

Extinguish Cigarettes

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

One puff on a cigarette could be expensive. Beginning on Sept. 1, a new law will prohibit smoking in public places such as hospitals, schools, elevators, enclosed theater or movie houses, libraries, museums, intrastate buses, and transit system buses, planes or trains.

Violation could cost smokers up to $200. Some feel Senate bill 59, passed by the 64th Legislature, will be difficult to enforce. But, John W. Warner, Gray County attorney, said, "If that's the law we'll try to enforce it."

Pampa police chief Richard Mills pointed out one difficulty of enforcement: most places named in the no smoking law are not regularly patrolled by policemen.

The complaints will probably come from business firms and private citizens, the chief said.

Pampa has only two elevators to not smoke in: those in the Hughes building and the Worley building. The law states that smokers may use areas specifically designated by the governing board or the institutions and businesses.

Officials at Highland General Hospital said they probably will designate specific areas for smokers. The hospital has signs patient rooms asking visitors to observe the no smoking rules not to smoke there.

"No smoking is a touchy subject," a physician said. The Texas Hospital Association mailed copies of the new law to its member institutions, including Highland General. Announcement was made during a Highland General Hospital board of managers meeting Monday that Governor Dolph Briscoe has signed the bill.

Steps necessary to comply with the law will be discussed during the board's August session.

Fines for illegal smokers range from $1 to $200 plus court cost which is $2.50 in justice of peace court.

"When they tell people they can't smoke or drink they are covering a lot of territory," said Judge Anderson who hasn't smoked since 1935.

However, the judge said when the bill becomes law he has no alternative but to accept complaints for violations.

Justice of Peace Nat Lunsford doesn't smoke. "But there was a time when I enjoyed it. But smokers should always be considerate of others. I think the law will be all right. I don't condemn others for smoking — but if it is against the law — the law must be respected and upheld," he said.

"I asked for this job and I must carry out the duties," he emphasized.

Apollo Commander Sees Practical Space Era

HOUSTON (UPI) — Apollo commander Thomas Stafford said in a unique in-flight news conference today he has enjoyed every minute of the age of Apollo but predicted the space shuttle rocket plane will open a new and more practical era in 1979.

"Certainly there's a lot of nostalgia seeing the end of Apollo," the veteran space pilot said as he, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton spent the last full day in space Americans will log for four years.

"However, I think we are opening a new era with respect to the shuttle where space can have more utility, bring more benefits to man," Stafford said.

Brand and Slayton said in reply to questions radioed directly from reporters for the first time that both have been having a "super" time in space. Slayton, who had to wait 16 years to get into orbit, said, "We have to come back tomorrow and I'm not sure I'm looking forward to it."

"It's the greatest experience I ever had," Brand said. "Things have just been super."

Asked if the joint flight with two Soviet cosmonauts was worth the $230 million the United States spent, Stafford replied, "Yes... definitely so."

In previous news conferences held by pilots in space, questions were formed by committee and radioed by astronauts on the ground.

The news conference lasted 33 minutes and when it ended at 9:03 a.m. EDT, Stafford said, "Maybe next time we can have it up here in space."

The pilots already were thinking about returning home. They splash down Thursday in the Pacific Ocean and Brand told Houston control to relay to their wives: "Tell them we'll see them shortly."

The veteran recovery ship USS New Orleans was on station 322 miles west of Honolulu. Forecasters said weather and sea conditions should be good for the last water landing planned for American spacemen.

The space shuttle rocket plane set to fly next in 1979 — will land on a runway like a jetliner.

The flight plan called for Stafford, Brand and Slayton to start preparing today for the return by jettisoning the docking module that served as the link between the Apollo and Soviet Soyuz spaceships during the 44 hours they flew together as a single assembly.

The 10-foot, cylindrical section was to be spun away like a top so it would remain stable in orbit for the astronauts to track to detect variations in earth's gravity and see how they affect the module's orbital speed.

The astronauts' future appeared to be forming even before they returned. Christopher Kraft, director of the space center, said he plans to offer Slayton, 51, the job of directing flight testing of the revolutionary space shuttle.

Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov, the two Russians who opened the historic Soviet-American joint mission eight days ago, also were receiving recognition.

Larry Capune is having problems with peanut butter and sharks.

He's celebrating the Bicentennial in his own way, according to a UPI report, by paddling a surfboard to Corpus Christi from Cape Elizabeth, Maine. He left Maine July 4 and hopes to be in Texas by February.

His supply of peanut butter sandwiches is providing the paddler nourishment...and a few problems.

A few days ago he cut his finger trying to hold on to an offshore target ship and eat his peanut butter at the same time.

"I didn't want to give up my sandwich," he said, "so I sat on my finger. But it didn't work, the bleeding didn't stop. I collected quite a few sharks."

Another jewel out of the last session of the Texas legislature is a law prohibiting smoking in public places.

Individual acceptance of this law will depend, probably, on whether the individual smokes or not.

The argument is not a new

A non-smoker once explained that smokers have as much right to foul up the air he breathes as he would have to spit in their soup.

But the law, like others on the books, ought to present a real challenge to law enforcement officers.

If our lawmakers keep it up, the police won't have a chance to get down to the real business of stopping murderers, burglars and heroin pushers.

According to a recent FBI crime report, law enforcement is solving only about one in five known serious crimes.

Aggravated assault was up 10 per cent, murder up 7 per cent and forcible rape up 4 per cent from the first quarter of this year compared to a year earlier.

Property crimes were up 18 per cent and burglary up 20 per cent.

According to Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills, Pampa statistics are close to the national increases.

But part of the blame for similar increase in local crime rests with citizens here.

"Citizens must accept their obligations to protect their own property," Mills recently told a Pampa News reporter. This includes securing doors and windows, locking cars and using a little common sense.

"Law enforcement officers do not have the authority to drive the streets and order residents to lock their homes and automobiles," Mills added.

That's one of his biggest problems, the chief said: convincing residents that undesirable incidents to happen in Pampa.

"We are no different than any other city," he said. "If we were all born and reared here and never left this city, then we would be unique."

Pampa's Kay Fancher with State Senator Max Sherman Senator Sherman Eyes Lt. Governor's Post

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Senator Max Sherman of Amarillo said today in Pampa that if a vacancy should occur in the office of lieutenant governor or the attorney general post he might be a candidate.

"I would want to look at it hard," he said. "But there is nothing sure in politics."

Sen. Sherman spoke at the noon meeting of the Pampa Rotary Club in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn. He was introduced by the club's program chairman, Kay Fancher.

The senator is described in the July issue of the magazine "Texas Monthly," as one of the two three finest public servants in state government — "At the top of everyone's Ten Best list."

"I was most fortunate," the senator commented in regard to his rating.

Asked if he might become a candidate in 1976 for the congressional post now held by Jack Hightower of Vernon, Sen. Sherman said he and his family crossed that bridge in 1972.

Sherman and his wife, Jean Alice, have two children, Lynn, 12 and Holly, 10.

"We decided it would be best to raise our children in Texas," he said.

Mrs. Sherman is a teacher at West Texas State University and is organizer for the First Presbyterian Church of Amarillo.

With speculations being expressed that Gov. Dolph Briscoe will seek another term, the senator said he had always thought the governor would not. Speculations in the past were that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Atty. General John Hill would not seek re-election. However, Sherman says he doesn't know what effect the governor's plans to run will have on those speculations.

Sen. Sherman said public sentiment in his mail prior to passing the no smoking bill were strongly in favor of the law.

"I wish it could be covered by good manners," he said. "I think it would be better handled by self compliance and we may get back to that," he added.

He is of the opinion that the law was passed more as a public awareness precaution.

During the last session of the legislature, 742 of the 3500 bills introduced were passed.

"As long as we meet every two years, we are always going to have a lot of bills introduced," he said. "And many don't get the consideration they need."

He said the $12.4 billion budget for 1975-77 is "good overall."

Mental health mental retardation programs and the Texas Council received a much needed boost, he explained.

State employees were granted cost of living increases, Sherman said. He added that the governor's request for a 5 per cent cut in state employes will be done mostly through attrition — resignations and retirements.

The Vietnamese are selling gold at a rate of more than $40,000 a day in the four refugee camps in the United States. Some are selling the wedding rings off their fingers.

The two firms doing the most business have bought more than $3 million in refugee gold at camps in California, Florida, Arkansas and Pennsylvania. The price Tuesday was $193 per tael — a group of three thin gold leafs weighing a total of 1.2 ounces used throughout Southeast Asia.

One firm, U.S. Silver Corp. of Van Nuys, Calif., expects to buy $10 million in refugee gold when the Vietnamese get out of the camps and into American society.

"We expect to buy four or five times more gold than — $10 million would be a safe figure," said Richard Thies, chief economist for U.S. Silver. He said many refugees who fled South Vietnam are rich, professional businessmen with "considerable wealth."

"They do have a lot of gold," he said. His firm and another, Deak-Perera International, Inc. of New York, have bought $2.3 million in gold at the four refugee camps since they opened in May, according to Lt. Col. Hal Roeder, an Army spokesman at Ft. Indianow Gap, Pa. A third firm, Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York, has bought another $600,000 at one camp alone.

Evan Ecko, branch manager for Deak-Perera at the Pennsylvania camp, said most refugees have sold

Dallas Must Formulate New Desegregation Plan

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today ruled inadequate the methods being used to desegregate Dallas public schools and ordered a Dallas federal court to come up with a new plan by the start of the fall school term.

The circuit court did not specifically order Dallas schools to use busing for racial balance, but suggested city officials could use money now being spent on a closed circuit television system to buy or rent enough buses for "meaningful desegregation."

"We hold that the measures taken by the (U.S.) district court in the areas of student assignment and site selection to transform the DISD into a unitary system are inadequate to right the constitutional wrong denounced by the Supreme Court" in 1954, a three-judge panel of the circuit court held.

The judges ordered the lower court "to formulate, in time for the start of the 1975-76 school year, elementary and secondary student assignment plans which comport with the directives of the Supreme Court and of this opinion."

Schools are scheduled to open in Dallas Aug. 18.

The case came in an appeal filed by attorneys for Eddie Mitchell Tashy on behalf of black and Mexican-American public school students in Dallas.

Later an intervening motion was filed by Herman Bond urging the appellate court to lump the Dallas schools with all outlying districts and order an overall desegregation plan. The court rejected this idea.

"There is in this record no suggestion of violation by the outlying independent school districts in Dallas County... so as to warrant imposition of a multidistrict plan," judges John M. Wisdom, James P. Coleman and Bryan Simpson said.

The appellate court also asked for a progress report on the new plan, and said it must be filed by Oct. 15. This must be "a detailed progress report, concerning the desegregation of the DISD. We will then determine if further action on our part is required to insure the desegregation of the DISD no later than the middle of the 1975-1976 school year."

Ford's Economist Soothes Oil Impact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential economist Alan Greenspan said today this fall's expected increase in oil prices is not likely to have the devastating impact on the economy that many others have predicted.

Even with the energy price increase, Greenspan said, the administration now expects "a somewhat stronger pickup in production and employment in the second half of this year than we had generally been anticipating."

Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, gave the administration's updated economic outlook in an appearance before the Congress' Joint Economic Committee.

The court also said, "It is imperative that the dual school structure of the DISD be completely dismantled by the start of the second semester of the 1975-76 academic school year."

Today's ruling overturned the lower court's approval of the use of closed-circuit television in classrooms as a tool in desegregation and school site selection and construction.

"The television plan does not attempt to alter the racial characteristics of the elementary schools," the judges said. "The plan, although novel in approach, is incompatible with all the jurisprudence of the past 20 years as to public school desegregation and hence fails to pass muster."

The appellate court said it could not tell the Dallas schools and the district court where new schools should be built.

"But we are nevertheless competent to determine that the school authorities and the district court have not accorded proper weight to the racial composition of student bodies in considering the selection and acquisition of new sites and the construction of new facilities."

In a footnote to its 37-page decision, the judges said, "School buses, although not presently owned by the DISD in sufficient numbers to carry out meaningful desegregation, can be leased or purchased with the funds which, but for our decision, would have been used to implement the district court's elementary television plan."

The appellate court said it found no error in the district court's ruling "to treat Mexican American students in the DISD as a distinct ethnic minority group for purposes of school desegregation."

Vietnamese Sell Family Gold

United Press International

The Vietnamese are selling gold at a rate of more than $40,000 a day in the four refugee camps in the United States. Some are selling the wedding rings off their fingers.

The two firms doing the most business have bought more than $3 million in refugee gold at camps in California, Florida, Arkansas and Pennsylvania. The price Tuesday was $193 per tael — a group of three thin gold leafs weighing a total of 1.2 ounces used throughout Southeast Asia.

One firm, U.S. Silver Corp. of Van Nuys, Calif., expects to buy $10 million in refugee gold when the Vietnamese get out of the camps and into American society.

"We expect to buy four or five times more gold than — $10 million would be a safe figure," said Richard Thies, chief economist for U.S. Silver. He said many refugees who fled South Vietnam are rich, professional businessmen with "considerable wealth."

"They do have a lot of gold," he said. His firm and another, Deak-Perera International, Inc. of New York, have bought $2.3 million in gold at the four refugee camps since they opened in May, according to Lt. Col. Hal Roeder, an Army spokesman at Ft. Indianow Gap, Pa. A third firm, Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York, has bought another $600,000 at one camp alone.

Evan Ecko, branch manager for Deak-Perera at the Pennsylvania camp, said most refugees have sold goal in taels. But some have peddled gold jewelry, particularly wedding bands worth $10 to $50.

"Apparently many of the refugees left Vietnam without money or valuables and their wedding bands are the only things of value they have left to their names," Ecko said.

"We hear rumors all the time that some of the refugees have large amounts of gold they are holding onto. Now that they're in the United States, holding onto the gold and knowing they can get money for it any time makes the refugees feel a little more secure."

U.S. Silver Corp. refuses to buy wedding bands.

"Selling your wedding band is a personal thing and involves a lot of emotion," said Robert Rosebrock of U.S. Silver. "We don't want to participate in that kind of transaction. If a person comes in and wants to sell his or her wedding band, it's probably the last thing of value they have. We try to encourage them to hold off and say that things will probably get better for them."

Most of the selling is going on at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Ft. Chaffee, Ark. Most Vietnamese know what they're doing and the gold market in the refugee camps is competitive.

"There's a price war on and it's very unprofitable for all the companies sitting there," said Luis Vigdor, assistant vice president of Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York. "The Vietnamese are very wise. They shop around for the best price."

When the camps first opened, the U.S. government contracted with Deak-Perera to buy refugee gold. In June, the government asked other firms to open offices in the camps.

"When the refugees first got out of Vietnam they were receiving very low prices," Vigdor said. "There was no competition and the Army and State Department asked other companies to come in."

The refugees also have sold a large quantity of jewelry. Thies said the Vietnamese have sold gold at camps in California and Arkansas at the rate of $40,000 a day. Deak-Perera has bought about $120,000 at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, where things had been slow when the camp opened May 4.

"They had plans to close down about two weeks ago because business was beginning to slow down, but there was a sudden upsurge after people learned of the plans and they're back to doing good business," said Capt. George Neiss, an Eglin information officer.

The large amount of gold in the camps has not created any security problems. The firms maintain their own guards and transport the gold and money in armed trucks to and from the bases. Military officials said there have been no major incidents of theft.

But military officials and gold firms believe the refugees are holding onto most of their booty. One says that may mean trouble.

"Most of them say they are going to take it with them when they leave, but I think they're going to have a lot of trouble getting rid of it on the outside," said Dennis Bell of Deak-Perera at Ft. Chaffee. "They'll be able to sell if they go to the East Coast, West Coast or Chicago — major gold centers."

Reins for 'Frankenstein'

The federal Food Stamp program has come to resemble something that escaped from Dr. Frankenstein's laboratory. Sen. James L. Buckley of New York and the 11 senators and 55 House members joining him in sponsorship of a reform measure may have found a way to get the monster back under control. They would change the basic approach for deciding who is eligible for a government subsidy of grocery bills. As it is, eligibility is determined on the basis of the net income of an individual or family — what is left after a series of allowable deductions for the cost of housing, gas for the car and other living expenses.

As experience with the program has revealed, families with an income well above the poverty level may be maintaining a life-style that reduces their "net income" to a level that meets the qualification for food stamps. The Buckley proposal would cut through all of the arithmetic and base eligibility on gross income — before deductions.

The senator estimates that this reform and others, including tighter standards covering college students, could clear the way to increase Food Stamp benefits by 29 per cent for those who really need help, and still cut the overall cost of the program.

This effort comes not a day too soon. The runaway Food Stamp program will be chewing up dollars at the rate of $6.6 billion in the current fiscal year if Congress does not put some kind of rein on its loose standards of eligibility. Some critics say poor families are not getting enough stamps to provide a nutritious diet. If that's the case, Sen. Buckley has pointed out what needs to be done.

Beyond public interest

Most targets of an apparent witch hunt by the Consumer Product Safety Commission have taken a dim view — understandably — of a commission request to reveal voluntarily the chemical formulas of their products. Only about 10 per cent of the several thousand firms solicited have divulged the closely guarded content of the some 21,000 items with which they compete for the consumer market. In a period which has spawned the bureaucratic "leak," they are justifiably wary of pledges of computer-maintained confidentiality. Now, under authority of the General Accounting Office, the commission is prepared to order the firms to surrender their secrets in the name of consumer protection. The goal is to find the "potential and real hazards associated with these products." The study list ranges from detergents to rust removers. Bear in mind that the commission has no specific complaints with which to deal — it merely seeks a "data base." Since the formulas of products suspected of hazardous content can be readily analyzed, the commission seems to have gone beyond its mission of protecting to the meddling stage.

Democracy resurrected

The newly elected Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis of Greece displayed justifiable pride in commenting that democracy has returned to its birthplace. The decisive victory of his New Democracy Party restores confidence in the ability of the people to make wise decisions when free to do so. Virulent, totalitarian-minded left wing factions failed to gain power after the military dictatorship collapsed. Democracy restored, however, is not tantamount to democracy perpetuated. No doubt Caramanlis is mindful that governments of the people are fragile, susceptible to predatory enemies and their own excesses, even as the original version in Athens. He faces hard decisions, particularly in resolving the Cyprus crisis, renewing Greece's military participation in NATO, and restoring friendly relations with the United States. Our government can help by urging another NATO partner, Turkey, to reconsider its militant Cyprus policy and to join in a settlement which includes withdrawal of Turkish invasion forces. The Greeks have a democracy again. But as Benjamin Franklin warned Americans, it will be their responsibility to keep it.

SENSING THE NEWS

Shocking Snubbing of a Hero

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
To believers in freedom and human dignity, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the Russian novelist who was expelled from the USSR for speaking out against Soviet tyranny, is one of the moral heroes of our time. It is profoundly dismaying and shocking, therefore, that President Gerald Ford snubbed Solzhenitsyn when the great writer and moralist spoke in Washington June 30. According to published reports, Mr. Ford was acting on the advice of the National Security Council, headed by Dr. Henry Kissinger, when he declined an invitation to meet and welcome a great fighter for freedom to "the land of the free and the home of the brave."
Mr. Ford's press secretary, in a lame and embarrassing attempt at offering an excuse for the snub, said: "It's not clear what (the President) would gain by meeting with Solzhenitsyn." The President, of course, has time for all sorts of sports celebrities. But he hasn't any time for a man who symbolizes the masses of Russian people who oppose communism but who cannot speak for themselves.
H.C. Gordon, who writes for Human Events, New Guard and other publications, makes some points which bear printing in full. He says:

"Mr. Nessen does have a point. If the President, urged on by Dr. Kissinger and the other global realists in the administration, is committed to a policy of detente — virtually for his own sake — it is difficult to see what purpose would be served by a meeting between him and Solzhenitsyn. Certainly, Mr. Ford would have been most uncomfortable had he been compelled to sit through Solzhenitsyn's speech at the Washington Hilton, in which the distinguished exile spelled out in excruciating detail just what it means for the thousands of Russian dissidents in mental hospitals and slave labor camps to have the world's greatest democracy appeasing their jailers."
At one point in his indictment of Soviet tyranny, he bluntly declared: "In our small planet there are no longer any internal affairs. Communist leaders say: Don't interfere in our internal affairs. Let us strangle our own citizens in quiet and peace. But I tell you: Interfere more and more, interfere as much as you can. We beg you to come and interfere."

Mr. Gordon notes that the only trouble with that dramatic plea is that these days it is more likely to embarrass our own government than the Moscow regime. It reveals, with painful vividness, the fundamental hypocrisy underlying our policy of detente with the Soviet Union; namely, that for the sake of a limited thaw in our relations with the Soviets, we are willing to ignore both the oppressive nature of their system and the appeals of its victims.
Mr. Gordon adds: "What is even more ironic is that detente is actually contributing to that oppression as both Solzhenitsyn and our own leadership are fully aware. According to an article published last month in the Christian Science Monitor, detente abroad has been paralleled by an increasing regimentation of Soviet life at home. The Monitor article not only cited intensified harassment of Christians, ethnic groups, artists, and other dissidents by the KGB security police, but added that this campaign coincides with an official attempt to rehabilitate the brutal dictatorship of Josef Stalin."
Dr. Kissinger, in giving President Ford advice to snub Solzhenitsyn, apparently was worried about offending the sensibilities of Kremlin leaders, which says a lot about the curious thinking of Dr. Kissinger.
It is distressing that Mr. Ford didn't realize that his first concern should have been for the moral sensibilities of the American people and of believers in freedom everywhere on this planet. Americans will see Mr. Ford's snub of Solzhenitsyn as evidence that he doesn't fully comprehend a President's responsibility and opportunity.

BATTIN' AROUND
Columnist Takes Look Into Past

By C.R. BATTEN
On May 12, 1970, the first column written by this observer appeared in the Colorado Springs (Colo.) GAZETTE TELEGRAPH. (The column did not begin to appear regularly until August of that same year.) On such anniversary occasions, it is interesting to pause in our headlong rush to Oblivion, and look back to see where we have been, and to ask whether we are going in the direction we have set out for ourselves.
As I was reviewing the trends over the last five years, I picked up The Environmental Handbook from my bookshelf. It reminded me that we celebrated the first "Earth Day" on April 22, 1970 — just 20 days before that first column of mine appeared.

As I read the Foreword, written by the book's editor, Garrett DeBell, I realized that April 22, 1975 was the predicted environmental doomsday. "We thought that the one-month deadline for the writing was impossible, that we could easily spend a year on it," wrote DeBell. "But a year is about one-fifth of the time we have left if we are going to preserve any kind of quality in our world."
"I view this year's teach-in as an attempt to come to grips with the problems of our deteriorating environment at the level of the individual private citizen," DeBell continued. "The conditions and the media have made people aware of the problems. Now we must propose workable alternatives to our present patterns of living."
What were those suggested alternatives, how have they been accepted, and what are the results — as far as we can now see the results after such a short time?

In reviewing the Environmental Handbook, it is clear that it was the manifesto of the environmental movement. It announced plans to mold a new society much different than the one we knew in 1970 and in earlier years. The admitted anti-humanistic and anti-capitalistic bias of the movement was clearly revealed. The authors called for "an entirely new framework of land-use policies," including shoreline commissions, state-wide zoning, and taxation to discourage the use of resources.
It is not doing it all alone. It has the help of those who seek greater centralized power, which they hope to control. The neo-romanticists and the authoritarians who have joined their cause are taking us back toward the stone-age life of the Polynesian. On our way, we may create a new idyllic natural environment that so many believe we have lost; but we will destroy the favorable human environment which so many individuals have worked so hard to achieve for themselves and their families.

The environmental movement (instead of recognizing that the worst environmental problems are in the Commons held by society and working to eliminate the Commons by establishing new concepts of private property) is seeking to destroy existing concepts of property, and to extend common ownership to all resources. It is not doing it all alone. It has the help of those who seek greater centralized power, which they hope to control. The neo-romanticists and the authoritarians who have joined their cause are taking us back toward the stone-age life of the Polynesian. On our way, we may create a new idyllic natural environment that so many believe we have lost; but we will destroy the favorable human environment which so many individuals have worked so hard to achieve for themselves and their families.

Widow Doesn't Want Hairdresser to Foot the Bill

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, past 65, but I still enjoy dining out, and going to movies and the theater. My hairdresser is wonderful company, and we frequently go places together. (He's gay.) Of course, I pick up the checks, which, I suppose, makes my friend feel uncomfortable. But I can't see myself letting him pay and then trying to settle up with him afterward. (He may not have that much cash on him.)
Is there some way to handle the money matters without embarrassing him?
ANONYMOUS, PLEASE
DEAR ANON: If you frequent the same restaurants often, arrange with the management to bill you by the month, including a percentage for the tips.
Or before the evening's outing, give your escort enough cash to cover everything, and at the end of the evening he can return the change.
DEAR ABBY: I read in the paper that the Catholic church claims 48,701,835 members. Although I am now an atheist, I was baptized and confirmed a Catholic, so today I am still counted as a member of their census.
How can I make that number 48,701,834? I would like to ex-communicate myself — or sign out of the Catholic church.
If you know of any way I can do this, please let me know. C.J.F.
DEAR C.J.F.: I am informed that there is no way to "unbaptize" yourself. You can drop out of the church, of course, but you can't have your name removed from the baptismal records because it is a legal document.
DEAR ABBY: I feel sorry for "MCP in Newport Beach" whose father badly needed a kidney transplant. The problem is not really a scarcity of willing donors but, rather, specialization. The individual societies (kidney, bone, eye, etc.) make it so difficult to donate because they require you to donate their part individually. Each society has its own empire, and you simply cannot donate your entire body to one organization to split it up for whoever needs it.
A few years ago, my wife and I made strenuous efforts all over this city (the second largest in the country) to find any organization (medical schools, hospitals, kidney and other societies) that would accept our bodies after death, take over the entire responsibility for distributing needed parts, then bury what was left. There is simply no such central group.
If these various organizations really wanted donors, all they would have to do is get together and form a cooperative group that would take full responsibility for distribution and disposal (without cost to the donor). If they did that, they would all have more donors than they could handle.

Damage Suit Here Names Hunt Sons Accuse CIA Of Embezzling, Spying Incorrect Defendant

The largest damage suit filed this year in Gray County shouldn't have been.

And Clay Johnson who was named in the suit as the driver of a dirt loader which struck Price William Moore and resulted in fatal injuries, shouldn't have been.

The News was notified

Tuesday by John Judge, a law clerk with the Amarillo firm, Kolander, Templeton and Hamilton, who said he has learned the accident actually occurred in Donley County, about 200 yards south of the Gray County line.

Judge also said that "our investigation reveals that Mr. Johnson was not driving the front-end loader which fatally injured Price Moore, and that he has no interest in the law - suit arising from that accident. I got some incorrect information from witnesses when I went out there to investigate."

The $250,000 damage suit filed in 31st District Court was dismissed earlier this month by Judge Grainger McIlhenny following a request from Mrs. Beulah Moore, plaintiff.

In late June a request to move the suit to Randall County was filed, along with a general denial, by Cooper and Woodruff Inc., named as defendant in the suit along with Clay Johnson. Randall is the corporation's home county.

Judge said that current plans are to refile the lawsuit in Randall County and when the action is taken, Johnson will not be named as a defendant.

"We will probably call Mr. Johnson as a witness," Judge said.

helped embezzled more than $50 million.

Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt said Tuesday their conservative views and their refusal to help the CIA was also the reason for a series of federal wiretapping charges against them.

The brothers said they turned down CIA requests to use their overseas Hunt Oil Co. affiliate and in return the federal government began attempts to discredit the family.

"After turning down the CIA, a massive embezzlement scheme involving losses of over $50 million from the Hunt Oil Co. were uncovered," the brothers said in a news release.

"An investigation disclosed that some of the Hunt employees involved in the scheme were secret government agents," they said.

The brothers were originally charged with wiretapping aides of their late father, in what investigators contend was a struggle for control of the family fortune. They are scheduled to go on trial in September on that charge.

A grand jury Monday handed down new indictments charging the Hunt brothers, criminal lawyer Percy Foreman of Houston, three other attorneys and a retired Texas industrialist with obstruction of justice for allegedly trying to thwart the wiretap investigation.

The indictment charged the seven men conspired to pay witnesses to go to prison to hush testimony about the wiretapping.

The brothers said the new charges were further indication they were being persecuted by the federal government.

Full documentary evidence of the embezzlement was given to the FBI and the CIA, the Hunt brothers said. They said the government refused to investigate the matter until the Justice Department started an investigation four years later - at the insistence of Hunt attorneys.

Two mail fraud convictions of former Hunt employees resulted from the Justice Department's investigation, but one of the main embezzlers was not prosecuted, the brothers said.

"The Department of Justice has now caused a grand jury to indict us and others on false obstruction of justice charges," the Hunt brothers said.

"If these charges had merit, they would not have waited five years to file them or used a political prosecutor from the Washington, D.C., Department of Justice to prosecute them," they said.

"Despite this cover over by the Justice Department of the embezzlement against the Hunt Oil Co. and this oppression of us because of our conservative views, we will continue to press that the government's misconduct be exposed and that the CIA, FBI and the Department of Justice be stopped from their continuing abuses against us."

Police Report Gasoline Theft

Slashed tires, gasoline theft, broken windows and aggravated assault highlight activity recorded today by the Pampa Police Department.

Richard Sutton of 1509 Williston said while working the Pampa Junior School Tuesday he heard an air rifle shot or "something similar." He found a window pane broken. Twelve others have been broken this summer, police said.

One man reported that he had been shot at. The identity of the one who fired the shot is not known. He escaped injury.

A purse was taken from an unlocked vehicle.

A shoplifter was reported at Ideal Store No. 11.

Three light fixtures and a shower curtain were reported missing from a house where tenants are being evicted.

The Pampa Fire Department reported that juveniles had intentionally set trash and grass fires in the 500 block of S. Ballard.

Addie Hensley of 418 Doucette reported that barking dogs awakened him Tuesday night. When checking he smelled gasoline and saw three boys ages 17 to 19 years "stealing gas."

A traffic light at Wilks and Hobart was hit.

Ray Dudley of 700 N. Somerville said someone cut the tires on his vehicle with a knife or sharp instrument.

Pampa Police Department Tuesday recorded that mud was thrown over the front door and windows of Piggly Wiggly with nails strewn on the parking lot.

Other incidents include:

- A halter taken from a residence.
- Various items taken in a break-in at 314 E. Tyng.
- A shoplifting report.
- Several batteries were taken from cars at Tip Top Used Cars.
- Beer taken in a burglary at 543 Brown.

Several motor vehicle accidents with no injuries were also reported.

Insurance Companies Ask Homeowner Hikes

AUSTIN (UPI) - Insurance company representatives have asked the state Insurance Board to approve a 13.8 per cent average increase in premiums for homeowners insurance and eliminate discounted three-year fire insurance policies.

The board Tuesday said it would hold a hearing Aug. 4 on the proposals.

One request calls for premiums on fire insurance on dwellings to increase 4.7 per cent. The industry also wants to do away with three-year fire and extended coverage policies now allowed consumers.

"We think it will more equitably apportion the rates between those who buy on an annual basis and those who buy on a three-year basis so that one will not be subsidizing the other," Sam Winters, attorney for the industry group, said.

R.G. Parker, actuary for the industry association, said the present procedure for calculating rates on policies for more than one year requires insurance companies to grant a 10 per cent discount for guaranteeing a rate for three years.

"In times like these you can go broke like that," Parker said. "A contractor can't quote a man a price and agree to build buildings for the next three years at today's prices. He's got to consider that his costs will go up."

Bullock's Tax Raiders Invade Restaurant

HURST, Tex. (UPI) — The motto on the red and black entry rug proclaimed "We're glad you're here," but Dave Smith wasn't happy to see the mob that invaded his diner Tuesday night.

"What's going on here? What is all this," the owner of the Astoria Restaurant asked as a dozen tax raiders from the state comptroller's office and an equal number of reporters poured into his business.

While the restaurant's patrons were quietly ushered out the door, Harriet Buckle, a staff attorney for the comptroller's office, crossed over to Smith.

"Mr. Smith, we're here to collect $18,739.40 in sales taxes you have neglected to forward to the state," she said. "You must pay, sir, or we will be forced to shut down your business. You have been delinquent since 1973 despite continued calls from our office."

"Well, I've intended to pay," he answered angrily. "You're gonna put me out of business. I can't pay if you put me out of business."

A half hour later, the Astoria Restaurant with its pine paneling, orange plastic booths and $1.65 waffle and sausage special was closed and padlocked for delinquent taxes.

The raid was the first of two made in the North Texas area

Tuesday night. Ron's Club, a Fort Worth bar more than $2,000 behind in sales taxes, was closed within minutes of the Astoria.

"We have a few more visits in the Fort Worth area (today)," State Comptroller Bob Bullock said. "And we've got a lot of work ahead of us. There are 70,000 businesses in this state that are delinquent in their state taxes."

The Tuesday night tax raids were the fourth in the past three months for Bullock's lieutenants.

Merchants are commissioned by the state to collect tax on all their sales but also are responsible for turning the tax money back to the state. If they fail to do so, the state then has the power to confiscate the holdings of delinquent businesses and hold the goods for resale in order to recover the money owed the state.

According to Bullock, that power was rarely exercised by his predecessors.

"But it's the law and this office is going to see that the law is carried out," the comptroller said.

"Heck, we don't want to close businesses but we have to do something," he said. "This fellow (Smith) last paid taxes in 1973. You can threaten and threaten but unless you show you mean business, these people will pocket your and my money and laugh at us.

"Want income taxes. This is not income we are taking from these people," he said.

"This is sales taxes. These people wouldn't let you out of their bar unless you paid that tax on your tab," Bullock said. "And then instead of sending it to the state like they are supposed to, they just pocket it."

"Well, those days are over," he said.

Bullock's raiders have shut down restaurants and bars in Houston, San Antonio and Dallas in their previous raids. Bullock said after the first couple of raids, quite a few business owners have called the comptroller's office saying they wished to pay their delinquent taxes.

"The publicity is sure making a lot of people remember they have forgot to pay the state," he said.

Bullock said Smith had agreed to pay the state $4,500 in the back taxes Monday, then pay off the rest in $1,000 installments.

"And if he does that, then he's back in business Monday," he said. "I don't want to kill a man's business. I just don't want them cheating the state and the taxpayers."

Christina Onassis Must Wait for Honeymoon

ATHENS (UPI) — Christina Onassis Andreadis is going to have to wait for her honeymoon. Her new husband, Pvt. Alexandros Andreadis, can't get a leave from the Greek army.

"I am happy, just happy," the smiling, 24-year-old heiress said Tuesday night after marrying the 30-year-old son of a wealthy Greek financier.

The bride, daughter of the late shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, let her husband do most of the talking at a brief news conference in his family's seaside villa.

"There's no honeymoon," Andreadis said as wedding guests sipped champagne in the villa's garden. "We're staying in Athens because on Sunday I'm going back to my unit."

Andreadis, an army private with a desk job in Athens, said the couple hasn't decided yet where to live. "We have a lot to choose from," he said.

Christina, who inherited the bulk of her father's billion-dollar estate, owns a villa in Athens, apartments in Paris and Monte Carlo, part of the private island of Skorpios and an ocean-going yacht named after her.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the bride's stepmother, attended the traditional Greek Orthodox ceremony at a tiny chapel overlooking the seaside suburb of Glyphada.

"I so love that child," Mrs. Onassis said. "I am happy that she found him. At last I can see happy days ahead for her."

A crowd of well-wishers cried "Christina, long life" as she married Alexandros at the end of a whirlwind, month-long courtship that took Greece by surprise.

Preparing for Action

Web Wilder of San Antonio prepares to tee off prior to Monday's qualifying round of the 41st annual Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament at the Pampa Country Club. Bud McKinney of Dallas, part of Wilder's foursome, watches. Wilder shot 70 to finish second in the running for medalist; C.L. Duniven of Amarillo was first at 69. Players participated in a banquet Tuesday night and will open match play in the tournament today. See story, page 8. (Pampa News photo by Paul Sims)

Coal Fields To Open

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Plans were announced today for a $110 million project to mine coal fields in northwestern New Mexico and transport the coal via a new railroad line to a power plant in Arizona.

A spokesman for Santa Fe Industries, one of the partners involved in the project, said the sub-bituminous coal would fuel a new electricity generating plant under construction by the Salt River Project near St. Johns, Ariz.

Partners in the proposed project, which tentatively has been approved, include the Cherokee and Pittsburg Coal and Mining Co., a subsidiary of Santa Fe; Peabody-Thermal Energy Co., a joint venture of Peabody Coal Co. and Thermal Energy Co. of Dallas, and the Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District.

Jurist Entertains Golfers

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

Judge Zollie Steakley, associate justice of the Texas Supreme Court, regaled an audience of 300 persons at the Pampa Country Club Tuesday night as the emcee of the Tri-State Senior Golf Association's 41st annual banquet.

The 55- and -over golfers and their guests applauded the state's high court jurist as he tickled funnybones with stories about golfers and politicians.

At the conclusion of his evening's job at the podium, Judge Steakley turned to a serious note and brought the audience to attention with a dedication to Bicentennial Year.

"We must come to the realization," Judge Steakley said, "that the privileges we have and what we know as American citizens all is due to this great land in which we live."

He closed his remarks with the rhyme: "Red, White and Blue — We All Love You."

Siebert Worley of Shamrock, association president, opened the banquet program.

Among those introduced at the head table were Pampa Mayor R.D. Wilkerson, Joe Cree, Pampa Country Club president, and J.R. Brown of Amarillo, association secretary.

Wilkerson welcomed the banquet guests and said the seniors' golf tournament is one of the outstanding events of the year in Pampa.

Cree greeted the golfers and their guests on behalf of the more than 600 country club members.

He introduced Hart Warren, country club golf pro, and announced that he hoped when the association elected officers Thursday for 1975-76 they would decide to return to Pampa for their 42nd annual tournament.

President Worley presented the Medalist Trophy to C.L. Donovan of Amarillo, who took medalist honors Tuesday by shooting a 2 under par 69.

The Colonel Bogey Award went to Col. Webb Wilder of San Antonio. The presentation was made by J. Bryan Johnson, association director and last year's Colonel Bogey selection.

C.E. Steel, manager of Celanese Chemical Co., was recognized for turning the Celanese golf course over to wives of tournament players this week.

One of the highlights of the state show, produced by Red Wedgeworth and his Band With Dixieland, was the comedy act of Buzz Dugger, principal of Boys Ranch High School.

Among those recognized for contributing much to the success of the annual seniors tournament were Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Heath, Ed Myatt and Mr. and Mrs. C.R. Brown.

This year's week-long visit to Pampa marks the fifth consecutive year the senior golf play has been hosted at the Pampa Country Club.

D. Thompson Installed As Pythias Head

Don Thompson, 300 E. Tyng, was installed as Chancellor Commander of Pampa Lodge No. 480 Knights of Pythias Tuesday at the Pythian Hall, 315 N. Nelson. Thompson, a member of Pampa Lodge 480 since August 1972, will serve through June 30, 1976.

Gary B. Clark, 2730 Comanche, D.D.G.C. of district nine, was installing officer. He was assisted by William B. Neel and Ray Danvers.

Other officers installed were J. Tommy Dawes, vice-chancellor; B.B. Altman, secretary; William B. Neel, financial secretary; Jack Back, treasurer; Charles E. Rice, master at arms; and Tony L. Smith, inner guard. Edward Baum, R.L. Klipstine, and Ross Martin, officers of Amarillo Lodge No. 479 visited.

Obituaries

Wheat Report-1975

New Harvest: During recent weeks the harvest of more than 680 million bushels has been underway in the five major wheat states served by Santa Fe. That's almost half of all the winter wheat grown in this country.

Car Supply: Santa Fe's part of the harvest job will be about 29,000 carloads. Our fleet of jumbo hoppers along with regular hoppers and box cars are now rolling throughout the harvest areas handling this big load.

Santa Fe Operations: The millions invested each year to improve Santa Fe's facilities, cars and locomotive fleet, makes it possible for us to get the job done in the most efficient way. We are ready to do even more than our share in wheat-growing states along the Santa Fe where problems may arise from inadequate transportation services.

Wheat train of new 100-ton jumbo hoppers

Under normal conditions the railroads plan their operations to move with the harvest as it advances across the wheat belt.

This year, old man weather has upset the timetable. Rain has delayed the new crop about two weeks, and the wheat became ripe and ready in all growing areas of the Midwest, at the same time!

Santa Fe has a long and proud record of moving wheat. We do our best to prepare for each year's harvest. For example, we have almost 13,000 jumbo hoppers in service, including 1,000 brand new ones just received from the builders. That's the largest fleet in the nation.

1975 will be a near-record wheat harvest year along the Santa Fe; and, although the weather has created problems, we are doing our best to move each bushel. We are about to complete the harvest movement, and we appreciate the cooperation of growers, shippers, elevator operators and government inspectors which has helped Santa Fe handle another big wheat job.

Rail cost is only a thin slice of the price you pay for bread. It averages about—

1/2¢ a loaf

Moving wheat for making bread is an example of how a modern railroad handles volumes of foodstuff at low costs.

This is one way Santa Fe works to hold down the price of food where it counts the most for family shoppers, at the checkout counter.

Designers Create Brightly Colored Socks For Fall Fun

United Press International
Now they've learned how to print pictures on men's socks and the results are devastating. Beer can labels. Art deco pictures. People. Bright screaming plaids. Landscapes. Cartoons. Sporting scenes. You name it.

If you want to celebrate the Bicentennial in style you can get socks with a single printed design on the ankle—a cracked Liberty bell or an American Eagle, for example.

It is a process first developed by sports shirts manufacturers for the bright printed shirts that are the current rage. The hosiery manufacturers call it the resolution of screen, heat transfer and sublimatic printing to the hosiery field.

Hosiery knitting machines are limited both in the types of designs that can be programmed into them and in the number of yarn colors that can be used at any one time.

But these new printing methods have no limits—you can even print finely detailed pictures of people and scenic designs, in fact you can print anything you can photograph.

A variation on the detailed design theme is an individual decal-type print, and in the cartoon line you can find such super heroes as Batman, Superman, Wonder Woman and the Red Baron. Or you can get socks printed with numbers—the class of 1975 for example or numbers worn by great football quarterbacks.

Sweater-type knits are another fashion motif in men's hosiery. Heavyweight socks show up in brightly colored Scandinavian designs similar to those in ski sweaters. There are also knee-length tubes with wide swatches of pure basic colors and rugby stripes in classic color combinations.

The National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers cautions that these socks are not for every day—but they offer an alternative for leisure hours, a means of striking up a conversation. Just wave your printed socks in the air and somebody is certain to say something.

If you are going to get dressed up then there is a completely different story—socks which help out with the understated elegance that comes from careful coordination from top to toe.

The word is traditionalism, but this does not mean a drawer full of solid black, brown and blue socks. They have a place; but there are new socks with fashion consciousness that help make the coordinated look total.

There are self patterns in traditional and fashion colors in ribs of even or varying widths, birdseye effects, simple geometric and even two-color patterns in closely related shades that appear to be solid color from a distance. Look closely and you'll see the wearer is really paying attention to detail.

For solid color dress slacks and suits there are dress socks with distinctive overall patterns. Diamonds and checks in classic colors for example. There also are embroidered or knitted cloaks or panels running up the side of the leg, for another bit of hosiery interest.

For casual dressing there are many things other than printed socks. Herringbone stripes, interlocked diamonds, window-pane checks, diamonds within diamonds, tartan plaids. And, of course, the old classic, the Argyle, which is still a leading seller in all shades.

Some of the popular colors for fall are bright rust, browns, beiges and woodland greens. Shades are traditionally dark for fall, but now they can be better coordinated with medium-toned clothing.

FASHIONETTES

The classic elegance of a long rope of baroque pearls will be back on the fall fashion scene.

Three or four related color tones are preferred for fall instead of contrasting hues. Different textures also are being paired in the same outfit: flannel with panne velvet and tweed with knit, crepe, wool and leather, for example.

News on the fur scene for fall and winter focuses on easy yoked smock designs, classics such as a bathrobe wrap coat in striped mink, grey-dyed mink blazers and hooded duffle coats in curly lamb, raccoon and believe it or not, green dyed mink.

John Anthony's fall collection has oriental overtones: slim garments in rich fabrics such as satin and silk jersey. He also likes a lot of hand-tailored tweed for daytime.

A suntan peaks three days after the original exposure. Repeated tanning thickens the outer layer of skin. This is nature's way of helping keep moisture in living tissue.

Neat and slim lines highlight Oscar de la Renta's fall collection. He also likes back-belted coats and dresses, raglan sleeves and deep rounded yokes.

Current Rage

Terri Cox, in above photo, is employed by a local clothing establishment that displays socks on the ceiling. The current rage in bright screaming plaids, sporting scenes, cartoons and etc. has been developed by hosiery manufacturers for the fall season. Most of the printed socks are tubes, socks which have no knitted-in heels. They were first developed for the athletic sock field and the heel forms its own heel pocket. They are appearing more and more in dress socks as well as casual wear. (Pampa News photo by Mike Higgins)

Death Rate Higher For Young Mothers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Warning to "all young women aged 12 to 15: Having a baby can be hazardous to your health. It can kill you, and the baby has a good chance of being born with a host of defects.

That blunt message is the focus of a week-long institute this week of health experts and home economists. Their goal is not to scare young people, but to arm them with sound advice and practical knowledge to head off birth defects and infant deaths.

The sponsors—the American Home Economics Association, the National Foundation-March of Dimes, the American Medical Association and the federal government—are working to bridge the gap between what doctors know and what many young mothers find out only too late.

They chose home economics as one key way of getting the message across because of large enrollment in both high school and college home economics classes, 5 million students at last count.

"Home economics plays a very, very key role in the preparation of the pregnant adolescent," said Dr. Howard N. Jacobson, professor of community medicine at Rutgers University.

More than 40 universities and health organizations sent home economics professors and experts in genetics, drugs and maternal and infant care to the conference.

The concern for mothers aged 12 to 15 is shown by a few figures:

—Between 1960 and 1973 the number of mothers in the United States in that age group has increased 80 per cent.

—The death rate for mothers under 15 is five times higher than that of mothers aged 20 to 24.

—Babies born to young teenagers have twice the chance of being abnormally small as the average baby, and a much greater chance of having defects or dying at birth. Teenagers are going through that phase where their nutritional tastes are not what we would call adequate tastes," said Dr. Gwendolyn Newkirk, president of the American Home Economics Association.

The approach advocated by the health experts for young teenagers is a combination of education, nutrition, and birth control devices in some cases.

"For people who are sexually active—and they are—I think it should be possible for them not to have a child," Jacobson said.

Where To Put 60 Million More Americans By 2000?

United Press International
There will be 60 million more Americans by the year 2,000.

"We'll have to put them someplace," says Robert P. McCulloch, Jr. who believes "New cities are the place. They are the best way to get the most housing for the dollar."

McCulloch, president of McCulloch Properties, Inc., Los Angeles, is the developer of major new communities in Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Arkansas, Idaho, Texas and California. The company's first planned community, "my goal this year was to go 17-6," he said. "Now that I've passed that twice, I'd like to develop consistency over 17-6. I still have two years of college left, so I think I'll have plenty of time to worry about going higher after I've become more consistent where I am now."

Bell started vaulting at age 6 in his backyard as the fourth of four vaulting brothers. His father, Dr. William Bell of Jonesboro, built a backyard vaulting area. His first pole was an old steel television antenna, later replaced with a fiberglass stick. His best on the homemade pit was 12-3, seven inches short of brother Billy's record.

From that makeshift beginning, Bell has matured into one of the nation's premier vaulters. Although he says it's possibly a misconception, "I believe I have the potential to be one of the best vaulters ever."

"Bell is what you call a pressure-type vaulter," ASU track coach Guy Kochel said. "He seems to do his best when the chips are down and the stakes are highest. I don't care who the competition is or what they're jumping at, I wouldn't bet against Earl when it comes down to him and one other vaulter."

Kochel said he could not say how high Bell can go, "but I know he can go higher than 18-1."

After 13 years of leaping over a horizontal bar, "I still enjoy every jump," Bell said. "I still enjoy practice. When you enjoy it, there is really not a hard part (to pole vaulting)."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:
Stupidity, not necessity, is the mother of invention...

Pretty stupid to run out of paint thinner while painting an old chest of drawers, right? Even stupider not to wear rubber gloves, right again?

Result: The newest in hand fashions—abstract designs made with (sob!) oil-based paint (semi-gloss).

Problem: How can I pour tea for the duchess without wearing rubber gloves?

Question: If laundry pre-wash spray stain remover works on fabrics, why wouldn't it work on skin?

Happy Answer: It hot only whisks the paint right off, it's a lot easier on hands than paint remover or turpentine.

Now all I have to worry about are my green fingernails.

Marian H. Mundy
P.S. Don't know if this would work with latex paint. I'm not about to smear my hands to find out.

You're a doll! And your hint's really super!

I didn't smear my hands to find out if it works on latex paint, either.

I figured water and a bit of soap is cheaper anyway, and I know that works like a charm.

Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise:
Try to remember a child needs love, hugs, kisses and room (in spirit and adventures), to be a child.

His eye level and viewpoint is limited. Put yourself in his shoes (or at his height) and it'll help to understand him.

Mrs. B.W.

Dear Heloise:
In my sewing, many times I use two or more patterns when making a garment.

In order to place them all back in the correct pattern envelope from which they came, and to avoid mixing them up, I always fold the part of the outside that tells me which piece I have, and also the pattern number.

This also saves time if I wish to use this piece again. I never have to unfold the whole pattern to find what I need.

Eva Leatherwood

Dear Heloise:
Here is a time saver when preparing tomatoes for canning.

When trying to take the green stem out of them, I found if I take a teaspoon and grab the stem with it, the stem comes right out.

No more sore thumbs.

Dear Heloise:
Here is a suggestion which may help other shorties...

If you are not tall enough to see what is on a top shelf and don't relish the idea of climbing on a step stool, keep a mirror with a long handle close by.

It will reflect everything and, possibly you carefully placed listing of "what is up there."

Pythians Will Host Dinner

A 6:30 p.m. dinner on Aug. 8 is being planned for the Brother Knights by the Pythian Sisters of Pampa Temple No. 41. The event will be held in Pythian Hall, 315 N. Nelson.

At the recent meeting of the group, with Most Excellent Chief Stacey Stubbs, presiding, plans were also completed for a bake sale to be held in conjunction with the flea market.

It was reported that Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bernard and Miss Maggie Smith, Annie Brown, Bernice Keen and Joyce Howell recently attended an Amarillo meeting.

Mrs. Wilson Howell presented a short story about the history of the song "Yanky Doodle," and Marie Boyd gave a reading, "Conceived in Liberty."

Helen Cain gave the closing prayer.

Twelve members were present and the next meeting will be July 28 at 7:45 p.m. in the Knights of Pythians Hall.

Pampa Teams Advance

By PAUL SIMS

Lanky Steve Stout gave up a pair of first inning doubles then settled down to pitch a two-hitter and lift Pampa's 14-year-old all-star team to a surprisingly easy 9-1 win over Amarillo No. 1 in the second round of the Pampa Optimist Club Invitational Baseball Tournament Tuesday at Optimist Park.

In the first game Tuesday, Pampa No. 2, made up mostly of 13-year-old stars, whipped the Top O' Texas League, 7-3. In Tuesday's late game, Borger's 14-year-olds eliminated Amarillo No. 2, 5-4. That Amarillo team lost to Pampa's 14's, 12-6, Monday.

The two Pampa teams are slated to play at 9:30 p.m. today and the winner will automatically play in Saturday's finals at 6:30 p.m. Should the field be unplayable because of Wednesday morning's rain, the game will be played Thursday.

Also today, the High Plains all-stars are slated to play Amarillo No. 1 at 4:30 p.m., and Borger is scheduled to meet Top O' Texas at 7 p.m.

Only the Pampa teams are undefeated in the tournament. Pampa No. 2 drew a bye Monday.

Pampa No. 2 battled back from a 2-0 deficit, scoring twice in the top of the fifth, once in the sixth and three times in the seventh. Top O' Texas scored twice in the fourth on a throwing error by Pampa third baseman Bobby Taylor.

Pampa got the runs back in the fifth after Greg Quarles and Terry Woods singled. A fielder's choice left Quarles on third and Joe Jefferson first. Taylor walked to load the bases.

Mark Jennings knocked in Quarles and Jeffers with a single.

Pampa added a run in the top of the sixth and four in the seventh.

The Pampa 14's fell behind, 1-0, after Mark Isaacson doubled to open the bottom of the first for Amarillo. Isaacson stole third and scored on a sacrifice fly to centerfield by Mark Hotmann.

Stout then gave up a double to Scott Moss but followed the hit by getting Sid Felton to ground out to the shortstop.

Pampa scored three runs in the top of the second. Greg Koch doubled and scored on a double by Buddy Brown. Brown scored on an error, which left Rick Dougherty on third base after the Pampa catcher reached on a fielder's choice.

Dougherty scored on a single by Jim Jeffrey.

Pampa added two runs in the fifth. Jeffrey opened with a single and advanced to second when the ball got past rightfielder Terry Kennedy. After Tim Quarles popped out to short, Stout reached on an error by shortstop Hotmann, who allowed Jeffrey to score.

Stout advanced to second on a wild pitch and scored on a base hit by Brown. His eighth of the tournament.

Pampa scored three times in the sixth after Doug Baird, Kerry Adair and Jeffrey reached consecutive errors. Koch knocked in Baird and Adair with a single, while Brown got his ninth run batted in of the tournament with a single, scoring Jeffrey.

Pampa's final run came in the seventh. Kevin Hall singled to open the inning and was forced out when Baird hit into a fielder's choice.

Baird moved to second on a ground ball to the catcher and scored on a single by Jeffrey.

Stout was exceptional in the game, striking out eight and giving up just three walks.

Losing pitcher was starter Pat Hrcir, son of Amarillo High baseball coach Gus Hrcir. He was relieved by Bryan McClure in the second after giving up three runs.

Pampa managed 10 hits for the second consecutive tourney game. It was also the second time Pampa had a fine pitching performance as Ricky Marsh and Jimmy Hammer combined for a three-hitter against Amarillo No. 2 in the opener.

Big Stick

Buddy Brown of the Pampa 14-year-old all-star team watches a ball get by Amarillo catcher Jeff McMennamy in Tuesday night action of the Pampa Optimist Club Invitational Baseball Tournament. Brown has thus far been the big gun for Pampa, knocking in six runs Monday as Pampa downed Amarillo No. 2 and getting three RBI's Tuesday against Amarillo No. 1.

Carlton Blanks Braves

UPI Sports Writer

Steve Carlton has once again become the most important name on the Philadelphia Phillies roster.

Three years ago Carlton was the biggest star in the National League when he won 27 games and the Cy Young Award, but sluggers like Greg Luzinski and Mike Schmidt have surpassed the 30-year-old southpaw in popularity over the past two seasons.

Still, baseball men believe that Carlton is the key man if the Phillies hope to overtake the Pittsburgh Pirates in the NL East this year. Carlton, when he is in top form, is still one of the best pitchers in baseball and could be the "stopper" the Phillies will need down the stretch.

Since his golden year of 1972 Carlton has been terribly erratic, but he showed Tuesday night that he might finally be getting his game under control again. If so, it will be a welcome relief to the Phillies, who have been staying close to the Pirates without much help from their ace.

Carlton, who has been plagued by arm trouble for part of the season, pitched perhaps his best game of the season Tuesday night when he stopped the Atlanta Braves, 1-0, on a three-hitter. The fastballing lefty walked only three and struck out eight in notching his ninth win against seven losses.

"This is the best groove I've been in this year," said Carlton, who now has recorded two complete game victories in his last three starts. "I had all three of my pitches going for strikes and that makes a big difference. My slider has been inconsistent all year. My arm has bothered me and kept me from working on it. The slider was excellent tonight. Without it, the batter only has to guard against two pitches."

The Braves had only one serious threat against Carlton, and that came in the eighth inning when they loaded the bases with two out. However, Carlton got Marty Perez to pop out to end the inning.

The Phillies, who moved to within four games of the Pirates with the victory, scored the game's only run in the ninth inning with the aid of a throwing error by Braves' catcher Vic Correll. The Phillies loaded the bases with none out and, after Schmidt popped out, Johnny Oates hit what appeared to be a double play ball. However, after making the force out at home, Correll threw the relay wildly past first base for an error, allowing Luzinski to score.

In other National League action, San Diego nipped Pittsburgh, 1-0; New York defeated Cincinnati, 3-1; Montreal edged Houston, 2-1, in 11 innings; St. Louis beat Los Angeles, 4-3, in 11 innings, and San Francisco outslugged Chicago, 9-5.

In American League games, Oakland swept a doubleheader from Detroit, 11-0 and 16-4; Boston nipped Minnesota, 5-4; New York beat Chicago, 11-6; Baltimore defeated California, 8-3; Texas blanked Cleveland, 4-0, and Milwaukee downed Kansas City, 6-3, after losing the first game of their doubleheader, 3-2.

Padres 1, Pirates 0

Randy Jones tossed a sevenhitter for his fifth shutout of the year in leading Padres over the Pirates. Johnny Grubb's looping triple to right in the sixth inning, his first hit in 15 at bats, scored the only run.

Mets 3, Reds 1

Jerry Kosman tossed a sixhitter and also scored a run after stealing the first base of his major league career to lead the Mets to victory over the Reds. Kosman walked four and struck out eight in gaining his ninth triumph in 16 decisions. Wayne Garrett drove in two runs for the Mets.

Expos 2, Astros 1

Gary Carter singled home the winning run with one out in the 11th inning to give the Expos a victory over the Astros.

Cardinals 4, Dodgers 3

Mario Guerrero's sacrifice fly with one out in the top of the 11th scored Ron Fairly and gave the Cardinals victory over the Dodgers. Fairly had led off the inning with a single and moved to third on a double by Willie Davis. Al Hrabosky was the winner in relief while reliever Mike Marshall took the loss. John Hale homered for the Dodgers.

Rain Delays LL Game

DUMAS — Rain halted Tuesday's Little League District Tournament game between the Pampa National League All-stars and the Borger all-stars with Borger leading 6-3 in the top of the fourth inning in Dumas Tuesday.

Under special Little League tournament rules the game will be rescheduled at 7 p.m. Thursday in Dumas with the Pampa all-stars batting in the top of the fourth inning.

Safety of the players involved and the difficulty in making the field playable were the reasons cited by the umpires in deciding to continue the game until Thursday.

Seven Borger hits combined with five Pampa errors on the wet field provided the Borger lead. Only three of the six runs were earned. Tim Boyd started pitching for Pampa and was relieved in the bottom of the third by Ed Guerra.

Pampa struck first when Chris Frazier walked in the first inning, took second on a passed ball, went to third when the pitcher was unable to handle Mike Warner's tap to the mound and scored on a wild pitch.

Pampa scored again in the second inning when Guerra walked, advanced to second on a wild pitch and came home on a single by Steve McDougall. In the third inning Warner beat out an infield hit, took second on an overthrow of first, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a single by Randy Bigham.

Kirt Crouch was batting in the top of the fourth inning when the game was called and will resume his at bat when the game continues Thursday.

The winner of the Pampa-Borger game will host the sectional tournament next week.

The sectional tournament is a one game tournament with the winner advancing to the state tournament in Waco the following week.

The Pampa National League All Stars have won three tournament games and lost none. They defeated Carson County and Canadian in the area tournament in Pampa last week by scores of 4-3 and 18-3. In District Tournament play in Dumas Monday night the Pampa National League All Stars 4-3 in eight innings.

Ernest Fletcher is the Pampa National League's manager. John W. Warner is the coach.

Amarillo's Duniven Tourney Medalist

Good Rodeoer

Todd Freeman, 10, recently won first place in the Junior Boys barrel racing and pole bending events in the Canyon Junior Rodeo, where he was named All-Around Junior Cowboy. His sister's Kelly, 15, and Jody, 17, were also winners. Kelly was named All-Around Cowgirl.

(Pampa News Photo)

By PAUL SIMS
C.L. Duniven, Jr., of Amarillo overcame poor early putting to fire a two-under-par 69 and capture medalist honors in the 41st annual Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament Tuesday at the Pampa Country Club.

Thirty-six players qualified Tuesday for the championship flight, which will tee off today in the first of two match play rounds. The tournament will be held in spite of Wednesday morning's heavy rain.

Friday, players still left in the tournament (a loss in match play means elimination) will play 18 holes of medal play for the championship.

Flights one through eight have 16 players entered; flight nine has eight.

Duniven, medalist in 1971 with a qualifying-round record 64, three-putted Nos. 1 and 3, bogeying the holes. At that time, he would have been pleased to finish at even par.

"I'd have been happy with even par. For me, even par is a good score," said Duniven, whose only win this year has come in the Men's West Texas Senior Division.

The 62-year-old Duniven went on to birdie four holes — Nos. 7, 13, 15 and 18. He shot 36 on the front nine and 33 on the back to win the medalist trophy.

"I think I'm hitting the ball better now than I have in several years. I drove the ball good — I never missed a fairway and I hit most of the greens."

Part of his good play Tuesday was attributed to the recently-built watering system at the Pampa Country Club. "The greens were lush," Duniven said, "and the course was true. I've never seen the course such a wonderful transition in a golf course as the transition this watering system has caused."

Duniven's 69 edged Web Wilder, 64, of San Antonio by one stroke. Wilder, who played in the afternoon while the medalist teed off in the morning, carded 34 on the front side and needed that same score on the back nine to win.

Wilder is one of the Southwest's top senior players and has just recently been chosen to captain the 24-man Texas Cup Senior Golf Team, which will play the top seniors from Mississippi Aug. 26-29 at Biloxi, Miss. Wilder was also honored with the "Colonel Bogey" Award Monday night at the Tri-State banquet.

The award annually goes to a dedicated senior in the Tri-State association who has not won before. Last year, J. Bryan Johnson of Oklahoma City won the award.

Duniven will play Amarillo's John Sidlow, who qualified for the championship flight with 77. Wilder, tournament champion in 1972, will meet Amarillo's Roy Stockton, who also shot 77.

Other championship flight matches include Otis Garner (75) of Austin & Dr. Fred Fike (78) of Amarillo, Bud McKinney (72) of Dallas vs. D.D. McBride (77) of Allen, Eddie Smith (75) of Tishomingo, Okla., vs. Bill Glover (79) of Clinton, Okla., Dr. J. Foster Elder (75) of Pampa vs. C.E. Sibert (79) of Deer Park, E.V. Price (74) of Childress vs. Fred Neslage (78) of Pampa and Tom Morris (78) of Amarillo vs. P.M. Elliott (80) of Wichita, Kan.

Other pairings include R.R. Muir (75) of Canyon vs. Raymond Marshall (79) of Lubbock, Deck Woldt (73) of Pampa vs. Dr. Joe Donaldson (77) of Pampa, Carroll Weaver (75) of Sinton, Tex., vs. Bill Gray (80) of Perryton, Hart Brooks (72) of Grand Prairie vs. Leo Daniels (77) of Amarillo, Adrian Johnston (75) of Amarillo vs. Buck Mundy (79) of San Benito, Bob Selman (75) of Amarillo vs. Harry Black (78) of Altus, Okla., and R.F. Hayes of Enid, Okla., vs. Bus Dugger (80) of Amarillo.

One of the more interesting matches will be that of Donaldson, last year's medalist with a 73, and Woldt, Pampa High golf coach who became eligible last year.

McKinney, Smith, Marshall, Weaver and Brooks are favored to win their respective matches today and be among the tourney's top contenders.

Texas won the team championship from Oklahoma, 355-389. Texas scores included in the total were Duniven's 69, Wilder's 70, Doug Roush's 72 (didn't have to qualify since he was champion last year), McKinney's 72 and Hart's 72.

Player shooting closest to his age and winning an award was Ted Daley of Bowie, 76, who shot 82.

Tri-State Medalist

J. Seibert Worley, left, president of the Tri-State Seniors Golf Association, gives Amarillo's C.L. Duniven a few "pointers" about driving prior to Monday's qualifying round in the association's annual tourney at the Pampa Country Club. The tips must have paid off. Duniven's 69 in the round earned him medalist honors.

US Sweeps Swim Meet

CALI, Colombia (UPI) — The United States pulled off just one 1-2 sweep on the first day of swimming competition at the world championships, but the highly-touted East Germans didn't entirely live up to their reputation, either.

In the first five finals Tuesday night, the intense rivalry between two Long Beach Swim Club members, 17-year-old high schooler Tim Shaw and 22-year-old Bruce Furniss, produced American gold and silver medals in the 200 meters freestyle.

"The man I fear most is Steve, my own teammate," Shaw said before the race. Furniss is the world record holder in the event and looked as if he would once again beat his younger rival Tuesday night.

But Shaw overtook him on the last lap, posting a time of 1:51.04 compared to Furniss' 1:51.72, both just shy of Furniss' 1:50.89 world record.

Despite predictions that every existing world record would fall, not a single new mark was set in five events. "The wind will keep the times down" an official of the American delegation said in the afternoon when a swirling, blustery wind came down from the Andes mountains over the fast Pan American Pool.

American men's team coach Ron Ballatore of Pasadena, Calif. said he was "extremely happy" with the performance of the American men in the morning eliminations. "We were 1-2 in just about everything."

But the Americans couldn't hold on to their positions in the 100 meters breast and backstrokes in the night finals.

Rick Hofsteter, 18, of McKeesport, Pa., and Rick Colella, 23, of Seattle, Wash., faded in the stretch of the breaststroke sprint, allowing Great Britain's David Wilkie to take the gold in 1:04.26. Japan's Nobutaka Taguchi the silver and another Briton, David Leigh, the bronze.

In the backstroke sprint, John Murphy,

21 of Hinsdale, Ill., and Mel Nash, 20, of Bloomington, Ind., set the fastest times in the morning heats, but defending and Olympic champion Roland Matthes was not to be denied the gold in his specialty.

"Matthes didn't look too good in the morning, but we knew we had to wait to see him at night," Ballatore said. "If he's here, he's here to swim."

Matthes finished first in the not particularly fast time of 58.15, his world record stands at 56.30, while Murphy took the silver and Nash the bronze.

In the women's 200-meters individual medley, Kathy Heddy, a 17-year-old veteran of the Central Jersey Athletic Club, turned in a strong freestyle to overtake favored Ulrika Tauber, the East German world record holder, and finished a golden first in 2:19.80. Miss Tauber took the silver and another East German, Angela Francke, the bronze.

Archie's Aluminum

Archie Maness

Archie Maness of Archie's Aluminum Fab, 401 E. Craven, is expanding and hopes to add a steel building section — building metal buildings — to his shop next year.

He's been in the construction business since after World War II and decided to start his own business after the war.

"This is in line with construction work," Maness explained.

His business is good.

"I can't tell that inflation has really affected my business," Maness said.

Maness' specialty is custom made storm doors, storm windows and window screens. He also does a lot of repair work, he said.

"I have another home improvement company," he said. "It's the only local home improvement company in the installation business."

He has four employees at his shop.

Dallas Cowboys 'Pretty Hacked'

DALLAS (UPI) — The scene was a golf course on a recent afternoon and Donnie Anderson, who will move his headquarters from the St. Louis Cardinals to the Miami Dolphins this year, had just crushed another one about 200 down the middle.

While pursuing the putt, the conversation turned to football with Anderson suggesting he would not see any of his new teammates until he reported to training camp.

Anderson was then told that more than a score of Dallas Cowboys were working out quite hard four times a week at the club's practice field in the northern outskirts of the city.

"Well," said Anderson, after a brief pause. "Those guys are pretty hacked off."

That summed it up rather neatly.

The Dallas Cowboys, having had their eight-year playoff string broken last season, are a little beady-eyed. Several veterans and many rookies made it a habit of trekking out to the Cowboys practice field this summer and torturing themselves into proper condition for the opening of training camp.

"I think we were complacent last year," quarterback Roger Staubach said. "But that is gone now."

From the beginning of last season, with the Cowboys enduring a four-game losing streak that set the tone of the 8-5 year, coach Tom Landry said his club was badly hurt by the players strike.

With that issue now out of the way, Landry is looking for a quick start from his hungry troops.

"There is no escaping the fact we missed the playoffs," said Landry. "But I'm fairly confident our failure to gain them was due to two things."

"One was the players strike and the other was World Football League signings of a number of our players. I think this caused us to get off to a slow start."

"The reason I mention these points is that I'm not sure whether the caliber of our players has dropped to the point that we should expect an 8-6 record."

"I am of the opinion that it has not dropped that far. I believe we can be back in the playoffs this year if we have a good training camp and start off in September at the top level of efficiency. If we do these things we'll have a good chance to get back."

The Cowboys will have a bit of a new look this year on both offense and defense.

Gone are veterans Bob Lilly, Dave Manders, Bob Hayes and Calvin Hill.

With Hill now a WFL product and Walt Garrison hobbling from a rodeo injury, the Cowboy running backs will likely be chosen from Robert Newhouse, Charles Young and Doug Denison.

The emergence of Ed Jones and Harvey Martin will give the defensive line a more aggressive atmosphere while the linebacking corps will have a horde of fresh talent in top draft choices Randy White, Tom Henderson and Bob Breunig.

Staubach, naturally, will be a key to the progress made this season by the Cowboys. The Dallas quarterback suffered through a bland 1974 campaign.

"I think Roger Staubach will show vast improvement over last season," said Landry. "It was a frustrating season and it wasn't so much Roger's fault as it was just a team attitude from the beginning."

"I think he now has been through most of his problems as a quarterback. You learn from being in adverse situations. Roger will show the kind of maturity that will enable him to come back and be a solid quarterback again."

You're in Mao country

COLOGNE, West Germany — An exhibition of Chinese goods here has proved a golden opportunity for local Maoists to exhibit portraits of Chairman Mao Tse-tung and his little red books of thoughts.

But the thing which has fascinated shoppers most is the display of Chinese wines and spirits and a brand of cigarettes which promises to "ease coughs and asthma."

Grain Dealers Indicted

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—One of the world's largest grain dealers and 13 of its officials have been indicted for allegedly conspiring to steal export grain by loading ships with less cargo than records indicated. The federal indictment returned named the Bunge Corp. of New York and one of its vice presidents among those charged. It was the third indictment to result from a 16-month investigation of grain export operations in New Orleans and other ports.

Walton Francis Mulloy and Clayton Eugene Wilcox were the highest Bunge officials indicted. Mulloy is a retired Bunge vice president and regional manager in Kansas City, Mo. Wilcox of Hinsdale, Ill., is a Bunge assistant vice president and regional manager of St. Louis, Mo., and Destrehan, La., offices.

The indictment charges that Mulloy, Wilcox and other defendants met in 1961 to plan the alleged conspiracy. Mulloy worked for Bunge from 1949 to 1974 and is still a member of the Kansas City Board of Trade. The investigation has been centered in New Orleans which is the largest grain exporting port in the world and the departure point for one-third of United States shipments to foreign countries. Previous indictments charged federally licensed inspectors at New Orleans and Houston with falsely grading and weighing grain shipments. In the latest indictment, Bunge was accused of short-weighting ships at grain elevators in Destrehan, La., and Galveston, Tex., from 1961-73. The indictment said company executives and employees regularly overstated ship manifests by 2,000 bushels (120,000 pounds) and concealed the practice by adjusting company records. The indictment charged the defendants shortweighed $1.5 million in soybeans and sorghum exports from 1965-70 at the Destrehan elevator and altered company records to show false delivery of 225,000 bushels of corn and wheat.

Your Horoscope

Your birthday today: After an uneven situation early in the year you formulate, through trial and error, a new outlook and make improvements in your life-style. Relationships are in for a complete overhaul; nothing will remain as it now is. Chances are that some barriers will have to be overcome. Today's natives can translate the strange and complex into what seems commonplace or easily understood.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Don't begin anything new. You've plenty to do just coping with regular chores and mistakes made by associates or loved ones. Cheer up; you'll get it straight late tonight.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Stick to routine. From a slow and confusing start, be thankful you can wind up your work week neatly and take off for a different sort of weekend. Be patient with loves ones.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Friends and loved ones are subject to mixed influences and require simple and specific communication. Resist your impulses to waste money.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: During today's complex action and troubleshooting, you get a chance to see where your associates stand. Indiscretion in one form or another seems to be the norm.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Defer major purchases; conditions are changing and you'll have other ideas by next week. Get right to the point and don't elaborate. Live it up in the evening!

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]:

Wishful thinking leads anyone astray. You'll stay on the right course if you clear up useless, outdated details and take a long look at your situation from another vantage point.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: New ideas pop up, as does special insight into the flaws in your current enterprises. Test your new schemes later. Keep your sense of humor today.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Your formal actions are defeated because you allow yourself to make too many assumptions. Ride out the day with prudent management and thrift. Go to parties and pursue romance this evening.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: This is no time to close deals, settle final terms or make promises. Hobbies turn out to be as important as your career right now, but neither will have any impact in the long run.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Your money gets wasted on unexpected items since you lose track of it during vigorous discussions. Avoid jumping to conclusions about people and what they do.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You've gone past your usual limits these last couple of days, so sit this day out. Your mood changes by evening, and you're ready to go in a new direction.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: No matter how hard you try, your routines are interrupted and you make errors. Doublecheck facts and figures. You begin a fresh cycle along new lines tonight.

Briscoe May Run Again

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Gov. Dolph Briscoe has said he may seek a third term in 1978, an aide said today.

"I asked him if he might run again and he said I'm just liable to," said Special Assistant Reagan Brown.

Brown said Briscoe made the remark immediately before leaving the country for an extended vacation. The governor is not due to return to Texas until next week.

Prior to Briscoe's remark to Brown, he had given no indication of a desire for a third term in office, which if completed would make him the longest-serving governor in Texas history.

Brown said he discussed politics with Briscoe on an airplane flight to Fort Worth for a meeting of the Beautify Texas Council earlier this month.

"He was in a real fine spirit that day because of this sense of accomplishment he had from the legislature," Brown said. "You know, he doesn't make a lot of racket or arm-twisting and everything. He likes to get things done quietly.

"He is enjoying the job," Brown said he asked Briscoe if he might seek another term and he replied "I'm liable to."

Asked if the conversation extended to possible opponents, Brown said "No, that's just about it."

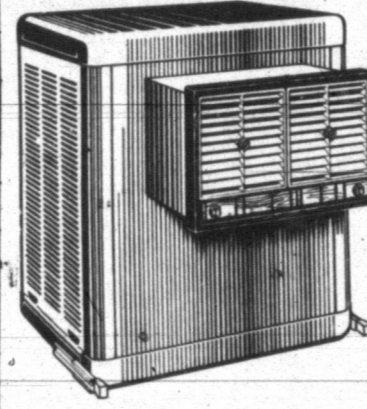

Political observers have largely discounted a Briscoe bid for a third term. He was first elected in 1972 for a two-year term and re-elected last year to a four-year term approved by the voters in a special Constitutional amendment election.

Attorney General John Hill, Comptroller Bob Bullock and Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby have all expressed an interest in seeking the governor's office in 1978.

If the Shoe Fits
By Gary Gattis

How can I be sure that my children's shoes fit when I buy them?
If you mean that you want to check the fit of the shoes yourself, you should first work in shoe store, for at least two years. Then you will be more uncertain than you are now.

If the shoe internship is impossible I would use the practice of most women when they buy a hairstyle. They don't rush downtown at 15 minutes before closing time and let the first operator they come to give their hair a fast sizzle. Hairdos are too important.

Even a newcomer to town knows before she leaves the house not only which beauty parlor she is going to but which beautician will give her the kind of hairstyle she wants. She will read ancient magazines waiting for the operator to take her and she might even overpay the bill if she is especially pleased with the result.

"Who fits your children's shoes?" should be as commonly asked as "Who does your hair?" Try it. You will find that our shoe fitters, who realize the health importance of children's shoes will be pleased to know that you are not primarily interested in speed, low price or high style.
