Kidnaper Gives Up; Ransom Recovered

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eight days of pressure apparently were too much for Dominick Byrne. Wracked by conscience, he led officers to a dimly lit Brooklyn apartment where they freed kidnaped whisky heir Samuel Bronfman II and captured the second of his alleged abductors.

"It was over in two seconds," said Det. Thomas Cerbone, who broke into the one-bedroom apartment Sunday with police and FBI agents.

Officers grabbed a surprised Mel Patrick Lynch, 37, who was guarding young Bronfman.

Samuel — unshaven — sat bound and blindfolded on a couch against the wall.

"Thank God," he said as officers removed adhesive tape from his eyes. Unharmed, he was taken by limousine to his father's Fifth Avenue apartment.

The FBI said the $2.3 million ransom paid by the youth's father, Edgar Bronfman, chairman of the board of Seagram's Ltd., was recovered in the home of an elderly friend of Byrne's.

Byrne, 53, the owner of a limousine service, and Lynch, a city fireman, were charged with extortion by mail. The FBI said they believed the two men acted alone. Officers said the elderly friend was an innocent victim of the scheme.

If convicted, the two could face terms of up to $5,000 in fines and 20 years in prison. Federal agents indicated they may be charged with kidnaping later.

Young Bronfman and his father left the city Sunday afternoon for seclusion and rest. The family said there would be no statements.

But a spokesman added, "Sam is in really fine shape. His spirits are great."

For Cerbone, and other officers, it was the end of a frustrating week of searching and tense negotiations.

Samuel, 21, was abducted early last Saturday after leaving his father's tree-shrouded estate in Yorktown Heights, N.Y. His car, with the keys still in the ignition, was found in the driveway of his divorced mother's home in Purchase, N.Y.

Cerbone said Byrne, who gave officers the key to the apartment where the youth was found, had "pangs of conscience" about the affair.

"He's a deeply religious man. He must have said 'Jesus Christ' and apologized to me five times for saying it," the detective said.

Byrne, apparently alarmed, by increasing FBI surveillance in the area near the Lynch apartment, allegedly sent a young girl to a neighborhood police station with a note saying he knew where the Bronfman youth was being held.

Cerbone and his partner, James Schry, went to his house at midnight. Byrne appeared relieved as he told them about Bronfman's location.

But apparently authorities already were closing in on the pair.

J. Wallace La Prade, assistant director of the FBI in charge of the New York office, said agents decided to move in on the abductors after they failed to release the youth — despite the payment of the ransom early Saturday.

Authorities already had traced the license plate of the car used for the "pickup" to Lynch.

The New York Daily News, quoting "highly informed sources," said Bronfman was ordered to bring the money Saturday morning and wait in an underpass beneath a subway line in an outlying New York borough.

The money was in 49 packets of bills in denominations of $10, $20, $50 and $100. The ransom was half the $4.6 million originally demanded by the kidnapers.

Bronfman, accompanied by a female FBI agent, drove to the location, the News said. About 3 a.m., a rust-colored, 1971 Oldsmobile Toronado pulled up and someone ordered Bronfman to put the money into the trunk, the News said.

As the car sped away, the agent took down its license number.

Neighbors of the two suspects described them as frugal, hardworking, deeply religious men with strong feelings about the strife in their native Ireland.

Both men were born there and spoke in a genteel brogue; they were naturalized citizens, the FBI said.

Despite their alleged involvement in the kidnaping, both men kept up their daily routines, friends said.

A Fire Department spokesman said Lynch reported for duty Thursday and Saturday and worked full shifts. Byrne continued his daily walks with his dog, a neighbor said.

One firefighter was stunned that Lynch might be connected to the plot.

"He's rich, he's well-off. If he wanted to buy the Bronfman estate, he probably could have," the fireman said.

Angry Israelis Charge US Forced Peace Agreement

By United Press International

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin appeared before an angry session of the Israeli parliament today and defended the proposed interim peace agreement with Egypt against charges by right-wing opponents that the United States was forcing it down Israel's throat.

Rabin cautioned that the agreement was not yet complete and could still fail. Although he said negotiations were still at a delicate state, sentiment appeared to be building up among right-wingers against Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. These right-wing Likud party members demanded that Rabin resign.

Forty demonstrators gathered in front of the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv today, 10 of them carrying rabbits. They also carried signs reading "Kissinger go Home" and "Rabin, You're a Rabbit." Other demonstrators gathered outside the Knesset (parliament) building in Jerusalem with anti-Kissinger and anti-Rabin signs.

The right-wing groups called for major demonstrations when Kissinger arrives here Thursday and police were taking unusually firm security precautions to protect the Secretary of State, ringing the King David Hotel in Jerusalem with extra troops.

Before appearing in parliament Rabin told a caucus of his Labor party's ruling alignment that the United States had made "unprecedented" promises to Israel. These presumably were the use of a U.S. civilian force to help man early warning systems in the Demilitarized Zone of the Sinai desert and nearly $3 billion in aid.

While the Likud was demanding Rabin's resignation, some 50 women gathered outside the Knesset building in Jerusalem and demonstrated against the government's policies. They carried signs reading "No Munich here" and "We are not dogs to jump through Kissinger's hoop."

A few of the women paraded about the plaza wearing dog collars and leashes. They were led by a woman carrying an effigy of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Kissinger, after talks with President Ford in Vail, Colo., said he was optimistic about the resumption of his Middle East shuttle mission. He arrives in Israel Thursday and Egyptian reports said he would meet President Anwar Sadat in Alexandria on Friday.

In an address punctuated by jeers and catcalls Rabin assured his critics there was no danger to Israel's security.

"Israel will achieve many things with this agreement but I cannot go into details," Rabin said in Jerusalem. "There is no danger for Israel's security whatsoever."

"We will still be 250 kilometers (160 miles) west of the 1967 borders, there will be a very wide U.N. buffer zone and Egypt will be only 20 kilometers (12 miles) east of the Suez Canal," he said.

The Israeli cabinet Sunday endorsed Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's new peace mission to work out such an agreement, but warned of a "number of important subjects still blocking final acceptance."

Rabin told a caucus of his Labor party's ruling alignment the agreement would result in "a chance for an improvement in the relations between Israel and the Arab countries."

He said the accord would also "give us much understanding with the United States, and I'm talking about things that are unprecedented in our relationship."

"We still have to overcome a few subjects still unsettled, and that's why Kissinger is coming," he said.

Government sources earlier said Israel is pressing intensive contacts with Washington to settle the final differences with Egypt before Kissinger's return to the region later this week.

Israeli national radio reported from Washington today that Egypt would agree not to go to war for the term of the proposed three-year agreement in return for Israeli territorial withdrawals in the Sinai.

Israeli sources said the agreement would include a U.S. financial commitment of up to $3 billion to make up for the return of the Abu Rodeis oil field to Egypt.

The sources said the text will be titled "Agreement Between Egypt and Israel" and will include 45 separate sections covering more than 40 pages.

They said Egypt wanted the pact to be called "interim agreement," but Israel insisted that the word "interim" be deleted.

A wave of anti-Kissinger feeling appeared to be building up in Israel over the right-wing charges. Right-wing groups planned a series of demonstrations for the period of the Kissinger visit and police sources said unprecedented security measures would be taken during his visit.

In Jerusalem, police officers erected crowd barriers today around the Knesset, other government buildings and the King David Hotel where Kissinger is expected to stay. The police commander at Ben-Gurion International Airport was called back from an overseas trip to supervise the precautions.

The newspaper Al Hamishmar said the opposition was seeking to create "an atmosphere of internal crisis on the eve of Dr. Kissinger's arrival."

"The brutal campaign being prepared by them — one of which will stress Dr. Kissinger's Jewishness — necessitates a massive counter-campaign on the part of the more moderate majority," the newspaper said.

It warned against "nationalist hysteria and irresponsible acts which may cause great harm to the state."

The Israeli parliamentary session was one of the angriest sessions in memory and jeers and catcalls frequently interrupted Rabin's half-hour presentation.

"Kissinger's arrival does not mean that there is a finished pact at hand, and it does not give final approval to an agreement which is already achieved," Rabin said.

"We will sign an interim agreement only if we will be convinced that it will be to the betterment of Israel's needs," Rabin said.

"The anticipated visit in Israel and Egypt is accepted because of our clear will to reach an interim agreement with benefits for Israel and Egypt as a step in the progress towards peace."

First Day of School
Today was the first day of school, for the almost 250 teachers in the Pampa Independent School District, that is. After several days of in-service training the teachers will enroll students Friday. Dr. Dan F. Long, superintendent, spoke to the assembly on "Spirit of the Past...Ours to Use for the Future." Others on the morning program included the Rev. John Hansard, Sue Higdon, Orson Welles, James Lusby, Louise Richardson, Eloise Lane, Mill Mackey, Marjorie Gaut, Bill Arrington and building principals. (Pampa News photos)

Mrs. Hoffa Collapses

DETROIT (UPI) — After 18 days, the tension and fear became too much for Josephine Hoffa. The ailing wife of missing Teamsters leader James Hoffa collapsed Sunday and was hospitalized.

Mrs. Hoffa, devoted to the former Teamsters president who disappeared July 30, broke down in her suburban Lake Orion, Mich., home "from the strain and the stress." She is exhausted, physically and emotionally, her son, James P. Hoffa, 34, said.

The scores of federal, state and city police searching for Hoffa were just as frustrated, if infinitely less emotionally involved.

Michigan State Police Director George Halverson said, "We don't even know what crime we are investigating. All we know is that we have got a missing person."

"But I think there will be a break. They've got some excellent investigators on this case and I think there will be a break eventually."

For Josephine Hoffa, suffering from a heart ailment and facing cataract surgery when her condition permits it, the breaking point came Sunday morning while prayers were being said for her husband's safety in nearby St. Joseph's Roman Catholic parish church. She had met her tough, scrappy husband on a picket line in the 30s, lived with him through countless battles on his way to the top of the Teamsters, endured the 58 months he spent in prison on mail fraud and jury tampering charges, and was backing him in his fight, before his disappearance, to regain control of the union from Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons.

Hoffa, 62, has not been seen since shortly after he left Lake Orion, 40 miles from Detroit, for what he thought was a date with reputed Detroit Mafia don Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone. East Coast Teamsters boss Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, and Detroit labor consultant Leonard Schultz. All threatened making such an appointment.

Mrs. Hoffa was taken to Northwest Grace Hospital on the outskirts of Detroit.

The hospital denied she was there, but the FBI, her son and her doctor, George Mogill, confirmed she was.

Mogill called her condition today "stable," but put an "absolute block" on telephone calls or visits from anyone outside her immediate family.

"It's remarkable she hasn't folded before," Mogill said. "She is a remarkable woman."

She had "folded" before — Aug. 4 when she fainted under the strain of her husband's absence, and six years ago when she fainted in court while Hoffa was fighting to overturn his conviction.

Halverson said, "There is nothing new. People are asking, 'What is the dominant theory?' There is none."

Typhoon Phyllis Kills in Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Typhoon Phyllis swept away from Japan today, leaving a toll of death and destruction that mounted hourly as police probed wreckage of homes in the western part of the country.

The National Police Agency said 35 persons are known dead and 23 others missing in the wake of the storm's progress Sunday across western Japan.

The Agency also reported that 93 persons were injured, and that 326 houses were either destroyed or heavily damaged.

The storm Sunday crossed over Shikoku, the smallest of Japan's four main islands, and then traversed the western part of the main island of Honshu.

Late today the weakened typhoon was in the northwest Pacific off the Soviet island of Sakhalin.

Kocia province on Shikoku was the hardest hit, with a known death toll of 21, and 22 other persons missing.

Phyllis, the season's first typhoon to hit Japan, slammed into Shikoku Sunday before she roared past the southwestern part of the country.

The Japan Meteorological

Agency said the typhoon was last plotted in the Japan Sea, just off the Korean peninsula. It was moving north but the agency said it was not sure if it would hit the peninsula.

More than 1,100 houses were flooded in Tosa, Suzaki and Sagawa on Shikoku.

Police said the typhoon knocked out electric power in 315,000 homes in Shikoku and in 18,000 homes in Tokuyama on the western main island of Honshu.

Phyllis unleashed winds as high as 118 miles per hour in parts of Shikoku and dumped more than 20 inches of rain.

The wind and rain disrupted ferry, air and train service, officials said.

Ashes of Murdered Buried after 65 Years

CAZADERO, Calif. (UPI) — A civic funeral was arranged Saturday for the contents of two mason jars, ashes of the Kendall family murdered 65 years ago.

"This is the biggest thing that has happened to Cazadero since the murders," said Rex Nance, operator of the general store.

"With all due respect to the Kendalls, we are having a lot of fun."

Nance, 35, found the two quart mason jars rummaging through the attic of the store, which he bought last year. They contained human ashes, saved as possible evidence, in the old post office, which was once a part of the store.

Plans called for the ashes, transferred to two urns made by local potters, to be carried aboard a mule-drawn buckboard, followed by a funeral cortege, to a small, concrete vault next to a monument honoring Francis Drake Trosser, an early settler of Cazadero.

Predicts Bloodbath in Bangladesh

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Diplomatic sources say divisions in the Bangladesh armed forces over a three-day-old coup could lead to a bloodbath in the impoverished nation.

Bangladesh Radio said the armed forces commanders supported the new regime, but diplomatic sources in New Delhi reported differences in the military.

The sources said Sunday the differences could lead to widespread fighting and bloodshed in Bangladesh, one of the world's most overpopulated and underfed nations.

Indian press reports said Friday's coup, which took the life of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, touched off clashes that killed an estimated 200 persons.

Diplomatic sources said the army officers who overthrew the sheikh, leader of Bangladesh since independence four years ago, were "young turks" within the 40,000-man armed forces.

The young officers promptly installed Khondokkar Mujib, son of the late sheikh, as the new president.

Diplomats in Hong Kong described the coup as a diplomatic victory for Pakistan in its confrontation with India on the Asian subcontinent.

Pakistan was the first country to recognize the new government and reports from Rawalpindi said Pakistanis appeared jubilant over the coup.

The diplomats said the new Bangladesh leader is a Moslem with little love for Hindu India. The new government promptly renamed the country the Islamic republic of Bangladesh.

"We cannot remain unaffected by these political developments in a neighboring country," the Indian government said in its first official reaction to the coup.

Diplomatic observers in Hong Kong said the coup may cause trouble for minorities in Bangladesh and India. Any persecution of Hindus in Bangladesh could bring retaliation against Moslems in India.

Even before the coup, many Bengalis had come to resent what they saw as Indian domination of their new nation. Indians were accused of smuggling goods between the two nations and exploiting Bangladesh.

Bangladesh is a predominantly Moslem nation of 75 million persons jammed into an area roughly the size of Wisconsin.

Weather
The forecast today calls for fair skies and warm temperatures. The highs will be in the low 90s, and the lows in the 60s.

Suspicious Public

SALT Solution Remote

Discussions between the President of the United States of America and the leader of the Soviet Union, such as the five hours of talks between Mr. Ford and Leonid Brezhnev at Helsinki, are becoming ritualistic in strategic arms limitation talks.

President Nixon and Brezhnev had such a pre-agreement meeting in Moscow in May, 1972, when the first SALT agreement was signed, and again Washington in June of 1973 when they simply agreed to agree in the future.

In 1974 President Ford went to Vladivostok to sign yet more SALT documents which limited the number of missiles that each nation could deploy to 2,400, of which 1,320 could have multiple warheads.

All of these have generated optimism, a feeling that sincere and significant curbs would be placed on the vehicles that transport the world's doomsday weapons.

After Helsinki the article of faith is that the United States and the Soviet Union will proceed to a formal treaty which places significant and enforceable limits on strategic missiles, but we wouldn't be on it. The world, and particularly the United States, is a different place than it was in 1972. And the major factor that is different is the growing opinion of the American people that the Soviet Union is not sincere.

Fidelity is the key word in the SALT discussions and up to now American people have been more or less willing to accept the good intentions of the Russians. However, like trying to control emissions on automobiles, the first 80 per cent of the SALT talks, as difficult and time consuming as they were, were by far the easiest. The last 20 per cent will be the hardest because the United States and the Soviet Union are moving from broad generalities to specifics.

As we understand it, the main obstacle to another formal SALT agreement, scheduled this year in Washington, is that the Soviet Union wants us to take them at their word when they say that their huge SS-18 missiles have the number of warheads they say they have, or that their 150-kiloton underground tests are for peaceful purposes. They are unwilling to permit on-site inspections.

Judging from American public opinion, the U. S. negotiators can settle for nothing less than on-site examination. The most dramatic example of the shift in American thinking came during the ceremonial visit by President Ford to Helsinki to sign European Security Conference documents that were not even binding upon us. Americans opposed the trip — and the signature too — because they want to see some evidences of good faith by the Soviet Union.

Until that happens we expect that the SALT discussions by the heads of state will remain largely ceremonial and the safeguards against nuclear war will be as remote as ever.

Always Something New

The average American has been convinced, for several years, that the smallest thing on the face of the earth is the size of his bankroll on the night before payday. Now along come some Stanford professors who have isolated some matter that is infinitesimally smaller. They call it the "U," for unknown.

The matter is so unknown, in fact, that its discovery will upset many theories of nature that have been used as the basis for scientific progress.

Here's the answer to those irritating people who have a habit of asking always "what's new?" There's always something new for those who do not stop looking. If we ever reach the day when there isn't a "U" factor, it will be a dull world indeed.

Who Wins If War Comes

While the dogs of war at times seem to be straining at their leash in the Middle East, there is compelling force at work to chance the possibilities for peace. It is simply that no one at this point could win anything if there is another war.

Israel and her Arab neighbors have the firepower to leave their respective cities and countryside in rubble. The Arab world as a whole might even risk the destruction of its greatest economic asset — its oil industry.

Peace in the Middle East is essential if the energy supply for Western Europe is to be uninterrupted. The United States would find itself in an immediate energy crisis if its Arab oil supplies were cut off. Even the Soviet Union, the perennial mischief-maker in the Middle East, can see that its gains in selling our government on the illusion of detente could go down the drain if an Arab-Israeli war brought on a confrontation of the superpowers.

Who could profit by war in the Middle East? No one at all. In such circumstances, Israel and Egypt probably see no choice but to seize the present opportunity to lay the first stepping-stone toward peace. Let's hope so.

Moral Issues Tough To Legislate

Everytime we pass laws on moral issues and curtail individual desires we get into more and more trouble. The reason: We try to limit individual choice.

Like gun control laws that restrict or limit ownership. Perhaps the most illustrative and understandable instance was our attempt to enforce Prohibition.

There are two sides, of course. Almost all of us agree that murder is an outrageous wrong and must somehow be controlled. A large percentage of our people believe that the solution is simple — just make it illegal to own or possess a gun. In other words, impose controls upon all of us.

That is exactly the point. The more we attempt to control individuals the more we have to tax ourselves to support more and more bureaucrats, and the less individual freedom of choice we retain.

For instance, you as an individual, must account to the IRS for your income taxes, to the state for your income tax, to your county and city for your property taxes. The tighter we make those controls the less freedom the individual has. Uncle Sam alone now has more than three million bureaucrats on the public payroll to assure control over 200 million people. Likewise, the states, counties, special districts and cities hire more people than Uncle Sam does to do the same kind of public chores.

Even if one concedes that there must be certain functions of government, should government attempt to control nearly everything we do? Is it right for Uncle Sam or any other agency of government to tell an individual that he cannot have a drink of beer or that he must pay a specified amount for a gallon of milk?

Aren't we getting government all mixed up in the morals business? Why? Are we avoiding our own responsibility as an individual of our free society by passing more and more laws to control people instead of instilling in ourselves more and more self-control in handling moral issues?

How superficial can we get when trying to control people? Let's examine proposed gun controls as an illustration.

Firearms are used in only four percent of all serious crimes nationwide. In a study by Dr. Alan Krug of Penn State University, there is no significant difference in crime rates between states that do or do not have stringent firearms controls. The chief of Michigan State Police estimates that less than 100th of one percent of guns used in commission of crimes in his state were registered as required by law. In other words they were held in violation of the law.

Who wants to use guns to commit crimes? Isn't there some justification for an individual to possess a gun for his own protection? By refusing him the right to possess a gun are you robbing the honest individual of the right to protect himself?

In such situations it seems to us that a strong moral imperative would be more effective in decreasing murder and other crimes than a growing slavery under bureaucratic controls.

According to Dr. Johnson's dictionary, gibberish is so called from a language of Giber, the great Arabian alchemist.

Form Letter's Out If Job-Seeker Wants In

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Since your column is so widely circulated, you can do much for the serious unemployment situation in this country.

I am an executive secretary with one of the top 100 companies in the country. Almost every day, we get applications for employment, some from new college graduates and some from older men who have been in the business world 20 to 30 years.

I'd like to tell these people not to use form letters with their names typed in but to type out neat, individual letters with the attached resume. My boss feels a form letter indicates that the applicant wants a job with ANY company, but an individualized letter means he wants a job with OUR company and no other. The form-letter applicants are not even answered, but are thrown in the wastebasket.

Many qualified applicants who badly need a job strike out because they didn't take the time to send a personalized letter.

CONCERNED SECRETARY

DEAR SECRETARY: Thanks for a worthwhile tip. A word to the wise should be more than sufficient.

DEAR ABBY: Here is our dilemma: Our only son, John, committed suicide at age 22. His wife, Bonnie, was pregnant at the time. She immediately went to Canada to live with her people. (We live in New Jersey.)

Our grandson is now 2-years-old, and we've never seen him because neither of us has had the money to visit.

Bonnie wrote to say she was married last June and her husband is adopting our grandson. We can understand why Bonnie wants to forget the tragic past and start a new life, and we agree that she should. (She's only 24.) But where does that leave us? Our grandson is all we have left of John.

What if Bonnie decides to put us out of her life and not even tell her son about his natural father? If that fair to us? Should we try to keep in contact with Bonnie in hopes that we can see our grandson one day? Or would it be better for him if we dropped out of the picture? We will abide by your decision.

JOHN'S GRIEVING PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Leave it to Bonnie to make that decision and accept it — regardless. I pray for your sake that she keeps in touch with you, sends you snapshots of your grandson and gives you the pleasure of sharing in his growth. And also hope, when the lad is old enough to understand, she will tell him the truth about his natural father.

DEAR ABBY: I must take issue with you concerning an item in your column. One of your contributors signed "Coleen" was undoubtedly the innocent victim of a fallacy.

The saying that she attributed to a "12-year-old girl" is a famous quotation by Camus, a French philosopher. Perhaps you would like to set the record straight.

FRED IN EL CERRITO

DEAR FRED: Ten whacks for me with "The History of the French Revolution" for not having checked out the quote. Yours was the first of many letters I received pointing out the error. Thanks to you and all the others who wrote.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HOPING IN MEMPHIS": When a man says, "Can't we be friends?" it's the beginning of the end.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new book, "What Teenagers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

SPY PAPERS RELEASE
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department has promised to make public soon "as much information as possible" in the spy cases involving Alger Hiss and Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

Deputy Attorney General Harold R. Tyler, Jr., said Saturday, "I expect that a substantial portion of the records concerned will be made available to the public in the near future."

He said, "Public examination of these records will demonstrate beyond reasonable doubt the integrity of the investigative, prosecutorial and judicial processes as they were carried out in these cases."

NO VIET BLOOD BATH
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Quaker relief workers just back from South Vietnam said Saturday there has been no bloodbath because the new Communist government is "evangelical.... They're interested in converting people, not hitting them over the head."

Paul and Sophia Quinn-Judge spent two years working in and around Saigon for the American Friends Service Committee. "Speaking personally," Quinn-Judge said, "I think the bloodbath argument was one of those arguments used largely to justify the war — like the idea of two Vietnams."

He said, however, "Quite a few young monks will no longer be young monks. It was a way of avoiding the draft and there seemed to be an upsurge of enthusiasm for Buddhism during the war years."

CAMBODIAN ABUSES
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., has asked the United Nations Human Rights Commission to look into reports of "serious human rights abuse and suffering" in Cambodia.

"The new Cambodian regime has rather effectively isolated itself from the rest of the world," Mrs. Schroeder said in a letter to Secretary General Kurt Waldheim Sunday.

Early reports from the country at first appeared to be the less than objective stories recounted by opponents of the Khmer Rouge as they fled Cambodian territory. These distressing reports have, however, continued and increased with time," she said.

REFUGEE RETURN
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., chairman of the House immigration subcommittee overseeing the Vietnamese refugees, is frustrated by the United Nations and thinks the United States should turn to a third country, possibly China, to arrange the return of 1,800 refugees who want to go home.

Just back from a Far East fact-finding tour that included a stop at refugee camps in Guam, Eilberg said Saturday: "All we hear is that the (U.N.) high commissioner (on refugees) is trying, trying, trying. But there has been no indication that he has been successful. We don't seem to be getting any results."

MOSLEM PROTEST
 UNIEUX, France (UPI) — A Moslem group that supported the French during the Algerian war of independence Saturday kidnapped a Franco-Algerian official to protest France's failure to negotiate for repatriation of French Moslem families.

The group, known as Harkis, abducted Djelloul Belfadel, 42, head of the Firmity District Franco-Algerian Friendship movement in the Loire Department, an official said.

The Harkis, who aided the French during the 1950's war, said they would free their captive when France begins negotiations with Algeria for repatriation of Harki families unable to flee to France, and for free circulation of ex-Algerians between France and their homeland.

French official said they have launched an investigation into the incident.

Susan Ends Internship
 TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Susan Ford ended her six-week stint as a photography intern Sunday and flew to Vail, Colo., to vacation with her parents.

The Topeka Capital-Journal published Miss Ford's last assignment Saturday — an "inquiring photographer" piece that started as an office joke.

For the assignment, Miss Ford stood on a downtown street corner Friday photo graphing passer-bys while another intern asked, "What are your reactions to being photographed by Susan Ford, the President's daughter?"

Most respondents said they were thrilled and surprised about having the President's 18-year-old daughter take their picture.

"I guess I'm flattered," Christine Voorhes, 23, said. "Do I get the picture?"

Another respondent said, "I thought she looked different than that."

Reception Turns Into Slugfest
 MONTVILLE, N.J. (UPI) — The wedding reception wasn't exactly what the happy couple had planned. It ended in a slugfest, with police hauling five handcuffed persons to jail — including the mother of the bride.

Police, who had to call for help from three other communities to calm the outbreak, said many of the 120 guests were involved in the brawl when they arrived at the reception Saturday.

"Nobody knows what started it," a police spokesman said Sunday. "A fight apparently started between two individuals and it burst into a free-for-all. They were fighting inside and out."

"The ones we took in just didn't want to give up," he said. Harold Wachtel and his new wife, the former Janice Broadhead, left on their honeymoon.

School Busing—Integration Reversed

United Press International
 Mrs. Peabody came down here to help us integrate in Alabama," said Dr. Erskine Murray, an assistant state superintendent of education in Montgomery. "Somebody told her she might have been able to find something to do at home if she'd only looked for it."

Mrs. Mary Peabody, mother of former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody, was among the civil rights activists of the 1960s who streamed in from northern states to help blacks in Dixie achieve equality in schools, cafeterias and voting booths.

Now the wheel has reversed. Hays Mizell of the American Friends Service Committee, said that in South Carolina the dual school system has been "effectively dismantled." He now flies to Boston occasionally to coach civil rights leaders on school desegregation.

The desegregation of classrooms no longer is a problem for a geographical area of the nation, but rather one of the many problems facing urban areas.

For instance, former Gov. Linwood Holton of Virginia defused the opening of schools under a busing edict in 1970 by sending his children to desegregated schools. This year, all five members of the school board in Pasadena, Calif., owe their positions to an anti-busing stand.

Boston now is in the spotlight. The first year of desegregation was accomplished amid violence. On Sept. 8, the second phase begins with some 26,000 students to be bused under court orders and the watchful eyes of thousands of police.

Already the city is tense. Five-thousand blacks and whites tossed rocks and bottles at each other during a South Boston beach demonstration last week.

"It has nothing to do with racism," said police Capt. John Kenneally, standing with 800 other policemen between the mobs. "The whole thing was caused by forced busing."

"Busing," as it is now called, began with the filing 10 years ago of a lawsuit against the Board of Education in Charlotte-Mecklenburg, N.C. In 1971, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled school busing could be used to bring about classroom racial balance. Last year, 46,000 students were bused to class there.

"Busing is a form of transportation, that's all it is. Schools in the past were set up to perpetuate the separation of races. We now have to end this situation and if the only way to accomplish this is to transport students, then people are going to have to be transported," said Fred Banks, a Jackson, Miss., black attorney.

"Busing is just a code word for those opposed to integration in any form, and this is true everywhere."

In Little Rock, Ark., scene of racial turbulence two decades ago, 10,500 in all grades will be bused this fall. "We've been extremely pleased with it. No racial problems whatsoever," said Jim Pate, Little Rock's school transportation director.

"It is not going to work too well," said Karl Karp, school superintendent in Indianapolis. Twenty-thousand students are being bused within the city under a court plan.

The situation is confusing at best. Courts have not followed patterns in deciding the cases. Some blacks and whites favor busing while others vehemently oppose it.

"Parents don't realize what they're doing when they let their children be bused out," said Mrs. Dorothy Hardy, a black former PTA president at the almost all-black Boise School in Portland, Ore. "When my children were taken to a white school, they got no more than they would have gotten at Boise."

Her attitude sums up one fear of educators — white flight from the schools which will receive black students. Federal judges have not been able to bring suburbs into the city busing situation. In Richmond, Va., city schools are 75 per cent black. In Wilmington, Del., 83 per cent. In Atlanta, it's 85 per cent.

In addition, metropolitan areas are running into financial problems because of inflation and parents fleeing to the suburbs.

Buses in Duval County, Fla., (Jacksonville) hauled 23,000 of the 54,000 students a total 47,298 miles per day. The cost was $1.5 million last year.

"In most places in the South, the issue has died down and the public recognizes it's no longer a political issue," said black attorney Henry March, in Richmond, Va.

Bentsen in Arkansas
 LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is in Arkansas today for his first campaign visit.

Bentsen arrived Sunday night, but had no appearances scheduled. He taped two television interviews and planned to meet with newspaper officials today.

Frank Whitebeck, president of American Foundation Life Insurance Co., hosted a luncheon for Bentsen, attended by business and political leaders.

The Texas Democrat was scheduled to leave Arkansas late today.

Persons in Arkansas have already contributed more than $5,000 to Bentsen's campaign. Arkansas is one of at least 20 states in which Bentsen has received more than $5,000, qualifying him to receive federal campaign funds in the 1976 campaign.

Viking Called Healthy

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A new Viking spacecraft placed atop a Titan-Centaur rocket for a Wednesday launch was described as "extremely healthy" and space agency officials said the craft may yet blaze through space in time for a landing on Mars on the nation's bicentennial.

Engineers Saturday replaced the trouble-ridden Viking that forced two launch cancellations last week with a twin ship which had been slated for launch later this month. Plans now call for the repaired spacecraft to be launched 12 days after the first, on Sept. 1.

Both Vikings, equipped with the latest sensing devices, will collect soil samples and other data in search of clues for life on the Red Planet.

Although the delays in the lift-off schedule were expected to threaten plans for a July 4, 1976 landing, Viking officials said Sunday the lander may still touch down on schedule because of movements of the planets.

A National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman said if the first Viking is launched on schedule at 5:22 p.m. EDT Wednesday, it should go into orbit around Mars on June 19, 1976, only three days behind the original schedule which called for launch 10 days earlier.

Space scientists had planned two weeks of orbiting by Viking to study photos of the Martian surface before detaching its landing vehicle. They also want to insure the landing site, at Chryse (the Greek word for gold), near the edge of the 3,000-mile long Martian Grand Canyon, is safe before committing the vehicle to the landing.

The second Viking is slated to drop its landing vehicle by means of parachutes and retro-rockets to a spot near the edge of the planet's North Polar cap. Both landers will carry remote control laboratories.

Officials Sunday indicated everything was finally proceeding smoothly toward a launch countdown and pronounced the new Viking "extremely healthy."

Viet Refugees Work Hard in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Living in the shadow of the world's movie capital is encouraging nearly 100 Vietnamese refugees to work harder — and hope for the best.

They arrived with the help of friends, still wearing their unfashionable clothes made in Saigon and now threadbare from continuous washing on the long journeys through refugee camps.

"I will do any kind of job that gives me money," said Nguyen Thi Quy, who abandoned her children and husband during the hasty escape from Saigon last April. "I will do any job except one — prostitution."

That candid statement has been in every mouth. The refugees are aware of the traps that make up the life of this fascinating city. They seem to pass the warning to each other.

One is the family of Huynh Van Anh, 43, a composer and once the best drummer in Saigon. Anh is trying to set up a Vietnamese orchestra to perform at one of the plush hotels.

"I still need a lead singer — a Vietnamese girl will be great," Ann said. "With hope, I am sure we will hit something here. It is easier for me to find something to do here than elsewhere."

He said a hotel owner loaned him $4,000 to buy musical instruments. He hopes the band will make its debut in two or three weeks. Meanwhile he works as a busboy at the Roosevelt Hotel — $2.00 an hour plus tips. Anh's wife spends her days caring for their three children in a one-bedroom, $125-a-month apartment.

The band's pianist is Mai. He said, "We have not chosen a name for the orchestra yet. We will do it at the first rehearsal. Right now, I am working as a messenger in a hotel and receive $1.70 an hour. The food is free.

Ford Hits Campaign Trail

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter
VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — President Ford embarks today on a whirlwind two-day, four-state trip to spotlight his domestic policies and to drum up Republican support for his presidential candidacy in 1976.

Because the emphasis was heavy on politics during the swing in which Ford will make seven speeches and eight appearances, White House press secretary Ron Nessen said the Republican National Committee will pick up Ford's expenses.

The one exception was today's trip to Rifle, Colo., to inspect an oil shale demonstration project.

Ford's other travels will take him to Iowa, Minneapolis and Illinois. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., will be on hand to greet him when he flies by helicopter from nearby Avon to Rifle, and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., will be there when Ford arrives in Minneapolis tonight.

The President will walk through 1,200 feet of an underground mine at Rifle to stress his interest in future energy resources. A White House aide said there are 1.8 million barrels of shale oil potential in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah. Colorado alone has 84 per cent of the entire U.S. supply.

"The potential is so fantastic but the technology has not yet been developed and is not economically feasible," a White House aide said.

After touring the oil shale development, Ford will fly to Des Moines for what his aides term a "significant speech on farm policy," to farmers in the drought-stricken area. Ford's appearance there and at the Iowa State Fair comes at a time when his popularity has been lagging with the farmers, although rising with the rest of the population in the state.

His appearance also was designed to help bail out the Iowa Republican Party, $70,000 in the red. He will address a fund-raising dinner of Iowa Republicans before going to Minneapolis.

On Tuesday morning Ford meets with regional newspaper and broadcast representatives, then with Republican leaders before going on to the Minneapolis Convention Center to deliver a speech before the American Legion.

Tuesday afternoon Ford has more political gatherings. He was scheduled to attend a GOP luncheon and reception before flying to Pekin, Ill., to dedicate the Everett M. Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, named after the late Senate Republican leader. On hand to greet him will be Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who is married to Dirksen's daughter. From Pekin Ford will fly to Peoria to address the Central Illinois White House Conference on Domestic Affairs and the Economy.

Ford will fly back to Vail Tuesday evening and spend the remainder of the week there until Sunday when he heads back to Washington on a trip that will include spending the night in Chicago and a stop in Milwaukee.

much involved in is contacting people — political leaders, labor leaders, farm leaders, various minority group leaders, women leaders, people who have the capacity to raise money, contacting them to see if we can pull together a broader group of support than some of the other candidates that are out there.

"If we can do that ... we will say 'all signs go,'" he said.

'76 Campaigns Start

By United Press International
President Ford has hit the campaign trail in earnest. Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana says he is in an exploratory mood on the matter of the Democratic presidential nomination. Sen. Frank Church of Idaho says he is too busy to get into the act just now.

Bayh said Sunday he would like to seek the Democratic nomination in 1976, but he wants to spare his family so he is assessing his chances.

Church told other reporters his committee investigating the CIA and other intelligence agencies must run its course before he will decide whether to bid for the nomination.

Still another Democrat, Sargent Shriver, who ran unsuccessfully for the vice presidency in 1972, said in Hyannisport, Mass., that sometime in the first 20 days in September, he will announce his candidacy for the presidential nomination.

Bayh said in an ABC "Issues and Answers" news program he knew he might be accused of "playing coy" since a "Bayh for President Committee" already has been formed. Bayh said the committee meant, "I am willing to make the major effort."

"But the last thing I want to do is to put myself and my family through the kind of exercise that a presidential campaign involves unless there is a reasonable chance of success," he said.

Scotts Say FBI Harassed Them About Pat Hearst

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Attorneys for Jack and Micki Scott — two key figures in the Patricia Hearst case — want a federal judge to dismiss grand jury subpoenas on the grounds the couple was harassed by federal agents.

The Scotts are suspected of renting a northeastern Pennsylvania farmhouse where Miss Hearst and fugitive Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris allegedly stayed last summer. Lawyers William Kunstler and Margaret Rafter said their arguments to U.S. District Court Judge Dixon Herman today would contend the federal grand jury is being used illegally in the nationwide hunt for Miss Hearst.

The lawyers have filed affidavits from several of the Scott's friends, who allege they were interviewed by federal agents shortly after they had telephone conversations with the Scotts.

Brandon Alvey, the U.S. attorney in charge of the investigation, said he would file affidavits denying the wiretapping charges. He said he already has searched government wiretapping records, as required in such cases.

The grand jury will meet again Tuesday, when two witnesses, Catherine Hearst, mother of the fugitive, and Walter Scott, Jack's brother, are due to appear.

The grand jury here has been investigating the Hearst case since last February. Only one witness, Jay Weiner, 21, a freelance sports writer from Philadelphia who is a friend of the Scotts, has testified so far.

Miss Hearst was kidnapped from her Berkeley, Calif. apartment in February of 1974. She later joined her captives in the S.L.A. and is wanted on several criminal charges, including bank robbery.

In an interview with UPI reporter Thomas Hillstrom Saturday, Walter Scott said he has no idea as to Miss Hearst's whereabouts.

Scott said he had been drinking while taking pain pills and was under pressure from the FBI when he told reporters last Wednesday in Philadelphia he had seen Miss Hearst in New York City and at his parents' Las Vegas, Nev., apartment.

He retracted virtually all of the statements he made before four newsmen and an FBI agent in a Philadelphia hotel.

He said he was lying in assertions his brother, Jack, knew where Miss Hearst was and has asked for up to $200,000 to turn her in, that his parents had driven her to the East Coast and that Miss Hearst's father, Randolph Hearst, was funneling money to her.

"I have no such knowledge," Scott said when asked about these remarks.

Scott said at times he was "motivated by a desire to say the kind of things that I thought would be what they liked to hear."

"I was dependent upon the FBI," he said. "I wanted to say things that would give them reason to suspect that my value might be a little greater than it really was. Sometimes I would say things for that purpose."

Searchers Find Three

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Coast Guard inspectors found the bodies of three crewmen aboard the tanker Globtik Sun Sunday but the search for three other missing crewmen was hampered by heavy fire damage.

"They'll continue the investigation on the ship today," said a Coast Guard spokesman. "They got into the portions of the ship where they felt most likely somebody would be."

The search specifically for bodies on board the vessel is still not considered complete, due to the large amount of debris and degree of incineration of the interior," said the spokesman.

The spokesman said identification of the bodies that were recovered might be impossible.

"They were so badly incinerated they were not even recognizable as bodies," he said.

The tanker, loaded with about 350,000 gallons of non-owned petroleum, collided with a Chevron oil drilling rig Friday morning. There was an explosion and an estimated 7,000 barrels of oil spilled out and burned.

Many of the crew, unable to lower boats because of the fire, jumped overboard in hopes of escaping burning oil floating on the surface. Forty of the 46 officers and crew were rescued.

"We're still actively searching," said a Coast Guard spokesman. He said the aerial search also would continue today.

Teenager Charged Here For Shoplifting Ham

A 17-year-old Kansas City youth was fined $52.50 this morning for shoplifting a 94 cent package of ham from a local grocery store.

He also was charged with possession of a controlled substance and the Justice of Peace E.L. Anderson set bond at $1,500.

Willie Elmo Coleman Jr., 17, is serving time in city jail for his $52.50 fine. He will be allowed $5 per day toward his fine.

Pampa Police officers said he had a dollar and a few cents at the time he was arrested. His official charge in Pampa Municipal Court was theft under $5.

Deggs To Leave Pampa For Biloxi Position

A promotional transfer of Capt. and Mrs. Bart Deggs, in charge of the Salvation Army Post in Pampa for the past year, was announced today by Mack Wofford, chairman of the Army's local advisory board.

They will go to Biloxi, Miss., Friday where Deggs will be commander of Salvation Army headquarters.

Maj. David Jones, Texas Salvation Army headquarters in Dallas, said today Captain Deggs will be succeeded here by Capt. Bodell Heath, who has served in the finance office at Dallas for the past two years and currently is winding up as director of the Salvation Army's state summer camp for boys and girls at Midlothian.

According to Maj. Jones, Capt. and Mrs. Heath and their two children, a son and daughter, are due to arrive in Pampa Monday, Aug. 25.

A farewell coffee for the Deggs has been set for 4 p.m. Wednesday at the Pampa Salvation Army headquarters, 701 S. Cuyler.

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson, members of the Salvation Army Advisory Board and members of the congregation are expected to honor Capt. and Mrs. Deggs for their service in Pampa. The Wednesday afternoon farewell affair will be open to the public.

Captain Heath and his wife, who will assume duties here one week from today, are native North Carolinians.

Major Jones of the Dallas office said Captain Heath has had 12 years of Salvation Army experience.

Firemen Fight Refinery Blaze

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Fire fighters today recovered the bodies of two of the six firemen trapped in the flames of two multiple-alarm fires which erupted Sunday at the huge Gulf Oil Co. refinery in south Philadelphia.

The bodies were found some 27 hours after the first of the two fires broke out in the sprawling refinery complex in a heavily industrialized area along the Schuylkill River.

One other fireman is known dead and three others are missing and feared dead when an 11-alarm blaze broke out Sunday afternoon, seven hours after an original six-alarmer. Twelve to 14 other firemen were injured.

The blaze continued to burn today in one tank and burning naphtha was spewing about 25 feet in the air from another tank. Fire officials said they planned to cool off that naphtha tank and then send a crew in on the dangerous mission of turning off

'Ring Out the Bells for Kappa'

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill. (UPI) - Lena Bonning, 57, says today is "like Christmas, Thanksgiving and birthday rolled into one." She planned to see her little sister for the first time in 48 years.

Mrs. Bonning and Lillian

Hattie (Tillie) Waiz, 51, Covington, Ky., were separated at a Kentucky orphanage in 1927. They finally found each other with the help of a New York freelance writer who devoted almost a year and a half to the search.

"I had been looking for her more than 40 years," said Mrs. Bonning, who moved here from Chicago 14 years ago with her husband, Joseph.

"I ran into a lot of brick walls during those long years and became disgusted at times, but I never gave up," she said.

Mrs. Bonning, Mrs. Waiz and another sister and brother were placed in the Kentucky Children's Home at Lyndon by their mother after their father, John Joseph Gitterle, died at DeKoven, Ky., in 1925.

"Tillie was only three when she was adopted and the orphanage had a regulation about not giving information about adopted children," Mrs. Bonning said.

The West Frankfort Daily American newspaper ran a story in January, 1974, about Mrs. Bonning's long search for her sister.

"I clipped the story and sent it to a woman's magazine, and they ran it," Mrs. Bonning said. "A freelance writer, Victor I. Thayer of Courtland, N.Y., saw the magazine story and wrote that he was sorry for me and wanted to know if he could help," Mrs. Bonning said.

Thayer called her Wednesday and said he had found her sister. "He had contacted the Red Cross, wrote judges, went through archives and wrote Gov. (Julian) Carroll of Kentucky during the search," she said. "I don't know what kind of guy he (Thayer) is, but God bless him."

"I'd give my right arm to see him," she said. "I couldn't repay him if I had a million dollars."

"It's hard to say anything at a time like that," she said. "I finally said to her, 'are you tall, skinny, short, fat.' She said, 'I am 170, 5-foot-2 I'm fat.' I said, 'join the club. I'm 5-foot-2 and weigh 160.'"

Mrs. Waiz' daughter and son-in-law, also of Covington, planned to bring her to West Frankfort for the reunion.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Friends:

Today we are going to hear from someone who keeps her home clean without the use of any schedule whatsoever. You have already learned from other readers how to run your house on a schedule, but today, I want you to see how the "other" half does it.

I have asked my daughter who is single, works all day, and lives in an apartment by herself, to tell us how she manages to always have it neat and attractive. Her answer follows. — Heloise.

I do one major cleaning job a day, when it is needed. Clean the bathroom, vacuum, defrost the fridge or clean the oven, etc.

I know a lot of people who have a set day for washing and ironing. I don't, I wash when I have a basketful. Sometimes, I wash only once in 10 days; other times, twice a week.

I do my ironing as needed, but I have been taught by my mother to shop wisely and buy things that don't need ironing. (Yeah, Mom, all those lectures paid off!)

Dear Mother:

I simply follow your philosophy, which is "pick up the big chunks."

I don't see how anyone can keep house on a schedule. There are just too many interruptions and unplanned "happenings."

If I want to go out Wednesday night, and Wednesday is laundry day, it would throw my entire week off, and make me nervous.

No one says I have to mop the floor on Monday and Friday. What if it isn't dirty Friday—that would mean I would have to mop it anyway! Why should I? I plan my housekeeping around my life pattern. My favorite saying is, "You should keep a house, don't let a house keep you."

I have a little routine that I go through in the mornings before going to work.

I make the bed, check the living room to see that it is neat. (Papers put away, things in place, ashtrays and coffee table clean.) This is done before bedtime, too.

If I don't have time to wash the dishes, I at least put them in the sink, and wipe off the counter tops.

I put on my make-up and dress and see that everything is put away in the bathroom.

This means towels hung, make-up and grooming needs put away and that the mirror is clean. If it isn't, I just wipe off the water spots with a tissue and wipe out the sink.

It is so nice to come home to a neat apartment in the evening. I don't have to worry if someone drops by—I know that things look good.

They won't know that my refrigerator needs defrosting, or my oven is dirty, but will notice if the living room is messy.

The kitchen is cleaned in the evening with the dinner dishes if I have any. Otherwise, when I am talking on the phone, I do the kitchen cleaning and it sure makes that chore pass by quickly.

There is one thing that I do which saves a big cleaning job in the long run in the bathroom. I always rinse the sink and bathtub out when I am finished. I wipe off the shower door after each bath and it always looks great. (You women with families might find this a difficult task to teach your children, but it sure is a time saver.)

Whenever I am going to throw a soiled towel in the hamper, I first wipe off the sink, drain-board and any other dust collectors in the bathroom.

I do grocery shopping after work when I feel like it, or see specials that I need and use.

Maybe one Saturday a month when I am in the mood, I give my apartment a top to bottom cleaning.

Sundays are my day to relax. I get the paper, a cup of coffee, and spend the morning doing nothing.

If someone drops by Sunday morning and my apartment isn't neat like it usually is, I don't apologize. They should do the apologizing for dropping by unannounced.

I also follow the philosophy of "keeping house all day long." When I see dust, I dust. If the end tables need polishing, I do it then.

Believe me, I am not a fanatic, but I do like things neat. I figure I have better things to do with my time than spend it constantly working myself crazy cleaning.

I don't want to end up on a psychiatrist's couch.

Heloise II

P.S. Too bad I wasn't like this when I was living at home, huh, Mother?

I just dropped my eyeballs, Hon. I sure wish you had been. I love you anyway.

New Book Raises Questions About the American Way of Birth

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN alternatives.

One of the fundamental rights of every woman, says photojournalist Suzanne Arms, is her birth right: "She should have the freedom to choose the way in which her baby is born."

Ms. Arms believes this freedom is denied women in the United States where, "as a matter of course, the natural process is 'helped' along with drugs or machines." It is a rare woman, she says, who receives no drugs during the birth process.

This is the subject she explores in a controversial new book, "Immaculate Deception

No Choice

"What I came to realize," she said, "is that normal birth is treated as a risky, dangerous, painful, 'abnormal' process. Pregnant women have no choice other than to go along with their doctor, and their doctor generally takes a dim view of normal birth."

Ms. Arms feels strongly that women should have a choice, as they do in Holland, for example, a country that offers mothers-to-be several alternatives.

"They can choose to give birth in a hospital or a maternity center attended by a practices in a chapter called "What's Natural About It?" which includes interviews with proponents of natural birth and doctors. All but two of the physicians they interviewed were opposed to natural childbirth, most regarding it as a noble concept that simply doesn't work. One doctor complained to the authors that natural childbirth people misled women into believing labor contractions are no worse than menstrual cramps. "The pains are far worse," he said, pointing out that eventually women are ready to accept anything from a general anesthetic to a paracervical block to relieve the pain.

This is an attitude that does not surprise Suzanne Arms.

"In many hospitals," she said, "it is standard procedure to use intravenous solutions, artificial hormones, analgesics and anesthetics, to induce labor, make vaginal incisions, use forceps and various other mechanisms to speed up, slow down or manipulate the birth process. I believe medical interference in birth creates more dangers than it is designed to prevent."

Women I have talked to since reading Ms. Arms' book echo many of the author's reactions to the American way of birth. One, whose labor was induced, reported the sense of loss she felt on awakening and discovering she'd already had her baby. "It was as if I'd slept through the main feature," she said. "When I awoke, it was all over. I had no real sense of having had a baby."

"Immaculate Deception" sure to find more critics than supporters in the medical world, is nevertheless a book that raises questions. It will leave women thinking about their birth rights, and that is the author's intention.

haven't had their consciousness raised. They expect to have babies as their mothers had them—without drugs or doctors. They are not afraid. It's a normal thing to them. During a delivery, there is no noise—I never heard a woman scream. There is no fear, no medication. Fathers traditionally are there during labor because they feel it is their birth, too."

Ms. Arms' book suggests that current medical practices in maternity cases in the United States are unnecessary.

"I'm not saying that there aren't good doctors or good hospitals," she said. "I'm saying that too many people are taking partial responsibility for birth, that there is interference when it's unnecessary, that we're creating problems that do not exist, that no one has proved that the drugs given to women in labor are 100 per cent safe for their babies."

"I was prepared for natural childbirth," Ms. Arms told me, "but I was unprepared for having medical techniques imposed on that birth."

They were, and after the birth Ms. Arms felt a strong sense of failure.

"I felt I had lacked the courage, faith and determination to give birth naturally without help," she said. It left her with a burning desire to investigate childbirth in the United States and explore the midwife, family doctor or obstetrician. Or they may give birth at home. Doctors are generally reserved for abnormal deliveries. Midwives, who are not members of the medical profession but experts in normalcy, deliver most Dutch babies.

While in Holland, Ms. Arms, who observed and photographed a number of home deliveries, was struck by the attitude of the mothers. (Her photographs, two of which are reproduced here are used dramatically to illustrate the book.)

Opening lead: Ace of ♥.

With no offense intended towards the gentleman who sent me this deal (South), he certainly bid his hand as though bridge were going out of style, and he wanted to have one last fling at living dangerously. But if the criterion used is "the end justifies the means," he cannot be criticized, for no one in this world could have secured a more profitable result.

South's first three bids, in spades, cannot be faulted. But when North doubled six clubs, South surely should have passed. In theory, North might well have made a couple of trump-tricks (clubs), in which case East-West would be slaughtered at their contract. And when South chose to bid six spades, for all he knew West might have had both the ace and king of hearts, thus enabling him to capture the first two tricks, thereby defeating the slam before South ever won a trick.

Further, South's redouble of his six-spade bid was not what one would describe as "the best bid of the month." But, again, if the criterion for defining "right" and "wrong" is the result, certainly no one can fault South for his redouble.

After West had opened the ace of hearts, on which East played the five and South the four, he paused for a moment and reflected. At trick two he played the ace of clubs — and South smiled.

The club ace was ruffed, after which three rounds of trumps gathered in—the opponents' pieces. Next came a heart to dummy's king, and on the queen of hearts South discarded his losing diamond. He then chalked up the score for a redoubled vulnerable six-spade contract, plus 150 points for honors.

Of course this story would have had a different ending if, at trick two West had led another heart, which East would have ruffed; for the setting trick. Each would then have returned a diamond — and South would have been slaughtered.

Quaker Workers Report No Bloodbath in Nam

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Quaker relief workers just back from South Vietnam said Saturday there has been no bloodbath there because brutality "would be a totally useless policy."

Paul and Sophia Quinn-Judge, who spent two years working in and around Saigon, said the Communist-led Provisional Revolutionary Government is

"evangelical... They're interested in converting people, not hitting them over the head." Paul Quinn-Judge said the wave of repression predicted by many foreign observers has not occurred because "it would be a totally useless policy for the new government."

"On a practical level, they need the support of the people and they are bending over backward with their clemency program."

Former Viet Regime Back from Reeducation

SAIGON, South Vietnam (UPI) — Officers of the former South Vietnamese regime sent to reeducation classes have begun returning to their families in the Saigon area.

The first group of 875 men and women returned Friday to a family welcome and a ceremony sponsored by Saigon authorities.

The officers were taken to indoctrination camps in the countryside June 15 for political training and farm labor.

Officials said about 300,000 ex-officers and senior civil servants have been sent to the camps since the new government took over South Vietnam April 30.

Former woman police officer Pham Thi Nhan said life at the camps was not difficult.

She described a normal day as beginning with physical training. Political classes and some farm-type labor were followed by evening discussion groups and entertainment.

Tran Thiet, a former infantry major, said there were good relations in the camp between teachers and students.

"Speaking personally," he said, "I think the bloodbath argument was one of those arguments used largely to justify the war—like the idea of two Vietnams."

Both Quinn-Judges predicted the two Vietnams would be unified into one country, perhaps within two or three years.

They said the new government is making a major effort to convince people to return to their countryside homes from Saigon, which has been choked with refugees since the collapse of the American-backed government.

But they said the relocation effort involves no force either.

The government doesn't need compulsion because the Vietnamese peasant is very attached to his or her home, his or her village," Quinn-Judge said.

The Quinn-Judges did liaison work in Saigon for the American Friends Service Committee's rehabilitation center at Quang Ngai. The center, which produced artificial limbs for civilians wounded in the war, has been turned over to a Vietnamese staff trained by the Quakers.

Viet Orphans in America

Tanya Knows 15 English Words

(Editor's Note: The following dispatch by a team of UPI reporters is the first update on seven American families who adopted eight Vietnamese orphans. The initial report in April was the first in a continuing project to follow the five girls and three boys over the years to see how they grow in a new life.

(The dispatch was written by Assistant Managing Editor Donald P. Myers from the reporting of Laurie Hora, Boston; Lester C. Kjos, Miami; Brooke Kroeger, Chicago; Robert Strand, San Francisco; Peter M. Kelly, Denver; Mel Kayser, New York; and Bruce B. Bakke, Atlanta.) Continued from Sunday

By DONALD P. MYERS
United Press International

In Marietta, Ga., Tanya Dawn Dilbeck, all 24 pounds of her, has learned to get along with the family's watchdog and pet—a 75-pound animal named "Jo Jo" that is half timber wolf and half husky. Mrs. Dilbeck said she came into the living room recently and found the two together.

The little Vietnamese girl was sitting serenely on the dog's back. "She can do anything to him and he'll let her," the mother said.

But the South's summer thunderstorms frighten the little girl who arrived in America with pierced ears and wearing two red earrings the size of okra seeds.

"When it thunders she clings to you and just shakes all over," Mrs. Dilbeck said. She believes the thunder resembles the bombing and that the nuns in her Vietnamese orphanage probably moved the children to safety amid great commotion when the bombs fell.

Tanya knows 15 English words and one of her favorites is "yum-yum."

Besides her name — from Pham Thi Thu Huong to Shelli Nate Starr — there have been a lot of changes in the life of the 2-year-old girl in Marietta Falls, N.Y. She can jabber in English now and she looks different than she did when she arrived on a snowy morning at La Guardia Airport last April 4.

"It's been an enormous change in her," said Miss Starr, the child's mother. "The way she carries her body — before she was meek, but now she holds up her head beautifully."

She like most of the Vietnamese orphans, have bad teeth, with lots of cavities. But Miss Starr said the real problem is American bureaucratic red tape. She said she can't count the number of forms she has filled out for final adoption papers with the U.S. Customs and Immigration Service.

"I paid $300 to an agency for the legal work. They haven't done it. I have to finalize the child. She does not have her alien registration card. She's in this country on parole," Miss Starr said. "A lot of people say these kids shouldn't be here, and I guess I should expect some flak, but I waited a long time for Shelli and now, there's this uncertainty."

Gena Whitcomb, who just turned 3 on Aug. 10, is on the road with her new mother and father and her three brothers — Eddie, 13; Richard, 12; and Jeff 8. The Whitcombs packed their car and small house trailer (which sleeps six) and headed north from Florida for their summer vacation.

"Gena's going to get a chance to see the country, but we never know exactly where we're going," Mrs. Whitcomb said before they left. "We'll head up to the Carolina mountains first. We might get to Washington and maybe to Canada."

She had chicken pox scars on her right cheek when she arrived, but they have cleared up.

The child who was born in a Catholic orphanage at Bien Ho, 30 miles north of Saigon, and was left there by her mother when she was two days old, knows about 100 English words. Her most repeated sentence is "Gena loves everybody." It wasn't always so for the girl whose father was an American GI.

"I had to sleep with her every night for about six weeks and at about midnight every night she would wake up screaming," Mrs. Whitcomb said. "She got over that, but now, every night about 3 or 4, she walks into our room clutching a pillow and sleeps on the floor."

"Once in awhile a hand will come up over the side of the bed. I suppose she got shifted around so much she just wants to make sure we're not going anywhere."

Bubonic Plague Reaches Record in New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Bubonic plague—the dread Black Death that killed half the population of Europe in the Middle Ages—may reach record proportions in New Mexico this year.

Seven cases have been reported in New Mexico so far this year, the same number as 1974 and two fewer than the record year of 1970, when nine were confirmed. One of this year's cases resulted in the death of a 3-year-old Navajo Indian girl, Charlene Brown.

Since 1949, there have been 51 cases of the plague reported in the state, nine resulting in death.

For complex reasons, the plague has found a long and probably permanent home in the state, known as "The Land of Enchantment," according to New Mexico epidemiologist Jonathan Mann.

"From what is known, it has probably been present since before written history," Mann says. "I imagine it has always been present in New Mexico."

The plague became known as the Black Death apparently because of the skin color of its dying victims, following an outbreak that killed 25 million persons in Europe in the 1300s. The plague also killed 13 million in China in the same century.

New Mexico is not the only state with the plague, but it has the most reported cases. Other fatalities have been recorded in California and Colorado and infections reported in Utah and Arizona, Mann said.

Health officials say part of the reason New Mexico has a relatively high incidence of reported cases is because physicians are more aware of it and the state has a superior reporting system.

But it is a fact that the plague is endemic, or prevalent, in New Mexico.

"We're concerned, of course —any time we have cases of the plague—but we're not overly concerned about the number we've had this summer," says Bryan Miller, chief of the state Environmental Improvement Agency's sanitation division.

The cases this year have been scattered over wide areas of the state and Miller says officials wouldn't get overly worried unless there were a number from the same area.

Miller said he would not be surprised if there are more cases of the plague in New Mexico this year, but doesn't see any reason to warn of a possible epidemic.

Bubonic plague is carried by particular kinds of fleas, which are commonly carried by small rodents such as mice, chipmunks and prairie dogs.

Miller says the plague usually can be treated successfully in humans if it is diagnosed soon enough. Three medications are used — tetracycline, streptomycin and chlorphenical.

Stranded Pilots Appeal for Help

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A group of 75 American helicopter pilots and their families, marooned in Iran when their company fired them but refused to pay their fares home, have appealed for outside financial help.

A spokesman for the pilots said Saturday U.S. Ambassador to Iran Richard Helms refused to see the pilots but planned to talk to the Iran managers of the helicopter firm, Bell Helicopter International of Dallas.

Spokesman Glen Wood said Bell fired 141 pilots and trainers when the group formed a bargaining unit to negotiate improved sanitary conditions, safety standards and training standards.

The pilots, stationed in Isfahan, in West Central Iran, also accused the company of poor management.

The company had no immediate comment. Wood said 75 of the pilots have appealed for outside financial help because the company refused to repatriate them when they were fired, reportedly because the 75 pilots had less than one year of service.

(In Massachusetts, the mother-in-law of one of the pilots said the group had no money to fly home or buy food for their families.)

Wood denied reports that the Iranian government had frozen the flyers' bank accounts pending an investigation.

He said pilots had a contract with Bell Helicopter International that in no way involved the Iranian government.

GED Slated At Clarendon

The GED (high school equivalency exam) will be given at 8 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 27, at Clarendon College, Clarendon.

Tests will be in room 103 in the college administration building and will take 10 hours to complete. Cost is $13.

Those interested in taking the tests should call 874-3571 in Clarendon or write Box 968, Clarendon, 79226, before Friday.

On America's industrialized farms, some 80 gallons of fuel are used to produce a single acre of corn. But because of corn's high yield, it returns about four calories of food for each calorie of energy used to produce it.

Pirates Slumping

UPI Sports Writer
Who would have believed the Cincinnati Reds, ahead by 12½ games at the All-Star break, would be right in the thick of the tightest pennant race in the major leagues?
Not too many people, right? Well, the Reds are... only it's the National League East race, where a scant 3½ games separate the top four ballclubs and Cincinnati is playing the role of spoiler.
Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, who confidently announced his pitching plans for the playoffs two weeks ago, feels his Reds "owe it to the Mets and Phillies to give it all we've got against Pittsburgh and St. Louis."
"We're playing 'em real loose," Anderson said after watching Pete Rose's 2,500th hit propel the Reds to a 3-1 decision over the Pirates Sunday for a sweep of their four-game series. "The Pirates are fighting for their lives."
Indeed they are.
The loss, Pittsburgh's sixth straight and 12th in its last 13 games, cut its lead in the NL East to one-half game over Philadelphia, two games over St. Louis and three and a half games over the New York Mets.
Pirates Manager Danny Murtaugh, obviously dismayed by his team's anemic hitting the past two weeks, refused to use Willie Stargell's absence from the lineup with a leg injury as an excuse.

"We're not a one-man team," said Murtaugh. "We've got 25 men on this club. The best tonic for us would be to have a game where we get 12 to 15 hits and score eight or nine runs. Only Dave Parker and Manny Sanguillen have been consistent at the plate all season."
The victory was the seventh in a row for Cincinnati, which leads the West by 17½ games. Cincinnati has completed its season schedules with New York and Philadelphia but still has seven games remaining with St. Louis and four with Pittsburgh.
Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia whipped San Diego 10-4, St. Louis routed Atlanta 8-1, New York blanked San Francisco 3-0, Los Angeles shaded Montreal 5-3 and Chicago outslugged Houston 11-7.
In the American League, Baltimore blanked Texas 4-0, Kansas City defeated New York 5-3, Cleveland routed Milwaukee 3-1 and Chicago split with Boston, winning 6-2 and losing 4-3 in 11 innings.
Phillies 10, Padres 4
Greg Luzinski hit his 30th homer of the season, tops in the majors as Philadelphia, which has lost five of its last seven games, continued to gain ground on Pittsburgh despite its own tailspin.

"You can never tell what's going to happen," said former Pirate Dave Cash who tripled home two runs. "You play under .500 in a homestand and pick up ground. The Pirates were due for a bad streak after playing so well this year. But there's still a month and a half to go, so there's no reason to panic."
Cardinals 8, Braves 1
St. Louis, which has picked up 12½ games in a month, pounded out 19 hits, highlighted by Bake McBride's four singles and Ken Reitz' three rbi.
To celebrate their rise in the standings, the Cardinals have the dubious distinction of hosting Cincinnati in a three-game series beginning Monday night.
Cincinnati has to be really relaxed right now," said St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst "I'd rather be playing right now."
Mets 3, Giants 0
New York, which trailed by 9½ games earlier this month when Roy McMillan replaced Yogi Berra as manager, received a much needed bullpen boost from Jerry Koonsman, who saved Tom Seaver's league-leading 17th victory with his first relief appearance since May 1972.
"We need left-handed strength in the bullpen," McMillan said in explaining Koonsman's move. "We would like to see Jerry come out of the bullpen for the next six weeks. Any team would."
Dodgers 5, Expos 3
Bill Russell singled home two runs to climax a three-run second inning and also scored a run in the ninth.

Raiders Bounce Steelers

UPI Sports Writer
It may have been only a pre-season game but whenever the Oakland Raiders and the Pittsburgh Steelers meet, look for the unexpected. It happened again Sunday.
The World Champion Steelers and Oakland had hooked up in some of the most memorable games in National Football League history in recent seasons and Sunday's 24-21 Raider victory was no exception.
George Blanda, the 47-year-old wonder, and David Humm, who wasn't even born when Blanda already was an NFL quarterback, were the architects of the Raider triumph. Blanda entered the game in the second period and threw a 53-yard touchdown pass to Morris Bradshaw to tie the score at 14-14. Humm, a rookie left-hander from Nebraska, capped an 80-yard drive with a one-yard plunge to tie the game 21-21 and then set up Blanda's game-winning 20-yard field goal with just 11 seconds left with a 29-yard pass to the Steeler one.
"He was going to stay in the whole drive," said Madden of Humm. "This was his turn to play and he did a good job."
Humm is trying to make the Raiders as a reserve behind Ken Stabler.

Pittsburgh took a 14-0 first quarter lead when Terry Bradshaw passed 26 yards to Frank Lewis for one score and then rambled 55 yards for another. Bradshaw ran for 75 yards and passed for 65 more before suffering a pinched nerve in his neck in the second quarter.

Reserve quarterback Terry Hanratty, playing for the first time in pre-season, had four passes intercepted before leaving with a sprained ankle.
Miami downed Detroit 20-14. Atlanta nipped Baltimore 10-3, the New York Jets edged St. Louis 14-13, Cleveland beat Philadelphia 14-6, Houston topped Washington 24-13, New Orleans defeated Denver 24-21, Green Bay trimmed Chicago 139, Los Angeles shaded San Francisco 10-6 and the New York Giants dumped San Diego 17-7 in Saturday games. Dallas is at Kansas City tonight.

Earl Morrill threw two TD passes and rookie Stan Winfrey ran 39 yards for another as Miami beat Detroit. Greg Landry had two scoring passes for the Lions, one a 77-yarder to Larry Walton.

Bies Wins 1st Tourney

SPORTS

Pampa, Texas 69th Year Monday, August 18, 1975

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — After eight years on the tour, 37-year-old Don Bies knows the feeling of being a winner. But it didn't come easy.
Bies had to catch Hubie Green on the 18th hole to create a tie and then defeated Green in a two-hole, sudden-death playoff to win the $20,000 Greater Hartford Open Sunday.
His 10-foot birdie putt on 16th hole at the Wethersfield Country Club locked up the $40,000 first place purse for Bies after shooting a final round 69 for a 267 total 17 under par.
"We all know this is my first win ever," he said. "I've had a great feeling all week and this just climaxes it."
He admitted to thoughts "that I might never win," although a card from his wife in Seattle said she thought it would be his week. "Maybe that's just coincidence but it's the first time she's ever done that."
The victory won't change Bies' schedule.
"I'll still play 20 to 25 tournaments a year," said Bies, who gained a full year's tourney exemption with the win.
Bies took a one-stroke lead into Sunday's final round after a four-under-par 67 Saturday for a three-round total of 198, one-stroke lead over Green, who shared the lead with Bies at the midway point of the tournament.
Green, who earned $22,800, appeared content with his play and complimented Bies as "a great person and a great champion."

"The six-foot putt on the 16th to win—Hubert made a great putt for par—all of a sudden looked like 15 feet, but I got it and that's what counts," Bies beamed.
Bies had to rally to earn his berth in the playoff after squandering a two-stroke lead with five holes to play. He bogied at the 14th to give an opening to third place J.C. Sneed. He last four-putted with Bies. Sneed had four birdies in a row on holes 14 through 17 as he went one stroke ahead with a six-foot bird on the 18th.
Bies birdied the 17th with a 15-footer while Sneed parred that hole and the two were tied at 17-under with a hole to play.
Meanwhile, in the threesome ahead of them, Green and Larry Nelson were also making their charges. Both scored 16-under on the 18th tee. Nelson bogied the final hole, but Green sank a 15-footer for a birdie to go 17-under and put pressure on the two other contenders behind him.

Nelson, had a 68 and Vic Regalado a 69 to tie for third place, ahead of Homero Blancas, who stood alone at 270. Johnny Miller and Andy North each had 271.
Bies responded by salvaging par on the 18th after missing a birdie bid. Sneed had all kinds of trouble, wound up in a trap, and eventually ended up with a bogey, playing himself out of the playoffs.
On the first extra hole, the 15th, Bies and Green each had par-fours. On the 16th, a par-five, Green put his third shot in the trap but came out nicely and sank a 12-footer for a par.

Bies, on the green in three, sank a six-footer for a birdie four and victory.
During the four rounds of regulation play, both Bies and Green wound up with totals of 267. For the four days, Bies went 65-66-67-69. Green's totals read 66-65-68-68.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 8 — An order of the day established rations for American troops. They consisted of fresh beef or pork, salt fish, bread or flour, peas, beans and other vegetables, one pint of milk a day when available, rice or Indian meal, spruce beer, molasses, candles and soap.

Meet The Staff

Another in a series, Curtis Didway will be Pampa's defensive line coach for the second year in a row. Last year the defensive line was touted as one of the most solid in the district and Didway says this year's, although untested, could be close to the caliber of last season's line. Didway coached in Pampa in 1965-68, McLean in 1968 - 69 and Mulleshoe in 1970 - 73. (Pampa News photo by Mike Higgins)

Girls City Fete Starts

The Pampa Opti - Mrs. Girls 15-18 Softball League will hold its city tournament starting at 7 p.m. today in Optimist Park when the 76er's meet the A's.
The loser will play Wayne Stedum's Dyn-O-Mites at 7 p.m. Tuesday.
Carol Egglestone coaches the 76er's, while the A's are headed by Ron Sebastian.
The tournament is double elimination.

Harvesters To Scrimmage

Pampa High's football team will play Brownwood, the state AAA favorite, in a scrimmage game starting at 7:30 p.m. Friday, probably in Aspermont.
The Harvesters open their season the following week by hosting Hereford. Workouts for the upcoming season start today.

Brown State Champion

CANYON — Pampa High School swimmer Ted Brown brought home two state championships from the Texas Age Group State Swimming Championships held this past weekend at West Texas State University.
Competing for the Amarillo Aquatic Club, Brown swam the 200 meter freestyle in 2:03.6 and the 400 meter freestyle in 4:19.3 to earn two gold medals. He also qualified for the finals in the 1500 meter free finishing 3rd. In addition to his individual races Brown swam on three Amarillo relay teams which finished first, eighth, and fourth. However, the 200 and 400 meter free races were the highlight of the meet for the Pampa swimmer who will now begin training with the Pampa Harvester swim team in hopes of bringing a state individual swimming title to Pampa High School in the spring.

The best performance of the year for the Pampa Dolphins was also recorded at the state long course meet when the 10 and under boys medley relay team of Reid Steger, Richie Hill, Clay Douglass and David Dawson finished a surprising third in the championship finals. They earned a bronze medal for their efforts when they lowered their best previous time in the event by five seconds to 2:45.6

Clay Douglass who qualified for the state meet in two individual events—made the finals in the 200 individual medley and finished seventh lowering his best previous time by over two seconds. The relay medals and the individual medal won by Douglass mark the first medals ever won by a member of the Pampa Dolphins in the Texas State Swimming Championships.
The Pampa swimmers competed at West Texas against over 500 competitors from throughout the State of Texas. Fifty-two teams were represented at the meet which saw the team title taken for the third year in a row by Dad's Swim Club of Houston. The meet also completes the long course (meter) season for the Dolphins who will now begin short course training with the beginning of the school term. The first practice session for all old and new Dolphin team members will be held at the Youth Center at 5 p.m. Aug. 25.

Kidnap Victim - Wealth On Two Sides of Family

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, N.Y. (UPI) — The kidnapers of Samuel Bronfman II picked a lucrative target for their demand of $4.5 million in ransom—the largest in American history.

Although the Bronfman family's total assets are not known, its business—The Distillers Corp.—is worth $1.7 billion. Sam's mother, the former Ann Margaret Loeb, is an heir in her own right to the brokerage firm of Loeb, Rhoades & Co. That company is worth about $30 million.

With some reason, the kidnapers must have figured that Sam's father, Edgar M. Bronfman, the head of Seagram's, would have little trouble raising almost any ransom for the safe return of his son.

The family fortune goes back to the early 1900s, when Edgar's father Samuel and his uncle Allan ran a profitable retail mail-order liquor business in Montreal.

They lost that business in the 1920s when the Canadian government took over retail liquor sales. So they built their own still in 1925 outside Montreal.

The fledgling firm, Distillers Corp., prospered. In two years it bought out the American liquor firm of Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, which had fallen on hard times because of prohibition and bad management.

The family business well during prohibition—well enough for the elder Samuel to pay personally half of a $3-million fine won in a suit filed by the government for shipping illegal liquor into the United States.

With repeal of prohibition in 1933, Seagram's was ready to glut the American market with now-legal whiskey and the Bronfman family business raced with the better known Schenley Industries for the biggest take.

It took the lead from 1937 to 1944, then slipped back to second place until 1947, when it regained and has since retained the biggest wholesale liquor business in the country. Seagram's now sells over $1 billion in liquor in the U.S. each year.

Twenty years ago, Samuel's son, Edgar, took partial control of Seagram's. Although he had toyed with the idea of becoming a rabbi or a stockbroker, he showed a great aptitude for the liquor business. In a few years, Edgar Bronfman successfully expanded Seagram's products from Canadian whiskey to Scotch, wine, brandy and pre-mixed cocktails.

In 1971, when the elder Samuel died, Edgar took complete control of the business. He now is president, director and treasurer of Distillers Corp.—Seagram's, Ltd.

In 1953, Edgar married the former Ann Margaret Loeb. They raised five children, Sam, 21; Edgar Jr., 20; Matthew, 16; Holly Dorothy, 15, and Adam, 12. The marriage ended in divorce in 1973. Mrs. Bronfman now lives with the children in Purchase, N.Y., not far from the Bronfman estate here.

Shortly after the divorce, Edgar married Lady Caroline Townshend, a British beauty who had handled Seagram's publicity in London. That marriage was annulled on grounds of non-consummation just one year later. During the proceedings in Manhattan Supreme Court, their sex life—or lack of it—was the focus of interest.

Acquitted Little Enters Seclusion

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Thrust from obscurity to the forefront of the feminist and black movements and exhausted after her five-week trial, Joan Little, acquitted in the stabbing death of jailer Clarence Alligood, went into hiding Saturday.

"We told her just to get away from here," said Richard Hunicutt, an aide to her chief defense attorney. "It was just too hot for her here."

Mrs. Lou Paul, wife of chief defense attorney Jerry Paul, said Miss Little left Raleigh Friday with her mother, Mrs. Jesse Williams, to return to her home in Washington, N.C.

But, Hunicutt said, "As far as I know none of her lawyers know where she is." Miss Little's friends and relatives in Washington, N.C., said she was not there.

The 21-year-old black woman had been charged with killing Alligood, a 62-year-old white man, with an icepick Aug. 27, 1974, in the Beaufort County jail where she was awaiting appeal of a breaking and entering conviction.

The prosecution attempted to prove Miss Little killed Alligood in a bid to escape. But Miss Little said she stabbed the jailer to ward off further sexual assault after he forced her to perform an oral sex act.

Even though Miss Little was acquitted, her legal battles are not over. She still faces a 7-10 year sentence on a breaking and entering and larceny conviction.

One of her attorneys, Karen Gallaway said she would seek a new trial on the grounds that her client had inadequate representation during her first breaking and entering trial last June.

She was awaiting appeal hearing of that conviction when she killed Alligood. Miss Little is now free on $15,000 bond and the appeal of the conviction will be heard by the State Court of Appeals Sept. 23.

Miss Little is scheduled to go to Oakland, Calif., this week for a speaking engagement at the Black Panther Learning Center. She also plans other speaking engagements, an autobiography and possible a career in journalism.

Shark Bite

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Surgeons Saturday amputated the lower leg of a 20-year-old college student who was attacked by a five-foot shark Tuesday at a downtown beach.

Doctors had hoped to amputate the right foot only, saving the leg from the ankle up, but after an examination on the operating table, they decided to amputate three inches below the knee.

Henry Peterson was attacked as he walked out of waist deep water here Tuesday. It was the fifth shark attack off Central Florida beaches this year. None of the attacks was fatal.

Continental Elegance

Frederick W. Vanderbilt's mansion is lavishly furnished in continental motifs, mostly Italian and French. A magnificent example of the great estates built by wealthy financial and industrial leaders between the years 1880 and 1900, the 54-room mansion, built in 1896 at a cost of $660,000, was designated a National Historic Site in 1940.

Mansion Symbolizes Era

Distributed by Copley News Service

HYDE PARK, N.Y. — Only a short distance from this New York state village stands Vanderbilt Mansion National Historic Site, a symbol of a bygone era, when America was surging into world prominence as an industrial nation and "old world" estates were almost a common sight along this area of the Hudson River.

Here at Vanderbilt, visitors can get a feeling of an era that spanned from the Civil War to World War I — of a time when this country was creating — and spending — great wealth.

Focal point of the site is the mansion, figuratively a palace transplanted from the old world to the banks of the Hudson.

Designated a National Historic Site in 1940, the Vanderbilt Mansion and its extensive grounds were the country home of Frederick William Vanderbilt for 43 years — from 1885 until his death in 1938.

The grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt, who founded the family fortune in shipping and railroading, Frederick Vanderbilt and his wife, Louise, came to Dutchess County, N.Y., in 1885 to build a country home on land purchased from Walter Langdon.

The leading architectural firm of the day, McKim, Mead, and White, designed the three-story, 54-room mansion of Indiana limestone at a cost of $660,000.

The structure, completed in 1895, today remains one of this country's best examples of Italian Renaissance architecture.

Green Italian marble columns flank the oval main reception hall. Its large light well in the ceiling offers a glimpse of the second-floor hall. Opposite, above an authentic Renaissance fireplace, hangs a tapestry bearing the coat of arms of the Medici, the once-powerful Florentine family.

As visitors move through the mansion, many of them with guided tape-recorded tours, park personnel answer questions and offer interesting insights into the once-lavish life-style that existed on the premises.

Visitors can imagine gala balls with large orchestras and champagne in a 30 x 50-foot drawing room where guests, including nobility and leaders of business, politics and the arts, were entertained.

Russian walnut paneling contrasts with the two Italian marble fireplaces. From the French doors, a path invites guests to stroll across the lawn to the formal gardens or to view the Hudson 100 feet below.

The grounds include the once-overgrown formal Italian gardens now restored by the National Park Service, along with fountains and paths once walked by fashionably attired guests.

The old pavilion, originally intended only as a temporary home, remains as the park's visitor center. It is full of exhibits and memories of a bygone era.

From the Coach House one can glimpse the antique automobiles and carriages which carried Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt to the Dutchess County Fair, where their flowers and livestock were entered in competition, or just down the road to the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Vanderbilt Mansion is on U.S. 9 about six miles north of Poughkeepsie, N.Y. Entrance to the grounds is by the main gate on U.S. 9 north of the village of Hyde Park.

He's not hoping for a college education...

he's banking on it!

Most newspaperboys are banking part of their savings for higher education.

Even if you can easily afford to send your boy to college, you might consider this—the boy who works and saves for part of his education is the boy who will get the most out of college.

He'll appreciate Pop and the checks from home more if he's already had a taste of earning money by working himself.

And while his route profits are important, this is only one of a number of reasons why so many of today's successful men encourage their boys to get the benefit of Newspaper Route experience—including service, salesmanship, collections and record keeping.

Busy Boys Are Better Boys
If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by Newspaperboy Experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.
