "last resort" and a "gruesome prospect."
One of the harshest criticisms came from New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey, a newly elected Democrat, who said, "We haven't had a national energy program in our history and we don't have one now."
"We are not going to get one as long as the oil companies are calling the shots. That's what's happening in Washington now."

Calls US Bridges Unsafe

WASHINGTON (UPI)—One of every seven bridges in the United States is in hazardous condition. The Road Information Program said Saturday.
TRIP, an association of companies in the road construction and materials industry, said federal, state and local government reports show that at least 80,000 bridges cannot safely accommodate current traffic patterns.
The bridge problems are especially acute in New Mexico and Nevada, where 35 per cent are considered deficient, the report said. More than 25 per cent of the bridges in Louisiana, Vermont and West Virginia are also in unsafe condition.
TRIP said.
"It said most of the hazardous bridges were built at least 40 years ago and have not been widened or reinforced to handle the heavier and wider cars and trucks now using them.

"We're in a whole new era of motor transportation," TRIP President Donald B. Stabler said in releasing the report. "In order to make our roads safe for the motoring public, bridge repair and replacement should be the first order of business."
But Stabler and Barry Polski of Carl Byoir and Associates, who prepared the study, said state and local governments have not been able to produce matching funds necessary to get federal money for bridge improvements.
Accurate information is difficult to obtain on the safety of the nation's 40,000 bridges, but the Federal Highway Administration estimates at least 80,000 are hazardous. Polski believes the actual number is about three times higher.

He said projections of the FHA national bridge inspection program indicate that 79,429 bridges have major structural deficiencies. 100,610 have minor structural problems and another 103,684 "are rapidly becoming functionally obsolete."
While the federal government provides up to 90 per cent of construction costs for highways, only 75 per cent is available for bridges.
Occasionally, a bridge will collapse under the weight of traffic, such as the Silver Bridge over the Ohio River that killed 46 persons in 1967. Earlier this year a bridge collapse in Sileom, N.C., killed four and injured 16.

Hub's Booterie

Hub's Booterie, 119 W. Kingsmill, began in Pampa in 1957 in an 800 square foot building; the only employees were Hub and Pat Homer. In 1974 the business moved to its existing location which contains a little more than twice the space. The store now also employs Geneva Adkins, who has been with the store for three years, and Mindy Park, a member of the Distributive Education Clubs of America.
When Homer began working in a department store, he avoided working in the shoe department.
"The day came where I either had to work in that department or not work at all, said Homer. "It's funny how the department I liked the least turned out to be the one I liked the most."
In 1946 Homer opened a shoe store in Tucumcari, N.M., where he met his wife. In 1950 they moved to Hereford and opened another shoe store. When he came to Pampa he opened his own shoe store.
"Pampa is a good town, Homer said. "I've been in several towns where the town depended on one line of business such as farming." He explained that when the farming was good the people had money to spend and when it was bad they had to save. "It's different in Pampa because of so many different areas of work," he said.
"Business has been steady across the months," he added. "Our business really jumped when he moved to the larger location."
Homer also said that he started out by carrying only three lines of shoes and now has about nine. "We carry only shoes for teens and ladies."
"The customers here are nice to work for." "Pampa has nice churches, nice clubs, and friendly people," Homer said. He is a member of St. Vincents Catholic Church. He has three children: Patrick, Paula and Pam. The Homers feel Pampa is a good place to grow up.
