Cleanest Alley In Town

A. J. Hindman of 416 N. Starkweather says "This is the cleanest alley in town. No question about that." A man who likes everything neat and tidy, Hindman not only keeps the alley as orderly as he keeps his yard, he also mows the grass around a vacant house on property that is adjacent to the alley. And before the Baptist church across the street paved its parking lot, Hindman kept it mowed and trimmed around the edges. "I go all over this neighborhood mowing," he said. "And if I see a piece of paper that's blown in, I pick it up right then."

Jury Clears Senator Of All Bribery Charges

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Former U.S. Sen. Edward Gurney was expansive, his codefendants were elated and jurors who cleared them of all but a few charges were sharply critical of the government.

The 164-day trial of Gurney and his associates on charges growing out of a $400,000 slush fund ended Wednesday. The 61-year-old Republican was acquitted of bribery, receiving unlawful compensation and three counts of lying to a grand jury.

The six men and six women deadlocked on two counts — 7-5 for acquittal on the conspiracy count and 9-3 for conviction on another count of lying to a grand jury.

The jury also acquitted Joseph Bastien, Gurney's aide, on an unlawful compensation count and deadlocked on a conspiracy count against him. Federal Housing Administration officials Ralph Koontz and K. Wayne Swiger both were found innocent of conspiracy.

The judge declared a mistrial on the deadlocked issues. Gurney said he didn't figure the government would attempt another trial.

"The government had its shot," said Gurney, staunchest defender of former President Richard Nixon on the Watergate Committee.

When the jurors were dismissed Wednesday, Gurney said he didn't know where to pin the blame for his trouble.

"I wish I knew," Gurney said as he stood sweating in the Florida sun outside the courthouse. "Sometimes these things happen because someone likes to pin a big hide on the wall. I'm sure the decision was made in Washington."

Jury foreman James Baker said, "The evidence they gave us to work with was very poor."

Surprise! Prices on Food, Farm Products Rise Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spurred by the price of farm products and foods, wholesale prices rose 1.2 per cent in July, the third increase in the last four months, the Labor Department reported today.

Grain products alone jumped nearly 8 per cent and government analysts believed the increase may have been caused in part by early rumors of the Soviet grain sale.

According to the analysts, increases in wholesale products were expected to be much greater in August, reflecting not only the grain sale but also announced price increases in steel, aluminum and oil.

The July wholesale price increase followed a 0.1 per cent drop in June. But wholesale prices also had registered increases in April and May following a string of declines during the winter.

Wholesale prices have risen 8.7 per cent in the past 12 months. The latest increase complicates administration predictions that inflationary pressures are easing, but the rate is still softer than the trend late last year when wholesale farm and industrial prices were increasing at a rate better than 20 per cent annually.

The wholesale price index stands at 175.7, compared to a 1967 base of 100. This means that a representative sample of commodities sold in wholesale markets rose in price from $100 eight years ago to $175.70 last month.

Farm and food prices, which normally decline in July, rose a significant 4.6 per cent while industrial prices increased 0.4 per cent—the same increase they registered the previous month.

The increases in farm products, foods and industrial commodities took normal seasonal factors into account. On an unadjusted basis, farm products and food rose 3.2 per cent and industrial commodities were up 0.3 per cent.

Grain prices rose 7.9 per cent last month after declining the previous month. There were also sharp price increases on fresh and dried vegetables and hogs.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz has predicted a record U.S. grain crop this year and denied that recent large sales of wheat and other grain to the Soviet Union will result in supermarket hikes on bread and other items.

Prices of most other farm prices also moved up in July. But those for fruits, leaf tobacco and cattle decreased.

The increase in foods reflected a rise in fats and oils, meats, poultry, fish, and sugar. Dairy products, cereal and bakery products also rose, but fruits and vegetables, beverage materials and other processed foods were lower on the average.

Congressman Tries To Ban Spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the beginning of each Congress he served in, Republican H.R. Gross would introduce a bill to ban any spending until the national debt was retired and the federal budget balanced.

Even though he is retired, Gross remains tightfisted and crusty as he ever was in 26 years of representing Iowa in the House.

Wednesday he sent an angry letter to President Ford telling him to veto legislation giving members of Congress a pay increase of about $3,000.

The way in which Gross announced his views was typical of his earlier reluctance to spend government money. The carbon copy of his letter, to Ford was typed on the back of his old congressional stationery.

The copy was mailed to journalists in one of his old envelopes. But he had carefully crossed out the words "Official Business" and placed a 10-cent stamp over the frank that lets congressmen send mail free.

The irascible Gross told Ford, "Unless you exercise your veto you will have approved an act of irresponsibility on the part of a majority of Congress which brazenly seeks to protect its selfish ends."

"Every candidate for Congress last November — and there was no lack of them — knew that the pay was $42,500 a year," Gross said. "It is not of record that a single one of them told the voters that if elected they would immediately move to fatten their pay checks."

As for the extra pay the bill would give political appointees below cabinet level, who now earn in the high $30,000 range, Gross said that "despite anguished bleats that these top levels are underpaid, defeated members of Congress and others are delighted to get jobs at these pay levels."

The bill ties congressional and other federal pay scales to an intricate formula comparing them to nongovernment wages. The comparison is expected to result in a raise of more than $3,000 a year for members of Congress beginning this fall.

Senator John Tower, R-Wichita Falls, supported the raise while Lloyd Bentsen, D-Houston, opposed it. Bentsen also supported an unsuccessful amendment which would have exempted Congress from the pay hikes.

Washington (UPI) — The FBI is spending almost $83 million of a near half-billion dollar annual budget on counterespionage, internal security and intelligence regarding organized and general crime, a bureau official said today.

Eugene W. Walsh, assistant director of the bureau's Administrative Division, gave the first public details on the FBI's budget in testimony before the House Select Committee on Intelligence.

He declined under questioning to give an exact breakdown of expenditures for some 350 projects but said the overall FBI budget for the current fiscal year is $499,546,000 of which $82,488,000 concerns classified matters.

The classified figures would include internal security, counterespionage and intelligence activities on both organized and ordinary crime, he said.

Chairman Otis Pike, D-N.Y., commented that the FBI budget has been passed for years unquestioned by Congress.

"It is difficult to find out how much is being spent gathering intelligence against American citizens and foreign citizens," he said. "What is the total budget of the FBI?"

Walsh gave the figures.

"How much of that is secret?" asked Pike.

"I can't tell you exactly," Walsh responded.

"You don't know?" Pike persisted.

"We are seeking not to reveal specific resources and manpower committed to counterintelligence," Walsh said. But pressed on how much of the total budget was secret finally responded, "We consider $82,488,000 as classified."

CIA Director William Colby testified earlier the Pentagon's

FBI Spends $82 Million On Counterespionage

National Security Agency eavesdrops from time to time on telephone calls by Americans to foreign countries and that the spy agency also has printed bogus foreign money.

But he told the House Select Committee on Intelligence Wednesday, the Central Intelligence Agency has never counterfeited U.S. money or securities in its worldwide activities.

The committee, probing all phases of American intelligence, today called in Justice Department officials for an accounting on where and how taxpayer money is spent in the spy business.

Colby admitted under questioning Wednesday that the NSA, the Pentagon agency that specializes in breaking codes, monitors some long distance telephone and cable traffic by Americans in keeping a watch on communications by foreigners.

"Does that involve American citizens on one end?" asked Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who charged the monitoring was illegal.

"It's technically impossible to separate it," Colby said, adding later that "I really think we would do better to discuss this in executive session."

But before the committee went into closed session, Colby listed some interesting CIA money practices. He said the agency sometimes printed foreign currencies, had given presents to foreign leaders for intelligence reasons, that it used bribery in covert activities and it had a broker dabble in the stock market for its pension fund.

"We cannot simply adhere to a rigid plan when the world around us is changing," he said in a 26-page statement defending CIA operations.

Colby, who is overall director of all intelligence operations, said the CIA was careful with the taxpayers' money, even turning a profit on its Air American airline in Southeast Asia and some other ventures.

Red Terrorists Leave for Libya

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — Five Japanese Red Army terrorists and their five comrades freed from Japanese jails released their last 15 hostages today and took off for Libya aboard a Japanese airliner, ending an 80-hour reign of terror in Kuala Lumpur.

The notorious Red Army group which has carried out massacres, bombings and other outrages throughout the world, shot their way into the U.S. Embassy last Monday and seized 53 hostages including U.S. Consul General Robert Stebbins, two American businessmen and a Swedish diplomat.

The guerrillas freed most of their hostages Thursday and the remainder today in exchange for nine Japanese crewmen to fly the plane, four official guarantors of their safety, and the five Red Army criminals flown here from Japan to meet their ransom demands.

The last five to be released included Stebbins, Gerald Lancaster of Houston, Tex., George Barton, an American whose hometown was not known here, and Swedish Charge d'Affaires Fredrick Bergerstrahle. They said that under the circumstances they believed they had been treated well.

The DC8 lifted off at 5:42 p.m. (6:12 a.m. EDT) on a flight expected to take it first to Colombo, Sri Lanka (Ceylon), and then to Aden, South Yemen, for refueling stops before it reaches Tripoli.

The departure was delayed because India and Iran refused permission for the plane to fly over their territories and Malaysian and Japanese authorities spent a feverish six hours mapping out an alternative route over the Indian Ocean to skirt the two countries.

The end of the affair came almost as swiftly and suddenly as the beginning.

The terrorists and their hostages had been sitting inside the parked DC8 for the last 30 hours while Malaysian and Japanese governments worked desperately to find a country which would receive the guerrillas and to work out a flight plan.

Then with the flight plan arranged the Red Army group emerged from the plane carrying hand grenades and homemade bombs in two bags—they had threatened many times to blow up all 53 of their hostages. Malaysian army bomb squad men transferred the devices into four smaller bags filled with dirt. The explosives were transported across the runway and detonated in an area 400 yards from the plane where they could do no damage.

One terrorist and one bomb squad soldier in the fuse and raced away, throwing themselves flat as the explosives went up with a roar that echoed through the airport. A black cloud of smoke rose hundreds of feet into the air from the grassy area.

The signal for the beginning of the hostage exchange came at 5 p.m. 5:30 a.m. EDT when a black-suited Red Army gunman came to the head of the plane ramp and waved a white handkerchief toward the terminal building.

From then on it all went like clockwork.

Chief pilot Tomio Masuko, his co-pilot and a flight engineer moved toward the plane, were searched by the guerrillas and permitted to enter. Masuko is the pilot who once flew a group of Red Army guerrillas to Kuwait.

Then two Japanese government and two Malaysian government officials who are riding the plane to Tripoli as substitute hostages as a guarantee of fair play boarded the plane. Four Malaysian and one Singaporean were released by the terrorists.

The new hostages were Malaysian officials Osman Cassim and Ramli Omar and Japanese officials Ryohei Murata and Matsu Ochi.

The last five hostages including The Americans were lined up at the foot of the plane ramp with two terrorists on each end of the line and the fifth terrorist covering the group with a pistol from the top of the ramp.

The five Japanese Red Army prisoners were escorted to planeside, each of them handcuffed between two Malaysian policemen.

As the police removed the handcuffs one by one the terrorists released their last hostages one by one.

Fire Prevention—Year Around Job in Pampa

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

During the first six months of 1975, Pampa recorded $20,707.25 in fire losses, and damages in one of the largest are still unknown according to Finance Dyer, fire chief.

The largest single fire of 1975 occurred April 16 at Packerland when one man lost his life.

"I don't know how much the loss will total, but I'm sure it is tremendous," Dyer added.

But Packerland is outside the city limits and will not show in Pampa statistics.

The National Fire Prevention Association says 12,000 persons will die this year as a result of fire. An estimated 300,000 injuries are predicted along with $3 billion dollars property loss and $2 1/2 million fire losses.

Theme for this year's Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 5-11, is "Learn Not to Burn."

Dyer says this area has been fortunate to have "no known" cases in the past two years.

Although there have been no known arson fires here this year, Dyer said there have been two or three vacant houses where officials suspected fires were set by vandals.

"But we couldn't pin it down," he added. The last, he said, occurred outside the city and no arson charges were filed since the defendant pleaded guilty to another offense.

The year 1974 was recorded as having losses largest in recent months with 378 calls and total property loss of $755,000.

The reason for the large loss was a tributed fire at the First Baptist Church, which occurred late in 1973 with losses totaled in 1974.

Dyer reminded the community that fire prevention is a year round job. There are one-half million home fires annually in the United States.

"The more you can learn about fire prevention and the more you practice the rules of safety—the more protection you, your family and your home will have against fire," say fire prevention officials.

They estimate that there is a home fire every minute of the year—somewhere in the nation.

Smoking and matches cause more fires than any other single fire hazard, according to national statistics.

"So if you are a smoker, it takes a special effort on your part to prevent fires," officials emphasize.

The National Fire Prevention Association lists these pointers in an attempt to prevent fires:

- Don't run electric wires under the rug.
- People walking on them will soon break them open and electricity will cause a fire.
- Keep wires where you can see them.
- Plan in advance how your family would escape if fire blocked your doors. Also agree to meet outside at one spot so all will know someone isn't trapped.

- If you should be caught in a fire and find it hard to breathe, crawl. That way you will stay below the worst smoke and gases thus providing a better chance of getting out.
- Don't keep cookies and other treats over the stove. That could lure children over the burners.
- If your clothes should catch fire, drop to the ground or floor and roll. The rolling will squash the fire and help soothe the skin.
- Don't smoke in bed. Most burn victims who fell asleep in bed were absolutely certain that they wouldn't fall asleep while smoking in bed.
- Overheated automobiles.
- Flooded carburetors on cars.
- Children playing with matches.
- Washing clothes in gasoline.
- Fireworks.

These are among the causes for the 30 fire alarms answered during July by the Pampa Fire Department. Ten of the 30 were outside the city limits.

In a breakdown, released today by L.V. Bruce, fire marshal, one was a false alarm; 15 were grass and trash fires, three were dwelling fires, two were emergency or rescue calls and four were automobile fires.

The causes for 11 fires is not known, according to the report.

Match This

Smoking and matches cause more fires than any other fire hazard, according to the National Fire Protection Association. There are over one-half million home fires a year nationally — one a minute.

Moment of Truth Near

Big Mac, the Municipal Assistance Corp. organized to help rescue New York City from bankruptcy, is having trouble marketing its bonds. In spite of an attractive interest rate and the tax-free status of municipal bonds, investors appear to be unconvinced that New York is going to get out of the woods.

This turn of events has revived interest in a proposal that the federal government begin insuring municipal bonds, with a provision that cities pledge themselves to strict budget controls in order to qualify for the insurance. If a city has its fiscal affairs in order, its bonds would sell without any federal backing.

Neither Albany nor Washington can do for New York City what it has to do for itself — face up to the reality that its overgenerous labor contracts, over-stuffed bureaucracy and over-ambitious welfare and education programs can no longer be supported. While the city's problems are financial, their solution calls for a degree of political courage the city administration so far has not been able to muster.

Mayor Abraham Beame is trying again, proposing a freeze or cutback in wages or further layoffs of city employees, raising transit fares and charging tuition at the City University. It will take this and more — mainly a reduction in the massive welfare burden that New York taxpayers now bear.

Beyond this, it will require understanding. If the municipal unions respond with cooperation rather than the defiance with which they greeted an attempt to invoke such economies a month ago, the bruised Big Apple may yet be kept from falling off the tree.

An Event to Treasure

The United States of America has become so concerned about the problem of aliens who enter the country illegally that it may be neglecting those who patiently wait their turn under immigration quotas, enter the United States legally and eventually become citizens. Immigration Commissioner Leonard F. Chapman is calling attention to the fact that the laws and procedures for naturalizing new citizens have not had a significant revision since 1940.

Some of the matters covered in the investigation and questioning of prospective citizens are out of date, he says, and the actual swearing-in ceremony in many federal courts is no ceremony at all — "just like an assembly line," in Mr. Chapman's words.

One reason that immigrants usually make good citizens is that they have to wait and work for privileges that most Americans enjoy as a birthright. While the naturalization laws may need updating, it is more the responsibility of private citizens, through their civic and patriotic organizations, to make naturalization ceremonies something more than an assembly line proceedings for a new citizen.

This Bicentennial era, when the significance of being an American will be much on our minds, is a fine time for our communities to develop more impressive public ceremonies for administering the oath to new citizens. An immigrant who becomes a U.S. citizen in the Bicentennial year of 1976 ought to have something special to remember it by.

Rules Face Challenge

It appears the last word has not been said on the controversial new federal regulations aimed at removing sex discrimination from athletics and many other campus activities at schools and colleges. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is catching it from two sides for its interpretation of a 1972 law that is supposed to deny federal funds to any school that treats the sexes unfairly.

Darrell Royal, president of the American Football Coaches Association, says the requirement that women have equal access to sports programs, or at least the money that supports them, could be disastrous for college athletics. On the other hand, some advocates of equal rights claim the rules are too vague and do not go far enough in opening up academic opportunities for women beyond the area of athletics.

It is obvious enough that Congress opened a can of worms when it adopted the anti-discrimination Title IX amendment in 1972. Fortunately, Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina sees a way for Congress to clarify what it meant to do in that legislation. Under a new law passed in 1974 Congress can indicate by a resolution that HEW is misinterpreting congressional intentions in any educational policy it tries to enforce. This new process of "congressional veto" of a federal agency's directives has never been tested. HEW's awkward attempt to even the score between men and women in athletics offers a good opportunity to try it out.

Your salad days are the time of your green youth.

THIS DIDN'T GO AWAY

Freedom Ideas Gaining

In the year 1975, free enterprise may have few of the votes, but it is gaining intellectual ground. The perception of government as a problem solving catalyst is changing. Its image as a fiscal alchemist is being discredited as the results come in.

On the other hand, a new generation of economists is re-evaluating the potentials of capitalism. In an era of ponderous bureaucracy and 'stagflation,' the historical efficiency of the free market place appear more and more attractive.

Ideas take time to penetrate a culture and in the theory of government as economic catalyst and fiscal alchemist is riding on sheer momentum alone. No one wants the U.S. to follow the lead of Great Britain, where public spending now amounts to 60 per cent of the GNP. The tax state there has clearly run its course.

The foregoing, reminiscent of Ayn Rand's famous condemnation of socialism as being morally, pragmatically and intellectually bankrupt, now openly committed to the unlimited use of raw, brute force, is an excerpt from a speech delivered by Z. D. Bonner, president of Gulf Oil Company, on May 6, 1975. The speech, entitled "Business and Government: Is a New Philosophy Developing?" was made to the Texas Bankers Association on the occasion of its ninety-first annual convention

In Houston, Texas. Although delivered by an oil man, consequently carrying a special import for members of the industry, president Bonner's penetrating observations and remarks apply to our entire economy. We particularly like the optimistic note he struck, saying, in effect, that marketplace morality and reality will prevail over socialistic immorality and myth in the stretch of time. Indeed, the myth of government as a problem solver is being challenged, exposed and discredited.

And nowhere is this more evident than in the area of so-called public but, in reality, government controlled and operated compulsory schooling. The more the system succeeds in forcing children to attend and taxpayers to support it, the more it fails. The growing dissatisfaction with our socialistic school system surfaced in no uncertain terms during a recent conference called in Washington, D.C., to discuss (would you believe it?) the government's role in education and whether the current compulsory system, or freedom, is best for pupils.

The conference, reported on by Copley News Service's Kenneth J. Rabben, split right down the middle as might have been expected. But, what must have been disconcerting for governmentists everywhere, both sides castigated the system, although at times for different reasons. One side of the philosophical aisle maintained that Uncle Sam (i.e., the federal government) should be expelled from the nation's schools for "immoral and perhaps unconstitutional interference with the rights of private citizens to educate their children," the Copley item noted, with most of this group further asserting that "public education is not a legitimate government responsibility," that "it is a hallmark of totalitarianism and, as history shows clearly, was first installed to subjugate youth to the state or church."

The other group, the Copley item noted, was equally dissatisfied with public schools, but its main interest is in loosening the U.S. Supreme Court's tight grip on the public purse so that public funds can be used to support private and religiously affiliated schools.

Ideas, as Victor Hugo pointed out long ago, are powerful movers. We would like to modify that a bit. Principled ideas, proved out by the march of events, are not only powerful, they are irresistible. Freedom, as exemplified by the voluntary exchange of the marketplace, not the legal hooks and pinchers of socialism, is the "wave of the future."

Panel Has Bad Start

The new Federal Election Commission is getting off to a bad start. Created by the 93rd Congress to enforce new federal laws on political financing, the commission has made its debut with a questionable decision arrived at in a questionable way.

The decision is that political parties can accept free services, arena space or other inducements from a city or public agency bidding for a national convention, but not from a private firm in the same city.

There is an element of hypocrisy in this ruling. Many convention bureaus, though public agencies, get their funds from private firms. Isn't the commission simply setting up a system that runs the risk of "laundering" private contributions to a convention? Political parties either should be required to pay all their convention expenses, or should be free to accept help from any public or private sources that want to help.

The commission decided on its policy at a secret meeting. When the six members were quizzed by a Senate committee at confirmation hearings earlier this year, all six said they would favor conducting as much of their business in public as possible. When they got organized and began deliberating a sensitive issue, four of the six voted to keep the press and the public out.

The law should have required an open door policy for a commission with the power to make rules governing our political process.

OSHA And Noise

Businessmen and industrialists, already plagued by OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Act) regulations and inspectors, probably haven't seen anything yet. If OSHA activity, up to now, has been pretty, capricious and arbitrary, just wait until that Labor Department agency gets up a head of steam under what it considers as its mandate to dictate allowable workplace noise levels.

According to the Wall Street Journal (June 28), the Labor Department now plans to strictly enforce noise level limits (90 decibels averaged over an eight-hour period) that have been on the books since 1970: this despite the fact that both President Ford and Secretary of Labor John Dunlop expressed concern that businesses and burdened with too many rules set in Washington.

The Journal went on to describe noise regulations, which OSHA now proposes to strictly enforce, as "the most sweeping, most expensive and most controversial job safety regulations ever proposed by the federal government," pointing out that strict enforcement could cost industry (and ultimately, the consumers) as much as $1 billion.

A foretaste of what OSHA intentions portend, for the newspaper industry in particular and for all industry in general, was provided by an article in the June 14 issue of Editor and Publisher magazine describing the efforts of the Kansas City Star to please OSHA bureaucrats.

Told by OSHA inspectors that its presses were too noisy, the Star pointed out that "ear muffs" protectors provided for pressmen reduced noise to acceptable levels. No go, was OSHA's rejoinder; the presses themselves must be quieter.

Now, as Editor and Publisher article went on to point out, "There is no such thing as a quiet newspaper press — except when its not running."

Moreover, we are constrained to add, even if it were possible to build a press to conform to OSHA whims, the costs of purchasing and installing it would drive many marginal newspapers to the wall and bankruptcy.

Even so, the Kansas City Star tried to comply with OSHA dictates. Unable to purchase a "quiet" press, or to muffle the one it already had, the Star undertook a project to surround its press with a sound-proof enclosure at an estimated cost of $150,000.

And, now, with the project only partially completed (did you ever try to build an enclosure around a press while getting out a newspaper on a daily basis?), the enclosure is causing more problems than it has any likelihood of solving.

In the first place, Star pressmen complain, the enclosure gets in the way of operations. And, in the second place, it's downright dangerous. Safety around a newspaper press, explained Star mechanical superintendent and safety director Jack Byers, depends to a large extent upon the pressmen being able to see each other as they work, and the enclosure doesn't permit that. Consequently, he pointed out to E&P, the attempt to satisfy OSHA whims "presents hazard to pressmen by taking them out of view of their fellow workers. It does them more harm than food. But we don't have a choice. If we didn't have to finish (the enclosure project), I wouldn't," he said.

Meanwhile, citing scientific evidence that workers around noisy machinery are best protected by relatively inexpensive ear muffs or molded earplugs, Bill Rinehart, vice president of American Newspaper Association (ANPA), is attempting to convince lawmakers that a series of public hearings that OSHA dictated "solutions" are needlessly expensive.

We wish him well.

According to one word wit, in the world of fashion, time is anything that lasts longer than one season.

Buxom Gal Sells Peek And, With It, Her Good Name

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was invited to a house party last Saturday given by a young woman who works with me. (I'm a 23-year-old divorcee.)

A rather good-looking guy introduced himself and said, "Another fellow and I have a $20 bet on. He says you're wearing false, and I say you're not. If you prove it to me, the $20 is yours."

So it happens that I am 38-26-34, and I don't need falsies, so I said, "You win." Then I took him into the bedroom, unbuttoned my blouse just far enough to prove it and gave him a quick look.

He collected the $20 from his friend and gave it to me. I told him I was going to put it in the poor box at church the next morning, which is exactly what I did.

On Monday it was all over the office that I had done a strip-tease dance at the party!

Abby, I swear, I'm telling it like it was. Do you think what I did was so terrible? It was for a good cause. MISS JUDGED

DEAR MISS: Face it, dear. You sold a quick peek for $20 — a foolish gambit for a young woman who values her reputation.

DEAR ABBY: When does a mother say no? I am 77, have worked in factories for 44 years and have raised three sons alone after an early divorce. Two of my boys are fine. The youngest is my problem.

Mel, now 50, was in the Navy and graduated from college under the G.I. bill, but his big dream was getting into show business. (He is a good musician but not good enough to work the big time, which is all he will settle for.)

I have lost track of all the money Mel has cost me. It seems like all I do is draw money out of the bank for him. My income is only $260 a month, and I am eating up my nest egg.

My other sons tell me I am a fool and that Mel can work if he wants to. (They have both sent him money but gave up.) Mel can sell, but he hates to get up in the morning and work a regular routine. He still thinks he can make it in show business.

How can a mother refuse her son? I love him so much. He never married. What am I to do? MOTHER LOVE

DEAR MOTHER: Don't send Mel another penny! He probably never stuck with a job because he knew he didn't have to — Mother would support him. Tell him that you are all tapped out.

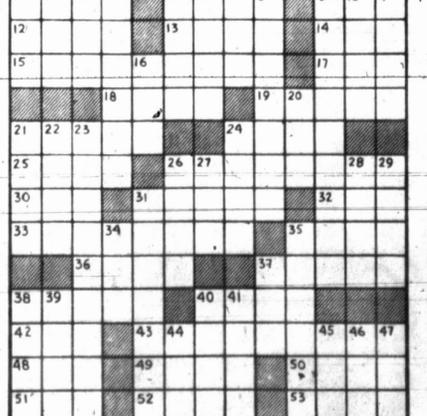

Not everyone can do what he wants to do for a living, in which case he does what he CAN. At 50, it's time Mel became a man. And at 77, you've earned a rest.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter written by the lady who was told off when she mistook a little boy for a "nice little girl" in the supermarket. When I was a kid, I remember going to the carnival, and for 25¢, a man would guess your weight. Now for another 25¢, he'll guess your sex. STAN IN PALM SPRINGS

Hoffa Adopted Son Wont't Talk

DETROIT (UPI) — The children of James Hoffa, the missing-fallen czar of the Teamsters Union, said today their mysterious adoptive brother, Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, had not talked to them for more than half a year.

The statement by Mrs. Barbara Crancer, Hoffa's daughter from St. Louis, Mo., raised speculations of whether O'Brien was still with the Hoffas or somehow was involved in Hoffa's disappearance from a restaurant parking lot a week ago Wednesday.

Her brother, attorney James Hoffa, 31, demanded O'Brien take a lie detector test. He said O'Brien, faced with the demand, "hesitated, stalled and said 'maybe later.'" Young Hoffa believes "he has some knowledge of what happened."

O'Brien, 41, a Teamsters organizer, had been missing — for all official purposes — since Thursday, the day after his adoptive father disappeared from the parking lot.

He surfaced Wednesday and spent three hours in Teamsters' District No. 43 headquarters telling FBI agents, police and fellow Teamsters officials what he knew — if anything.

When he got out, he said not a word and charged away in a car with his attorney, James Burdick. Burdick, in a hectic street pavement news conference, confined himself mostly to "no comment," although denying O'Brien was the man seen last Thursday getting into a Teamsters car close to the parking lot where Hoffa dropped out of sight.

The voice of Mrs. Crancer became cold when she said, "We haven't seen him (O'Brien) since Thanksgiving last year. He has not tried to reach us or call of his own volition."

"If he cared, then he would have been with us through this ordeal and he would have wanted to be with us."

"My father loved him and a person who loved a person ... Mrs. Crancer's voice broke off."

"I'm not accusing him of anything at any time," she said.

"But it may take a lot of nerve for him to call us up."

Mrs. Crancer bridled at the suggestion O'Brien was her "adoptive brother." "He's not that," she said, but she conceded he had grown up in her home.

Henley's Mom Sues NBC

HOUSTON (UPI) — The mother of convicted murderer Elmer Wayne Henley Jr. has filed a $1.5 million suit charging the National Broadcasting Co. and three other news organizations invaded her privacy by recording a telephone conversation during which Henley admitted killing Dean Arnold Corll.

Henley was sentenced to six life sentences for his part in a three year sex and sadism spree which killed 27 young Houston boys. Corll was the alleged mastermind of the killings, and it was his death which sent Henley to the authorities.

As Henley led police on Aug. 8, 1973 to a Houston boat shed filled with buried bodies, the suit charged, Houston Post reporter Ann James and a reporter or reporters for KPRC radio and television companies "prevalled upon" Henley to call his mother.

Mrs. Henley sought $600,000 in actual damages and $900,000 exemplary damages in the suit.

Wilbur Mills Won't Run

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., whose political clout as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee dissolved in alcohol and scandal, is disillusioned with Congress. He says he does not know if he will seek another term.

"Congress hasn't accomplished as much as I would have like it to," said Mills, who gave up his chairmanship last year while being treated for alcoholism at Bethesda Naval Hospital. He said he blamed the Democratic leadership in Congress, President Ford and himself.

"I'm not satisfied with the Democratic leadership and its failure to get us together on solutions to the problems," Mills said Wednesday. But, he added, "there's as much fault downton (the White House) as in Congress, and I haven't supplied the leadership I have in the past."

Mills praised President Ford and said he was not advocating a change in the House leadership.

"Nobody in the White House performs as well as you would like, but I don't know anyone under the circumstances — the economy — who could have done a better job," Mills said.

Mills, whose hospitalization for treatment of alcoholism followed his involvement with Annabel Battistella, a stripper who danced professionally under the name "Fanne Foxe, the Argentine Firecracker," said his political future depended on his ability to stand the pressures of Congress and remain sober.

"I won't do anything to jeopardize my sobriety," he said. "I feel too good."

"I have to judge my own physical ability to take the heat, stand the responsibility, stay in the kitchen," Mills said.

He said he has felt considerable pressure building up during the past two months in Congress.

"I could feel it," he said. "I've been able to take it, but I've been very tired, and I've been warned to avoid getting that tired."

Mills said he would decide by fall whether or not to seek a 19th term in Congress. He said he had not checked the public reaction in his district to the announcement he was an alcoholic.

Kissinger Asks Israel To Speed Up Settlement

By United Press International Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has asked Israel to speed up negotiations with Egypt on a new Sinai peace accord so he can begin shuttle diplomacy later this month, the Israeli national radio said today.

The report by the radio's political correspondent appeared after Israeli officials expressed "cautious optimism" on prospects for a successful conclusion to the negotiations being mediated by Kissinger.

The government-run radio said Kissinger made the request in a note attached to Egypt's reply to Israeli proposals for a new pact. The note said Kissinger wanted to resume shuttle diplomacy about Aug. 20, the radio said.

The newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said Kissinger "sees the Egyptian reply as a positive step that guarantees progress in the negotiations."

On the Israel-Lebanon border, clashes erupted for the fourth straight day as rocket fire from Israeli territory raked a Lebanese army forward position.

In a separate incident, Israeli raiders slipped across the border at Hanin in southern Lebanon, blew up a house and kidnaped its owner, a Lebanese spokesman in Beirut said.

No casualties were reported in either incident.

Israeli newspapers reporting in Washington and Jerusalem said Egypt, responding to Israel's latest peace proposals, had made concessions on some minor points but still insisted on complete Israeli withdrawal from the Mitla and Gidi mountain passes in west-central Sinai.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and his negotiating team huddled over the Egyptian reply. Israeli officials expected Rabin to seek clarifications from Egypt because of what one report described as Cairo's "foggy" reply.

In an apparent leak to the Hebrew press, Israel's newspapers today carried nearly identical versions of Egypt's new position.

Rabin is scheduled to go to Austria on an official visit about that same time and Yedioth said he might postpone the trip.

Higginbotham To Replace Judge Hughes

DALLAS (UPI) — Attorney Patrick E. Higginbotham, 36, was nominated Wednesday to succeed retiring U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes.

If he replaces Judge Hughes, Higginbotham would be one of the youngest federal judges in the nation. Sen. John R. Tower, R-Tex., announced he will send President Ford a letter nominating Higginbotham.

A Tower aide said clearance is being sought from Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., to avoid delay on the nomination. The aide said such a recommendation usually is tantamount to receiving presidential approval, provided the candidate meets an FBI security clearance.

He would then require Senate confirmation before receiving the lifetime appointment to the $40,000 a year post.

The Senate confirms him, Higginbotham would have to resign as a special prosecutor in the Texas criminal case against former milk lobbyist Jake Jacobsen.

Ford May Recall Congress To Work on Energy Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Republican lawmakers, chiding their colleagues for taking a month-long recess without acting on an energy program, say President Ford is considering reconvoking Congress.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., and Rep. Barber Conable, Jr., R-N.Y., said Wednesday they had talked with Ford about a special session this month. While the President made no commitment, they said, calling Congress back is "certainly an option being seriously considered."

Congress left Aug. 1 and is not scheduled to return until Sept. 3. Ford has the constitutional power to interrupt the recess by calling a special session.

Roth and Conable said they discussed the possibility with Ford during a working dinner honoring Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Miki Tuesday night.

They also held discussions with Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb, Commerce Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton and Donald Rumsfeld, White House chief of staff.

Shortly before leaving, Congress approved a six-month extension of price controls, which has kept the price of "old" oil — about 60 per cent of domestic production — at $5.25 a barrel.

Ford's proposals to phase out the price controls over either 30 or 39 months were rejected earlier by Congress.

The current extension expires Aug. 31 at which time the price of the oil could soar to world levels of $12 to $13 a barrel.

Despite pleas from some congressmen, the White House said Wednesday Ford is virtually certain to veto the extension. Congressional leaders are holding the legislation until the end of the month so they will have a chance to schedule an override vote within 10 days of a veto.

In their statement, Roth and Conable said, "Congress has repeatedly told the President and the American people, it needs more time to develop an effective energy program, but instead of acting it has taken five recesses in seven months."

Bates To Coordinate Programs for Women

Dr. Enid Bates, associate professor of elementary education at West Texas State University in Canyon, has been appointed to the position of coordinator and advisor of programs for women and senior citizens.

"We hope to meet the needs of women and senior citizens who do not fit the pattern of the typical undergraduate or graduate student," Dr. Bates said.

Preparations for the new WTSU position were made by Dr. Art Johnson, assistant professor of philosophy, who chaired a committee to explore the educational needs and interests of women and senior citizens.

Dr. Bates will be available to speak on opportunities currently offered at WTSU to any interested groups or individuals.

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

Silas Deane, one of Connecticut's representatives in the Continental Congress, writes from Philadelphia to his wife about Connecticut's Israel Putnam, who recently has been designated one of the Continental Army's four major generals: "... In the appointment of General Putnam, [Congress] acted on principles as much superior to those which actuate the dissatisfied as Heaven is superior to earth. Putnam's merit [rings] through this continent; his fame still increases — and every day justifies the unanimous applause of the continent. Let it be remembered he had every vote of the Congress; and his health has been the second or third [toasted] at almost all our tables in this city..."

Police House Checks Help Deter Problems

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Pampa is one of the few cities in the nation that still offers a vacation house check by police staff.

The Pampa Police Department made 3,265 checks at 261 locations during the first seven months of this year.

"Only one burglary was made from that number and we found it," Police Chief Richard Mills said this morning.

This is a luxury service and most cities no longer do it, but so far we have been able to continue."

He explained how checking the houses helps: "if a burglary takes place, the sooner it is discovered the better chances are to solve it." He added that records show the house checks help deter problems.

Burglars can have stolen items sold long before police know the offense occurred if the crime isn't reported immediately, the chief said.

Sue Matthew and Johnie Fontenot, traffic control officer, check the houses and if they discover something wrong, such as an open door, they call for a patrolman.

They check windows, rattle doors and inspect anything left outside to determine if prowlers, vandals or burglars have bothered.

"I almost didn't come back the other day," Matthew said in relating her encounter with a "great big dog."

The chief checks his officers to make sure they are following orders from homeowners.

see if they return them to me as the instructions read," he said. "I've scored 100 per cent."

The chief said when vacationers return home and fail to notify the department they are back they are occasionally surprised to find an officer rattling the door.

"Of course, if the officer finds something unusual, they call," the chief added.

Sailors Harpoon Largest Shark

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Sailors on an oil company boat Wednesday harpooned a great white shark weighing 2,400 pounds, one of the largest of the monster predators ever captured.

The shark, 15 feet 2 inches long, was caught after a three-hour fight about 10 miles off the coast of Southern California just north of Los Angeles.

It was the third capture of a large great white shark in Southern California waters in the past two weeks.

Marineland, an aquatic amusement park, said it was negotiating with the boat's owner, Lerner Oil Co., for rights to display the shark.

Marineland said its biologists were told by the curator of the Los Angeles County Museum, Sheldon Applegate, the shark was the biggest on record. However the Guinness Book of Records lists the capture of a great white shark 16 feet 10 inches long and weighing 2,664 pounds off Australia in 1969.

Strike Hits Portugal

By ARTHUR HERMAN
LISBON (UPI) — Communists armed with automatic rifles killed one man and wounded five others today when they fired into a crowd demonstrating outside their headquarters in the northern town of Fafe. Violence also spread to the central and eastern regions of the country.

Military security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho and army chief-of-staff Gen. Carlos Fabiao rushed to Porto to try to stem the growing civil strike and held an emergency meeting with the region's military commanders.

The government dispatched left-wing Marines to Fafe, a town 20 miles northeast of Porto, after the shooting incident. The Marines were patrolling the streets and protecting the Communist headquarters. Army troops have sided in with crowds attacking the Communists and sometimes have even aided them.

Fafe police said the Communists over-reacted and that the crowd outside the party's headquarters was relatively peaceful by local standards and that it was unnecessary for the Communists to react violently.

"They did not have to shoot. It was unprovoked," a police spokesman said.

Hospital spokesmen said two of the men wounded in Fafe were in critical condition and that one of them was blinded. The incident marked the first time Communists have killed anyone attacking their headquarters, although they have opened fire on crowds in other towns.

Police said Communist headquarters were sacked by mobs in in Bombarral north of Lisbon and in Porto de Espada during the night. In Barcelos, Communists faced a suspicious car with submachine gun fire near their headquarters and received shot-gun fire in return.

In Lisbon, Premier Vasco Goncalves said the country's fifth provisional government will be officially installed at noon Friday. The names of the ministers were not released.

Portugal has been without a cabinet since the Socialists and Popular Democrats pulled out of the coalition 28 days ago.

Judge Carillo To Vacate Bench During Impeachment

By ARTHUR HERMAN
AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Duval County District Judge O.P. Carrillo, impeached by the House and facing a Senate trial, has apparently rejected the advice of his attorney and will temporarily vacate his bench.

Arthur Mitchell, Carrillo's defense attorney, said Wednesday he recommended the judge defy the House's impeachment vote and continue to sit as judge of his three-county South Texas district until ordered to step down by a court or convicted on the impeachment charges in the Senate.

"He prefers to go on and take the suspension and get prepared for the trial," Mitchell said. "He is going to have a conference with his family, but his inclination is to step down. He has all the confidence in the world the Senate will clear him. I think the Senate will be fair."

The House's special prosecutor, former Rep. Terry Doyle of Fort Arthur, said the state may come up with an even stronger case to convict Carrillo once he has been removed from power.

Doyle predicted senators will spend the first few days of the impeachment session adopting operating rules, and will then recess briefly to allow Carrillo's defense attorneys and the prosecutors to prepare cases according to the Senate-approved rules.

Skelly Man Treated In Accident

David Eugene Cotton, 20, was treated and released from Highland General Hospital Wednesday following a noon accident near the Skelly Gasoline Plant.

According to reports, he was riding on the running board of a vehicle when he received the injury.

Cotton, 2128 N. Christy, was X-rayed but hospital attendants said he was released about an hour later.

Burglars Make Off With Beer

Burglars made off with two cases of beer Wednesday night from the Busy Bee Cafe.

Pampa Police Department officers, while on routine patrol, discovered signs which indicated someone had entered the building.

The beer was the only reported loss.

Other incidents reported Wednesday included theft of $115 from a purse left in a trailer house.

One resident said thieves took a hanging basket flowers, a red plastic pot and a wrought iron stand were taken from her porch during the night.

Duenkel FUNERAL DIRECTORS

308 W. BROWNING - PAMPA

Dear friends,
One of the penalties life exacts for love's fulfillment is the anguish of grief. It is a mixture of anxiety, anger and despair over the loss of a loved one, and the greater the love, the deeper the grief. Feelings of anger and guilt, as well as sorrow, must be confronted and surmounted by the bereaved if he is to regain normal emotional health.

Respectfully,

Charles & Duenkel

Fruit Salad Takes Anything

By MELANIE MILLER
Pampa News Staff

Salads offer a wide variety of challenges for any cook. From fruit salads to vegetable salads to green salads, salad can be served as an appetizer before dinner or as a meal in itself.

Besides the wide range of kinds available, salads can be arranged creatively to challenge the artistic abilities of anyone.

Fruit salads can be made of almost any single fruit or of a combination of two or more fruits. But the most popular one seems to be those with more different kinds of fruit.

There are four different kinds of salads: the first course salads which are appetizers (such as a green salad with tart fruits and sherbet, meat or fish with a dressing; the dinner salads which are complements to the meal with a bit of fruit or vegetable or maybe tossed green with a dressing; the salad plates which are usually the main course salads practically a whole meal with some protein food; and finally dessert salads which are the highlight of the meal, usually with fruit - plain, jellied or frozen, and made with whipped cream on top.

Fruit salads should be served at lunch or at the end of the dinner course except when they are combined with a generous amount of vegetables.

When only canned fruit is available for salads, use individual salad plates covered with a generous quantity of shredded greens. If fresh fruit is available, place them between the curved leaves of ahead head lettuce or on a bed of romaine or crisp watercress.

The frozen fruit salad is the recipe of Mrs. Foster Whaley who served it recently at a going away party for the county extension agent.

Gelatin salads, such as aspic, are a big challenge because of the different things that can be added to them. The most frequently used gelatin should be the unflavored and unsweetened variety. If sweetened gelatin is used or if much fruit is added, the sugar content becomes so high that such a salad should be served as a substitute for dessert.

The fruit bouquet is good when served as a total meal with bread or crackers on the side. Of course, the fruits can be changed to fit what is already available at home.

Sometimes only a individual fruit plate is wanted and that, too, offers a big challenge. One suggestion is to serve fresh or canned peaches with French dressing adding cottage cheese or cream cheese balls or adding walnuts, pecans, coconut or with sour cream, yogurt or peanut butter dressing.

Frozen Fruit Salad
Cream one large package of Philadelphia Cream Cheese and add 1/4 cup sugar. Add one cup small marshmallows, one No. 2 can pineapple tidbits, one 16 oz. package frozen strawberries, two diced bananas and 1/2 cup chopped nuts. Fold in one large package of dream whip that has already been whipped. Freeze and serve.

Ambrosia
1 cup orange sections
1/2 cup seedless grape halves
1/4 cup chopped dates
1 cup cottage cheese
1/4 cup sour cream
one banana, sliced
Lettuce
1/4 cup shredded coconut
Combine orange sections, grapes and dates; Chill.

Press cheese through fine sieve. Add sour cream and banana. Mix gently but thoroughly. Fold chilled fruits into cheese mixture. Serve on crisp lettuce. Sprinkle each serving with coconut. Serves 4.

Aspic
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup cold pineapple, grapefruit, or apple juice
1 1/4 cups chilled pineapple, grapefruit, or apple juice
1 1/4 cups chilled pineapple, grapefruit or apple juice pinch of salt
1/4 cup fresh lemon or lime juice
Soften gelatin and 1/4 cup juice for five minutes until gelatin is dissolved, then add 1 1/4 cups juice salt and lemon or lime juice. Stir well, and chill until gelatin starts to congeal. Pour into a mold brushed lightly with oil. Chill and un mold by turning on edge and tapping to loosen sides; or mold in shallow pan, cut into cubes and serve on individual salad plates on a bed of lettuce or watercress.

Instead of juices suggested, use unsweetened apricot, orange, grape or berry juice or sweetened plum juice or any thin fruit puree. Fresh fruits can be added to add flavor.

Cantaloupe Baskets
small cantaloupes
hulled strawberries
seeded cherries
diced pineapple
Chill and cut the cantaloupes into basket shape. Remove the seeds, cut out the pulp and dice it. Combine the diced cantaloupe with an equal amount of the chilled fruit. Sweeten the fruit slightly. It can be moistened with chilled French dressing. Place it in the baskets and serve at once.

Fruit Cocktail
Powdered sugar
lime, or lemon juice or sherry
chilled ginger ale
Chill and prepare fresh fruit for serving. Fifteen minutes before serving, sprinkle the fruit lightly with powdered sugar. Immediately before serving, flavor it with lime juice, lemon juice or sherry or partly cover it with chilled ginger ale.

Seedless grapes, watermelon, green and yellow cantaloupes (cut into balls with a French potato cutter), Queen Anne cherries (stoned and stuffed with fibertests) and fresh pineapple make good cocktails.

Fruit Bouquet
On a dinner - size plate, preferably of sparkling glass arrange with an eye for color contrasts and repeats any or all of these: quarters of peaches or nectarines and unpeeled pears; chunks of banana, segment of grapefruit, orange and tangerine, quarter slices of pineapple, little bunches of Tokay and Thompson seedless grapes on their stems; halves of fresh prunes or peeled fresh figs. In the center of this display, fit a small glass or fluted paper cup of pineapple ice, and tuck two or three buttered crescents of brown bread in among the fruits. Pass French and luffy fruit dressings and hot muffins or cheese-frosted biscuits or popovers.

French Dressing for Fruit Salad
1/4 cup sugar
1 1/4 teaspoons paprika
1 1/4 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 cup vinegar
1 cup olive oil
Combine all the ingredients except the last two. Stir in slowly the vinegar and olive oil. Beat the dressing with a rotary beater or with an electric mixer for three minutes.

Women's Club Fruit Dressing
1/2 cup currant jelly
Grated peel and juice of 2 lemons
3/4 cup sugar
2 eggs separated
dash of salt
whipped cream
Put currant jelly to melt over hot water, stirring occasionally. Combine lemon peel and juice, 1/2 cup sugar and beaten egg yolks in double boiler and cook over hot water, stirring, until thick. Beat egg whites with salt; when stiff, gradually beat in remaining 1/4 cup sugar. Fold into hot mixture with melted jelly and continue cooking about 15 minutes, stirring often. Cool and chill. At serving time, blend dressing with whipped cream to suit taste. Serve with fruit and cottage cheese salted.

Chef's Meat Salad
2 cups julienne strips cooked beef, pork or lamb
1 can (16 ounces) cut, green beans, drained
1 cup sliced celery
2 medium tomatoes, cut in eighths
1/2 cup French dressing
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
2 slices cooked bacon, crumbled
Combine meat, green beans, celery and tomatoes. Combine French dressing, mustard, garlic salt and bacon. Pour over salad ingredients and toss lightly. Chill, 4 servings.

Hot Ice Good Way to Store Meat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hot ice makes a good cooler for perishable food during the summer.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture says hot, or dry, ice in a freezer chest is an effective way of storing meats, provided certain conditions are maintained. APHIS recommends these procedures for meat storage during a two-week vacation away from home:

Use an air-tight, well-insulated container just large enough to hold frozen meat and 15 to 25 pounds of dry ice. A half-full container will not keep as long as a full one. For example, a 25 pound piece of dry ice will keep temperatures below freezing for two to three days in a 10-cubic-foot home freezer with a half-load, compared with three to four days in a fully-loaded one.

Be sure the meat is fresh, clean and hard frozen before storing it on dry ice.

Wrap meat loosely in small portions in moisture-resistant material, such as aluminum foil or freezer paper, to allow cold air to circulate effectively.

Never place dry ice directly on packaged meat. Instead, put the ice on cardboard or small boards atop packages.

Use separate containers for other perishables, to limit the number of times the chest is opened. Place on top the meats you plan to use first.

Keep a packed dry ice freezer chest in the coolest spot available, out of direct sunlight and in a position permitting air circulation around it. Don't put it in the trunk of your car.

Don't wait for the dry ice to evaporate before buying more. Replenish your supply when no less than one-third remains.

Before using meat stored with dry ice, check it for signs of spoilage, such as a bad odor.

Dry ice can burn the skin, so it always should be handled with gloves or newspapers. Because it gives off carbon dioxide gas, its containers should be opened only in a ventilated area, and discarded in a ventilated area beyond the reach of children.

Most people see you in profile, which is a good thought to keep in mind when you choose a hairstyle, makeup and clothing. When you apply makeup, check both right and left profiles in a mirror to make sure that foundation and blush are blended well into your hairline, and that eyeliner and shadow do not extend too far.

Home Ownership Sales Rising

Ms. Evelyn Mason, County Executive Director for the United States Department of Agriculture, purchased her home at 2524 Charles, several years ago because of the apartment shortage in Pampa. She agrees that owning a home is more economical than renting and people buy as an investment for resale or to generate rental income. Sales are up for existing single family homes as well as vacation or "second" homes. The American family is showing more determination to buy that needed home, or even a vacation hide-away home, despite high price tags and rough financing cost. The number of home sales increased 29.1 percent during the past two months in the Northeast region, according to National Association of Realtors report. Sales picked up 15.3 percent in the North Central region, 10.8 percent in the South, and 16.7 percent in the West. (Pampa News photo by Mike Higgins)

More About Singles as Home Owners

NEW YORK UPI — Good news for the singles who want to own homes.

You can — IF. It's a big IF, but home ownership is within your reach.

You start with money. The matter of singles and home buying came up because this column recently told of national survey of 1,000 single women from young to middle years and beyond. Three out of five preferred the single family residence over apartment dwelling.

No sooner was the study reported than my desk was swamped with queries. The big question: All right, we too want to own a home, but how do we acquire it?

One secretary, with I hope tongue in cheek, said she rents an apartment but "if you can lend me $150,000 I'll buy the house that's my dream."

She also wanted to know if a single man stood a better chance at financing than a woman. I found no discrimination. Money has no sex.

So here go the guidelines for single men and women and they just as well could apply to any other buyer gleaned from talks with a bank, a private mortgage insurance company, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington.

Start with credit qualifications. Jackson W. Goss, president of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston, a private mortgage lender, led off with job stability as primary. The final decision would be up to the lender, but it would consider the length of employment and responsibility of the single's position. Lenders like to use five or more years with a company as a gauge.

The company that employs the buyer is important — not one that has been in business a short time. The better the company, the better the risk, in the lender's view.

An account with the lender is important. The buyer must have sufficient account to cover at least 10 per cent down payment, although there are some five per cent centers popping up here and there, Goss said.

Amounts of down payment varies regionally, said Raymond Forshey, assistant cashier with the First National City Bank, the nation's second largest commercial bank.

Actually, it averages about 95 per cent nationally, said a spokesman for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Mortgage insurance companies will insure the lender for the difference, up to 20 per cent of the loan. And the borrower pays the insurance premium.

The board said the 25 per cent down payment was on completed transactions, both for newly built and older houses. Count in too, another 16 to 14 per cent lawyer's fees, title search, recording, surveys and other necessary services.

Savings and loan companies may lend up to 80 per cent of appraised value, said the board. Count into your budget too the fact that mortgage interest rates run 8.5 to 9.5 per cent nationally, said Forshey.

Some other tips from Goss: — If self-employed, you will have to prove staying power at business.

— A financial statement is important. It should show income, debt structure, and five-year projection of finances.

— Monthly mortgage payments should not exceed 25 per cent of gross monthly income. Then consider another 10 per cent for other commitments such as credit card, car payments, maintenance.

— Establish and retain excellent credit ratings. Pay bills on time and impress a mortgage lender with your credit reputation.

— The major obstacle facing single buyers is the down payment. One solution is a systematic savings program that encourages the potential buyer to open an account with a lender, saving a set amount each month until there's enough for that all-important down payment.

Cost of housing, like most every other cost, is up. But even with the increases, said the City Bank spokesman, a house still gives many advantages. It's often no more expensive, maybe even cheaper, to own than to rent. The payments on the mortgage help to build your equity in the house.

And the real estate taxes and interest paid on the mortgage are deductible on federal and state income tax returns.

Help Children Learn

COLLEGE STATION — Parents and environment are the greatest influences on a child's mental development, Mrs. Ilene Miller, family life education specialist, said this week.

"A parent can make learning fun and challenging if he has some insight into how children grow and develop, and if he is willing to provide the help and encouragement a child needs."

This specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University, pointed out that children expand and refine their mental skills through daily experiences. "Learning to observe and to remember are some of the first mental skills a young child develops. Later he learns to compare objects and can distinguish between likenesses and differences.

"As a child matures, he learns to group items, ideas and information that have something in common — for example, bananas and lemons are both yellow fruits. Even more difficult mental skills to master are the abilities to solve problems and make choices," she explained.

Parents can help by keeping the environment safe for children to explore, Mrs. Miller said.

College Notes

Marsha Holland Marsha Holland, a Pampa resident, was named the outstanding musician in the Honors Band during activities held recently in conjunction with Angelo State University's summer band camp.

The camp attracted more than 225 students from schools in 37 Texas communities.

The week-long program featured a variety of individual and group instruction in all areas of band activities including band, theory, twirling, ensembles, stage band, drum majoring, directors band and private lessons.

Melinda Millican Melinda Gay Millican, a 1975 graduate of Pampa High School, was among the 16 scholarship winners announced this week by Diamond Shamrock Oil and Gas Company. The $500 grants are awarded annually by the company to children of its employees.

Miss Millican, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Mac Millican, 529 Powell, will attend West Texas State University to study business education. She was president of Red Cross Youth at Pampa High, lettered in volleyball for three years, was a member of, Truteen Service League, and was selected "Girl of the Month" by the Business and Professional Women.

Cole-Hancock Noel A. Cole, Ph.D., and Dennis M. Hancock, BS, both of Pampa, were among 5,148 recent graduates at Oklahoma State University at Stillwater, Okla.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise, I am the mother of a two-and-one-half-year-old daughter who loves cinnamon toast.

I don't mind fixing it for her, but dread the sticky clean-up job afterwards.

I finally solved the problem by combining the sugar, cinnamon and margarine together. Simply mix the sugar and cinnamon with the margarine in a larger bowl and then spoon into a margarine tub.

Now when my little girl asks for cinnamon toast, I just spread on the mixture of "cinnamon butter."

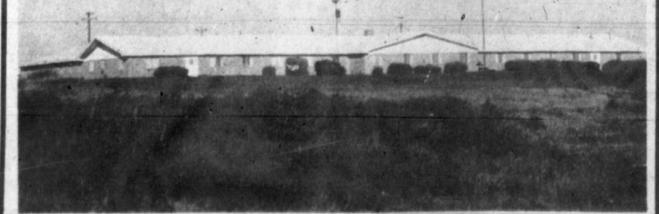

She is happy and so am I. Barbara Schnetzler watering. How simple for snackers to always have ready. I tried it with diet margarine and sugar substitute.

Scrumptious! Heloise

Bicentennial Quiz Revere Never Made Trip to Concord

How's your American history? Here's a test to put you in tune with the Bicentennial. The questions have to do with circumstances and events attending the nation's founding 200 years ago.

Copley News Service

(A) Longfellow was wrong when he said in his famous poem that Paul Revere "came to the bridge in Concord town." Revere never reached Concord. What happened?

(B) One British member of Parliament who spoke out in defense of American liberties was so popular in the Colonies that South Carolina voted 1,500 pounds sterling to pay his debts. Who was he?

(C) Faneuil Hall, Boston, is known as the "Cradle of Liberty" because of the many patriotic meetings held there early in the Revolution. For whom was it named?

(D) How much was the tea taxed by the British Parliament?

(E) Which Colony became known as the Old Line State?

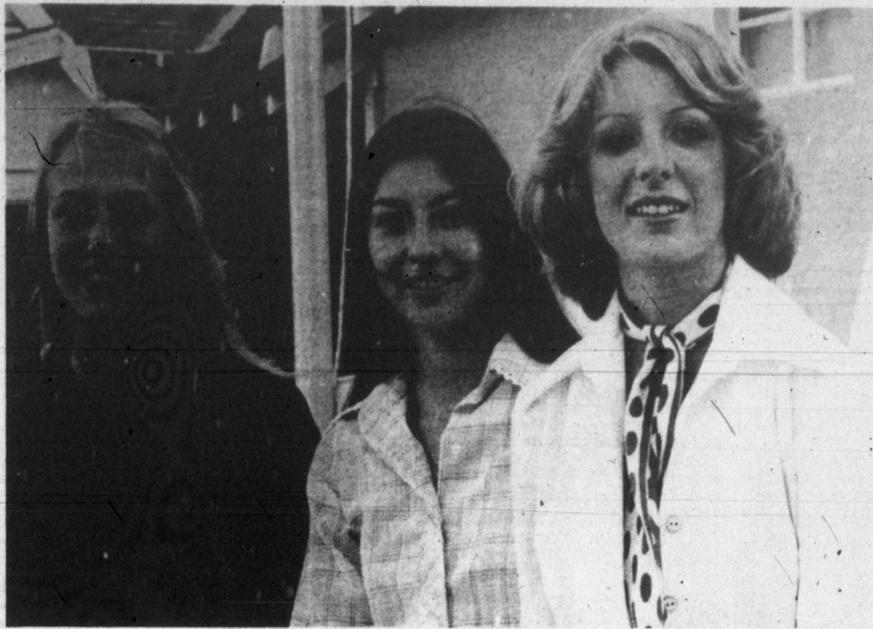

(A) After warning Lexington, Revere was on his way to Concord when the British caught him. The word was carried to Concord by a companion he had met on the way — the unsung Dr. Samuel Prescott.

(B) John Wilkes, who also was lord mayor of London in 1774. Through invective and satire, he became a symbol of opposition to tyranny.

(C) Peter Faneuil, Boston merchant and smuggler who made a fortune out of the slave trade. On the safe arrival of one of his slave ships he went to church to thank God for making him the instrument "by which so many heathen souls were brought to salvation." His donation to the city of the hall gave rise to the saying "the Cradle of Liberty rocks on the bones of the Middle Passage."

(D) Three pence per pound. Tea was very popular in the Colonies at the time.

(E) Maryland, so-called because of the high quality of its regular "troops of the line" in the Revolution.

Local Teachers Receive Grants

Eight Pampa teachers have received Classroom Grants for updating instruction on their classrooms.

Teachers and their projects are: Janetta Maloney, Lamar Elementary, "Mini-Courses for Fun"; Sylvia Raber, Houston Middle School, "A Basic Classroom Course in 7th Grade Texas History"; Betty Haines, Baker Elementary, "Parent Involvement With Plan A Children"; Vera Mae Eubank, Diana Baccus, Terri Wells, and Kay Hood, Baker Elementary, "Adjusting to Individual Reading Needs in the Intermediate Grades"; and Betty Jean Sossaman, Travis Elementary, "Neurological Impress Method of Instruction."

This is the second year that Region XVI Education Service Center has sponsored the Classroom Grants Program. This program awards up to $300 for materials and supplies to teachers who have ideas, plans and projects for improvement of the education program in their classrooms which local district budgetary constraints make difficult to implement.

Any full-time classroom teacher who is employed by a local public school district located in the region can apply for a grant under this program if he has obtained written approval of the school district authorities authorizing the application. The authorization has to be included as a part of the application.

The proposal portion of the application has to define the entire scope of the work that the applicant wishes to accomplish in a specific period of time, not to exceed one school year, regular term.

A committee of four educators reviews the applications submitted and selects the best for approval.

American Farmers Earn More at Nonfarm Jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About two out of every three American farm families get more income from jobs in town and other nonfarm sources than from farming, an Agriculture Department economic review indicates.

Figures compiled by Department statisticians showed that in 1974, only about 1.1 million farms — 37.4 per cent of the national total — produced enough income to amount to more than 50 per cent of the earnings of the farm family.

These were farms with annual agricultural sales of $20,000 and up.

The figures also indicated the trend toward mixing nonfarm jobs with agriculture gained momentum last year. In 1973, more than half of family income produced on the 325,000 farms in the $10,000 to $20,000 size came from agriculture but by the end of 1974, farms in that class reported that slightly under half of their operators' family income came from agriculture.

The growing trend toward part-time and retirement farming in recent years has changed the statistical picture of farming. Agriculture records show that operators of the smallest places officially classed as farms — as measured by sales volume — are not among the poorest rural residents. Figures for 1974 showed that families on farms with sales of under $2,500 last year averaged only $1,022 in farm income but also had an average of $16,187 in nonfarm income for a total of $17,209.

The total family income for that bottom class of farms topped the overall average figure for families on farms in all size classes except the $40,000 and up range. Families on farms with agricultural sales of $2,500 to $4,999, for example, had combined farm and nonfarm income of $11,085 and families on farms in the $20,000 - $39,999 sales class had total incomes averaging $16,078.

The growing number of families who rely on small farms basically as a supplement to other methods of earning a living was further underlined by figures showing the comparatively rapid growth of total income for operators of the under-$2,500 sales class farms. Records show these farms passed the $2,500-$4,999 class in total income in 1963, passed the $5,000-$9,999 class in 1971, passed the $10,000-$19,999 class in 1973 and the $20,000-$39,999 class in 1974.

There appeared little prospect that families on the under-$2,500 farms would move ahead — in total income — of operators of full-size commercial farms in the $40,000 and up sales category. Total farm and nonfarm incomes on farms in the $40,000-$99,999 class in 1974 reached nearly $28,000 while incomes for operators of $100,000-plus sales class farms averaged nearly $94,000 in family income last year.

Denver Man Says FBI Don't Leave Him Alone

DENVER (UPI) — V. Stevens Kite says the FBI wouldn't let him alone for two years, and he wants to make sure nothing like that happens again. That is why he has filed a civil court action against the federal agency.

Kite, a milling machine operator at Martin Marietta, filed suit against the FBI asking for damages and an injunction to make sure agents don't start dogging his steps again.

The father of two said he had difficulty in keeping a job because of the activities of the FBI, which involved talking to his employers and telling them about his former connection with a leftist student group while in school.

Kite said federal agents kept on his trail from 1972 until April, 1974, tracking him to jobs with the Samsonite luggage firm, Cutler-Hammer, Inc., and Stanley Aviation Corp., all of Denver.

Attorneys for Kite said the FBI apparently became interested in him because of his association with the Students for a Democratic Society at the University of Oregon. He also was arrested for obstructing a thoroughfare during a 1969 demonstration at Eugene, Ore.

In its files, the FBI conceded that Kite was not an SDS leader, "but hob-nobbed with the leaders." The FBI also had reports Kite once met with members of a San Francisco-based SDS splinter group called the Revolutionary Union.

When Samsonite fired Kite, company officials said he had lied on his application form for failing to mention the two days he spent in jail for obstructing a thoroughfare and for not reporting he had received a master's degree from the University of Oregon.

"I didn't tell them about the masters degree because I knew they would say I was over-educated for the job," Kite said.

Kite said he could not understand why he had ever been placed on the investigation list since "I have always worked toward nonviolence."

Congressmen Adventure On 'Fact-finding' Trips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The hot, humid 'dogs days' of August have arrived and Congress has scattered — some to China, others to Europe, and even two to the ocean floor.

Many senators and congressmen are taking advantage of so-called fact-finding trips to tour the globe at taxpayer's expense, generally with spouses at their side aboard military aircraft.

The prime government trips are to the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China.

Speaker Carl Albert heads the "official" delegation of 19 House members to the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, and Romania, due to arrive in Russia on Thursday. It is an American response to a similar visit here last year by Soviet legislators.

A few members of the House Agriculture Committee liked the idea of a Soviet trip too and got committee authorization for a separate journey. They include Reps. William R. Poage, D-Tex., and William Wampler, R-Va.

Two groups are visiting mainland China. The official White House-sponsored trip, from Aug. 17 to 30, is headed by Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., and Senate Democratic Whip Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. Also going along are Sens. James Pearson R-Kan. and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Reps. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., and John Slack, D-W. Va.

Another group, invited as guests of the Chinese government, include Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y.; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.; Charles Percy, R-Ill.; Adali Stevenson III, D-Ill., and Reps. Paul Findley, R-Ill., Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., and Margaret Heckler, R-Mass.

Rep. Leonor Sullivan, D-Mo., head of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, is inspecting marine facilities and shipyards in England and Germany.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield is touring several foreign countries on official government business, but his administrative assistant, Peggy DeMichele, said she didn't know where.

"If I need him, I'll just have to call through the State Department," she said.

The whereabouts of Mansfield's GOP counterpart, Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., was also a secret.

"He is resting, vacationing, in the country," said Pat Agnew, his press secretary. "I can't tell you where." She said, however, that it was a personal vacation, not at government expense.

House GOP leader John Rhodes plans to do some political speech-making. But his most important function is this Saturday when he will give away his daughter, Elizabeth, in a wedding ceremony.

Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., is in New York City this week trying to win business for Oklahoma. He then goes to Oslo, Norway Sept. 1 for a petroleum conference.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, RConn., and Reps. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., and Ken Heckler, D-W. Va., probably have chosen the most unusual holidays.

Heckler is spending time doing odd jobs in his southwestern West Virginia district, starting by waiting on tables, and offering to do just about anything else for free — short of working in the coal mines.

Weicker and Alexander are spending three days in a research capsule on the ocean floor off the Grand Bahamas with officials of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, to get a firsthand look at aquatic research.

Six New Stamps Offered

Six new commemorative stamps, "World Peace Through Law," "International Women's Year," and a block of four honoring the 200th anniversary year of the U. S. Postal Service, will be available at the U. S. Post Office in Pampa within the next few weeks.

Lynn Bivins, superintendent, said this office will receive 10,000 of each. "Sales are never a problem," he said.

Issuance of the "World Peace Through Law" will be a prelude to the Seventh World Law Conference of the World Peace Through Law Center, set to convene in Washington Oct. 12 to 17.

More than 4,000 judges, lawyers and law professors from more than 100 nations will participate in the conference, which has the theme, "The Role of Law in World Cooperation." World Law Day also occurs in October.

The World Peace Through Law Center was formed in 1963 at the Athens World Conference. The Program is aimed at "a peaceful world order with justice."

The stamp was designed by

Melbourne Brindle of Bridgewater, Conn., who also designed the historic preservation series stamps of 1971 and the tourism year of the American postal cards in 1972.

The new stamps will be printed three-color intaglio on the Giori press. The colors are green, brown and blue.

The postal service stamps were designed by James L. Womer of Philadelphia. These are his first stamp designs.

They contrast old and new methods of transporting mail. The upper left stamp in the block depicts a stage coach and a modern tractor-trailer truck. The upper right stamps show a 19th-century steam locomotive in the foreground and a modern locomotive in the background.

The lower left stamp contrasts an early mail plane with a modern jet, while the lower right stamp depicts a satellite by which Mailgrams are transmitted.

Across the top of each stamp appears "US 10 cents," and "200 years of Postal Service."

The colors are yellow, red, cyan, black, blue line and gray line.

They will be printed by the gravure method on the Andreetti press, and there are six plate numbers.

The design of the 10-cent commemorative stamp honoring International Women's

Year was unveiled on June 20 in Mexico City during the International Women's Year Conference, sponsored by the United Nations.

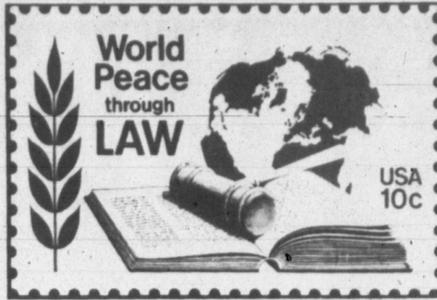

The first day of issue ceremony for the stamps will be at Eisenhower College in Seneca Falls, N. Y. or Aug. 26.

Seneca Falls was the site of the first Women's Rights Convention in the United States in 1848 and was also the first day of issue city for the 1948 Progress of Women commemorative stamp.

The primary design feature of the stamp is a white dove emerging from the top of the symbol representing woman.

In the upper right corner is an equal sign representing the equality of women. In the background, in blue and white, is an artistic representation of a pattern which globemakers might use in making a globe.

This emphasizes the international significance of International Women's Year.

Flea Control To Prevent Plague

GALLUP, N.M. (UPI) — A team of experts implemented a flea control program today to prevent possible spreading of the bubonic plague.

A 3-year-old Navajo girl, Charlene Brown, died of the disease in McKinley General Hospital Monday.

It was the fifth case of the disease reported in New Mexico this year and the first fatality attributed to the disease in the state since 1974.

The disease is carried by fleas which attach themselves to animals, usually rodents.

Neil Weber, of the New Mexico-Environmental Improvement Agency general sanitation division, said the flea control program involved dusting small rodents in the Gallup area with flea powder.

Weber said the animals are dusted with flea powder in a trap-like device when they crawl through a small tube to get bait. He said animals which have been dusted also spread the flea powder to their burrows.

"It will kill the fleas but not the rodents," he said.

Weber said the devices had been placed around the girl's home near Rehoboth, east of Gallup, and in the vicinity of Red Rocks State Park, the site of the National High School Rodeo Championships. The rodeo, underway this week, is expected to draw about 1,000 persons.

"We don't see any immediate danger — we want to make that clear," Weber said. "The case was isolated and it was far removed from the rodeo grounds."

Dr. Richard Kozoll, Gallup District Health Officer, said participants in the rodeo are being cautioned not to handle surveillance equipment in the area. He also said they are being urged not to handle wild animals and to dust household pets with flea powder.

"The entire area will be under environmental surveillance," said Kozoll.

Kozoll also said there was no evidence that any of the members of the girl's family or staff members at the two hospitals where the girl was treated have contracted the disease.

"There is no evidence they are in danger," he said.

He said the people who came in contact with the girl are being checked periodically for fever, one of the first signs of the disease, and are being given preventative antibiotics.

On July 17, 1970, the body of former Argentine President Pedro Eugenio Aramburu was found, seven weeks after he had been kidnapped.

How Education Pays In Dollars, Sense

By PATRICIA McCORMACK UPI Education Editor

Memo to high school students thinking of skipping the next school year:

Education really does pay off — in dollars and sense. It tends to keep one off life's trash heap and actively, gainfully employed.

Now, more than ever, a job in which growth may be expected requires at entry some skill and/or a "completed" academic credential. High school diploma is the minimum.

Drop out and you'll trudge through life missing that link. The job application will ask: High school graduate? Always you'll suffer a personal indignity, checking the "no" box. Census Bureau figures show the average person who completes high school will earn in a lifetime $109,000 more than the elementary school graduate.

And the person who finished the eighth grade will earn $53,000 more than the one who dropped out before finishing the eighth grade.

As one moves upward on the educational ladder the differences in lifetime earnings increase. A person who completes four or more years of college will make $243,000 more than a high school graduate.

There are exceptions to the law linking education and earnings. You've heard of self-made millionaires — types that got from rags to riches through an uncommon success formula — even though dropping out of high school or grade school.

The magic ingredients in such cases usually included super motivation and individual intelligence. Poverty launched many of the self-made rich men.

Dollars aside, what's the payoff in continuing one's education?

Consider some of these answers from the National Education Association:

— Educational attainment provides an individual with a larger number of higher quality career alternatives from which to choose in determining his or her destiny.

— Those with more schooling usually have access to jobs with more comfortable working conditions, better hours, and more generous fringe benefits. Abundant evidence supports the view that education affects not just income, but also occupational choice and one's social and economic position in life.

— High school drop-outs begin the job hunt with severe disadvantages in comparison with those who have a diploma.

— As the proportion of persons who complete high school rises, the educational requirements of many jobs previously not requiring a high school diploma rise. Many jobs today that require graduation from high school did not 10 or more years ago.

Do yourself a favor, high school student. Hang in there.

Texas Misses Fed Job Aid

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Despite the State's rising unemployment rate, the possibility that Texas will receive additional federal funds to create new jobs is considered slim.

The Senate recently passed one bill which would assist areas of high unemployment while the House is expected to act on a similar measure after the August recess. However, the cutoff unemployment figure used by the Senate to grant aid to states and cities is six per cent — one-tenth of a per cent more than Texas' unemployment rate for the first quarter of 1975.

A move in the Senate by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D - Houston, to amend the bill to essentially include Texas and six other states was rejected. His amendment would have brought the State an additional $20 million in what is termed "countercyclical revenue sharing funds" — money designed to help localities weather an economic downturn.

Although several cities in Texas would now be eligible to receive the funds, the Texas state government by virtue of the 5.9 per cent statewide unemployment rate, would not. Bentsen called the "6 per cent trigger" unfair and inequitable.

Recent reports from the U.S. Department of Labor show the State's unemployment rate continuing to rise. During the first week of July, the number of persons receiving unemployment insurance benefits rose 27,800 — to 96,500 — from the previous week.

Four Texas cities retained positions on the Labor Department's "substantial" unemployment list. These included Beaumont - Port Arthur - Orange, nine per cent; Corpus Christi, 7.7 per cent; El Paso, 10.2 per cent; and San Antonio, 8.3 per cent.

Austin was classified by the department as one of "21 major labor areas" not on the "substantial" unemployment listing. Other Texas areas included Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston.

Bentsen supported the Senate's final version of the countercyclical revenue aid measure while Sen. John Tower, R - Wichita Falls, opposed it. The final vote was 65 - 28.

World Food Crisis Didn't Sneak Up

AUSTIN. — It has been estimated that almost 13 per cent of the Earth's 3.8 billion inhabitants are suffering from malnutrition.

If the current growth rate continues, it is expected that world population will reach 6.5 billion by the year 2000.

"The world food crisis didn't just sneak up on us," says Kenneth Nowotny, University of Texas teaching assistant and doctoral candidate in economics. "It suddenly hit the headlines, but the food crisis is merely a symptom of the failure of almost all of the development strategies of the last two decades. The first priority is to somehow get food to the people who are starving to death right now, to deal with the immediate crisis situation."

"However, to only provide food is like taking an aspirin to cure a headache," Nowotny continues. "It doesn't get at the root cause, which is poverty and underdevelopment, and that takes longer."

Nowotny and Dr. Tommaso Jannuzzi, economist and director of the UT Center for Asian Studies, teach a course on "Asian Food Production Dilemma" at UT Austin.

Commenting on the alternative of just providing food for a crisis, Jannuzzi points out that to stop at that alternative does not address the capacity of the people of the Third World to produce the foodstuffs they need.

"After the aid is doled out and saves some lives in a given time frame, it leaves nothing behind that can be part of a permanent infrastructure associated with preventing that problem from happening again," Jannuzzi explains. "Problems of food production are complex and there are many institutional blockages which are not readily seen by outsiders."

"People often see the food production dilemma as one which can be resolved by simply making available new inputs such as fertilizer, pesticides, adequate amounts of water and high-yielding varieties of seed," Jannuzzi continues. "But often, if you are not also concerned with questions of land tenure, availability of credit, and local political and environmental factors, it's very possible to have substantial segments of a country's population experiencing lower levels of caloric intake even in a bumper crop season. The local political and economic system can divert what is produced in the direction of a limited segment of the population."

"When we speak of problems of underdevelopment in Third World countries, we are not referring to industrial underdevelopment. The reason people are starving to death is because they are not producing enough food and the problem is underdevelopment of agriculture," Nowotny said.

Jannuzzi adds that in the poorest countries more than 80 per cent of the people live in rural areas and derive their total subsistence from agriculture.

"I have just returned from Bangladesh, which is about the size of the state of Arkansas and with 80 million people," Jannuzzi says. "If ever a country seemed confronted with a Malthusian trap, it's Bangladesh. It's easy to look at the country and say it's already too late. And it's symptomatic of that kind of poverty and underdevelopment that the more desperate the need, the less able they are to absorb the aid that's coming in, administratively and technically."

"But there is no reason why we have to write off Bangladesh or any other country in that situation. In the modern era, we hope that mankind has progressed to the point where notions of interdependence have greater meaning than that."

T.R. Malthus, an 18th Century economist, believed that poverty was inevitable because population increased at a faster rate than the means of subsistence could increase.

Jannuzzi sees hopeful signs in a growing concern among multi-lateral and bilateral lending and aid institutions to address the food problem.

"The lending and aid institutions know they have to work through indigenous structures," Jannuzzi notes. "No matter how creative a development program is, the implementation has to be done by people indigenous to the country. The elite tend to be opposed to fundamental structural changes in society. However, the bankruptcy of old policies is now evident. The articulation of new policies is clear and there is a minimum consensus growing. For example, the World Bank is now saying that we must look for ways to benefit people in the lowest 40th percentile in terms of income, that we have to be concerned about distributive justice, not just economic growth."

"Such institutions are interested in discovering, for example, how we can talk about an agricultural production revolution which is not predicated on large-scale agribusiness farming, but is predicated instead on maintaining the small family farms in Asia."

Nowotny observed that food problems are not just a foreign problem. Americans are not only affluent, but in many ways very spoiled people he adds. "We waste enough resources every year to feed most of the people who are hungry," he says. "We would be a much healthier culture of people and in turn release resources for the rest of the world if we just didn't eat so much. And then prices in the U.S. would probably go down, too."

Nowotny looks at the lifeboat theory, which some think will be the eventual answer to world food problems.

"We do it every day, by the way we decide to allocate our resources, the way the government decides to fund its aid programs. Whenever you decide to do one thing, it probably means you're not going to be able to do something else. Those are lifeboat decisions in bits and pieces. Now, as to whether we will have to decide consciously to let some people starve and save others, I don't think it will be necessary if we take intelligent action now."

News About People

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger has urged chief justices from across the country to be fair to the public as well as individuals involved in court cases.

Burger told an annual conference of more than 200 chief justices Tuesday that greater regulation of the criminal justice system is needed and that he prefers a system where the bar takes an active role.

He said he believes the highest court in each state should examine its own particular problems, adding that one common problem was an unwillingness of state supreme courts to crack down on the misbehavior of lawyers.

Without mentioning Watergate, in which two dozen lawyers were convicted of crimes, he said the legal profession is coming under increasing public criticism for not regulating itself.

PRIMARY WINNER INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Sen. Vance Hartke thinks the 1976 Democratic presidential nominee will be the man who wins in the state preferential primaries.

Hartke, D-Ind., said he does not believe Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., or Alabama Gov. George Wallace will be the 1976 nominee, but beyond that "my crystal ball is very cloudy."

"I think the way Democratic rules are set up, the chances of a brokered convention setup are very unlikely," he said. "My judgment is that a man who is not in the primaries is not going to be the nominee."

HEARING DELAYED DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — A hearing on drug charges for Mrs. Marion Concannon, 41, daughter of Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, has been rescheduled for Sept. 11.

Mrs. Concannon, divorced mother of eight children, was arrested July 30 at her Point Pleasant home near here during early morning drug raids in Bucks and Montgomery counties.

She was charged with selling one ounce of hashish, with a street value of $100 to an undercover agent.

Mrs. Concannon, Scott's only daughter, was free on $1,000 bail.

Scott has said only: "I stand behind my daughter."

CAMPAIGN VIOLENCE HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh says he wants to be president "to kick a few rear ends, knock a few heads together and get this county turned around."

Bayh spoke at a news conference Tuesday, the day "The Committee for Birch Bayh in '76" filed papers with the Federal Elections Commission in Washington to allow Bayh to collect money.

"At this stage I'm just testing the waters," Bayh said. "We want to try to find out whether there are enough people across the nation who believe in Birch Bayh to put together a viable presidential campaign."

Bayh was in town to address the Pennsylvania Welfare Department's Juvenile Justice Day Conference. He then went to Philadelphia for his campaign's first Pennsylvania fundraiser.

Bayh, 47, is the ninth Democrat to announce his interest in running but withheld his formal announcement.

INNOCENT PLEA LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Director Sam Peckinpah, known for the violence in his movies, pleaded innocent Tuesday to a charge of punching an airline attendant and was ordered to stand trial Aug. 26.

Peckinpah, 53, was charged with battery for allegedly hitting a Continental Airlines employe June 20 during a ruckus at the airport.

According to police Peckinpah and a friend were asked to leave a plane about to take off for Hawaii because the pilot complained they had been drinking and were rowdy. Peckinpah, police said, punched a passenger service representative when he learned his luggage would remain aboard the plane.

Peckinpah's films include "The Wild Bunch," "Straw Dogs" and "Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia."

Search for Live On Planet Mars

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The United States sets out next week on a bold expedition to search for life on the planet Mars.

The $1 billion adventure is scheduled to begin with the launch at 4:59 p.m. EDT Monday of the first of two Viking robot explorers, most complicated unmanned spacecraft ever built. The second is set to follow 10 days later. Mars is now 180 million miles from earth, but it will take the first Viking almost 10 months and 505 million miles of interplanetary travel to overtake the red planet.

Viking 1 is scheduled to swing into orbit around Mars June 18, 1976, to begin scouting its landing site at the mouth of a 3,000 mile-long canyon in a northern hemisphere region known as Chryse. If everything goes according to plan, the first of the two landers will land gently on the Martian surface on July 4 — the nation's 200th birthday.

Each Viking, consisting of an orbiter and a lander, is packed with instruments that will carry out 13 separate scientific investigations, including two cameras that will radio back the first pictures of Mars as seen from the ground.

The most intriguing question the Vikings will attempt to answer is whether Mars harbors life of any kind.

"I really can't tell you what we're looking for, but if we find Martian biology, there isn't any doubt that it probably will change our lives," said Dr. Gerald A. Soffen, NASA's project scientist for the Viking project.

He said in a report written for the Martin Marietta Corp., builder of the Viking landers, that the question of life on Mars is a common thread in the interest of all 70 scientists responsible for the Viking studies.

"Without exception, the Viking scientist has in one way or another been enticed by the question of biology, whether he was a biologist or not," he said.

Each Viking carries three biology instruments that will analyze soil scooped up by a radio controlled digger to see if the dirt harbors organisms.

Project scientists say the chances are slim that life will be found, especially on the first look. But all agree that Mars has the best chance of any of the eight other planets of harboring some sort of living thing.

"I have placed it at something approaching one chance in 20 that there is now life on Mars," said Dr. Harold P. Klein, biologist at NASA's Ames Research Center, Mountain View, Calif. But, he said, "there is a much higher chance that we will find some evidence for chemicals related to life."

"In trying to conceive of forms of life on Mars, one dominant thing to note is the temperature variation which even at the equator can vary from 90 degrees Fahrenheit in the daytime to 100 degrees F. below zero at night," Klein said.

"The organisms on Earth that seem to function well while going through big temperature changes tend to be the simpler organisms such as bacteria, lichens, fungi and molds. Simple animals, like insects, can be frozen and unfrozen, and organisms such as amoeba and protozoa could easily be frozen at night, thawed during the day and do very nicely on Mars, temperature-wise."

Klein said the toughest problem in assessing the possibility of life on Mars is water.

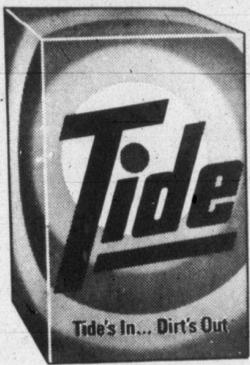

"For me to accept that life exists on Mars, I have to assume that water is available somewhere in some form and that Martian organisms have solved the problem of finding it and using it."

TICONDEROGA, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Gen. Schuyler reported that sickness had incapacitated one-fifth of his troops and that he had turned over "the little wine I had for my own table" to the regimental surgeon for medical use. He said he was trying to get a physician and hospital supplies from Albany.

Refugio Eliminates Pampa Little Leaguers, 16-1

By PAUL SIMS

WACO — John Reddell fired a no-hitter and allowed just six baserunners to lead Refugio to a 16-1 win over Pampa in the consolation round of the state Little League Tournament Wednesday at Lake Air Field here.

The win sends Refugio to the quarterfinals of the position round today. Pampa, with the loss and a 10-5 setback against Lumberton Tuesday in the opening round, was eliminated from the tournament after becoming the first team in four years to unseat Borger as District 1 champion.

Reddell's no-hitter was the first of the tournament, which has had several low-hit pitching performances. The curvballing Refugio pitcher struck out seven and walked four. Three of those who reached base were thrown out, three attempting to steal and the other on a double play.

Mike Warner, in the bottom of the first inning, reached on an error with one out and took second on a passed ball. He was thrown out trying to steal third. Curtice Morris walked and was out trying to steal second.

Steve McDougall opened the second for Pampa with a walk. He was forced at second on a ground ball by Rodney Brewer. On the next play, Clifford Anderson grounded to shortstop Albert Resendez, who forced Brewer at second and threw out Anderson at first.

In the third, Pampa scored its only run after Todd Rütthaler led off with a walk, moved to second one passed ball and to third on a wild pitch. He scored on an error on the second baseman. Kirt Crouch reached first on the play.

Crouch stole second and took third on a wild pitch. Steve Taylor walked with two out but was out trying to steal second.

Pampa put two on in the fourth but was unable to score.

Refugio took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second on a homerun over the centerfield fence by Norm Hosey. Refugio added three runs in the third when Reddell singled and Coad Bonner and John O'Donnell hit successive homers over the leftfield fence.

Refugio took a 9-0 lead with five runs in the fourth. Resendez and John Tinscomb hit doubles, two of the five hits in the inning. Refugio scored four runs in the fifth and three in the sixth.

Leading hitters for the winners included Resendez, who went two for five with two doubles and five runs batted in; Bonner, who went two for five with two rbi's; O'Donnell, two for three with two rbi's, and Dean O'Donnell, one for three with a homerun in the fifth inning.

Losing pitcher was starter Ed Guerra, who gave up eight hits in three and one-third innings, while walking two and striking out five. Tim Boyd, in one and two-thirds innings, yielded two hits and one walk. He was relieved by Chris Frazier, who struck out four.

The tournament will conclude Saturday with the championship game and consolation finals.

Yogi's Firing 'Natural'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Yogi Berra does everything naturally, instinctively. He played ball by instinct and it got him into the Hall of Fame. He managed the same way and it got him fired.

As a player with the New York Yankees, Berra was a natural some unbelievably bad pitches. They were so bad your little sister wouldn't swing at them, but the Yankees knew a good hitter when they saw one, and didn't try changing his style.

Never once did Yogi give the Yankees any trouble as a ballplayer. He wasn't a drinker, a gambler or a carouser, and everybody always knew where they could find him—in his hotel room before or after a ball game, watching TV or reading a comic book.

Mention Yogi Berra's name to some people during the time he played for the Yankees, and they'd laugh. Yogi was not a clown, but people laughed at the funny way he spoke and the way he looked in his pin-stripe Yankee uniform. He had a dumpy, unathletic build and a waddling gait. Nobody ever laughed at him, though, anytime he picked up a bat and walked up to the plate or crouched down behind it in full catching gear. When he did that, Yogi Berra was the complete professional, a natural, instinctive one.

He thought he could manage the same way, naturally and instinctively, but discovered he couldn't. He found that out twice, managing the Yankees in 1964 and managing the Mets the past three years.

Berra's instincts are basically honest and decent. He was brought up to give the best he has in him always. Nobody ever had to stay after him to get him out there and play ball, so as manager, he never felt he had to do that with his players. Actually no manager ever cracks down too hard too often, but Yogi never seemed to crack down at all. He was too permissive. When he was trying the other way, the whole thing would come out all wrong because it wasn't his nature to crack down on anyone.

Take the celebrated Phil Linz episode with the Yankees.

Seated in the back of the team bus, Linz pulled out a harmonica one day playing it. The Yanks weren't going well at all at the time, and Berra, sitting up front in the manager's seat, told Linz to knock it off.

Linz persisted playing to the point where Berra got up from his seat and started toward the back of the bus. A full-scale confrontation might have developed right there had not some other Yankee players grabbed the harmonica from Linz and thrown it onto the floor of the bus.

Yogi's authority wasn't appreciably strengthened by what happened. The Yankee brass, as matter of fact, had made up their minds to let him go and it didn't matter that he got them into a World Series that fall. They still fired him. To rub Yogi's nose a little more in the dirt, they replaced him with Johnny Keane, the man who had beaten him in the Series.

Managing the Mets was going to be entirely different. Yogi Berra was going to be much tougher and communicate with his players more.

To his credit, he did attempt to talk with the Mets' players far more than he did with the Yankees, but some things he simply couldn't bring himself to do. He couldn't bring himself to play policeman, to fine them everytime they were late or go into the clubhouse or the trainer's room all the time and chase them out onto the field.

I remember speaking with one of the Mets' outfielders in the clubhouse for a few minutes before a ball game last season. He should've been out on the field, but was lounging in front of his locker.

"When you speak to him like that, you give him all the excuse he needs not to go out," Berra said to me later.

Yogi provided Cleon Jones with any number of chances. He gave him so many, even Yogi's wife, Carmen, confronted the Mets' outfielder angrily and gave him a piece of her mind after Jones had made Berra look bad by refusing to go out and play the outfield in a game with Atlanta three weeks ago.

The Mets subsequently suspended Jones. Later, not wishing to go through possible arbitration procedure, they tried to persuade Berra to accept him back on the ball club.

Yogi said no, he could never look another ballplayer in the face again if he allowed Jones to come back. M. Donald Grant, the Mets' board chairman, and Joe McDonald, the club's general manager, talked to Berra. The more they did, the stronger Yogi's resolve became.

For sure, Jones kept the ball hidden from the Houston batters, yielding only a triple to Bob Watson, who later scored, and an infield single to Greg Gross—both in the second inning.

Jones, who has allowed only two earned runs in the last 40 innings and whose six shutouts lead the majors, was staked to a 4-0 lead in the first—the highlight being Ted Kubiak's two-run single.

Elimination Threatens PGA Entrants

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf had the PGA Championship all figured out even before it started today.

"There are about a half-dozen of us who can win, that's all, and I'm one of them," he said Wednesday.

There were 136 players in the starting field at Firestone Country Club, and most of them would be surprised to know they had been eliminated before they started.

But eliminated they were, at least in the mind of Weiskopf, and several players of equal stature generally agreed with him, too.

"This course eliminates a lot of the average-length hitters," said Johnny Miller.

"No question," said Lee Trevino, the PGA's defending champion. "It's so severe it eliminates a lot of players."

"The same guys have a chance to win here who have a chance in all the major championships," said Jack Nicklaus.

"The same group."

Weiskopf, who beat Nicklaus in sudden death to win the Canadian Open two weeks ago, then blew a seven-stroke lead last week in the Westchester Classic at Harrison, N.Y., was the only one willing to put names on that group of players, however, and he stopped when he got to six.

"Nicklaus, of course," Weiskopf said. "Trevino, because he drives so straight. Miller, streaky but tremendous. (Arnold) Palmer's still as good a driver as there is in golf. Hale Irwin, with good long irons, playing confidently."

The sixth?

"I can play as well as anybody and better than most," Weiskopf said.

One question immediately was, why Palmer, winless for two and a half years, and not Gary Player, a World Series of Golf winner three times on this same course?

"Palmer's a great competitor,"

Weiskopf said. "No one drives it straighter or more consistently, unless it's Trevino."

Weiskopf said "few get more from their basic ability" than Player, but discounts his chances here because, Tom said without elaborating, Player is "not a shotmaker."

It was a rather strange judgment to make since Player has won all over the world and under all conditions and his eight major championships are exceeded only by Nicklaus' 15.

All in that group have played well at Firestone, a 7,180-yard test that obviously puts a premium on distance. Recent rains have left it soft in spots and Nicklaus and Trevino, among others, observed that it's playing as long right now as it ever has. And the rough also is higher than normal. A timid soul won't win this week, that's for sure.

"This is as tough a golf course as there is in the United States," Nicklaus said.

"If the wind blows, a score as high as five over par will win," Trevino said.

"You don't finesse it here," Weiskopf said. "It's a slugger's type of course."

That's a reason Trevino didn't like Firestone, and didn't play here for years. But he won the World Series of Golf last September, came back for a National Golf Day exhibition this spring and shot a fourunder-par 66. Now he likes the course but off his recent play, since being struck by lightning at the Western Open in June, he's not too sure about his game.

"The course is ready," Trevino said. "I don't know if I'm ready for it, though. I don't think I'm playing well enough."

What's happened before, though, will be quickly forgotten. Even Weiskopf didn't sulk, for a minute, when he blew Westchester last weekend.

"I've forgotten all about that," he said Wednesday. "And I'm sure Nicklaus has forgotten about Canada, too."

Jones Controls Houston

Randy Jones, the San Diego Padres' 25-year-old southpaw, is a young man in a hurry—and he's wasting no time erasing the nightmare of 22 losses a year ago.

"I believe in fast games," Jones said Wednesday night after throwing just 72 pitches in hurling the San Diego Padres to a 6-1 victory over the Houston Astros. "I like to get 'em over so I can go out and do something else."

The victory, a neat two-hitter, gave Jones 15 wins for the season against six losses and lowered his league-leading earned run average to 1.85. Last year, he won eight and lost 22—tops in the majors—while posting an inflated 4.46 ERA.

"The biggest difference this year is threefold," said Jones. "First, our offense is better, second, our defense is better and third, Tom Morgan was named pitching coach."

Morgan, another of those ex-New York Yankees of the 1950s who keep making news, has been regarded as one of the more astute pitching tutors in the majors.

"He (Morgan) worked on my delivery, teaching me to use my entire body and not only my arm," said Jones. "Now I hide the ball better and don't tire in the late innings."

For sure, Jones kept the ball hidden from the Houston batters, yielding only a triple to Bob Watson, who later scored, and an infield single to Greg Gross—both in the second inning.

Jones, who has allowed only two earned runs in the last 40 innings and whose six shutouts lead the majors, was staked to a 4-0 lead in the first—the highlight being Ted Kubiak's two-run single.

Independence Marks Scottish Clansmen

By NEIL MORGAN
Copley News Service
LOCH TORRIDON, Scotland — Along the torn coastline of Wester Ross, among the wildest lochs of the Highlands, an afternoon cloud burst turned the mountain walls to gray. Our carefree ramble seemed at an end. We had no bed for the night and our car's fuel was almost gone. The few service stations we had seen in this remote region were closed by a refinery strike.

As the wipers fought against the rain, a figure in black oilskin loomed beside the road ahead. Water drained from his hat brim down through his red beard, but he stood his ground. As though conjured from my anxiety, a gasoline pump appeared at his side.

"I've been standing in the rain waiting for you, lad," he said. "But I'm only a wee bit wet."

As he filled the tank I complimented him on his tiny station, made snug by its chimneyed fireplace and its own front garden. "Aye, and do you like the big house behind it?" he asked. "The best thing, lad, is that I own them both. Everything on this ground is mine except the Easo sign, and if they misbehave I'll send it away and put up Shell."

Now we were surely in the Highlands, among the clansmen who have been beaten but never broken, whose talk of Scottish independence has surged again with the confidence of coming wealth from offshore oil.

Buoyed by his high spirits, we drove on to Loch Torridon, where the National Trust administers a 14,000-acre wilderness of heathered shoreline and moor and towering crags. Until 1967, when it was seized in lieu of death taxes, it was one of the feudal landholdings ruled by a handful of lairds and farmed sparsely by the crofters.

As golden twilight replaced the rain, we found a dormer room in the lodge looking out toward 3,300-foot Beinn Eighe — and down on a kilted piper whose stately march across the front lawn called us to a dinner of prawns and salmon taken that day from the loch.

In the glass cabinets that lined the hallway were not the souvenirs or jewelry found at most inns, but a vast selection of fishing flies, lures, and insect repellent pads.

Wester Ross is beyond the passive tourist belt; most who venture this far into Scotland's far northwest come to fish or hike or stroll the glens with a camera at the ready.

This is the serrated coast of the county known as Ross and Cromarty, which sweeps across Scotland from the Culloden battleground and Inverness to the Isle of Skye. No motorist can be in much of a hurry. There are few roads, and all are narrow. Here around Torridon, when two cars are about to meet, one pulls off the road to wait.

The main road winds along the loch shores as they cut deep into the land, and then follows the far shore back toward the sea. Even smaller roads leave this one to link the farthest crofters' villages along the shores, and then fade out in the moors because there is nowhere for them to go. Sometimes footpaths pick up along the shore to link with another dead-end road around the point.

As part of our clockwise circle around Scotland, we followed the North Road, which weaves around the lochs, veering almost due south for miles as it struggles northward. Down past Loch Ness and over jagged mountains it led to Kyle of Lochalsh, where a small open ferry crosses to the Isle of Skye.

Through groves of lush rhododendrons twice the height of a man we found our way to Shieldaig, an exquisite fisherman's village that looks out on an island of Scottish pines protected by the National Trust.

For two days, as we drove and parked, strolled and visited with the Highlanders, we played tag with mobile vans operated by the Bank of Scotland and the public library. Their drivers did not seem to hurry either. There is no lovelier place to be.

Scottish High Country

The Highlands near Ullapool, Scotland are marked by a jagged horizon, lake and graveyard. The few roads leading into the area are narrow. The area offers fishing and hiking.

'Hennessy' Rates High As Well Made Thriller

By DAVID DUGAN
NEW YORK (UPI) — Thrillers that don't rely on earthquakes, burning office buildings or malevolent fish are hard to come by these days. So it is nice to note an exceptionally well-made thriller in "Hennessy," which has Rod Steiger set on blowing up the British Royal Family during the Queen's annual opening of Parliament.

He doesn't succeed, you know, any more than Edward Fox did in his fictional assassination attempt on President de Gaulle in "Day of the Jackal." The fun is in seeing how close he gets.

Steiger, as Hennessy, is a demolition expert in Belfast, a man who has opted out of the Irish Republican Army and violence until his wife and daughter fall innocent victims in one of the street battles that plague that religiously divided city.

Seeking the ultimate revenge, he goes to London bent on making himself a human bomb that will explode in the House of Lords as Queen Elizabeth reads her speech to the assembled lords and members of Parliament.

security, he first invades the home of an M.P., ties the fellow up and then transforms himself into a look-alike convincing enough to take his place a few yards from the royal throne.

Out to stop him are not only the sleuths of Scotland Yard but his former IRA friends from Belfast, who reason such an outrage "would set our cause back 50 years."

"Day of the Jackal" managed more suspense. But "Hennessy," directed by Britain's Don Sharp, nevertheless is a first-class drama which avoids exploiting its subject matter. Gore is minimal and the violence subdued.

The performances are all fine including Steiger. Lee Remick as a friend's widow who gives him a bed in London, and a bearded Richard Johnson as the Scotland Yard inspector out to stop him.

Others in the cast include Trevor Howard as a Scotland Yard commander and Eric Porter and Peter Egan among the IRA men. They are excellent, as is the wonderfully crisp photography (by Ernest Steward) that catches the streets of Belfast and London as well as it does the halls of Parliament, parts of which were recreated to perfection at London's Pinewood studios.

What is downright amazing is the film's climax, which intercuts color documentary footage of the Queen and royal family at an actual opening of Parliament.

It is so expertly worked into the movie that "Hennessy" justifiably begins with a note assuring that the royal family did not actually participate in making the movie. You'd swear they did.

In fact a considerable controversy has been generated in Britain both by the film's use of that footage and by a major theater chain's refusal to distribute "Hennessy" because of it.

Actor Johnson, incidentally, also contributed the original story on which the film is based. "Hennessy" is an American International picture, rated PG.

Your Horoscope

By Jeanne Dixon

FRIDAY, AUGUST 8

Your birthday today: You diverge from planned courses in the first quarter of this year and work on experiments. You devote the rest of the year to adjusting your new programs as your judgment becomes keener. Budgeting becomes a challenge after you enter a new vocation or use new techniques. Today's natives have sound logic, original ideas and the will to work.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Begin rather late and don't bother making up for lost time. Anything you buy turns out to be a little different from your expectations and overpriced. Keep purchases to a minimum.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Trading isn't favored. Nobody's judgment is very sound in all of the confusion. Your imagination runs strong and guides you into productive channels.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Rely upon your own appraisals but keep in mind that you haven't got the complete story and that your perspective is a bit blurred. Don't make snap decisions.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Just get through today without upsetting anyone about original ideas or new questions. Finish your week's work. You'll regret any indulgence today.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Don't lend, borrow or make advance payments on contracts that have not yet been negotiated. The truth behind an unfamiliar incident isn't readily visible. Short cuts fail.

Alger Hiss Can Resume Law Career

BOSTON (UPI) — Alger Hiss can now resume the law career interrupted 23 years ago when he was convicted for perjury in the "Pumpkin Papers" case — the incident that initially propelled Richard Nixon into the national spotlight.

Hiss was disbarred August, 1952, shortly after the conviction that landed him in prison for 44 months in the most celebrated Communist spy case of the turbulent Joe McCarthy era. He always has maintained his innocence.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court Tuesday ordered that Hiss be readmitted to practice law in the state.

Hiss, now 60, sells stationary supplies for a New York company. He applied for reinstatement to the bar in November.

Robert DeGiacomo, counsel for the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers, said Tuesday there was no further barrier to Hiss's becoming an attorney again. He said Hiss's lawyers probably would begin the formal readmission procedure soon.

The ruling marked Hiss's second victory in a week in his campaign to clear his name.

Last Thursday, the U.S. Justice Department said it had turned over to Hiss's lawyers the "Pumpkin Papers" film involved in the trial which ended with the conviction of Hiss on two counts of perjury in January, 1950.

That trial placed Nixon, then an obscure California congressman who probed the case, in the political spotlight.

The conviction hinged on testimony by Whittaker Chambers, a confessed former Communist agent. He said Hiss, then a State Department official, transmitted secret papers to him.

They allegedly were put into a pumpkin for safekeeping. However, questions have arisen about the authenticity of the "Pumpkin Papers."

Home Interiors

Mary Sturgeon

Ben Sturgeon and his sister Mary always had wanted a family business and in 1973 they opened Home Interiors. Sturgeon is an attorney in Amarillo and Miss Sturgeon, a retired school teacher, runs the store.

"We were both born and raised here," said Miss Sturgeon. "We like Pampa and the Pampa people that's why we opened here."

Miss Sturgeon believes the store at 1621 N. Hobart, gives her the chance to meet people at closer contact than any other way she knows.

Home Interiors carries furniture and carpet. "We provide our customers with an experienced interior decorator to help in any problems," said Miss Sturgeon.

She explained that the store will expand into more specialized decorating items in the near future.

"When the salesmen come through they tell us how business is around here," said Miss Sturgeon. "From the number of orders that they get and from the amount of repeat orders they say that the whole Panhandle area does as well if not better than big cities such as Houston, which have the volume."
