

Historic Linkup in Space Successful

HOUSTON (UPI) — Three Americans and two Russians docked in orbit today and, after a brief scare from a burning smell, went ahead with plans to transfer crews in history's first meeting of men from two nations in space.

The acrid smell was first noticed when a hatch was opened between the American Apollo cabin and the docking module linking the craft to the Soviet Soyuz.

Houston control ordered Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton to put on oxygen masks when the problem was first noticed. But later, the concern of controllers in Houston eased and the astronauts were told there probably wasn't any trouble.

Cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov calmly waited in their Soyuz during the excitement, reporting to their control center in Moscow that all was normal aboard the Russian craft.

"We think probably the most likely explanation is we've had the docking module locked up for 4 1/2 hours and the smell just built up a little bit," ground communicator Richard Truly told the Americans. "We don't expect any problem. We'll let you know."

The astronauts apparently never did put the oxygen masks on, but Stafford said the masks were at their sides, ready for use if necessary.

The Americans said the smell resembled burning glue or acetone.

"I'm just standing by here to see if I feel any different, but I still feel pretty good," Slayton told concerned ground controllers fearing that there was a possibility that gases might overcome the pilots. "I still feel pretty good. I'm not used to sniffing glue."

A few minutes later, Slayton reported he had entered the docking module and everything was still okay. "No health problems."

The two ships, now 66 feet long, were scheduled to stay hooked together for 44 hours with the spacemen sharing meals, work and telecasts to earth showing the historic space adventure by the world's two space powers.

The Apollo, with Stafford at the controls, moved smoothly toward the Soyuz for the docking. The special docking module attached to the nose of the modified U.S. moonship clasped identical hookup apparatus on the Soyuz.

"We have succeeded," exclaimed Stafford.

He then activated devices that pulled the two ships tightly together for what space engineers called a "hard dock." Leonov monitored instruments aboard Soyuz during the operation and told Moscow control in Russian, "everything is normal."

Leonov and Kubasov were in an orbit ranging from 137 to 139 miles high when the American pilots began the rendezvous maneuvers earlier in the day. Stafford and his crew used the classic catchup procedure developed for moon landing missions.

Every engine firing of the American ship went off with precision. And as Stafford first met Soyuz over the Pacific Ocean and crossed over South America, he said, "We have it wired," meaning it was going as smoothly as possible.

At docking, engineers in the Moscow control center stood up and applauded. There were big smiles on their faces. American controllers in Houston also cheered.

Three hours before rendezvous the spacemen established radio communications and happily exchanged greetings in each other's language. Soyuz first appeared to the astronauts as a bright star.

The Apollo caught up with the Russian spacecraft as the two ships approached the coast of South America about 11:47 a.m. EDT.

"You can see his antenna from out here, Dick," Stafford told ground communicator Richard Truly.

At 12:02 p.m., the Apollo pilots turned on their television camera and showed Soyuz ahead, its broad solar panels extended from both sides.

"Please tell us when you begin your maneuvering," Stafford said in Russian. "Soyuz docking system is ready," replied Leonov in English.

"I see your spacecraft," Leonov said. Brand replied that he could see Soyuz and, "it's very beautiful."

"Three hundred meters," said Leonov, referring to the distance between the two ships as Stafford fired control jets to brake the Apollo and begin a few minutes of formation flying before the linkup. Then Moscow control said 50 meters.

Mind Ajar

By JANE P. MARSHALL

Co-managing Editor Rex McAnelly of Moody Farms Feed Lot commented on Pampa's strong economy and ability of some ranchers around here to withstand a few hard market knocks when he said, "Nothing helps cattle like being able to scratch up against an oil well."

Some cities erect signs at the edges of town which boast, "city with pride." Pampa doesn't seem to have such signs. But it should and, according to calls and letters to The News this week, the lettering could read "good neighbor city."

A couple from Miami writes that they got their car stuck in a mud hole at a local eatery here last week. Six or eight teenage boys helped them out. "Some got real muddy," Mrs. L. said. They offered to pay the young men but "they would not accept anything. That goes to show that all teenagers are not bad."

"I don't know who they are. If they see this I want to thank them again," she continued. Another good neighbor in Pampa is Arvello Carpenter.

Fay Monroe called us to publicly thank Ms. Carpenter for retrieving a valuable turquoise ring which Mrs. Harvey Downs lost.

The Downs from New Mexico were visiting the Monroe when Mrs. Downs lost the ring outside of Jim's Steak House.

The managers, the Brockbanks, helped look for the missing valuable. Mrs. Monroe said, before Mrs. Carpenter called the steak house and asked if the ring had been lost.

Within 20 minutes, it was returned.

"You don't run across people like that every day," Mrs. Monroe reported. But some neighbors aren't so great around here.

Leola Pollard, dispatcher with the Pampa Police Department, can testify to that.

She was preparing a Saturday night feast of barbecued roast for guests and went in the house to finish the meal while the roast finished cooking.

But when she went to fetch the main course it was gone.

No clues were uncovered but she is sure the thief was two legged and must have brought a pan to make a fast getaway with the hot roast.

Mrs. Pollard was doubly dependent: her guests had to eat hamburgers and she lost a considerable investment.

Howardwick recently dedicated its new city hall which Mrs. Joe L. Wells, secretary-treasurer of the community, loves to brag about.

The hall may be small, she said, but it is paid for! Something to boast about when so many giant cities are going broke.

"We are practically broke but not in debt," she said.

She asked the young Pampan who recently lost a class ring at Howardwick to please contact Jim Milam at The Canteen. The ring has been found.

Dr. Harbord L. Cox began raising Appaloosa horses about a year ago. The local dentist pursues his avocation at his BAR DK (bar decay) Appaloosa Ranch near Pampa.

Incidentally, the Lions club is putting on an Appaloosa show beginning at 9 a.m. Friday at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena here.

Pampa Housing Shortage Spurs New Attack Plan

By THOM MARSHALL

Pampa News Staff Gene Steel, president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, said today that the chamber, working with the Pampa Industrial Foundation, is going to "change from a position of encouragement to one of actively pursuing" anyone interested in solving or helping to solve Pampa's housing shortage.

Members of the foundation and the chamber met in the chamber conference room today for the purpose of updating information on efforts to correct the housing problems — "where we are and where we are going," Steel said.

As part of the active pursuit policy, a new brochure has been prepared as a joint effort of the chamber and the foundation. It is entitled "Pampa Housing Development Program" and will be made available to investors, developers, and others who are interested in undertaking projects that would help provide Pampans with adequate housing.

"The Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Industrial Foundation are assuming that local investors and builders have made any decisions about housing that they intend to make," Steel said.

He commented that Pampa is left "with a very critical housing shortage" and that there are outside investors interested in the problems. He did not mention who the outside investors are.

Kay Fancher, president of the Pampa Industrial Foundation, said that most of the contents of the brochure come from local employers who need housing for their people. He also credited the Southwestern Public Service Area Development Group and other utilities representatives.

Included in the brochure are sites for possible construction — "areas that could possibly be available for development," Fancher said.

He said that builders and developers will need to make their own contacts on any land transactions because the land owners have not been contacted by the chamber of foundation.

"Some people may not be interested in selling," Fancher said.

The potential areas represent all parts of Pampa and were selected by an "outside group without regard to the owners," Steel said. "In all probability much other suitable property was not included."

A letter from Mack Wofford, city manager, summarized city land and subdivision requirements.

Letters from many local employers and businessmen emphasized the housing problems.

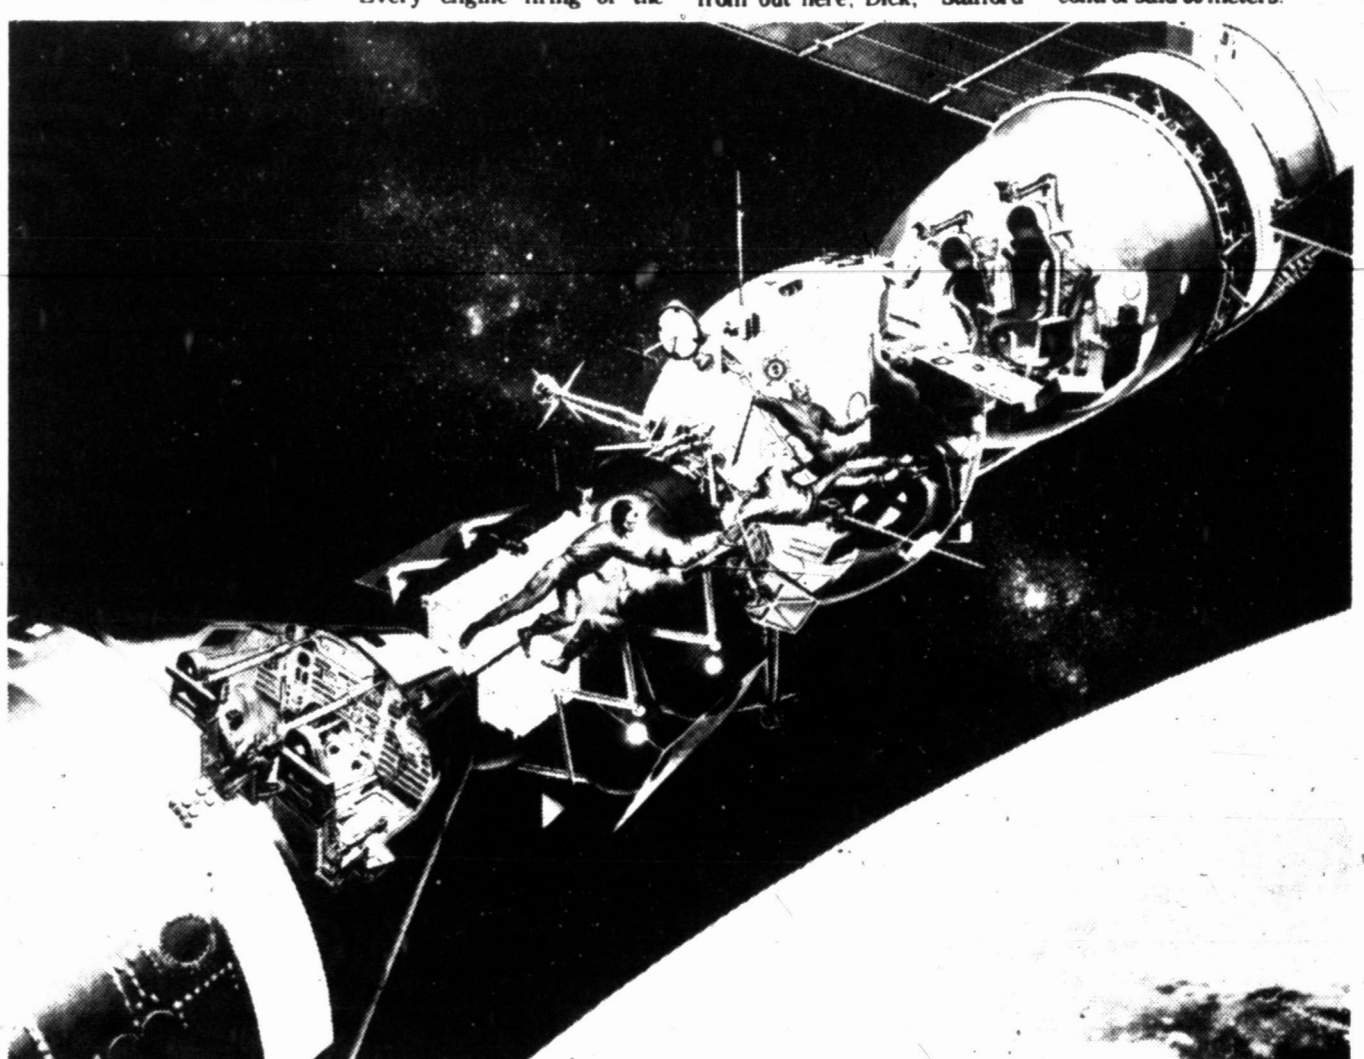

V.P. Raymond of the Machinery Division of Cabot Corporation wrote: "We are in need of additional skilled employees to meet our production demands without further increasing overtime."

He said that "There have been occasions where skilled individuals accepted employment with the Machinery Division but failed to find suitable housing and thus had to turn down our offer."

Gary Stevens of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company wrote: "We have had several employees that have just recently moved to Pampa and have been unable to find adequate housing."

Writing for Celanese, Gene Steel, manager of the Pampa plant, said, "the number one problem in hiring new professionals is the lack of suitable housing."

At today's meeting, only five copies of the brochure had been completed. Others are expected to be available soon.

Meeting in Space

This artist's concept depicts the historic moment when American astronauts and Soviet cosmonauts will greet each other which was slated for 12:15 p.m. today. The first crew transfer was set for 3:17 today when Stafford and Slayton were to move from the docking module to Soyuz, joining Leonov and Kubasov for initial greetings and to exchange flags and letters. The second transfer will be at 5:02 a.m. Friday when the cosmonauts visit Apollo for brunch.

Signs, Soup for Guests

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts prepared Russian borscht and put up welcome signs today to greet three American astronauts in space.

As the pursuing U.S. Apollo ship neared its quarry, the two-man Soyuz 19, for a scheduled 12:15 p.m. EDT docking — history's first meeting in space between men of two nations — Soyuz commander Alexei Leonov spoke to Moscow mission control.

The controller told him Apollo was making all preparations for the rendezvous.

Leonov replied "We are ready, too. We cooked some borscht and put up slogans."

Later Leonov and his engineer, Valeri Kubasov, established direct communications with the American ship and chatted for the first time in space.

The two Russians have been so busy, they said earlier they had no time to stow their space suits and helmets which are not required in orbit.

But the two cosmonauts promised television viewers to have their tiny cabin tidied up in time "to receive our guests."

One of the tasks taking up much of their time was repairing a balky television camera that had prevented viewers on earth from watching their activities in space.

Leonov and Kubasov got up an hour earlier than planned to work on the camera, which was finally fixed under the direction of experts at their control center.

The picture of Leonov with Kubasov floating by upside down highlighted the first day of cabin telecasts to millions of Soviet viewers back on earth.

The cosmonauts also received a radio call Wednesday from two orbiting colleagues aboard the Soviet Union's Salyut space laboratory.

Lt. Col. Pyotry Klimuk and civilian Vitaly Sevastiyaynov, now in their 55th day in space, said the Soyuz duo they were delighted there were five more men in orbit.

"We feel better with company," said Klimuk. "Now we are the magnificent seven."

There was laughter from both ships.

Klimuk congratulated the Soyuz crewmen on their achievements and Leonov replied, "We also greet you as oldtimers in space."

Referring to the just-fixed television system, Leonov added, "If you need anything repaired, don't stand on ceremony. Just come to us for help."

The cosmonauts seemed relaxed and in good humor.

At one point, when Kubasov reported some data, Soviet mission control replied in English: "Thank you for your kindness."

"You're welcome," Kubasov said with an American accent.

Timetable for Flight

HOUSTON (UPI) — Timetable of major events today and Friday for the Apollo-Soyuz international spaceflight (all times EDT and subject to change):

Today, July 17
8:54 a.m. — Apollo fires main engine to shift into 115 by 102-mile-high orbit. Soyuz is now 290 miles from Apollo.
9:38 a.m. — Apollo uses main engine to move into orbit ranging from 115 to 128 miles high. Soyuz is now 167 miles from Apollo.
10:15 a.m. — Apollo maneuvers into orbit ranging from 126 to 128 miles high.
10:14 a.m. — Apollo begins final phase of rendezvous maneuvers, switching into 130 by 128-mile-high orbit. Soyuz is now 24 miles away.
11:46 a.m. — Apollo begins to brake, goes into orbit 138 to 137 miles high. Soyuz is rapidly approaching.
12:11 p.m. — Apollo begins to approach Soyuz (TV).
12:15 p.m. — Apollo docks with Soyuz. Both spacecraft are 136 miles high (TV).
1:49 p.m. — Seven-minute Apollo telecast.
2:59 p.m. — Seven-minute telecast from the docking module.
3:17 p.m. — First crew transfer: Stafford and Slayton move from docking module to Soyuz, joining Leonov and Kubasov for initial greetings. Flags and letters are exchanged (TV).
4:14 p.m. — Joint flight certificate is signed in Soyuz, followed by joint meal in Soviet spacecraft.

5 p.m. — Five-minute telecast from docking module followed by nine-minute telecast at 5:14 p.m.

5:31 p.m. — Stafford leaves Soyuz, preceded by Slayton.

7:20 p.m. — Astronauts begin eight-hour sleep period; cosmonauts begin 7 1/2 hour sleep period.

Friday, July 18

2:50 a.m. — Cosmonauts awaken.

3:20 a.m. — Astronauts awaken.

5:02 a.m. — Second crew transfer begins: Stafford moves to docking module followed by Brand. Brand then enters Soyuz. Leonov moves to docking module and enters the Apollo for first time at 6:56 a.m. followed by Stafford. Thus Stafford, Leonov and Slayton are in Apollo and Brand and Kubasov are in Soyuz (TV).
7:40 a.m. — Joint flight certificates signed in the Apollo, and Leonov and the two Americans join halves of plaques brought up in each spacecraft. Similar ceremonies are carried out in the Soyuz between Brand and Kubasov.

8:53 a.m. — Television tour of Russia as seen from orbit with commentary in English from Kubasov (TV).
10 a.m. — Leonov, Stafford and Slayton eat in Apollo followed at 10:30 with commentary by Leonov in Russian about American space food. Joint meal also occurs in the Soyuz with Brand commenting at 10:34 a.m. in English on Russian space food (TV).
5:52 p.m. — Last crew transfer ends with Slayton returning to Apollo from docking module.
7:30 p.m. — Leonov and Kubasov begin 7-hour 10-minute sleep period in Soyuz.
8:30 p.m. — Stafford, Brand and Slayton begin 8-hour sleep period in Apollo.

11 a.m. — Third crew transfer begins: Leonov and Stafford go to Soyuz and Brand and Kubasov join Slayton in the Apollo (TV).
11:47 a.m. — Forty-three minute telecast begins of crew activities in docking module and Soyuz.
1:16 p.m. — Forty-one minute telecast of joint activities.
1:30 p.m. — Stafford and Leonov, speaking their own languages, open joint, in-flight news conference with introductory statements. Conference ends at 2 p.m. (TV).
2:41 p.m. — Brand, speaking in Russian in the Apollo, conducts TV tour of Florida and the U.S. east coast.
3 p.m. — Brand and Kubasov sign joint flight certificates and join medalion halves in the Apollo. Kubasov presents Russian pine tree seeds to Brand and Slayton. In the Soyuz, Stafford gives American pine tree seeds to Leonov (TV).
3:14 p.m. — Fourth crew transfer begins: Stafford moves to Soyuz with experiment equipment and returns to docking module. Kubasov moves to Soyuz and Stafford returns to Apollo. Crewmen say farewell (TV).
5:52 p.m. — Last crew transfer ends with Slayton returning to Apollo from docking module.
7:30 p.m. — Leonov and Kubasov begin 7-hour 10-minute sleep period in Soyuz.
8:30 p.m. — Stafford, Brand and Slayton begin 8-hour sleep period in Apollo.

Scout Camp Fishing Hole

This scout is one of about 80 area Boy Scouts now attending the first week of summer activities at Camp M.K. Brown located about seven miles east of Wheeler and three miles north of Highway 152. Annual inspection of the camp by two executive board members from Lubbock was set for today and the annual summer camp executive board meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Board members, spouses and major contributors have been invited to attend the board meeting.

Refugees Sit-in

FT. CHAFFEE, Ark. (UPI) — About 200 Vietnamese refugees today staged a sit-in demonstration, for the second day in a row, in front of the U.S. Catholic Conference, protesting officials' refusal to resettle 650 fishermen in Louisiana.

Catholic conference officials in Louisiana have said it is "unreasonable to try to relocate 650 persons en masse," said George Goss, deputy civil camp coordinator. "They have said they will relocate the fishermen in smaller groups in Louisiana, but not in one large group," Goss said.

Weather

Partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures are forecast for today and Friday. The highs today will be in the 80s, dropping to the mid 60s tonight.

ENERGY PLAN OUTLINED

Fuel study points way

The United States of America must avoid putting too many eggs in one basket as it undertakes a revolution in energy production during the last quarter of this century. That warning is implicit in the exhaustive study of energy resources recently released by the new Energy Research and Development Administration.

Our energy plight today stems from relying far too heavily on petroleum and natural gas to sustain our way of life and a major portion of our industrial capacity. In the clear view of hindsight the mistake is clear. These fuels are a finite resource, and we are currently at the mercy of foreign producers who can control both their price and their availability. We are getting a late start on energy technology that should have been undertaken years ago.

The ERDA report is not pessimistic, even if it casts doubt on the prospect that we can achieve substantial energy independence by the target year of 1985. How well we succeed depends on efforts to switch to new forms of energy, to develop more domestic oil and gas production, and to be frugal in the amount of energy we use for transportation and heating.

ERDA's cautionary words on the prospects for harnessing the nuclear fusion breeder reactor for producing electricity in the 1980s point out the pitfall of relying on one branch of technology still in its formative stage to make a significant impact on the energy problem. If the breeder now must be placed farther down the line, it means we will have to depend for a longer period on coal and conventional nuclear fission as a power source.

The breeder, which creates more fuel than it consumes, stands with nuclear fusion and solar energy as breakthroughs that would harness the world to an inexhaustible fuel supply. However, the growing pains that may overtake each of these technologies makes it difficult to fix a timetable for when any one of them may be expected to begin making a significant contribution to energy production. Obviously there must be parallel efforts toward development of all three.

ERDA correctly points out that in the near term our efforts must be devoted to overcoming the technological problems and environmental controversy standing in the way of greater use of coal and fission reactors to produce electricity. Coal gasification and extracting oil from shale are two other areas — costly, albeit within reach — to aid in achieving relief from our petroleum dependency in the 1980s.

Emerging from the ERDA report is a need for an energy program that will require a major investment and will create great challenges in monitoring and management. Our country, and indeed the rest of the world, is in a race with time to perfect the new technologies that will carry us through the energy crisis. While the time to have planned and organized this effort was yesterday, government and industry can use the ERDA report to get themselves in harness for a belated start toward the multiple goals that must guide our progress in energy development.

Oil fuels inflation

The ploy of the oil-producing nations to squeeze higher prices out of the world market despite a self-imposed "freeze" will undoubtedly accomplish its purpose.

But it may be counterproductive.

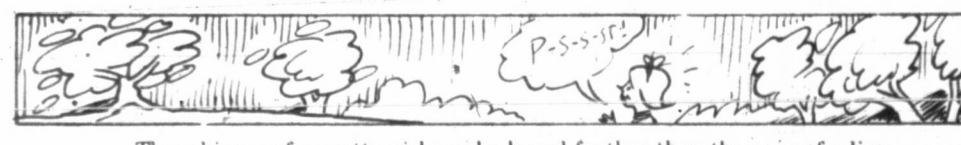

Ministers of the 13 nations in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to base the price of petroleum on the Special Drawing Rights system of monetary exchange instead of on the inflation-plagued dollar.

The immediate result will be an expected hike in the per barrel price of oil of about 30 cents. And over the long run, the move will add fuel to the inflationary flames, which are not contained within the United States borders.

Sooner or later, the cost of food and raw materials shipped to the oil nations will reflect the upward pressures.

Inflation is a global disease that will respond only to global remedies, a fact that has not yet penetrated, apparently, the euphoria of OPEC in its newly discovered economic power.

The whisper of a pretty girl can be heard further than the roar of a lion.

POLICE STATE SCRATCHED
India Off Ford's Itinerary

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, July 17 — One of President Ford's contemplated important foreign visits is being quietly moved to a back burner.

India, now an iron-fisted police state, has been scratched from the itinerary of his Asian trip in the fall. Tentative plans had called for the President spending several or more days in India, but that's off now — pending developments.

Foremost among them is what Prime Minister Gandhi does about convening Parliament. Usually it meets in July, for what is popularly known as the "monsoon session," but it's doubtful whether it will this year. Prime Minister Gandhi, who arbitrarily assumed dictatorial power several weeks ago, has made no move to summon the national legislature.

Under the constitution, the "Emergency" decree she proclaimed must be submitted to Parliament within 60 days. That deadline is the middle of August.

By that time it is anticipated the Supreme Court will have ruled on her appeal from the conviction by a lower court for corruption in her 1971 re-election campaign.

Undoubtedly the verdict of the Supreme Court will determine what the autocratic premier does about Parliament — and other matters, uppermost among them the national election slated for early next year.

Under India's flexible constitution, she could call it off. That probably would result in widespread uproar. But with opposition leaders imprisoned, the police and military firmly in her control, and the press and other media tightly muzzled, she could risk riding out the storm.

She dramatically demonstrated willingness to take that chance when she abruptly scuttled India's vaunted 28-year-old democracy and seized sweeping dictatorial powers — with the characteristically unctuous and self-righteous declaration she was doing it to "save democracy."

That hypocritical preaching is on a par with her pronouncement early last year, when India surprised the world by testing a nuclear weapon, that it was "for peaceful purposes."

Packed Court

It will be no surprise to U.S. specialists on India if Mrs. Gandhi's conviction is reversed.

The 13-member Supreme Court is clearly loaded in her favor.

Eight of the justices, including Chief Justice Aji Nath Ray, were personally hand-picked by her; the other five were installed during the incumbency of her late father, Jawaharlal Nehru.

That isn't all. The entire court isn't sitting on her case. It's being heard by a panel of six justices — named by her friend and political henchman Chief Justice Ray.

Cynical politicians in her own Congress party are offering 5 to 1 odds she will be exonerated by the packed panel.

They are also betting she will not give up her "emergency powers," and will continue her tight-fisted dictatorship — in the interest, of course, of the poor and needy and India's security and progress.

Tell-Tale Sidelights

A widely-read biography of Prime Minister Gandhi, published in India last year, bluntly said of her, "Many are convinced she is not averse to coming to terms with corrupt elements and at times even shielding them should that serve her political ends." The bestseller also related she said of her father, "He was a saint who strayed into politics, but I am not of such stuff."

In her role as a tough dictator, Mrs. Gandhi is quietly displaying a markedly mellow attitude towards the U.S. Washington was startled by a warmly cordial 4th of July greeting from New Delhi — the first in years. It was particularly astonishing as only a few months ago foreign minister Y.B. Chavan openly gloated at the fall of Saigon and this country's discomfiture is being forced to withdraw from South Vietnam and Cambodia.

With Mrs. Gandhi's obvious approval, Chavan gleefully hailed the Communists' triumph as a "gratifying vindication of the position maintained by India over the years."

Unmistakable reason for this abrupt change in attitude is the hope to wrangle more urgently needed economic aid from the U.S. Already there have been hints of that in the government-controlled press. Patently inspired articles have hailed help the U.S. has given India in the past and stressed the "desirability of continuing this friendship" — at our expense.

Several months ago, the U.S., notwithstanding Mrs. Gandhi's long record of carping criticism and hostility, in effect gave India 800,000 tons of grain under the food-for-peace program (P.L. 480). Nominally, it was an $80 million "sale"; that is, a 30-year credit, with a carrying charge of only 3 per cent and a 10-year grace period.

Reason most leaders of India's 60 million Moslems are backing Mrs. Gandhi's dictatorial rule is plain fear — of a revival of the bloody Hindu pogroms in which thousands of Moslems were massacred. It is significant that President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, a Moslem, signed the decree proclaiming the "state of emergency" which instituted the dictatorship. His "election" as president in 1974 was rigged by Mrs. Gandhi through her control of Parliament — which designates the president. She hand-picked Ahmed to insure her complete hold on the presidency, and also to reinforce her influence with the Moslems.

Coleman Report Author Says Busing Backfired

By MAX RAFFERTY

When lawyers make mistakes, it's embarrassing. When doctors make mistakes, it's often fatal. But when we educators make mistakes, it's infernally expensive.

During the Fifties, for instance, we sold the public on something called the "audio-lingual method" of teaching foreign languages. "Language labs" blossomed in every large high school, featuring sumptuous woofers and tweeters and tape decks and earphones to the tune of I don't know how many millions of dollars, and dedicated to the proposition that you could throw away the nasty old books in favor of a shortcut to learning. Needless to say, the idea laid a bomb, but the hardware still lingers on, rusting away quietly and expensively in the storage areas of a thousand schools.

The Sixties saw the advent of the "New Math," with all the experts assuring us that from now on everyone would understand for the first time in history exactly why seven times six equals 42. Now — 10 years later — the same experts have discovered that entirely to many high school graduates don't know that seven times six equals anything at all, and they are feverishly giving newspaper interviews urging that the "New Math" be junked.

But the biggest and costliest boo-boo of them all has been that of Prof. James S. Coleman, and I'm having trouble keeping my adjectives sufficiently restrained for use in a family newspaper when I contemplate this granddaddy of all debacles. His contribution to chaos? Forced busing.

Back in 1966, you see, Coleman burst into the headlines with his "Coleman Report," which found that black students do better in integrated schools. This finding has since served as the underlying rationale for all court-ordered busing, with its pitiful train of heartbreak, arson, mob violence, bombing and general disruption, to say nothing of the untold millions of school dollars which have been diverted from educational purposes to pay for this wildest of all wild hairs.

Ten years later, the good professor is having second thoughts — like these:

"In large cities, induced integration brought about as a result of court action seems to be self-defeating..."

"In some regions of the country, there's slightly less racial integration than there was back in 1968... This has been caused by resegregation due to white flight to the suburbs."

"We are seeing a general resegregation and increasing racial isolation in the public schools..."

"I think the courts should limit their actions to undoing the effects of official (de jure) discrimination. But the very large proportion of school segregation is due to individual action (de facto), and I think courts overstep their bounds when they try to counterbalance those individual actions."

There's more, but you get the picture.

When this character came out with his "Report" 10 years ago, some of us — shucks, I was one — were saying the same things almost word for word that he's saying now, so many years and so many millions of dollars later. What are we supposed to do now that he has finally seen the light? Forgive and forget? Murmur. "Mistakes will happen?"

Hogwash!

The situation is made even more poignant and excruciating by the collapse of Coleman's original premise, namely that black children would learn more if they went to school with whites. Subsequent findings in the Seventies indicate that the improvement — if any — has been so marginal as to be microscopic.

The damage is done — the harm immense and lasting. And it's impossible to unscramble an egg. But if Prof. Coleman thinks we're going to let him con us with this belated repentance bit, he's got another think coming.

I for one plan to be writing about him and his "Report" right up to the year 2000.

Bachelor's Scent Sends Women Off the Trail

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a very good friend. He is 34, single and a professional man. He's good company, and we enjoy having him over.

We know he'd like to be married and have a family, and he would make some woman a fine husband, but he is very much overweight. Besides that, he has a very bad odor because he seldom takes a bath or changes his clothes.

When he leaves, I have to spray the room. We are embarrassed to have other people over when he's visiting, and it's impossible to find him a date because we don't know any single girl who can't smell.

How can we make him realize the seriousness of this problem without losing a good friend?

BREATHLESS IN N.Y.

DEAR BREATHLESS: It would be an act of kindness if you (or your husband) would tell your friend that he simply must bathe and change his clothes regularly. Let him know that he has an offensive odor. It's hard to believe that a person could be this insensitive. Perhaps HE can't smell.

DEAR ABBY: I've been waiting on tables for only three weeks, but I have a problem that only you can solve.

I was told that under no circumstances should a customer help himself to coffee. (The coffee is on a burner in full view of the customers, and sometimes if the waitress is busy and can't get to the customer fast enough, he will get up and get his own coffee.)

Please tell me how a waitress can STOP someone from getting his own coffee? (We aren't allowed to hit a customer.)

Also, we are told that no customer is allowed to move tables or chairs, even to accommodate people who joined his table later. The waitress is supposed to do that, but what if the customer doesn't ask and just drags up extra chairs from another table?

I was told that if anybody else helped himself to coffee in my station, or moved the chairs or tables, it would cost me my job. Is that fair?

STUMPED WAITRESS

DEAR STUMPED: No. But such rules are made to keep you on your toes so that no one will attempt to pour his own coffee or clutter the aisles with extra chairs (a fire hazard). When you see a customer breaking these rules, tell him most emphatically that it will cost you your job if he doesn't desist.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine wanted to show her appreciation for a favor I did, so she gave me a box of candy. It was a well-known brand and not cheap, either.

When I got home and opened the box, I found it was wormy. Of course, I threw it in the garbage immediately.

Should I tell my friend that the candy was wormy? I know she would be upset if she knew. But since there's no way of proving it, she can't get her money back, so why make her feel bad?

On the other hand, I don't like the idea of telling her that the candy was great when it wasn't edible.

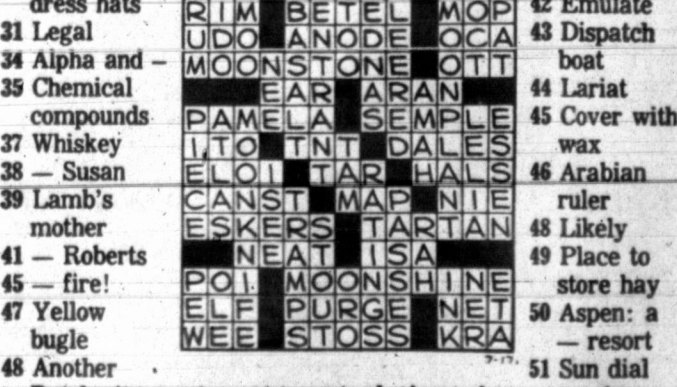

IN A BIND

DEAR IN: Tell her the truth. Even though she can't produce the evidence, she can report the candy to the manager. He would appreciate knowing, and if he's smart, he'll give her an edible box.

Russia Buys 2 Tons Wheat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. grain company has contracted to sell two million metric tons of wheat to Russia. But Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz says it won't have the drastic effect on U.S. consumer prices as did a larger sale in 1972.

Agriculture Department officials said Wednesday a company, later identified as Cook Industries, Inc., of Memphis, Tenn., had contracted to sell the hard winter wheat to the Soviets for delivery through August, 1976.

The price was not known. But at prices prevailing Wednesday the deal would be worth $294 million.

American farmers are having record grain crops and Soviet production this year is down. The sale was smaller than speculation had indicated. Deputy Assistant Agriculture Secretary Richard Bell said administration experts think Soviet purchases in the 1975-1976 season will total 5 to 10 million tons of corn and wheat combined.

Butz said sales in that range would be "well within our capability" and would have only minimal effect on food prices for American consumers.

Even if sales reach the upper 10 million ton limit predicted by Bell, they would still be far below the 19 million ton 1972 Soviet purchase of American grain that caught the government, farmers and consumers by surprise, raised U.S. food prices and helped disrupt the economy.

Butz has insisted no such impact is likely this time. He said that in light of this year's bumper harvest prospects American farmers "need the sale."

Administration officials said this grain deal was not unexpected. But Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., insisted in Pittsburgh Wednesday the administration "once again has been taken by surprise" as it was what he called the "great grain robbery" in 1972.

Butz said that in contrast with the 1972 deal, when the U.S. government gave the Russians a $500 million line of credit for what turned out to be a $1 billion-plus deal, the new sale is "straight cash." There are no government credits and none of the export subsidies used in 1972 to help keep the sale price down, he said.

Butz said the main motive for Russian grain imports has been to provide expanded livestock feed to fuel steady increases in meat, poultry and milk supplies. This year is probably no exception, Butz indicated in an interview.

The sale came after published reports that present and former executives of several grain companies are under investigation in a government probe of alleged irregularities in grain inspection and handling of export sales.

The New York Times said Cook was among the firms involved in the investigation.

The effect of a new Soviet grain sale on the most productive wheat growing region in the nation cannot be predicted, but will be eventually reflected in market trading, according to experts.

The two million metric ton sale was less than many expected and far below the controversial 19 million tons sold in 1972. Traders and growers said they will wait for more sales before determining the effect on grain prices.

Rod Turnbull, spokesman for the Kansas City Board of Trade, said the effects of the sale on grain prices won't be known for several days.

"The price increases we have had since July 7 came in response to rumors of the sale," Turnbull said. "Those rumors involved all kinds of sizes of sales. There's no way to measure the impact right now."

"The market's trading will indicate what traders though Russia would buy. If the price goes down, the sale is not as much as everyone thought. If it goes up, it shows there's a real sale happening." The Agriculture Department's announcement Wednesday did not produce the anger experienced in the 1972 sale. Rumors of the impending sale caused a gradual rise in wheat prices and a hoarding of grain by farmers anticipating the sale.

"The difference between now and three years ago is that the farmers own the wheat this time," said Tom Ostrander, president of the Kansas Association of Wheat Growers.

"But there's not going to be a rush by farmers to sell their wheat right now," he said.

"Prices have come up to levels that just pay for cost of production. Farmers are going to wait a while longer to see if more sales push prices higher."

Officials said most farmers probably will hold their recently harvested wheat until prices approach the $4 per bushel level. Another factor convincing farmers to keep their wheat is the possibility of sales to other nations.

Sources said even when the full extent of the Russian purchase is known, some growers will wait for other nations to commit themselves before selling their wheat.

Mobile Money To Italy Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mobil Oil Corp. contributed millions of dollars to campaign coffers of Italian politicians over a period of years, Senate sources say.

Officials of the nation's third largest oil company were testifying today before the Senate Multinational Corporations subcommittee, which is investigating oil company payments to foreign government officials.

Mobil has not acknowledged any amounts. But the company has said contributions were made in Canada and Italy. It said that in both places political donations by corporations are legal.

The sources said the Mobil payroll pattern was "in the same vein" as those of Exxon Corp., which confirmed at Wednesday's subcommittee hearing that contributions of at least $46 million were made from 1963 to 1971.

Subcommittee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, quoting from previously secret Exxon documents, said payments were made to Italian legislators and ministers for favorable legislative treatment.

The documents released by Church after the hearing indicated diversions of Exxon corporate money may have totaled as much as $71 million.

Denton—'CIA Financed Drug Project in Texas'

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Central Intelligence Agency financed a project by the Texas Mental Health and Mental Retardation Department in which volunteer students received amphetamines and barbiturates in an attempt to perfect a super lie detector, according to a legislator.

Rep. Lane Denton, D-Waco, said Wednesday his staff prepared a six page report on the project which he has forwarded to Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the chairman of a committee investigating the CIA's role in domestic affairs. Denton asked Church to include the Texas project in the scope of his committee's investigation.

"I am concerned that significant progress has been made through this research toward bringing the nightmare of a '1984' situation to our nation, where people's thoughts are accurately monitored without appropriate protection of the individual's privacy," Denton said in a letter to Church that accompanied the report.

MHMR Commissioner Kenneth D. Gaver acknowledged the CIA's role in the project, but said it ended three years ago. Gaver, who assumed his present position Sept. 1, said he did not know anything about the CIA project until Denton asked for his assistance two weeks ago in the investigation.

"He asked for our full cooperation," Gaver said. "I believe he received that."

The project was conducted by Neil Burch, director of the Trims Psychophysiology Division. Burch said CIA agents contacted him in 1964 about participating in the project because of Burch's experience in LSD research. He said he and the then director of Trims and the MHMR commissioner were the only administrative personnel who knew the CIA was financing the project. He said the MHMR board did not know the source of the funds.

But Denton said the board approved at least one of the projects knowing at the time it was being financed by the CIA. Gaver said Burch assured him the student volunteers who took part in the projects knew what they were about although none of them signed release forms.

"All the subjects were students, they were paid, they were volunteers and they were informed," Gaver said. "There's no evidence there was any personal gain on anybody's part; there's no evidence public funds were illegally misused and there's no evidence any person was harmed."

Gaver said LSD was not administered during any of the tests although most of the student volunteers used as test subjects received amphetamines or barbiturates.

Burch said as a result of the CIA financed research, galvanic skin resistance measures were developed that increased the hit rate of polygraph machines to 92 per cent.

Gaver said he was concerned about the propriety of a state agency getting involved in a CIA financed project. He said new procedures for approving research programs are being developed.

The project was conducted under four separate contracts. Gaver said an audit was ordered to determine the amounts of money involved.

Denton's report said the money was channeled to Burch through dummy organizations the CIA established to disguise its role in the project.

"Even though the funds were channeled through front organizations — the U.S. Air Force Office of Scientific Research in one case and an outfit called Design Science, Inc., the chief researcher has stated that he was aware the CIA was the actual source of the money," Denton's report said.

Committee Recommends Carrillo Impeachment

AUSTIN, TEX. (UPI) — The Texas House of Representatives will meet in special session beginning Aug. 4 to consider the impeachment of District Judge O.P. Carrillo.

A special House committee unanimously recommended Carrillo's impeachment Wednesday saying "He has rendered himself unfit to hold the office of judge, and he warrants trial and conviction... and disqualification from holding any further office in this state."

The convening of the special House session Aug. 4 will be the first time in 44 years the House has met to consider an impeachment.

The special committee approved 11 articles of impeachment against Carrillo. Seven of them were approved unanimously. Articles which charged Carrillo with using county owned gasoline for his personal vehicles and conspiring to pay a ranch employe from county funds passed on 5-4 votes.

Carrillo was charged with refusing to disqualify himself as presiding judge in the removal trial of Duval County Judge Archer Parr — Carrillo's bitter political enemy.

"He conspired with others to improperly influence the membership and proceedings of the grand jury of Duval County empaneled in February, 1975," the committee's report said.

"He conspired with others to dominate and control the Benavides Independent School District by arbitrarily suspending from their offices his political opponents on the school district board of trustees and appointing political allies as replacements."

The committee's impeachment recommendation also charged Carrillo with using county employes for work on his ranch, using county equipment for personal work, charging the county rent on property that did not exist, and filing "false and fraudulent" statements with the secretary of state.

"By such conduct he has rendered himself unfit to hold the office of judge of the District Court for the 22nd Judicial District of Texas and he warrants trial and conviction, removal from office and disqualification from holding any future office in this state," the committee concluded.

"We have scratched the surface — maybe," said Rep. Terry Canales, D-Premont, who sponsored the impeachment resolution. "You have to realize the political situation in Duval County is very tight knit and better people than me have tried to crack it before."

If Carrillo is impeached by the House, the Senate must convene to conduct his trial. The last time the House met in a special impeachment session was in 1931 when it impeached a district judge. The Senate acquitted the judge.

The House committee met 21 times since it began work May 20, compiling 12 volumes of testimony and 166 separate documents as evidence. In its final day of testimony Wednesday, Carrillo's brother, County Commissioner Ramiro Carrillo, and Arturo and Hector Zertuche, brothers who allegedly helped Judge Carrillo swindle county funds, refused to answer any questions on the advice of Carrillo's attorney, Arthur Mitchell.

The special House committee will meet again Tuesday to draft a narrative to present to the House along with the articles of impeachment.

Court Excuses Astronaut From Court

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Donald K. "Deke" Slayton was scheduled to appear in court Tuesday, but U.S. District Judge H. Kenneth Wangelin agreed the astronaut, currently orbiting the earth in the Apollo Soyuz space flight, had a good excuse.

Slayton, 51, the oldest astronaut to fly into space, is scheduled to be a witness on behalf of a test pilot, also 51, who was removed from flight duties for McDonnell Douglas Corp. because of his age. The Department of Labor took the side of the pilot and decided to call Slayton as a witness.

Wangelin postponed the trial until Slayton returns to earth.

Officials To Support State Economic Program

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

Directors of the Pampa Industrial Foundation and Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution Wednesday supporting Gov. Dolph Briscoe's "Texas First" campaign to create new jobs and find Texans to fill them.

The resolution, adopted after a 45-minute discussion of various facets of the program, further pledged to encourage the support of local industry and businesses.

The action came after an explanation of the governor's program outlined at a briefing of Texas Panhandle representatives at a regional meeting in Amarillo last week.

Designed to expand economic development in Texas, the program includes in its goals the development of 4,000 new, permanent and unsubsidized jobs and the expansion of 160 businesses and industries.

The effort is expected to generate an additional $277 million annually for the Texas economy, according to Reagan Brown, chairman of the Governor's Job Creation Campaign.

Four state agencies — the Texas Industrial Commission, Texas Education Agency, Texas Employment Commission, and Texas Department of Community Affairs — are pooling their respective expertise to help companies expand wisely. Training to meet the needs of employers also is available.

The Industrial Commission has been designated prime contact agency and Texas First Headquarters are located in Austin.

E.O. Wedgworth, executive vice president and manager of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber and the Pampa Industrial Foundation will coordinate local efforts by acting as an information source.

Kay Fancher, PIF president, told members of the combined directorates at Wednesday's meeting that a coordinator to oversee local participation in the program is expected to be named within the next few days.

Volunteers, it was stated, will be needed to interview local employers and businesses. The chamber and PIF will work with local companies to identify barriers to their expansion and direct requests for assistance to state agencies.

Companies will be urged to sign cards pledging to hire new employees, whether one or 100.

Wedgworth said the chamber is urging all local employers to take advantage of the many facets of the program.

"We hope to bring Pampa some of the profit anticipated through making Texas First," he said.

C.E. Steel, chamber president, said he thought an important part of the local effort will be to encourage local employers to help in taking care of the need to fill current local job vacancies.

The resolution, unanimously adopted, was signed by all directors of both the chamber and foundation present at the meeting.

A copy of the resolution and a letter pledging Pampa's support of the program were mailed to Texas First headquarters in Austin.

Arms Sales Top $9 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. arms sales abroad — and to Persian Gulf states in particular — have continued to grow and totaled more than $9 billion in fiscal year 1975 despite administration assurances such transactions could be expected to taper off.

State Will Keep Oil Company Taxes

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A spokesman for the attorney general's office says a Third Court of Civil Appeals ruling upholding Texas' franchise tax means the state will get to keep almost $25 million in taxes paid by three oil companies under protest.

The court ruled against a suit brought by Texaco, Inc., against former Comptroller Robert S. Calvert. It sought a special formula for calculating the franchise tax Texaco must pay, or to have the franchise tax law declared unconstitutional.

The court said Texaco failed to show the formula imposed by the state unfairly represented the extent of its business in Texas and held the state is entitled to $2.4 million in taxes paid under protest for the period May 1, 1971, to April 30, 1972.

"This represents a tremendous victory for the state, not only from the amount of revenue which the case involves, but also for the standing it gives to the Texas Franchise Act itself," said Gordon C. Cass and Rick Harrison of the taxation division of the attorney general's office.

They said the decision will determine seven other pending cases filed by Texaco, Exxon and Gulf, Inc., involving an additional $22 million in disputed franchise taxes.

In its suit, Texaco contended it should be allowed to use a special formula to determine the amount of franchise taxes it paid in Texas because it said the state formula did not fairly represent the amount of business Texaco does in the state.

Aug. 1. But Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., made them available out of what he said was concern for the upward trend.

The figures showed that in 1975, the Pentagon agreed to sell $2.4 billion worth of weaponry to Iran, $1.4 billion to Saudi Arabia, $366 million to Kuwait, $1.6 million to tiny Oman and $18,000 to Bahrain.

"Despite predictions that arms sales would fall, the United States has continued its mindless export of highly sophisticated weapons to whomever asks for them at a faster pace than ever," Aspin said in a statement.

Rep. Edward F. Kennedy, D-Mass., has called for a six-month moratorium on arms sales to the Persian Gulf while U.S. policy there is reexamined by Congress.

In the House, Reps. Aspin, Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., and Robert Drinan, D-Mass., have introduced a variety of bills to require close congressional scrutiny of such sales.

Ford Pressures Congress To Aid Turkey Military

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to avoid the closing of U.S. military bases in Turkey, President Ford has increased pressure on Congress to lift its ban on military aid to that country.

Ford invited 135 congressmen to a White House breakfast today to urge them to at least partially lift the ban on Ankara's failure to end the Cyprus crisis peacefully. Earlier this month he invited more than 100 congressmen to breakfast and made the same plea.

Turkey has given the United States until today to lift the ban or face losing the 26 U.S. military bases there, some of which house electronic listening devices monitoring Soviet military communications.

Following the Turkish ultimatum, the Senate voted 41-40 to lift the ban entirely, but the House has not completed action on the matter.

The House International Relations Committee has proposed permitting immediate release of the $185 million worth of arms Turkey had bought before the ban, but which were frozen by the ban and upon which it must pay high storage fees. The House bill forbids any grants whatsoever and prohibits new sales until passage of the new foreign aid bill — a delay of at least several months.

City Receives $20,106.34 For Sales Tax

Pampa received a $20,106.34 city sales tax check today from the state comptroller's office bringing the quarterly total to $135,535.31.

S.M. Chittenden, city finance director, said that while the city now receives monthly check under State Comptroller Bob Bullock's new distribution plan, businesses collecting the sales tax send in quarterly reports.

Chittenden said today's check was for the period ending July 2. The last check totaled $66,061.26 and was for a longer period.

Figures show Pampa receives approximately $500,000 annually in city sales taxes.

Beef Packers Close To Agreement on Debt

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — The chief attorney in American Beef Packers Inc. bankruptcy proceedings said Wednesday he doubted a plan to pay some $30 million in ABP debts to creditors could be finalized until late August.

Douglas Reno said, however, the three sides involved in ironing out a revised plan were "very close" to agreement on major issues although differences remained on the "mechanics" of several items.

ABP Board Chairman and President Frank R. West said he did not expect to hear anything anything concrete on these negotiations until at least Friday.

Reno was 25 minutes late for an appearance in federal bankruptcy court where Judge David Crawford postponed the continued first meeting of creditors until Aug. 13.

The hearing for a receiver with unlimited powers to be appointed to replace West at ABP is set for Aug. 8. The states of Nebraska and Iowa and the Securities and Exchange Commission are plaintiffs in the case.

Crawford set July 23 as the date for submission of the revised plan but Reno said he would ask for a continuance again before that date.

Even if the plan were tentatively agreed upon by Friday, Reno said it would take another week to complete accounting procedures. Once the plan is submitted to the bankruptcy court, it then must be approved by all the creditors.

At last report, the three sides involved in the repayment plan negotiations — ABP, the Creditors Committee and General Electric Credit Corp.,

House Burglaries Climb

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The number of house burglaries in Pampa continues to climb with two reported Wednesday night.

One resident said her home was broken into while she was away.

A pair of nylon panties were missing and the burglar washed a sink full of dirty dishes, according to report.

The woman entered her home to find the bedroom light on and the stereo playing.

Another homeowner returned from vacation to find that a burglar had broken a back window and climbed onto a lawn chair to gain entry.

The property damage was undetermined. A malicious mischief case listed incidents of toilet paper wrapped around trees with the house and cars egged.

Police Chief Richard Mills said this morning that 20 burglaries were investigated during June, and most houses.

He added that law enforcement officers do not have the authority to drive the streets and order residents to lock their homes and automobiles.

"Citizens must accept their obligations to protect their own property," he said.

He added that the police department offers a vacation check service. The list averages about 50 homes per day.

He attributed many of the burglaries to the fact that residents neglect to lock their doors and windows securely.

Automobile owners fall in the same category, he said.

They often leave their cars and return to find missing items.

"We do our best to recover everything, but sometimes it is difficult to do so," he added.

A look at the stolen items reveals that the acts were not committed by hardened criminals nor by professional burglars, the chief commented.

In conclusion, Chief Mills said he could not over emphasize the need for citizens to assume their obligations by taking every available precaution to protect personal property.

The organization of labor in Texas probably started in Galveston in the 1850s with the founding of a local of the International Typographical Union.

Clarendon Boy Drowns In Greenbelt Lake

The body of Willie Weatheron, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Weatheron of Clarendon was recovered from Greenbelt Lake Wednesday afternoon. He had gone under water five hours prior to recovery of the body.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Donley County Justice of Peace C. L. Lewis.

Officers said the youth was swimming a cross a cove when he disappeared.

A brother and several others who were swimming with him were unable to rescue the youth before he went under.

Divers attempted to find the body, but were unsuccessful. The body was recovered through dragging operations.

The drowning was the first of the year at Greenbelt, but three have been recorded at Lake Meredith and two at Lake McClellan in Gray County.

Survivors of the Weatheron youth include his parents; four brothers, Randolph with the Army at Ft. Sill, Okla., Larry, Howard Jr. and Bobby, all of the home; two sisters, Patricia and Linda, both of the home; a grandmother, Mrs. Cora Lee Butler of Clarendon and a grandfather, Shep Jones of Clarendon.

Funeral services will be announced by Schooler-Gordon-Robertson Funeral Directors at Clarendon.

DR. OSCAR HUFF
Dr. Oscar Huff, 94, a retired Pampa physician, died at 8 a.m. today at Leisure Lodge. He and his family have lived in Pampa for more than 25 years.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Duenkel Funeral Directors.

Dr. Huff, born Aug. 27, 1880 at Winchester, Tex., in Fayette County, attended school in Bertram and attended Baylor Medical College at Dallas, graduating in 1908. He served his internship during his senior year at Dallas City - County Hospital.

Dr. Huff practiced medicine three years in Oklahoma and in the Texas towns of Lampasas, Castell, Mason and in Pampa for seven years. He retired from active practice in 1952 because of poor health.

Dr. Huff was secretary and president of the Mason, Kimbell, Menard and McCulloch County Medical Society.

During World War I he volunteered for the armed services and served overseas as a lieutenant. He was a member

Interest Booms In Home Canning

Botulism Danger in Home Canning

Because of Rising Food Prices...

An estimated six million Americans will try their hand at home gardening for the first time this year. Mrs. Pauline Williams, vice president of the Bluebonnet Home Demonstration Club and secretary of the Mr. and Mrs. Garden Club, a longtime gardener, reported that since 1925, about 700 persons have died from botulism caused by contaminated home-canned products. "Just a tiny amount of toxin poison from botulism germs can kill you," she warned. "Botulism, while rare, is sometimes fatal," she said, noting there were 20 outbreaks of the disease in 1974, affecting 30 persons. Of the 30, seven died — five from foods that were home canned. Safety in home canning is the consumer's responsibility, however the best information on how to home can safely is made readily available, she added.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Home canning can save money and make use of backyard garden produce, but poses a serious health hazard unless recipes are followed to the letter, according to experts.

Texas Health Department officials warn food contamination — including deadly botulism — can result unless proven canning techniques are used.

Botulism is caused by a deadly poison — a toxin — produced by a germ found abundantly in the soil. The germ is one of the sporeforming bacteria and is very resistant to normal heat and cold. It can grow without air, which makes it a sinister threat in home canning.

While the germ itself does not cause illness, the toxin it produces can be fatal for humans.

A small taste or even a long whiff of contaminated food — stuffs can cause serious illness, according to J.M. Doughty Jr., director of the Health Department's food and drug division.

"If you're in doubt about any foodstuffs which you've just opened, don't be foolhardy enough to taste it," Doughty said. "With botulism, there may be no odd taste or odor."

Botulism bacteria are found nearly everywhere, and health officials say nearly everyone has eaten them many times in their safe, inactive form on fresh food. Three conditions are necessary for the bacteria to grow: an oxygen-free environment, lots of moisture and low acid.

Thus if the bacteria remain alive through and continue to live in a sealed airtight jar or can they will manufacture the poisonous botulism toxin.

That's why in canning it is so important to properly process food so the food is cooked long enough to eat at a temperature high enough to kill the bacteria.

Although the number of botulism cases reported are few in number the total last year was the highest since 1935.

The federal Center for Disease Control reported 20 outbreaks of foodborne botulism affecting 30 individuals and killing 7 in 1974.

In addition, there were five cases of wound botulism caused by the bacteria getting into the wound.

Texas had one of the 24 food cases — caused by home canned chow — chow and one case of wound botulism.

Officials say the sharp increase in food botulism cases in 1974 reflects the increase in home canning and emphasizes the need for educating home canners in proper canning.

Doughty says information on proper canning techniques can be obtained from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, county, home demonstration agents, reliable cookbooks and handbooks provided by manufacturers of canning equipment.

Using the proper equipment and quantities specified is extremely important, Doughty said.

Sometimes it may be the proportions of sugar, vinegar or lemon juice that provides protection against the growth of harmful bacteria.

The toxin also can be destroyed by boiling the food for a sufficient length of time before eating.

"All home canned products should be boiled vigorously for three minutes with through stirring before serving," Doughty said.

Correct Canning Method

Mrs. Earl "Pauline" Williams, 1825 Duncan, agrees that improved, specific methods of home canning can mean more quality — and safety — for people who use the correct methods. "Directions must be followed carefully — taking no short cuts and using no substitutions," she added. The water bath method is used for processing high-acid foods — fruits, pickled vegetables, rhubarb and tomatoes. These food contain enough acid to destroy bacteria — at 212 degrees F. with use of a boiling water bath canner, but higher temperatures are required to destroy the botulism bacteria in low-acid foods — such as fish, meat, poultry and all vegetables, except tomatoes. "The only safe way to can these foods is with a pressure canner, which provides temperatures higher than that of boiling water," Mrs. Williams said. She used the pressure canner for such foods as beets, peas, corn, beans, greens and okra grown in her backyard vegetable garden. (Pampa News photo by Mike Higgins)

Tomatoes-Canned At Home

Fresh tomatoes offer excellent reasons for home canning or freezing — among them nutrition, versatility and taste.

So preserve those surplus tomatoes from the garden, from a neighbor, or those purchased in bulk at a bargain. Home - Canning Tomatoes

The first step in washing and sorting — use fresh, firm, vine-ripened tomatoes.

Put tomatoes in a wire basket or thin cheese cloth bag and dip them in boiling water for 30 seconds — or until the skins crack. Plunge them into cold water immediately.

Remove the core and skin. Leave them whole, or cut them into halves or quarters.

Pack them into clean jars, pressing gently to fill spaces. Leave one-half inch "headspace" at the top of the jar. Add no water. Using a table knife, remove all bubbles.

If desired, add one-half teaspoon salt to each pint — or one teaspoon to each quart. For use in salt-free diets, omit the salt.

Wipe off the sealing surface of the jars and close according to the type of lid being used, following the manufacturer's directions.

Place the jars in a boiling water bath canner, which is a larger container with a rack in the bottom to hold the jars one inch from the bottom.

The water bath canner should be tall enough to allow one or two inches of water to cover the jars — and about the same amount of space above the water.

The water should be hot — but not boiling — when jars are placed in the canner. Place lid on the canner, and bring the water to a rolling boil.

Boil pint jars 35 minutes; boil quart jars 45 minutes. Remove the jars from the water bath, and let them cool on a wire rack.

Green Beans

A La Home Canned

Home-canned green beans give summer goodness in the middle of winter or any other time of the year.

For canning, use garden surplus or beans purchased at a bargain when they're plentiful and good quality.

Prepare beans for canning just as you would for cooking — by snapping or cutting them into one- or two-inch pieces — or you might leave them whole.

Green beans are low-acid vegetables — so they're canned using a pressure canner. Spoilage organisms in low-acid vegetables are destroyed only at 240 degrees F. — and this is the internal temperature in the pressure canner when heated to 10 pounds pressure.

Pack the raw beans tightly into clean jars — up to one-half inch of the top of the jars. Cover them with boiling water, leaving one-half inch space at the top of the jar.

If salt is desired, add one-half teaspoon for a pint; add one teaspoon for a quart. Omit salt for salt-free diet.

Wipe off the sealing surface of the jars and close according to the type of lid being used — following the manufacturer's directions.

Place the closed jars of hot beans in a pressure canner, which has one and one-half or two inches of boiling water — and a rack to hold the jars off the bottom of the cooker.

Place the lid on the canner and fasten securely. If the lid has clamps, tighten opposite clamps moderately at first. Then go back over the whole set to tighten each pair as much as possible, with fingers only.

Leave the petcock open until the steam escapes steadily for 10 minutes — so that no air is left in the cooker. Then close the petcock.

If air is left in the canner, it may cause a vacuum and draw liquid off the beans.

Begin counting the processing time as soon as the dial pressure gauge reaches 10 pounds. Keep a uniform pressure by adjusting the heat or moving the canner carefully.

Process the snap beans 20 minutes for pints; 25 minutes for quarts.

At the end of the processing time, remove the canner from the heat.

Allow the canner to cool until the gauge registers zero.

Open the petcock gradually, and remove the cover — opening it away from your face.

Leave jars of beans in the canner about five minutes.

Collecting Miniatures Is Fast-growing Hobby

Hobbyists who make or collect miniatures are increasing so fast that a national organization formed in 1972 says it's getting about 100 requests a day for membership.

Miniatures as a category covers everything from dolls to houses, generally 1-inch to foot scale, or smaller.

"Just about everything that's made, someone is making in miniature," says Vicki Newhouse of Huntington Beach, Calif. Mrs. Newhouse is treasurer of The National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts in nearby Anaheim.

NAME's members are adult collectors of miniature antiques, houses and furniture, or artisans who make the pieces.

"In the last two years," Mrs. Newhouse said, "growth in miniatures has been phenomenal. Miniatures are affordable to everyone."

"What's nice about it is it's more of a family hobby. Many husbands are getting into the architectural part of it, designing houses and settings for the pieces their wives make or collect."

Mrs. Newhouse said the boom stems from current economic problems.

"When families go even to the local theaters, it's $3 a seat, plus popcorn and babysitter. It's getting expensive. Also more leisure time has a big effect," she said.

"Also, with the fuel shortage we won't be driving and camping as much. This is affordable and available to everyone, of every age."

She said she frequently hears from people in towns she does not recognize who want to become involved by mail, if not in any other way.

Mrs. Newhouse herself collects and creates miniatures. Her specialty is making dollhouse dolls that are replicas of people. The dolls range in height from one to six inches.

Dozens of smaller groups in southern California also are involved in miniatures. Many state shows, sales and fairs.

NAME's 10 regional directors do the same.

Mrs. Newhouse said that NAME publishes a quarterly, "Miniature Gazette," and has scheduled a national convention for Aug. 1-12 in Milwaukee. It will include speakers, slide shows, workshops and sales.

Mrs. Betty Allen of the Gardena (Calif.) Miniature Guild, which was organized in 1967, said only in the past couple of years have collectors been able to buy what they want.

Now many shops around the country sell miniatures.

Mrs. Allen said many clubs and groups organized because they couldn't find what they wanted, so they got together to make miniature objects.

"We always said we were the first to recycle things," Mrs. Allen said. "We don't throw anything away. Bristles of a tooth brush end up as a miniature broom. The little liners inside the caps of some no-deposit bottles make dandy dinner plates."

Collect Miniatures

Sharing a two-year collection of miniatures is Andrea Lewis, 14, left, three minutes older than her sister, Annette. The display, mostly animals, is arranged in an antique printers type drawer and decorates the twins bedroom wall. Andrea's favorite of the 100 collected, is a small frog and Annette's is a tiny boy and girl worm. When the collectors are not watching their twin brothers, Howie and Deanie participating in athletics, they enjoy creating and painting their own ceramic miniatures. Ninth graders at Pampa Junior High School, they are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lewis, 428 Jupiter. (Pampa News Photo by Mike Higgins)

Unifying Wallpaper

The many angles and irregular wall space in this attic room are somewhat concealed by the allover effect of wallpaper. A bonus is the gay, colorful atmosphere that wallpaper helps create, as it has in this little girl's room.

Wallpaper Unites Attic Room

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have an attic room which we are considering using for our 6-year-old granddaughter when she comes to visit which is often. The room is filled with many angles, including dormer windows. Perhaps paint would be the best thing to use although I thought wallpaper might be nicer. However, I don't know where to put the wallpaper and where not to. Also will wallpaper make the room look even more angular? — W. L.

A. You certainly could paint the walls but I agree that wallpaper would be exciting. If you choose wallpaper, why not wallpaper the ceiling, walls and every nook? This way you will have a more united effect and the angles won't seem so pronounced. Recently designers Greta Cohen and Louis Sonnes created a memorable little room for Burlington House in an attic hideaway. They started with cranberry red shag carpeting, painted the Victorian wicker furniture bright white, splashed the walls and ceiling with bouquets of pink, sky blue and marigold, and added red and white gingham at the windows and on the bed.

Q. We have added a breakfast nook onto our kitchen and now we are searching for inexpensive chairs. We need six for our family of teen-agers. The table is a big old oak round type. The room has wallpaper with red, green and blue circles and squares on a white background and the floor is white. What would be serviceable for young people? — B. E.

A. I recently saw some directors' chairs which had iron-on tape used to personalize chairs. It strikes me that perhaps six white framed directors chairs with red, green and blue canvas seats and backs would be great looking.

Then with white iron-on tape put on each teenager's name. I think it would be fun and in keeping with the gay sounding wallpaper you have put up. Directors' chairs are great chairs because they are inexpensive and practical. When the canvas gets dirty, just toss the covers in the washing machine.

For Home Canning

Proper Equipment Essential

Texans are enjoying the revived art of home canning — but experts warn against dangers of botulism, a sometimes fatal food poisoning that can result from improper canning techniques.

Another danger — the threat of food spoilage — involves improper equipment and proper equipment is basic to the success of obtaining good quality and safe home-preserved foods.

JARS AND LIDS
Jars with tops that are cracked, chipped or dented are among the worst offenders. These jars or lids with cracks, chips or dents can cause a poor seal — and spoilage may develop.

Jars and lids should be the standard Mason equipment, imprinted with the manufacturer's name.

For lids, a standard two-piece, self-seal lid may be used. It has a metal disk and a metal ring — and it self-seals as the jars cool after processing. The metal disk with the sealing compound can be used only once.

However, the metal ring may be used more than one time, provided it is free of rust and dents.

Mayonnaise and other similar jars should not be used for home canning. These glass jars are not strong enough to withstand the high temperatures of canning — so they're not safe to use.

PRESSURE CANNERS
Pressure canners are used for processing all low-acid foods — including vegetables and meats.

Pressure saucapans may also be used for home canning, provided they are of adequate size and have an indicator or gauge that operates accurately at 10 pounds per pressure.

Keep pressure canners and saucapans clean — and free from oil or odors and stains for best results.

Test pressure canners that have a dial gauge at least once a year — and more often if the canner is used frequently or if the lid receives a hard knock. For testing, use a maximum thermometer or master gauge tester.

During the yearly check-up, also make sure the petcock and safety valves are clean and in working order — and tighten the screws on handles.

CLEANING SUPPLIES
Suggested cleaning supplies include whitening — a gritless scouring powder, soap scouring pads and vinegar.

Vinegar will remove dirt, stain or odors from inside the canner. Use one cup vinegar in a canner half full of water. Heat at "five pounds pressure," 15 minutes. Remove and rinse canner. Vinegar is also ideal "straight" — for soaking small parts, such as the petcock, which should not be immersed in water, and valves — to remove sediment and stains.

Other supplies include detergent and plumbers paste. The paste should have an oil or graphite base, which will not harden. Paste is used to close nicks that allow steam to escape — or when replacing a gage, the paste can be used to coat threads of the gage.

For canners with screw-type lugs, use a solvent, such as kerosene or lighter fluid. A few drops of solvent will make the screws operate easily.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I rearranged my son's room and put his twin beds together and ended up with a king-sized bed.

After pricing bedspreads for a king-sized bed, I decided they were too expensive but I had to do something.

I purchased six yards of 60-inch-wide double-knit material, cut it into two three-yard pieces and sewed them together. You could also buy nine yards of 36-inch-wide material, cut it into three three-yard pieces and do it the same way.

A king-sized bedspread and at one-fourth or one-half the cost! You don't have to be a seamstress to sew two pieces of material together.

I'll never buy another king-sized bedspread with all the pretty material nowadays. I can make a couple just to change the looks of a room.

Kay Hollander
You really got the brains, gal! Double-knit will work beautifully. It launders so nicely, and the best part, no ironing is necessary.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

We all have leftovers, and serving them in an appetizing manner can be a real stickler. Try this idea with that one leftover portion of stew, spaghetti, etc.

Save those pot pie pans to put your leftover portion in. Then cover with aluminum foil and freeze.

Presto, an instant lunch. Just pop in the oven and heat same as a pot pie.

Meat and gravy can also be done this way for a delicious hot sandwich.

Don't forget to place on a baking sheet when baking!

Lynn

What a good way to use up those leftovers. Mom can have an easy-to-fix, nourishing lunch with hardly any dishes to wash.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Do your skirts ever develop sag lines if they have hung on a two-clip skirt hanger awhile?

I discovered that these droopy lines can be eliminated by turning the skirt half-way and clipping it to the hanger at the front and back.

If any sag develops, it will not show since it spreads apart as you move or sit.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

The "weak" notrump opening bid (13-15 high-card points) sometimes works out well, and sometimes it doesn't. In today's deal it turned out to be the winning bid. The hand was played in a team-of-four match.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH ♦ Q 6 ♥ J 10 4 3 ♦ K 7 4 ♠ A K 8 2 WEST ♦ A J 10 5 3 2 ♥ 8 2 ♦ J 9 8 ♠ 10 7	EAST ♦ K 9 8 4 ♥ 7 ♦ A Q 10 2 ♠ J 9 5 4 SOUTH ♦ 7 ♥ A K Q 9 6 5 ♦ 6 5 3 ♠ Q 6 3
---	---

The bidding:
North East South West
1NT Pass 4♥ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

As can be observed, East-West can make a game in spades, thanks to a successful diamond finesse, but South's leap to four hearts made it virtually impossible for them to enter into the bidding.

West's opening club lead was captured by dummy's king, after which the ace and king of trumps picked up the adversely held pieces. South then led his singleton seven of spades.

West's opening club lead was captured by dummy's king, after which the ace and king of trumps picked up the adversely held pieces. South then led his singleton seven of spades. West evidently didn't see the necessity of putting up his ace of spades and leading a diamond (had he done so, dummy's king would have been trapped, and the defenders would have cashed three diamond tricks). So when the game was played from dummy, East took the trick with the king.

Now there was no escape for East-West. East returned a space which South ruffed. Then came the queen of clubs, and this was followed by a club to dummy's ace. West discarding a spade. Next came the board's remaining club. East perforce played his jack — and South discarded the three of diamonds.

East was now end-played. If he returned a spade, South would discard a diamond as he ruffed the trick in dummy; and if East led a diamond, dummy's king would become a winner. So declarer fulfilled his contract, losing a spade, a club and a diamond.

When the deal was replayed, North-South were using strong notrump opening bids (16-18), so North made the normal opening bid of one club, to which South responded with one heart. West now entered the bidding with a preemptive jump overall of two spades (showing a six-card suit within a hand deficient in high cards). When North bid three hearts, East jumped to four spades, feeling that he was "sacrificing" against a makable four-heart contract.

As has been noted, the four-spade contract was made owing to the favorable location of the diamond king.

Vehicle Registration Lines May See Ending

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The traditional long waiting lines prior to motor vehicle registration deadline on April 1 each year scheduled to end in 1978.

The change is spelled out in a bill authored during the last session of the legislature by State Representative Bob Simpson of Amarillo passed by both houses and recently signed by Governor Dolph Briscoe.

The effective date is Jan. 1, 1978.

Gray County has 25,656 registered vehicles for this year, including buses, tractors, trailers, cars and motorcycles. This represents $660,843.88 in vehicle registration fees. However, Jack Back, county tax assessor collector, said the county is allowed only $175,000 annually from those funds.

The remainder must be returned to the state, he said.

Commenting on the proposed change, Back said, "It will help in one way, but if most should come due when taxes are paid, it would be pretty hard."

Under the new system, there will be 12 registration deadlines, instead of one. No longer will Texas motorists be forced to register within a 60-day period.

Depending on the date assigned each motorist, vehicle registration will occur during every month of the year — similar to the safety auto inspection regulations.

Bob Townsley, director of the state's motor vehicle division, said 18 states now follow this staggered system of vehicle registration and have proven it successful.

"Not only will it relieve some of the pressure on motorists," Townsley said, "but it will relieve the all too familiar burden placed on county tax assessor-collectors."

He added that by effectively distributing the registration workload throughout the year, county tax offices will be able to conduct other phases of their work including voter registration and preparation for property tax rolls without interruption.

Officials say that "for all practical purposes April 1978 will be almost everyone's vehicle registration renewal deadline for the last time."

Renewal notices will inform motorists as to their renewal date thereafter and fees will be calculated on a pro rata basis.

Upon registration, motorists will be issued two license plate stickers — one for the year and one for the month of the subsequent renewal.

The month payable stickers will serve as a reminder to the motorist, just as the windshield auto inspection sticker.

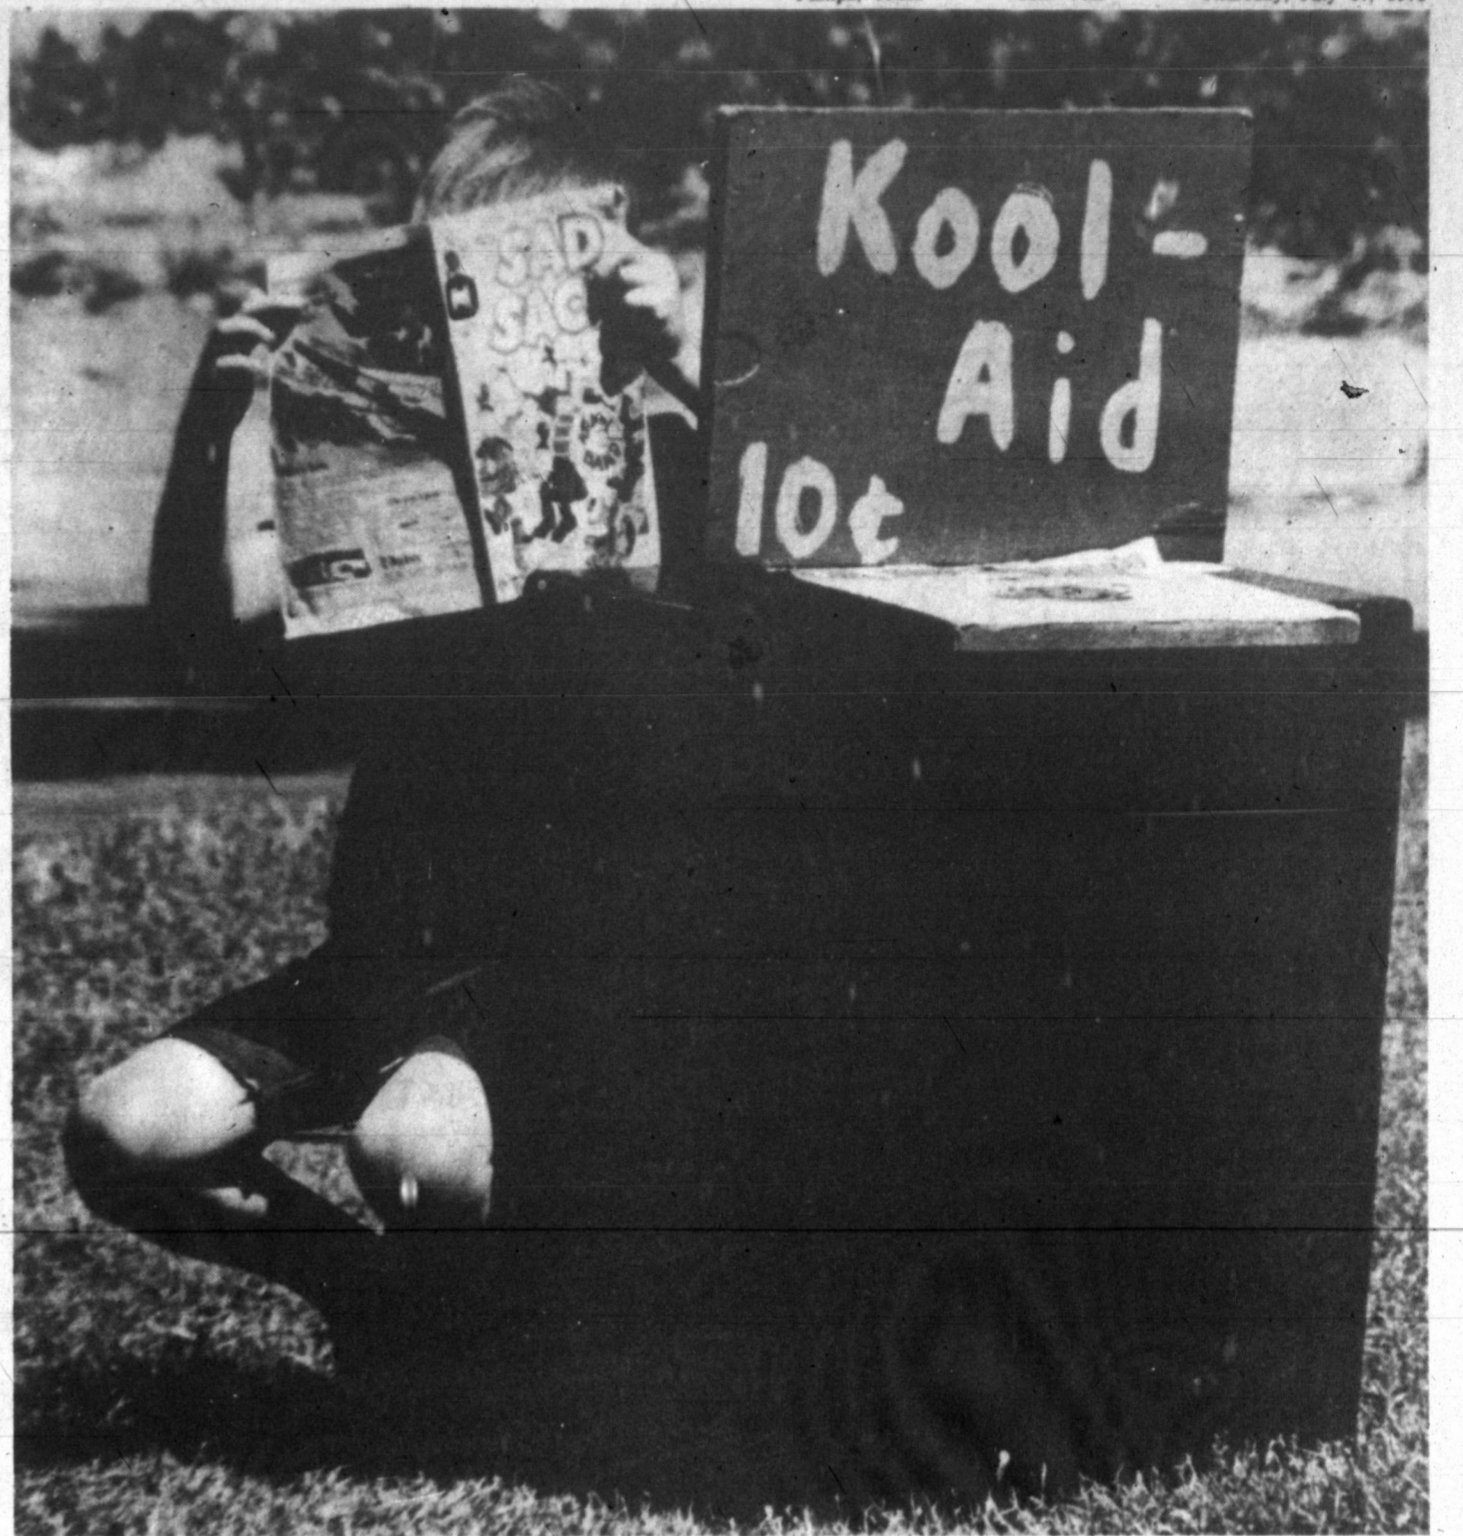

In making the transition to the new system, some vehicle owners will pay for more than 12 months of registration while others will have to renew twice within the first year.

Townsley said the 1978 renewal notices will reflect a dollar amount due which may be smaller than usual — or it may be larger.

"It may be a filling for 16 months, with an expiration date of July 31, 1979, or it may be any date in between," he explained.

The transition will not be easy, Townsley said. However, he added that once accomplished it will assure an even flow of registrations for all Texas motorists, put an end to the annual "jam-ups" in tax offices and distribute the work load over an entire year.

Every year the world consumes 1.2 billion metric tons of grain, the equivalent of grain piled six feet deep on a highway 55 feet wide and stretching around the earth at the Equator.

Archeologists Dig Camp Of Area Buffalo Hunter

CANYON, Tex. (UPI) — Excavations in the Texas Panhandle have given scientists their first look at an early American buffalo hunter's camp. They found broken liquor bottles and homemade bullets on the saloon floor.

The historical digging is taking place at Adobe Walls, a settlement that thrived briefly a century ago 25 miles northeast of the present town of Borger.

"It's the first buffalo hunters' camp that has ever been excavated in the United States," says James Hanson, director of the Museum. "It's giving us a fair picture of the day-to-day life of the early white man in the Texas Panhandle."

Adobe Walls — which consisted of a saloon, blacksmith shop, general merchandise store and hide buying store — was built and occupied by 29 people then abandoned six months later in 1874.

"The buffalo migration had barely begun when a band of 700 Comanche, Cheyenne and possibly Kiowa Indians began their day long attack on June 27," said Bill Harrison, Curator of Anthropology who is unearthing the find.

"A lucky 1,500 yard shot by Billy Dixon which killed one of the Indians stopped further assault."

Harrison said the Indians had been told by their medicine man that the white man's bullets could not harm them. Discouraged by their fallen comrade, the Indians rode away before sunset and left the hunters alone.

"The buffalo hunters didn't stay much longer," Harrison said. "They abandoned the Adobe Walls camp that July."

"It's an absolutely clean site. Nothing has been built over it, nor anything there been interfered with," he said.

Although the museum has owned the land for more than 50 years, this is the first time any of the site has been studied. Because a monument and Billy Dixon's grave are situated on the area which was the general merchandise store, first excavations have been in the saloon area.

"We already know that the saloon was not as big as originally reported," Harrison said. "We also know that the camp wasn't burned by the Indians after the hunters' departure."

Harrison has found primers, cartridges and other implements for the making and reloading of bullets scattered about the saloon floor, as well as broken whiskey and gin bottles, a sole of a boot, whiskey barrel straps, a steel arrowhead and a candle lamp with the candle still in position.

Social Security Quiz

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 North Hobart Street, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.)

By H.L. WEATHERLY
Q. I'm presently receiving social security benefits while attending college. Will I receive my benefits during June, July and August since I do not plan to attend summer school?

A. Yes, your benefits will continue uninterrupted if your period of non-attendance is not longer than four months, and if you plan to resume full-time attendance in the fall semester.

Q. I am completing college at a junior college this year. I plan to attend college again later but perhaps not for another year. Will I be able to receive social security benefits again later on if I decide to return to college?

A. You may become re-entitled if you are still under age 22 and are unmarried at the time you return to school.

Q. I am inquiring for my mother-in-law, who became a widow last week. She has asked me to help her get her social security started. She is 63 but has never filed for any social security. What kind of records will she need to furnish when she files?

A. She will need to furnish the social security number for her husband and herself, proof of her age, and her marriage certificate. If her husband was employed last year, she should furnish his 1974 W-2, or if self-employed, furnish his 1974 tax return. She can call the social security office if she would like, and they will complete her application over the telephone.

Q. It looks like I will need to file for disability benefits, as my doctor tells me I will not be able to work again. Should I bring a statement from him when I come in to file?

A. No, when you apply we will get the names and addresses of your doctors from you, and our disability agency will contact the doctor for a medical report.

Zarb Foresees Higher Prices, No Conspiracy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb today predicted gasoline prices will increase from two to five cents a gallon by Labor Day.

He insisted, however, there was no collusion by the oil companies to raise prices.

Zarb told a Senate subcommittee that a curbing of gas refining by the oil companies was due to "a combination of unforeseen refining problems."

"We have seen no evidence that there is a conspiracy to promote a shortage in anticipation of higher price levels," Zarb said.

Zarb spelled out the administration's outlook for the near future as both the Senate and House focused attention on energy, particularly oil prices.

The Senate Tuesday approved a six-month extension of oil price controls and Speaker Carl Albert said the House would take the same approach.

Later today, President Ford is expected to submit to Congress his proposal to more than double the per-barrel cost of oil over the next 30 months.

Zarb said barring any oil price increase by the oil producing nations, he estimated gas prices would rise from between two to five cents a gallon, varying in different parts of the country.

The Federal Energy Administration, Zarb said, had found there were "abnormal gasoline stock drawdowns, with gasoline stock levels being reduced to 196 million barrels at the end of the first week in July."

The reason for the lower levels of refining, Zarb said, were due in part to "an unusual number" of refinery malfunctions or accidents, surplus inventory stocks and unestimating gasoline demands in the early part of the summer.

on about two-thirds of America's oil production from $5.25 to $13.50 a barrel.

Cabot Cited For Safety

Four Cabot Corporation divisions in the Pampa area have been cited by the National Safety Council for outstanding performance in industrial safety.

They include divisions of engineering, oil and gas, research and development and technical services.

Other Cabot facilities named for awards are located in Parkersburg, West Va., Beaver, Okla., Kermit, Tex., Kokomo, Indiana and Bethel, Conn.

The showdown between the administration and Congress on energy will come when Ford formally submits his proposal, which would hike the price

Baton Class Awards: The baton classes finished up with a concert last Saturday and awards were given to the various twirlers. The outstanding twirlers and the hardest workers in each category were named. In the beginners dance twirl class Dara DeBord was the most outstanding twirler and Shelley Stout was named hardest worker.

In the intermediate and advanced dance twirl class Penny Miller and Julie Turner were the most outstanding twirlers and Sandra Hurdle and Karla Cooper were the hardest workers.

The most outstanding dancer in the modern dance class was Valisa Fellers. The hardest workers were Parla Winegart and Carolyn Mumford.

Swim Lessons: Some openings in the remaining swim classes at the Pampa community and youth center are available. All classes are taught by qualified water safety instructors from the Red Cross. Most classes have two or more instructors and aides. During the summer all classes are during the morning hours between 8 a.m. to noon. Lessons are free to Y.C. members or $5 to non-members.

Father Joseph Tash, Chairman of the Coordinating Council on Drug Abuse in Amarillo, will be guest speaker at the Pampa Area Man Power Association meeting at 7:30 p.m., Thursday in Fellowship Hall of the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray St.

Father Tash, who is chaplain of St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, has worked with drug addicts for five years and is chairman of the speakers' bureau on Drug Abuse in Amarillo. He will speak on "Update in the Drug Culture".

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JULY 18
Your birthday today: From a slow period early in your year, you turn gradually toward conciliation or adaptation as a means of improving daily living. Where you have found the way, it is now time to help others. Relationships either fade away or expand (there is no middle ground) according to how your nature is reciprocated. Today's natives are mystical, a bit eccentric in maturity, and often associated with historic journeys or migration.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Select companions warily for inclusion in your financial world. Secrets remain such very briefly; move fast on an inside word. Theory or faith stir debate that is hard to quiet.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Realize that everybody you care about has problems you know nothing of. Take this into account, and take their cross remarks and behavior in stride. Avoid extravagance or waste of any kind.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Creative enterprises take priority. Make notes and communicate well enough so that someone will eventually cover them. Home life runs to confusion unless you set explicit limits.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: If there is a way of mixing up dimensions and sums, it will be found on the job somewhere today. Be sure it isn't your fault. Keep a record. The home scene perks up. Changes are due.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Creative moments are erratically timed but work out fine if you move with them on current projects. Don't squabble even if there is good reason. Be a little on the thrifty side with your money.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: The morning is for clearing out clutter, sorting the useful from the useless. Later, go over simplification of plans. Obviously, not all you imagine can be brought into reality.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Set goals, ask for help, and farm out parts of the job. Late in the day you may be able to do a special favor or assist somebody you love. Make no further promises, and expect no return on your offerings.

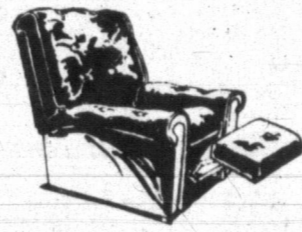

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: You must question facts and figures, no matter what their sources. It's likely you'll have to deal with larger institutions or units of organized society on various passing details.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: You have plenty of friends, but they're skeptical of your business program and a bit sensitive as well. Investigate all probabilities. Make up your mind, and then go ahead singlehanded.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Daily chores have a dash of excitement as events divert attention or upset routine procedures. Get your work completed early so you will be free to pursue the fun of later hours.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: There's no point in being annoyed just because nothing comes out as you had expected. You've missed something along the way. You might as well learn what it was and what you can do about it.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: In today's kaleidoscopic shifts, accurate judgments or measurements are difficult at best. Estimates of coming situations are distorted because nobody is quite set for what is happening.

'Solzhenitsyn Threatens Peace'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today the militant views of exiled Soviet writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn are a threat to peace and had recommended to President Ford not to meet with the author.

"If I understand the message of Solzhenitsyn," Kissinger told a news conference, "it is that the United States should pursue an aggressive policy to overthrow the Soviet system."

"But I believe that if his views became the national policy of the United States we would be confronted with considerable threat of military conflict ... I believe that the consequences of his views would not be acceptable to the American people or to the world."

Kissinger's remarks came one day after the bearded writer told Congress in Washington that America is "complacent in its affluence" and reluctant to understand the suffering caused by the Soviet government.

Kissinger said he highly respects Solzhenitsyn as one of the greatest writers of all time but recommended to the White House that Ford not meet with him. He said the symbolic effect of such a meeting could be a disadvantage to the United States.

On Tuesday, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford has received 478 letters and telegrams suggesting he meet with Solzhenitsyn. But no mail has come in opposing such a meeting. Nessen said Ford was willing to see the author, but no approach to the White House has been made lately for a meeting.

Solzhenitsyn spoke Tuesday at a reception in his honor in the Old Senate Caucus Room at the United States and Soviet Union dramatized their policy of detente by launching their joint Apollo-Soyuz space spectacular.

Solzhenitsyn questioned whether he had succeeded in his public speeches here and in New York to move the United States — "which is so complacent in its affluence" — toward an appreciation of the worldwide threats of Soviet authoritarianism.

Referring to the Soviet-promoted Conference on European Security and Cooperation which President Ford is to attend in Helsinki this month, the bearded, Nobel prize winner taunted the legislators:

"In these very weeks when an amicable agreement of diplomatic shovels will bury and pack down still-breathing bodies in a common grave, I tried to explain to the Americans that in 1973 — the tender dawn of detente — was when the starvation rations of Soviet camps was made even thinner."

Solzhenitsyn said that as detente has progressed, Soviet authorities have refined their

"system of punishment" by introducing forced labor for prisoners in solitary confinement who are "cold, hungry, without fresh air, and working to impossible output norms."

The Russian author has won world renown for his historical novels on Soviet prison camp life. He recently was voted honorary U.S. citizenship by the Senate, but not yet by the House.

He told senators and congressmen the "overwhelming suffering" of the Russian past was a message "which comes to you, as it were, from the future."

He called on the United States to find men to lead the world away from authoritarian repression and toward individual freedom and human rights.

"I want to tell you," he said, recalling his Soviet days before he was accused of treason and exiled last year, "how we take in your words, and deeds and actions, sometimes with approval, but sometimes with horror and despair."

Convicted of Murder Of Fetuses in Holdup

CAMDEN, N.J. (UPI) — Winfield Anderson, who claimed he was asleep at a friend's house at the time a pregnant woman was shot during a holdup, has been convicted in the murder of twin fetuses who died hours after premature birth.

The conviction Tuesday was unprecedented in New Jersey, where criminal codes had not clearly defined the protection under the law accorded to unborn children.

However, Camden County Judge Leon Wingate, drawing on Common Law, ruled that Anderson could be charged with murder since the 7½-month-old fetuses were "victims of a wound upon their mother ... and subsequently died hours later."

The implication was that had the infants been stillborn, Anderson would not have been charged with homicide.

Prosecutor William Cahill Jr., son of former New Jersey governor, had called the case a routine homicide. The jury deliberated more than 10 hours over a two-day period.

Anderson, 24, who firmly believed he would be found innocent, was shaken when the jury ticked off 10 guilty verdicts for the two murders and various offenses, including assault, robbery and possession of a gun.

When his attorney, Carl Taraschi, asked for a roll-call of the six men and six women, Anderson stood abruptly with hands outstretched, ready to be led away by a court attendant.

"Take me upstairs. I don't want to hear it," he said several times as his sister wept softly. Sentencing was delayed until next week. He faces a maximum term of life in prison.

Anderson was charged, with firing the shot March 9 that hit Nikki Spearman, 22, in the abdomen. According to the testimony of physicians, a Caesarean section was performed and both fetuses were breathing when born.

One of the infants, named John Lee, was struck by the bullet in the spinal cord and lived less than four hours. The other infant, named Jonathan Lee, was not struck by the bullet, but death was attributed to the premature birth and shock.

The shooting allegedly took place when Anderson went to Miss Spearman's house to purchase marijuana from her common-law husband and pulled a gun, demanding both the drug and cash.

Taraschi said he would appeal the verdict, but anticipated having to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Three McLean Girls Take European Tour

By BETTY HOLMES
McLean Correspondent

Three McLean girls, Gail Terry, Kathy Raines and Sheri Haynes, currently are touring Europe as part of an American Leadership Study Group.

The girls — 17, 18 and 19 years old — are joining a group of more than 214 students from all over the nation in New York. Staying on university campuses in England and France, the youth will hear lectures each morning to study the country and sights they will see in the afternoons.

The group will be journeying through seven different countries, spending time in London, England; Paris, France; Belgium; Heidelberg, Germany; Lucerne, Switzerland; Innsbruck, Austria; and Venice, Florence, and Rome in Italy.

The last week of their stay in Italy, they will take an essay test which enables those passing to receive three semester hours college credit in humanities.

The travellers, touring by bus, will return home Aug. 6.

The girls, all 1975 graduates of McLean High School, are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Terry, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Haynes, and Mr. and Mrs. John M. Haynes respectively.

Washington Watch

Regulate Federal Reserve

By Bill Choyke
Pampa News' Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Texas Rep. Wright Patman, the 82-year-old polulist from Northeast Texas, has been fighting the Federal Reserve System and major banking interests for most of his 46 years in Congress. The tales of the differences between Patman, D-Texas, and the Federal Reserve System, commonly called the Fed., are regarded as economic folklore in money and banking circles. Patman, the spry white-haired former chairman of the House Committee of Banking, Currency and Housing, routinely calls bankers of large institutions "city slickers" whose foremost care is their own welfare.

Admitting that he has met with frustration in his past attempts to regulate the Fed., Patman now believes those days may soon be over. Relaxing in his office chair during an interview recently, he predicted that Congress will finally adopt legislation this year granting its own watchdog agency, the General Accounting Office, the authority to audit the now aloof Fed.

"As the law now stands, the Federal Reserve Bank can act independently of even the President," stressed Patman. "The audit will lead to some changes. It's the most important bill now before Congress for some time," Patman added. The Fed, through its bank and committees, sets U.S. monetary policy. The supply of money in the market and the minimum credit rates are of two several vital economic factors regulated by the Fed.

Under the provisions of the legislation proposed by Patman, the GAO would be empowered to conduct periodic audits of the Fed. They would cover all facets of the Federal Reserve System, including banks and their branches. Patman maintains that the audit will immediately result in substantial savings to American taxpayers. He contends that the Fed has purchased $93 billion in bonds that it once issued making the system both "obligor and oblige."

These bonds, held by the Federal Open Market Committee of the Fed in New York, draw $6 billion annually in interest. The securities also represent about 18 per cent of the $333 billion national debt — what the government owes to lenders. By showing that the $93 million has been paid, Patman said, the audit would allow the $6 billion in interest to be channeled to other areas. "It could bring us out of this depression," he added. Although a bill similar to the pending legislation died in the Senate after House approval last year, Patman remains optimistic about passage this year. He argues that improvements have been made in the current draft and that the Senate "will approve a good bill." The full House committee is expected to complete its report soon. A spokesman for the Senate Banking Committee said she did not think the committee would consider any GAO-Fed audit bills this month. "There are no bills on the Senate side right now," said the committee staffer. "I really would hesitate to speculate on the House bill's chances here."

Nearing almost half a century on the House, Patman views the bill as almost a culmination of a long, frustrating fight to open up the Fed. "We have tried to have a GAO audit before but they (the Fed) refuse to allow our auditors to go in," Patman said. "Right now, the Fed does not have to come to Congress for its annual appropriations. They do not want to go to Congress because it would be embarrassing to them. "If we had an audit," he added, "we'd find so much that has been covered up."

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Tri-State Seniors week in Pampa starts Monday and lasts through Friday. Many of the top-name seniors of the Southwest will be competing for top honors, which went to E. Doug Roush of Amarillo a year ago.

Then, the following week Pampans will be treated to the Top O' Texas Rodeo, set for July 30 through Aug. 2 at Recreation Park. The event will attract several of the finest rodeopers in the country.

If big-name golf or rodeo isn't to your liking, there's always the Pampa Optimist Club Invitational Baseball Tournament Monday through Friday in Optimist Park. The tourney will involve all-star junior high players from Pampa, Amarillo, Borger, Perryton, Follett, Darroutzet, Booker, White Deer, Panhandle, Claude and Skellytown.

The tourney will likely become an annual affair, says Robert Dixon, director of the event and Pampa's Babe Ruth League president.

Don't fret, American Little League! The News was unable to send a photographer to Childress Monday or Tuesday for the Area Tournament and that's why your pictures have yet to be included in the paper.

Hopefully, one of your practices this week (either today or Friday) will be photographed so the two teams — National and American League all-stars — will receive equal billing prior to Monday's all-Pampa contest at 8 p.m. probably in Dumas.

The two Pampa teams will meet in the first round of the District I Tournament. The loser will be eliminated while the winner will advance to the second round Tuesday. The winner of the tournament will play in the section tournament July 28-29 at a place to be later announced. Sectional champs will scrap for the state title the following week in Waco.

Chances are good a Pampa team will play in Waco. That team could be decided Monday.

The Texas Amateur Athletic Federation Saturday will hold a qualifying track and field meet for the state TAAF meet. Several Pampa tracksters, ages nine to infinity, will try to qualify in the meet, set in Lubbock.

Among those entered is Jim Hogan, head of the Pampa Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) summer program. Hogan will provide a ride to Lubbock for youngsters who are interested in attending the Lubbock meet.

"Rides will be provided," Hogan said. "We'll leave the fieldhouse (at Pampa High) at 5 a.m."

"A lot of kids thought that the Junior Olympics was the last meet of the summer. This will be the last meet of the summer so I urge everyone to come out."

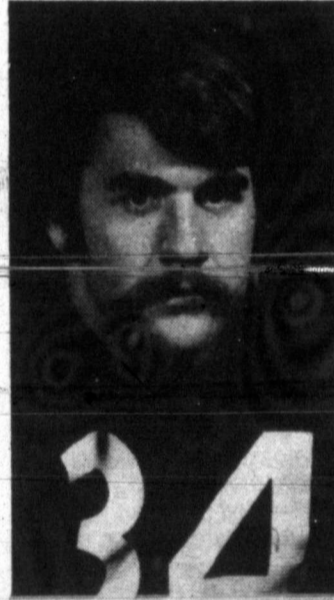

Hogan will enter the Open Division's long-distance events. Preliminaries will start at 9:30 a.m.; finals at 2 p.m.

West Texas State's football caravan, consisting of nine members of the Buff athletic department, was in Pampa's Coronado Inn this morning as part of its drive to sell season tickets.

This afternoon, the caravan is making stops in White Deer, Panhandle, Claude and Clarendon. Friday, Borger, Spearman, Fritch, Stinnett and Perryton will be visited.

"Our main purpose, of course, is to sell season tickets," said Jim Campbell, WTSU business manager. "We feel that the personal contact we get with people is the best way to do that."

Others on the caravan are athletic director and head football coach Gene Mayfield, sports information director Bill Cousins and assistant coaches Jerry Behrens, Jim Crossland, Jim Dawson, Ronnie Mankin, Bill McKinney and Earl Wood. WTSU is expected to finish high (would you believe second?) in the Missouri Valley Conference grid race.

GARVIN MCCARRELL

According to sources, ex-Harvester Garvin McCarrell has decided not to play football for West Texas State this fall. McCarrell has been used sparingly at halfback and fullback the past two seasons. McCarrell was not available for comment.

Howie Lewis will play in the Oil Bowl football contest Aug. 9 in Wichita Falls.

Lewis, who was graduated in the spring after concluding an exceptional athletic career at Pampa High, will, naturally, play on the Texas side. Texas high school graduates will oppose players from Oklahoma in the game.

Lewis has signed with Texas Tech and is already a strong candidate for the starting split end position.

Billy Wilbon this week became the second Pampa High basketball player to receive a scholarship to play in college.

Wilbon, No. 6 on the all-time Pampa High scoring list, will play for McCook, Neb., Junior College.

Robert Young, another Harvester guard, has received a scholarship to play for Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

Question — why didn't more colleges show interest in Wilbon, Young and other members of Pampa's 1974-75 district championship team? Not one college basketball coach visited Pampa and only a few letters were received by any of the players.

Wilbon and Young have the potential to be outstanding.

Will Bowie Be Impeached Today?

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Better 10 friends than one enemy.

If Bowie Kuhn never knew that before, he does now.

Wittingly or not, he made an unforgiving enemy of Charlie Finley and there's a good chance now that will cost him the baseball commissionership.

Charlie Finley never was a big Bowie Kuhn booster to begin with, and Kuhn only succeeded in alienating the Oakland A's owner more and more by some of the actions he took against him the past few years.

Remember how Bowie Kuhn interceded in behalf of Vida Blue when Finley was having trouble signing him a couple of years ago? Charlie Finley remembers.

Then there was the famous Mike Andrews affair, and the action Kuhn took against Finley when he turned on the lights during a world series game in Oakland. Kuhn imposed fines on Finley both times and Finley remembers that, too.

It was never any secret. Charlie Finley simply didn't think Bowie Kuhn was a good commissioner and he felt Kuhn had jumped on every possible opportunity to embarrass him.

Charlie believes in an eye for an eye.

If Bowie Kuhn was going to embarrass him, he'd do what he could to embarrass Bowie Kuhn.

The perfect example was last fall after the A's beat the Dodgers in the world series. Finley felt he had the perfect chance to get back at Kuhn for some of the indignities he believed Kuhn had inflicted upon him.

Traditionally, the commissioner presents the championship trophy to the owner of the winning world series team and in last year's case, that would have been Charlie Finley.

A call was made to Finley asking him whether he would come down to accept the trophy from Kuhn and his booming angry answer was — no, no, a thousand times no — not from someone like Bowie Kuhn.

Then Charlie came up with an idea.

He would have his clubhouse custodian accept the trophy from Kuhn so the whole world could see what he thought of the commissioner on TV. Somewhere along the line he had a change of heart and, in the end, Sal Bando, the A's captain, Joe Rudi and Reggie Jackson made the acceptance.

Kuhn was aware Finley purposely had snubbed him, but there wasn't anything he could do about it. What could he do, fine Finley again?

Even should the move to fire Kuhn be tabled today, there is the strong likelihood he will simply finish his present term and be let out after the world series or at the winter meetings in Hollywood, Fla., four months from now.

That means he will be nothing but a lame duck, a token commissioner until then.

Only a year and a half ago, Charlie and the Yankees had no use for each other whatsoever over the question of Dick Williams' managerial services. The Yankees signing of Catfish Hunter seven months ago didn't endear them any more to the anguished A's owner.

Now, though, they are united in a common cause.

Major League Action Resumes

By United Press International

Whether it's Bowie Kuhn, or a successor, one of the big problems facing the commissioner and the various major league club owners during the second half of this season will be sustaining fan interest in a lopsided product.

The two-division concept, which was organized in 1969 to generate greater fan interest throughout the course of a long season, is not going so well this season and there is a definite possibility that all four division races in the National and American Leagues could develop into runaways.

With the season just beyond the midway point, the Cincinnati Reds in the NL West, the Pittsburgh Pirates in the NL East and the Oakland A's in the AL West have taken commanding leads which will be difficult for their rivals to overcome in the final 10 weeks of the season.

The Reds, who have won 61 of

their first 90 games and are riding a 10-game winning streak, hold a tremendous 12½ game lead over the defending NL champion Los Angeles Dodgers and would have to suffer an almost total collapse to lose it.

Of course, there have been dramatic "chokes" in the history of the game—the Brooklyn Dodgers of 1951, the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1962 and the Philadelphia Phillies of 1964 to name a few—but they haven't occurred very often.

The Pirates and A's also are on the verge of breaking open their division races. Pittsburgh currently leads the Philadelphia Phillies in the NL East by 6½ games and has been playing superbly of late, with 17 wins in its last 22 games.

McIntire's Game On Par At Last

For awhile, Wiley McIntire was a little worried that he wasn't going to qualify for the West Texas PGA Junior Tournament of Champions Aug. 13-14 at Odessa.

Then, the Pampa High senior-to-be seemed to come alive. McIntire placed second in the Junior Tour Tournament at Friona last week, then won championships at Childress Monday and Vernon Tuesday. Since you only have to win one Junior Tour event to qualify for the Tournament of Champions, McIntire's worries are over.

"I thought for a while I wasn't going to (qualify). I hadn't won all year and then I finally won," McIntire said.

He added that his Childress win resulted in the victory at Vernon. "I already won (and qualified) at Childress so I just went up to Vernon to play. I was more relaxed. It wasn't in the back of my mind that I had to win."

McIntire fired a 68 at Childress, equalling his best round ever. He won at Vernon with a wind-blown 75. In both tournaments, Miller Scott of Clyde was second with a 70 at Childress and a 76 at Vernon.

McIntire attributes his consistent play of late to three instructors — Pampa Country Club pro Hart Warren, assistant pro Sherwin Cox and Pampa High golf coach Deck Woldt.

"I've been getting a few lessons from Pro and Sherwin," and they, says McIntire, have been instrumental in improving his putting, an area that has cost the Harvester golfer several good rounds in the past.

"Deck Woldt is a good coach. He helps you out when you need it. He's taught me the rules and etiquette and to never quit trying. And he's helped me with my putting."

Woldt came close to coaching Pampa to its first district title in golf in years last season. Pampa blew a first-round lead and, when the six rounds were over, found itself in third place.

McIntire was probably as hurt as his coach.

"I guess we kind of got overconfident that first round.

It wasn't Coach Woldt's fault; it was the team's fault. I wanted to win it for Coach Woldt."

WILEY MCINTIRE

Late Throw

Andy Richardson scores on a late throw to home in the second inning of Monday night's 4-3 Pampa National League win over Carson County in the Area III Little League Tournament at Optimist Park. Richardson was the winning pitcher. Both the Pampa National and American Leagues won area championships and will play each other at 8 p.m. Monday in Dumas in the first round of the District I Tournament.

Gold Keeps Machinery Running

NEW YORK (UPI) — The electronic age is highly dependent on gold — not to buy electronic machinery but to keep it running.

Even some straight electrical devices such as plug connectors used in controlling the brakes on semi-trailer trucks depend on gold.

"No other metal has been found that will provide reliable and long lived electrical and electronic connection contacts at the tiny wattages used in these sophisticated applications," says Paul Aicher, president of Technical Materials, Inc., Lincoln, R.I. "Platinum, palladium and other metals have been tried, but they all have serious disadvantages in comparison with gold."

But gold is expensive — $160 or more an ounce in the industrial market. Much more serious, it is comparatively scarce, and even though it can be recovered when old electronic devices are junked, it becomes increasingly difficult for the electronics and electrical industries to get enough.

Industry in the United States alone uses 700,000 ounces of gold a year. The electronics and electrical manufacturers are by far the biggest users with jewelers and dental supply people following.

Naturally, the electrical and electronics manufacturers have gone to great trouble trying to find substitutes for gold. When these efforts failed they turned to ways to reduce the amount of gold needed to transmit the electrical or electronic impulse. These efforts have been successful and Aicher's company has played a leading role in them.

"We have worked out techniques that can reduce the amount of gold required in sophisticated connectors by 25 to 90 per cent, according to the application," he said. "Perhaps we can save 25 per cent of the total industrial need for gold. At present prices that would be $24 million a year but the physical conservation is more important than the money saving."

The gold is saved in two ways. First, by substituting an alloy that contains only 55 per cent gold for 24 or 18 karat gold. The metals used for alloying in the case of Technical Materials' patented alloy are silver, cadmium and indium, but there are other alloy formulae that save gold in electronics manufacture.

Much more important, Aicher said, are new sophisticated techniques of applying the gold. "Until comparatively recently," he explained, "small parts frequently had to be gold plated all over to make certain they would transmit an electronic current. Now we have learned to apply the gold only in the tiny area where it is needed in stripes as thin as a hundred thousandth of an inch."

High speed machines built by Technical Materials, for example, turn out the thin gold alloy in a continuous strip that is skived into a larger strip of base metal. Skiving means cutting a groove into a ribbon of metal so another metal can be inlaid in the groove and bonded firmly.

Cowbelles Raise Funds For Girlstown

The Top O' Texas CowBelles currently are raising funds to buy beef for Girlstown.

The annual money raising campaign by the organization will conclude on the final day of the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

Girlstown, U.S.A., is a state project of the Texas CowBelles. The Top O' Texas CowBelles includes 10 towns and there are 162 members. Mrs. Richard Brown of Wheeler is president. Persons interested in donating money or getting more information about the fund drive may contact Mrs. Frank Robinson, Rt. 4, Panhandle, chairman; Mrs. Allen Webb, Canadian; Mrs. Tom Christian, Claude; Mrs. Ken Jackson, Groom; Mrs. Leslie Dorsey, McLean; Mrs. Jim Greene, Pampa; Mrs. John Paul Dauer, Shamrock; Mrs. Don Bradley, Wheeler; or Mrs. L.C. O'Neal, White Deer.

Braniff Requests Probe Grand Jury Midhandling

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Braniff Airlines has asked a federal judge to force the government to produce documents from the Civil Aeronautics Board and to investigate allegations government attorneys mishandled a grand jury investigation that led to Braniff's indictment on antitrust charges.

Airlines attorneys said Tuesday the government's lawyers manipulated testimony before the federal grand jury that indicted Braniff and Texas International Airlines Feb. 15.

The grand jury indicted Braniff and Texas International, which both operate in interstate commerce, for allegedly conspiring against smaller Southwest Airlines, which operates only in Texas, to thwart its operations in the Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio markets.

Tuesday's allegations by Braniff were in a motion asking U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears to force the government to produce documents of the Civil Aeronautics Board and for authorization to investigate alleged misconduct by government attorneys before the grand jury.

Braniff said its defense against the antitrust conspiracy indictment was based on contention the Federal Aviation Act confers exclusive jurisdiction with respect to such practices on the CAB, effectively granting immunity to airlines in antitrust matters over which the federal agency presides.

It said the CAB documents were essential to its case.

Braniff Tuesday also sought to question government attorneys about alleged use of "unsworn summaries and paraphrases of testimony" of witnesses in presenting their case to the grand jury.

Mobeetie Sets Theatre

The Mobeetie Little Theatre was organized recently in a meeting at the old jail in Mobeetie.

Glen Sherrell was elected president; Emalea London, vice president; Melba Burch, secretary; Mildred Mickey, treasurer; and Melody Burch, reporter.

The committees and chairmen appointed include publicity, Melba Burch; stage, Bill Watson; make up, Frank Bliss and Glenda Sherrell; lights, Dianne Hilburne; tickets, Alisha Moffett; program, Bernice Caldwell; concession stand, Anna Belle Corcoran, Bessie Calmor and Maggie Myers; membership, Jim Batton and Glenda Sherrell; way and means, Goldie Gordon; and costume, Alene Corse.

"Old Mobeetie," a play written by Mrs. Emalea London, will be presented by the group in early September.

Mrs. London will direct her work, which is a story of Mobeetie in the late 1800s. Frank Bliss will serve as co-director.

Rehearsals are Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings.

Mrs. London said that persons interested in taking part in the production may contact any of the officers or committee members.

Mrs. Margaret Colson

Mrs. Margaret Colson is so excited about her new business and the way it has been received that she has thoughts of moving it to a larger location after the first of the year. "Every day I think of some other specialty line I would like to add," she said.

The Copper Kitchen in the Coronado Shopping Center opened in October 1974. "I had a shop like this in mind for four or five years," said Mrs. Colson. "I felt that Pampa could use a business like this and the people in the area have been real good to accept it."

Mrs. Colson said a bride could enter her business and pick out everything that she would need in her kitchen. "We carry cookware and flatware, placemat and canister sets," said Mrs. Colson. She added that she also carries a bit of the unusual including Texas-shaped gelatin molds, vanilla beans, and a complete line of copper pots and wooden spoons.

One of the more unusual parts of the Copper Kitchen is their bridal registry. Mrs. Colson explained that she puts the prospective bride's picture and her selections in the paper; it is part of her advertising but she also believes that it helps the girls. "I like to see anyone get started on the right foot," said Mrs. Colson.

The Colsons have lived in Pampa for 23 years. "My husband has worked for Cabot for 18 years and he was behind me all the way when I started," said Mrs. Colson. "I am glad that I did it and by the way business has been going I think that the people of the Pampa area are glad that I did also."

Algae—Ultimate Food, Fuel Source?

LOS ALAMOS, N. M. (UPI) — It has been known for years that common algae is an excellent, although perhaps unappetizing, source of protein.

Scientists at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory now say algae could also produce energy for the world and turn a handsome profit for the algae farmer.

"It may prove to be the ultimate food and fuel source," says biologist Victor Kollman of LASL's Health Research Division. He and other scientists have been working with laser beams to study the photosynthesis of algae.

Kollman says one acre of land anywhere in the world could produce 1,460 tons of high protein algae for food each year, make a $1.5 million profit for the farmer, and then be used to produce large amounts of hydrogen for fuel and methane gas for fertilizer.

"I know the figures sound unbelievable," Kollman says, "but then, what has been accomplished by man's understanding and manipulation of natural processes has always staggered the imagination."

Kollman and two colleagues in the Laser Research Division, Dr. S. L. Shapiro and Dr. A. J. Campillo, have been using lasers to "watch" photosynthesis and produce algae many times faster than normal.

Photosynthesis is the natural process in plants by which light is turned into energy for growth. Because the process takes place in such a brief time span—one trillionth of a second—it has never been understood.

By using lasers capable of picosecond, or trillionth of a second, bursts of light and using ultra fast "streak" cameras, LASL researchers are now able to measure the conversion of light to other forms of energy in plants.

The scientists have aimed at laser at chlorophyll systems in plant cells to determine how light energy is transmitted by the chlorophyll "antenna" to a "reaction center" where it is used to produce proteins, sugars and carbohydrates, Kollman says.

Kollman has used airtight cultures to produce algae many times faster than in nature and thinks the process can be used commercially.

He says algae could be grown on an acre of land which has been flooded and covered with plastic. Carbon dioxide would have to be fed into the "farm" and the water maintained at a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit, possibly through solar heat.

The one-acre farm would produce four tons of high protein algae daily, 1,460 tons per year, at an average cost of 50 cents a pound, Kollman says. If sold at $1 per pound, which is at least half the price for algae sold now in health food stores, the farmer would net $1.5 million a year.

Kollman says algae also could be the source for energy by supplying large amounts of hydrogen. He says fuel from algae is feasible within four or five years.

"If you take an acre of land, use the same essential method of forced production of algae as in a food chain, you could crank out hydrogen instead of food," Kollman says.

Treasure Hunters Find Sunken Spanish Galleon

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — The 10 bronze cannon alone will bring about $20,000 each. But their discovery may have a more valuable importance — $100 million in gold and silver, which has lain on the sea bottom for 323 years.

Treasure Salvages Inc. thinks it has found the Spanish galleon "Nuestra Señora de Atocha."

If it has, Treasure Salvages vice president Bleth McHaley says the treasure is waiting: "800 silver bars, each weighing 1,000 ounces, and more than 3,000 ounces of gold." In all, she says, worth more than $100 million.

The Atocha sank in 1622 during a hurricane. The whereabouts of its wreckage has baffled treasure hunters for centuries.

Recovery of the 10 bronze cannon in three days from the ocean floor 40 miles west of here has convinced the salvage firm it has found the Atocha. Ms. McHaley says the Atocha was the only ship in the Spanish treasure fleet in 1622 to carry that many guns.

In all, the vessel — according to Spanish archives — had a total of 18 guns. Discovery of the weapons was itself the "largest find of bronze cannon at a single site in the history of treasure hunting," says Ms. McHaley. Each cannon weighs about two tons and is worth about $20,000 in the current market.

Divers found five of them Sunday and Monday, and the other five Tuesday.

"A rival treasure hunter came down here to see the cannon and he said, 'It is all over but the accounting,'" Ms. McHaley said.

Two years ago the firm found $5 million in gold and silver bars and other artifacts nearby. But there were still doubts the find belonged to the Atocha.

"We were sure then it was the Atocha because of markings on the three silver bars showed they were listed on the Atocha's manifest," Ms. McHaley said Tuesday. "But the find today absolutely confirms it."

The wreckage lies 50 feet below the surface in an area of sea bottom called "The Mud Puddle" by the 40 divers employed by the firm.

Although silver found in other wrecked treasure ships has been virtually worthless due to oxidation caused by sea water, Ms. McHaley expected the Atocha's silver to be in good condition.

"Everything we have found so far has been in good condition," she said. "That is because it was covered over by sand within 30 days."

The firm has been hunting treasure around Florida since 1963, but its only previous major find was off Vero Beach, where it located between $6 million and $10 million in gold, silver and artifacts from a 1715 Spanish treasure fleet.

The League of Latin American Citizens, one of the oldest organizations of Spanish-speaking people in the United States, was formed at Corpus Christi, Tex., on April 29, 1929.
