Cash Takes a Shine To Shoes and Strings

By THOM MARSHALL Pampa News Staff

Leonard Cash, owners of Leonard's Shine Parlor at 118 W. Foster, started his business on a shoestring nine years ago. He saved that shoestring. And he has been saving them ever since.

Cash's shoelace collection is now the size of a basketball and just about as round. But the solid mass of strings is quite a bit heavier than an air-filled basketball.

There are round laces, flat laces, brown laces, black laces, red, white, and checked laces in the collection.

When Cash sells a new pair to one of his customers, he'll take the worn tatters or maybe just the good one of the two, and add to his collection.

A lot of loafers come into Leonard's and many Pampan wear boots or other footwear with no strings attached. But Cash says lace styles still are quite popular.

So the collection continues to grow. "I don't know how many strings are in there," Cash said. "I haven't saved all of them."

Business has been booming at the shine parlor, with all the rain and mud around Pampa this summer.

"I get a lot more business in bad weather," Cash said. He gets 65 cents for shining shoes and 75 cents for boots.

"But I'll probably have to go up a little before long," he said. "I'm trying to hold the price, but if material keeps going up, I'm going to have to follow suit."

The secrets of getting a good shine, according to Cash, are:

"Cleaning your shoes real good, burning the polish in, and using a good polish."

Cash said that he can "make the rag talk" if he wants to, but he hasn't used a shine rag in years. He says the electric buffing machines he has are better and faster.

"They have 1140 rpm's," he said. "You're not about to get that much rubbing by hand. You'd have to rub for 30 minutes."

Business at Leonard's isn't limited to shoes and boots.

"I get a little of everything," Cash said. "Lady's purses, traveling cases — I cleaned a pair of chaps the other day."

Cash offers more than the shining service in his shop. He has paper back books, magazines, shoe strings, polish, key chains, watch bands, and even motor repair manuals.

Colonel Calls Butterfield CIA Contact in White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alexander M. Butterfield, who disclosed existence of the secret White House tapes two years ago and thus speeded the downfall of Richard M. Nixon, was a CIA "contact officer" when he was on the White House staff, a retired Air Force colonel said today.

Fletcher Prouty, who said he served as liaison between the Air Force and the Central Intelligence Agency for nine years, said he learned that Butterfield was working with the CIA from E. Howard Hunt, a former CIA agent and one of the original Watergate defendants. Prouty said he "would doubt Nixon or anyone else really knew it."

Prouty, who was interviewed on both the CBS Morning News and NBC's Today Show, was asked if there is "any doubt in your mind that Alexander Butterfield was the man with CIA connections who went to the White House staff and his CIA connections persisted at the time he was on the White House staff?"

"No, I've never had any doubts about that," Prouty responded.

He said, however, he never talked with Butterfield directly in any context regarding the CIA.

Butterfield, a former Air Force colonel who resigned recently as head of the Federal Aviation Administration, was unavailable for comment. But Butterfield's wife emphatically denied her husband had any connection with the CIA.

On July 16, 1973, Butterfield told the Senate Watergate Committee of the tape system installed in the White House. It was that revelation that led to the fight over who could hear the tapes and eventually to Nixon's resignation as president.

The issue of CIA infiltration of the White House was first raised Wednesday when two members of the House Intelligence Committee said they had been told of secret evidence that the CIA had a long standing practice of "penetrating" the White House, other government agencies and the news media. They said one of the CIA operatives was a top-level aide to Nixon.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nosen and CIA Director William E. Colby both strongly denied the allegations Thursday.

Nessen told reporters that none of the CIA personnel currently assigned to the White House was working "in any hidden or undercover role and I have been told in the past there never has been."

Colby denounced the allegations as "outrageous and vicious nonsense."

Meanwhile a Senate panel investigating the CIA resumed its questioning of witnesses today while its House counterpart hastily called a hearing to probe allegations of CIA infiltration of the White House staff during the Nixon administration.

The select Senate Committee on Intelligence heard McGeorge Bundy, former national security adviser, during its early morning session and was scheduled to interview former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara later. The subject was assassination plots involving the Central Intelligence Agency.

The 10-member House Select Committee on Intelligence, which has been paralyzed for months by a dispute involving chairman Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., called a surprise hearing this morning to hear allegations of top-level White House infiltration by the CIA. It was the panel's first witness.

Retired Air Force Col. Fletcher Prouty, who said he served as liaison between the Air Force and the CIA for nine years, said today Alexander M. Butterfield was a CIA "contact officer" when he served as a key member of Richard M. Nixon's staff.

Butterfield, who recently resigned as head of the Federal Aviation Administration, was the man who disclosed the existence two years ago of the secret White House taping system.

Prouty said he learned of Butterfield's CIA connection from E. Howard Hunt, himself a former CIA agent and one of the original Watergate defendants.

The hearing before the House panel was ironic because the House Rules Committee Thursday recommended to the House that it abolish the committee and immediately form a new one.

One member of the Senate committee said Thursday that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro — a reported target of CIA

Sirica Reduces Sentences In Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, following a pattern he has set for major Watergate figures, today reduced the sentences of four Cuban-Americans involved in bugging Democratic party headquarters to time already served.

The order will mean the most to Watergate conspirator Bernard L. Barker, who had been faced with returning to prison for at least five more months.

The other three Cubans — Frank A. Burgos, Eugenio H. Martinez and Virgilio R. Gonzalez — have been on parole for more than a year after serving their sentences and so Sirica's order has the effect simply of erasing their probation.

The four men were arrested at Democratic party headquarters at Watergate on June 17, 1972 and pleaded guilty the following January to conspiracy, burglary, bugging and wiretapping.

The fifth man arrested with them, James W. McCord Jr., then security chief for President Nixon's re-election campaign, was convicted and sentenced to prison but was released May 29 this year on Sirica's order.

The other two men involved in the Watergate bugging — G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt, Jr. — are still in prison.

assassination attempts — be asked what he knew about the CIA.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, D-Ariz., a member of the Senate's Select Committee on Intelligence, suggested Thursday the panel question Castro either in Cuba or the United States.

"I believe the way to get to the heart of this matter is to go directly to the man who has allegedly been the target of a CIA plot," Goldwater said. "After we hear his story we can weigh it in light of all the information the Select Committee has received."

One committee source said: "How the hell could they ask Castro to come here?" But he sidestepped as "something else" the question whether the committee might send a mission to Cuba to talk to Castro.

Committee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, presided over closed hearings Thursday at which the witnesses included former Secretary of State Dean Rusk; Thomas Parrott, a former CIA official and a national security adviser to Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy; Richard Goodwin, Kennedy's speechwriter; and William Attwood, former ambassador to Guinea and Kenya and now president and publisher of Newsday, Long Island, N.Y.

Locals Beg Cut In Property Taxes

By ANNA BURCHELL Pampa News Staff

A Gray County farmer said this morning that taxes are so high he is thinking about selling out.

"I'm getting caught everywhere from the federal government on down," he told the Gray County Commissioner Court during its meeting as a board of equalization.

"You're not going to blame this court for what the federal government does?" Judge Don Cain asked him.

The farmer said he was not, but discussions among the court members a statement included that the "government is trying to run the price of grain down."

The court took no action on the farmer's request to reduce the assessment on property, but Cain assured him it would be studied.

The commissioners, despite requests from three business firm representatives to lower taxes voted to leave those assessments as they were. The requests were from International Business Machine Co., Levines and Zales Jewelers Downtown.

Assessed value of IBM is $93,950. The company asked that it be lowered to $31,300. The assessment covers IBM equipment leased to Cabot, Security Federal, Celanese, Tri State Data, Packerland, Bob Price for Congress and Pioneer Natural Gas.

"Does Bob Price still have his equipment?" asked Gray County Commissioner Don Hinton.

"According to the list, he does," replied Alicia Heil, deputy tax assessor collector in Jack Back's office.

R. J. Carroll, manager of IBM operations, said in a letter to the board of equalization that the company's opposition is with "respect to the highly excessive assessment of $93,950 in the 100 per cent value of $408,478 which in no way represents the true value of our leased equipment located with customers in Gray County."

Levine's assessed value is $29,160 and Zales Downtown is $20,100.

County assessments are 23 per cent of the market value.

Two homesteaders in the Jarvis addition registered complaints on tax increases. One was told that his would be lowered if he filed a 65 years of age exemption form. The court explained that a homesteader is entitled to that exemption if his wife is 65 and he isn't.

The form would reduce taxes from 95 cents per $100 of assessed value to 19 cents on the first $3000.

The amount of the total local rolls was not known today, but Judge Cain said the figures will be released as soon as they are available.

Schools Study Image In Community Survey

By THOM MARSHALL Pampa News Staff

At least one elderly woman in Pampa would take a class in belly dancing if one were offered through the community education program in the Pampa Public Schools.

That is what she told an interviewer working in the school - community survey of the Pampa Independent School District. The survey was conducted this week by Foundations in Educational Administration (FEA) of the University of Texas at Austin.

Results of the survey were presented to members of the PISD board of trustees at a meeting Thursday in the ICT classroom of the Area Vocational School Building. The report consisted of 62 pages and an appendix. After completing the survey Wednesday, team members and some local volunteers prepared several bound and trimmed copies of the survey report and the books were completed in time for the evening session of the board meeting.

Dr. Dan Long, superintendent of Pampa schools, said that the cost of the report to PISD will be about $1,500 — payment for room and board for the survey team. All other expenses, including transportation to and from Austin, were absorbed by FEA.

The Department of Educational Administration has conducted similar surveys every summer in Texas communities for the past 23 years. All surveys are public opinion polls.

The FEA members conduct the surveys in an effort to learn about the attitudes, feelings, and desires of the people of the school district about their schools.

A total of 359 interviews were conducted and 38 questions were asked.

Survey team members reported that cooperation generally was excellent from Pampan's contacted for the survey — about 1 in 20 every home.

"There were a couple of people who wanted no interviews and a couple of dogs who didn't want their owners interviewed," one member said. "And one lady who said I could interrupt her chicken feeding. So I followed her to the chicken pen and when I asked a question she felt strongly about, she would emphasize her answer by throwing a handful of grain at my feet."

The purpose of the survey, as explained in the survey report, is to give the administration "some additional insight as to the future needs of the school district with respect to facilities, vocational education, finances, and other selected aspects of the educational processes. The survey is part of a continuous effort to maintain good community relations."

Topics covered in the survey included demographic information, views on public relations, quality of education and local finance. Also included were some questions pertaining to the condition of school facilities.

One of the questions concerned how much people think the Pampa Public Schools pay a classroom teacher each year.

The analysis of the results included the following comment:

"Of those who did express an opinion, the range was wide — from below $5,000 to over over $20,000 category. The median estimate was in the $8,000 - $8,999 category, which is somewhat below the actual average salary in the district."

According to the analysis of results to a question concerning opinions about the amount of money being spent to educate children in the Pampa Public Schools, only 3 per cent of those interviewed believe that too much money is being spent on a Pampa school education. More than half of the respondents felt that an adequate amount of money is being spent. More than one-fourth felt that too little is being spent.

In replying to a question about feeling welcome when visiting Pampa's schools, 93 per cent of those who had not visited believed they would be welcomed if they chose to visit and 96 per cent of those who did visit felt welcome when visiting.

Editor's Note: Other results from the survey will be published in future editions of The News.

Business, Ford Agree On Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A number of major federal agencies which regulate American business agree with President Ford: the system need reform.

Talking it over with Ford at a White House meeting Thursday, they cited examples:

— It takes more than 40 licenses from federal agencies to build a power plant on the Eastern seaboard.

— It takes 8 to 10 years to build a nuclear power plant in the United States, twice as long as in Japan or Europe, because in part of heavy regulation.

— John Robson, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said in general "the gestation period for regulatory decisions is figuratively near the age of pyramids."

Nuclear Pact Hopeful

GENEVA (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said today their 11 hours of talks here improved chances for a new pact this year limiting nuclear weapons.

They were more cautious in their comments on the Middle East, with Kissinger meeting in Bonn Saturday with Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin. They limited themselves to saying that there had been a thorough exchange of views with "each side explaining its position."

Rabin himself cautioned in Bonn today against expecting any immediate breakthrough.

At a joint news conference before Kissinger flew to Bonn, Kissinger and Gromyko said their exchanges on the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks had been constructive and created optimism about a new agreement.

"Progress was made in narrowing the differences," Kissinger said. "We will work earnestly and with some optimism."

Kissinger said it would be premature to set a deadline but as a result of his talks with Gromyko "the prospects for agreement have improved."

Gromyko for his part said the talks about SALT were "very constructive."

The Soviet diplomat said he expected more meetings with Kissinger, both on SALT and the Middle East, but after the Geneva session Thursday night and today he wanted to emphasize "most strongly" that the entire Soviet leadership is determined to a line of detente in relations with America.

Both men said the SALT agreement under negotiation is to be based on guidelines laid down by the Vladivostok summit last November which would limit each side to 2,400 nuclear weapon delivery vehicles of which 1,320 may be missiles equipped with multiple warheads (MIRVs).

Problems facing SALT negotiators include verification, the new U.S. subsonic "Cruise" missile and the Soviet "Backfire B" nuclear bomber.

Gromyko was asked whether Moscow would permit on-site inspection as part of the so-called "threshold ban" on peaceful nuclear explosions above 150 kilotons.

"The Soviet Union believes that national means of verification are adequate, as is well known," he replied.

Kissinger and Gromyko met for seven hours Thursday at the Soviet diplomatic mission, the only such mission in Geneva which is surrounded by a barbed wire and spiked fence.

Today they met for four hours and 15 minutes in a hotel penthouse bar.

On the Middle East, it was chiefly a case of Kissinger briefing Gromyko on American progress toward arranging an Israeli-Egyptian interim peace settlement.

On disarmament, the American pressed the Russian for enough progress to make more likely the agreement on a treaty limiting strategic offensive nuclear weapons systems. Kissinger reported some progress on Thursday.

A senior U.S. official said the proposed Washington visit this fall by Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev depended to some extent on whether the treaty would be signed by him and President Ford.

Kissinger was flying to Bonn later today for talks with West German leaders tonight and a conference Saturday morning with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

A Kissinger-Gromyko communique was expected around 6 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

The two diplomats met seven hours Thursday night in the suburban Soviet mission, the only estate in this center of global peacemaking that is surrounded by a barbed wire and spiked fence.

Following diplomatic custom Kissinger and Gromyko today met at the American's headquarters, the 18th and top floor of the Intercontinental Hotel. Because only the Carnival Bar on the 18th floor was big enough, secure enough and air conditioned, Kissinger played host in the bar.

"With respect to SALT, we had extensive discussions, which will be continued Friday, and progress was made," Kissinger said on emerging at midnight with a smile on his face.

Weather

Continued mild temperatures and cloudy skies are forecast today through Saturday. The high will climb to the mid 80s today, dropping to the upper 60s tonight.

IT'S CONGRESS' RESPONSIBILITY

IRS requires policing

Disclosure that the Internal Revenue Service has been engaged in spying on the affairs of private citizens in the United States of America may be a blessing in disguise.

Thousands of Americans who have hang-ups about the methods and conducts of the IRS now have something to get their teeth into. Telephone taps, clandestine bugging and undetected recording of conversations all are clearly outside the legal purview of the federal tax-collecting agency. The IRS should be obliged to answer for all these repugnant acts, not just because they represent an invasion of the privacy which is the right of every citizen, but because they also constitute a misapplication of public funds.

The country was understandably outraged by news that the Central Intelligence Agency had spied on private citizens. There has been a rash of investigations of the CIA, some of which have departed widely from their original purpose. They undoubtedly have damaged our capability to amass the international intelligence we need for survival in a dog-eat-dog world.

As wicked and unpalatable as the CIA conduct was, however, it can at least be said that its illegal prying into domestic affairs was aimed at helping preserve our national security. The motive had something to do with the welfare and safety of the very people whose privacy was being invaded.

Not so with the IRS. Its spying was not aimed at protecting the national security in any remote sense. It was simply checking surreptitiously to see if taxpayers were telling all on their income tax returns.

The IRS has the authority to require taxpayers to document every statement they make on a tax return. Indeed, as many taxpayers know, the agency can be meticulous to the point of harassment in this auditing process. The agency has just assigned a formidable corps of auditors, economists and other experts to examine the books of 50 large corporations simply on the suspicion that they may have concealed illegal political contributions or pay-offs in foreign countries.

The purpose of the IRS investigative bureaucracy is to examine tax returns against the requirements of tax laws which often are so complex that the taxpayer cannot be sure whether he is obeying them or not. There is no basis in law, custom or equity for the IRS to be resorting to the tactics of espionage against citizens.

Congress is responsible for creating both the burden of intricate tax requirements which lies heavily on individuals, and businesses, and the burden on the public purse of supporting the big agency that collects taxes. If congressional committees are looking for some way to change, they should determine who was responsible for assigning IRS employees to illegal activities, who authorized public funds to be expended on them and how they were concealed from the light of day for so long.

Governing cost spiral

We don't dispute the contention of our federal lawmakers that their increasing office workload frequently distracts them from the pressing job of running the country.

But their solutions counter the professed goal of Congress to cut government expenditures and reduce the massive budget deficit that threatens to give new fuel to inflation.

The House recently voted to increase staff allowances for its members by $23,550 a year and to increase by 50 per cent the authorized number of paid trips home for representatives.

Now the Senate has approved a proposal giving each senator up to an additional $102,000 a year to hire additional aids. Present allowances for staff personnel range from a generous $392,298 for senators from the smallest state to $751,980 a year in the largest — California.

Even by the most conservative estimates, the congressional effort to reduce the distractions to legislative productivity bears a price tag upwards from $15 million a year.

The example set by House and Senate is inconsistent with their proclaimed drive for austerity.

Some people believed that the springwort plant was a magic key that could unlock doors and treasures.

FOR CORPORATIONS

Federal Chartering Planned

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
Forbes Magazine recently reported that Ralph Nader is planning a big drive for federal chartering of corporations. This isn't surprising, for a federal takeover of corporate chartering would offer a tremendous opportunity for political control of business.

At present, corporations are chartered by the states. Under plans being devised by the Naderites, every businessman would need a federal franchise to operate. Moreover, the proponents of federal chartering want the national franchises to be granted for very limited periods. A corporation, in order to get its charter renewed, would have to prove to federal bureaucrats that it was operating in what these officials deemed a socially responsible manner.

The drive to impose federal chartering on the free enterprise system has been building for several years.

In 1972, the whole proposition was spelled out in The Washington Post by Joel F. Henning, director of programs at the Adlai Stevenson Institute and a proponent of federal chartering. He said in that article that "the principle of rigorous external examination and supervision ought to be transferable to the corporate community." Among the demands voiced by Mr. Henning were that companies be required to disclose to customers, employees and the public all the facts regarding the organization's profitability.

Obviously, free enterprise would disappear under such a chartering system. A company wouldn't be allowed any private information regarding operations or objectives. The company's policies would be completely dictated by federal officials. We are a long way down the road to that situation, but federal chartering would be the introductory step to nationalization of private business.

The extent to which whole or partial nationalization has become a liberal goal is truly amazing. Consider, for example, the casual public reaction to such radical legislation as H.R. 212, the Lower Interest Rate Act of 1975.

According to a proponent of this legislation, Prof. Lester C. Thurow, the bill would "replace the current system of private credit allocation with a system of public credit allocation."

The Federal Reserve Board would be required to discourage credit for land investment, for example, "without well-defined plans for its useful development." Bureaucrats would decide what constituted "useful development."

Loan applications would not be judged on the basis of an applicant's integrity or ability to repay. Instead loans would go to those persons and organizations on a "national priority" list. Given the socialistic character of this bill, it is no wonder that Secretary of the Treasury William Simon has described it as a bill to establish "a national credit police state."

The truth is that all around us these days we see an open turning toward socialist goals and techniques. Thus the Washington Post, in an editorial on prices, states: "Straightforward income redistribution is infinitely better than trying to fiddle and distort the mechanisms for pricing each of the hundreds of commodities that are, to one degree or another, necessities to life." In other words, the Post is saying that socialism is infinitely better than the operation of the free market system.

Do the American people want socialism? Do they want regimented economy and the authoritarian society that results from such an economy? I don't believe they want any such thing, but they are allowing the country to drift toward socialism. They are tolerating new forms of political control such as federal chartering.

BATTIN' AROUND
Guns and Freedom

By C. R. BATTEN
"No people ever voted themselves out of slavery," according to the headline in the Aztec (New Mexico) Independent - Review. The article beneath the headline reported on an address made by Charles Smith on "The Gun Grab."

"In warning against gun control laws," reported the Review, "he pointed out that people can easily vote themselves into regimentation, slavery, but there is no known record in all of history of people ever voting themselves free. Stating his message another way he emphasized that the first step in the takeover by government of a people is to take away their firearms."

At some future time, in order to throw off tyrannical government, the people must conspire and fight against it, Smith believes. Without firearms, the people will have no defense.

The focus of present efforts is to restrict or prohibit the ownership of handguns. But Smith warned that if "they get power to take away the handguns today, tomorrow you will start hearing about how dangerous it is for people to own rifles."

The right of hunters to own rifles is important, the speaker acknowledged, but it has nothing to do with the basic issue. The basic issue, he explained, is individual freedom from government control. Government control leads the regimentation, which leads to slavery. "It does little good to take a good stand if you do so for the wrong reasons, because your opposition can destroy your arguments with no difficulty, was his warning," according to the report.

I agree with Smith that one step toward the control of the people by a despotic government is the confiscation of their weapons. But it is only on step, and perhaps not even a necessary one.

A more important step, and one that has been recognized by despots the world over, is to control the land, resources and other means of production by which people earn their living — to control the economy. The freedom of the individual to own firearms that Smith holds so dear lies in the right of the individual to own property and to use that property in order to earn his income and support his very life.

If individuals can be deprived by their government of the ownership of firearms (which many persons use in perfectly legitimate ways to support themselves), then the individual can also be deprived of the ownership and use of any other property.

If a despotic government decides to limit the ownership or the control of property of individuals, then that government has life or death control over its citizens, who have been enslaved.

"Property is not an egoistic possession, but rather a possession which should be employed and developed in a human and social sense," wrote one person of the world renowned three or four decades ago.

"Land, we must insist, cannot be made an object for speculation," wrote one of his contemporaries. "Private property can be only that which a man has gained for himself, has won through his work. A natural product is not private property. Land is thus no object for bargaining. Further, there must be a reform in our law. Our present law regards only the rights of the individual. It does not regard the protection of the race, the protection of the community of people."

Compare those statements with a viewpoint frequently heard today as justification for federal control of land and other resources: "In the past, land use decisions were made too often by those whose interests were selfish, short-termed and private. In the future — in the face of these immense pressures on our limited land resource — these decisions must be long-termed and public."

The first statement was made by Benito Mussolini, the second by Adolph Hitler. The third was made by a leading proponent of land use controls, Senator Henry Jackson.

Mom Snowed Under By Son's Gift-giving Girl Friend

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I knew Lt. Col. John W. Kellogg, the Catholic who proudly wore a Star of David, a symbol of the Jewish faith, in honor of three Jewish comrades in arms.

John was a bomber navigator in WW II. After a bombing run over the Ploesti oil fields in Roumania, his plane was badly shot up. While the plane limped back to the Air Force base in Italy, the men tossed out everything that was loose to lighten the plane's load until nothing remained but the shell. It looked as though they weren't going to make it. When the Italian coastline was spotted, the captain ordered all his men to prepare to parachute to earth.

John bailed out and landed in a plowed field where an Italian farmer and his son were working. John was so grateful to be on terra firma that he dropped to his knees and began a prayer of thanksgiving.

The two Italians, having witnessed the scene, came over, doffed their caps, bowed their heads and also began to pray — loudly.

After a few moments, John looked up and said, "F'chrisakes, shut up! I can't hear my own prayers!" The John I knew could be both reverent and irreverent.

ROY J. ARNSTON: LAGUNA BEACH

DEAR ROY: Thanks for the memories!

DEAR ABBY: How do I go about telling the girl whom our son dates to please stop buying our family expensive gifts for every occasion? We do not want them because we can't afford to reciprocate.

She has a very large family, and because she gave everyone in our family she ever said hello to a very expensive Christmas gift last year, my son felt that he had to do the same for her family. (He is still paying for them.) For St. Valentine's Day she gave ME a present and also my husband. On Mother's Day, another one, and she's not even engaged to our son. She even found out when our birthdays were (mine and my husband's, the other children's, even the grandparents!) and the presents come. Please, please help me solve this. I have no objections to her and my son exchanging gifts, but I wish she would leave the rest of his family alone.

TOO MANY GIFTS

DEAR TOO MANY: Ask your son to tell the young lady that he appreciates her thoughtfulness and generosity but prefers that she discontinue the gift-giving to the members of his family. And if that doesn't do the trick, send her thank-you cards for the gifts, and let it go at that.

DEAR ABBY: This message is for Ed in La Mirada, who for 31 years has been saying things to his wife that might sound like insults to others but who insists he didn't mean them as such.

Ed, ole buddy, your technique is abundantly clear. For 31 years, you've been announcing to everyone within earshot that your awareness of your own inferiority compels you to belittle your wife so that your own lack of worth will be less conspicuous.

You poor jerk, you might just as well have worn a big zero on your forehead.

Jury Deliberates on Milk Deal

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Oklahoma City attorney Stuart Russell says he was a victim of a plan to distribute funds from the nation's largest milk cooperative to political campaigns. The government contends Russell was a conduit for thousands of dollars of illegal campaign contributions.

A federal jury begins its second day of deliberations today on the government's case charging Russell with three counts of violating the Corrupt Practices Act.

The prosecution and defense rested their cases Thursday and the jury deliberated for two hours before recessing for the night.

Russell was indicted by a

Washington grand jury for allegedly being one of eight men Associated Milk Producers Inc. used to funnel thousands of dollars illegally into political campaigns from 1968 through 1971.

Two counts of the indictment charged Russell, 58, with making $8,400 in contributions to the 1970 campaign of Sen. Edmond S. Muskie, D-Maine, then billing AMPI for the outlay under the guise of legal services rendered.

The third count accused him of being part of a conspiracy to divert $100,000 in cash from the nation's largest dairy cooperative delivered to Herbert Kalmbach, the private attorney of former President Richard M.

Nixon, on Aug. 3, 1969.

The government presented 18 witnesses and introduced 100 exhibits in an effort to show a pattern of Russell delivering the money to AMPI lobbyist Bob Lilly, then billing the co-op amounts 150 per cent to 200 per cent more as legal fees and expenses.

Russell admitted participating in what he termed

"kickbacks" to the huge tax exempt firm, but he denied repeatedly ever being told the money was going to politicians.

In fact, Russell testified, he "screamed bloody murder for a year" because the kickbacks were causing him income tax problems, but AMPI officials refused to divulge where the money was going other than to say it went for attorney fees and expenses.

Key government witnesses were former AMPI General Manager Harold S. Nelson, who served a four month jail term for the illegal contributions, and former AMPI lobbyist Bob Lilly and former AMPI Controller Robert O. Isham, both of whom were granted immunity by the special Watergate prosecutor.

Judges Asked Carrillo To Resign Judge Post

By United Press International
District Judge J.R. Alamia confirmed today he personally presented a request from the judges of the Fifth Administrative Judicial District of Texas to Judge O.P. Carrillo asking Carrillo to resign.

"At first he flatly refused," Alamia told UPI from his home in Edinburg. "But later in our conversation he indicated he would talk to his attorneys about it and get back to me."

In Austin Thursday, the House committee considering an impeachment resolution against Carrillo asked the South Texas judge to appear at a final public hearing next week "in order that he may be fully informed of all charges being made against him."

Alamia, head of the Fifth Judicial District, told UPI the judges in the district met July 3 in Dallas during the State Bar convention and passed a resolution asking Carrillo to resign. There are 18 district judges in the Fifth District.

"Not all the judges attended the meeting, but there was a representative number from each area of the district," Alamia said. "It was a regular, routine district meeting — they are held at every bar convention. A resolution was passed asking Carrillo to resign and the judges asked me to draft a letter, sign it and present it to Carrillo personally."

Alamia said he presented the letter to Alamia Wednesday, immediately after the removal hearing of Archer Parr. Carrillo presided over that hearing. Alamia said he waited for Carrillo to read the letter and to get his reaction.

Alamia's signature was the only one on the letter, the judge said.

Alamia said the judges passed the resolution in Dallas because they felt Carrillo's recent actions were harmful to public opinion of the judiciary in South Texas and because they felt Carrillo has disregarded the judicial code of ethics pertaining to his involvement in political activities.

Rep. Dewitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, the chairman of the House committee, sent a letter to Carrillo's attorney, Arthur Mitchell, asking Carrillo to be present at a public hearing scheduled for 10 a.m. Tuesday.

"This will probably be the last public hearing conducted by the committee, and we certainly desire that you be present," Hale said in his letter to Mitchell. "The committee also desires that Judge Carrillo be present at this hearing as in the past, in order that he may be fully informed of all the charges being made against him."

"The committee stands ready, willing and able to hear any testimony which the judge cares to offer in his defense and in response to any of the charges which have been made against him," Hale said.

"If Judge Carrillo intends to testify before our committee, next Tuesday will probably be his last opportunity."

Following Tuesday's meeting, the committee is expected to begin considering specific articles of impeachment against Carrillo.

The sponsor of the impeachment resolution said Carrillo has used his position to solidify his political base in South Texas. Judge Carrillo is a member of a family fighting a political feud with a family headed by Parr which has held control of the area's politics for almost a half a century.

Carrillo has also been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of income tax evasion.

Portugal Socialists Fight Communists

LISBON (UPI) — The Socialist party has withdrawn from Portugal's coalition government and vowed to struggle against the creation of a Communist dictatorship in the country.

Socialist leader Mario Soares, a minister without portfolio in the cabinet, announced the pullout Thursday night at a rally of 5,000 cheering followers.

"We will never accept a dictatorship because we never accepted it in the past," Soares said.

Party officials said the move was prompted by the government's decision to turn the Socialist-leaning newspaper Republica over to Communist printers.

Soares said his party would not consider rejoining the government unless Republica was returned to its editorial staff.

"It is necessary for the Socialist party to organize itself strongly everywhere — in the unions, in the fields, in the factories," he said.

Other speakers vowed a "struggle to our death" for parliamentary democracy in Portugal.

Ford Files First Finance Fund Facts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has filed his first official campaign finance fund report. In ten days he raised $10,000 and spent nearly two-thirds of it.

The President Ford Committee report was among hundreds flooding the Federal Election Commission as it observed its first filing deadline under the new campaign spending law.

Ford's relatively small financial report was in contrast to those filed earlier by two leading Democratic presidential contenders, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama and Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington said they had raised a total of $6.6 million for their 1976 campaigns.

Ford's funds came in 10 individual contributions of $1,000 each.

The donors were listed as Rhoda, Russell and Ted Lund of Minneapolis, Lauren and John Berry of Dayton, Ohio, Navy Secretary J. William Middendorf and his wife Esabelle, Noel Porter of Palo Alto, Calif., and industrialist David Packard and his wife.

Packard, a Californian, is finance chairman of the Ford election committee and chairman of the electronics firm Hewlett Packard. Porter is vice president of the firm. Russell and Ted Lund are chairman and president respectively of Lunds Inc. John and Lauren Berry are chairman and vice-chairman respectively of L.M. Berry and Co.

The Ford committee said it spent $6,464.36 on such items as phone installations, office rent and furniture. It was expected it would be several days before a complete tally of the spending by all presidential candidates would be available.

Jackson said he raised $1.13 million last year and $1.17 million this year. Wallace's organization has raised a total of $4.3 million including $1.6 million this year.

Another democratic contender, former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, reported he had raised a total of $151,357.90, including $89,016.50 this year.

Independent presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy, the former Democratic senator from Minnesota, said he had raised $72,155.34 for his campaign, including $33,594.90 this year.

School Board Rejects Bids on Trades House

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

In spite of efforts to sell it, Pampa Independent School District still owns a brand new house valued at $37,500.

Only two bids were submitted for the Vocational Building Trades House at 1900 Lea Street and both were rejected as too low when opened Thursday at the PISD board of trustees meeting.

The high bid of the two submitted was $30,120. Although that price would represent a "break even point" for the school, Dr. Dan Long, superintendent of schools, recommended that the bid be rejected.

"I don't think we need to make a great profit," Long said, but he added that he felt it was the responsibility of the superintendent and the board to get a fair price for the four bedroom residence.

Long said that an appraiser from Berger determined the value of the house at $37,500 "and that is a conservative appraisal," he said.

The house built by the high school students includes two baths, a woodburning fireplace, central heating and air conditioning, and built-in appliances in the kitchen. There is 1795 square feet of living area and a double garage with 456 square feet. The house is totally carpeted and the back yard is fenced.

The board authorized Long to proceed with advertising for more bids on the house.

In other business, the board reviewed a budget report and it was explained by Long that while the effects of inflation and rising prices have caused some items to go over the budget, other items have not required full budget allotments and the superintendent expects to finish the year with a balanced budget.

The board unanimously approved the depository pledge contract for the biennium beginning Sept. 1 with the First National Bank of Pampa.

Long reported on House Bill 1126 and its effect on the 1975-76 budget. The bill has resulted in a different manner of dispersing state funds to local school districts and until the bill has been clarified and its requirements fully defined, Long said, a complete budget for 1975-76 cannot be worked up. It is not expected that the new way of dispersing the state money will result in any noticeable loss in total state funds paid to Pampa schools, Long said.

Appointments passed by the board included Mark McMinn, industrial arts and coach, junior high; Robert Lee Carter, mathematics, physics, high school; Jack Greene, industrial arts, junior high; Mitchell Kent King, English, social studies, tennis coach, high school; Pamela Ryzman, French, high school; and Dorothy Ann Weigle, second grade, Baker.

Resignations were accepted from Freddy Green, social studies, junior high; Thomas Lester, science, health, junior high; and Frieda Ross, second grade, Baker, retiring to marry.

Following a break for dinner, the board reconvened at 7 p.m. to hear a report on the community survey completed Wednesday by the Foundations in Educational Administration of the University of Texas.

The Rev. Charles Graff, pastor of St. Paul United Methodist Church, opened Thursday's board meeting with an invocation.

Local Leaders Unanimously Oppose Voting Rights Act Here

By TEX DEWEESE
Pampa News Staff

Unanimous opposition of Pampa city commissioners to imposition of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was expressed in letters mailed today to Texas Senators Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower.

City Manager Mack Wofford said the letter voicing Pampa's stand in the matter was taken at the request of Texas Secretary of State Mark White.

It also was brought to the attention of city commissioners by Commissioner Joe Curtis at Thursday's meeting of the Pampa Commission and the city manager was requested to write to Texas two senators.

A 10-year extension of the Voting Rights Act already has been passed by the U.S. House of Representatives and is scheduled for action in the U.S. Senate this month. The act would apply to every political subdivision in the state.

In a letter to Mayor R.D. Wilkerson asking Pampa's support of the position that Texas should not be included under the law, Secretary of State White explained Texas was excluded from the 1965 Act because the state had never used a "test or device" to eliminate minority voters from participating in the process.

"Now, 10 years later," White stated in his letter, "an attempt is being made to include Texas within the Act based upon the premise that the lack of a Spanish language ballot has denied Spanish-speaking Texans an effective voice at the polling place."

White states records in his office prove that Mexican-Americans have not been discriminated against in Texas elections.

The secretary of state declares that a 1974 survey of voter registration records show that "there is minuscule difference between Mexican-American and non Mexican-American voter registration in Texas."

White's figures show that in counties with less than 5 Spanish surname, 23.18 percent of the total voting age population voted and in counties with more than 50 Spanish surname, 22.73 percent voted. Based on census data, 75 percent of the total voting age population in Texas was registered as of 1974.

White charged in his letter to the Pampa mayor that inclusion of Texas within the Voting Rights Act will not enhance citizens' right to vote, but "will continue the trend toward centralization of authority in the federal government."

The Texas secretary of state declared in the letter that imposition of the Act would mean that no longer will elections be regulated and conducted by local officials.

"In the future," White wrote, "all matters relating to elections will be subject to the prior approval by the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department in Washington."

Relocation of polling places, changing of precinct lines and annexations all will require approval from Washington, White said.

He stated if Texas is included under the Act, federal registrars would register voters throughout Texas despite the fact the Secretary of State's office has not received a single complaint that a Spanish speaking Texan has been denied the right to register.

The Act also provides that federal voting examiners would be authorized to come into any election precinct or polling place, despite the fact poll watchers are available to any candidate or group of citizens by following simple procedures set up in the Texas election code.

City Manager Mack Wofford said the Pampa mayor and all four city commissioners support fully the position taken by Secretary of State White and had agreed to sign the letters that went out today to Senators Bentsen and Tower urging them to take a stand in the Senate against the inclusion of Texas under the Act.

BEIRUT (UPI) — Officials today began distributing food to residents of a Moslem slum area in an apparent first step towards meeting the ransom demands of left-wing kidnapers of American Col. Ernest R. Morgan, threatened with death by a firing squad on Saturday.

Morgan, 43, of Petersburg, Va., was kidnaped last Sunday by leftist guerrillas who threatened to execute him if the United States did not give vast supplies of food and other aid to a Moslem suburb devastated by the recent battles between Moslem and Christian militias.

He was first sentenced to die on Wednesday but the kidnapers gave him a final stay of execution until 9 p.m. Saturday (2 p.m. EDT). Morgan, a black, appealed to the United States to meet his captors' demands and not abandon him because of race.

Sources close to the Morgan case said the food was being distributed through community leaders in Karantina-Al Mee-takn, a suburban slum area that the kidnapers have told the United States to supply with food and clothing in return for Morgan's release.

Neither the U.S. Embassy nor Lebanonese government spokesmen would comment on the distribution. However, they did not deny it and witnesses confirmed that supplies of food were being brought into the area by trucks and turned over to local community leaders for distribution.

"I ask my government to release me from the pressure which is weighing on me and my family," Army Col. Ernest Morgan said Thursday "I believe that this will be my last chance."

The 43-year-old Petersburg, Va., officer said "my government should protect me in time of hardship" in view of his 23 years of military service.

"I should not be abandoned because of my race or color," Morgan said in a tape-recorded message to the U.S. embassy in Beirut.

He said the ransom demands of his kidnapers "will not exceed the price of a few Phantom jets, which America gives Israel almost every day."

"I am aware of the policy of the U.S. not to pay ransoms and yet I seek that the demands be met," he said.

The kidnapers executed Morgan a "final stay of execution" Thursday and gave the United States until Saturday night to begin a massive relief program for a Moslem suburb devastated by last month's religious warfare.

In a message to the U.S. embassy accompanying Morgan's tape, the abductors threatened to execute the colonel "by firing squad" unless the United States meets their demands.

Lebanon was believed to be opposed to the United States paying the ransom — 200 tons of food, 600 tons of building supplies and clothing for 3,000 persons — for fear such a move would encourage more kidnappings.

Guitarist Flatt Undergoes Heart Surgery

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — After five hours of open-heart surgery Thursday, bluesgrass guitarist Lester Flatt was moved to an intensive care unit. Hospital authorities listed him in serious condition.

The operation was needed to bypass three obstructed arteries in the 61-year-old Grand Ole Opry star's heart.

A spokesman for the surgical team said Flatt, best known for his deadpan guitar picking with banjo player Carl Perkins, will remain under intensive care for 12-14 days.

"From all indications," a spokesman said, "the operation went beautifully."

His surgery came less than a week after a fellow Opry regular, George Morgan of "Candy Kisses" fame, died. Morgan, who underwent similar surgery several days before his death, was buried Thursday.

Flatt was not told of his long-time friend's death prior to his surgery.

The 61-year-old Flatt grew up on Tennessee's Cumberland Plateau where he started his musical career in the 1940s as the lead singer with Bill Monroe's Bluegrass Boys.

Detectives said the wound apparently was self-inflicted.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in Riverview Baptist Church. The Rev. Jimmy Gilmore, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Highland Park Cemetery by Simpson Funeral Home.

Mr. Culwell was a Baptist and a 1969 graduate of Phillips High School.

Vet Tries Transplant To Save Red-tail Hawk

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Dr. Bill Riddle and Shawn Ogburn have tried a new surgical procedure in an attempt to save a red-tailed hawk shot down by a Texas hunter.

Riddle, a veterinarian who works closely with the Raptor Preservation Fund, Inc., group headed by Ogburn, transplanted a piece of bone taken from a dead hawk to the decaying wing of the wounded hawk.

"We really don't know how it's going to work out," Ogburn said. "We'll have to wait a month, x-ray it again, and see if it worked."

The sole purpose of Ogburn's group is to rehabilitate and release into the wild again birds of prey which are either intentionally or accidentally wounded.

"If people wouldn't shoot them, we wouldn't have to do this," said Ogburn, who came from Virginia to Texas to attend graduate school.

"All birds of prey are protected. I don't mean to put Texas down, but a lot of Texans are still blasting away at them."

The hawk on which the surgery was performed was wounded by a shotgun blast more than six months ago. The first surgical attempt in January to save its wing by inserting a metal pin failed, and the bone in the wing decayed.

Ogburn hopes the transplant will be more successful.

Raptor Preservation Fund, supported by private donations, now has 25 birds in rehabilitation. The ones which sufficiently recover will be returned to the wild. Others will be given to zoos or to breeding programs, Ogburn said.

"We get everything from eagles to falcons, just about every bird of prey there is," he said. "We're supposed to get an eagle in a couple of weeks from Waco that has been shot. We're going to try to repair it."

He says the mended birds are released in parks, bird sanctuaries, and on the land of cooperative ranchers.

"There are problems in keeping the birds, however. Cost of mice and other food for the raptors is expensive."

"If we keep the birds too long, they do become sort of tame, and we're concerned they might be too tame and might be shot again," he said.

Ogburn says his group accepts even the bodies of raptors killed in accidents and freezes them in hopes bones from them may someday be used to save other injured birds.

The Egyptians, the Minoans, the Assyrians and the Etruscans all fabricated beautiful and elaborate works of art from gold. King Tutankhamen was buried in a gold coffin in 1352 BC. Today, the largest gold-producing countries are still South Africa, the Soviet Union, Canada, the United States and Central and South America.

Little Oil Potential Seen
Washington Bureau
Pampa News

WASHINGTON — The first deep test holes, drilled on unleased Federal offshore areas recently revealed that a large portion of the South Texas Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) has a low potential for oil production.

Part of the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) investigations into potential resources of the continental margin, the tests were conducted by Phillips Petroleum Co. of California and Superior Oil Co. of Houston earlier this year. Monitored by USGS, test results were made public this week.

Results of the tests — one about 40 miles off the South Padre Island area, the other around Mustang Island — were earlier given to companies that participated in the South Texas Lease sales this past spring. The sale, which included rights to explore areas within 100 miles of the test spots, did not bring the high bidding expected, according to a USGS official.

Applications to drill more deep well tests for other frontier offshore areas are under consideration by USGS's conservation division.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JULY 12
Your birthday today: Whether in actual or symbolic travel, this will be a year of wanderlust. By its end, you'll be a long way from your present mode of operations and view of life. The experience will be equivalent to a complete new education. Relationships aren't the major problem; some people grow with you and others grow apart because of their mission in life. Today's natives are society-oriented, make their own rules as they go.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Do all you can very early to set up your weekend schedule. In the later hours, there are possible misunderstandings and perhaps a practical joke. Keep your sense of humor, in any event.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Be consistent and finish what you've started, so when afternoon comes you're free to go with the mood of the moment undistracted by half-done chores. Be frugal with your money now.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Confidential advice is offered. Act on it if you wish, but don't talk about it. What you do changes what comes next. A conservative approach builds stronger reserves.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Energetic friends are useful. Put them to work turning some of the wheels and opening doors, while you look after your own interests. Get done reasonably early.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: You get good results this morning. Work to a good stopping point, then take a rest in the afternoon. You'll hear tall tales, but needn't believe much of what is said.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You can sell anything today if you get cracking rather than fuss over petty details. Tomorrow you'll have a change of heart and want a different outcome. Leave room for adjustments.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Leave the stage to those who want the exposure. Search for unused talents and hidden or neglected property. Meditate to sort out problems.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: As long as you're sure of what you want, all turns out well. The later in the day, the less explaining you have to do about details. Be definite.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Family ties are stronger than you thought. You enjoy hearing from distant people and have a reunion. An old problem yields to a new solution.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Home life improves as you reassure loved ones and express your deeper feelings. There are no new questions, but probably a satisfying round of answers to a number of old ones.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Your natural inclination is toward speculation or taking calculated risks. This works out fine if you are on the ball early enough and quit while you're ahead.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: You're short on fact and patience today, but act as though you have all that is needed. Business matters are subject to minor disturbance, but pick up when you add creative thoughts of your own.

Nicotine Gum Joins War On Cigarettes

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Health Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Good news for cigarette smokers who want to quit:

Organic Food Buffs Panned

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The organic food movement is dangerous to the consumer because "it has caused many to mistrust our present food supply," says a University of California biochemist.

"American food as produced by scientific agricultural methods, including the use of chemical fertilizers, pesticides and approved food additives is the safest, most nutritious and most diverse in the history of the world," says Dr. Thomas H. Jukes, nutritional scientist and authority on vitamins.

"The so-called organic food industry misrepresents its products," Dr. Jukes said in a recent interview. He expressed concern over faddists' attacks on such foods as sugar, beef and white bread and on "our life-support system, fertilizer."

There's no reason for anyone being "uptight" about sugar, he said. "We cannot live without glucose (blood sugar) in our blood and part of the sugar we eat becomes blood sugar."

Some health buffs claim that the United States could make a tremendous contribution to world food supplies if cattle were not fed grain. Dr. Jukes pointed out, however, "beef cattle are not eating a complete diet of grain. Their diet is 50 percent or more hay and forage, plus corn cobs, stalks and other parts of the corn plant."

"White bread is a food many people buy from choice," said Dr. Jukes. He sees nothing wrong with this preference, "especially when the bread is enriched with thiamin, riboflavin, niacin and iron."

Dr. Jukes lectures frequently on organic foods at universities throughout the country. Why does he make the effort? "Simply because I regard the organic food movement as a retreat from reason," he explained, adding:

"It misrepresents its products as therapeutic agents for diseases against which such products are completely ineffective. All foods, except minerals such as salt, calcium and iron, are organic. The name organic food is not based on an identifiable fact and, therefore, it is a deception."

Dr. Jukes said that food crops grown with chemical fertilizers are as rich in proteins, vitamins and minerals as when they are grown with so-called "organics."

taining nicotine, described as highly promising, is undergoing trials in Sweden and England.

The nicotine in the chewing gum helps smokers in the transition to non-smoking. But one problem is, an occasional subject gets hooked on the gum.

Reports on the nicotine gum were made at the Third World Conference on Smoking and Health Tuesday in New York.

"Nothing works like the nicotine gum," Dr. Murray Jarvik said after a workshop on pharmacology in cessation activities—stopping smoking.

That was after the psychiatrist and pharmacology professor from the University of California at Los Angeles heard a Swedish doctor deliver a report on the gum.

Jarvik has tried injecting nicotine subcutaneously, giving it intravenously and even making an inhaler containing nicotine.

The hope? That the smoker could get the nicotine without "drawing into the mouth and lungs smoke from a chopped-up burning plant."

Jarvik said "the nicotine gum is promising."

A report on the nicotine gum was made by two Swedish doctors.

Dr. Ove Ferno of Helmingborg, Sweden, said the gum came off the drawing board in the late 60s.

"It seems clear," he said, "that this new composition can produce blood nicotine levels comparable to those found after smoking a cigarette, although the 'kick effect' is not the same.

"Our original idea was that when switching over to nicotine chewing gum, a smoker or, shall we say, ex-smoker would only have to fight the nonnicotine part of the habit and after some time this part of the habit would be abolished.

"This should make it easier for him to give up nicotine at a later stage."

Dr. Lars Wilhelmson, associate professor at Sahlgren's Hospital in Goteborg, said the anti-smoking product from Aktiebolaget Leo (a pharmacy company) has a strange taste. Some describe it as pungent.

"Smokers say they can feel it in their throats and that they get the feeling of nicotine (which smoking gave them)."

He reported a 60 to 78 cigarette per day smoker he put on the gum started with 15 to 20 pieces a day, gradually going to lesser strength gums and less of it.

In one large trial in Sweden half the men trying to stop via nicotine gum stayed with the gum for from weeks to months.

At the end of a year, 25 percent of the men in the experiment still were off cigarettes. Cigarette fighters consider such results very good.

But were they hung up on the gum? Addicted to it?

"We have had people take one or two years to get off the gum but as a rule it's easier to come off gum than cigarettes," he said.

Films Sidelining Women-Copra

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Frank Capra was explaining why there are so few women stars in pictures today.

And if anyone knows about women stars, he's the one, because as a director and/or producer he's worked with the best.

Barbara Stanwyck, Loretta Young, Claudette Colbert, Jean Harlow — these and other great ladies of the screen flourished under his guidance.

"For the last 10 or 15 years," he said, "films have been dealing with violence and sex almost exclusively. And when you deal with violence and sex, you are in a man's world where there are no stories for women."

"In such pictures, women are only sex objects."

Capra had come into Los Angeles from his Palm Springs home and was visiting the Burbank Studio where Columbia Pictures are made. Columbia Pictures! He and Columbia had grown famous together.

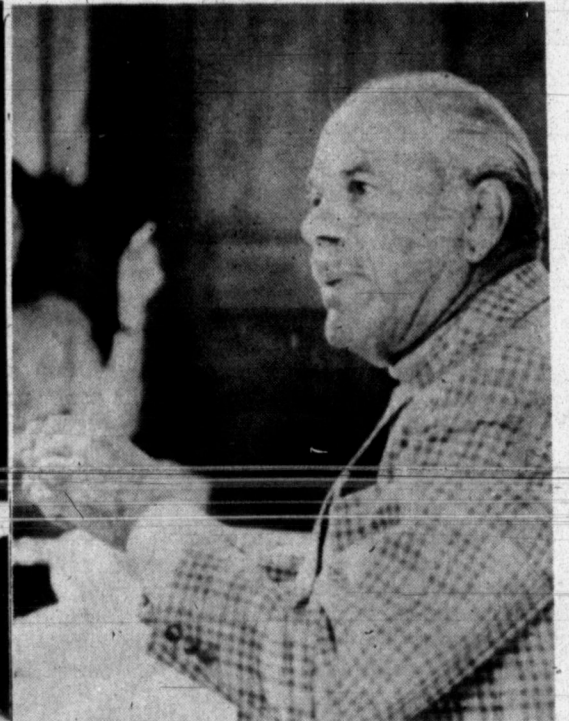

He'd given himself to that cause as a very young genius and had helped raise the then-small studio from the dreary Poverty Row to a place of distinction.

In those days the studio had been, not in Burbank, but in Gower Gulch, a tacky outpost of early movie making taking its name from Gower Street on which Columbia was located.

Harry Cohn had ruled the Gower Gulch roost, and for years he and Capra coexisted in a love-hate relationship which resulted in such film classics as "It Happened One Night" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Capra also worked for other movie pioneers, among them Mack Sennett, for whom he was a gagman, but it was during his peonage to Cohn that his brilliance was initially accepted.

Now, after 14 years of inacgood. "Films are the greatest of all art forms, because they use all the other art forms as tools."

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer played very well to fulfill his slam contract. At the conclusion of the deal, West told East that the latter had it in his power to have defeated the slam. West was right. The deal was played in a tournament.

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North East South West

1. Pass 2. Pass 3. Pass

6. Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

West did not make matters easy for declarer by laying down his ace of hearts at trick one. Had he done so, dummy would have ruffed. The queen and jack of trumps would next have been cashed, after which a low trump would have been led to South's ace. The king of trumps would then have picked up East's remaining trump, and declarer would have claimed his contract: five spade tricks, one heart, one club, and five trumps (dummy having ruffed the opening heart lead).

West's opening club lead was permitted to capture the trick. East signaling for a continuation by playing the ten. The eight of clubs was led to trick two, dummy's ace winning. South next led a trump to his king, and then cashed the trump ace. West discarding a heart on the second trump lead.

Now came three rounds of spades (with a prayer). South discarding his remaining club on the third spade lead. A club was then trumped. With both East and West following suit, the board's remaining club became the only club remaining in the deck.

South's last trump was now led to the board's queen, and the jack of trumps then picked up East's last trump. Dummy's two remaining spades and a club won the last three tricks, with declarer's only loser being the club he had lost at trick one.

West pointed out that East could have defeated the contract by overtaking the queen of clubs with his king at trick one, and then shifting to a heart at trick two. With dummy being forced to trump this trick, it would then have become impossible for declarer to have established and cashed dummy's fourth club.

West was correct. Surely West's lead of the club queen indicated that West possessed the club jack, for who leads an unsupported queen against a slam contract?

Pants go on and on in women's fashions. Favorite way for fall with many designers is the jumpsuit, a one-piece leisure costume with front zipper closing. To go with: plenty of turtle or mock turtle sweaters in wool or polyester.

Ready-to-wear tends to avoid talk of the hemline for fall. But you'll find most designers make skirts for daytime coming well below the knee, some even to midcalf.

Lutheran Church On Brink of Break-up Over Bible Dispute

ANAHEIM, CALIF. (UPI) — The Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, seventh largest Protestant body in the United States, has moved to the brink of break-up in a dispute over what it means to believe that the Bible is the Word of God.

Delegates to the church's national convention narrowly approved two measures Wednesday that dissident leaders said could force one-quarter of the group's 2.8-million members out of the synod.

The convention first voted, by a margin of 626 to 466, to demand the resignation of any district president who permits the ordination of graduates from Seminex, a "seminary in exile" created last year by the so-called church moderates.

There are 40 district presidents in the church — roughly equivalent to bishops in other churches. Eight of them have ordained the Seminex graduates in the past and said they would continue, even if it costs them their positions.

The second crucial vote Wednesday, passed by a 601 to 473 vote, branded the Evangelical Lutheran in Mission organization "schismatic" and directed pastors and church leaders to cease their support of the group.

Several hundred supporters of the group gathered outside the Convention Center after the vote for a brief rally of prayer and singing. One of the dissident leaders, Rev. Justice Kretzman of Florissant, Mo., insisted that the votes "read dedicated servants out of the synod, but not out of the church."

But many of the dissident district presidents seemed less sure that the votes sealed the split of the nation's second-largest Lutheran church.

"I would take no steps toward pulling out any congregations at this time," said Rev. Robert Riedel of New England.

"I'm not interested in leaving the synod," insisted Rev. Emil Jaech of the Northwest District. "I love my synod."

The other district presidents affected by the resolution are the Revs. Herman Frincke, Eastern; Harold Hecht, English; Paul Jacobs, Northern California and Nevada; Waldemar Meyer, Colorado; Herman Neun Southern Illinois; and Rudolph Retsmeyer, Atlantic. A ninth district president, Rev. Frederick Niederer of Nebraska, also aligned himself with the dissidents during Wednesday's debate.

The main dispute in the church is rooted in differing interpretations of the Bible and the Lutheran belief that "the Scriptures are God's very own inspired, inerrant and authoritative Word."

The conservative majority says that means that the Bible is free of error of any kind, even in matters not concerning theology; that it must be accepted literally, to the point of defending a seven-day creation; and that it cannot be interpreted on the basis of historical reasoning.

The moderate minority say the Bible is God's revelation through human instruments, with its power undiminished by minor discrepancies that each part must be accepted in the sense it was written; and that historical reasoning helps theologians better understand Biblical truth.

The conservatives refer to the moderates as Bible doubters; the moderates label the conservatives legalists.

Many of the current American denominations were formed out of splits in existing churches, with the conservative minorities breaking off to preserve what they regarded as pure Biblical doctrine.

If the votes at this convention do lead to a split, it will be apparently the first time in American church history that the more liberal faction has been forced out by the conservative majority.

An investment in Your Future ...ATTEND CHURCH

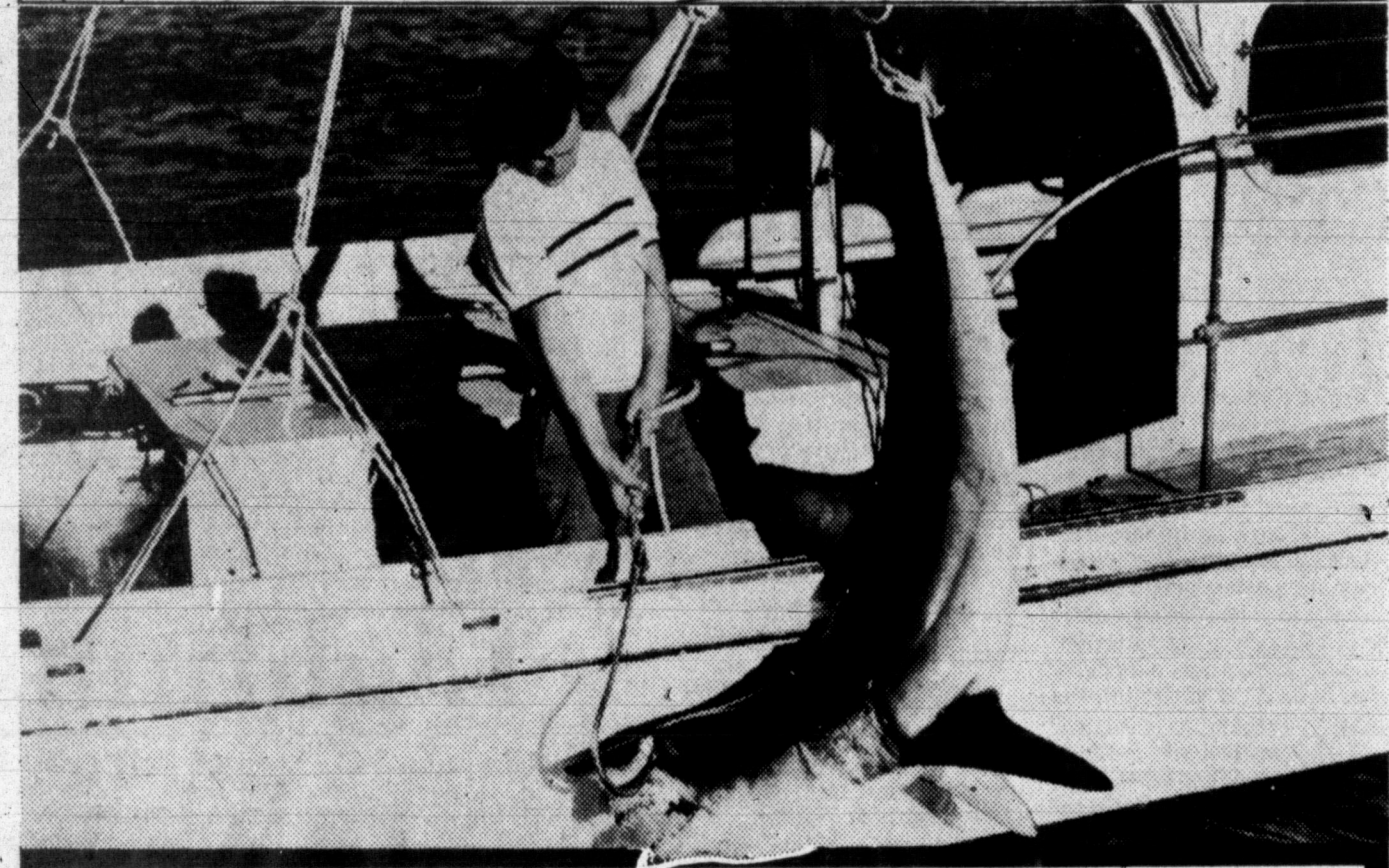

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

Man's triumph over a Menace to Life...

Sharks have always been man's enemies in the sea. They are a danger to the shipwrecked, and occasionally threaten the lives of swimmers along our coastal waters. Sharks are only one of the many dangers that man faces every day. The world, today, is in a turmoil and we must be alert and on guard for the enemies' moves. Now is the time to trust in the Lord and to seek His help.

"Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul. O my God, I trust in thee; let me not be ashamed, let not mine enemies triumph over me."
Psalm 25, 1-2

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Shooting Road Signs: Costly Pastime

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

A Gray County resident got mad at his wife a few months ago and took his revenge on highway signs — 110 of them. Then his car quit.

Highway patrolmen found him walking down the road carrying the battery.

The property damage was estimated at several hundred dollars, according to Gordon S. Taylor, maintenance construction supervisor for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in Gray County.

However, this one of many such vandalism incidents in this area.

"It is an every day occurrence — peaking at Halloween and during holidays," Taylor said.

Damages to the signs which dot almost 800 miles of Gray County state highways range from $3,000 to $6,000 monthly.

The repairs and maintenance keep two fulltime and two part time employees busy.

Contrary to popular belief, the excitement of vandalizing signs leaves a lot to be desired, Taylor said.

Property damage is expensive, he added, but it can lead to personal injury and loss of life.

Removal of a stop sign could result in a fatal accident.

Slak says a bright red highway yield sign "leveled for kicks, won't slow down a cannonballing semi."

An intersection stop sign bent downward has little effect on limiting collisions.

Officials say that six out of every 10 signs in the Texas Panhandle have to be replaced because of vandalism.

"More often than not it is the vandalized sign that is brought in for repair rather than the one deteriorated by time and atmospheric forces," David M. Slak of the Department of Highways said in a summary of vandalism on area highways.

Signs are stolen, splattered with eggs, riddled with gunshot, drenched with soda pop, splintered with bottles, sprayed with paint, lassoed or knocked down — one right after another.

Taylor says the debt created by highway sign vandalism will total a healthy sum over a period of months — millions over the years.

The following incidents were recorded during the past few years over highways in 17 Panhandle counties:

—In 1967 an unknown person or persons took a vehicle and knocked to the ground 13 signs along a farm to market road in Hutchinson County.

—In 1973, an man who worked on ranches was charged with driving while intoxicated. He allegedly intentionally knocked down 12 signs on a farm to market road. That excursion cost tax payers $277.

—In 1974, about 25 highway signs in Ochiltree County were stolen. They were returned to law offices in Perryton a month later and transferred to the maintenance warehouse for repairs.

One Department of Public Safety patrolman was quoted as saying he didn't want to have to work an accident because of a missing highway sign.

—Also in 1974, two youths decided to flatten every sign, delineator and mail box on both sides of a nine-mile stretch of Carson County. The boys were apprehended and required to pay the $428 in damages to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Summer nights seem to attract vandals who wish to concentrate on highway signs.

Signs not only give direction, but they also tell a story. One Texas district developed a trailer-mounted, changeable message sign that will give advance warning to freeway motorists of prolonged lane or closures due to construction or maintenance activities.

The sign will also advise motorists what work will be occurring along with time, dates and location.

The sign will also be located on the shoulder in the vicinity of the construction area a week in advance. It is being used in addition to normal construction signs motorists are accustomed to.

In Odessa signs are being used with unusual messages to inform public. A large 12 by 12 foot green sign with white lettering is erected in front of the district office for various holidays with an appropriate message.

The first sign was used on Thanksgiving and read "John Q Public — Thank you for Texax Highways — drive friendly."

The response was so good officials decided to use the sign on different occasions.

The State Highway Department's maintenance employees groom the highways — and many are designated unofficially as "sign men."

Foremen are expected to make periodic night checks to report those signs which have lost their reflective power due to weather wear and vandalism.

The average life span of a sign in this area is five to seven years — a period much longer than convicted vandals can be sentenced in court.

Penalty for vandalism to highway markers range from $1 or one day in jail or both, to $2,000 or one year in prison or both. Vandals have to reimburse the state for actual value of the damaged or stolen property and its reinstallation.

The problem of documenting vandalism on the highways is a never-ending one for state highway department officials as well as law enforcement officers.

Signs on farm to market roads are most frequently vandalized, while those on interstate freeways are often objects of pot shots in broad daylight.

Dangerous 'Fun'

Highway sign vandalism in Gray County ranges from $3,000 to $6,000 monthly for repairs and installation. This is among the signs vandalized during recent weeks. Gordon S. Taylor and Jack Reppetoe are among who work with problems locally. (Pampa News photo by Mike Higgins)

Liquor Dealers To Lose In Comptroller's Raid

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A San Antonio liquor dealer who lost 15,000 cases of booze to the state in an unprecedented raid to collect back taxes left his wholesalers $300,000 in unpaid bills.

Assistant Comptroller Randall Buck Wood is of the opinion the wholesalers cannot recover the money from the state or the liquor dealer. And if they plan to buy back the liquor at cheap prices in an upcoming public auction, they'll probably be disappointed.

State comptroller's office agents, led by Wood, raided three stores — Discount Liquor Mart, Discount Beverage Mart and Discount Alamo Liquors — owned by Johnny Gabriel of San Antonio, in May. The raid, an unprecedented attempt to collect back state sales taxes, resulted in the seizure of 15,000 cases of liquor, wine, beer and bartending accessories.

The comptroller's office plans to auction the confiscated booze to the public in San Antonio July 21 unless the delinquent taxes are paid by then.

Wood said his office discovered after the raids Gabriel's stores owed wholesalers $300,000.

However, he also found state law and the regulations of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission require wholesalers to collect money for liquor delivered to a retail establishment within one month. Most of the seized liquor had been at the three stores one month or longer.

"We assumed that because the liquor had been there longer than a month it belonged to the retailer," Wood said. "We found that wasn't so. Several wholesalers have made public claims of up to $300,000."

"In my opinion, the claims are not any good. They had their liquor there in violation of the law and the Alcoholic Beverage Commission."

Wood said the wholesalers initially considered pooling their resources to pay off Gabriel's back taxes.

"Everything was going along fine. Then suddenly they backed out. I think what they were trying to do was freeze us out on the sale down there (the San Antonio auction)," he said.

"That's not going to happen. We've got a good auction firm and we're going to get the best prices available. If they (the wholesalers) are willing to bid, they're going to have to compete with everybody else."

"We're going to have a hell of a sale. We've got everything from 875 bottles of Hennessy Five Star (brandy) to 45-cent-apint watermelon wine. It's mostly high quality stock. I carried about 400 cases of Johnny Walker Red (scotch whiskey) out of the stores during the raids," Wood said.

Nixon Campaign Fund Pays Watergate Fees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Nixon's 1972 campaign fund still has a balance of more than $1.5 million — but the funds are rapidly being depleted by payment of legal fees of some Watergate defendants.

The Nixon re-election committee filed a campaign spending report with the Federal Election Commission Thursday, showing it had paid some of the lawyers' fees of former Attorney General John Mitchell. The report said it was considering doing the same for former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans and Nixon re-election campaign lawyer Kenneth Parkinson.

Mitchell's legal fees in the Watergate coverup case totaled $471,390.86, and the Nixon committee has paid him $200,000, the report showed.

Mitchell was convicted in the coverup conspiracy trial. Parkinson was the only one of the defendants acquitted. Stans pled guilty to a misdemeanor in connection with an illegal campaign contribution.

Parkinson has submitted legal bills totaling $73,383, which were being "reviewed," the Nixon committee said.

Stans has submitted bills totaling $153,593.58. His claim included the $5,000 fine he paid after pleading guilty.

Stans not only billed the committee for $18,818.58 in legal fees but $18,600 for the time he spent in interviews with the Special Watergate prosecutors.

According to the committee, Stans charged $30 an hour for 620 hours of interviews — an amount equivalent to an hourly basis to that which he received when he was finance chairman of the Nixon campaign.

The Nixon committee said it was involved in more than a dozen lawsuits involving claims of millions of dollars growing out of the campaign.

The committee's financial records, filed with the new Federal Election Commission, also showed the committee in at least one case was suing to recover money — $15,200, from former White House counsel John Dean.

Blood Pressure Clinic Reads 470

Officials operating a free blood pressure clinic at the Citizens Bank and Trust Co. here recently took readings for 470 persons.

"Five had elevated blood pressure readings in the dangerous point and were referred to their physicians," said Mrs. Ella Weeter, director of the Frank Phillips College Nursing program.

The program was conducted by Pampa area Licensed Vocational Nursing students in training at Highland General Hospital.

The Regional Medical Program of Texas is among organizations forming a confederation called the National Consortium for High Blood Pressure Control.

The group was established because hypertension it believes is a silent disease afflicting more than 23 million Americans.

Physicians say high blood pressure can lead to stroke, heart attack and kidney disease — yet can be controlled.

Primary functions of the consortium will be to support and coordinate high blood pressure control activities, share information and proven technology among its members and interested groups, maximize the effective utilization of existing resources and mobilize additional resources required to support those programs.

The National Consortium for High Blood Pressure Control also will work to stimulate the development and testing of new programs to combat high blood pressure.

Lightning Kills Girl

By United Press International

Powerful thunderstorms roamed the nation Thursday night, touching off fires, tornadoes, floods and power failures and leaving two children dead.

High winds and torrential rains raked Maryland, knocking out power and telephone lines in the Baltimore area and causing flash flooding.

Montgomery County, Md., police said 2-year-old Caria Thompson was swept away by rising waters that stalled her mother's car on Edward's Ferry Road. Police said Betty Louise Thompson was driving across what ordinarily is an easily navigable small stream when flash flooding stalled her car and jammed the doors shut.

Mrs. Thompson managed to get her 6-year-old son, Timothy, out through a window but the car was covered by more than a foot of water before she could return for her daughter. The body was recovered 300 yards downstream by a county police canine unit.

In Manassas, Va., lightning killed a 9-year-old girl and injured two of her playmates as they played in a grassy area.

Robin Surette was pronounced dead on arrival at Prince William County Hospital. Her companions were admitted in satisfactory condition.

A tornado touched down in a residential area of Titusville, Fla., overturning two mobile homes and causing an estimated $100,000 to $150,000 in damage. Police reported two persons received minor injuries.

Police said a patrol unit spotted the twister and drove down streets ahead of it warning residents to get in their houses.

In East Baltimore, Md., occupants of five cars were rescued by boats after high water flooded their vehicles near the Pulaski Monument. Police said four cars and a motorcycle were submerged at Baltimore's Eastern underpass and several vehicles were underwater at the Pulaski underpass.

A powerful storm darkened most of Manchester, N.H., Thursday night, including the Palace Theater, where a performance of the musical "1776" was being staged.

The storm knocked three radio stations and a television station off the air for a while.

But a spotty drought plagued other portions of New Hampshire, threatening some of the state's $20 million truck farming industry's crops and the critical second cutting of hay.

Attorney General Now Stalks Other Utilities Rate Hikes

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorney General John Hill, the winner of the latest round in his bout against Southwestern Bell Telephone, is already looking for other utilities to challenge.

Hill, based on Wednesday's Texas Supreme Court ruling that he does have the power to challenge utility rates in Texas, said if he can find evidence that other utilities are charging too much he will take them to court also.

"I believe that every citizen of this state has the right to enter the courts that belong to the people and complain that he or she feels — if he or she can show by evidence — that an excessively high rate has been charged," Hill said.

Hill said because the court ruled unanimously in his favor and against Southwestern Bell he is convinced he can file additional suits against utility companies if he suspects their rates are unjust. He said he will file the additional suits if he finds "good solid evidence."

"When you win a case in a unanimous opinion that addressed itself to every question raised and affirmed every point in our position, I think it's not improper to label that a perfect case," Hill said.

The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday Hill does have the right to challenge rates he feels are excessive. The ruling temporarily prohibits Bell from implementing a $45 million a year increase in intrastate long distance rates. The court said a jury must finally decide if the rates are excessive.

A date for this jury hearing has not been set.

"Bell is a privately owned public utility supplying a necessary communication service in which, for all intents and purposes, it enjoys a monopoly," the court said. "It is a business affected with a public interest. As such, Bell is under the major legal obligations of offering its services without undue discrimination."

Hill said his staff is preparing for the jury trial in the rate case but if Bell decides to offer another figure for its intrastate telephone rates and if his experts consider the proposal reasonable, "It will go unchallenged," the attorney general said.

A Bell spokesman said it will ask the Supreme Court to consider the case a second time.

"We had counted on the revenues from these rates to begin March 1 and now its mid July and we have no relief in addressing our earnings problem," the spokesman said. "The delay has cost us $10 million already in badly needed revenues."

Wallace Campaign Raises $1.6 Million

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace's presidential campaign already has raised $1.6 million this year — and the first presidential primary is still nine months away.

Alton Dauphin, the campaign's financial director, released figures Wednesday showing the campaign raised 1.3 million between March and June 30 of this year, while spending $850,892.

That raised total receipts since Jan. 1, 1973, to $4.3 million, far more than any other candidate has raised. The campaign has $726,522 in the bank now.

Dauphin, Wallace's brother-in-law as well as financial director, said the campaign had no unpaid bills as of June 30. He said fund-raising was "going tremendously right now," spurred by Wallace's statement he intends to seek the Democratic nomination.

Dauphin said the reported figures actually understated the amount of cash on hand because most of the receipts from the campaign's "most successful mailing" ever, sent out in mid-June to one million persons, were not included.

That mailing included blank checks dated July 1, Aug. 1 and Sept. 1, which contributors were asked to fill in and sign. Dauphin said he had a "file full" of those checks which were not counted because the cutoff date for the report was June 30.

Connally Touts 6-year Term

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, considered to be a potential presidential candidate, said Wednesday presidents should be elected for one six-year term.

Connally, a former governor of Texas and treasury secretary under former President Richard M. Nixon, told a joint session of the Louisiana Legislature the nation's political leaders spend too much time trying to please the people who must re-elect them and not enough time solving the country's problems.

"We still have most people at the national level coming forth with a political pabulum of promises just like the American people were a bunch of children, and they're not children," Connally said.

"The American people are intelligent, informed, sophisticated people who know something's wrong. They know something's got to be done about it, and now's the time to make some changes.

"I suggest to you we ought to be concerning ourselves by adopting a very firm, strong energy policy," said Connally, whose 35 minute speech was interrupted by applause from the 144-member legislature 10 times.

Scots Club Pro Leads British Golf Tourney

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (UPI) — It didn't really matter to David Huish that the British Open golf championship reached the "choking point" Friday.

The 31-year-old Scots club pro who led a trimmed field of 86 golfers into today's third round reckoned that all he could do was his best.

The bookies bet 20-1 it wouldn't be enough.

"I'm just looking to put up a good show," Huish said Thursday at the biggest news conference of his life. "If I keep playing the way I'm playing, I'll be quite content, regardless of where I finish.

"If you're not good enough, you're not good enough. And if you're good enough on four rounds, fair enough."

With the likes of Tom Watson, Peter Oosterhuis, Hale Irwin, Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller within five strokes of his eight-under-par 69-67-136, Huish added that he wasn't nervous even if he does lead the rush on Ben Hogan's course record of 282.

That was a day ago.

Perhaps, he said, things will be different when the 104th Open came to what Irwin described as the point where "we start seeing who can swallow and who can't. It becomes a little tighter...

"The choking point, to put it mildly."

Huish is the pro down the road at North Berwick—"I teach and watch the shop"—and he had to birdie two straight holes—the second in a playoff—to even make the 153-man field for this richest of British Opens at $165,000.

But he had won $6,600 in some local tournaments and knew his game was taking shape. He has never played on the U.S. tour and has no desire to. For one thing, he hates to fly. For another, he doesn't want to owe sponsors anything.

Besides, home is Berwick where the wife and two young ones are. For a man who started his career as a 15-year-old assistant pro selling golf balls at the counter, the 6-foot-2 local hero had some 20,000 Scots spectators cheering him on with some dazzling iron play Wednesday.

Time and again, he knocked approaches and chips to the pin for birdies and to save pars. He came in with fours on all three par five holes, nothing uncommon on a day when the 7,065-yard Carnoustie course succumbed to par-smashing suits.

He slammed a three wood to within 15 feet on the 235-yard, par-3 18th hole, one of the toughest in golf, and ran the putt over a hump to cap his seven-birdie run.

Consistent Senior

Spec Goldman of Dallas is a probable entrant in the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament July 21-26 at the Pampa Country Club. Goldman won the tourney in 1966, 1967 and 1970 and was runner-up in 1969. Goldman was medalist in 1966-69. (Staff Photo)

McGinnis Signs Multi-Year Deal

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia 76ers will not say how much the club is paying George McGinnis, but admit that next season "we'll have to sell a lot more tickets."

The National Basketball Association team's general manager, Pat Williams, said the multi-year contract McGinnis signed with the club Thursday for a reported $2.5 million was "one of the top number contracts in sports."

"I'm coming to Philadelphia strictly from the economic standpoint," said McGinnis, who played the past four seasons with the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association and was co-winner of the league's Most Valuable Player award last season.

"Indiana couldn't come close to matching this offer," he said.

The New York Knicks did, however, and McGinnis became a 76er only after a controversy was resolved by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

The 76ers acquired NBA rights to McGinnis, a native of Indianapolis, when they drafted him in the second round in 1973. He had left the University of Indiana as a sophomore in 1971 to begin his pro career.

Earlier this year the Knicks signed McGinnis, whom some consider to be the best forward in basketball, for a reported $500,000 and announced it at a news conference.

But the contract was struck down by O'Brien on the grounds it violated NBA rules. McGinnis then suggested he would be willing to play in Philadelphia if the price were right.

"Being from Indiana," McGinnis said, "I'm not used to big cities. I don't like them. I didn't like New York, even though I signed with them."

"I feel we did everything humanly possible to keep George," said Bill Eason, who owns 50 per cent of the Pacers and is chairman of the board of Pacers' owners. "We feel we've done everything we possibly could short of financial suicide."

"Our major problem is to maintain a viable franchise and not go bankrupt," Eason said.

"I admit the team (76ers) has been in the red the past few years," said Irv Kosloff, owner of the 76ers, who also recently signed high school star Darryl Dawkins to a six-figure contract. "Having George McGinnis playing for us is a step in the right direction to getting in the black."

"This team can show a profit next season even with all the large contracts. We'll have to sell a lot more tickets, but we now have the team to do it," Kosloff said.

OU Faces Possible Probation—Again

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — The Big Eight Conference is investigating an allegation of a minor incident involving Oklahoma, but no one has proposed putting the Sooners football team on probation again, according to university Vice President J.R. Morris.

An Oklahoma City newspaper reported the Big Eight Conference would consider another probation for Oklahoma next month, and it could result in the Sooners dropping out of the league.

"In the first place the University of Oklahoma will go off probation in August," Morris said Thursday. "There is not now nor has there been any action or expectation to the contrary."

"During the period of probation which has been reviewed by the Big Eight commissioner's office and reported to the member schools there were no alleged recruiting violations," he said. "There was one incident which is of minor nature under investigation. No one has proposed that we remain on probation because of it."

The incident Morris mentioned apparently was the one mentioned by Journal sports writer Al Eschbach, who said the University of Colorado complained about recruiting of running back Terry Miller. Eschbach said the complaint alleged Sooner linemen LeRoy and Dewey Selmon visited Colorado and may have helped Oklahoma recruit.

Miller wound up at Oklahoma State, and played last season as a freshman.

"This is not the time to present all of the details but we feel that there has been no serious violation and no intent on anyone's part to violate any rule or regulation," Morris said.

Superstars Win Over Go Getters

In Opti-Mrs. Softball American League Thursday night, the Superstars defeated the Go Getters 12-2. Winning Pitcher was Tamara Glasscock and losing pitcher was Donna Preston.

Other softball scores, in the girls softball division, Rosita Santa Cruz pitched her team (the Hobos) to a 18-7 victory over the Oilers.

"Every conceivable effort has been exerted since Barry Switzer became head coach to insure that recruiting violations do not occur and there have been none."

Morris said his statement was intended to clarify the situation because of "rumors and misinformation."

"The speculation now being presented does not serve our program nor does it represent the facts," Morris said.

A Birmingham, Ala., newspaper also recently said Oklahoma was to appear before a Big Eight Conference committee within a month.

The Oklahoma Journal said Thursday the discussion was started in May and would be resumed in Chicago Aug. 14-16 when conference athletic directors gather in conjunction with the NCAA meetings.

Oklahoma has been on probation two years because of the Kerry Jackson altered transcript case.

Astros Manager Fired

HOUSTON (UPI) — H.B. Richardson, the Houston Astros general manager, leaned way back behind his workingman's desk, doing the usual things. He twirled his glasses in his hand, puffed on a stogie and looked off in space.

He also tried hard to hold back the tears.

Criticized heavily of late by Astros fans who never met him but who daily saw their team fall farther and farther behind the Cincinnati Reds, Richardson had just been fired.

His boss, Sidney L. Shlenker, said moments before at a hastily called news conference Thursday that his announcement was one of the most difficult of his life.

"None of us are comfortable, happy, what have you, with this decision," Shlenker said.

Richardson, 51, likewise, was careful not to criticize anyone in the organization. The only person he praised, though, in a terse statement was his friend and Astro-dome founder Judge Roy Hofheinz.

"It's been an unfortunate season," Richardson said. "If I could have put my finger on it, I would have done something about it. It's not something you can change by changing one or two positions."

But as the Astros plunged to per also recently said Oklahoma was to appear before a Big Eight Conference committee within a month.

The most infamous one was the 1971 swap in which Richardson sent Astros Joe Morgan, Cesar Geronimo, Jack Billingham, Denis Menke and Ed Armbrister to Cincinnati for Lee May, Tommy Helms and Jimmy Stewart. Morgan and Geronimo start for the Reds, and Billingham is a starting pitcher. Helms is the only one of the three Astros acquisitions still on the team, and he has not played this year.

The Astros have also traded away John Mayberry, Rusty Staub and Jerry Reuss, to name a few, with Richardson calling the shots.

When asked about how he looks back at those trades, Richardson leaned forward in his chair.

"I wasn't concerned about it then. I'm not concerned about it today," he said. "That may be the wrong outlook, but that's the one I've got. I thought I did the best for the team each time."

Asked what changes he would make in his actions during the years, Richardson replied: "Nothing."

Xavier Cugat Wants To Be Father at 80

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Charo, Xavier Cugat's saucy, spritely, young wife, famous for her figure and her "cuchi-cuchi," is slated to star in her own television series next fall her agent, Norman Brokaw, says.

However, series or no, Charo says she can only concentrate upon her career for another five years, because Cugie wants a baby when he's 80.

"That will be five years from now," Charo bubbles. "Cugie says he wants to be like Charlie Chaplin."

"So, when he's 80, we'll have a baby, and maybe I won't have so much time to work."

"I think we'll name the baby for our chihuahua, Delilah, if it's a girl, and Pepe if it's a boy."

Born in Murcia, Spain, Charo was convent educated and considers herself a faithful if unorthodox Catholic, despite the fact she was married out of the church to a divorced man.

"My uncle is a bishop and I have many cousins who are nuns," Charo says. "I went to my uncle to see whether we could get our marriage recognized by the church, but he couldn't help us."

"I think Cugie got a little offended."

"If we have a baby, this may be a little problem, since the church doesn't consider us married. But we don't have to worry about that for five years."

"Anyway, I don't think I'm doing something wrong living with Cugie."

Asked whether she'd recommend a May-December union such as hers to every young girl, Charo answers with an emphatic, "No."

"There are many things to marriage including character and respect," she says, "and I respect Cugie for his character and his mind. Robert Redford should have Cugie's brain!"

"I love Cugie like a husband and also like a father and a brother and a friend. He brought me and my sister from Spain, and I am very grateful. I could never leave him."

"But when someone my age is married to a man 75, there is no balance. In that case, the husband is king of the family."

"It takes principal and character to have a marriage like that."

"But Cugie and I get along well, because we have so much in common. We talk about music and writing and all sorts of things."

On the other hand, Charo admits, "My parents thought I'd gone crazy when I married."

"My father met Cugie for the first time two years after our marriage, and he said, 'You married that thing?'"

"Cugie answered, 'I am not a thing. I am king of the rhumba.'"

"Now he and my father are good friends. My father calls Cugie about twice a month."

Charo is proud of her husband's artistic talent which not only allows him to sell his paintings at substantial prices but cuts down on the cost of wardrobe upkeep. Pointing to the handpainted

Charo

—Motherhood or Career?

flowers on her close-fitting leather trousers, Charo beamed, "Cugie painted these to cover grease spots. When I got a spot on these pants, Cugie painted a flower over it. Then he painted a flower over another spot, and another. And now I have flowered pants."

Bicentennial Quiz

How's your American history? Here's a test to put you in tune with the Bicentennial. The questions have to do with circumstances and events attending the nation's founding 200 years ago.

Copley News Service

(A) Who was the "martyred saint" whose murder inflamed Colonial indignation and brought further recruits to the patriot cause?

(B) Why was the Battle of Trenton unusually quiet?

(C) Who was considered a serious rival to Washington as commander in chief?

(D) Apart from their lack of clothing, food and equipment, the ordeal of winter campaigns and the formidable British army, the American patriots were threatened by a more elusive enemy. What was it?

(E) Benedict Arnold "burned his boats," figuratively speaking, when he betrayed the patriot cause and went over to the British. But there was an earlier occasion when he literally burned his boats. Do you know when and where?

(A) Lovely 23-year-old Jenny McCrea of New Jersey, scalped by Indians of Burgoyne's army on July 27, 1777. The incident, seized on as propaganda and reported in newspapers throughout New England, shocked and horrified the Colonists. Though it was but one of several atrocities, Jenny's name became a watchword.

(B) Rain and snow had drenched weapons on both sides. Flints would not spark; musket touchholes were clogged with wet powder. Most fighting was done with sword and bayonet. Some artillery fire and soldiers' cries were the only added noise.

(C) Gen. Horatio Gates, who after Saratoga became a national hero, more popular than Washington, and considered by many to be superior to him as a strategist and tactician. Disgrace came later, however, with his defeat and retreat at Camden (Aug. 16, 1780) in the Carolina campaign.

(D) Smallpox — a dread disease at the time, and the scourge of the troops. It ravaged their encampments. Washington's own face was pitted with the marks.

He ordered inoculation, and this had some success, although at one time a third of his army was ill from the treatment.

(E) On Lake Champlain, N.Y., Oct. 12, 1776, after a gallant naval action against a superior British fleet, Arnold was forced to retreat with his ships shot to pieces.

Cacti, Succulents, Reptiles

A porcupine, bottom foreground, curls up on a limb in his den at Living Desert State Park, Carlsbad, N.M. A Spanish motif park headquarters is the central feature of the park which contains thousands of cacti and animals native to the American southwest.

Living Desert Park Displays Southwest

CARLSBAD, N.M. — In the four years since Living Desert State Park opened its plant and animal displays to the public, more than 175,000 persons have visited the unique attraction.

There are over 5,000 varieties of cacti and succulent plants in the park, along with most of the mammals, birds and reptiles found in both arid and mountainous regions of the Southwest.

The bird exhibit contains 13 cages with walk-through area allowing visitors to stroll among the birds. Desert landscaping softens the already gentle lines of Spanish architecture used in construction.

The reptile exhibit has 11 dioramas, filled with creatures that give most people goose-bumps. Rattlesnakes are the most prominent, with diamondback, prairie, Guadalupe and rock rattlers on hand. There also are iguanas, coachwhip snakes, Gila monsters, garter snakes and salamanders on display.

At the eastern end of the park, at the edge of a bluff overlooking Carlsbad and the Pecos River Valley, the hooved animals are housed. They include American bison, or buffalo, kudu, elk, and javalina, a wild pig native to the Southwest.

The park provides an excellent frame for two world-famed collections of cacti. The Charlie Mieg collection, long housed in Phoenix and valued at over $150,000, now belongs to the park, as does the small John Blea collection from Roswell, N.M.

Among the 5,000 varieties are several boogum trees from Mexico's Baja California peninsula. The odd plants seem to be one of Mother Nature's goofs, because they look more like a long tap root growing up from the ground than they do a tree.

Fragile organ pipe cactus, Joshua trees, century plants and giant saguaro stand like sentries along the park's many trails. Tiny sand dollars, bishop's caps, living rocks and other small plants hug the earth, in contrast to their tall, upright cousins.

The bear grotto is a favorite with the kids. Two female black bears make their home there.

The nocturnal exhibit, a maze which tunnels under the park's surface, features lighted exhibits of the burrows of small Southwestern animals.

Included in the exhibit are a kit fox, racoons, ring-tailed cats, badgers, porcupines and squirrels. Outside the exhibit, the animals can enter an exercise and fresh air pit straight from their dens. Visitors can see them from either location.

The otter pond is a favorite attraction at the park. These sleek aquatic clowns perform their antics to the delight of youngsters. The otters can be seen from three different levels: a window looking into their sleeping quarters, a window below water level and one above the water line.

Another sight is the prairie dog town. The shrill whistle of the burrowing animals attracts visitors to their domain, where the little animals play hide-and-seek, popping up and down in their burrows.

The park is owned by the State of New Mexico, but is managed for the state by the City of Carlsbad.

It is located on a high hill just northwest of Carlsbad on U.S. 285. The park is open seven days a week and is lighted for night viewing.

Rocky Asks Ford To Delay Choice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson Rockefeller says it was his idea that President Ford should run an independent campaign and not select a running mate until after securing the nomination at the 1976 Republican convention.

Rockefeller told reporters Wednesday he was not dismayed at statements by Ford's campaign manager that the President would not run a Ford-Rockefeller campaign, because that is what he had recommended all along.

"It's my strategy," Rockefeller said. "That's what I've been telling him (Ford). That's what I've been saying for six months."

Rockefeller talked with newsmen after returning from Atlanta, where he presided over a day-long meeting of the National Commission on Water Quality and met privately with Republican

"Let's be frank about it, the important thing is to get President Ford nominated, hopefully unanimously, at the convention," Rockefeller said. "Then, following the historical pattern, he picks a running mate. Not before."

Later Rockefeller added: "Look at it this way. Unless President Ford gets the nomination, I can forget it. If Ronald Reagan gets the nomination, I'd never get it."

Rockefeller said he had discussed the issue with both Ford and his campaign manager, Howard "Bo" Calloway. He said to his knowledge there is no change in Ford's previous strong statements that he intends to have Rockefeller on the 1976 ticket.

"But I'm not running, I'm not campaigning," Rockefeller said. "I don't think anyone's ever heard of anyone running for vice president of the United States."

President Ford's 18-year-old daughter is working on her first feature assignment with the Topeka Capital-Journal where she is spending six weeks as a photography intern.

Photography director Rich Clarkson said Miss Ford took pictures Wednesday for a feature on a marriage counselor and the effect his job has on his own marriage. He said she would return to take some additional shots today.

Clarkson said the President's daughter probably will not be working on a spot news basis until she completes the project.

Miss Ford's first photo effort was carried on the front page of the morning Daily Capital, identified only by a tiny agate type label reading "Staff photo by Susan Ford."

Miss Ford, with the help of Clarkson and the Capital-Journal management, is keeping a low profile on the job. Newspaper staff members say they hardly see her since she is mainly confined to the photo offices and lab when in the building.

Sex Therapists Often Quacks

Behavior Modification Used By US Thousands

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Up to 50,000 Americans are undergoing metal therapy designed to change their behavior, says the director of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Called behavior modification by mental health professionals and attacked by some critics as "mind control," the various forms of treatment offered by perhaps 100 therapists five years ago are now being used by possibly 3,000 of the 70,000 psychiatrists, psychologists and clinicians, said Dr. Bertram Brown.

Brown released a report on behavior modification Wednesday. It said adverse public reaction is for the most part unjustified. But the doctor estimated one-third of the practitioners of sex therapy are "outright quacks."

He estimated 30,000 to 50,000 persons are receiving behavior modification that can include treatment to make alcoholics sick of liquor, stop autistic children from mutilating themselves or help the impotent or frigid adjust their sexual behavior.

Brain operations to change behavior, called psychosurgery, is another type of behavior modification.

Brown released an NIMH report that attempts to dispel public fears about "mind control" and the techniques discussed in such novels as "1984," "A Clockwork Orange" and "Brave New World."

The report discloses the federal government spends more than $3 billion a year on behavior modification research.

Brown, speaking with reporters, offered the first estimates of how widespread the programs are. "These groups (of patients) are growing rapidly," he said. "My concern would be that there be some sort of quality control."

The abilities of the therapists and the techniques they use range from "the majority being quite good to outright charlatanism or quackery," Brown said. He estimated one-third of the sexual therapists are "untrained, unfit or outright quacks."

Behavior modification is most successful in treating phobias, ritualistic behavior—the person who can't stop washing his hands—or sexual dysfunction like most forms of impotence or frigidity, said Brown.

He said the report was released because behavior modification has been viewed in the context of "the CIA, fascism, totalitarianism and mind control."

Briscoe Opposes Ford In Highway Tax System

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Thursday the National Highway Trust Fund is vital to Texas and the nation and he opposes President Ford's proposal to divide the fund's revenue for the first time.

"A state as large and as complex as Texas survives and prospers by its highway system," Briscoe said in a statement released through his office.

"Since 1917, we have been working toward creating the finest highway system in the nation and while we are well along towards that goal, much yet needs to be done. I feel that the National Highway Trust Fund is still vital to the nation and to Texas and I cannot support the President's suggestion that it be abolished."

Ford, who sent the proposal to Congress earlier this week, recommended the 4 cents a gallon gasoline tax which produces revenue for the Highway Fund be split with 1 cent to the fund, 2 cents to the Federal General Revenue Fund and 1 cent tentatively returned to the states.

Briscoe said the offer to return gasoline tax money to the states "covers up their attempt to move 2 cents into the federal treasury and away from the states."

He said the gasoline tax has traditionally been a major source of state revenue.

"Texas was the second state in the Union to pass a gasoline tax in 1917. When the Highway Trust Fund was created in the 1950s, it was understood that the revenue would remain dedicated for the construction of a national system of transportation, and when that goal was completed, the revenue source would be returned to the states," Briscoe said.

Ford also proposed the federal government assume maintenance of the interstate highway system to offset part of the revenue loss to the states.

"My concern is that the nation not start on the path toward a fragmented national transportation system. I think that other parts of the country need to understand the unique transportation requirements of a state like Texas and understand how those requirements affect the food that reaches their tables, the clothes they wear and the energy they consume."

Word on Fed Grant Six Weeks Away

It may be four to six weeks before Pampa gets word on the amount of its federal grant for construction of the city's proposed $1.5 million sewage treatment plant.

That was the information obtained from the federal Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday afternoon by U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower's Washington office.

Ivan Sinclair, a member of Congressman Hightower's staff, contacted the EPA Washington office and said he was told:

"Pampa's application for the grant is in the process of being completed and it will take four to six weeks before announcement comes on the grant."

Sinclair said that was an exact quote from the EPA official.

The EPA was notified Pampa voters had approved a $300,000 bond issue and a $100,000 fund transfer to pay the city's estimated share of the plant construction cost.

Pampa's application for the grant was made nearly two years ago after the federal agency committed itself to pay 75 per cent of the cost.

Warner-Horton Janitor Supply

"Doc" Warner and Benny Horton

Beginning with milk routes and moving on to a service station, Greeley Warner finally settled on opening a janitor supply store in Pampa in 1954.

The store became Warner-Horton Janitor Supply in 1972 when Warner invited his son-in-law, Benny Horton, to join him. Horton was previously a civil service electronics technician in Virginia. Warner semi-retired from the business in 1973 leaving Horton in charge.

Both men said they enjoyed being in business for themselves. "It's kind of slow here but that way we have time to talk with our customers," Horton said.

Horton explained that the biggest difference that he noticed between Pampa and the big city he had moved from was the drivers. "I thought that a smaller place would have safer drivers but I don't believe so here," said Horton. He explained that he drives about 50 miles a day in town on deliveries and feels that if he were an unmarked police car he could give out about 12 tickets a day for running lights and such. "The only problem is that I find myself falling into the same trends every once in a while."

Warner-Horton Janitor Supply, 112 N. Somerville sells mostly to big businesses but they also sell to housewives. "We carry most every maintenance and cleaning supply a person could need, said Horton. "We carry anything from bar soap to commercial floor cleaning machines."

The men believe they could help a lot more people in town if the people only realized it. "We could save a lady from being on her hands and knees all day stripping a floor with one of our commercial floor strippers which sets for a couple minutes and comes off."

Both men agreed that business had been real good. "We have a lot of local customers," said Horton. "One advantage to being a local business is that we can deliver the afternoon that the item is ordered."
