My brother Garrett, who is quite a fine and interesting fellow even if he is my brother, spends lots of time on his motorcycle.

He passed through Pampa last week on his way back to Colorado from a bike trip through Canada and Florida.

As he travels around, he sits astride his motorcycle and thinks. His latest thoughts have been aimed at his future. He's decided to run for president on the campaign platform that if he is elected, he will abolish the office and the government.

There was a case in Colorado Springs where a woman ran for county school superintendent on the premise that if she was elected, she would wipe out the job.

She was elected by a two to one margin and she abolished the job the minute the law allowed it. Even the incumbent to the $8,500 a year job agreed that it was obsolete.

The county superintendent's duties had diminished over the years. Originally the superintendent was in charge of tests and curriculum in the county schools. But as school districts became larger and sought separate superintendents the county person's job became increasingly small.

Along a similar line, a friend of mine who lives in the Colorado mountains has waged a personal war on wastefulness, over consumption and extravagance. What he calls extravagance that is.

His current battle is against pets and the amount of food they consume when, as the saying goes, children all over the world are going to bed hungry.

His solution is a bit gory. He believes that each person who owns a pet should donate his or her body to a pet food company when he or she dies.

The Alanreed carrier for the Pampa News, Jackie Hill, heard something drop into the bathtub and found upon investigation, that it was a snake.

"Just a little, ole gray one," Hill said. He believes it entered the bathroom through the commode and jumped into the bathtub.

He had heard of that happening before, he said, and claimed he wasn't hesitant about taking baths.

"No use paying attention to it, probably won't happen again in a thousand years," Hill said.

The allowance which we all donate to the FBI seems to do little but provide Efram Zimbalist with plots for the television show which proposes to simulate the superspy activities.

The agency recently revealed, with some resistance to the House select committee on intelligence, that it spends $499,546,000 a year and almost $83 million of that is directed at intelligence on domestic crime and foreign agents.

Even at that, officials couldn't tell the congressmen how many foreign agents are in the United States or how many spies are caught with the counterespionage funds.

It might be that they didn't want to tell for security reasons. Or it might be that they didn't want to tell because they were embarrassed about the number.

A survey by the Institute of Life Insurance reports that tough times economically haven't changed the American dream of a good life.

People between the ages of 14 and 25 ranked items according to their essential needs of the future.

Home ownership led the list. Others in order of preference were a pension plan, a savings account of at least $5,000, life insurance totaling at least $50,000, a college education, a new car, and air conditioned home, opportunities to travel abroad, a stereo system, a master's degree, a color TV set and a dishwasher.

The News casually asked some folks around here about their necessities. They listed homes, cars, clothes, jobs, books.

Ullman Wants Tax Cuts Permanent Peace Pact 'Defined'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To

avert an abrupt rise in taxes next January, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee is proposing that Congress make permanent the $7.7 billion in individual tax cuts enacted earlier this year.

The position taken Tuesday by Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., gives impetus to attempts by other Democrats to enact — with or without the administration's approval — new tax cut legislation designed to speed up what otherwise might be a long recovery from the recession.

Some economists say the recovery could abort if petroleum and food prices increase this winter and the tax cut of 1975 is not extended.

Without an extension, taxes will rise automatically Jan. 1. Paychecks would reflect an increase in withholding.

Ullman is also calling for extending for 59 investment tax credit enacted in spring. Together, they save business $4.8 billion a year decade either the economy needed the stimulus of a renewal of the tax cut. It wants to put off that decision until October.

Ullman offered his proposal in a pamphlet issued by his committee on ideas to be considered when it takes up a tax reform bill in September.

He and 10 liberal members also proposed broadening the so-called minimum tax, the 1969 reform intended to make sure at least some taxes were paid by all, even the beneficiaries of preferential tax treatment. They did not agree on how it should be done.

For individuals, Ullman proposed making permanent 1975 tax cuts achieved by raising the minimum standard deduction from $1,300 to $1,600 and to $1,900 for joint returns, increasing the percentage standard deduction from 15 to 16 per cent and the maximum standard deduction from $2,000 to $2,300 for single persons and to $2,600 for joint returns, and giving every taxpayer, taxpayer's spouse and dependent a tax credit of $30. A credit is an amount subtracted from taxes

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (UPI) — Egyptian presidential spokesman Tahsin Bashir said today "all issues" have been defined for a new interim Sinai accord and that the negotiations with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger were "head on" for an agreement.

He had said a few hours earlier that the agreement was down to the wording of a single clause—a clause specifying that such issues as the status of Jerusalem, the future of the West Bank of the Jordan and the future of Palestinians must await a later agreement.

The Egyptian position is very clear, Bashir said as Kissinger's helicopter flew to Janakia airbase for his trip back to Israel. All issues have been defined.

The question is if there is an agreement with the other side then we will be head on," he said. But that remains for us to see what Dr. Kissinger brings back.

Bashir, the official spokesman for President Anwar Sadat, said Egypt wanted to specify that the Sinai troop disengagement agreement is only one of a series of Arab-Israeli agreements needed to bring permanent peace to the Middle East.

All three of Cairo's big newspapers—Al Akhbar and Al Gomhuria—said today the pact would be initiated Friday and formally signed next month in Geneva. Bashir called these reports premature.

Egyptian sources said military commanders and not political leaders will initial the disengagement pact and then sign it formally later in Geneva.

Kissinger was flying to Jerusalem later today and returning to Alexandria Thursday night or Friday morning, the Egyptians said.

A Sadat aide said all major issues have been settled and only the wording of the clause was causing trouble. He said the clause would specify that such problems as control of Jerusalem, the future of the West Bank of the Jordan and the fate of Palestinian refugees must be handled in future settlements.

Diplomats said Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin probably would issue statements when Kissinger gets the settlement document initialed. They said Sadat might then announce that Israeli cargoes—but not Israeli ships—could pass through the Suez Canal.

They said such explosive issues as Cairo lessening or dropping its economic blockade and propaganda attacks against Israel probably would be handled—if at all—in separate papers in the form of Egyptian letters to the United States.

When and if Dr. Kissinger will bring back an affirmative reply if that is done, then the road will be open to an agreement, Bashir told reporters.

The big issues of substance have been agreed upon, Bashir said. But there must be clarification of some of the clauses in the agreement. I am optimistic that the agreement will be signed.

He stressed the importance of Egypt getting Israeli agreement to the wording of the agreement as sought by Sadat.

Kissinger and his wife Nancy drove at midmorning from the Has El Tin state guest palace to the Mediterranean shore villa of Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy.

U.S. officials said Kissinger immediately went into discussions with Fahmy while his wife went swimming.

Sadat and Kissinger planned a private conference before the secretary's plane shuttled back to Israel in the late afternoon.

Proxmire Says Funds Used to Arouse Males

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire said today the government is spending $121,000 to sexually arouse male college students with pornographic movies. The purpose of the project is to study the effects of marijuana.

Proxmire called the project "one of the most shocking examples of the federal love machine I have ever found." It is conducted by the National Institute on Drug Abuse at Southern Illinois University.

The Wisconsin Democrat said the grant was one of several NIDA projects costing more than $1 million that also study marijuana effects on hypnosis and facial expressions, marijuana use among the Zulus and the use of a drug in North Yemen.

Calling the studies "outrageous," Proxmire said NIDA has the responsibility for fighting one of the most serious and tragic social problems in our society, but where in heaven's name are their priorities?

Dr. Robert Dupont, director of the agency, said the studies were making "an important contribution to our better understanding of drug abuse and how to prevent it."

A spokesman for the agency said about 60 adult males are part of the research project in which they are given marijuana and then sexually aroused.

"We show them erotic movies and then measure their sexual response by placing a ring over the male organ," the spokesman said.

Dupont said in a statement "Interest in this area has arisen because of earlier evidence suggesting possible impairment of male sexual response related to chronic marijuana use."

despite the belief that marijuana enhances sexual arousal.

If indeed it interferes with such functioning, such information may be an important deterrent to use, he said.

Each of us will remember Lyndon Johnson in a different way, Briscoe said.

But all of us will remember him as a giant of a man who dreamed big, who fought hard and who left a huge imprint on the nation he loved. We are a richer people for having had him among us.

Ladybird Johnson, who planned to spend the day at her ranch 50 miles west of Austin, guided reporters Tuesday on a preview of the bicentennial exhibit at the LBJ Library.

The plastic encased documents in the exhibit contain the comments of 33 American presidents about the White House job.

"I hope that a great many students, citizens and interested citizens will see it and get some sense of the flesh and blood characters that were the president in these years," Mrs. Johnson told reporters.

The Presidents on the Presidency includes reflections—many handwritten—by every president from George Washington to Johnson except Chester A. Arthur and James Buchanan on the task facing occupants of the White House. Most of the documents are on loan from the Library of Congress and various historical collections around the country.

Briefest of the documents is a pencil-scribbled note by Calvin Coolidge on a lined tablet. "I do not choose to run for President in nineteen twenty-eight."

The terse statement Coolidge handed his secretary to issue to reporters caught even his wife by surprise, according to researchers.

Today LBJ's Birthday

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Lyndon B. Johnson once summed up the presidency as "the job of the President is to set priorities for the nation."

His remarks, part of the manuscript of his memoirs, "The Vantage Point," are included in a special bicentennial exhibit opened to the public today as part of the observance honoring the birthday of the late president.

Today is also a state holiday in honor of Johnson, who was born 67 years ago, and Gov. Dolph Briscoe urged Texans to pause to honor the memory of LBJ.

Each of us will remember Lyndon Johnson in a different way, Briscoe said.

But all of us will remember him as a giant of a man who dreamed big, who fought hard and who left a huge imprint on the nation he loved. We are a richer people for having had him among us.

John F. Kennedy is represented by a handwritten excerpt from his book, "Profiles in Courage." The writing is so difficult to read, however, a typed text is displayed alongside for viewers to decipher the words.

Mrs. Johnson said she was surprised at a letter by Abraham Lincoln defending suspension of constitutional rights such as habeas corpus.

"You forget how tense it was during the Civil War—13,000 people were put in jail for subversive activity such as support for the South and draft evasion," she said. "It came as a sort of a surprise to me the intensity of that period of our past."

We finally decided to go ahead and give the award jointly because although the Jaycees have been at it longer than Coach Royal, their spirits are about the same," Ms. Walker-Ashworth said.

She said Royal was picked because of his opposition to regulations issued by the Department of Health Education and Welfare requiring more emphasis on women's athletic programs. The Texas athletic director said if the school was required to split proceeds equally from its football program with women's sports, several men's sports programs would have to be canceled for lack of funds.

Coach Royal has a right to oppose Title 9 if he wants to," Ms. Walker-Ashworth said. "But we feel his going to Washington and airing his personal prejudice is a little extreme."

She said the Jaycees were cited for their antiquated policy of not admitting women members.

Most of our women are professional women and it's rather irritating when an organization like that won't even look at your credentials."

Asked if she expects the award to change the attitudes of Royal or the Jaycees, she replied "No but it makes us feel better."

Weather

Considerable cloudiness with cooler temperatures is the forecast for today and Thursday. The highs today will be in the mid 80s, and the lows in the 60s.

Meany Says Longshoremen Won't Load Soviet Grain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany, who failed to win the promises he was seeking in a face to face meeting with President Ford, says longshoremen still will refuse to load American grain for shipment to the Soviet Union.

The situation has not changed in any way whatsoever," Meany said as he strode to his limousine after a 90 minute White House meeting Tuesday with Ford, Labor Secretary John Dunlop and leaders of the AFL-CIO maritime unions.

Asked if the longshoremen's boycott would continue, he replied emphatically "Yes, sir."

Meany, a staunch foe of détente, went to the White House demanding promises the recent sales of nearly 10 million tons of grain to Russia will not raise domestic prices or hurt U.S. shipping interests. Without those assurances, he said the boycott would not be lifted.

He indicated he had received more information during the meeting, but no such assurances.

But Meany and White House press secretary Ron Nessen said the meeting had produced one thing — a promise of more meetings between union and administration officials, possibly even including the President.

The White House issued a statement Nessen said was agreed upon by all the participants. The statement described it as a preliminary meeting on the issues of grain exports, living costs and maritime issues.

"No decisions were made," it said. "There will be further meetings between administration officials and Mr. Meany and his associates. The President will participate in the future meetings as appropriate."

Earlier Tuesday, Dunlop met with Meany, AFL-CIO Secretary Treasurer Lane Kirkland, three of Ford's economic and budget advisers and the leaders of four maritime unions.

Behind the boycott is Meany's belief the United States has given too much to the Soviets in the cause of détente. He is demanding two things: a new U.S. Soviet shipping agreement granting more favors to the Americans—and more government control of exports to assure that domestic prices will not be affected adversely.

the Chamber of Commerce office.

Melvin Kunkel, chairman, and James McCune, vice chairman of the committee, reported the current local survey, in cooperation with Gov. Dolph Briscoe's program to expand economic development in Texas, still is in progress and probably will take another two weeks to be completed.

The statewide program includes in its goals the development of 4,000 new permanent and unsubsidized jobs and the expansion of businesses and industries.

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Industrial Foundation are working together for the local implementation of the governor's program.

Across the state, the effort is expected to generate an additional $277 million annually, according to Reagan Brown, chairman of the Governor's Job Creation Campaign.

The Pampa chamber and the PIF are working locally to coordinate efforts by serving as an information source.

Kunkel said members of the local committee are in the process of calling on 85 concerns that employ large numbers of persons.

Cards have been mailed to smaller employers seeking information on employment potentials for the future.

Four state agencies — Texas

Industrial Commission, Texas Education Agency, Texas Employment Commission and Texas Department of Community Affairs — are pooling their respective expertise to help companies expand wisely. That information is free of charge. Training to meet the needs of employers also is available.

Locally, the Texas First Committee, Industrial Foundation and Chamber of Commerce are working with local companies to identify barriers to their expansion and assist in directing requests for assistance to the state agencies.

Companies are being urged to sign cards pledging to hire new employees, whether one or 100.

Chamber of Commerce executive vice president E.O. Wedgworth today again urged every local employer to "work with the local Texas First Committee by taking advantage of the program's many facets and bring Pampa some of the profit anticipated through making Texas First

Friedman and Freedom

It is difficult to imagine what the world would be like without Milton Friedman. Founder of the "Chicago School," chief exponent of the so-called monetarist interpretation of economics, popularizer of the slogan, "There's no such thing as a free lunch," Friedman could well be America's best loved economist. The trouble is, best loved economists are seldom taken seriously enough by the political establishment, and when they are taken seriously it is usually for some spurious reason such as Friedman's "negative income tax."

Truly there are other, more libertarian economists than Milton Friedman. Murray Rothbard comes to mind, and, at libertarianism's pacifist end, Robert LeFevre. But few are so celebrated, deservedly so, or so popular as the noted author of "Capitalism and Freedom," co-author of "A Monetary History of the United States," Newsweek columnist and advisor to presidents, No. 1 Washington program, no bureaucratic scheme or congressional boondoggle has been left unscrutinized or uncriticized by Milton Friedman.

Probably there are two key points for which Professor Friedman will be remembered, and for which economic evangelists should thank him. His emphasis on monetary policy, the release of government-mandated dollars into the marketplace as a more important cause of inflation than fiscal policy. His curmudgeonly slogan, "There's no such thing as a free lunch." For a lay interpretation of Friedmanism, there is nothing more succinct.

The slogan is Friedman's way of describing economic reality: nothing, no subsidy, no inflation, no government program leaves every pocketbook unaffected. It is paid for, in full, by somebody — the producing element of society. If programs are subtracted from a total production, then everybody has to pay, even the people who supposedly benefit from the restraints on the economy. No matter what politicians say.

Friedman has become so identified with the slogan that he's chosen it as the title of his newest book, a collection of his Newsweek columns, some trail-blazing articles for the New York Times Magazine and his delightful Playboy interview. "There's No Such Thing As A Free Lunch" is just out in paperback, published by Open Court at $3.95. (Had the inflaters listened to its author years ago, the price would be a fourth that.)

Whether considering Negro unemployment, the military draft, the rate of inflation, gas allocation, the mark versus the dollar, Friedman examines them all from the point of view of the free market. To the dismay of the interventionists and socialists of all stripes, he finds that, in the end, freedom is the most productive supplier of human needs. Nor is the book a ponderous economic tome, but some of the liveliest writing and comment ever done on a matter affecting everybody's pocketbook.

Milton Friedman is a "congenital optimist" uncomfortably placed by the temper of the times in the role of Cassandra. As he told the Playboy interviewer, "The spirit of the times has gone against it. There are still intellectuals who believe that concentrated power is a force for good as long as it's in the hands of men of good will. I'm waiting for the day when they reject socialism, communism and all other varieties of collectivism, when they realize that a security blanket isn't worth the surrender of our individual freedom even if it can be provided by government. There are faint stirrings and hopeful signs. Even some of the intellectuals who were most strongly drawn to the New Deal in the thirties are rethinking their positions, dabbling just a little with free-market principles. They're moving slowly and taking each step as though they were exploring a virgin continent. But it's not dangerous. Some of us have lived here quite uncomfortably long."

Some of us, we're happy to say, have been Milton Friedman's philosophical neighbors. And we haven't seen any signs of declining property values.

Assessing Bangladesh

Weighing the assassination of Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman of Bangladesh in the coin of foreign power equations, some observers see a gain for the West. His successor, Commerce and Trade Minister Khondakkar Mushtaque Ahmed, is considered pro-American.

However, only a gloomy appraisal is possible if the death of the popular prime minister is weighed in moral and philosophical terms. Bangladesh was born in the bloody India-Pakistan war of 1971. It was united in the fervent hope that its people could live under a constitutional democracy. Sheikh Rahman was the epitome of that hope.

His death at the hands of his personal bodyguards cannot help but send messages of fear to every underdeveloped and unstable nation everywhere in the world.

Hiroshima Dilemma

The date is August 6, 1945, and an atomic bomb has just been exploded over the city of Hiroshima, Japan.

In the time it takes to stoop down and tie your shoe, thousands of lives were snuffed out and thousands of others were seared into life-long misery.

That's one side of the story — the sad one.

The other side is that a long and miserable lives-consuming war had been ended. That's the happy side.

In between is a continuing debate over the use of the bomb to stop the war. Was it necessary? Was it justified?

Should the United States, the world's most civilized nation, ever have employed such a bomb?

It is a question with no answer — or any number of answers, depending on where you stand and how your mind runs.

The United States has been successful in its Pacific invasions up until that point, and the next item on the agenda was the invasion of big one — Japan itself.

Some of the men who returned from that war zone said later on that they had the idea that the Japan invasion certainly would consume thousands of lives on both sides — and even then the outcome was not clear. Selfishly, they were thankful that two bombs — the one that fell on Hiroshima and the one used on Nagasaki — had brought an abrupt end to the war, thereby saving their lives and sending them home to their loved ones.

Perhaps the use of the nuclear bomb was a necessary evil. If that be so, let it burn like an incendiary in the minds of men everywhere and, hopefully, prevent any future destruction from this all-consuming destructive force.

"Sorry, old chaps—but you don't have the key..."

Simon Comments On Economy

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon appears to be one of the few people in government who grasps what is wrecking the economy of this country. In an article in "Treasury Papers," a publication of the Treasury Department, Simon pointed out: "During the 1960s, the United States had the worst record of capital investment among the major industrialized nations of the Free World."

Correspondingly, our records of productivity growth and overall economic growth during this period was also among the lowest of the major industrialized nations.

As other nations have channeled relatively more of their resources into capital investment and have acquired more modern plants and equipment, they have eroded our competitive edge in world markets.

Our record on capital investments reflect the heavy emphasis we are placing on personal consumption and government spending as opposed to savings and capital formation.

Our record also reflects a precipitous decline in corporate profits since the mid-1960s.

While the U.S. economy remains sufficiently large and dynamic to overcome our investment record of recent years, our future economic growth will be tied much more directly to the adequacy of our capital investments. Estimates of future needs vary, but it is relatively clear that in coming years we will have to devote approximately three times as much money to capital investments as we have in the recent past.

In another article, in the same issue of "Treasury Papers," Simon went on to state:

"Americans are rightly concerned about the fiscal plight of the largest and richest city in the land because they know that the philosophy which has prevailed in New York — the philosophy of spend and spend, elect and elect — first took root and flourished here in Washington, D.C."

Neither man nor government continue to live beyond their means for very long. A family that persists in such habits will eventually enter bankruptcy. A city will ultimately default on its loans. And a nation will first upon its citizens the cruelest and most regressive tax of all, inflation.

In a summation on the last page of "Treasury Papers" which, although not carrying his byline, nevertheless, reflects Simon's trenchant style, the following appears:

"Twenty years ago, government spending at all levels — federal, state and local — represented about one-fourth of the Gross National Product, i.e., the total U.S. production of goods and services. Government spending since has nearly quadrupled and today accounts for one-third of GNP.

The fastest growth has been in so-called income transfer payments, that is, in government checks sent to individuals for Social Security, Medicare, unemployment compensation, welfare, veterans benefits and similar programs. On the other hand, outlays for defense and other direct operations of government, while on the rise in dollar terms, have been holding roughly steady as a percentage of GNP.

If recent spending trends continue, government expenditures will account for more than half of every dollar spent on goods and services by the end of this century."

Brave and accurate words. Plainly, as Simon so well states, government with its insatiable appetite is consuming more and more of our capital "seed corn" needed for tomorrow's production leaving less and less for the private productive sector of our country. As to the corrective action needed, Simon is no less clear on that head. Nothing less than massive cuts in governmental spending, together with just as massive reductions in taxation, the "cruellest tax" (inflation) included, will serve to reverse the capital-destroying trend.

For all his brave words, however, Treasury Secretary Simon's actions do not match his words. For "Treasury Papers," you see, is a slick (the issue in which Simon's brave words appear being Volume I, No. 1) put out at taxpayer expense. At a time when drastic government cutbacks in spending are indicated, the appearance of "Treasury Papers" will serve to accelerate, rather than slow down, government consumption of our capital "seed corn." Simon, himself, you see, is part of the problem.

Nor does Simon appear to be aware of what his underlings in the Department are thinking — and saying in print. In the same issue of "Treasury Papers" in which Simon's incisive remarks appeared, an article by his Under Secretary Edward C. Schmult, contained these revealing words: "We believe that revenue sharing has had a significant benefit for the poor and minorities, and has contributed in an important way to meeting social goals in general."

If "revenue sharing" is not a prime example of the "income transfer payments" which Simon lambasts as being one of the principal capital consuming culprits, we don't know what is

Silly Old Shortsighted Grasshopper

There once was a grasshopper, the story goes, that loved to play. All it wanted to do was sing and hop through the grass, enjoying the warm rays of the summer sun.

One day it came across a colony of ants. Each was busy working. Some were gathering and storing food. Others were repairing their hill. The grasshopper increased the tempo of his frolicking as he tried to distract the ants from their work. His efforts to get the ants to join him in play were to no avail.

He jumped higher and sang louder. "The sun is shining, it's time to be jolly. The grass is green, to work is plain folly," the grasshopper pleaded.

The ants kept working. Finally, the elder ant looked up at the grasshopper and, stroking his long white beard, explained: "We ants like to take it easy and enjoy ourselves, too. But soon the fair days of summer will fade away into the stark realities of winter. We must get our work done or we won't have enough food or a place to live when the snow falls."

The grasshopper just laughed. He gathered only enough food to eat day to day. Mostly, he was too busy playing. On those days he would nibble away at his small cache of supplies. It never occurred to him to replace or build up his stores. His roof was in disrepair. But the falling rain was warm and the sun quickly dried him. He was living well.

How silly those ants are, passing up all this easy living, he chuckled.

Finally, the clouds appeared. The snow came. The grasshopper's roof caved in. His food was buried. In desperation he searched out the ants. They were burrowed safely in their hill.

In America we seem to have too many grasshoppers — those who feel we can continue to consume and spend our way out of our economic woes. They discount the value of the ants — those who produce and invest, thus creating jobs, the only permanent answer to unemployment and shortages.

When will we realize how silly and shortsighted the grasshopper's philosophy is? — Stanley Modic, Industry Week

Boyfriend's Kisses Are Not Helping Romance

DEAR ABBY: I'm going with a wonderful guy named Morris. He's a terrific fellow, but he has one fault. When he kisses me, he gets carried away and bites my lips. After an evening with Morris, my lips are bruised and raw — sometimes they even bleed!

My mother keeps asking me what's the matter with my lips, and I keep making up excuses. (They're "chapped.") Will you please tell me how I can get Morris to take it easy when he kisses me? I have told him a dozen times not to be so rough, but he forgets. This is no put-on.

DEAR SORE: When Morris "forgets" and gets rough, give him a good klop on the back to remind him to take it easy. And keep it up until he's conditioned.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 34-year-old widow who fell in love with a married man. (I'll call him "Rex.") He has two children. We've been seeing each other for 18 months, and I love him dearly. Rex says he loves me and needs me, and as soon as he's financially able to swing it, he'll divorce his wife and marry me.

Rex still lives with his wife, but claims that he has had nothing to do with her since he met me. Here is the part that just about drove me to suicide: He told me yesterday that his wife is now pregnant! He swears it isn't his, but how can I be sure?

I have an 8-year-old son who worships Rex, and if I were to break it off with him, it would be almost as though my son were losing another father because Rex treats him like a son.

How much longer should I give Rex? — LOVES HIM

DEAR LOVES: The advice from here is to say goodbye now and to tell Rex that you don't want to see his face until he is a free man.

In the meantime, you'd better start planning your life without him because as I see it, that is what you will have to do eventually.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the man whose wife is driving him up the wall by her constant use of "you know" in every sentence. Rejoice! At least "you know" implies that you can comprehend what is being said.

We have a brother who ends almost every sentence with "understand?" This leaves one with the feeling that his mental capacity to follow a simple conversation is somewhat in doubt.

Far better "you know" than "understand?" HIS SISTER, UNDERSTAND?

DEAR SISTER: I understand, you know.

Up With People Puts A Smile on Your Face

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

They did look well scrubbed; and they did look like a United Nations poster; and their songs did get a bit moralistic at times. But, man, what a show. Up With People Tuesday night gave Pampa a show which included variety, talent, nostalgia, internationalism, rhythm, humor and neighborliness. They seemed awfully glad to be in Pampa and, judging from their reception, Pampa seemed awfully glad to have them. There may be a community of grumps somewhere which despises Up With People. But it certainly isn't Pampa. The show, which will be presented again at 8 p.m. today, was enough to lift spirits, cheer heavy hearts, encourage the weary and put a smile on your face.

recalled a letter from home... a tiny European village where they expected to give and instead they received.

Arrangements, with the exception of a couple of dance routines which seemed to busy, fit the group with ease. Direction was punctual; pace was effective.

Most songs fit individual solos beautifully. Kevin Brown asking about the color of God's skin. Gary Verrill singing the blues. The singer in a country western voice calling out "When Things Get Worse, Who Ya Gonna Blame?" Darryl Oliver, backed up by some clever choreography, rendering "Paper Boy." Gorgeous voices blending in a Spanish song from Venezuela. Jerome Stocco belting out rock.

They are only a handful of the solosists who really knew their voices.

And the bank. The bass player, Marcus Talley, carried part of a selection all by himself admirably. The two other guitarists seemed to hold the group together and they were tops.

A special part of the show was a salute to the United States' 200th Birthday with a brass rock song, "200 Years and She's Just a Baby." The cast took its audience on a history book tour of the "instant country" from Old Ironsides to Apollo, from the "Wabash Cannonball" (and a splendid display of footwork) to the sad cry of misplaced judgments resulting in ruined people and lands.

chant were given by American Indians in the group.

Then the group of young people broke out into a medley of popular songs by such composers as John Denver to Elton John. They seemed most comfortable with that, as if it were a familiar common language binding youth of every nation. Fifteen countries were represented in the group.

Colorful costumes helped illustrate folk dances such as the square dance petticoats and overalls for a cramped rendition of Turkey in the Straw.

The production considerably changed pace now and then so the audience could cool off before it had to start stomping, snapping and singing again. It was enough to wear one out, just watching Up With People.

Astronaut's Tumor Out

HOUSTON (UPI) — America's oldest astronaut, Donald "Deke" Slayton, has won his second medical battle and his doctors say he should be able to return to space flight status.

Much like a heart irregularity which grounded him for 13 years, a tumor in Slayton's left lung wasn't as bad as doctors first thought.

The tumor was benign although cancer specialists had said there was a better than 50 per cent chance it was malignant because of Slayton's age and because he smoked heavily for 30 years until he quit New Year's Day 1973.

The last active member of the original seven Mercury astronauts has another chance to fly in space, a dream he finally fulfilled last month as a pilot on the historic joint U.S.-Soviet mission.

Slayton, 51, had little to say after the two-and-a-half-hour operation Tuesday at M.D.

Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

"That's good," Dr. Charles Berry, the former chief astronaut physician, quoted Slayton as saying when told the tumor was benign.

Marjory Slayton was elated and one doctor said she told him: "Thank God. It's finally over."

Slayton was grounded from the only previous chance he had to fly in space in 1962 because of a minor heart irregularity. He bitterly fought the grounding claiming nothing was seriously wrong, but it took 10 years before doctors were convinced and returned him to flight status.

Had the tumor been cancerous there was a chance he would never go into space again—even if doctors believed they had removed all the malignant cells.

A three-doctor team headed by Dr. Clifton Mountain, a cancer specialist, removed the tumor the size of a pencil eraser and a pathologist in the operating room and quickly checked the lung cells for malignancy.

"I'd say he's an extremely lucky man," said Berry, now president of the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston and a space agency consultant.

"Frozen sections of the nodule revealed no evidence of malignancy," Berry said. His hospital stay is anticipated to be 10-12 days.

Baby's Heart Outside Chest

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Christopher Wall Jr. was born with his heart outside his chest, and doctors never thought he would live longer than a couple of days. Today, Christopher is 17 days old.

And he is kicking, moving his arms and acting like any normal infant.

A surgical team at Children's Hospital spent nearly four hours trying to cover Christopher's heart. Now they give him a "very good" chance to survive.

Christopher was born with ectopia cordis, which means his lungs were too big to permit room for his heart. The heart developed instead outside the chest cavity. It was pulsating, fully exposed.

About 200 such cases have been reported. None of the victims lived more than two days, authorities said.

Christopher, gaining strength and weight in the hospital's infant intensive care unit, looks like many other babies his age — except for the small lump on his chest where doctors covered the heart with skin.

"He's really a person now," said the father, Christopher Wall, 23, of Camden County, N.J. "He arches his chest, kicks his feet and moves a lot. We notice differences every day."

Wall, who is unemployed, added: "I have given up all hope, though, of his becoming an All-America linebacker. But he can play the piano."

"The child is strong," said Dr. Naresh Saxena, head of the eight-member surgical team that operated on Christopher. "But he has a long road to go. The potential of complications is great."

Christopher was born Aug. 10 to Wall and his wife, Teresa, 20, at Garden State Community Hospital in Marlton, N.J.

Emperor Selassie Dies

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (UPI) — Former Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, the Conquering Lion of Judah, died today in his sleep at the age of 83, Radio Ethiopia announced.

He had ruled this backward country for 57 years, the world's longest-serving monarch, until he was overthrown last year by young army officers who rebelled against his inability to bring Ethiopia into the 20th century.

Selassie became regent of the 3,000-year-old Christian monarchy in 1930, ruling as an absolute monarch with the title of "King of Kings, Elect of God, Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah" until a military coup deposed him in on Sept. 12, 1974.

Radio Ethiopia said he was found dead in bed by a servant early today, and had succumbed to a prostate gland disorder. Last May the ex-emperor underwent a major operation for a urine infection.

Since being deposed and driven off to jail in a Volkswagen he had spent virtually all his time under heavy guard at the ramshackle Menelik Palace atop one of Addis Ababa's hills, only a few hundred yards from his former home at the Jubilee Palace, which was styled after Buckingham Palace in London.

After the war Selassie set out to modernize his backward country and make it the leader of the new Africa. It was under his leadership that Ethiopia became the headquarters of the Organization of African Unity and other pan-African organizations.

He was called by some the president of Africa.

Chamber Members Set To Vote on Directors

A list of 14 names from which seven Chamber of Commerce directors will be elected will be submitted by the nominating committee at the regular monthly meeting of the board at 10 a.m. Thursday in the chamber office. Ballots containing the 14 names will be mailed to chamber members, according to E.O. Wedgeworth, manager.

The seven new members and 1975-76 officers will be installed at directors' dinner meeting in the Coronado Inn Oct. 17. The new directors will each serve a three-year term. Officers are elected for one-year terms.

Other business at the Thursday morning meeting will include activity reports from various committee chairmen.

A report also is scheduled on the annual meeting set for Oct. 30 at which Paul Harvey, nationally known columnist and radio commentator, will be the speaker.

Industrialist Leaves Estate to Housekeeper

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) — Industrialist Sumner D. Lamkins died 11 months ago. To the distress of some relatives, he left his entire $20 million estate to his housekeeper-nurse and named her president of the foundry that made his fortune.

Three relatives — two nieces and a nephew — claimed Lamkins was senile when he died and left Mrs. Lucille Rahmeyer as his sole beneficiary.

Lawyers for the three announced Tuesday a settlement had been reached with Mrs. Rahmeyer — but the legal battle over the estate still appeared far from ended.

Yet another 28 persons have filed claims against the estate — three of them with suits filed Monday. All 28 are former or present foundry employees.

The other claims also meant Macomb County Probate Judge Kenneth Sanborn must rule on whether to accept the settlement worked out by lawyers for the Lamkins relatives and Mrs. Rahmeyer.

Under the proposed settlement, Mrs. Rahmeyer agreed to divide $600,000 among the relatives: Mrs. Geraldine Stolzenfeld of Mount Clemens, Mrs. Jane Dent of Kent, Wash., and Merton Lamkins of Harper Woods, Mich.

Lawyers for the three would receive another $350,000, and Merton Lamkins would get another $250,000 over five years as a consultant to the foundry, which Sumner Lamkins founded in 1928 and built into a major supplier of automotive castings.

Earlier, Sanborn ordered Lamkins' body exhumed for examination of brain and body tissues — to determine if he was senile, as the relatives claimed, when he died.

The examination was not conducted because of negotiations on the settlement with the relatives.

Mrs. Rahmeyer, a native of Germany, had cared for Lamkins, 82, and his wife — who died several years ago — for several years.

All claims against the estate were based on a 1972 revision of a will Lamkins wrote in 1966 that left his fortune to relatives, former employees, charities and Mrs. Rahmeyer.

Challengers to the will contend Mrs. Rahmeyer actually wrote the 1972 that Lamkins signed.

Stafford To Leave Space Pilot Corps

HOUSTON (UPI) — Astronaut Thomas P. Stafford, commander of the Apollo for the historic joint U.S.-Soviet mission, will leave the elite space pilot corps Nov. 1 to return to active duty in the Air Force.

Stafford, a major general and veteran of four spaceflights, will become commander of the Air Force Flight Test Center at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where he attended test pilot school, sources told UPI.

A spokesman Tuesday confirmed Stafford's leaving the National Aeronautics and Space Agency, but the Air Force refused to confirm or deny his appointment.

His rejoining the Air Force apparently ended speculation he would return to his home state of Oklahoma to run for Congress. He once considered running for the Senate, but decided against it without officially entering the race.

Reached in Washington where he is attending a meeting, Stafford said he still will work with the space program because Edwards AFB is involved in the testing of the next manned spacecraft, the space shuttle rocket plane.

"The Flight Test Center will have a major role in supporting the space shuttle in its approach and landing tests and in its initial return and landing from orbit in the early developmental flights," Stafford said.

Stafford, the first man to shake hands in space with a Russian, commanded the Apollo on the historic nine-day flight last month with Donald "Deke" Slayton, who underwent surgery for a benign lung tumor

Tuesday, and Vance Brand. The pilots linked their ship with a Soviet Soyuz carrying cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov July 17 for 44 hours of joint ceremonies and experiments in each others' craft.

Communists Order Troops to Street

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Anti-Communist mobs, rampaged across the central town of Leiria today, burning the headquarters of leftist parties and sacking the homes and businesses of their members.

Police said the crowds roamed the streets at will, burning cars and beating up every leftist they encountered in the city's third consecutive day of rioting.

Troops sent to contain the mobs managed to protect the Communist party headquarters but the crowds burst through security lines at the offices of three other leftist parties, sacking the buildings and burning their contents.

The demonstrators also attacked and burned the offices and homes of two leading leftist attorneys.

Several leftists caught in the center of the city were run down by the crowds and beaten and kicked. Two men were hospitalized with serious injuries and police said many others were treated for less serious wounds.

In Lisbon, military security forces occupied the facilities of the army's Communist-controlled 5th division early today, saying the action was taken in response to "threats of assault" on the facilities.

The operations of the 5th division were suspended by the military's ruling revolutionary council Monday night in an effort to defuse opposition by military moderates to Portugal's left-wing military regime.

The commander of the military security forces, Gen. Oteio Saraiva de Carvalho, has sided with the moderates in the dispute.

The Communist party ordered its shock troops into the streets of Lisbon today for a mass march in support of embattled Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves.

Pampa Man Recovers From Wound

John Zeek, 28, 1905 N. Wells, underwent surgery Tuesday night for a gunshot wound in the abdomen which occurred while he was cleaning a gun.

Zeek told Pampa Police Department officers that the gun accidentally discharged. He was in satisfactory condition this morning at Highland General Hospital.

A Leffors woman, Rachel Ripple, 52, was in satisfactory condition at Highland General today following an automobile accident at Somerville and Hobart Tuesday.

Grand Jury To Probe Hoffa Disappearance

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal grand jury will begin an investigation next week into the disappearance of former Teamsters union czar James Hoffa in what federal officials say may be a last-ditch effort to solve the month-old mystery.

Among the first of 70 witnesses to be called is Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, a onetime Hoffa bodyguard and self-described foster son of the 62-year-old union leader, sources disclosed Tuesday.

O'Brien has been a central figure in the mystery since Hoffa dropped from sight July 30. FBI agents have questioned O'Brien twice about his whereabouts just before and after Hoffa disappeared.

Hoffa's family once challenged O'Brien to take a lie detector test because he "knows something," O'Brien refused.

One federal source described the grand jury investigation as a last-ditch attempt to learn how and why Hoffa vanished.

Robert Ozer, head of the government's Organized Crime Strike Force office in Detroit, said the grand jury was expected to sit for several weeks.

Ozer said of O'Brien, "This man... has raised many more questions than he's answered in his sessions with the FBI."

Among others the grand jury is expected to summon is Anthony "Tony Jacks" Giacalone, a reputed Mafia kingpin and one of three men Hoffa told his family he was meeting for lunch at the suburban Bloomfield Township restaurant the day he disappeared.

Bane was one of the first persons the Hoffa family called the day Hoffa vanished. Lintea, under the influence of a drug which induces lack of inhibition, told a psychiatrist Aug. 1 he knew Hoffa was to meet Giacalone that day.

U.S. Attorney Ralph Guy said the grand jury will begin taking testimony Tuesday, not to return indictments but to provide investigators with "additional leads."

Nurse Center Calls for Aid

A volunteers meeting for those who like to work with senior citizens is scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday in the dining room of Pampa Nursing Center.

Vickie Phillips, social service director, said the residents of Pampa Nursing Center are in need of people who would like to donate an hour or two each week.

The duties would include assisting at parties, playing games including dominoes and cards, shopping, occasional field trips or a visit with those who are lonely.

Those who cannot attend the meeting and wish to volunteer are asked to Ms. Phillips at the nursing center.

Woman Orchestra Conductor's 40 Years of Fighting Prejudice

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Orchestra conductor Antonia Brico has survived more than four decades of prejudice.

Today, she feels no remorse or bitterness toward those who refused to give her a permanent position with a professional orchestra just because she is a woman.

Dr. Brico, a small but forceful woman whose vigor is reflected on stage, said that because of her sex she was invited to conduct several times a year instead of several times a month.

The tide turned when former piano student Judy Collins, now a popular folksinger, produced a filmed documentary, "Antonia: A Portrait of a Woman," about Dr. Brico's struggle for acceptance in a field dominated by men.

She is now in great demand. Dr. Brico, who was invited to perform at the Hollywood Bowl 45 years after she made her American debut there, reflected on her years as conductor, teacher and lecturer.

"The point of the movie brings home the fact that I have lived for years and years with prejudice," she said, "not against my person but the fact that I was a woman."

"Women are everything," she emphasized. "They're doctors and lawyers and ambassadors, judges, everything. The last stronghold to fall is orchestral conducting."

"I was well known long ago. And I'm capable physically and mentally of conducting several times a month instead of several times a year. That's the prejudice — of not getting enough engagements."

Following the release of the movie last September, Dr. Brico is now what she terms "all booked up."

Early this month there was a

8 cherry tomatoes
1 green pepper, cut into 1-inch strips
1 (4-oz.) can onions, drained
One-third cup polyunsaturated oil
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon lemon juice
1 clove garlic, crushed

In a medium-sized bowl, combine meat and vegetables. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over meat and vegetables. Let marinate 4-6 hours. Thread meat and vegetables alternately onto 8 short skewers. Sprinkle with pepper. Cook until well browned on all sides, turning frequently over an electric broiler or in a broiler. Salt. Makes 2 servings.

Tribute to Antonia Brico at New York's Avery Fisher Hall in which the film was shown before Dr. Brico conducted a concert in the "Mostly Mozart" series. In the coming months, her scheduled stops include Colorado and Washington.

Dr. Brico, who stoops slightly and refuses to divulge her age — "I don't think it's that important" — admits that she is proud of the fact that she pioneered women conducting.

She also is proud of the women's symphony orchestra she founded in 1934 that was later named in her honor.

She said she never entertained thoughts of quitting and never felt sorry for herself when her bookings were so infrequent.

"I was invited just enough," she said. "If I had not conducted — like say for years at a time — I think I would have felt worse about it. But I just had enough crumbs to keep my morale up."

"If an animal is starving and you give it a few crumbs just to keep it alive, it sort of bears up. And I always received just enough conducting to keep my courage up and to give me faith that more would happen."

"So there never was a dead level of nothing. Just enough to keep me from complete despair."

When she was not conducting, she taught piano lessons and gave lectures.

She said her biggest disappointment came in 1944 when a chance to conduct a professional orchestra in Denver fell through.

"I think that was the thing that hurt me the most," she said. "And then I really got terribly upset, because it doesn't make a bit of difference what you know or how you do. It has to do with whether you're black, white, colored, female or male."

"I think that was the worst period in my life."

However, prejudice wasn't the only thing that kept her down. She now says the key to early success and recognition is having a manager and public relations staff to maintain public interest.

She said following the release of "Antonia," she has acquired three managers.

Dr. Brico isn't bitter because it took so long for everyone to take notice of her. She is only glad it has finally happened.

"I think it's gorgeous," she exclaimed. "It happened, didn't it? What good is it to cry about 20 years? What good does it do anybody? Remorse and looking back to what should have been is no good."

"I'm happy because it's happened, and I happen to be well and full of zest for life. So I'm only optimistic to what can happen."

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Folks:

Knock, Knock!
Let me in because I want to have a chat with you about a "goldie" I discovered recently.

So many of us don't have a big family anymore. Kids have moved away and there's only Mom and Pop left. Newlyweds are only two and what with the bachelors and bachelorettes, widows and widowers who just don't take the time to bake a good hot supper when we get home!

Well, I learned a good one for you that's quick and easy and also inexpensive. And way out on cloud nine.

It's potatoes a la Heloise. And THAT gal must have had a screw loose when she figured this one out but I'll tell you how good I think it is.

I've made different versions of it everyday for five straight days and haven't tired of it yet. And I'm pickiest.

I had opened a canned ham and poured all the juice out of it into a jar thinking "next week I'll cook a pot of beans" with it. While slicing that cold-dreary canned ham to make a cold ordinary "sammich" again, all of a sudden I thought about au gratin potatoes that Mother used to make.

Why not have a good hot supper instead?

So I got out an ovenware casserole dish and poured the ham juice in it. Added salt and pepper and some cornstarch (about one spoonful). If you have none, flour will do... then stir.

I didn't want to take the time to peel the potatoes or wait for them to cook 45 minutes.

I ran to the pantry and grabbed a can of small new whole Irish potatoes (one can serves two or three people beautifully), drained 'em and sliced them with my egg slicer!

I sliced one small onion as thin as I could and layered the potatoes then onion, then potatoes then onion, then potatoes and onion, etc. until the casserole was full. (Save a few extra potatoes and a bit of onion and I'll tell you about that in a minute.)

Pour that ham juice over the stuff until it is just nearly to the top. If you ain't got enuf, add some water, folks.

Throw this in the oven which has been preheated. And if you have a little electric one, for heaven's sake use it. It's cheaper and takes less time to heat. Takes about 30 minutes.

Now, back to the cold ham. Slice off a hunk and top it with a little oleo and plopp in a pan. Cover with foil.

Stick both in the oven at the same time.

I also wrapped a few slices of buttered bread which I had wrapped in foil tightly and added that about ten minutes later.

Your hot supper is ready in no time at all. You've spent less than 10 minutes preparing this whole thing and you have a HOT dinner fit for a king.

Don't use jelly glasses and that chipped plate to serve it on, honeybees! Try your best. When you die, your family certainly will.

Now back to those few leftover potatoes and that piece of onion you saved.

Get out your grater and grate the few leftover tiny potatoes and that piece of onion. Add salt and pepper and toss.

Put this in your refridge because you are going to fry it in patties after you cook that bacon or sausage next time for breakfast. No sweat at all, just grab some and shape into a patty and fry.

Isn't that great? You would never take the time to do it for yourself if it weren't there.

Now for variations of "a la": After all the juice from the ham was used, "Heloise I and II" (that's my daughter) were mighty hungry for some more, so I used water and three beef bouillon cubes for the next batch instead of ham juice. Next day we used chicken bouillon cubes. So different.

One night we had porkchops and saved that lovely skillet with all the drippin' and made our own pork bouillon sauce from that. Umumm!

Then we learned something else.

Cheese!
Most folks put this on top of a casserole. Don't. It will get too brown. After your casserole is half full, then put your cheese here and cover with the rest of your potatoes. This way it's melty, soft and chewy.

Hey, if you have no bulk cheese grated do try Parmesan like we use on spaghetti. It suffices if your taster turns thataway.

And I guess about the best daggum thing we tried was slicing a piece of celery thinly and putting that in.

Always add any bits of leftover meats you have. It's sure a great way of stretching a shoestring. Remember when we used to tie those back during the Depression?

And so it goes. Blessings upon you and yours and let's hope we both live to meet each other again in tomorrow's paper.

If the Shoe Fits -

By Gary Gattis

Can poor fit be responsible for Athlete's Foot?

In a study conducted by New York University School of Medicine, it was concluded that foot injuries such as blisters, caused by ill-fitting footwear, may lead to fungus infections. One hundred volunteers (some whose feet were kept in healthy condition prior to testing, and others whose feet were deliberately injured) were used in the study. The volunteers were subjected to direct contact with the fungus that causes athlete's foot. Many of the men and women with injured feet contracted the infection. It was found that athlete's foot failed to develop in any of the 23 uninjured volunteers.

One can only conclude that athlete's foot is most difficult to contract by healthy, unblistered feet, while blisters and skin breaks literally open the door to the infection. This is just one more evidence of the importance of correctly fitting footwear, and of proper foot care.

It's good to hear that the Amarillo Globe - News and Amarillo College have established two awards, in the memory of late sportswriter Tommy Bryant, to recognize exceptional young journalists in the Panhandle.

The Amarillo newspaper and friends of Bryant, who died of an apparent heart attack last week, has established the Tommy Bryant Memorial Award, to be awarded each year to the Panhandle's outstanding high school sportswriter. Amarillo College is sponsoring the Tommy Bryant Memorial Scholarship, to be awarded to an AC journalism major each semester.

The Tommy Bryant Memorial Award will be first presented in January during the annual Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame ceremonies.

Bryant was a sportswriter with the Amarillo Globe - News at the time of his death. He was named the state's sportswriter of the year in 1966 by the Texas High School Coaches Association.

The first annual Pampa News Football Special will come out Sunday.

The issue will cover Pampa High, Pampa News circulation area teams and West Texas State.

Area towns given special consideration are White Deer, Lefors, McLean, Wheeler, Groom, Canadian and Miami.

Two players on the 76er's girls softball team were not mentioned in the team picture in Monday's News. The girls are Peggy Tyrrell and Theresa Walsh.

The 76er's won the Pampa Opti - Mrs. 15-18 girls softball league championship.

1971 Pampa High graduate Bobby Owen is in his fourth season as a defensive back at North Texas State. Prior to this season, Owen and quarterback Tony Ford of Lockney had the opportunity to become the first four-year lettermen at North Texas State in over 20 years.

Ford has left the team. Owen will start in the defensive secondary this season, as the ex - Harvester will become a four-year letterman.

Cardinals Nudge Houston Astros, 2-1

UPI Sports Writer

Harry Rasmussen is another of those "baby birds" of the St. Louis Cardinals who behaves like a wise old owl when it comes to pitching under pressure.

Rasmussen, a talented young right-hander who pitched in the Texas League last season and was called up by the Cardinals a month ago, won an important game for St. Louis Tuesday night when he stopped the Houston Astros 2-1 on five hits in the second game of a doubleheader. The victory enabled the Cardinals to complete a sweep of the twinbill and move to within three games of first place Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Rasmussen, who with John Denny and Bob Forsch form a nucleus for the Cardinals' "Big Three" of the future, also provided the key hit in the nightcap when he singled home Mike Tyson with what proved to be the winning run in the second inning.

The Astros scored their only run in the first inning on doubles by Jose Cruz and Enos Cabell but Ron Fairly homered for St. Louis in the second, and after Tyson tripled, Rasmussen came through with a single. He then held out to only three hits the rest of the way in posting his third victory in five decisions.

The Cardinals won the opener 10-9 on Reggie Smith's run-scoring single in the 12th inning after St. Louis had battled back from a seven-run deficit to tie the score in the eighth.

"If you get a lot of runs in the first game, usually the second game will be low scoring and vice versa," said Rasmussen, who lowered his earned run average to 2.76 in eight appearances. "But I wasn't thinking about the first game. I was throwing straight as string in the first four innings of my game. I didn't have that much stuff."

The Astros, who had 20 hits in the opener, would certainly argue that point.

In the opener, Bake McBride scored the winning run in the 12th when he singled, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt and scored on Smith's single.

The Cardinals scored six runs in the seventh and two in the eighth on Mike Tyson's single to put the game into extra innings.

"That shows you never want to give up, although I'll admit we probably came close," said winning pitcher Al Harbosky, now 11-3. "We had to keep from thinking about that second game."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh topped Atlanta 8-2, Los Angeles defeated Philadelphia 8-1, New York defeated San Diego 7-2, Cincinnati downed Chicago 6-5 and San Francisco beat Montreal 4-3.

New York whipped Oakland 7-1, California topped Boston 8-2, Minnesota nipped Milwaukee 2-1, Texas edged Detroit 3-2 and Kansas City beat Baltimore 4-3 then lost 3-2, Chicago at Cleveland was rained out.

Pirates 8, Braves 2

Pittsburgh collected eight consecutive hits and scored six runs in the first inning to rout Atlanta. Frank Taveras tripled to start the rally and scored the first run on Rennie Stennett's single. Six more singles followed in succession. Larry Demery went the distance for the Pirates for the first time since Aug. 13 of last season to raise his record to 7-3.

Dodgers 8, Phillies 1

Doug Rau tossed a three-hitter and Ron Cey hit a three-run homer as Los Angeles dropped Philadelphia four games behind Pittsburgh in the NL East. Rau, improving his record to 11-9, allowed only one hit after the first inning when the Phils scored their lone run. Rookie Tom Underwood was the loser.

Mets 7, Padres 2

Randy Tate scattered nine hits in gaining his first victory since July 25 and fellow rookie

Mike Vail rapped out three more hits to spark New York's triumph over San Diego. Vail's three hits gives him seven in two nights and 10 hits in 20 at bats since being called up from the minors last week.

Reds 6, Cubs 5

Joe Morgan's two-run single in the ninth inning gave Cincinnati its victory over Chicago. Johnny Bench hit his 25th homer for the Reds while Jerry Morales and Andy Thornton homered for the Cubs.

Giants 4, Expos 3

Gary Thomasson, after striking out in three previous at bats, lined a homer with one out in the eighth inning to lift San Francisco over Montreal. Pete Falcone spaced eight hits and struck out 12 batters in evening his record at 9-9. Barry Foote had a two-run homer for the Expos.

Borg Tips Top-Seeded Vilas

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg and Guillermo Vilas had sliced and spun through the field in the U.S. Pro Tennis Championships until they stood in each other's way in the final.

Second-seeded Borg, in two hours and 14 minutes Tuesday night, crushed top-seeded Vilas, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2. Borg, who trimmed Dutchman Tom Okker to win the tournament a year ago, earned $16,000.

The left-handed Vilas, who had reached the finals by overpowering Rod Laver and Arthur Ashe, was crippled by erratic first serves and paralyzed by long and wide placement shots.

"I saw Guillermo play Laver and Ashe and he played extremely well but he had trouble with me," said Borg after winning his second straight U.S. Pro tournament. "Maybe it was because we play the same game—a lot of topspins from the baseline. But I know he can play much, much better."

Vilas double faulted twice in the first game of the opening set despite holding service. Borg held service, then broke in the third game with the aid of another double fault by Vilas. Two more double faults by Vilas, who had six in the first set, gave Borg the ninth and deciding game of the set.

The 19-year-old Swede ran off the first five games of the second set as Vilas resorted to soft second serves after failing with his first serves. But the 23-year-old Vilas found his stroke to win the next four games. He went ahead, 40-15, in the 10th game before Borg ran off the last four points of the game, winning on Vilas' overhit of a forehand.

Borg, who also beat Vilas in straight sets to win the French

Open in late spring, closed out the third set by rallying three-times from 15-40.

"I was playing with a soft racquet, then changed to a tight one but it was too late," said

Vilas, now 4-5 lifetime against Borg.

Because he and Borg play the same type of game, "it's hard to come back when one of us takes the advantage early," said Vilas.

Bellard Feels Aggies To Contend for Crown

By EMORY BELLARD
Head Coach, Texas A&M University
Written for UPI

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — We believe we're going to field a good, solid football team at Texas A&M for the 1975 season and, therefore, we're looking forward to the new season with great anticipation.

We return 41 lettermen from last year's 8-3 squad and for the first time since we've been here we have a good balance of quality from top to bottom. Twenty-one of our lettermen will be seniors, nine of whom have earned three letters and the other dozen are two-year lettermen. In addition there are 18 junior lettermen, two sophomore lettermen and we are bringing in what we think is an outstanding freshman class.

Last April we had our best spring training of the four we have conducted at Texas A&M. At the outset we had some gaps to fill because of graduation. The replacements at those spots came through in fine style and we think we'll have good starting units both offensively and defensively.

Our basic offense will be the true wishbone but we expanded our offense in the spring by adding phases of the "I" formation that will give us added dimensions in our attack.

We return 10 offensive starters and six defensive starters from last year. Henry Tracy had an excellent spring and will be a capable replacement for Ricky Seeker at center, our only lost starter from last year on offense.

We finished spring training without a designated starting quarterback but we have three good ones in David Shipman, Mike Jay and David Walker who'll resume their battle for the starting spot when fall practice starts.

Our offensive line made great progress in the spring and the starters at the end were Richard Osborne at tight end, Carl Roaches at split end, Glenn Bujnoch and Dennis Swilley at tackles, Bruce Welch and Craig Glendenning at guards and Tracy at center.

Running backs Bubba Bean, Skip Walker, Ronnie Hubby and Bucky Sams are proven performers with a lot of experience. But we still lack quality depth in that department.

We think our starting defense will be as good, if not better, than last year's squad that finished second in the nation in total defense.

At the close of spring practice, the starters included Tank Marshall and Blake Schwarz at ends, Edgar Fields and Jimmy Dean at tackles, Ed Simonini and Garth Ten Napel at outside linebackers, Grady Wilkerson and Robert Jackson alternating at middle linebacker, Pat Thomas and William Thompson at the corners and Jackie Williams and Lester Hayes at safeties.

NFL Contract Talks Delayed

CHICAGO (UPI) — The same old problems separate negotiators for National Football League players and club owners trying to work out a new contract and a federal mediator has asked them to try some new approaches.

The mediator, James Scarce, suspended contract talks Tuesday after two more bargaining sessions brought little agreement. He instructed representatives for both the NFL owners and players to make no comment.

"I've suspended the talks subject to my call," Scarce said. "I asked both parties to take a look at their position on some of these problem areas and see if they can come up with different approaches."

Book Review: Outdoors Good Place To Relax

OUTDOOR RECREATION GUIDE; by Richard Dunlop; Rand McNally & Co.; 186 pages; $4.95.

Reviewed By
HAROLD McCONNELL
Copley News Service

Richard Dunlop has hiked, backpacked, camped and canoed in many places in the United States and around the world. A tall, trim man of 53, he is one of America's foremost outdoorsmen and loves to talk and write about his experiences. In an interview and in his book, he has a great deal of advice and information to offer either the old hands or the beginners in outdoor activities.

The book gives specific guidelines on camping, backpacking and trail riding; hiking; bike hiking and camping; rock hounding and spelunking; canoeing and rafting; boating and boat camping; sport diving; conservation and wildlife.

In addition, each chapter describes outstanding areas where a certain activity can be enjoyed. And more than half of the book is devoted to a regional directory listing the best places in the United States and Canada for the activities.

For a number of years Dunlop has been scoutmaster of nationally known Demonstration Troop No. 333 and has trained many Boy Scout and Explorer troops in backpacking and other outdoor techniques. He has eight assistants.

"We are a demonstration group," he says, "and show other groups how to work with kids. We work with people whether in the Scout program or not."

In one program they trained 25 kids and sent them to live with Sioux Indians. "It was enormously successful," he says.

Dunlop says they train their backpacking teams to do about 25 to 30 miles a day. But he has a word of caution for those just taking up the sport.

"If you feel like doing only two miles, that's all you should do," he says. "The outdoors is no place to prove your manhood. You can get yourself in trouble. You should go out to relax, to have a change of pace and to tune your mind."

He recalls an experience in Alaska which proved how well the training of his Scouts paid off.

He was with another man and a group of five Scouts from his troop, all about 13 to 14 years old.

They were backpacking on the old Gold Rush route of 1898 on the Chilkoot Trail from Skagway to the Yukon Valley. It was in July but there were snowfields as much as 100 feet thick. They were camped at Chilkoot Pass when he became ill; he couldn't get down food or water. They got to a trapper's cabin where they holed up.

"The kids had to do everything," Dunlop says. "They did some terrific orienteering. They cut across country using map and compass to get help. They intersected the Yukon railroad and flagged down a train. When they got to Skagway a pontoon plane was sent back to pick me up." The plane landed at a nearby lake.

Dunlop later found out his ailment was traced to a virus he had picked up on a trip to Turkey.

"I had trained these kids to do things themselves," he says. "They were so darned solid. They didn't rattle. They took care of me so efficiently."

Dunlop is a great believer in giving kids responsibility on family camping trips and allowing them to take part right from the start, in the planning and all the camp chores.

"So many families go about outdoor things wrong," he says. "Kids are bored because mom and dad try to run everything."

Dunlop, who has four grown children (three boys and a girl), says "we have found kids are very service-oriented" and interested in more than just fun and adventure.

Better Anglers Switch Methods

Fishermen hate to admit defeat, especially when their "ol' meat gitter" lure doesn't produce the lunker fish they've been seeking. In a frenzy, they'll switch from one plastic imitation bait to the next, hoping each will be the magic one.

When this happens, the better angler is the one who is versatile enough to switch methods. Quite often he becomes a still fisherman, using natural bait instead of unproductive artificial lures, and fishing in one location rather than moving about on the lake.

Some anglers think still fishing smacks of inexperience. Not so, say the fishing experts at Mercury outboards, who suggest that it requires considerable knowledge of fish habits to be successful. Following are some tips to aid your luck when it's time to drop anchor and try still fishing.

Minnows and worms are favorite baits. Both will attract ball, walleye, pike and catfish. Worms are especially good for catfish and sunfish. In some northern states, leeches are coming into use as a still fishing bait for walleye.

Since a still fisherman doesn't work a lot of water, as when trolling or casting, location is extremely important. A few feet one way or another can make a difference. Look for underwater cover and structure in places where you've caught fish previously. Chances are fish will be there now, only they are less willing to strike artificial lures.

Northern Pike--Mystery Fish

Can you name the fish that has 16 canine teeth in its lower jaw, was believed to grow from slender pieces of grass, and is named after an ancient war weapon?

If you guessed anything but the northern pike, your piscatorial knowledge needs to be enhanced.

No fish has inspired more mystery about itself than the northern pike. Early literature refers to the pike as Luce, the waterwolf, and historical accounts show this fish to have been a vicious predator, the subject of much mythology and misunderstanding of its true character.

As an example, early day naturalists explained the introduction of pike into new waters by saying that the fish obviously grew from pieces of grass nurtured by the sun in shallow water. After all, wasn't the pike's grass-colored, slender body reminiscent of its plant progenitors?

Pike were also thought to live for hundreds of years, growing in this time to enormous size and often attacking men and farm animals in their eternal quest for food.

This fear of the pike carried into more recent times and resulted in at least one attempt to prove the fish's longevity and great size by perpetrating a fraud. What was supposed to be a 19-foot-long, 350-pound pike was proven to be a cleverly mounted fish made of many other pike. The pieces were fitted together to form the monster that everyone wanted to believe had actually lived.

New Knots Important With New Line Types

By VIRGIL WARD
Championship Fishing

With the advent of monofilament line came the need for some new knots. Your line is no stronger than the knot you tie, so here's a little knot know-how.

Since monofilament is virtually frictionless, knots that hold on braided or twisted line may not hold on mono. In addition, some knots have a tendency to reduce the strength of monofilament as much as one-half.

The two common knots I've found useful are the improved clinch knot and the barrel knot. The clinch is useful for tying hooks or lures to a line or leader. The barrel knot is good for joining two pairs of mono, such as leader to line.

Here's how to make the clinch knot. Make six turns about the standing part of the line and pass the running end through the loop at the end of the standing part. Then pass the running end through the larger loop that remains when the line is brought to the end loop. The line is slowly tightened to form the clinch.

The barrel knot, shown in figure 2, is made by taking five turns of line "A" around line "B" and around line "A". Push the running end of line "A" downward through the loop at the point where the first hitch was started with line "A". Push the running end of line "B" upward through the same loop. Pull tight, slowly and evenly. This knot is important where you wish to use strong leader, even though you can use a light line. Saltwater fish such as tarpon or barracuda have rough mouths that can easily fray and break light line. A hefty leader is also handy to turn those largemouth bass when fishing timbered lakes, or for pulling them from under rocks.

Take a careful look at your tackle before starting on your next trip. Check the guides on your rod to make certain they aren't fraying your line. And, like most fishermen using monofilament line, I suggest re-trying your knots every morning.

Good luck with your fishing.

Safety Course For Hunters Slated In Sept.

A new hunter safety course is available to Panhans from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and National Rifle Association.

Registration will be at 7 p.m. Sept. 9 at the Pampa Optimist Club. There will be a $1.00 fee for the course, which is offered to men, women and children (12 and older).

Youngsters under 18 must be accompanied by a parent at registration.

More information can be obtained from Mack Courtney, Leo Rhoten, Albert Phillips, Don Butler, Lee Cox or O.E. Willis, all of Pampa.

Hunters' Camp Found

CANYON, Tex. (UPI) — Excavations in the Texas Panhandle have given scientists their first look at an early American buffalo hunters' camp. They found broken liquor bottles and homemade bullets on the saloon floor.

The historical digging is taking place at Adobe Wells, a settlement that thrived briefly a century ago 25 miles northeast of the present town of Borger.

"It's the first buffalo hunters' camp that has ever been excavated in the United States," says James Hanson, director of the Panhandle Museum at West Texas State College. "It's giving us a fair picture of the day-to-day life of the early white man in the Texas Panhandle."

Adobe Wells — which consisted of a saloon, blacksmith shop, general merchandise store and hide-buying store — was built and occupied by 29 people, then abandoned six months later, in 1874.

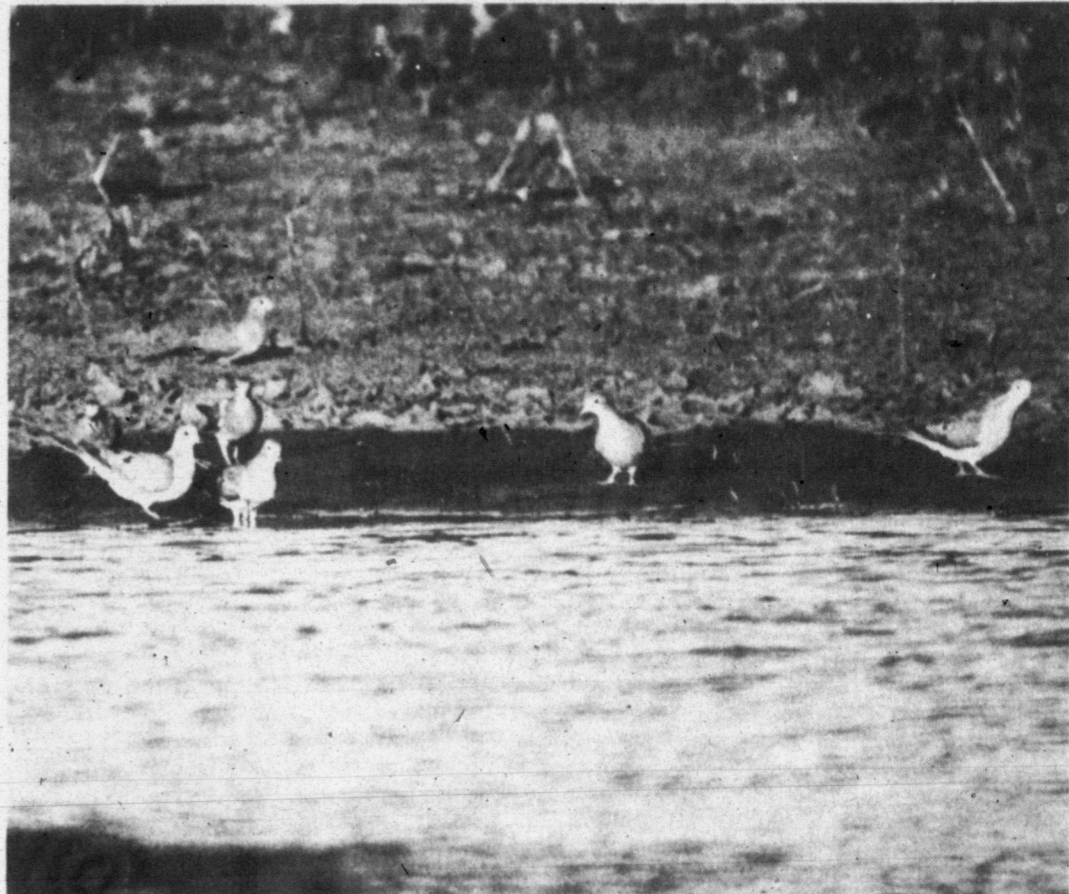

The buffalo migration had barely begun when a band of 700 Comanche, Cheyenne and possibly Kiowa Indians began an attack on June 27," said Bill Harrison, curator of anthropology at the museum and supervisor of the unearthing project.

"A lucky 1,500-yard shot by Billy Dixon, which killed one of the Indians, stopped further assault."

Harrison said the Indians had been told by their medicine men that the white man's bullets could not harm them. Discouraged by their fallen comrade, the Indians rode away before sunset and left the hunters alone.

"The buffalo hunters didn't stay much longer," Harrison said. "They abandoned the Adobe Wells camp that July."

"It's an absolutely clean site. Nothing has been built over it, nor anything there been interfered with," he said.

Thirsty Birds

Panhandle dove hunters will be looking for spots like this water hole Sept. 1 when the annual dove season gets underway. Forecasts by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department personnel indicate a good season is in store with plenty of food and water available for birds.

VIEW FROM THE PLAINS

Dove Season Getting Close

By J.D. PEER
I&E Field Officer
LUBBOCK — Summer rains have brightened the overall hunting picture for the Texas dove hunter. Mourning dove hunting prospects in northwest Texas are good with plenty of sunflower, weed and grain fields available for the birds.

A mid-August survey of Texas Parks and Wildlife Department game wardens throughout the Panhandle and South Plains came up with these outlooks:

According to Game Warden Calvin Tow, the Dalhart area of the Texas Panhandle should furnish above-average hunting opportunities for doves with good shooting both in the grain fields and at the watering holes.

East around Perryton and down to Canadian, water holes are full and Game Warden Bill Rogers looks for better hunting in the grain fields. Dove have not flocked together and the dove will stay as long as the cold fronts do not reach into the Panhandle.

Off the caprock along the eastern counties near Matador, dove prospects look average according to Game Warden Ronnie Vandiver. The grain in this area is late this year due to the necessity of replanting and a normal number of doves have been observed.

The same conditions hold true for the remainder of the South Plains with an average crop of dove being reported by Game Warden Rue Gambol at Snyder. Heavy rains in the area could affect the water hole shooting.

Commercial sunflower fields estimated at 300,000 acres should furnish excellent shooting opportunities as soon as the seed crop is harvested.

All P&WD personnel contacted about dove populations indicated the 1975 season should be better than 1974 when drought and low yield grain crops hurt the dove.

The approaching dove season will be affected more by the unpredictable cold fronts that cross the plains of Texas in late August and September. Dove hunters are keeping their fingers crossed concerning the weather and shotguns oiled as the Sept. 1 season draws near.

Dove season in the north zone of Texas which includes all of the high plains is Sept. 1 through Oct. 30, 1975, with the usual bag and possession limits of 10 and 20 birds respectively.

Shooting hours for the north will be from 12 noon to sunset daily.

Antelope Herds Growing in Size

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — An overall increase in adult and fawn pronghorn antelope in western Texas has warranted an increase in the number of antelope hunt permits issued by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to area landowners.

A total of 877 permits for hunting buck antelope will be issued by the P&WD, up from the 1974 total of 580.

Trans-Pecos ranchers will receive 476 permits, landowners in the Permian Basin will be issued 44 permits and 357 permits will go to those in the Panhandle.

As was the case in 1974, no permits will be issued for hunting doe antelope.

According to P&WD Big Game Program Director Charles Winkler, the Texas adult antelope herd has increased by 21 per cent with most of that gain coming from the Panhandle herds.

"Fawn counts are exceptionally high in the Trans-Pecos and Permian Basin and we are optimistic about the outlook for next year."

Ample rains over most of West Texas this year have improved range conditions and fall hunts should yield animals in good physical condition.

The antelope season in the Trans-Pecos and Permian Basin is Oct. 4-12 with an Oct. 4-7 season in the Panhandle.

American Handicrafts

Frances O'Neal

Providing the people of Pampa and the area with economical and quality art and craft supplies is the goal of American Handicrafts in Coronado Center. Owned by Carl and Frances O'Neal, the dealership is now in its second year of operation and ranks twentieth in sales with 250 associated dealer stores.

American Handicrafts works with Pampa schools and institutions to help meet their art and crafts needs. The supplies include artist supplies, decoupage supplies, macrame cords, beads, pots, pictures frames, candlemaking supplies and others.

Instruction is offered free of charge at the shop. Sales for 1975 show a 100 per cent increase above 1974, the O'Neals report. "It's getting better every day thanks to the people of Pampa and surrounding towns," they said.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, AUGUST 28

Your birthday today: The search for realism is on. What doesn't work extremely well must be put aside in favor of what does. Consolidate your gains; dig in for strong, sustained competition. Your personal situation remains steady despite a tide of change in your general environment. Relationships stay on an even keel, but cannot be taken for granted. Today's natives are hard workers who are willing to help others improve their welfare.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Financial moves along well-researched lines are favored. Their success depends on your personal efforts. Investing in home improvements eases a long-standing bottleneck.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Pull together the loose ends of recent maneuverings and seek an explicit formal settlement. Consolidate scattered family interests. Answer questions youngsters will ask.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: If you let others supply the energy for routine, you are free to figure out immediate cash problems. Use the best available advice on health and technical matters.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Get out in the open, explore new places. You have more friends than ever; acknowledge and welcome their attention. It's also time for you to return invitations.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: No really serious obstacle is in the way. Bring negotiations to definite terms. Get in touch with confidential advisors, and get your signals straight for the near future.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You have it made; time is on your side in almost every situation. Realize how well off you are. Redeem a promise; any delay makes it awkward or impossible later.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You are inspired as to how to make more stable arrangements in managing group finances. Previously unavailable resources and unused talents also come to light.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Call for individual cooperation wherever you have difficulties. You may get only advice in many areas, but everyone will understand what you're coping with.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Business conditions improve steadily. Overtime

Man Held In Suicide Of Wife

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — William Plachta was charged with manslaughter Monday because he allegedly stood by while his terminally ill wife committed suicide, doing nothing to stop her.

Francesca Plachta, 49, who was dying of a degenerative disease of the nervous system, was found dead in her bed Sunday of an overdose of sleeping pills. She left several suicide notes, including thanks to her doctor for prescribing the lethal pills and a message of "goodbye to a rotten world," police said.

Plachta, 64, waited in another room while she took the overdose, investigators said, and then checked on her several times until he was certain she was dead before pulling a sheet over her face and calling police.

is probably justified. Keep a detailed account of your hours and the work you produce so as to receive the proper compensation.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: All your actions put you in the public eye to a degree. Take advantage and let your skills be better known. Avoid dramatic statements and displays of partisanship.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: There's an undercurrent of excitement as sharp insights guide you through complex incidents. Use opportunities at hand to expand commercial contacts and further personal projects.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Get off your comfortable perch. Make the rounds and get up to date on local events and changed conditions. Hobbies, mental pursuits are fascinating if you choose the right company.

Sorcery Congress Meets

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The frenzied Haitian dancers whirled about the floor, bathing themselves in flames as part of a voodoo ritual to drive out evil spirits.

Delegates to the World Congress of Sorcery watched silently as the bodies writhed to the drums. The fire from the twisting torches was real enough, but when it came time to sacrifice a chicken, the bird turned out to be stuffed.

The voodoo demonstration was supposed to have been only for conference delegates. But half-way through the show, about 100 young Colombians broke through the entrance to the exposition hall and joined the rest of the crowd.

Outside, evangelists handed out leaflets denouncing voodoo and calling on Colombians to turn to Christ.

The 32 dancers acted out three voodoo rituals Monday night.

Their impeccably ironed suits may have looked just a little too clean and their bare feet too washed to be authentic.

But the drums were fast enough and two of the dancers put so much into a simulated machete duel that one of the blades broke off and went flying into the crowd.

According to Jean-Baptiste Romain, a Haitian anthropologist who lectured on voodoo at the congress earlier Monday, the cult isn't really witchcraft but only the popular religion of Haiti based on the belief that the world of the spirits and the world of men intermingles.

In the first ritual, the spirit of Aizan was invoked through chalk drawings on the floor, known as the veve, around the central column which symbolized the connection between heaven and earth.

Former Pampa Teacher Cited for Brazil Work

A former teacher at Sam Houston Elementary School in Pampa recently received the silver "figa" — the good luck symbol of Brazil — in Brazil.

She is Maxine Clark, whose husband, Earnie, is project manager for Cabot engineering in Pampa.

She was also the first to receive the "Who's New" award from the Sao Paulo Newcomers Club during a luncheon meeting on Aug. 19.

In Brazil, Mrs. Clark continues to practice her teaching profession as a volunteer. Her first volunteer efforts began when she became involved in teaching migrant workers in her backyard during 1955.

Later, after accompanying her husband to Iran, she originated the International Women's Club there. She also served as a deaconess in the Presbyterian Church.

In Sao Paulo, she is actively teaching Mah-Jongg. The Clarks are members of the First Presbyterian Church in Pampa and associate members of the Sao Paulo Fellowship Church.

She is a member of the bicentennial of USA committee for celebration in Sao Paulo.

Says DPS Wiretapped

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Texas Department of Public Safety conducted illegal wiretaps until at least 1971 or three years after such bugging was outlawed, the Houston Post today quoted sources within three law enforcement agencies as saying.

The bugging was not condoned by the highest officials of the DPS, the newspaper reported in a copyrighted story, and knowledge of the bugging incidents did not go higher than an officer's supervisor.

The unidentified sources reportedly told the newspaper the DPS wiretapping in areas other than Houston was limited to about four bugging operations per year. But in the Houston area, where one source said

"Houston police were almost out of control," the wiretapping was widespread and continued unabated until at least 1973.

Since 1968, only federal agents with authorization from federal courts can wiretap a phone line.

The Post quotes the sources as saying the illegal DPS activities were known to some high ranking officials because in 1971 James Ray, then the second man in command at the DPS, ordered wiretapping stopped.

"Ray called everybody in and said, 'Look, if the legislature's not going to back us up, then we can't back you up, so if you're doing any wiretapping, you are ordered to stop,'" one source reportedly said.

Ray is now chief of the DPS Criminal Division in Austin. The Post said when he was contacted and asked about the reports, he said, "The rumors were unfounded. We never had any reason to believe them."

Carol Lynn, Houston police chief until he resigned earlier this year, has charged there was widespread illegal wiretapping in the police department until he took over in January 1974.

The Post reported a source as saying because state and local police worked so closely in criminal investigations, it was difficult for state agents to stop wiretapping activities when local police used the illegal methods.
