

Ford Wants More Weapons

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — President Ford said today he will ask Congress for an additional $2 to $3 billion for nuclear weapons unless the Soviet Union helps shape a strategic arms agreement.

Ford also said the Russians could endanger detente by interfering in Portugal to support the Communist backed military government there.

In an address prepared for the American Legion national convention here, Ford defended American warmth toward the Soviet government but said the United States must be No. 1 in military might.

The President arrived in Minneapolis last night in an exuberant mood after a day of campaign-style appearances in Des Moines, Iowa.

He winds up a two-day tour today and resumes his interrupted vacation at Vail, Colo., after speech making stops in Pekin and Peoria, Ill.

"I hope we are on a two-way street with the Soviet Union," Ford said.

But he said potential adversaries are not reducing the levels of their military power and the United States must be alert and strong.

He said the $92.8 billion, including $9.8 billion for nuclear arms, in the defense budget was the "bare minimum required for our safety." He pledged to his military-oriented audience he will "vigorously resist" defense spending cuts.

Perhaps, he said, in the 1977 fiscal year spending on nuclear forces can be held down, but the projection depends on "real progress in SALT II (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks)."

If there can be no agreement,

"I will have no choice but to recommend to the Congress an additional $2 to $3 billion dollars for strategic weapons programs in the current and coming fiscal years," he said.

Ford said he was looking to the Soviet Union for signs of detente and cooperation in European security.

"We are deeply concerned about the future of freedom in Portugal — as we have always been concerned about the freedom of people throughout the world," he said.

Ford said that in Portugal the wishes of the moderate majority have "been subverted by forces more determined than representative."

Detente means moderate and restrained behavior between two superpowers — not a license to fish in troubled waters," he said.

Urges Emergency Credit for Farmers

By ANNA BURCHELL, Pampa News Staff

Emergency credit will be essential to keep many Gray County farmers operating county governmental officials said here today.

Their statements forwarded to Governor Dolph Briscoe pointed to the thousands of acres of farmland damaged during the past 100 days by hails, floods, windstorms, excessive rains and tornadoes.

Gray County Judge Don Cain requested that Gray County be considered for emergency national disaster loan designation under the federal law.

Along with the request, which had been approved earlier by the Gray County Commissioners Court, Judge Cain sent specific reports in regard to losses.

The report shows that 55 per cent of the 209,900 acres of farmland in this county were affected by the disasters.

An estimated 80 per cent of the county was affected by hailstorms while 20 per cent received damage on several occasions from excessive rainfall.

Flood water on May 28 damaged 25 per cent of this county, according to the report while severe winds damaged crops on 10 per cent of the local farmlands.

Tornadoes of March 27 and May 28 damaged two sections of land and two farm dwellings, barn and shed.

About 100 per cent of the cotton was destroyed after it was too late to replant. And tornado damage to farmlands was slight compared with losses in LeFors officials reported.

Judge Cain enclosed statements from Robert A. Keown, county supervisor with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, F.H.A., in Clarendon, Rex McNailey, president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, Foster Whaley, county extension agent and J.D. Skaggs, farmer and chairman of the extension program building committee.

"Destruction has been severe as far as agriculture income is concerned, which greatly affects the economic condition of the county. The need for credit will be essential," said McNailey.

Whaley said hails, rains and windstorms "cut drastically into production of all crops increased cost of farming has cut on the other end. Emergency credit will be needed for some to continue farming."

Adverse weather has reduced all hope of many farmers of farming in the black in 1975. Credit need will be high and essential to many farmers," said Skaggs.

Keown said the adverse weather has been of all natures and widespread over the entire county.

"This is the second year in a row this county has suffered heavy losses because of natural disasters. The cost of farming is at an all time high and with losses coming two years in succession, many farmers are facing critical problems due to crop losses. Private lenders indicate there will definitely be need for emergency credit."

Copies of Judge Cain's letter were mailed to Keown and to Congressman Jack Hightower in Washington.

Witness Says FBI Wants Hearst Dead or Alive

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Mrs. Catherine Hearst, mother of fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, spent 20 minutes testifying before a federal grand jury today but afterwards would only say she loves her daughter and desperately wants her home.

"My family and I have been through a great deal," Mrs. Hearst said. "I am only interested in getting my daughter home safely. We love her and we hope she will come home as soon as possible."

Brandon Alvey, U.S. attorney in charge of the Hearst investigation, said Mrs. Hearst was a cooperative witness, she was very helpful to us. But neither Alvey nor Mrs. Hearst would discuss her grand jury testimony.

Mrs. Hearst, of San Francisco, was approached by reporters the minute she walked out of the U.S. attorneys office. She was asked if she thought her daughter was a willing member of the Symbionese Liberation Army that kidnapped Miss Hearst on Feb. 4, 1974.

"After people have treated you that way you sort of lose your own free will," Mrs. Hearst said. "I hope she can come home and I believe the legal matters can be settled easily."

Patty Hearst is wanted by the FBI on a dozen criminal charges, including bank robbery. She joined her SLA captors shortly after she was abducted, according to the FBI.

Mrs. Hearst said her grand jury appearance was "really a very simple experience." She said she didn't know very much about the Pennsylvania investigation and refused to talk about her relationship with other key figures in the case.

The FBI suspects that Miss Hearst and members of the SLA may have been harbored at a northeastern Pennsylvania farmhouse last summer. The farmhouse was allegedly rented by sports figure Jack Scott, but the government has yet to establish sufficient evidence to warrant an indictment of Scott, and his wife, Micki.

Earlier an affidavit was filed in federal court here which quoted a John J. Scott, father of Jack Scott, as saying the FBI wanted Patricia Hearst dead or alive—preferably dead.

The disclosure was contained in a legal brief filed by Attorney

William Kunstler, who represents Jack Scott, former Oberlin College athletic director who is fighting a grand jury subpoena in the Hearst case.

Scott's father, John J. Scott of Las Vegas, Nev., said in the affidavit he was visited by FBI agent Bill Jansen July 22. He claimed Jansen offered money to the Scotts for help in "the delivery of the body."

"In front of my wife I asked Jansen just what he meant by that statement," John Scott's affidavit says.

"His response was 'We want the body dead or alive. We would rather have her full of bullet holes than alive because it would make it easier for everyone.'"

The FBI and U.S. Attorney's office denied the charge, which originally was made by the Scotts two weeks ago at a New York news conference and included in affidavits filed last Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman heard arguments Monday from Kunstler and an assistant on motions to kill subpoenas for Scott and his wife Micki. He said he would rule later in the week.

The government's plan to put a whole group of witnesses before a grand jury this week in the search for Miss Hearst has temporarily dissolved.

Fist Fights Erupt In Lisbon Streets

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Fist fights between Communists and non-Communists erupted today in the streets of Lisbon where thousands of workers and storekeepers rebelled against a general strike called by the Communists.

"Failure of the general strike was a serious setback for pro-Communist Premier Vasco Goncalves who appeared on television at a rally Monday night and urged everyone in the country to support it."

The Communists tried to enforce the 30-minute walkout today by blocking the city's main boulevard, Avenida Liberdade, with taxis and buses. When the drivers stopped, passengers from other cars attacked them.

One Communist, blood streaming from his face, was led off by friends who shouted "Fascists!" at his attackers. The crowd then turned on the man's taxi and smashed it with rocks.

Workers in hard hats at a construction site in front of the information ministry came out to protect one Communist sparking a number of fights.

Another center of agitation was the main square, the Rossio, where other scuffles erupted.

Goncalves received another setback Monday night when an angry mob of 5,000 farmers burned a Communist headquarters to the ground at Ponte de Lama in Northern Portugal in the bloodiest fighting in five weeks of anti-Communist violence.

At the height of the Ponte de Lama violence, rifle-firing Portuguese troops battled Communists armed with shotguns and barricaded inside the headquarters. The troops killed at least one person and wounded dozens of others, the first time troops have opened fire on a Communist group.

Rioting against the Goncalves leadership has hit more than 50 Portuguese towns and cities in the past month and left seven persons dead and hundreds injured. It spread Monday for the first time to the Azores islands in the Atlantic ocean and more rioting was expected today in Porto where Communist leader Alvaro Cunhal has called a big rally.

The rally and the walkout were part of a counter-offensive aimed at restoring the tarnished prestige of Goncalves and the Communists.

Cunhal was to attend the Porto rally, his first public appearance since he had to be evacuated by troops when a gunfight broke out in Alcobaca between his followers and anti-Communists Saturday night.

Korean Doctor Looks at City

By ANNA BURCHELL, Pampa News Staff

A Korean physician is considering Pampa as possible site to establish medical practice.

Dr. Nam Kyn Lee, 28, is touring medical facilities here today, but says it will be difficult for him to decide "right now" where to locate.

Dr. Lee has been in New York six weeks and finds the medical profession and the type of illnesses treated in emergency rooms of this nation different to those he saw at the Seoul National University emergency room where he practiced in Korea.

He explained that while emergency rooms here record heart attacks, diabetes and pulmonary disorders, Korea has many carbon monoxide poisoning cases.

However, the two countries are similar in drug intoxication and traffic accident patients seen in emergency rooms, he said.

The American system is confusing, he added, because in Korea if a doctor belongs to a hospital staff he cannot open a clinic.

"If he opens a clinic, he must admit his patients in his own clinic which would be expensive to build," he said.

"I think Korean system is not so good," he commented.

In touring Highland General hospital's facilities, he reported that the equipment here is more advanced and sophisticated than that in Korea.

In discussing the problems, he said some drug stores in Korea sell prescription drugs without a prescription.

"Principally, it is illegal," he added.

While Korea has no medical insurance, Dr. Lee expects some primitive form of insurance to be introduced there soon.

Malpractice suits exist in Korea, but they are no serious, the doctor explained. He added that most Korean physicians do not carry malpractice insurance.

The doctor studied English for the 15 years, but had no opportunity to speak it until he arrived in New York.

"I had read a lot, but had no direct communications," he said.

While Americans read from left to right, Koreans do the opposite. For example, he said Americans comment "I need a pencil," Koreans say "Pencil a need."

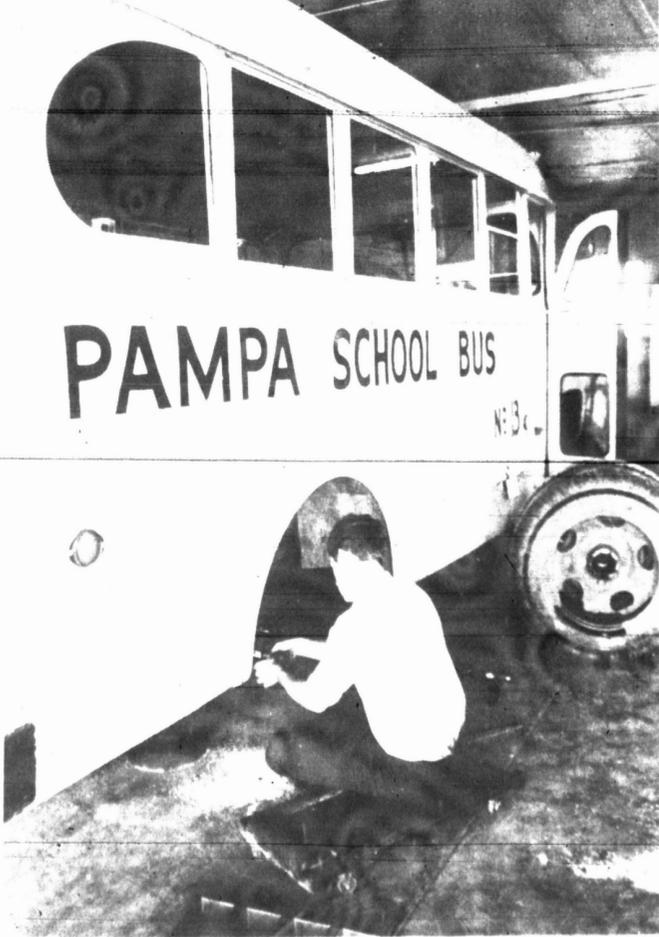

Dr. Lee said Texas is somewhat different than he had visualized. He had anticipated that all Texans wore boots and big hats, and carried guns, impressions he got from Western movies.

Dr. Lee came to Amarillo three weeks ago and visited with Eddie Mehn at the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. He returned Monday to visit Pampa.

A bachelor, he is one of four children in the Korean family. He has two brothers and a sister. His father is an elementary school principal.

Robert Monogue, hospital administrator, asked if Lee had met the Filipino nurses employed at Highland.

He had not. Monogue jokingly said since Dr. Lee is single he might be interested in meeting the girls.

Shipsape Bus

Jerry Hood is making sure that the Pampa Independent School District buses are all in top running condition for the coming school year. Buses will run on each route at the regular time on Friday, registration day. Students should bring report cards and immunization cards with them to registration. Buses will begin taking students home at 11 a.m. Monday is the first day of regular classes. (Pampa News photo)

Youth Visiting Pampa Unhappy About Jailing

By THOM MARSHALL, Pampa News Staff

A 17-year-old visitor to Pampa who was sent on an errand to the grocery store remained in the city jail this morning after he was charged with shoplifting and was unable to come up with the $52.50 fine.

And that isn't the only problem facing the Kansas City youth. Officers called to the store to investigate the shoplifting report discovered a controlled substance believed to be marijuana upon searching the car driven by the youth. Bond has been set at $1,500 in connection with the possession of the controlled substance.

When he was arrested, the youth had about a dollar. He was charged with trying to shoplift a 94 cent package of ham.

The unwilling tenant at the city jail, wearing a sleeveless denim jacket and a large beret, told his story Monday to The Pampa News.

"I've been sitting all day, just looking at the walls," he said.

Asked if he thought his imprisonment is serving any purpose, the young man said, "No, not really. I've gotta go to school and I was supposed to start working today. I was gonna paint houses. A man lined up some houses to paint and I was supposed to start today."

The school he referred to consists of classes designed to prepare students for a GED exam which, if passed, provides them with a document considered equivalent to a high school diploma.

He had come to Pampa with his father

They were bringing his two nephews home from a visit in Kansas City. After they had arrived at his sister's house, the boy was instructed to take his nephews and go to the store for groceries.

"We had some food stamps," he said. "But we'd have to wait in line and when we got the food home, we'd have to wait for them to cook it. I'd been riding for nine hours with no food. I was just too hungry to wait."

The youth is serving out his fine at the rate of $5 per day. He doesn't feel that fine is justified.

"They should have at least let me put it back," he said of the package of ham, "or pay them the price that it was."

He said that he gets $10 allowance a week from his father and he would have saved some of that for the Pampa trip except he didn't know they were coming when they did. He thought the trip would be a couple of weeks later.

The boy's father is a cement finisher and that is what he would like to be when he finishes his schooling. He expects to be ready to take the GED exam after about two more months of classes.

"I like school," he said, referring to the sessions he is currently attending. But when asked why he was not enrolled in a regular public high school in Kansas City, he said, "It didn't like me."

The youth explained that he had been expelled from high school on two occasions. The first time was because of an incident involving a gun.

"My cousin had it," he said. "It fell out of his pocket and I just picked it up. We were walking down the hall, see, and some dude was trying to fight him. The gun fell on the floor and I picked it up. Somebody told on me and they kicked me out of school for having the gun."

On the second occasion he was asked to leave school on a charge of gambling.

"But there wasn't anybody gambling," he said. "They just come in and found some dice on the floor and a bunch of guys standing around. They just picked out two of us and kicked us out."

The young man hopes he doesn't have to spend much longer in the cell. But "won't nobody come up with the $52.50. I'll be in there," he said.

His father returned to Kansas City. "He had to go to work," the young inmate said, and he added that his father's payday is later this week and the fine might be paid then.

However, payment of the shoplifting fine won't mean that the Kansas City youth will be headed for home. He still faces the charge of possession of a controlled substance and a spokesman at the police station said that when the shoplifting fine is paid or the time is served, the youth will be turned over to the county where he will be a resident of the Gray County jail until the $1,500 bond is posted or the matter is handled in the courts.

"I never did like Pampa," the young man commented.

SLIGHT DELAY IN TAKE OFF

Energy Plan In Limbo

One astute person observing the fumblyings of the Congress declared resignedly that the only predictable thing about the U.S. legislative body is that it is unpredictable.
Certainly one of the most predictable things about Congress in recent times is its behavior in trying to create an energy program.
Considering the implications of crisis in the United States of America when the full force of limitations on the supply of oil and natural gas finally is felt, anybody might predict that Congress would have approved an energy program long ago. Indeed, on four different occasions, the majority party leadership in Congress has asked the administration to delay one of its actions for a brief period until Congress did just that.
Congress never has put its approval on a program and it's not because there is any particular mystery about what has to be done. The United States has all the necessary ingredients for a strong energy program. We have untapped reserves of oil in California, Wyoming and Alaska. We have undiscovered but almost assured sources of oil under the national tidelands. There are enough virgin coal fields in the United States to supply our energy needs for an estimated 400 years. Solar heating and other supplementary exotic sources are firm possibilities.
Yet, as we approach the second anniversary of the Arab oil embargo, Congress has done precious little to move the United States toward energy independence. The House and Senate went home for a month's recess without even reaching agreement that the United States should pump oil from Elk Hills, Buena Vista or Teapot Dome. Production from these sources could put critical economic pressure on the Arab and perhaps prevent them from raising prices again.
Also left in limbo in Congress was the proposed amendment to the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act of 1963. The failure to amend the act is holding up development of offshore drilling. Moreover, strip mining legislation which is needed to develop coal resources more fully also is mired in congressional dispute.
Finally, Congress went home for the hot summer without even being able to agree that competition and the market place should be the disciplinary factor which helps us to conserve fuel. Instead, the membership of the Joint Economic Committee is asking the President for another six months' extension of the present unrealistically low price of domestically produced oil. The committee wants to negotiate "the appropriate level of oil prices."
If the President acquiesces, he only will assure another long delay in embarking on an energy program. However, the principal reason that Mr. Ford should let petroleum price controls expire on Aug. 31 is basic — the business of Congress simply is not oil pricing.

Letters to the Editor

A Reasonably Satisfied Taxpayer

Dear Mr. Editor:
It has been interesting reading what various people have to say about our increased cost of running our city and the solutions to raising the money. When I say our city, I am talking about all of our different government councils that spend taxpayers' money. I am a taxpayer and most generally like the way our city spends our money. I noticed the change in our drinking water, but I thought, and still think, it was imperative for us to get in the Canadian Water Association. I get up each morning and drink a glass of cool water, where I was raised we had pip water that was almost undrinkable. I notice the trash that the Garbage Collectors pick it, it takes me about five minutes a week to pick it up; but it's a lot better than burning it. I know some of the men that take care of our garbage. I think because they work for me they should have a liveable wage. I live near a park and I like it, it is well taken care of and I appreciate it. I also appreciated the men from the city that fixed a culvert into my drive so I could get in without dragging my car.
We had our house burglarized a couple of years ago and the policeman who handled the case were very nice and efficient. We recovered most of the items that were taken. I also had some dealing with a policeman in our Corporation Court. The policeman was probably right to issue the ticket, but he couldn't express himself well enough to convince the jury. I thought we should have had a better man working for us, but knowing what we paid policemen, I could understand why he was hired. Any man at all was better than no one at all.
This brings us to our school system and why I am writing this letter. I think we have a good school system. Most young people are able to make a living after they finish, or are well enough prepared to continue their education. We were fortunate to have oil and other resources that followed our inflationary trend to keep our tax rate stable for several years, but it seems it has caught up with us at last. All avenues of lowering our costs seem to have been discussed by our elected officials, administrators and leading industries in our tax area. Everything has been covered from lowering our standards, to cutting teachers' salaries. As for me, I don't want our standards lowered and I want the trained people working for me to receive a liveable wage. I want the people that teach my children and help mold their lives to be top notch. Dedication is fine in any vocation or profession, but that alone will not pay the bills or educate children. I hear a lot about the responsibility of public workers, but I seldom hear about the people's responsibility to their public workers.

The per capita income of the Pampa area is very high compared with most cities our size, or any size for that matter. If you don't believe it, count the $20,000 and up family dwellings in our city. A family will have to make $15,000 to $20,000 a year to afford one of them. Without knowing the exact figure, I would say Celanese employees make $16,000 and up per year. Some of these people have no college education; it just proves that they hire good people and pay them well. Most of the Cabot people make in a excess of $10,000 a year. The point I am trying to make in the people in this area make good money and can afford to pay their public workers well. If all avenues of raising money are covered and the only way for us to maintain a good school system is by raising taxes, I think it should be done.
I surmised by reading that the large taxpayers and large property owners in our school tax area were against any raise in taxes. I say that they can afford it as well as I. I am against it too, if it's not necessary, but if it is, I am willing to pay my part. One of the reasons I work is so that I can pay for the things I enjoy and think are necessary for the good life. This thinking of mine includes all of our city governments.

Women Battle On ERA

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service
WASHINGTON — If the proposed women's Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) to the Constitution is defeated, you can blame it on the women.
This may sound paradoxical, but the roughest, toughest and most dedicated opponents of ERA are American women, individually and in organized groups.
They are the ones, for the most part, who have been battling proponents of the amendment, also primarily women, in the arenas where it counts, the state legislatures.
This is not to say that the anti's will, in the end, be successful.
The fight could go on for four more years. Under the joint resolution passed overwhelmingly by Congress March 22, 1972, ERA was given a seven-year period in which to push the amendment through 38 states for the three-quarters majority required by the Constitution.

If 38 ratify, the amendment would go into effect two years later and these words would then be added to the Constitution:
"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."
Twenty months ago, a newspaper story began with this paragraph:
"With 30 down and eight to go, the road is getting rockier for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment as it moves haltingly through the remaining state legislatures."
The road, has indeed, been rocky. Last year, three states ratified, seven others rejected the amendment and one (Tennessee) rescinded its earlier ratification.
In 1975 — no further action in any state is scheduled for the remainder of the year — the score for ERA was even worse. Only one state (North Dakota) ratified and 16 states rejected it, many for the second, third, or as in Illinois, the fourth time. Moreover, four attempts this year to convince the Nebraska Legislature that it should ratify failed. Nebraska ratified in 1972 and rescinded the following year.

So, the score today is either 34 or 32 for ratification.
ERA proponents insist that once a state has ratified it cannot legally rescind although, they also insist, that if a state once rejects the amendment it may legally vote to ratify at any time before the cutoff date in 1979.
Opponents of ERA, such as Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., conservative author and activist, think this sort of one-sided contention is a bit much. They will continue to press for rescission in a number of large states, including Texas, Idaho, West Virginia and Kentucky.
In a telephone interview, Mrs. Schlafly contended that ERA sailed through many state legislatures in 1972 and 1973 without genuine hearings or debate and that some are having second thoughts now that they understand the issue better.

Appreciates Police

Dear Editor:
Recently we were called out of state because of a death in our family. We would like to thank the police department — especially our thanks to officers Jacobs, Hodges, Fontenot, Bailey and Brown who made door checks for us — and all the other officers for checking on their routine patrols.
It was very gratifying to know we had left everything in the hands of our police department. At a time like this you have a lot of worries, but we returned home and found everything in satisfactory condition.

We sincerely thank Richard J. Mills, chief of police, and our Pampa police force for what we consider a wonderful favor beyond the routine duty.
Also, we think everyone should know about the crime prevention program they have for citizens.
Our deepest thanks and appreciation.

The Patriot Years

Gen. Burgoyne Melancholy

Copley News Service
From the Pennsylvania Packet, Philadelphia, in the summer of 1775, 200 years ago:
We are credibly informed that General Burgoyne has lately shown every appearance of a deep settled melancholy, is continually walking the streets of Boston with his arms folded across his breast and talking to himself.
We are also credibly informed that General Gage and Admiral Greaves have publicly quarrelled, Admiral Greaves having told Gage it was a cowardly action to burn Charlestown. Gage sharply replied, he should not consult him in such matters.
Gen. Gage, it is said, has resigned the command of the troops to Gen. Howe.
Extract from a letter from Braintree, Massachusetts-Bay, July 16, 1775:
"I heard yesterday by one Mr. Rolston, a goldsmith, who got out of Boston in a fishing schooner, that their distress increases upon them fast.

"Their beef is spent. Their malt and cyder all gone. All the fresh provision they can procure, they are obliged to give to the sick and wounded."
"Thirteen of our men who were in gaol and were wounded at Charlestown are dead."
"The spirit which prevails among the soldiers is that of malice and revenge. There is no true courage to be observed among them. Their duty is hard, always holding themselves in readiness for an attack, which they are in continual fear of."
"The transports from Ireland and New-York arrived last week, but every additional man adds to their difficulties."
Extract from a letter from a gentleman in Fredericks-town to his friend in Baltimore:
"On Monday, last Capt. Morgan for Virginia with his company of rifle men marched through this place on their way to Boston. Their appearance was truly martial, their spirits amazing elated, breathing nothing but a desire to join the American army and to engage the enemies of American liberty amidst the acclamations of all the inhabitants who attended them."

Poor Nevada
Nevada's Robert A. Maheu has testified that he served as a liaison between the CIA and underworld figures in a plot to poison Castro. Four years we have watched underworld figures flex their muscles in Nevada's gambling industry.
Now the circle has been closed. Nevada's lieutenant governor says he is alarmed at the possibility that the CIA has infiltrated his state's gambling industry. Poor little Nevada.

Husband's Boss Really Can't Hold His Liquor

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an executive with a large insurance company. My problem is my husband's boss. He's not an alcoholic, but when he drinks too much (which is every time we entertain him in our home), he loses control of his kidneys, and I can't tell you what he has done to our furniture! (I had to re-cover a satin brocade chair because the cleaners couldn't get the stain out.)
Another time the boss had one of those "accidents," my husband let him wear his best bathrobe for the rest of the evening. The boss wore it home, and I never saw it again. It happens to be the robe I gave my husband last year for Christmas, and I want him to get it back, but he doesn't have the nerve to ask for it because he doesn't want to embarrass his boss.
What do you suggest?

NAMELESS IN HARTFORD
DEAR NAMELESS: Since your husband is in the insurance business, perhaps you are covered for such damages and losses. (Have you flood insurance?) In any case, if your husband lacks the courage to ask for the robe, write off the loss. And the next time you entertain the boss, make it a beach party.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the husband who was being driven up a wall because his wife used "you know" at least once in every sentence;
I recently made a tape-recording to send to a friend, and when I played it back, I couldn't believe my ears. I had said, "and what not" at the end of nearly every sentence.
After that, I vowed to overcome that obnoxious habit. The husband who is tired of hearing his wife say, "You know," all the time ought to rent or buy a tape recorder and get first-hand evidence of all those "you knows." After she hears it, she will clean up her act.
SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN: You know, that's a dandy idea!

DEAR ABBY: I am 64. I raised my children alone after an early divorce. Somehow, I never took the time to make myself glamorous or think of a second marriage.
Two years ago (at age 62), I had an excellent secretarial job. A man my age came from another state to be my boss. He was extremely attractive but he had a good marriage and grown children, so I had no designs on him.
Because he went home only on weekends, we dined together every night, and soon our friendship developed into an affair. It was the greatest thing that ever happened to me, although I knew there was no future in it.
He has now been permanently based with this office, and his wife has moved here. She and I have become the best of friends (I am now retired.)
The wife and I visit each other, but the man I see as her husband is not the man who comes to visit me when he gets a night out alone. I still love him deeply, but I'll never do anything to cause another woman any pain. We are very discreet and no one knows. (Can you imagine two people in their 60s having an affair such as ours?)
He will eventually retire and make his home in a distant state, and I'll probably never see him again. Meanwhile, I'll enjoy whatever happiness I have with him. When he leaves, it will be over.
I enjoy my family, travel a lot and will just kill time until I'm old enough to die. I consider myself a respectable woman. There is no problem, so no solution is needed. Thanks for reading this. I had to tell someone.

Secret Funds

The Federal Election Commission has adopted a regulation to treat secret congressional slush funds just like campaign funds. That would mean they would have to be reported and would be subject to limitations on contributions and expenditures.
Congress can reject the regulation by a majority vote in both houses. Otherwise it will become effective automatically in 30 days.
Any attempt to nullify the new rule should be nipped in the bud. These so-called "office funds" have been controversial and questionable since the discovery of the famous Nixon fund in 1952.
They have been used to supplement regular allowances for office expenses, pay for travel and newsletters, and hire extra staff members. The funds are raised quietly by contributions from businessmen, unions, corporations and others interested in furthering a congressman's or senator's political career.
The temptations to corruption are so apparent in the practice that it should be discontinued entirely.

MISS TEEN BLACK WORLD
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Tenita Laverne Jordan, 15, of Columbia, S.C., has been chosen Miss Teen-age Black World for 1976.

Miss Jordan, a student at C.A. Johnson High School, sang "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly" in the talent competition and won over 30 other girls from across the country in the event Saturday night.

First runnerup was Phyllis Tennessee Payne, 17, of New River, Va., and second runnerup was Angela Garrett, a 17-year-old from Camarillo, Calif.

Miss Jordan, a cheerleader and member of the National Honor Society at her high school, won a $9,000 scholarship to Hampton Institute in Hampton, Va.

CONTROLS UNLIKELY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., says Congress is in no mood to vote strong gun controls.

Conyers, chairman of the House judiciary subcommittee on crime, said one reason is "the dismal leadership we have had" in Congress.

"The prospects for change are, quite frankly, not very hopeful," he said in an interview Saturday on the Mutual Broadcasting System.

"Unless citizens impact on the Congress, I don't think anybody in their right mind is sitting back thinking that the Congress is going to do bright, daring, innovative things. Not in this 94th Congress, nor in any of the future ones, just as they have failed to do in the past ones."

COVERT ACTIVITY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, says he would disapprove of any CIA involvement in current anti-Communist activity in Portugal, although said he felt such covert activity may be proper.

Interviewed on the NBC-TV show Meet the Press Sunday, Church was asked whether, in Portugal, a country with a substantial non-Communist majority expressing its will, the United States should be taking such covert action as giving financial support to a non-Church replied: "This is a case where a covert action by the CIA could be said to at least conform to our values as a country and to our professed principles."

However, he said, "every problem in the world does not have to be solved by us... I can't think of anything that would help the Communists more in Portugal than to have us messing in it and get exposed and then let the Communists point to the CIA for having intervened secretly in Portuguese affairs."

"The democratic parties in Portugal, he said, already were getting open help from European democratic parties."

NIXON DINES OUT
SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Nixon celebrated a friend's birthday last weekend at the El Adobe Restaurant, one of his favorite haunts in the years when his nearby San Clemente estate served as the Western White House.

The restaurant owner said this weekend Nixon arranged the party for Col. Jack Brennan, the former President's personal aide, giving the restaurant one hour's notice before his arrival Saturday night.

Nixon, Brennan, former First Lady Pat Nixon and Julie and David Eisenhower dined undisturbed for about two hours on a balcony overlooking the main dining room. But when they prepared to leave some 200 other patrons crowded around and asked for autographs.

Nixon, Eisenhower and Brennan all ordered a Spanish dish named "The President's Choice" in Nixon's honor. A mariachi band serenaded the group during dinner, which was followed by a six-layer angel food cake baked by the chef at Nixon's request.

IRON CURTAIN
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., says hidden provisions in a proposed bill to reform the Federal Criminal Code might make it impossible for news media to get information about government activities that should be exposed to public view.

"Under the guise of protecting national security," Cranston said, "these sections of the revised code would bring down an iron curtain of executive secrecy on a host of governmental activities that should not be kept secret and that in no way threaten national security."

Ford Predicts More Grain Sales Despite Dock Threat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford predicted more U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union Monday amid charges by farm officials that a threatened loading boycott by union dockworkers "is nothing short of piracy."

Ford told a cheering crowd in the heart of the grain belt at Des Moines, Iowa, that forecasters are still calling for a record

American harvest this year. "A great deal of interest has been aroused by Soviet purchases of American grain" totaling 9.8 million tons so far in 1975, he said.

The President noted that Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz last week asked U.S. exporters to temporarily delay further sales to Russia, adding, "and I emphasize temporarily." Butz has said such sales will have little effect on bread and beef prices in supermarkets. "Looking ahead, and I use these words advisedly, we anticipate further purchases of grain by the Soviet Union," Ford said.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Monday that dockworkers will not load any new Russian-bought grain until administration officials assure him the deal will not hurt American shippers or consumers.

In other grain developments Monday, —President William Kuhfuss of the American Farm Bureau Federation said in Chicago it was time for Congress to take action against the threatened loading boycott. He said it was "nothing short of piracy in the ports."

—Kansas Gov. Robert Bennett suggested dockworkers cut wages for unloading ships with foreign imports if they are concerned about lowering consumer prices. He said bread price, for example, are influenced 40 per cent by wages and only 10 per cent by grain prices.

—Tony Dechant, president of the National Farm Union, called for a meeting of consumer, labor and farm leaders to discuss the situation. He said a boycott "will not really solve anything."

In a related development, sources reported no progress in the first day of U.S.-Soviet talks Monday on a new rate for American ships carrying the Russian-purchased grain — a sore point with the maritime workers. The old negotiated rate has expired.

Impeachment Case Gaged

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Senators will not be allowed to talk to reporters about the impeachment case against District Judge O.P. Carrillo once his trial begins and the gag rule also may be extended to the attorneys involved.

The Senate Administration Committee met Monday to draft proposed rules to conduct the trial, scheduled to begin Sept. 3. The committee voted unanimously to recommend the gag rule for members of the Senate, and asked special counsel Leon Jaworski to prepare his recommendations on whether the ban should be extended to attorneys in the case.

Former Rep. Terry Doyle of Port Arthur, special prosecutor hired by the House, brought up the issue of the gag rule on senators and attorneys. Jaworski questioned what authority the Senate has to impose such restrictions.

"There is no question that we could control the comments from members of the court," said Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston. "The difficult question is what we can do to control comments of the lawyers."

Sen. Don Adams, D-Jasper, chairman of the administration committee, said the Senate should make sure news coverage of the trial did not cause disturbances. Adams said reporters at the trial will be required to sit at press tables at the rear of the Senate chamber, and photographers will not be allowed to use television lights or flash attachments for still cameras.

"We are going to have a decorous proceeding," he said. "We are not going to have any disruptions."
The committee, however, indicated it may go along with a proposal for live radio broadcasts of the proceedings.

Carrillo sat quietly through the day-long proceedings, occasionally smiling at quips by senators or attorneys. His two attorneys, Arthur Mitchell of Austin and Richard Haynes of Houston, said they had no objections to news media being allowed in the Senate chamber during the trial.

so long as the presence of reporters and photographers did not disrupt the proceedings. The House took only two days earlier this month to overwhelmingly approve 10 of the 11 proposed articles of impeachment accusing Carrillo of misconduct and using his office for political gain.

Husband's Okay Not Needed for Abortion

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal appeals court has ruled women do not need their husbands consent to get an abortion.

The unanimous decision by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Monday struck down a Florida law requiring unmarried mothers to get their parents' consent and married women the consent of their husbands before having an abortion. The three-judge panel upheld a lower court ruling that both requirements are unconstitutional.

The fundamental right to an abortion applies to minors as well as adults," said Judge Lewis R. Morgan.

The court said "parents do not always act in the best interests of their children" whereas if the minor only consults a doctor in order to decide whether to have an abortion, "the physician is in a position to counsel the minor as to the physical—and perhaps mental—consequences of the decision."

In the case of married women, the court said "We do not believe (the husband's) interest in the fetus is of sufficient weight to force the woman to face the mental and physical dangers of pregnancy and childbirth."

Marie Foundations Plans Addition of 130 Employees

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Marie Foundations with operations in both Pampa and McLean will hire 130 additional employees immediately.

However, company officials are concerned about finding that many people here to fill the jobs.

"The labor market in this area is just pretty tight," Dale Greenhouse, division manager, said Monday. "There are plenty of jobs in both McLean and Pampa."

Marie Foundations in Pampa is a national distribution center with shipping outlets to every Sears Roebuck and Co. store in the nation.

The plants manufacture bras and girdles. The Pampa installation alone produces 12,000 garments daily. Payroll for the 460 employees at both plants is now in excess of $2 million a year.

Officials said if the 130 persons are hired and inflation keeps rising the 1976 payroll probably will be near $3 million.

Greenhouse said he attended a meeting in California recently where company leaders were concerned about the tight labor market in Gray County.

Greenhouse said Marie Foundations depends on the "housewife" for employees, however many are family bread winners.

Some he said, come from White Deer, Lefors and other area towns.

The inability to find labor will be the only thing that keeps the Gray County installations from expanding, he explained.

The minimum wage is now $2.15 hourly in addition to an incentive pay system. The average employe earns $2.60 per hour, he said. The company also offers six paid holidays, paid vacations and a retirement plan.

Form O-Uth, the parent company of Marie Foundations and Calmar Manufacturing Co., began in the late 1930s.

In 1945, the company was operating a factory in downtown Los Angeles. However, in 1952 it moved into new quarters in Gardena, Calif., and has expanded rapidly since.

In 1957, after considering several hundred locations a building was purchased in

McLean due to its central location for a national distribution center.

The community, officials said, has expressed a sincere interest in promoting industry. Three years later, the McLean plant doubled in size.

In 1964, Marie Foundation decided to locate in Pampa Industrial Park — in the heart of a residential district where many walk or ride bicycles to work.

Inside the walls of the warehouse at 800 Kingsmill are 1.2 million garments.

Greenhouse said Marie Foundations depends on the "housewife" for employees, however many are family bread winners.

Some he said, come from White Deer, Lefors and other area towns.

The inability to find labor will be the only thing that keeps the Gray County installations from expanding, he explained.

The minimum wage is now $2.15 hourly in addition to an incentive pay system. The average employe earns $2.60 per hour, he said. The company also offers six paid holidays, paid vacations and a retirement plan.

Form O-Uth, the parent company of Marie Foundations and Calmar Manufacturing Co., began in the late 1930s.

In 1945, the company was operating a factory in downtown Los Angeles. However, in 1952 it moved into new quarters in Gardena, Calif., and has expanded rapidly since.

In 1957, after considering several hundred locations a building was purchased in

McLean due to its central location for a national distribution center.

The community, officials said, has expressed a sincere interest in promoting industry. Three years later, the McLean plant doubled in size.

In 1964, Marie Foundation decided to locate in Pampa Industrial Park — in the heart of a residential district where many walk or ride bicycles to work.

Inside the walls of the warehouse at 800 Kingsmill are 1.2 million garments.

Shades Block Poor View

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I live in an apartment with a very poor view out my bedroom window. I would like to block out the windows completely and put my double bed under the windows. I find, however, this is not possible because of my lease requirements. How can I live with this poor arrangement? Also, I work at night so I must have complete darkness during the day so I can sleep. I have off white carpet and walls. What should I do for a bedspread? I would like a rather dramatic contemporary look in the room. — R.R.M.

A. If you want 24-hour darkness in this room and will light it entirely artificially, why don't you put up standard white window shades that are light tight? Then choose a very exciting fabric in colors you like. Maybe a black and white and red geometric. It could be an inexpensive cotton. Make a screen or set of panels that will go across the entire window wall in your bedroom. You might use hollow core doors hinged together with piano hinges or even heavy cardboard from very sturdy packing crates that you could salvage. Cover these panels with your dramatic fabric which you could staple on or glue on. Use rick-rack or gimp if you like to finish the edges. Use this for the

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

Since defensive play is undoubtedly the most difficult aspect of bridge, it is always a source of pleasure to me to come across superlative defensive play. Such was the case in today's deal, which arose in a duplicate game. East and West cooperated beautifully to hand South a humiliating defeat. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

East would never have dreamed of reopening the bidding with two clubs had the game been rubber bridge. But in duplicate bridge, with the scoring being on a relative basis and each deal being the exact equivalent of each other, one seldom "sells out" at the one level. So East, taking a calculated risk, stuck his neck out with a two-club overcall.

West, of course, had passed South's opening one-spade bid with the prayer that if North passed, East would not sell out. West's prayer was answered.

East won the opening lead with his ace of diamonds — felling South's king — and returned a diamond, which South trumped. He then led the heart ten, which West took with his king. The king of clubs was led next. South winning with the ace, after which the queen of hearts was played to West's ace. West returned his remaining club, and East cashed two club tricks. West discarded his last heart on East's second club lead.

When East next led his singleton spade, South played low and West won the trick with his ten. West then played his diamond jack, which South ruffed. South led a low spade. West's jack taking the trick. West now exited with his remaining diamond. South trumping. Subsequently West won another trick with his king of trumps. Thus declarer lost three trump tricks, two hearts, one diamond, and two clubs, to incur an 800-point set.

Declarer could have saved a trick by allowing West's king of clubs to have won trick six (instead of taking it with his ace). He probably should have done so, for West really couldn't have had the tripleton K-Q-X (which declarer evidently thought he had), for East certainly would not have let overcall on 10-x-x. However, declarer's error should not detract from East-West's good defensive play.

You might do the bedspread in the same geometric print or do a solid red spread with black and white pillows. Repeat the black and white and red throughout the room in accessories, a wicker chair perhaps, or even an antique chest or dresser. Finish off with plenty of attractive artificial lighting fixtures.

Q. We have a family room and dining room that is 20 by 20 feet with walls and ceiling of incense cedar. The flooring is red brick vinyl. We have windows flanking a used brick fireplace and a five-foot sliding glass door in the room. Off of the family-dining room is the kitchen with cedar cabinets, copper stove and refrigerator, beige walls and tiles.

Approximately 54 members attended Thursday's Senior Citizen's meeting at Lovett Memorial Library.

The Friendship Class of First Presbyterian Church hosted the event, with Kathrine Steele, chairman, and Kitty Taylor, Gracy Corey, and Betty Truly, co-hostesses.

Mrs. Ida Hill and Mrs. W.A. Hardy were guests of the club. Mrs. May Hatcher has been a patient in Highland General Hospital.

Mrs. Emory Noblitt is staying at the Pampa Nursing Center. Mrs. Lennie Lester is convalescing at home and wishes to thank all for the cards, flowers and visits.

Elmer Melton celebrated his 85th birthday Aug. 14.

Door prizes for the day were won by Mrs. Dave Hendricks and Hulle Beard.

Mrs. Fay Hutton, had her nephews family, Dr. Joe Casbes from Lake Charles, La., as weekend guests recently.

Joe Shelton visited his daughter in Clovis, N.M. and reported having a nice time. He also visited the campus in Lubbock.

The W.E. Melton's had their daughter, Mrs. Henry McGellon and children and daughter-in-law, Mrs. David Holt for guests recently.

The weekly affair is sponsored by the Alturas Club of Pampa and members present were Dora Dunn, Olive Hills, Louise Sewell, Lillian Snow and Gertrude Barber.

Of Parents, Children and Drugs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Parents must face the blunt truth. They set the stage for their children to become the drug abusers.

They condition the child to drugs with their own drinking, pill popping, their failure to listen, to love their children, but also spoiling them, and failure to teach real values in life.

As one authority sums it up, "What a person does about drugs depends on what she or he does about life. Children adopt family patterns, at least during their growing-up years. Parents must begin drug education in the home by providing life education.

"Dealing with everyday matters is the training ground for dealing with crises.

"A child with a healthy concept who has had experience in decision-making and problem-solving and in accepting responsibility for his or her actions, is less likely to turn to drugs to avoid decisions, problems and responsibility.

"Parents must examine their attitudes and lifestyle... their own drug habits.

"What we're really talking about... isn't just drugs but the business of living. The goal in rearing children must be to teach them to deal with an imperfect world without using psychological crutches such as drugs."

The writer of these words is Margaret Hill, a guidance counselor and authority on education, child development and mental health.

Ms. Hill assesses the current drug scene in "Drugs—Use, Misuse, Abuse, Guidance for Families" in a new publication from the Public Affairs Committee, a nonprofit educational organization with headquarters in New York.

She defines terms as a starter. First, a drug, it's something other than food that has an effect on the central nervous system or other systems of the body. These can be beneficial or harmful.

Drug misuse is "taking a substance for its intended purpose, but not in the appropriate amount, frequency, strength, or manner."

And drug abuse is "deliberately taking a substance for other than its intended purpose and in a manner that can result in damage to the person's health or his ability to function."

There are drugs it would take a book to name, but generally they fall in the categories of narcotics (addicting), depressants (alcohol, sleeping pills, some tranquilizers), stimulants (pep pills, "speed"), and hallucinogens (LSD).

When it comes to young people's abuse, alcohol now exceeds all other dangerous drugs combined, says Ms. Hill. "Whether or not adults like it," she writes, "young people have incorporated drugs into their culture."

She cites several studies of drug abuse and why. One of them asked teens how parents could contribute to the needs of children and thus help cut the need for drugs.

Some suggestions: Parents, cut down on drinking and pill popping, stay home from booze parties once in a while, listen, be more openminded, give kids enough love so they don't have to search for it in drugs, be parents, not buddies.

Accept parent responsibilities, quit spoiling kids, quit trying to buy happiness, look to the "real things" in life.

Let me tell you something. I thought a long time before I decided to write this column. I mean, this country has enough on its mind what with the price of oil, the unemployment rate, and the scarcity of energy.

But... how do you say good-bye to an old hot water heater?

Answer: Very slowly. Maybe some of you have never had the problem of replacing your hot water heater. I hope it is something you never have to live through. If there's anything worse than not having a hot water heater, it's having two of them.

The list of people who do not want your old one would reach up to your elbow.

First, I approached the outfit who sold us the new one. They said there was no market for resale in an old hot water heater.

Then I called the service agencies who said they could find no therapeutic value in picking it up, let alone fixing it.

I called a junk dealer who said, "What is this, lady? An invitation to attend a hernia?"

Then an incredible phenomenon took place. For 26 years, my husband and I have sustained our marriage on a 50-50 basis. All of a sudden, the broken hot water heater not only assumed a sex, but without benefit of a hearing, I assumed its custody... all 100 per cent of it.

"When are you going to get rid of her?" asked my husband.

"Her who?"

"Her. The hot water heater."

"If things keep going the way they've been going, we may have to put her in the spare bedroom."

As the weeks wore on, I considered planting flowers in it, putting four wheels on it and driving it, slipcovering it, putting it on the porch, or putting it in my car, locking all the doors, and waiting for someone to steal it.

Today, it stands in the garage... a monument to man's over-enthusiasm for technology.

Can't you see life from another planet in the year 2001, finding an entire earth littered with the remains of billions of hot water heaters and reporting, "They were a tall race with a 30-40 gallon capacity and very little expression."

"Did you bring one back so we could study it?" asks his leader.

"Hey, man... that's not my job!"

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: We'd like to share one of our favorite hints with you and our readers.

As cat lovers and apartment dwellers, we have found a less unpleasant way to clean that litter tray and, in the process, make the litter last twice as long.

We merely line the kitty box with a sheet of one-half inch wire mesh screening before filling the box with litter.

When cleaning time comes, simply fold that screening to the center, shake gently and presto — the clean litter sifts back into the box and the dirty litter and droppings are left behind for easy disposal.

In this way, the box need only be emptied every other time you clean and the wire mesh may be used over and over.

This is one way of cutting corners that makes life a little easier for two college girls trying to meet expenses.

We hope it will work for other cat lovers as well.

Meg and Linda

You gals sure had on your thinking caps when you "think" up this gem. Bless you for writing.

Dear Heloise: When I put anything on the stove to cook and I want to leave the kitchen, I set my small timer for the approximate cooking time and take it with me.

When the bell rings, I know it is time to return to the kitchen, thus avoiding any burned food.

Mrs. Henry Walker

Dear Heloise: When I had to have new burner plates for my electric stove, I kept the old ones.

Now when I do canning in the summer and fall, or cook something for a long period of time, I use my old beat up burner plates.

When all the cooking is done, I put back on my two new ones.

Bright idea. Now the new burner plates will keep new looking much longer.

Dear Heloise: When I run out of milk I sometimes use ice cream on my cereal.

I put ice cream in a glass, pour some hot water over it and stir well.

Really tastes good!

Dear Heloise: When I run out of milk I sometimes use ice cream on my cereal.

Bet ice cream would be delicious on hot cereal!

Dear Heloise: I have a hint for those girls who still use an eyelash curler.

After awhile the curler gets sticky with mascara. This makes the lashes stick together.

I take some nail polish remover on a tissue and rub off the old mascara.

It works great and the curler is just like new.

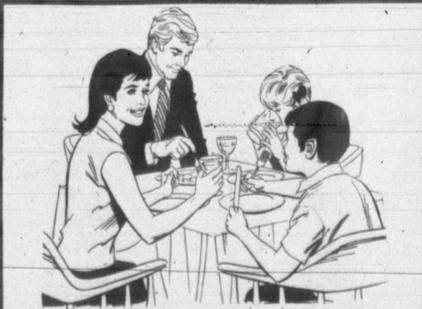

Dear Heloise: When I find a store brand of canned goods that I think is a good buy, I keep the label with my shopping coupons, etc.

Then I don't have to try to remember whether or not that particular brand is OK when I have to replenish my cans of vegetables.

Dear Heloise: If you want to light a candle in a tall glass or any hard to reach pilot light, use a long piece of spaghetti.

Light it with a match and no problems! Yes, that spaghetti will burn.

Bryant, Loved, Respected By Those In Trade

Amarillo Globe - News sports writer Tommy Bryant died Monday of an apparent heart attack.

Bryant, 40, was one of the most respected workers in his trade and was one of only a handful of people I can actually say I wanted to pattern my work after. Bryant was sports editor at the Globe

News from 1966-69, then served a five-year stint as West Texas State's sports information director. He returned to the Amarillo newspaper Sept. 1, 1974.

Bryant was a credit to his profession. I met him while a staffer in the Globe - News sports department in 1972, when he was WT's SID. His regular visits to the sports department were something to which I looked forward - it was his overabundance of enthusiasm and his great willingness to converse about the Buffaloes and other sports areas.

West Texas State each year holds its annual Press Day, when writers and other members of the area news media gather in Canyon to interview coaches and players

For two years I was able to attend while Bryant was in charge of the event. His organization of Press Day, coupled with his eagerness to make sure every member and gave the event first-rate coverage. I was lax.

Bryant's no long SID wasn't at Press Day Saturday. It wasn't the same.

Bryant's coverage of Pampa's Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament in late July embarrassed me. While he was inclusive of the all-important details of the tourney and gave the event first-rate coverage. I was lax.

Garet Von Netzer, Amarillo sports editor, said in a column today, "Tommy was knowledgeable, on all sports and during all seasons. He was a sports fan, yet retained his objectivity. He was extremely conscientious, was always more concerned with doing a job right than how long it might take, and his concern for both winners and losers in this world of sport was sincere."

Tribe Trips Texans

UPI Sports Writer
It was only a year ago that Rico Carty was playing baseball in the Mexican League, far from the spotlight of the major leagues where he once hit .366 and won a National League batting title.

And it was only a year ago Boog Powell suffered in agony on the Baltimore Orioles' bench, seemingly over the hill and well on the road to retirement, no longer the awesome slugger who terrorized American League pitchers for more than a decade.

Today, Carty and Powell are helping Cleveland Indians Player-Manager Frank Robinson become just Manager Frank Robinson.

Cleveland swept a doubleheader Monday night from the Texas Rangers, 4-2 and 4-3. "The way Carty and Powell have been going, I can't even put myself in the lineup."

Carty, who has been on a tear in recent weeks, slammed his 14th homer, a two-run shot off Ferguson Jenkins, to insure Cleveland's sweep after Powell blasted his 20th homer and drove in three runs in the first game victory.

"I don't like to predict how long I'll play," said the 35-year-old Carty, who entered the season with a .308 lifetime batting average. "I just take things year by year because you never know what's going to happen. I love the game and I just want to play as long as I can."

Powell, traded to Cleveland just before spring training, cites his freedom from injury, a change in scenery and his reunion with former Baltimore teammate Robinson as the major factors in his comeback.

"I feel great and I'm happy to play regularly," said Powell, who has rebounded from a mediocre season (.265, 12 homers and 45 RBIs) with a .309 average in addition to driving in 68 runs and hitting 20 homers. "I've had no injuries and it's a combination of things this year that have made me have a good season. Robinson, the fans and the city of Cleveland have all been great."

"I was ready last year but they just wouldn't play me at Baltimore. The fans, the ballclub, the newspapers all got down on me. It was good a change to come to Cleveland."

In the only other American League games, Minnesota ripped Baltimore 6-1, Detroit trimmed Oakland 5-3 and California shaded Milwaukee 5-4.

In the National League, Cincinnati edged St. Louis 3-

2. Philadelphia whipped Atlanta 6-3, Los Angeles downed Chicago 3-1, Montreal beat San Diego 4-1 in the before losing 5-2 and Houston blanked New York 4-0.

Twins 6, Orioles 1
Dave Goltz scattered six hits to gain his 11th victory and Dan Ford and John Briggs each reached score-armed loser Mike Torrez for two-run singles as Minnesota prevented Baltimore from gaining in the AL East on idle Boston. The second-place Orioles now trail the Red Sox by seven games.

Tigers 5, A's 3
Bill Freehan slugged a three-run homer to power Detroit to its third victory in a row following a 19-game losing streak. Singles by Gary Sutherland and Dan Meyer preceded Freehan's 11th homer and helped Joe Coleman gain his first victory in over a month. The loss cut Oakland's lead in the West to 5½ games over idle Kansas City as Vida Blue suffered his 10th against 16 victories.

Angels 5, Brewers 4
Lee Stanton's three-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth gave California its victory over Milwaukee. Adrian Garrett, who had homered previously, started the rally with a single which knocked out starter Tom Hausman and brought on Tom Murphy, who had 16 saves. Bruce Bochte singled to set the stage for Stanton's 11th homer. The homers by Stanton and Garrett marked the first time since July 1 the Angels have had two homers in a game.

CSU Opens With Texas

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) - The Colorado State University Rams are going to have a better football team this season than they did a year ago, says head coach Sark Arslanian. But he adds it may be a lot tougher to improve on last year's record. Colorado State University opens the season Sept. 13 against Texas in Austin followed by a home opener Sept. 20 against Brigham Young University.

Chiefs Destroy Cowboys, 26-20

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - Tony Adams waited and waited and waited.

Then he sent 35,630 Kansas City Chiefs fans into ecstasy Monday night with a 63-yard bomb that led to a 26-20 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

The pass, which carried about 75 yards in the air, was caught by Andy Hamilton before Charlie Waters dragged him down on the Dallas seven.

Two plays later, Adams ran a bootleg play and tossed a four-yard scoring strike to tight end Billy Masters with 46 seconds to play.

"This is just a great feeling," the 25-year-old Adams said. "I just feel great about the whole thing. We didn't have any interceptions and only one fumble so, overall, I thought we did a pretty good job."

Asked about the length of his pass to Hamilton, who was knocked senseless on the play, Adams retorted, "Under stress and strain, you can do peculiar things. You don't tend to think about how far you've got to throw it. I knew he was far enough down there that I had to throw it with everything I had."

Adams worked the second half after 19-year veteran Len Dawson played the first half. The Cowboys worked under a similar scheme, using Roger Staubach the first half and Clint Longley the last 30 minutes in the National Football League exhibition game.

Kansas City Coach Paul Wiggin enjoyed his first victory as a head coach, while the Cowboys suffered their second straight loss.

"I thought both quarterbacks did a fine job," said Wiggin. "They're both very similar, you know."

"I'm excited. I was sick last week (after a 10-3 loss to St. Louis). This means a lot to me. Victories are victories and I'm happy."

Kiner Among Hall Honorees

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) - Ralph Kiner, former seven-time National League home run king, accepted his Hall of Fame plaque from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and stepped to the microphone to address the crowd attending Monday's induction ceremonies.

Then, turning to a 74-year old black man who never played a day in the major leagues, Kiner said, "Judy, you're a hard act to follow."

Except, of course, it was no act when William (Judy) Johnson, who spent his entire career in the old Negro Leagues before Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color line in 1947, broke down during his acceptance speech. The crowd of 7,500 gathered on the lawn adjacent to the Hall of Fame understood and gave the old man a rousing ovation.

Johnson's achievements in baseball are largely lost in the mists of those old barnstorming leagues - he played for such teams as Hilldale, the Homestead Grays, Darby Daisies and Pittsburgh Crawfords from 1921 through 1938 before there even was a Hall of Fame - and until recently he could never have dreamed of being voted into the shrine.

Johnson had introduced members of his family and friends and was saying, "so many people have been good to me coming up," when he broke down. He stood holding his right hand over his face for about two minutes, then said, "I'll be all right," when a member of the Hall of Fame Committee stepped to his side.

He then recalled that his father wanted him to be a professional boxer and that his sparring partner as a boy was his sister.

"My dad cautioned me not to hit her in the face, the breast or the stomach," he said as the crowd laughed. "But one day her boxing glove flew off and as she stooped to pick it up, well, I guess I don't have to finish the story. Anyway, after that my dad said, 'well, I guess you might as well go try to play baseball.'"

"I hope I can make many more trips here," he said as his voice cracked again. "To all of you who came... God bless you." Besides Kiner and Johnson, others inducted were Earl Averill, Bucky Harris and Billy Herman.

Kiner, poised and articulate, told humorous stories about the poor Pittsburgh Pirates teams with which he spent most of his career but closed on a serious note.

"This is something like becoming a doctor and getting that M.D. after your name," he said. "Now I have H.O.F. after mine... it's a tremendous thrill."

The other immortals inducted into the shrine during ceremonies presided over by Kuhn, thanked the sportswriters and committees which elected them.

"The greatest honor of all is to be inducted into the Hall of Fame," said Averill, 72, who played for the Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers and Boston Braves from 1929 through 1941. "I think the Veterans Committee is doing an excellent job - and I hope they keep it up."

"There is no doubt this is the greatest honor I've ever received," said Herman, 66, who played for the Chicago Cubs, Brooklyn Dodgers and Pirates from 1931 through 1947.

Gambling Taxes Boost State Budget in Nevada

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A federal hearing this week on the 44-year-old gambling industry in Nevada is expected to be a far cry from the last time the government scrutinized this state's legal casinos.

"We have lived with and controlled gambling since 1931 and we have a social acceptance here that has not been gained in other states," says Peter Echeverria, chairman of the Nevada Gaming Commission.

He will be one of the early witnesses before the National Review Commission on gambling beginning Monday. The commission will hold hearings the following three days in Las Vegas.

Nevada is the only state with wide-open gambling, but several others are considering moving into the casino business.

Last year, Nevada casinos reported gross winnings of $1 billion before taxes and business expenses. Direct taxes from the clubs support about 46 per cent of the state's general fund budget.

The tone of this hearing is expected to be a marked change from the last time a national committee focused its attention on the Nevada gambling industry. That was in the 1950's when the late Sen. Estes Kefauver led an investigation into hoodlum elements in Nevada casinos.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., a member of the national committee, says he doesn't foresee any problems for Nevada casinos arising from this study.

Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, who will testify at the hearing, plans to trace the development of gambling in Nevada and tell what it means to the state.

Dock Workers Will Not Load Grain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany today reaffirmed that dock workers will refuse to load grain bound for the Soviet Union aboard ships until they are assured by the Ford administration that American consumers and shippers are protected.

Meany's announcement followed a meeting with leaders of four maritime unions. It emphasized earlier threats that the grain would not be loaded.

Meany said he was not seeking a meeting with administration officials, nor would he outline specific assurances the union wanted before lifting the boycott.

Asked if administration officials were expected to come to him, he replied: "You bet your life they are — with Dr.

Kissinger at the head of the parade."

He said the maritime unions were "not going to load any grain to the Soviet Union... unless and until a policy is set forth and agreed to protect the consumer and to protect the American shipping industry."

Citing figures showing that the prices of American grains have increased drastically since the Russian sales began last month, Meany said he wanted the U.S. government to buy the grain from the farmers and then sell it to the Soviet Union. He said this would assure farmers and consumers a fair price.

Meany said that between July 1 and August 14 the price of flour rose 23 per cent, wheat rose 36 per cent, corn 13 per cent, and soybeans, 20 per cent.

New Teachers

New teachers in the Pampa Schools were honored Monday at a luncheon in the Coronado Inn by the Education Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Man Threatens Ford

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A Shreveport, La., man who served a prison term for threatening the life of former President Richard Nixon has been charged with threatening to kill President Ford.

The suspect, Thomas D. Elbert, 34, who served five years in the federal prison in Louisville, Ky., for threatening to kill Nixon, was held Monday in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Elbert is the second Shreveport resident convicted of threatening to kill the president. George Herman Rogers of Shreveport was also convicted of threatening Nixon, but the conviction was overturned. Rogers, however, is still in prison in Texarkana, Tex., awaiting a required review of his case by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Elbert was arrested Saturday and accused of telephoning the Sacramento Secret Service office and saying, "I'm going to kill your boss." Ford is scheduled to make an appearance in the California capital Sept. 5.

Police said Elbert identified himself during the telephone call.

Free Lunch Scale Set

The family income scale for determining eligibility for children unable to pay full price for school lunches was released today by the Pampa Independent School District Cafeteria Division.

A family with one child and an annual income of $2,580 will be eligible for the free lunch program.

Other eligible includes a family with two children with an income of $3,390; a family with three, $4,200; a family with four, $5,010; a family with five $5,750; with six, 16,490; with seven, $7,160; with eight, $7,830; with nine $8,440; with 10 children, $9,050; with 11, $9,650; for 12, $10,250.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free meals. In addition, families not meeting

Youngsters Complete Swim Classes

Doris Wilson is working in the Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross office this week, while Libby Shotwell is vacationing.

Betty Moody from Childress, a Red Cross case worker in the Lefors tornado area, as in Pampa recently to close out some of the last cases left from the disaster.

Reports indicated that Lefors residents are pleased with the help Red Cross extended during the crises.

Announcement was made that a new Life Buoy Ring and New Life Preserver has arrived and will be available to begin the season next year. Tom Watson and Merita Carter have completed a junior and senior life saving class at the County Club Pool. Junior life saving cards were presented Lisa Raymond and Cindy Raymond. Senior life saving cards were distributed to Ann Casey, Scott White, Gail Simon, Lee Ann Cantrell and Sara Riehart.

Vicki Carter completed a beginners swimmer class at the Pampa Youth Center. Those who passed the course include Dara Deborn, Theresa Graham, Sheila Brock, Chondra Boehmisch, Becky Sandford and Stephanie Trollinger.

The National Service to Military Families Director in Washington reports that mail is being delivered to base facilities and service in Turkey. The commercial phone communications are operating normally, but they are difficult under the best of circumstances.

Olds Family Visits Rally in Manitoba

Gene and Willetta Olds, their daughter, Liz, and her friend, Ann Johnson, of Pampa were among the record-breaking 4,209 travel trailer families attending the 18th International Rally of the Wally Byam Caravan Club this summer here June 28 in Brandon, Manitoba.

Following the rally, the Olds party will travel to Winnipeg to visit relatives before returning home. Olds is a field supervisor for Phillips Petroleum Company, and his wife, Willetta, teaches arts and crafts in high school.

The Wally Byam Caravan Club's 18th International Rally was the largest such social event ever in the Western Hemisphere and the largest gathering of single make (Airstream) trailers held throughout the world.

BIRD ALLERGY
WINNIPEG, Canada (UPI) — If the person who likes birds and is around them all the time starts coughing, wheezing, losing weight and not feeling so good, he may be in real danger, indicates an allergy research team at the University of Manitoba Health Sciences Centre.

He may be suffering from "bird fancier's lung," an allergic lung inflammation that eventually results in permanent scarring, or pulmonary fibrosis, and even death.

Dr. Carl J. Zylak and a team of physicians recently completed a study of patients with this allergic reaction and point out that the disease can be cured if detected early. Diagnosis requires X-ray studies of the lungs in addition to the usual laboratory and allergy tests.

McLean Hospital Still Loses Money, Patients

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The number of patient days at McLean General Hospital dropped to 997 for the first seven months of this year — the lowest in five years.

The hospital has lost $60,154.36 this year — the largest loss recorded in a seven-month period.

"Is the McLean hospital steadily deteriorating? Are folks getting healthier?" inquired Fred Neslage, chairman of the Highland General Hospital Board of Managers, during a meeting Monday night.

He noted that for the first time in five years, the patient census dropped to less than 1,000 in a seven-month period. The deficit at McLean is offset by revenue from paying patients at Highland General Hospital.

Board members discussed the financial picture at McLean during each monthly meeting, but to date have found no way to solve the problem.

"Our responsibility is to run the hospital to the best of our ability, but some day someone is going to look at this and want to cut our throats," Neslage commented about patients and loss of money. The hospital recorded 92 patient days in July with an average of less than three patients per day and a revenue loss of $6,396.76.

"Are we doing what we are supposed to?" Neslage inquired. The McLean General Hospital is a Gray County-owned institution and voters approved its construction at the polls several years ago.

Board members are appointed by the Gray County commissioners Court, and copies of the financial statements are forwarded to the Commissioners regularly.

In answer to the question from

Neslage, Robert Monogue, administrator, replied:

"I have no thoughts nor any direction. As I see it this is a county institution and we're doing the best we can."

"I don't think when the hospital was built whether or not it made money was ever a question," Monogue added. Neslage repeated that the board is "trying to do the best it can, but we have an impossible situation."

As board members, Neslage said, "We are representing the whole county."

"But we don't have enough patients to make the hospital not lose money."

Occupancy at the 126 bed Highland General Hospital was 57 per cent in July.

Neslage noted the reports show "we made $105 at Highland in July and lost $6,000 (plus) at McLean."

Highland General admitted 406 patients and recorded 2,117 patient days in July.

During the first seven months this year, High employees admitted 3,215 patients for a total of 18,027 patient days.

Are Mental Patients Guinea Pigs for Drugs?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Janet Gotkin considers herself a psychiatric guinea pig.

Wade Hudson, another former mental patient, said tranquilizers are so commonly administered in hospitals that "one injection every week or two and you have a nation of zombies, easily controlled."

Mrs. Gotkin told a Senate judiciary subcommittee Monday she got over 100 electroshock treatments and an estimated 1 million milligrams of tranquilizers during a 10-year period as a part time patient in three mental hospitals.

She said that does not make her unique.

"I am one of thousands," she said. "What makes my story of particular note is that I survived, intact, and am here to speak to you today instead of moldering, lethargic and drugged, a resident of the back wards."

Mrs. Gotkin, 32, of Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., was one of six former mental patients who appeared before the panel investigating the improper use of drugs in adult and juvenile institutions.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., subcommittee chairman, called the procedure "chemical straitjacketing."

Mrs. Gotkin said she was first put in a mental hospital in 1961 after she slashed her wrist in a psychiatrist's office, and when released 10 months later "started the nightmare of being a psychiatric druggie."

She said she "freaked out" on some drugs, overdosed on others, and felt in bondage to one tranquilizer, Thorazine, which she said was administered in large doses.

Others appearing before Bayh gave similar stories of massive infusion of drugs during their stays at mental hospitals, often to the point where they lost physical control, sometimes unable to speak or read.

But Dr. Edward Kaufman, medical director of the Lower East Side Service Center in New York City, countered that without the drugs "some people would not be able to function."

Defense Calls Kidnapers Amateurs Involved in Lark

NEW YORK (UPI) — A court-appointed defense lawyer says a bachelor fireman and his neighbor, suspects in the $2.3 million kidnaping of whisky heir Samuel Bronfman II, were "two amateurs involved in some sort of lark."

The motive for the bungled kidnaping was not clear. But the known concern of the defendants — both Irish-born — about strife in Northern Ireland gave rise to speculation they had meant to contribute some of the ransom money to the Irish Republican Army.

IRA spokesmen in both Dublin and Belfast denied any connection with the suspects. The IRA member in Dublin said, "We have never heard of either of the two men in any connection."

Mel P. Lynch, 37, a Brooklyn fireman, was held on $500,000 bail. His neighbor, Dominic Byrne, 53, a limousine service operator, was held on $200,000. The two men were charged with using the U.S. mail to send a note demanding $4.6 million in ransom for the return of Bronfman, heir to the billion-dollar Seagram's whisky fortune. The ransom demand later was cut in half, paid by Bronfman's father, and recovered Sunday in a Brooklyn apartment.

There was no ground for federal kidnaping charges against them because they crossed no state lines. But authorities said the pair would be charged with kidnaping under state law.

U.S. Attorney Paul Curran asked for higher bail. He argued there is "a real danger of flight" because "the United States has no extradition treaty with the Republic of Ireland."

Defense attorneys argued the bail set by U.S. Magistrate Martin Jacobs was too high. William Higgins, Lynch's court-appointed attorney, described the suspects as "two amateurs involved in some sort of lark." Byrne's lawyer, Peter DeBlasio, said his client "is the one who brought this case to a culmination and climax safely."

FBI Agent Joseph Conley said the ransom note warned Edgar Bronfman "that both he and his son would die if the payment was not made as instructed."

The 21-year-old kidnap victim slept until noon Monday at his father's Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

A family spokesman said young Bronfman is "in fine shape," although he had had some initial difficulty in standing and seeing after being bound and blindfolded for eight days.

The first phone directory, printed on yellow paper, was issued in 1883 in Cheyenne, Wyo.

Southwell Supply Company

Paul Simmons, owner and manager

Paul Simmons, owner and manager of Southwell 805 S. Cuyler, said that belt sales are up at the firm.

"Our belt sales have been greater in the past six months than in any of the past-10 years," Simmons said. "We are the representatives for Goodyear V belts — both wholesale and retail."

Simmons started his company in 1956 after graduating from West Texas State University in Canyon. His college career was interrupted by a two year stint in the army.

Southwell's business is not limited to the Pampa area.

"We sell all over the country," Simmons said. The company deals primarily in replaceable parts for drilling and well servicing operations.

"We sell drilling lines, cable tool lines, and we also handle manila rope for catlines and soft rope for cable tool and well service operations," Simmons said.

About five months ago Simmons added a sideline to his company.

"We've gotten into the water purification business with the PCP Mark II water purifier," he said. "It utilizes activated charcoal granules and impregnated silver."

Concerning his supply business, Simmons said "We've had our problems. There has been a real shortage of materials."

He said one thing that would help oil production in the Pampa area would be the decontrol of old oil prices.

"It would give an incentive for people to do something with their wells," he said. "Otherwise they will be plugging them in many cases."
