Packerland's Odor Situation Aired

By THOM MARSHALL Pampa News Staff

Packerland Packing Co. of Texas Inc. one of Pampa's biggest employers, has a problem — or the many Pampa residents who don't like the way Packerland smells have a problem.

I'm telling you, it's pitiful. O.N. Wells of 604 Red Deer. said of Packerland's odor. "I've got a breathing problem anyway and sometimes I just have to bury my face in the pillow because it smells so bad. We can't even get out on the patio a lot of nights

But the Packerland odor problem reportedly will be alleviated soon, according to John Warner director of the regional office of the Texas Air Quality Control Board

Warner told The News today a device to clean Packerland air of odors is expected to be installed at the plant around the first week in November.

Warner called the device a water scrubber and said it will take the odors from the rendering cookers and rendering plant air by means of chemicals Packerland built their rendering plant without a water scrubber." Warner said. "They applied for a permit to construct and in the application they said they would put on a water scrübber Warner explained that new plant that comes into the state is required to obtain a permit to construct before they can begin actual construction.

We first got notice of complaints from City Manager Mack Wofford, "Warner said, "I sent an investigator up there and he found the plant had constructéd and started operation without the water scrubber, which is in violation of state law. A notice of violation was issued to the company.

notice was issued about the second week in August

I personally went up there to find out what the problem was on the 20th and 21st of this month and I spoke with Mr. Howard Frankenthal, plant manager, Warner said

He said that when he got to Pampa he "circled the plant several times and didn't detect any odors off the plant. The next morning I visited with Mr. Frankenthal and we went out to the rendering plant. It was in operation. I could detect an odor inside the plant, but 30 feet downwind. I couldn't even detect an odor from it.

However, Warner said that Frankenthal was issued a notice of violation" for both of these days of operation. He has been instructed to cease operations but he says it is economically Warner explained that Frankenthal said "It was a human oversight. We forgot about that piece of equipment.

About three different occasions during the day on the 21st, I circled the plant and never noticed an odor coming off the plant property." Warner

Also, while in Pampa, I asked the motel owner where I stayed if she had ever been bothered by odor from Packerland Packing Co. and she said 'No, not enough to complain

At the time Warner came to Pampa, he said "only three people had complained to this office." He attempted to contact them, but "was unable to catch any of them at home.

Warner said that "while talking to Mr. Frankenthal, I asked him what was the cause of odor. He said they started the Plant up in July and had a lot of mechanical failures. They were

Warner said that the violation blowing fresh meat from the kill floor to the rendering plant. For the first week or so, mechanical failures in the rendering plant caused the meat to become stale and odors resulted.

Warner further commented that "Mr Frankenthal states he now feels these problems have been ironed out and won't occur

But, according to many Pampa citizens, the odor problem from Packerland

'It just smells like old,' dead, rotten cattle," Wells said when he called The News Wednesday. If I'd smelled that odor in 1964 when I first looked at this house, I'd never bought it," he said.

The News contacted other Pampa citizens today. Mrs. T.R. Cantrell of 621 Red Deer said "The odor is awful

She said that as long as she is inside the house it isn't too bad. but we had company yesterday and they noticed it right off. Mrs. Cantrell said the odor became quite noticeable a week

Mrs. Oscar Johnson of 500 Doucette said the odor "is so bad you can slice it with a knife. But it isn't that bad consistently, she added.

'At times it is worse than others - perhaps the wind change has something to do with it." she said

Mrs. Johnson said that at times she and her family cannot sit outside because of the odors. Mrs. Nathan Miller of 609 Red Deer says the odor from the plant has been bad for about two

'Ooohh.' she shuddered. 'we've been wondering what could be done about it.

She also said that it is worse at times than at others — "I guess it depends on the wind

FTC Proposes Rules For US Funeral Homes

Federal Trade Commission today proposed sweeping new rules for the nation's 22,000 funeral homes which it said would stop some of them from allegedly exploiting the "vulnerable position" of bereaved customers

Some undertakers in the $2 billion annual industry have apparently inflicted "substantial economic and emotional injuries on large numbers of consumers," the FTC said.

The proposed rules would require disclosure of funeral prices and ban "various exploitative, unfair and deceptive practices," the commission added

At the same time, the FTC announced tentative acceptance of a proposed consent agreement under which the country's largest funeral service operation agreed to make refunds to customers allegedly overcharged for crematory services since 1971

Service Corporation International, which operates 139 funeral homes in 16 states, also was accused of overcharging customers for goods and services provided by others such as flowers, pallbearers. cemetery and crematory services, clergy and obituary notices

In signing the consent agreement, the firm, with headquarters in Houston, did not agree it had violated the law A violation of the consent agreement could result in a $10,900 fine

Christmas Present: 13 Cent Stamps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Rate Commission today set the stage for boosting the cost of mailing an ordinary one ounce first class letter from 10 cents to 13 cents by Christmas. But the commission's split decision did not give all the Postal Service requested in order to trim its growing deficits and put the service on a payas-you-go course

While agreeing to the rate increase sought for the first ounce, it trimmed the Postal Service request by one cent for additional ounces of letter weight, it was learned:

The decision was scheduled to be made public officially during the afternoon.

Technically, the commission made permanent temporary rates the Postal Service imposed on March 2, 1974. By law the service may now set up a new temporary rate up to 30 per cent higher, after a waiting period of around three months.

Missing The Lesson

The growing debate over whether the pending grain 'sales" to Soviet Russia will benefit or harm our own economy tends to obscure a fact of greater import. That fact is: simply this

Socialistic Soviet Russia, for all its vaunted giant collectivized farms and forced labor, cannot feed its own people and must rely, instead, on the capitalistic farms of the western world - primarily the United States and Canada. And this despite the fact that the Russian Ukraine, even under the despotic czars and without the modern farm machinery now available to the Soviets was once known the world over as the "bread - basket" of that part of the world If the failure of socialism was ever demonstrated beyond any element of doubt, then surely the failure of the Soviet system to feed the Russian people provides the classic example. But why? That is the question. The answer can be given in three words: Lack of incentive! Slaves just cannot be expected to produce as do free people. The Wall Street Journal, in its Aug. 7 editorial put it like this: "The official Soviet explanation for the (repeated) grain crop shortfall is that old standby, weather. That no doubt played a part, but it's worth remembering that weather is not unknown outside the borders of the U.S.S.R. The real problem is not such much weather but whether - whether Moscow will continue to invite crop shortages by relying on collectivized agriculture, or whether it will ultimately unshackle its

As with all such schemes designed to plunder some for the benefit of others, the "success" of the food stamp rip - off has spawned any number of additional stamp schemes with the same objective, the foundation went on to add. Proposals are pending for clothing stamps, energy stamps, tranportation stamps, fuel stamps, and gasoline stamps. The possibilities are endless. The rub is that each new (inflationary) script program would generate vast amounts of paperwork, expensive bureaucracy and complicated

Outlook If Welfarism Keeps Pace

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN If welfarism is not curbed in the United States in the years ahead, Americans will spend more than half the country's Gross National Product for social services by the year 2000.

This is a grim prospect, for it means that the welfare system would be like a giant sponge, sopping up all the capital needed for industrial growth. modernization and creation of new jobs for skilled, energetic citizens.

Despite this threat, welfarism has numerous apologists in the federal and state bureaucracies and in the liberal media

Edward J. Walsh of the United States Industrial Council recently citied one widely circulated apology for welfarism. Mr. Walsh wrote:

Washington columnist Carl T. Rowan recently published an unfortunate essay on an address by Casper Weinberger, departing Secretary of the Department of Health. Education and Welfare. It was unfortunate because the essay was utterly without insight into the nature of social ills afflicting the United States in the mid

Mr. Weinberger had taken the opportunity of a farewell to government service speech in San Francisco to explain the cause - and - effect impact of a burgeoning federal government. upon the concept of personal freedom. That effect is perceived most clearly in the myrid welfare programs now in effect — brought into existance partly through a characteristically American and wholly admirable concern for the unfortunate, but maintained and embellished by the grandiloquent promises of Franklin Roosevelt and his philosophical successors. "The cause, put simply by Mr. Weinberger, is welfare - a something - for - nothing proposition from the outset. The consequences are most profound: We must recognize that personal freedoms diminish as the welfare state grows. The price of more and more social programs is less and less private freedom. Weinberger describes how the welfare system provides incentives NOT to work. The implications of the gradual loss of energy, ambition and sense of personal worth are engendered by existance as a ward of the state are climatic for the individual, his family, and society as a whole "The mass of welfare recipients grows into a class of indigents, suppoted by their peighbors' taxes, producing nothing but outrage, despair, and, finally, aparthy, as the fruits of labor are drawn into monolithic centralized agency, which dispenses income on the eqalitarian basis. The distinctions between producers and non - producers are blurred as incomes are standardized by bloated welfare allotments and ruinous taxes. Initiative and energy are drained from those who work. until enterprise is reduced to the status of a clearinghouse. funneling the earnings of labor to the impersonal, all - powered

'Mr. Rowan's colum misses the thrust of Mr. Weinberger's argument. He does not understand economics. Somehow, he contrives the notion that Mr. Weingerger has suggested that the truly misfortunate recipients of welfare should be permitted to starve. It is an old argument the stock defense of welfare denies that in a civilized society. no one should have to go without an adequate diet, clothing, or shelter, whatever the reason. Nevertheless, Mr. Rowan threatens our consciences with millions in ignorance and

'Mr. Rowan's rhetoric becomes finally outrageous. It is his suggestion that millions of Americans with jobs, caught in a vise between mounting taxes and eroding income, think they are suffering these days blame placing becomes an easy exercise. He implies, smugly, that those who pay the bills to support the swollen class of welfare grifters have no reason to complain since they are not black, Puerto Rican, Indian, or Chicano and that Mr. Weinberger has officiously provided them with a scrapegoat. Mr. Walsh's comments make very clear that the threat of welfarism is two - fold - to our liberties as well as to our economy. Mr. Weinberger understands that the growth of the welfare state will take from us our most precious freedoms. Let's hope that Mr.

Weinberger's successor at HEW has the same understanding and won't adopt the apologist role.

Has Ford Peaked Too Soon?

By WILLIAM RUSHER

The suspicion is growing in political circles that Gerald Ford's presidential election campaign may have peaked a full year too soon.

A couple of months ago, the smooth skill of the Ford operation was the talk of Washington. After a number of early bobbles - his choice of Rockefeller for vice president, his pardon of Nixon, his ambiguous "amnesty plan," and his indecisive economic policy - the nation's first appointed president appeared to get his bearings somewhere around the turn of the year. Thereafter, for about six months, it seems almost as if he could do no wrong.

South Vietnam collapsed at last, but Congress (quite properly) got the blame for that. Then along came the inspiriting Mayaguez episode, and Mr. Ford (quite rightly) got the credit for that. The recession seemed to start "bottoming out." Congress rejected the president's energy plan — then failed, when challenged, to come up with one of it's own. Again and again the president vetoed legislation he considered too inflationary — and four times in a row this supposedly "veto proof" Congress, with 2 - to - 2 Democratic majorities in both House, tried and failed to override his vetoes.

Conservative critics in the president's own party were ardently wooed, and to some degree effectively appeased, by the appointment of well - known conservaties to head his campaign, plus broad hints that the 1976 GOP convention would be allowed to correct "the

Transiency of Everything Is Comforting Thought

By MAX RAFFERTY One of the things we tend to lose sight of in this time of teeth gnashing and total despair is the providential transiency of virtually everything. Between 1917 and 1945, the Germans and the Japanese were deep - dyed villains; now they're the good guys in the white hats. During the Fifties, college students were stuffy, security - seeking models of gray - flanneled facelessness; in the Sixties, they turned into fire - breathing maniacs; today, they're stuffy demonstration era. Take / Brown University at Providence, R.I., for example. During the late Sixties, the crazies demanded "pass - fail" grading, "modes of thought" courses and "independent study." And, of course, they got them, thanks to the really extraordinary spinlessness of the typical college president during that convulsed time.

According to a Chicago Tribune report, all these "reforms" are rapidly. becoming history, and pretty rancid history at that. For instance, only 10 per cent of 1975 Brown University student body wants "independent study" offerings, and students asking for "pass - fail" grading have shrunk from 63 per cent back in the Sick Sixties to an anemic 36 per cent in the Convalescing

Then there's "black studies. At the precise times (1967-68) that the rolling - eyed, Molotov cocktail brandishers were shrieking for courses in Swahili and classes in Uganda tribal customs, I was saying: Courses like this will have about as much lasting signficance and be of about as much real help to black students as courses in Etruscan tomb carving." And I was, of course, catching hell for saying it, too.

Hear now, eight years later, President Maceo Bowie, black overwhelmingly black Kennedy King College in Chicago: "I will treat black studies as would treat any other dead - endprogram. Black people need doctors, lawyers, architects and businessmen.

My point is simply this: What was a racist honky oink in the Sixties is a calm and rational statement of fact by a black college president in the

"The feeling spread that the activist youth (of the Sixties) were destructivist idlers - and even hypocrities - who lived on other people's work."

Son Should Leave Mom's If Ex-Wife Annoys Him

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 48-year-old man who has been divorced for six years. I live with my mother, so I don't have to worry about meals or laundry

My problem is my ex-wife. I cannot stand the sight of her. She calls my mother nearly every day, and my mother invites her over to the house.

My mother knows how I feel about my ex but she says if she isn't nice to her, she won't get to see her grandchildren. I don't buy that because my divorce decree states that I can see my children whenever I wish. I love my children and have had them for holidays and weekends, yet I don't include my "ex."

Sometimes I think my mother lets my "ex" hang around here just to make me uncomfortable. What do you think, Abby? I'd appreciate your advice.

DEAR BURNED: If you can swing it financially, move out of Mother's house and get your own place. Then, you can pick up your children and take them to your mother's without having your wife come along. As long as you're living in your mother's home, she can invite whomever she

Mill To Defer Sunflower Pay

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) - The Plains Cooperative Oil Mill wants farmers to accept deferred payments for sunflowers to help the mill finance the first sales from the new oil and seed market.

"We have a new crop to market, and this is where the problem arose," Joe Rankin, Ralls farmer and president of the co-op, said Wednesday. "When you know you've got a crop to market you can go ahead and sell it - such as we do with soybean oil and cottenseed oil.

But when you have nothing yet to sell from a new industry such as sunflowers, it's impossible to have a market until you have the oil. And, we've found this year it's hard to get farmers to grow a new crop unless they have some kind of a market."

The board agreed to three plans by which farmers would be paid their 15 cent per pound contracts on seeds from a total of 225,000 acres of sunflowers.

"Our first plan is to offer 10 cents per pound for seeds to be paid at time of delivery by the producer, with the other 5 cents per pound to be paid on or before March 31, 1976," he said. "The producer would be given a promissory note for the 5 cents per pound that would bear interest at the rate of 8 per cent from the date of delivery until final payment. Rankin said growers who wanted to defer payment on the crop until 1976 could also do so. Other growers who might want payment in full on delivery would be paid as per the original contract

Until the first sunflower crop is harvested, it is not known how many pounds of seeds per acre to expect. There also is no real market value until the 225,000 acres has been harvested and the market has been tested.

'The board has confidence that most growers will be willing to help in financing the marketing of this new crop,' Rankin said. "But the cooperative is in no way in trouble and we can meet the full contract at time of delivery if the farmer so

Hike In School Lunches

When Johnny and Suzie go back to school this fall, odds are they'll be able to buy lunch for no more than they paid in the 1974-75 academic year.

The cost of buying and serving food has gone up along with almost everything else over the past year. But for most schools the increased costs are being cancelled out by a hike in federal lunch subsidies, says an Agriculture Department

Gene P. Dickey, head of a school nutrition programs branch in the USDA's Food and Nutrition Service, estimated that children who bought their lunches at regular prices last year paid an average of 40-45 cents per meal in most elementary schools and 50-55 cents in most high schools. Prices ranged from as low as 30 cents in some areas to as high as 75 cents

"I don't believe we're going to see any large increases in prices. Some school systems may go up a nickel, but it will be very scattered because of the · increase in federal assistance," Dickey said.

For example, current budget estimates indicate schools will get 12.8 cents in federal cash subsidies for each lunch, compared with 11.4 cents last year and 10.3 cents two years

Dickey noted that Congress last year ordered the Agriculture Department to adjust its subsidies to schools every six months to keep pace with changes in retail food prices. This helps the lunch system avoid a repetition of the sizable Pickle products truly add spice to meals or snacks. The skillful blending of spices, sugar, and vinegar with fruits and vegetables gives crisp, firm texture and pungent, sweet : sour flavor.

Pickles and relishes contribute some nutritive value, contain little or no fat, and, except for the sweet type, are low in calories

Although food markets today offer a wide variety of pickles and relishes, many homemakers like to make their own pickle products when garden vegetables and fresh fruits are in abundant supply.

Included in this article are basic recipes for the old - time favorites, such as watermellon pickles piccalilli, and bread and butter pickles; and for freshpack or quick - process dills, tomato relish and dilled green beans. Spices in these basic recipes can be increased or decreased to please family

Pickles and relishes certainly can add a lot to warm weather meals. And now's a good time to plan for the ones you'll want to make when your garden is ready to harvest

NEA Predicts Few Strikes By Teachers

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The National Education Association said today there probably would be fewer teacher strikes this fall but the labor unrest coupled with a shortage of jobs and a bleak economic picture make this "the worst school opening in years.

Strikes, however, will not disappear, the NEA said. Eight are already underway

Illinois, according to the NEA, and walkouts are possible in Spokane, Wash., Nashville, Tenn. and Great Falls, Mont. among other cities.

A spokesman for the American Federation of Teachers, a AFL-CIO union, said New York City teacher contract talks are 'highly inflammable" and that a strike in Chicago is "more than possible.

NEA, the 1.7 million member teacher organization, released its first informal reports from state affliates estimating as many as 80 teacher strikes across the country this fall.

But NEA officials believe that fewer strikes will occur during the opening weeks of school than last year when about 50 occured. For the last full school year, an estimated 106 teacher strikes were reported compared to 154

the previous year.

"Astounding teacher unemployment and bleak school financing in some places because of general economic conditions, inflation and declining school enrollment combine to produce the worst school opening in years," NEA Executive Secretary Terry Herndon said in a statement.

His prediction of slightly fewer teacher strikes is more "an indicator of economic conditions than of teacher frustrations, and those are running quite high," he said.

The rare oryx is really a medium - sized antelope, standing about 40 inches in height, with twin horns 22 to 29 inches long. Its white color is broken by a darkness on the legs and black patches around the nose, in front of the curving horns and under the eyes. When viewed from the side, the horns sometimes appear to be only one, and for this reason the oryx was once generally held to be the fabled unicorn. One of the nation's fastest growing showplaces, the 123 acre Phoenix Zoo has more rare animals than any public menagerie of comparable size anywhere else in the world. Many of them, like Pancho and Chela, a pair of jovial jaguars. have their own moaten - clesed, air - conditioned compounds.

A new addition is the John Walters Desert Big Horn Sheep Exhibit, which covers five acres where the rare animals wander freely in a typical arid setting. Like the oryx, the desert big horn sheep have been vanishing. and it is hoped that in their new home at the Phoenix Zoo, which is located in scenic, red - rock Papago Park on the city's east side, they will reproduce sufficiently to help repopulate game ranges and also supply other zoos. Big horn sheep, as well as many other fast - fading specimens of southwest outdoor life, are also featured at the Arizona - Sonora Desert Museum located 14 miles west of Tucson, which is about 100 miles southeast of Phoenix. To show this once abundant natural history, the big horn sheep, for example, roam wild in an area duplicating a picturesque desert area near Gila Bend, Arizona. There is also a special room for reptiles and small animals. where red lighting is used to permit natural observation of what amounts to normal nighttime activity. Many desert creatures, for example, spend most of their daylight hours underground to escape daytime heat. To show how animals and plants do this, and also to explain why the special conditions of the desert make it necessary and possib the Desert Museum has another unique display in a tunnel which takes visitors 12 feet underground for close - up looks into a strange and fascinating subterranean world. One special cave even features fruit - eating bats, and along a wall plant roots may be seen as they actually grow.

While Ma Bell is reportedly phasing out telephone booths in larger cities, the closeted pay phones - about 100 of them are still going strong in Pampa.

"And they always will be," adds Gary Stevens, manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's Pampa office.

However, Stevens says the days of the 10 - cent local call may be short - lived. He doesn't know when the end may come, but in some of the large cities the local call has already gone to 20 cents ... 25 cents in some

Today's college - age youths won't remember nickel calls, but their parents could phone each other at that price more than 20 years ago. It was about that time that the call cost doubled to the current dime and it has held steady all that time in spite of inflation, Stevens said. And it is sure to buy a local call a few more months.

Most of Pampa's pay phones produce about an equal anount

Stevens says they have a few of the modern type pay phones at M. K. Brown Auditorium

The Airlight I is described as a glass - paneled structure with anodized - aluminum framework, self - closing door and "comfortable vinyl seat." It commonly is found on street corners.

Across the nation, pay phones jingle forth millions of dollars a year in revenue. But company officials say the losses from vandalism are large and continue to rise.

"People use all kinds of tricks to separate the coins from the instrument, anything from pick ax to putting chains around the pedestals and pulling the poor thing out by its roots," said one telephone company spokesman. There usually aren't that POINT CLEAR, Ala. (UPI) -One of the nation's two black lieutenant governors says he hesitated to come to Alabama for the National Lieutenant Governors Conference, but southern hospitality helped ease his memories of the state.

Lt. Gov. George L. Brown of Colorado said Tuesday he still bears the scar of the letter "K" on his chest. After he crashed in 1943 on a flight from a military base at Tuskegee, Ala., he said. he was found by a farmer who chained him in a barn and burned the letter into his chest with a branding iron.

Pampa's Economy Prospers

Press days have a special appeal for high school football players. Whether it's a chance to take time out from the grueling rut of practicing every day or the fun of hamming it up. it's obvious players, and coaches, enjoy press day.

Lefors, for example, ran a few offensive plays for me, even though the day's workout had been concluded and the players were exhausted. The players didn't seem to mind and were enjoying the clicking of the shutter as they performed.

The other Pampa area teams, all of which will be featured in Sunday's Football Special, were considerate, enthusiastic and cooperative on their respective press days. It's cooperation like that which makes it a pleasure to cover the Panhandle high school football.

Another who enjoys press days is Odessa sports editor John

He writes: These days, players seem more concerned with their appearance, combing their hair all the way out to the field and practicing the shifty maneuvers that you just KNOW were initiated at home in front of a full - length mirror. They've seen so many impressive shots in past publications that the boys pretty well know what looks best before the shutter.

Rick Leverich, Pampa High spring graduate and a running back to be at Texas Christian University, will not be able to practice with the Horned Frogs for at least two more weeks because of a fractured bone above his ankle.

Leverich sustained the injury almost a month ago while working out in Pampa. He is the second ex - Harvester, who will be a freshman in the Southwest Conference, to break a bone prior to the Howie Lewis of Pampa, Texas Tech split end, broke his foot in the recent Oil Bowl all - star game at Wichita Falls. He will miss at least the first part of the season, according to sources, although the break is healing faster than previously expected.

It might be an interesting comparison for someone to determine the injury rate in football as compared to the number of casualty in rodeo. It's likely he would find the percentage of rodeo competitors who got hurt is higher than in football

Brian Claypool. Canadian bronc and bull rider, limped out of the Chevenne area after a rodeo this year and told a sports writer. "rodeo rewards you if you succeed and punishes you if you fail; that's the way it's supposed to be. If a guy bucks off, he's supposed to get hurt.

Mike Torrez, who has had the label "in and outer" since entering the major leagues with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1967, thinks he is about to acquire a new one: 20-game winner.

The 6-foot-6, 215-pound righthander, acquired by the Baltimore Orioles along with Ken Singleton in a winter deal with the Montreal Expos, moved close to that goal Wednesday night when he beat the Kansas City Royals 4-2. The victory raised his record to 16-7 with the likelihood that he'll make seven or eight more starts.

'Sure I'm thinking about winning 20 games," he said after No. 16. "With seven or eight more starts, there's no reason why I shouldn't win 20."

Torrez, whose 16 victories and 13 complete games for the Origles have equaled his previous major league highs, said he is a better pitcher than when he was with the Cardinals and Expos "because I throw more curve balls and sliders now. I used to have a good fast ball and a slider and that was all. I've got a good curve ball now. I throw some changeups and that has to make a difference.

Singleton's two-run double was the big blow of a threerun fourth-inning outburst which gave Torrez a 4-0 lead. John Mayberry and Tony Solaita knocked in the Royals' runs as Paul Splittorff suffered his

Price Nips Favored Giles

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) -Stan Price never dreamed of anything like this. Playing championship golf was the farthest thing from his' mind earlier this year when Vinny Giles was winning the British Amater Price, quite simply wasn't good enough.

For a few years, price's handicap languished around seven or eight, compared to the limit of three needed to enter a championship like the U.S. Amateur. Last year, he cut it to

This summer, Price finally got it down to two.

And Wednesday, on Vinny Giles' home course, Price eliminated him on the first extra hole in the second round of the 75th U.S. Amateur. "I can't believe it, Price said.

"I was just hoping to watch him, and maybe learn some things that would help ake me a better player. And I didn't want to embarrass myself, lose like 8 and 6 or something like that."

The victory by Price, a 23-year-old night student at the University of Pittsburgh who never before had played in a tournament outside western Pennsylavaniam high lighted a day of surprises that reduced the Amateur field to 64 players anown largely only to their own families

Besides Giles, flive other exempt players ane several more with national reputations were beaten, some, like NCAA champion Jay Haas who squandered a five-hole lead, in bizarre fashion

But none of those upsets were of the magnitude of the loss by Giles, one of only a dozen men ever to win both the U.S. (in 1972) and British amateur home course he knows so well and in front of a large and enthusiastic gallery of his hometown fans "I know what that feels like, Price said. "A couple of years ago we had some local tournaments at my course, and I missed the cut. It's embarrassing to do that in front of your

A seven-foot birdie putt by Price ended the match on the 19th hole after Giles birdied 16 and 17 to tie it in regulation and Price made an 18-footer to save bogey at 18 and stay alive.

The two teams ended their season series with Ferguson Jenkins moving a step closer to another 20 game season.

Jenkins and the Rangers coasted to an 8-2 decision over the Tigers Wednesday. It was the fifth straight win for Texas and in 12 meetings with Detroit this year Texas lost only once.

Texas moved within one game of .500, a mark they last achieved on June 23. "The only goal I had with this club when I took it over," said Ranger manager. Frank Lucchesi, "was to have the team play at .500 or better." Texas has played six games over .500 since Lucchesi took over from Billy Martin last month.

Jenkins ran his record to 16-13, but had to leave after seven innings because his right shoulder began to tighten up. "I felt a sharp pain in the seventh and it suddenly started getting stiff." Jenkins said Detroit had a man on base at the

"I just got lucky," Jenkins said. "I got one man to ground into a double play and struck the next one out. But that was as far as I could go.

We just did not want to take any chances with Frgy as long as we had that biglead," Lucchesi said. "I don't think it will interfere with his next

Mayor Endorses Plan To Loose Budget Power

NEW YORK (UPI) - Mayor Abraham Beame has endorsed a plan that would strip him of much of his control over New York City's fiscal affairs and agreed to share his budgetary powers with the governor and the state controller. But he insisted, "We're not giving up

A complicated new financing program was expected to prevent a default by New York City in September, when the city must pay $896 million in operating expenses as well as principal and interest on notes falling due.

Sources said the agreement could involve an initial $1 billion appropriation by the legislature - to be convened in special session by Gov. Hugh Carey. perhaps as early as next week -

"I am completely in accord with this plan," Beame said Tuesday. "It represents state financial involvement in the City of New York. I think it is a good omen for the city."

Despite the concessions Beame agreed to make concessions he dismissed out of hand a month ago - he denied he had given up the traditionally autonomous mayoral control over the city's expense budget. "We're not giving up home in the plan that doesn't exist today," Beame said. The agreement calls for Carey to seek authority to create what mayor, the governor and rule. There's absolutely nothing amounts to a state board of overseers, made up of the Controller Arthur Levitt, who enjoys a national reputation for fiscal conservatism and inte-

The panel would be responsible for preparing accurate revenue estimates for New York City and setting a spending ceiling which the city could not legally exceed. One of the first tasks of the board, Carey said, would be to come up with an accurate determination of the city's deficit, currently estimated at between $2.8 billion and $3.1 billion.

In this way, Carey and Beame explained, the city could meet all of its money needs — about $2 billion - between now and the end of November, when it is hoped the city will be able to reenter credit markets on its own.

Sharing

Visitors in Pampa from the Philippines shared facts about their country and native folk songs and dances at the annual Altrusa International dinner Monday night in the Coronado Inn. The young women are nurses at Highland General. They include, from left, Diomedesa Quijada, Supervisor of Nurses Vermell Meador, Ermelinda Calipusan and Manuela Tin Guan.
